And now prefacing His declaration concerning this other Sacrament with the same solemn preamble as that which He had used in speaking of Baptism ("Verily, Verily, I say unto you, Except"—), He connects the two Sacraments together by a common announcement.

It is also worthy of observation, that when He had been speaking of the initiatory Sacrament of Baptism, He had addressed His discourse to a single individual, Nicodemus, "Verily, Verily, I say unto thee;" but when He delivers His Divine Doctrine concerning the Holy Eucharist, He speaks to a congregation, "Verily, Verily, I say unto you." In the former Sacrament every one severally is engrafted into Christ's body; the latter Sacrament is administered to His members collectively joined together and united in Him.

Let us contemplate Him, therefore, now speaking at Capernaum in a prophetic strain concerning the need of spiritual food for the growth and sustenance of that new life, which, as He had declared to Nicodemus, is first given in the Sacrament of Regeneration. He now proclaims that this heavenly food is communicated in the other Sacrament, the Communion of His own most blessed Body and Blood. "*Verily, Verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink His Blood, ye have no life in you. He that eateth My flesh and drinketh My blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day. For My flesh is meat indeed, and My blood is drink indeed; He that eateth My flesh and drinketh My blood dwelleth in Me, and I in him. As the living Father sent Me, and I live by the Father, so he that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me*¹."

13. The instrument in our hands by which we lay hold on these inestimable benefits, is Faith. "To them that believe on Him He gave power to become Sons of God². Whosoever believeth on Him shall not perish, but have everlasting life³. He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life, and he that believeth not the Son, shall not see life⁴. He that heareth my word and believeth on Him that sent Me hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life⁵. He that cometh to Me shall never hunger, and he that believeth on Me shall never thirst⁶. Every one that seeth the Son and believeth on Him hath everlasting life, and I will raise him up at the last day⁷. He that believeth on Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live, and whosoever liveth and believeth on Me shall never die⁸."

14. More will be said in the course of the following notes on this Gospel⁹ to justify the assertion already made, that the Gospel of St. John is to be regarded as a systematic summary of the truths of Christianity, addressed to persons who are presumed to be already familiar with the facts of the Gospel History, and with the principles of Christian Doctrine and Discipline, and with the ministrations of the Christian Church. It bears the same relation to the other books of Holy Scripture that St. Paul's later Epistles (especially those to the Ephesians, and Colossians, and Timothy) do to his other writings. It is the seal of the Evangelical Canon; the crown and colophon of the Gospel.

15. By it our eyes are raised to heaven, and we look up to the Father as the Fountain of Light, and see Life flowing from Him everlastingly in the eternal generation of His Only Begotten Son, Who is never separated from the Father. And that Light and Life is derived to us and to our Nature in the Evangelical Dispensation by the Incarnation of the Eternal Word, "in Whom dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily," and by the mystical conjunction of our Nature with the Nature of God in the Person of Christ; and is actually exhibited, dispensed, and applied, severally and individually, to every one who believes, by the agency of the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, Regenerator, and Sanctifier, in the Holy Sacrament of Baptism, by which we who were children of wrath, dead in trespasses and sins, are made children of grace and of the Second Adam, and are quickened with heavenly life, and are engrafted as branches in the True Vine, and drink in the heavenly sap of spiritual grace which flows in exhaustless abundance from Him, Who by the

¹ vi. 53—57.

² i. 12.

³ iii. 15.

⁴ iii. 36.

⁵ v. 24.

⁶ vi. 35

⁷ vi. 40. See also vi. 47; vii. 38; viii. 24; xii. 25. 44. 46; xiv. 12; xvii. 21; xx. 29. 31. The word πιστεύω occurs nearly a hundred times in this Gospel.

⁸ xi. 25, 26.

⁹ See particularly on the sixth chapter the note at the end of it containing a review of its contents.

meritorious death of His flesh removed the curse derived from the stock of the old Adam, which was a root of death in us, and hindered our life; and Who became a source of incorruption and immortality to us.

He who has regenerated us in Baptism affords new degrees and augmentations of vital and saving grace in the Holy Eucharist, wherein the life first begun in Baptism receives continual nourishment of heavenly food; and wherein the faithful members of Christ derive divine strength and refreshment from the communion of His Body and Blood; and wherein the diminutions and decays in the spiritual life commenced at Baptism are repaired; and wherein they have mystical fellowship with the whole Person of Christ, both God and Man, and participate in all the benefits purchased by the meritorious sacrifice of His Body broken and His Blood shed once for all upon the Cross, and imbibe fresh effusions of His Spirit; and are enabled to glorify God by bearing fruit unto holiness, and are knit together in love, and dwell together in unity, and are sanctified and cleansed in soul and spirit, and are assured of a blessed Resurrection, in a body made like unto His glorious Body; and have a foretaste and earnest of the perfect fruition of everlasting bliss in body, soul, and spirit, in His heavenly kingdom¹. Such being the case, we may well expect to find in this Gospel, divine declarations concerning the work of the Holy Ghost, poured forth in copious effusions, like those of the water from Siloam at the Feast of Tabernacles; a Festival which seems to have been symbolical of the Incarnation of the Eternal Word, pitching His tent in our Nature²; and of the gracious outpouring of the Holy Ghost consequent upon the Incarnation and the Unction of Christ our Divine Head, and flowing down from Him on all His members.

In this Gospel we see and adore the love, and wisdom, and power, of the FATHER, as the fountain and well-spring of all the blessings we receive through the SON by the HOLY GHOST; and we contemplate the mutual love of the Father and the Son³; and of God in Christ dwelling in us for our everlasting salvation. "God hath deified our Nature, not by turning it into Himself, but by making it His own inseparable habitation." "God in Christ is the medicine which doth cure the world; and Christ in us is that receipt of the same medicine whereby we are every one particularly cured; and Christ's Incarnation and Passion can be available to no man's good who is not partaker of Christ; and we cannot participate Him without His presence; and therefore we are well to consider how Christ is present; to the end it may appear how we are made partakers of Christ⁴."

The Gospel of St. John imparts divine instruction on these solemn truths.

Here we behold ourselves represented as sheep of His flock, and we adore His love shown in laying down His life⁵ for the sheep; and His power, asserted by His saying that "no one can pluck them out of His hand⁶"; and that He gives them everlasting life." The consequent practical duties of unity and love are here represented in the divine discourse, "I am the true Vine, and My Father is the Husbandman. I am the Vine, ye are the branches⁷." The proof of our love is to be shown in fruitfulness⁸. It is to be shown in obedience and charity. "If ye Love Me⁹, keep My commandments. If ye keep My commandments ye shall abide in My love. Ye are My friends if ye do whatsoever I command you. And this is My commandment, that ye love one another as I have loved you¹⁰." It is to be shown by following the example of Christ in His love, and humility, as manifested by the act with which He prefaced this divine discourse, the washing His disciples' feet¹¹; and above all, in that act which followed it, His Passion and Death for us¹². And the reward of this mutual indwelling in Christ is that our prayers offered in unity in Christ are heard of God. "If ye abide in Me, and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you¹³."

The spiritual power to bring forth the fruits of Peace and Love will never be wanting to us; for Christ has prayed for us that we all may be one as He and the Father are One¹⁴, and He inspires us with a love of this Divine Unity by assurance of participation in the Divine Glory¹⁵. And He promises to send the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, the Spirit of Love, and Peace, and Joy, to abide

¹ These statements are enforced with great clearness by Richard Hooker in his Fifth Book, where he shows that the two Sacraments derive their efficacy from the Incarnation of Christ. A careful study of that admirable Writer's discourse on the two Natures, Person, and Incarnation of Christ, and on the two Sacraments as the appointed instruments for conveying actually to us the blessings consequent on the Incarnation, is one of the best preparatives for a profitable perusal of the Gospel of St. John. See Hooker, V. l—lx. and V. lxvii.

² See vii. 2. 37—39, and the note at the end of the seventh chapter.

³ viii. 38. 42. 47; x. 30.

⁴ Hooker, V. liv. 6; V. lv. 1.

⁵ x. 11. 15; xv. 13.

⁶ x. 14. 28.

⁷ xv. 1—7.

⁸ xv. 8.

⁹ xiv. 15.

¹⁰ xv. 10. 12. 14. 17. Cp. 1 John ii. 3. 5; iii. 24.

¹¹ See xiii. 12—17.

¹² See 1 John iii. 16.

¹³ xv. 7. See also xiv. 13, and 1 John iii. 22, and v. 14.

¹⁴ xvii. 11. 21.

¹⁵ xvii. 22.

with us for ever¹. "He shall teach you all things," says Christ to His Apostles, "and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." He is the Spirit of Truth, and "will lead you into all Truth, and will declare to you the things to come²." It is therefore "expedient for you that I go away from you," that is, remove from you My bodily presence—"for if I go not away the Comforter will not come unto you, but if I go away I will send Him unto you³."

The gift of the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, was reserved to be the gracious and glorious evidence of Christ's Ascension, Coronation, and Enthronization in our Nature at the Right Hand of God; and to be the proof of His love and power working *greater things*⁴ by the Spirit sent by Him from Heaven, to comfort, guide, and animate His Church, than He had ever done upon earth before the glorification⁵ of His Humanity by His Ascension into heaven.

16. Some persons have expressed surprise, as has been already observed, that the Resurrection of Lazarus from the dead should not have been mentioned by any other Evangelist. But if we duly consider what has now been said, we may recognize a peculiar fitness in the reservation of the record of this miracle for the Gospel of St. John.

St. John's Gospel is the Gospel of the Resurrection. "I AM the RESURRECTION and the LIFE," is the burden of this Gospel. Christ is here the divine Eagle, casting off the plumage of old age, and bearing us on Eagle's wings to heaven⁶, and therefore the symbol of the Eagle is rightly assigned to this Evangelist⁷.

The Everlasting Word, Coequal and Coeternal with the Father, the I AM, the JEHOVAH, is here revealed taking our Nature, and quickening us thereby, and raising us, first, as we have seen, from the death of sin by the spiritual Resurrection⁸, which takes place in Baptism; and next as raising our bodies hereafter to a glorious Immortality, by the Spirit with which He has quickened us who believe, and who continue living branches of the True Vine. He has vivified us by engrafting us in Himself; and the divine life imparted to us in our new birth is continually nourished with the heavenly food of the Body and Blood of Him who is the Life⁹, and He will animate our mortal bodies through the Spirit which dwelleth in us.

Since these divine truths are most fully displayed in this Gospel, well therefore does the practical proof of Christ's Divine Power in raising the dead, shown in the resurrection of Lazarus, find its place here. It is enshrined here as in its proper niche. Fitly was the history of this stupendous Miracle kept back by the Holy Spirit for insertion in this Gospel; just as the history of the first Miracle, by which Christ manifested the first beams of His Godhead at the Wedding feast, was reserved for the same Gospel, where we have the fullest declarations of His Divinity and His love to us in His Incarnation, whereby He came forth as a Bridegroom and united our Nature to the Divine.

For a like reason, we may reverently say, it was reserved for St. John to recite in his Gospel the commission and authority, which was given by Christ to His Apostles on the day of His Resurrection, to raise others by the power of the Holy Ghost from the death of sin. On that first Lord's Day He who had just raised Himself said, "Peace be unto you. As My Father hath sent me, so send I you; and He breathed on them and said, Receive ye the Holy Ghost. Whosoever sins ye remit they are remitted unto them, and whosoever sins ye retain they are retained¹⁰."

With similar propriety the evidences of our Lord's Resurrection from the dead are recorded with special fulness and clearness in this Gospel; particularly in His manifestation to St. Thomas, on the next Lord's Day after the Resurrection¹¹. And by the miraculous draught of fishes at the third manifestation to His disciples after His Resurrection, He proved to them that though the Fishers of men might toil all night without Him and catch nothing, yet in the morning they would be enabled by His Divine Power to draw the Apostolic net of the Gospel unbroken, and full of great fishes, to the land of everlasting life¹².

"These things are written," says the Evangelist, "that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing ye might have life through His name¹³."

Thus the Gospel of the beloved disciple remains an imperishable record of the operations of the ¹ xiv. 16. 26, 27.

² xvi. 13. Cp. 1 John ii. 20. 27.

³ xvi. 7.

⁴ xiv. 12.

⁵ xii. 16. Acts iii. 13.

⁶ Deut. xxxii. 11. See on Luke xvii. 37.

⁷ See above, Introduction to the FOUR GOSPELS.

⁸ v. 25, 26.

⁹ See vi. 39, 40. 44. 54.

¹⁰ xx. 21, 22.

¹¹ xx. 27—29.

¹² See on xxi. 3—11.

¹³ xx. 31.

Three Persons of the Ever Blessed Trinity in the work of our salvation. The Love of God the FATHER is therein revealed as the source of all blessings to us; and every good thing that we receive from Him is conveyed to us by God the SON becoming Man, and joining Man to God, and making us partakers of the Life which is in God; and all spiritual benefits are applied effectually and severally to us by God the HOLY GHOST, who unites us to Christ, and regenerates and renews us by His vivifying and refreshing grace in the Ministry of the Word and Sacraments, which Christ has instituted in His Church, and has made to be effectual instruments of salvation and glory in soul and body to all who believe and abide in living and healthful union with the mystical body of Christ unto the end.

17. Lastly, let us add, when we say that these gracious and glorious Truths are displayed with special fulness by St. John, we are not to be supposed to disparage the work of any of the other Apostles and Evangelists. No, Heaven forbid! They all were moved by the Holy Ghost. Their speech was from Him, and their silence was from Him; but, "Herein is that saying true, One soweth and another reapeth: that both he that soweth, and he that reapeth, may rejoice together¹." The preaching of the other Evangelists and Apostles had prepared the way for the last surviving Apostle and Evangelist, St. John. He wrote when "their sound had gone out into all lands, and their words unto the ends of the world²." He had the benefit of their labours, he reaped where they had sown. Their Gospels being read publicly in Christian Churches had fully instructed the Church in the history of the Birth and Sufferings of Christ. The Epistles of St. Paul, and St. Peter, and St. James—perhaps also St. John's own Epistles and Apocalypse—had now been published, and were also read openly in her assemblies, and had trained her in Christian doctrine. It was due to the previous labours of the other Evangelists and Apostles, that the Church was enabled to receive with intelligent faith, and to welcome with rapturous joy, the Gospel of St. John, when at the end of the first century of the Christian era he came forth, full of the Holy Ghost, and opened his mouth, and proclaimed in clear and solemn tones the sublimest mysteries that have ever been revealed to the world. "In the beginning was the WORD, and the WORD was with GOD, and the WORD was GOD. In Him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men. And the WORD was made FLESH, and dwelt among us: and we beheld His Glory, the Glory of the Only Begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth. And of His fulness have all we received, and grace for grace³."

On St. John's Personal History, and on the Style and Date of his Gospel.

The following particulars concerning St. John's personal history are collected from Holy Scripture and Ancient Authors.

St. John was the Son of Zebedee, a Galilæan fisherman of some worldly wealth⁴, and of Salome⁵, and perhaps originally a disciple of John the Baptist⁶; when young, he was called by Jesus Christ⁷, and he and his brother James, and Peter were admitted by our Lord into the closest intimacy with Himself⁸. He was the disciple whom Jesus loved, and who leaned on His breast at the Paschal Supper, and to whose care our Lord committed His mother when He was on the Cross⁹.

At the close of the Gospel History, St. John is seen united in fraternal fellowship with St. Peter¹⁰. For some time after the Ascension St. John was the constant companion of that Apostle¹¹, and they are sent together by the Apostles, from Jerusalem, to confirm the baptized converts at Samaria¹², and they are mentioned as present together at Jerusalem, on the occasion of St. Paul's visit¹³ at the Council of Jerusalem, A.D. 50¹⁴, fourteen years after the conversion of St. Paul¹⁵.

St. John resided for some time in Asia Minor, and died at Ephesus¹⁶. But his residence in Asia does not appear to have commenced until some years after our Lord's Ascension. St. Paul, whose rule it was to preach where the Gospel was not known¹⁷, appears to have been the founder of the Ephesian Church; and St. Paul makes no mention of St. John in his address to the elders of

¹ John iv. 36, 37.

² Ps. xix. 4.

³ i. 1. 4. 14. 16.

⁴ Matt. iv. 21. Mark i. 20. Luke viii. 3.

⁵ Matt. xxvii. 56. Mark xv. 40.

⁶ As may reasonably be inferred with S. Jerome (adv. Jovinian. i. 14) from the fact of his being still alive in the reign of Trajan, which commenced A.D. 98 and ended A.D. 117.

⁷ Matt. iv. 21. Mark i. 19. Luke v. 10.

⁸ Matt. xvii. 1. xxvi. 37. Mark v. 37; xiv. 33.

⁹ John xiii. 25; xix. 26, 27; xx. 2; xxi. 7. 20.

¹⁰ John xviii. 16; xx. 3; xxi. 2—21.

¹¹ See on Acts iii. 1.

¹² Acts viii. 14.

¹³ See on Gal. ii. 2. 9.

¹⁴ Acts xv. 2.

¹⁵ Gal. ii. 1.

¹⁶ See below, note 3.

¹⁷ Rom. xv. 20. 2 Cor. x. 16

Ephesus¹, or in his Epistles to the Ephesians, or in his Epistles to Timothy, whom St. Paul appointed to be Bishop of Ephesus.

Some ancient writers³ affirm that St. John was a martyr in will, at Rome, in the persecutions of the Christians under the Emperor Domitian, who reigned from A.D. 92 to A.D. 96, and that he was then cast into a caldron of boiling oil; and having been preserved from death, was banished by that Emperor to the island of Patmos, where, as St. John himself relates, he saw the *Revelation*⁴, which he describes in the book bearing that name; and that he afterwards returned to Ephesus, and there wrote his Gospel⁵.

St. John makes less use of the LXX Version than his predecessors. He employs it sometimes, see i. 23; ii. 17; vi. 45; x. 34; xii. 14, 15; xv. 25; xix. 24, 36; but deserts it sometimes, as xii. 40; xiii. 18; xix. 37; a remarkable passage, to be compared with Rev. i. 7. Thus while he shows his respect for the LXX Version, he also indicates that the final standard of appeal is the Hebrew Original. He writes not only for those who used the LXX, but for all.

He is careful to describe places in Judæa, and to explain the manners and customs of the Jews, and to interpret Hebrew words (see i. 39. 43; ii. 6. 13; iv. 5. 9; v. 1, 2; vi. 4); thus showing that he wrote for persons unacquainted with the country, customs, and language of Palestine.

St. John knew and received the other Gospels as dictated by the Holy Ghost, and was inspired to write his own Gospel as a sequel to them, and as the consummation of the evangelical canon⁶.

In modern times, this uniform consent of Antiquity concerning the design of St. John's Gospel in relation to the other three, has been controverted by some critics. Their objections to it are thus drawn out and propounded by one of the most celebrated among them, Dr. Friedrich Lücke, Commentar. über das Evang. d. Johannes i. pp. 197, 198.

Objection 1.—Allowing that the three other Gospels were, as is most likely, anterior to St. John's, we do not know that they were generally circulated, or even known to St. John.

This, like most of the other objections to the witness of Christian Antiquity on the composition of St. John's Gospel, is grounded on disbelief of the Inspiration of the Gospels. If the Gospels are the work of the Holy Ghost writing for the edification of the Christian Church, it is morally certain that they were very early communicated to the Churches of Europe and Asia, according to the divine purpose of Him who wrote them, and in conformity with the commission of Christ to His Apostles to proclaim the Gospel to all nations. And it is incredible that St. John, who had received this charge, and was inspired by the Holy Ghost, should not have known what the Holy Spirit had effected for the execution of the Divine will and command in this respect, by the instrumentality of his brother Apostle St. Matthew, and by the Evangelists St. Mark and St. Luke, who were inspired by the Holy Ghost.

¹ Acts xx. 17.

² 1 Tim. i. 2.

³ Tertullianus de præscriptionibus hæretic. c. 36: Habes Romam—ubi Apostolus Johannes, posteaquam in oleum igneum immersus nihil passus est, in insulam relegatur. Auctor fragmentorum Polycarpo adscriptorum, p. 533, ed. Jacobson. Legitur et in dolio ferventis olei pro nomine Christi beatus Johannes fuisse demersus. Irenæus adv. Hær. v. 30: ἡμεῖς οὐκ ἀποκινδυνέομεν περὶ τοῦ ὀνόματος τοῦ ἀντιχρίστου ἀναφανόμενοι βεβαιωτικῶς· εἰ γὰρ ἔδει ἀναφανθῆναι ἐν τῇ νῦν καιρῷ κηρύττεσθαι τοῦνομα τοῦτο, δι' ἐκείνου ἂν ἐρρήθη τοῦ καὶ τὴν Ἀποκάλυψιν ἐωρακότος. Οὐδὲ γὰρ πρὸ πολλοῦ χρόνου ἐωράθη, ἀλλὰ σχεδὸν ἐπὶ τῆς ἡμετέρας γενεᾶς, πρὸς τὸ τέλος Δομετιανοῦ ἀρχῆς. Hieronymus i. adv. Jovinian. c. 14: Refert Tertullianus, quod à Nerone missus in ferventis olei dolium, purior et vegetior exierit, quàm intraverit. Eusebius in Demonstr. Evang. l. 3, c. 5: καὶ Πέτρος δὲ ἐπὶ Ρώμης κατὰ κεφαλὴς σταυροῦται, Παῦλος τε ἀποτέμενεται, Ἰωάννης τε νῆσῳ παραδίδοται. Cp. Origen in Matth. tom. xvi. 6; Victorinus Pictav. (in Apoc.), and Eusebius in Chronico ad a. 14 Domitiani: Ἰωάννην τὸν θεολόγον ἀπόστολον ἐν Πάτμῳ τῇ νήσῳ περιώρισεν, ἔνθα τὴν ἀποκάλυψιν ἐώρακεν, ὡς δ' ἅγιος Εἰρηναῖος φησὶ. Cp. Euseb. iii. 18. 20. Hieronymus de Script. Eccles. c. 10 scribit: Quarto decimo anno secundam post Neronem persecutionem movente Domitiano in Patmum insulam relegatus scripsit Apocalypsin. Id. ib.: interfecto Domitiano et actis ejus ob nimiam crudelitatem à senatu rescissis, sub Nervæ principe redit Ephesus. Suicerus in Thes. Eccl. p. 1470. Lampius in Prolegg. t. i. p. 71 sqq. Lardner, iii. p. 218—221.

⁴ Rev. i. 9.

⁵ Irenæus adv. Hær. iii. 1: ἔπειτα Ἰωάννης ὁ μαθητὴς τοῦ Κυρίου, ὃ καὶ ἐπὶ τῷ στήθος αὐτοῦ ἀναπεσὼν, καὶ αὐτὸς ἐξέδωκε τὸ εὐαγγέλιον ἐν Ἐφέσῳ τῆς Ἀσίας διατρίβων (cf. ii. 22; iii. 23). Euseb. H. E. iii. 24: ᾗδεν δὲ Μάρκου καὶ Λουκᾶ τῶν κατ' αὐτοὺς Εὐαγγελίων τὴν ἐκδοσὶν πεποιτημένων Ἰωάννην φασὶ τὸν πάντα χρόνον ἀγράφῳ κεχρημένον κηρύγματι, τέλος καὶ ἐπὶ τὴν γραφὴν ἐλθεῖν κ.τ.λ. Clemens Alex. ap. Euseb. H. E. vi. 15. Hieronymus, Catal. Script. Eccles. c. 9: Johannes novissimus omnium scripsit Evangelium. Epiphanius, Hæres. li. 12.

De exilio Johannes revocatus, per longam annorum seriem, Ephesinam aliasque Asiæ ecclesias gubernavit, et in re Christianâ tuendâ atque adaugendâ omne reliquum vitæ tempus consumpsit, v. Clemens Alex. ap. Euseb. H. E. iii. 23. Mortuus est Johannes Ephesi, ut Origenes ap. Eusebium H. E. iii. 1, c. 31, v. 24, et Hieronymus de Script. Eccl. 9, testantur. Quoniam autem ætatis anno discesserit, dissentiunt scriptores veteres. Omnes ferè, excepto uno Isidoro Hispalensi (qui anno ætatis lxxxix. Johannem mortuum esse tradit), eum nonagenario majorem, imperante Traiano, placidâ morte obiisse credunt, sed in decernendo Traiani anno, Johannis emortuali, non conveniunt. Sententias varias congerisserunt Lampius l. c. p. 93 sqq. Wegscheiderus l. c. p. 59 sqq. (Kuin.)

Hieronymus, Præfat. in Matth.: Johannes cùm esset in Asiâ, etiam tum hæreticorum semina pullularent—coactus est ab omnibus pænè tunc Asiæ episcopis et multarum ecclesiarum legationibus de divinitate Salvatoris altius scribere. After the death of Domitian he returned from Patmos to Ephesus, where he lived to the reign of Trajan, and died at Ephesus, in the sixty-eighth year after our Lord's crucifixion. (Iren. ii. 22, 5; iii. 3, 4. Euseb. iii. 23. Theophylact, ex Sophronio.)

⁶ Euseb. H. E. iii. 24; vi. 14. Jerome, Cat. Scr. Eccl. 9. Epiphani. Hær. ii. 51, as well as for other reasons of a doctrinal nature. Cp. Aug. de Cons. Ev. ii. 17.

"Liquet," says Dr. Routh, R. Sacr. i. 407, "Lucæ Evangelium, unâ cum duobus alteris Evangelis, à Joanne Apostolo fuisse comprobatum." Cp. the Editor's Lectures on the Canon of Scripture, Lect. vi. p. 169, 2nd ed.; and see the authorities cited and the remarks made by Lee on Inspiration, pp. 317, 388.

Obj. 2. If St. John had desired to authorize and complete the narrative of the three former Evangelists, he would have mentioned them by name, and would have declared his purpose of doing so.

He would have been unlike other inspired writers, and unlike himself, if he had done so.

The later Prophets of the Old Testament enlarge upon, and complete the prophecies of the earlier, but they do not mention their names, or declare their own purpose to do what they do'. St. John's Apocalypse is a sequel and completion of the prophecies of Ezekiel, Daniel, and Zechariah; but he never says that it is so, and never mentions their names.

Obj. 3. If St. John had intended to complete the other Gospels, he would not have repeated any thing that they relate, as he does in chaps. vi. and xii.

This also is a groundless allegation. By repeating some portions of the other Gospels, St. John has shown his knowledge of them; and that he adopts, confirms, and authenticates as true and as divinely inspired that history, which he, the beloved disciple, the last surviving Apostle, was (as Christian antiquity affirms) employed by the Holy Ghost, Who inspired him, to complete. By taking up some threads of the synoptical Gospels, as they are called, and by weaving them into his own, he shows that they are all of one texture and tissue, and form one divine work. In his Gospel he does the same thing with the three other Gospels, as he had done in his Apocalypse with the prophecies of Ezekiel, Daniel, and Zechariah. He adopts some of their substance, and confirms it, and adds to it.

Thus he declares the unity and divine authority of the whole. If they are inspired, he who completes their work, claims to be inspired also; if he is inspired, that which he adopts into his own work is not of less authority than that into which it is adopted.

St. John presupposes many things which had been recorded by the former Evangelists, and were perfectly well known at the time when St. John wrote; for example, every thing that preceded Christ's Baptism, particularly the place of His birth and of His bringing up: and the name of His Mother's husband; the circumstances of His Baptism, and Temptation in the wilderness; His residence at Capernaum; the names of the Apostles; the name of St. John himself, and his brother's name; the cause of the Baptist's imprisonment and death. The Transfiguration, the Institution of Baptism and of the Holy Eucharist, the Agony, and particularly the Ascension, at each of which St. John himself was present. Although our Lord on the cross commended His Mother to St. John, yet St. John never mentions His Mother's name.

St. John is distinguished from the other Evangelists by commenting on the facts which he relates. See ii. 21; v. 18; vi. 64. 71; vii. 39; xi. 51; xii. 33. 37. 43; xiii. 11; xxi. 19. St. John's Gospel is not only an inspired History of Christ, but also an inspired Commentary on that History. This also is an indication of later composition. Another evidence that his Gospel is subsequent to that of the other three, may be seen in the remarkable use which he makes of the term οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, the Jews. Throughout this Gospel, the Jews, represented by their leaders, the Priests and Pharisees, are contemplated ab extra, and are spoken of in the third person as a separate body; such as they had become after the fall of Jerusalem, when those who adhered to Judaism were distinguished by bitter hostility to the Church. St. John, therefore, and the Christians generally, even those like him of Hebrew extraction, had detached themselves from the Jews, and spake of them as a separate body. For this use of οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι see John ii. 18. 20; v. 10. 15, 16. 18; vi. 41; vii. 1. 11; viii. 52, 57; ix. 18. 22; x. 24. 31; xi. 8.

Obj. 4. If St. John desired to complete the other Gospels, he would not have differed from their narratives in sundry particulars; and he would not have done this without stating the points of difference and the reasons for it.

This objection assumes what has not been proved, viz. that St. John differs in certain substantial respects, and not merely in circumstantial additions and the like, from his predecessors. The points in which it is alleged that he differs from them will be considered in the notes in the following pages.

Obj. 5. If St. John had designed to complete the other Gospels, his own Gospel would not be so complete in itself as it is. It would have been like a supplement, and not a whole.

To this it may be replied, that the ancient Christian writers, in saying that St. John's Gospel is supplementary to the other three, never meant to say that it is only a supplement. Nor do they, who adopt their testimony, mean this. They regard St. John's Gospel as perfect in itself, as well as supplementary to the rest, and conducing to their perfection. To adopt the figure by which Christian Antiquity describes the Gospels¹,—each of the Evangelical Cherubim, or *Living Creatures*², is perfect in itself; and each lends its aid in supporting the rest, and in forming the heavenly car on which the Spirit rides. The Eagle, the symbol of St. John, is perfect in himself, and he lends his aid to complete the evange-lic quaternion, and to bear the Living Gospel, in which the Spirit moves, through all ages and into all quarters of the world.

¹ See Townson's Works, pp. cxxxiv—cxlvii.

It is well said by Augustine, that “although each of the Four Evangelists appears to have observed a peculiar order of his own, yet none of them designed to write as if he were ignorant of what had been written by his predecessor, nor did any pass over through ignorance what his predecessor had written. But each, according to the Inspiration which he received, added the co-operation of his own work³.” (Aug. de Consens. Evang. lib. i. cp. Lardner, iii. p. 227.)

“St. John excels in the depth of divine mysteries. For sixty years after the Ascension he preached orally, till the end of Domitian’s reign; and after the death of Domitian, having returned to Ephesus, he was induced to write (his Gospel) concerning the divinity of Christ, coeternal with the Father; in which he refutes those heretics, Cerinthus and the Nicolaitans (Iren. iii. 11. 1; cp. Euseb. iv. 14) and the Ebionites, who denied that Christ had existed before Mary” (Hieron. Cat. 9).

“The three former Evangelists had narrated our Lord’s temporal acts and the sayings that were of most avail for regulating the conduct of this present life, and which specially concerned the inculcation of active duties. St. John relates fewer acts of Christ, but is more full and minute in recording His sayings, particularly concerning the Unity of the Ever Blessed Trinity and the felicity of life everlasting, and applies himself to the commendation of contemplative virtue. Hence the three other Living Creatures, by which the three other Evangelists are symbolized in the book of Ezekiel and in the Apocalypse⁴, the Lion, the Man, and the Calf, walk on the earth, because the three other Evangelists were principally occupied in relating those things which Christ wrought in the flesh, and the practical precepts which He delivered to those who are in the flesh; but St. John soars, like the Eagle, above the clouds of human infirmity, and contemplates the light of never-waning truth with the keen and stedfast eye of faith; he gazes at the Divinity of Christ, by which He is equal to the Father, and endeavours to present it in his Gospel.” (Augustine de Consens. Evang. i. cap. 5, 6, ad Joann. Tract. xxxvi.)

“Let us listen, therefore, with attention to his Gospel; for he who now presents himself before us is the Son of Thunder⁵, the beloved Disciple of Christ, the Pillar of the Universal Church; he who holds the keys of heaven; he who drank of Christ’s cup, and was baptized with His baptism, and leaned on His breast at supper.” (Chrysostom, Hom. in S. Joann.)

The principal ancient commentaries on this Gospel are to be found in Origen, vols. i. and ii. ed. Lommatzsch. S. Cyril Alex. vol. iv. ed. Aubert. Lutet. 1638. S. Chrysostom, vol. ii. ed. Savil. Eton, 1612. S. Augustine, vol. iii. ed. Bened. Paris, 1837.

¹ See above, the Introduction to the Four GOSPELS.

² Ezek. i. 10; x. 14. Rev. iv. 7.

³ The Table of Eusebian Canons and Ammonian Sections prefixed will show at one glance what St. John has in common with the other Evangelists, and what is peculiar to his Gospel.

⁴ Ezek. i. 5—10; x. 14. Rev. iv. 6—8.

⁵ Mark iii. 17.

ΕΥΑΓΓΕΛΙΟΝ ΚΑΤΑ ΙΩΑΝΝΗΝ.

a 1 John 1. 1, 2. I. ($\frac{1}{III}$) ¹ a' EN ἀρχῇ ἦν ὁ Λόγος, καὶ ὁ Λόγος ἦν πρὸς τὸν Θεόν, καὶ Θεὸς ἦν ὁ Λόγος. ² Οὗτος ἦν ἐν ἀρχῇ πρὸς τὸν Θεόν. ³ b Πάντα δι' αὐτοῦ ἐγένετο, καὶ Col. 1. 17. Heb. 1. 2. ch. 5. 26. & 8. 12. & 9. 5. & 12. 46. 1 John 5. 11. Ps. 33. 6.

CH. I. 1. 'Εν ἀρχῇ] In the beginning, בְּרֵאשִׁית (brešith). The Evangelist thus connects the Gospel with the Book of Genesis, and shows that the Author of the New Creation is one with the Author of the Old Creation. Christus tam in ipsâ fronte Genesis, quæ caput librorum omnium est, non minus quàm in principio Joannis Evangelistæ cœli et terræ Conditor approbatur. (Jerome ii. 507.) St. John's Gospel is the Genesis of the New Testament.

The preceding Evangelists, Matthew and Luke, had traced the Genealogy of Christ to Abraham, and to Adam—St. John declares Him from Everlasting. Epiphan. Hær. 69.

"It is alleged by some," says Chrysostom, "that the words 'In the beginning' do not intimate Eternity; for we read (Gen. i. 1), 'In the beginning God created heaven and earth.' But what is there in common between created and was? God created the world in time; but the Word was from eternity. St. John goes back beyond Moses, and speaks not only of the Creation, but of the Creator." Chrys. Hom. 2; Hom. 5. Hilary, de Trin. ii. Origen, Hom. 2.

Moses begins with the Works made; St. John begins with the Maker of the Works. The other Evangelists begin with Christ's Incarnation in time; St. John with His eternal generation. (Chrys.)

To be in the beginning signifies to exist before all things. (Aug. de Trin. vi. 2.) The Holy Spirit foresaw that some heretics would argue, that, if Christ was begotten, therefore there was a time when He did not exist, and He therefore says, "In the beginning was the Word." (Basil, Hom. in princ. Joann. ii. pp. 134—137.)

The Arian assertion on this subject may be seen in the words of Arius himself, cited by S. Athanas. (Orat. 1, contr. Arian. § 5, pp. 322—326.) An answer to the principal objections of the Arians, derived from this interpretation of Holy Scripture, may be seen in Greg. Nazian. Orat. xxx. pp. 540—556, and in S. Basil in Eunomium, i. pp. 249—252. 281. 292—294. 301.

The sense of these words, and the final cause of the Incarnation, is well expressed by Irenæus (iii. 18. 1), the scholar of Poly-carp, the disciple of St. John. "It has been clearly shown, that the WORD existed in the beginning with God; and that by Him all things were made; and that He who had been always present with mankind, was, in the last days, according to the time pre-ordained by the Father, united with His Creature, and became Man, and capable of suffering; and thus all contradictions of Heresies are excluded, which say, If Christ was then born, therefore He did not exist before. For it has been shown, that the Son of God did not then begin to be, but was always existing with the Father, and that when He was Incarnate and made Man, He summed up Humanity in Himself, bestowing salvation on us all, in order that what we had lost in the first Adam—namely, our Creation in the Image and Likeness of God,—we might recover in Christ." See also Iren. v. 14.

This Proem. of St. John's Gospel (1—14) was known and admired by ancient Heathen Philosophers—especially Platonists, see Euseb. P. E. xi. 18. Cyril c. Julian. viii. p. 282. Aug. de Civ. Dei x. 29. Wetstein. On the admiration expressed by later Platonists for this Prologue, see Bentley on Freethinking, xlv.

—ὁ Λόγος] the Word מִמְרָא (mimra), by which the Chaldee Paraphrases, which were read in the Jewish synagogues, render the name of God (see Bp. Bull on the Nicene Creed, i. 1. 19); e. g. Ps. cx. 1, "the Lord said לִמְרָא unto His Word," i. e. to Christ. And thus, as Bp. Bull has shown, the LXX had used the term λόγος for Shaddai, the Omnipotent God, Ezek. i. 24.

Besides—the term Λόγος had been previously applied by other Christian Writers to CHRIST, particularly by St. Paul, in his addresses to the Churches of Asia (afterwards governed by St. John) and to the Hebrew Christians. See notes below on Acts xx. 32. Introduction to the Epistle to the Ephesians, p. 277. Tit. i. 3. Heb. iv. 12.

Perhaps also the title "the Word," had been made more familiar by the previous publication of St. John's own Epistles and Apocalypse. See 1 John i. 1. Rev. xix. 13. Hence the name "Word" had been prepared for the designation of Christ, who has declared God (ἐξηγήσατο Θεόν, v. 18) in the Gospel, and in the Book of Revelation, xix. 11—16. See Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. ii. p. 219 and notes; and Schoettgen, Hor. p. 321, and the remarks of Dr. Jackson on the Creed, vii. 26; xi. 12 and 47, or vols. vii. 224; x. 219; xi. 402.

Christ is called Λόγος by Justin M. Apol. i. 32; ii. 6. Tryph. 105, and Athenagoras, Legat. c. 10: ἔστιν ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ ὁ Λόγος τοῦ πατρὸς ἐν ἰδέᾳ καὶ ἐνεργείᾳ πρὸς αὐτοῦ γὰρ καὶ δι' αὐτοῦ πάντα ἐγένετο, ἐν δὲ τούτῳ τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ τοῦ υἱοῦ, ὁ υἱὸς δὲ τοῦ υἱοῦ ἐν πατρὶ, καὶ πατὴρ ἐν υἱῷ ἐνότητι καὶ δυνάμει πνεύματος, τοῦ καὶ Λόγος τοῦ πατρὸς, ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ. For the passages of Justin, see below on v. 14. Cp. Theophil. Ant. ad Autolyc. ii. 22. The Word, i. e. the Son; the Word, the Living Word, never separated from the Father. (Origen, in Joann. tom. i.) Cp. S. Hippolyt. Philosophum. pp. 334, 335. Clement Alex. Strom. i. 29; ii. 15, Potter. Greg. Naz. p. 554.

For an English exposition of this term Λόγος (whether ἐν-διδάκτος, or προφορικὸς), with application to the misapprehensions of it by Sabellians, Arians, and Socinians, see Waterland, Sermon i. vol. ii. p. 1—23.

—ὁ Λόγος ἦν πρὸς τὸν Θεόν] the Word was with God. He says πρὸς, not ἐν, with God, not in; showing the Word's Eternity, and that the Son was not circumscribed by any limits of space; and that He was without time, but never without God. (Chrys. Hom. 3. Basil, Hom. in princ. Joann. Hilary, de Trin. ii.) Hence we may refute Sabellius, who said that the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are merely one Person, who showed Himself in various modes; for the Evangelist clearly distinguishes between the Person of God the Father and the Person of God the Son. (Theophyl.) πρὸς is the Hebrew לְ. See Schroeder, Syntax. Hebr. p. 292. Cp. the use of πρὸς in Matt. xiii. 56; xxvi. 55. Mark vi. 3; ix. 19.

—Θεὸς ἦν ὁ Λόγος] The Word was God. Being with the Father, the Word was a different Person from the Father; and being God, He is coequal with the Father. (Theophyl.) Cp. v. 21, 22; x. 38; xiv. 9.

2. Οὗτος ἦν ἐν ᾧ. π. τ. Θεόν] He was always God with God. (Theophyl. Cp. Aug. Serm. 117—120 and 127.)

3. Πάντα δι' αὐτοῦ] all things, even ὅλην, or matter itself, were made by Him;—against the Peripatetic theory, and the later χωρὶς αὐτοῦ ἐγένετο οὐδὲ ἐν ᾧ γεγενεῖν. ⁴ Ἐν αὐτῷ ζωὴ ἦν, καὶ ἡ ζωὴ ἦν τὸ φῶς τῶν ἀνθρώπων. ⁵ καὶ τὸ φῶς ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ φαίνει, καὶ ἡ σκοτία αὐτὸ οὐ κατέλαβεν.

(²/_{III}) ⁶ Ἐγένετο ἄνθρωπος ἀπεσταλμένος παρὰ Θεοῦ, ὄνομα αὐτῷ Ἰωάννης. ⁷ οὗτος ἦλθεν εἰς μαρτυρίαν, ἵνα μαρτυρήσῃ περὶ τοῦ φωτός, ἵνα πάντες πιστεύσωσι δι' αὐτοῦ. ⁸ Οὐκ ἦν ἐκεῖνος τὸ φῶς, ἀλλ' ἵνα μαρτυρήσῃ περὶ τοῦ φωτός. (³/_{III}) ⁹ Ἦν τὸ φῶς τὸ ἀληθινὸν ᾧ φωτίζει πάντα ἄνθρωπον ἐρχόμενον εἰς τὸν κόσμον. ¹⁰ Ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ ἦν, καὶ ὁ κόσμος δι' αὐτοῦ ἐγένετο, καὶ ὁ κόσμος αὐτὸν οὐκ ἔγνω. (⁴/_X) ¹¹ εἰς τὰ ἴδια ἦλθε, καὶ οἱ ἴδιοι αὐτὸν οὐ παρέλαβον. ¹² Ὅσοι δὲ ἔλαβον αὐτὸν, ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς ἐξουσίαν τέκνα Θεοῦ γενέσθαι, τοῖς πιστεύουσιν εἰς τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ. ¹³ οἳ οὐκ ἐξ αἱμάτων, οὐδὲ ἐκ θελήματος σαρκὸς, οὐδὲ ἐκ θελήματος ἀνδρὸς, ἀλλ' ἐκ Θεοῦ ἐγεννήθησαν.

heresy of Hermogenes. Against also the Valentinians and other Gnostics, who said that the world was made by the agency of Æons. (Iren. i. 8. 5.)

Therefore, also, He Himself was from Eternity; and since all things are from Him, Time itself was made by Him, Hilary (de Trin. ii.). And S. Ignatius, the disciple of St. John (ad Magnesians. 8), speaks of Him thus: εἰς Θεός ἐστιν, ὁ φανερώσας ἑαυτὸν διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τοῦ υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ, ὃς ἐστὶν αὐτοῦ Λόγος αἰδίου. Cp. Bp. Pearson, Vind. Ignat. P. ii. cap. iv. pp. 384—415, ed. Churton.

Since all things were created by Him, He cannot be a creature. Athanas. de Decret. Nicen. s. 13, who quotes (p. 327), in evidence of Christ's Divinity, Rev. i. 4. Rom. ix. 5.

The Word could not have been made, since all things were made by Him; and if the Word was not made, He is not a creature; and if not a creature, He is of one substance with the Father. He did not make the world as an ἰπουργός, but as δομῶντιος τῷ Θεῷ. (S. Cyril, who refers to Gen. i. 26. John v. 17; x. 38.) The Arians, indeed, say that the World was made by the Word as by an Instrument, as a door is made by a saw; but this is heretical. Why then did the Evangelist use the preposition διὰ, per? In order that we may not suppose Him to be unbegotten. (Theophyl.) And if you are disturbed by the preposition διὰ, remember the words of the Psalmist, "Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth" (Ps. cii. 25), and that the Apostle applies that Scripture to Christ. (Heb. i. 10.) (Origen.)

Since all things, even Angels, Archangels, Dominions, Principalities and Powers, were made by Christ, we may infer how great He is, Who made them. (Aug.)

On the creative and administrative agency of the Logos, see Athanas. ad Gentes, 41, 42, pp. 32, 33, who (p. 36) applies the words of the Psalmist (xxxiii. 6. 9, "By the Word of the Lord were the Heavens made") to Christ; and cp. Athanas. de Decret. Nic. Syn. § 16, p. 175, and so Hippolytus, adv. Noet. § 12. See also Waterland's Exposition of this Proem., with special reference to the Gnostic Heresies confuted by it. (On the Trinity, chap. vi. vol. v. p. 180—185.) Its antignostic character is unfolded by Irenæus, iii. 11. 1.

3. 4. δ γέγονεν. Ἐν αὐτῷ (ῶή ἦν) This may be pointed thus, with a stop after οὐδὲ ἐν—whatever was made in Him, was life (Origen); and S. Cyril interprets it, whatsoever was made, its life was in Him. But this interpretation might lead to the error of the Manicheans, who say that life is in all things. It is better to put a stop after 'that was made,' and then to say 'In Him was life.' (Aug.)

On the dogmatic and practical uses of these three verses see Dr. H. Mill's Sermons at Cambridge, 1848, pp. 1—28.

4. Ἐν αὐτῷ (ῶή) In Him was life, (ῶή = τῆ (chayah), 'vita,' and therefore He is no other than τῆ (Yehovah), Jehovah, and is so called Jer. xxiii. 6; xxxiii. 16. Cp. Luke ii. 9.

5. τὸ φῶς ἐν τῇ σκ. φ., καὶ ἡ σκ. αὐτὸ οὐ κατ. The Light shineth in the Darkness; and the Darkness comprehendeth it not. Quoted by Tatian adv. Græc. 13. It is supposed by Dr. Waterland (on the Trinity, ch. v. p. 183) that in the words οὐ κατέλαβεν, there is a protest against the Magian theory of two co-ordinate principles, Good and Evil, Light and Darkness: cp. Isa. xlv. 7.

6. Ἐγένετο] Observe the contrast: John ἐγένετο; but Christ ἦν, v. 1, 2. 4, and see ἐγένετο in v. 4.

— ἄνθρωπος] a man. To distinguish him from Christ, who is God. (Cyril.)

— ὄνομα αὐτῷ Ἰωάννης] his name was John, i. e. the Grace of God. See Luke i. 13; and as to the construction, see below, iii. 1.

8. Οὐκ ἦν] John was a light enlightened, but had not the enlightening light in himself. (Aug.)

9. τὸ φῶς τὸ ἀληθινόν] He was the true Light: the Light not only of Apostles and Prophets, but also of Angels. (Origen.)

The true Light is that light which kindles other lights. Our eyes may be called lights, but in vain are they opened unless there is something to illumine them. He is the true Light, which makes us see itself and every thing else. (Aug.)

— δ φωτίζει] which enlightens all men, and therefore enlightened John, in order that he might enlighten others to see Christ. (Aug.) Hence we may explain what John says below, ἐγὼ (I, of myself) οὐκ ᾔδειν αὐτόν (v. 31. 33).

No man has any being of himself, and no man has any knowledge by himself, and no man is really enlightened, who is not enlightened by Christ. (Aug.)

— ἐρχόμενον] Some render this—"the true Light coming into the world, enlightens all."

And it is true, that δ ἐρχόμενος is specially said of Christ. Matt. xi. 3. Luke vii. 19. See below, iii. 31; iv. 25; vi. 14; vii. 27. But it seems rather to mean that the Word is "the Light which enlightens every man coming into the world."

The position of the words in the sentence appears to require this rendering; and S. Cyril, and others of the Fathers, rightly observe that ἐρχόμενον construed with ἄνθρωπον (to which it stands next in the sentence) unfolds an important truth, viz. that no one but Christ had any light before coming into the world, and that all receive light from Him who is the Light of the world. See also Vorst. de Hebraism. p. 713, who shows that 'to come into the world' is a common Hebrew idiom for 'to be born.'

10. Ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ ἦν] He was in the world, but prior to it, for the world was made by Him. He was here as God, and came hither as man. (Aug., Chrys.)

— δ κόσμος δι' αὐτοῦ] the world was made by Him. The term World is used in Scripture in two senses; first, for the universe made by Christ; next, for those who love the world and worldly things, and have not their heart in heaven (Aug.); but those who were not of the world knew Christ even before His Incarnation. Thus Abraham saw his day and was glad. (John viii. 56.) David in spirit called Him Lord. (Matt. xxii. 43. Cp. Acts xiii. 22. Chrys. Hom. 7. See also Aug. Serm. 121.)

11. εἰς τὰ ἴδια] to His own, i. e. to the world made by Him, and specially to the Jews. His own peculiar people. (Cyril, Chrys., Aug.)

Observe the change from the neuter ἴδια to the masculine ἴδιος: all the world is His own (ἴδιος); and His own people (οἱ ἴδιοι) rejected Him.

12. Ὅσοι δὲ ἔλαβον] but as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become children of God, even to them that believe in His name. Much vigilance is therefore necessary to preserve the divine image formed in us by adoption in Baptism; and no one can take it from us unless we forfeit it by sin; and God gives grace to those who desire it, and endeavour earnestly after it; and by the concurrence of divine grace with human free-will we are sons of God. (Chrys. Hom. x.)

13. οἳ οὐκ ἐξ αἱμάτων] which were born not of blood; literally of bloods; i. e. of human commixtures. Man, as distinguished from God or Angels, is called ἡ ῶν (basar vedam), flesh and blood. (Cp. Matt. xvi. 17. Gal. i. 16.) He thus contrasts our old natural birth, with our new spiritual birth, and reminds us of i Matt. 1. 16.

& 17. 2.

Luke 1. 31. & 2. 7.
2 Pet. 1. 17.

Col. 1. 19.
& 2. 3, 9.
Heb. 2. 14, 16.

Isa. 40. 5.

k Matt. 3. 11.

Mark 1. 7.

Luke 3. 16.

ch. ver. 23, et

seqq. & 3. 31.

1 Col. 1. 19.

& 2. 9.

($\frac{5}{III}$)^{14 i} Καὶ ὁ Λόγος σὰρξ ἐγένετο, καὶ ἐσκήνωσεν ἐν ἡμῖν καὶ ἐθεασάμεθα τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ, δόξαν ὡς μονογενοῦς παρὰ Πατρὸς, πλήρης χάριτος καὶ ἀληθείας.

($\frac{6}{I}$)^{15 k} Ἰωάννης μαρτυρεῖ περὶ αὐτοῦ καὶ κέκραγε λέγων, Οὗτος ἦν ὃν εἶπον, Ὁ ὀπίσω μου ἐρχόμενος ἔμπροσθέν μου γέγονεν, ὅτι πρῶτός μου ἦν.

($\frac{7}{X}$)^{16 l} Καὶ ἐκ τοῦ πληρώματος αὐτοῦ ἡμεῖς πάντες ἐλάβομεν, καὶ χάριν ἀντὶ

the care with which we ought to cherish the heavenly gift of divine grace. (Chrys.)

14. Καὶ ὁ Λόγος σὰρξ ἐγένετο] The Word became flesh; not changed into flesh. But ἐγένετο is here used as by the LXX in Gen. ii. 7, ἐγένετο ὁ ἄνθρωπος εἰς ψυχὴν ζῶσαν,—not that he was changed into a living soul, but was endued with it.

Hence in the Apocalypse (xix. 11—16) the Word of God Who is the Faithful and True, is represented as clad in a vesture dipped in blood,—that is, with a robe of flesh red with His own Blood which He shed for us. (Origen, tom. ii.)

A reference seems to be made to these words by Justin M. c. Tryph. 63. Cp. Justin M. Apol. i. 32, ὁ Λόγος σαρκοποιηθεὶς ἄνθρωπος γέγονεν. Apol. ii. 6, ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὁ μόνος λεγόμενος κυρίως υἱὸς, ὁ Λόγος πρὸ τῶν ποιημάτων καὶ συνῶν καὶ γενόμενος, ὅτε τὴν ἀρχὴν δι' αὐτοῦ πάντα ἐκτίσσε καὶ ἐκόσμησε.

The Word became flesh; that is, He was not a mere phantasm, as some Heretics (the Docetæ and others) imagine. By this union the Word and the Flesh became one Person; but the two Natures were not confounded, nor was the Word changed into Flesh. As our words become voice, by making themselves to be audible, but our words are not changed into voice; and as the human soul is united to the body, but is not changed into the body; so the eternal Word took our flesh, and was united to it, and made Himself manifest in it, but was not changed into it, or confused with it. (Aug. de Trin. xv. 11. Chrys.)

For a beautiful summary on the manifestations of Christ's Humanity, and also of His Divinity in One Person, see S. Hippolyt. adv. Noet. § 13, vol. ii. pp. 19, 20. Cp. S. Cyril Alexandrin. (Epist. p. 137), ὁράμεν ὅτι δύο φύσεις συνῆλθον ἀλλήλαις καθ' ἑνωσιν ἀδιάσπαστον, ἀσυγχύτως καὶ ἀτρέπτως· ἡ γὰρ σὰρξ σὰρξ ἐστὶ, καὶ οὐ θεότης, εἰ καὶ γέγονε Θεοῦ σὰρξ.

The Word dwells in us as in a temple, which He occupies from us and for us, that He may reconcile us in one body to the Father. (Cyril.)

Apollinarius perverted these words into an occasion of heresy,—affirming that the Word took human flesh only, and not also a human soul, but that the Divine Intelligence was to Him instead of a human soul. But flesh is often used in Scripture for man, consisting of body and soul. (Ps. lxxv. 2. Matt. xxiv. 22. Acts ii. 17. Rom. iii. 20. 1 Cor. i. 29. Gal. ii. 16. Theophyl. Aug. c. Arian. cap. 9. Vorst. de Hebr. p. 124.)

Nestorius is also refuted by this Scripture, who said that the Blessed Virgin brought forth a Man endued with every virtue, and that the Man so born had the Incarnate Word joined to Himself. And thus Nestorius made two Sons,—one Jesus, the Son of the Virgin, another the Son of God; whereas the Evangelist does not say that the Word of God found a holy person, and united Himself to that person, but that the Word became Flesh and dwelt in us. (Theophyl.) See the following note.

—ἐσκήνωσεν ἐν ἡμῖν] pitched His Tent or Tabernacle in us: i. e. in our nature. ἐσκήνωσε is Hebr. אָהַל (ahal), or שָׂכָן (shachan). And since the Tabernacle, σκηνή, in which God dwelt in the wilderness, is ὀהל (ohel), therefore the sense is, the Word made our nature to be the Tabernacle, in which the divine Shechinah ἐσκήνωσε, rested, and showed itself in wonderful and gracious works. See Buxtorf, Lex. Talm. p. 2394, in v. שָׂכָן (Shechina), “habitation, in specie dicitur de præsentia, gloria, et maiestate divinâ aut divinitate, quando dicitur hominibus esse præsens, aut cum eis conversari, gratiâ et salutari præsentia adesse.”

And this is the more appropriate, because the course of the Church through this present world is often compared to the pilgrimage of the ancient people of God through the wilderness of Sina to Canaan, the type of heaven. The Tabernacle of our Humanity became the Shechinah of Deity. We saw His glory, the Shechinah of the Divinity, resting on the Tabernacle of His Humanity; as the Cloud of the Divine Presence rested on the Tabernacle in the wilderness.

As the Feast of the Passover was a type of Christ's Passion, and the Feast of Pentecost was a figure of the sending of the Holy Ghost, so the Feast of Tabernacles (σκηνοπηγία) seems to have been typical of Christ's Incarnation, that mysterious σκηνοπηγία in which He σκηνήν ἐπηξεν, pitched his tent in our flesh, ἐσκήνωσεν ἐν ἡμῖν.

Perhaps some confirmation may thence arise to the opinion that our Lord's Birth took place in the autumn, at the Feast of Tabernacles. See Mede's Works, i. Dis. 48, p. 266, and above on Luke ii. 8, and below, vii. 2.

Christ pitched not His tent in any particular person already existing; but in us, i. e. in our nature; and became our Emmanuel, God with us (Matt. i. 23); God manifest in our flesh (see on 1 Tim. iii. 16). He ἐσκήνωσεν in us, as in a Tabernacle. See Amos ix. 11. The Tabernacle of our Nature, which was broken down, Christ alone could raise up, and did raise up by dwelling in it. (Chrys.) And thus we see the two Natures, our Nature and the Nature of the Word, joined in one Person. Hence the Virgin is called Θεοτόκος.

As the reasonable soul and flesh is one man, so God and man is one Christ. Thus Christ is God, and is reasonable soul and flesh. We confess Christ in each one of these. By whom was the world made? By Christ in the form of God. Who was crucified? Christ in the form of a servant. Who was not left in hell? Christ in His human soul. Who rose again to life? Christ, but in His human flesh only. In all these acts we acknowledge one Christ. (Aug. Tract. lxxxiii.) God was made man; what may not then man become, for whom God was made man? Let this hope comfort us in our tribulations. If you regard Christ as only God, you refuse the medicine by which you are healed; if you regard Him as only Man, you deny the divine power by which you were made. Receive Him then as both God and Man; God equal with the Father, one with the Father; and Man born of a Virgin, deriving from our nature mortality without sin. (Aug. ad loc. and Tract. xxxvi.)

See Hooker, E. P. v. lii. for an exposition of the doctrine of this verse, and for a refutation of the various heresies opposed to it, and Dr. Barrow on the Creed, Sermon. xxi. and xxiii. Sermons, vol. iv. p. 482—565.

—τὴν δόξαν] His glory: כָּבוֹד (cabod), Majesty, Divinity, all the attributes of God, especially power and mercy. Col. i. 15. (See Rosenmüller here.)

—ὥς] as, does not here signify comparison, but reality, i. e. what was consonant to, and might be expected from. Chrys. Hom. 11, in Joh. Gloss. Phil. Sacra, p. 476. We saw this glory,—specially at the Transfiguration, cp. 2 Pet. i. 17. The Israelites were not able to look on the face of Moses, but we saw the glory of the Only-begotten Son. 1 John i. 1. (Theoph., who quotes Ps. xlv. 3; cp. below, on 2 Cor. iii. 7—18.)

—χάριτος καὶ ἀληθείας] חֶסֶד וְאֱמֶת (chesed and emeth), which, as Rosenmüller observes, describe the greatest love, characteristic of God alone; cp. Rom. vi. 15. Col. i. 6. 1 Pet. v. 12.

15. Ἰωάννης] John is witnessing concerning them, and hath cried, saying. Such is the literal interpretation of the words. The divine Evangelist, full of the Holy Ghost, is, as it were, suddenly transported back in the Spirit to the time of John's preaching, and seems to behold the Baptist preaching in the wilderness, and to have once more the sound of that solemn cry ringing in his ears, at the presence of Christ.

—κέκραγε] is Hebr. קָרָא (kara), Angl. cry, specially said of a Prophet, or of the voice of an Angel, or of God. Isa. vi. 3. Zech. vii. 13. Cf. Matt. iii. 3.

These words of the Evangelist are referred to by Justin M. c. Tryph. c. 66, describing John's address to the people, πρὸς οὓς καὶ αὐτὸς ἐβόα, οὐκ εἰμὶ ὁ Χριστὸς, ἀλλὰ φωνὴ βοῶντος.

—πρῶτός μου] before Me, and first of all. See Col. i. 15, and Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. ii. pp. 180—200. πρῶτος ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀέ. (Cyril.) Hence we may refute the Arian, who says that Christ was made; and Paul of Samosata, asserting that He took His beginning from the blessed Virgin. (Chrys., Theoph.)

16. ἐκ τοῦ πληρώματος] out of His fulness we all received. The Everlasting Word, in whom dwelleth all the Fulness of the Godhead, took our Nature; and by virtue of His Incarnation, and of our Incorporation in Him, we received of His fulness; we χάριτος· ¹⁷ ὅτι ὁ νόμος διὰ Μωϋσέως ἐδόθη, ἡ χάρις καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐγένετο. (⁸/_{III}) ¹⁸ Ἐθὼν οὐδεὶς ἑώρακε πώποτε· ὁ μονογενὴς Υἱὸς, ὁ ὢν εἰς τὸν κόλπον τοῦ Πατρὸς, ἐκείνος ἐξηγήσατο.

(⁹/_X) ¹⁹ Καὶ αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ μαρτυρία τοῦ Ἰωάννου, ὅτε ἀπέστειλαν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι ἐξ Ἱεροσολύμων ἱερεῖς καὶ Λευῖτας, ἵνα ἐρωτήσωσιν αὐτόν, Σὺ τίς εἶ; ^p καὶ ὁμολόγησε, καὶ οὐκ ἠρνήσατο, ²⁰ καὶ ὁμολόγησεν, ὅτι οὐκ εἰμὶ ἐγὼ ὁ Χριστός. ²¹ Καὶ ἠρώτησαν αὐτόν, Τί οὖν; Ἠλίας εἶ σύ; καὶ λέγει, Οὐκ εἰμί. Ὁ προφήτης εἶ σύ; καὶ ἀπεκρίθη, Οὐ. ²² Εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ, Τίς εἶ; ἵνα ἀποκρισὼν δώμεν τοῖς πέμψασιν ἡμᾶς, τί λέγεις περὶ σεαυτοῦ; (¹⁰/_I) ²³ Ἐφη, Ἐγὼ φωνὴ βοῶντος ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, εὐθύνατε τὴν ὁδὸν Κυρίου, καθὼς εἶπεν Ἡσαΐας ὁ προφήτης. (¹¹/_X) ²⁴ Καὶ οἱ ἀπεσταλμένοι ἦσαν ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων· ²⁵ καὶ ἠρώτησαν αὐτόν καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Τί οὖν βαπτίζεις, εἰ σὺ οὐκ εἶ ὁ Χριστός, became partakers of the Divine Nature. 2 Pet. i. 4. See below, on Col. i. 19; ii. 9, and ii. 10. See also Iren. iii. 11. 1, who recognizes here a refutation of the Gnostic Theories which would make Christ only an Æon or emanation from their ideal Pleroma, and see Waterland on the Trinity, vol. v. p. 185.

— χάριν ἂντι χάριτος] grace for grace, ἢ ἔν ἑν (chen al chen), one grace, or blessing, in the place of, or upon and after, another: e. g. the grace of the new covenant for that of the old (Origen, Cyril, Chrys., who quotes Phil. iii. 6. 2 Cor. iii. 11), and the grace or free gift of eternal life for the grace and free gift of faith. This we had not under the Law (see v. 17. Rom. vi. 14), but we all have it under the Gospel; for the Law threatened, but did not assist; it gave a commandment, but not strength to do it. It showed our diseases, but did not heal them; and yet it prepared the way for the Physician Who was to come with grace and truth, and Who gives us the grace or free gift of immortality. Hence, therefore, we are not to imagine that we deserve any thing from God as a due. In giving us the prize of immortal life, He crowns His own gifts. (Aug.) Therefore, χάριν ἂντι χάριτος means grace, in succession to and addition to grace; ever growing supplies of grace; and so Bengel, Lücke, Tholuck, Olshausen, Meyer.

John's name means the Grace of God, and he was a fit precursor of Him Who gives grace for grace, see Luke i. 14.

17. ὁ νόμος] The Law was given by the servant (Heb. iii. 5), and made men guilty. The Grace came by the King and freed them from guilt. (Aug.) The Law was given, but Grace came, because the one was sent by a servant, the other was brought by the Son.

18. Ἐθὼν οὐδεὶς ἑώρακε] No man hath seen God at any time. Cp. 1 Tim. vi. 16. The Patriarchs and Prophets saw Angels who revealed the will of God, but never saw God. (Chrys.)

— ὁ ὢν] the Being, or Existing One, is the peculiar name of Jehovah in the Old Testament, as written in the Septuagint, and therefore familiar to the Jews, and to St. John; so that, "it may very well be doubted whether the phrase, 'which is in the bosom of the Father,' gives it its full force, and whether the ever-existent in the bosom of the Father, is not the idea meant to be conveyed. See Coleridge's Remains, vol. iv. p. 234." Blunt, Lectures on the Duties of a Parish Priest, p. 52.

— εἰς τὸν κόλπον] The accusative case with εἰς here is more expressive than "in the bosom" (ἐν τῷ κόλπῳ). It means to be at, near, consubstantial with. Cp. πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν (i. 2).

To be "in the bosom" is much more than "to see;" it is to know all the secret thoughts, and participate in all His power and substance. (Chrys. Hom. 15, who quotes John x. 15. Aug. Tract. iii.)

It was reserved for the beloved Disciple St. John, who leaned on the bosom of Jesus at supper (John xiii. 23; xxi. 20), to declare the mystery of Him Who is in the bosom of the Father. (Origen, tom. 32, who quotes Luke xi. 22.)

— ἐξηγήσατο] declared. One who interpreted mysteries, prodigies, ceremonies, was called an ἐξηγητής by ancient writers. See Welst., p. 341.

19—28.] On these verses, see the excellent Homily of Greg. M. Moral. in Evang. i. 7, p. 1458.

19. οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι] the Jews. St. John writes concerning 'the Jews,' as it were ab extra. See ii. 6. 13. 20; iii. 1. 25; v. 1. 10. 15, 16, and in numerous other places; and thus he differs widely from St. Matthew and St. Mark; and this circumstance affords another proof that his Gospel was written after theirs, and at a time when the distinction between the Christian Church and the Jews had taken a definite form. See above, p. 208; below, ii. 18.

— ἱερεῖς] Priests. More honour was paid by the Jews to John than to Christ, in the persons sent, and in the place from which they were sent. They esteemed John for his sacerdotal lineage, and sanctity of life. But they despised Christ, saying, "Is not this the carpenter's son?" Matt. xiii. 55. (Origen, Chrys., Theoph.)

The Evangelist thus intimates the Baptist's firmness and disinterestedness. The Jews, who were expecting the Messiah, and mused in their hearts whether John was the Christ (Luke iii. 15), sent to him, from the capital City, Priests and Levites, of the Pharisees (v. 24), i. e. the chief of the people. Thus they paid homage to John; and tempted him to declare himself the Christ. But he resisted their solicitations, and used them as occasions for preaching to them Jesus. A noble example of faithfulness, disinterestedness, and zeal.

Here, also, is an indirect confirmation of the Evangelical history (recently called in question by Strauss and others) concerning the conception and birth of John the Baptist, and the Angelic appearance to his father, Zacharias the Priest, ministering in the Temple, as recorded by St. Luke, chap. i. The deference here paid to the Baptist by the Rulers of the people, and their readiness to accept him as the Messiah, are accounted for by those circumstances, which doubtless were well known to the Priests and Levites ministering in the Temple at Jerusalem.

— Λευῖτας] Levites; a rare word in the Gospels; occurring only here and Luke x. 32, and serving to show the transitory, subordinate, and manufactory character of the Levitical office to that of Christ; cp. Acts iv. 36, 37. Indeed it was now full time that He should appear Who was to purify the Sons of Levi (Mal. iii. 3), for they who were appointed to keep knowledge and teach others, were now split into sects, see v. 24. Acts xxiii. 6, 7.

20. ὁμολόγησε] he confessed; contrary to their expectations; but like a loyal servant he would not usurp the honour of his Master, and declined it when offered to him. The multitude through ignorance might imagine John to be the Christ: the Scribes, Pharisees, Priests, and Levites, flattered John, with a view of drawing him, who belonged to their order, to their own interest; and that they might derive from him a plea for rejecting Jesus of Nazareth. (Chrys., Theoph.)

21. Ἠλίας εἶ σύ;] Art thou Elias? whom they expected then. Cp. Matt. xi. 11—14; xvii. 10—13.

— Ὁ προφήτης εἶ σύ;] Art thou the Prophet, of whom Moses spake (Deut. xviii. 15), and who at this time was not identified by these inquirers with the Messiah? Cp. Theoph., who notes the use of the definitive article. See also Acts iii. 22, where the identity of the Prophet with Christ is shown. The Jews erroneously made a distinction between the Christ and that Prophet; but to us that Prophet is our Christ and God. (Theoph.)

23. Ἐγὼ φωνή] I am the Voice, of which Isaiah spake. (Isa. xl. 3.)

John is the Voice, Christ the eternal Word. John prepares the way for the manifestation of Christ, as the Voice precedes the Word. (Origen, Greg. Hom. vii.) I am his servant, and am sent to prepare His way in your hearts: the Voice is inarticulate without the Word. (Theoph.) John humbled himself, and so became a burning and shining light. John v. 35. (Aug.)

25. Τί οὖν βαπτίζεις] Why then baptizest thou? They expected the Messiah and his attendants, Elias and Jeremias, to baptize; for Baptism involved a new obligation, such as that which was undertaken by Proselytes. (Rosenmüller.) They had first tried to win the Baptist by flattery, and by prompting him to assume a high title; they would now constrain him to it, by allegations of inconsistency. (Chrys.) But John resists them in both attempts, and preaches not himself, but Christ.

m Exod. 20. 1, &c.
Deut. 5. 6, &c.
n Exod. 33. 20.
Deut. 4. 12.
ch. 6. 46.
1 John 4. 12.
1 Tim. 6. 16.
Matt. 11. 27.
Luke 10. 22.
Eccles. 43. 31.
o ch. 5. 33.
p ch. 3. 28.
Luke 3. 15.
Acts 13. 25.
q Deut. 18. 15.
r Isa. 40. 3.
Matt. 3. 3.
Mark 1. 3.
Luke 3. 4.
ch. ver. 15.
s Deut. 18. 15.

t Matt. 3. 11.
Mark 1. 7.
Luke 3. 16.
Acts 1. 5.
& 11. 16. & 19. 4.

οὔτε Ἡλίας, οὔτε ὁ προφήτης; ($\frac{12}{1}$)²⁶ Ἐπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰωάννης λέγων, Ἐγὼ βαπτίζω ἐν ὕδατι· μέσος δὲ ὑμῶν ἑστηκεν ὃν ὑμεῖς οὐκ οἴδατε. ²⁷ Αὐτός ἐστιν ὁ ὀπίσω μου ἐρχόμενος, ὃς ἔμπροσθέν μου γέγονεν· οὐ ἐγὼ οὐκ εἰμὶ ἄξιος ἵνα λύσω αὐτοῦ τὸν ἱμάντα τοῦ ὑποδήματος.

u Exod. 12. 3.
Isa. 53. 7.
ver. 36.
1 Pet. 1. 19.
& 2. 24.
Acts 8. 32.
x ver. 15.

($\frac{13}{x}$)²⁸ Ταῦτα ἐν Βηθανίᾳ ἐγένετο πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου, ὅπου ἦν Ἰωάννης βαπτίζων.

²⁹ Ὡς ἐπαύριον βλέπει τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἐρχόμενον πρὸς αὐτὸν, καὶ λέγει, Ἴδε ὁ ἄμνος τοῦ Θεοῦ ὁ αἴρων τὴν ἁμαρτίαν τοῦ κόσμου. ($\frac{14}{1}$)³⁰ Οὗτός ἐστι περὶ οὗ

26. Ἐγὼ βαπτίζω ἐν ὕδατι] I baptize with water; but not with the Spirit: for John was not able to remit sins; he cleansed the body only, not the soul. Why then did he baptize? In order that by his baptism he might prepare the way for the baptism of Christ, as by his preaching he prepared the way for the preaching of Christ. (Greg. Hom. vii.) If my baptism (he says) were not imperfect, another would not arise to baptize after me. (Chrys.)

27. ἵνα λύσω αὐτοῦ τὸν ἱμάντα] to loose His shoe-latchet. I am not worthy to do the most menial office to Him. (Origen.) See above on Matt. iii. 11. If this is the case with John, than whom none is greater of those born of women, what is the case with us? (Chrys.) There may be a reference to the practice described Ruth iv. 7, 8, whereby a kinsman plucked off the shoe of a kinsman who would not espouse as a bride one to whom he had a right by nearness of kin. Thus the Baptist may be supposed to say, He that hath the Bride is the Bridegroom, John iii. 29. The Church is His Spouse, I do not dare to dispute His claim. (Greg. Hom. vii.)

28. ἐν Βηθανίᾳ] at Bethany. The reading of A, B, C*, E, F, G, H, K, L, M, S, V, X, Δ, and numerous Cursives and Versions. βηθανία (Bethaniah), Domus navis, the place of the Ferry. Another etymology may be seen in the note on Matt. xxvi. 36. The other reading, βηθαβαρά, is not older than Origen. This Bethany is distinguished by the Evangelist here from the other Bethany, of Martha, Mary, and Lazarus, by the adjunct 'beyond Jordan.' On this Bethany, see Patrit. ii. p. 445. Cp. above, Matt. iv. 15; below, iii. 26; x. 40, 41.

29. Ἴδε ὁ ἄμνος τοῦ Θεοῦ] Behold the Lamb of God. The true Paschal Lamb (see xix. 36. 1 Cor. v. 7), who is described by St. John, in the Apocalypse, as the Lamb slain (v. 6). He is the 'Lamb of God,' because He was appointed as a Piacular Victim by God; and is accepted as an all-sufficient Satisfaction by God.

St. John never calls our Lord ὁ ἄμνος in the Apocalypse, but always τὸ ἄρνιον, and he never calls Him ἄρνιον in the Gospel, but always ἄμνος. The reason of this is considered in the Editor's Lectures on the Apocalypse, p. 380, 2nd edit.

The rest of the people came to John confessing their sins. (Matt. iii. 6.) In order that no one might be mistaken as to our Lord's nature, and might imagine, that, because He had been baptized, He had any sins to confess, John declares that He is the Lamb of God, pure and spotless, and not only sinless in Himself, but that He taketh away the sins of the whole world. (Chrys. Hom. 17.)

Christ alone came without sin. He took our flesh without sin, in order to take away our sin. (Aug.) Why, then, was He baptized? He submitted to be baptized by His servant, in order that thou mightest not disdain to be baptized by thy Lord: for whatever may be a man's knowledge, and self-denial, and charity, his sins are upon him, unless he comes to the healing waters of baptism, without which he cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven, John iii. 5. (Aug.)

Jesus was baptized by John for three reasons; first, that, being born as a man, He might fulfil all the law; next, that He might authorize John's baptism; next, that by sanctifying the water of Jordan, He might show, by the descent of the Dove, the advent of the Holy Ghost in the baptism of believers. (S. Jerome in Matt. iii.) Christ had no need to be baptized; but we needed that water should be sanctified for our baptism. St. John testifies that Christ needs not to be baptized, but Christ by His example consummates the Mysteries of our salvation, sanctifying us by His Incarnation and Baptism. (S. Hilary in Matt. iii.) See above on Matt. iii. 13.

— ὁ αἴρων τὴν ἁμαρτίαν] which taketh away the sin of the world. Cf. 1 John iii. 5, τὰς ἁμαρτίας ἡμῶν ἄρει, and 1 Pet. ii. 24, ὅς τὰς ἁμαρτίας ἡμῶν αὐτὸς ἀνήνεγκεν ἐν τῷ σώματι αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τὸ ξύλον.

He does not say that will take, but that He does take. Not that Christ is always being crucified, for He offered one oblation once for all, but He is ever taking away the sins of the world by that one sacrifice. (Chrys. Hom. 18. Theoph.) ὁ αἴρων means supporting the burden, something more than taking away; it means also, bearing the weight of. Accordingly, it is used in about 200 places by the LXX for the Hebr. נָשָׂא (nasa), to carry, to lift, bear a weight. See S. Cyril here, who well expounds it, καταργῶν θάνατον, ὑπὲρ πάντων ἀποθανόντων, εἰς γὰρ ὑπὲρ πάντων ἀπέθανεν ἄμνος, as a vicarious offering for sin. See Isa. liii. 4—6. 1 Pet. ii. 24, and Grotius, de Satisfactione Christi, c. i. p. 24, against the Socinians, and Archbp. Magee on the Atonement, i. p. 216. 419, and ii. 335, ed. 1816, and see note on Matt. viii. 17, and Bloomf. here, who says: "Jesus is characterized by the designation of a Lamb, with allusion to the paschal lamb typifying Him, and the lamb daily offered up at the evening sacrifice, representing Him. Moreover, He is designated as the Lamb of God, with reference to His being appointed and approved by God as the all-sufficient sacrifice for the sins of men. In this view John the Baptist must have considered Jesus, when he called Him Lamb,—namely, as suffering and dying like a victim; for it is clear that he meant to represent our Lord as one dying, and that in the place of others, by his subjoining the words ὁ αἴρων τὴν ἁμαρτίαν τοῦ κόσμου by way of explication. Now the phrase αἴρειν τὴν ἁμαρτίαν answers to the Hebr. נָשָׂא אֶת חַטֹּאתָם, which never signifies to remove sins, i. e. extirpate iniquity from the earth (as many recent Interpreters suppose), but to pay the penalties of sin, either one's own, or others', as in Exod. xxviii. 30. Lev. v. 1; x. 17, where are conjoined, as synonymous, the formulas to bear the sin of the people, and expiate the sins of, and to atone for the people with God. Therefore the formula 'to bear sins,' must denote 'to be punished because of sins,' 'to undergo the punishment due to sins.' Again, as 'to bear one's own sins' denotes 'to be punished for one's own sins,' so 'to bear the sins of others' must mean 'to be punished for the sins of others,' 'to undergo the punishment which the sins of others have deserved.' Moreover, Christ is said 'to bear the sin of the whole world;' and therefore the interpretation above mentioned can have no place. There is, besides, in these formulas a manifest allusion to, and comparison with, a piacular victim. For such a victim was brought to the altar, and the Priest put his hands over and upon the head, a symbolical action, signifying that the sins committed by the persons were laid on the victim, and when it was slaughtered it was said to bear or carry away the sins of the expiated, by which it was denoted that the victim paid the penalty of the sins committed, was punished with death in their place, and for the purpose of freeing them from the penalty of sin. Therefore when Christ is called the Lamb bearing the sins of the world, we must understand one who should take upon himself the sins of men, so as to pay the penalties of their sins, and in their stead, for the purpose of freeing them from those penalties. In short, αἴρων denotes, in its full sense, 'taking away by bearing;' and thus it is well adapted to express the atoning sacrifice of Christ for the sins of the world."

It has been alleged by some, that it is improbable that John the Baptist should have foreseen that Jesus would die by a violent death like a lamb, as a victim and a sacrifice for sin. And therefore some have rejected the primitive and orthodox interpretation of this passage. And, indeed, if John the Baptist had been a mere ordinary man, it was impossible that he should then have contemplated Christ as such. But John was inspired from his mother's womb; he was the greatest of prophets. (Matt. xi. 9. Luke vii. 26.) Hence when he saw Jesus coming to his baptism, he was enabled to proclaim Him as the future Judge of the world (Matt. iii. 12. Luke iii. 17), and now he is empowered by the Holy Ghost to discern and to declare Him to be the One sinless, expiatory Sacrifice, and Propitiatory Satisfaction for the sins of the world.

John the Baptist preached the Doctrine of the Atonement before the Sacrifice was offered; and yet some are found to deny the doctrine, now that the Sacrifice has been offered!

On this doctrine see further below, on Rom. iii. 21—26.

ἐγὼ εἶπον, Ὅπισω μου ἔρχεται ἀνὴρ, ὃς ἔμπροσθέν μου γέγονεν, ὅτι πρῶτός μου ἦν· ³¹ καὶ γὰρ οὐκ ᾔδειν αὐτόν· ἀλλ' ἵνα φανερωθῇ τῷ Ἰσραὴλ διὰ τοῦτο ἦλθον ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ ὕδατι βαπτίζων.

(¹⁵/₁) ³² ὧ καὶ ἐμαρτύρησεν Ἰωάννης λέγων, Ὅτι τεθέαμαι τὸ Πνεῦμα καταβαῖνον ὡς περιστερὰν ἐξ οὐρανοῦ, καὶ ἔμεινεν ἐπ' αὐτόν· ³³ καὶ γὰρ οὐκ ᾔδειν αὐτόν· ἀλλ' ὁ πέμψας με βαπτίζειν ἐν ὕδατι ἐκεῖνός μοι εἶπεν, Ἐφ' ὃν ἂν ἴδῃς τὸ Πνεῦμα καταβαῖνον, καὶ μένον ἐπ' αὐτόν, οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ βαπτίζων ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ· ³⁴ καὶ γὰρ εἶδον, καὶ μεμαρτύρηκα ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ.

(¹⁶/₂) ³⁵ Τῇ ἐπαύριον πάλιν εἰστήκει ὁ Ἰωάννης, καὶ ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ δύο· ³⁶ καὶ ἐμβλέψας τῷ Ἰησοῦ περιπατοῦντι λέγει, Ἴδε ὁ ἄμνος τοῦ Θεοῦ. ³⁷ Καὶ ἤκουσαν αὐτοῦ οἱ δύο μαθηταὶ λαλοῦντος, καὶ ἠκολούθησαν τῷ Ἰησοῦ. ³⁸ Στραφεῖς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ θεασάμενος αὐτοὺς ἀκολουθοῦντας, λέγει αὐτοῖς, ³⁹ Τί ζητεῖτε; Οἱ δὲ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Ῥαββί, (ὃ λέγεται ἐρμηνευόμενον διδάσκαλε) ποῦ μένεις; ⁴⁰ Λέγει αὐτοῖς, Ἐρχεσθε καὶ ἴδετε. ἦλθον καὶ εἶδον ποῦ μένει καὶ παρ' αὐτῷ ἔμειναν τὴν ἡμέραν ἐκείνην· ὥρα ἦν ὡς δεκάτη. ⁴¹ Ἦν Ἀνδρέας, ὁ ἀδελφὸς Σίμωνος Πέτρου, εἷς ἐκ τῶν δύο τῶν ἀκουσάντων παρὰ Ἰωάννου καὶ ἀκολουθησάντων αὐτῷ. (¹⁷/₁) ⁴² Εὗρίσκει οὗτος πρῶτος τὸν ἀδελφὸν τὸν ἴδιον Σίμωνα, καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, Εὗρήκαμεν τὸν Μεσσίαν, ὃ ἐστι μεθερμηνευόμενον Χριστός. ⁴³ Καὶ ἤγαγεν αὐτὸν πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν. ἐμβλέψας αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπε, Σὺ εἶ Σίμων ὁ υἱὸς Ἰωᾶ, σὺ κληθήσῃ Κηφᾶς· ὃ ἐρμηνεύεται Πέτρος.

30. ἔρχεται ἀνὴρ] cometh a man; ἀνὴρ (not ἄνθρωπος). Christ is the Husband of the Church and of every soul, as St. Paul says, "I have espoused you to one man (ἐνὶ ἀνδρὶ), Christ." (2 Cor. xi. 2.) I am the friend of the Bridegroom, He is the Bridegroom.

31. ἵνα φανερωθῇ] in order that He might be manifested. I come not with my baptism to give the Spirit, or to remit sins, but to prepare the way for Him and His manifestation. Hence, it is clear that the histories which are related by some concerning miracles, as if wrought by Christ in His childhood, are fabulous; for if He had wrought miracles, He could not have been unknown in Israel, and have needed manifestation from John. (Chrys., Theoph.) The baptism of John lasted but a short time, being designed to manifest Christ, who submitted to receive the baptism of His servant, in order to encourage us to receive the baptism of our Master, whose baptism was necessary for those who had been baptized with the baptism of His servant. (Aug. Tract. v.)

32. τεθέαμαι τὸ Πνεῦμα] I have seen the Spirit. John's own witness was to be confirmed by the witness of God the Holy Ghost, Whose work it is to declare Christ. (Chrys.) Cp. on Matt. xi. 2.

— ὡς περιστερὰν] as a Dove. The Holy Ghost then manifested Himself as a Dove,—and, at the day of Pentecost, in Tongues of Fire; in order that we may learn to unite fervour with simplicity, and to seek for both from the Holy Ghost. (Aug.)

— ἐπ' αὐτόν] upon Him. The preposition implies motion to, the verb expresses immanence on. Cp. v. 33.

33. καὶ γὰρ οὐκ ᾔδειν αὐτόν] and I knew Him not. It has been objected by some, that it is not possible that John should have been ignorant of Jesus, the son of his mother's kinswoman, and probably intimate with him in his infancy.

But this objection is grounded on a misunderstanding of these words, which mean, "Even I, intimate with Him as I am, did not as yet know Him as He is, and as I now preach Him to you."

Lest it should be supposed, that, from his mother's near connexion with Mary the mother of Jesus, the Baptist might be biassed, either by favour or interest, to bear witness to Christ, he refutes this suspicion by saying, "I knew Him not." (Theoph.) It is not, therefore, from my own personal knowledge, as you may imagine, that I now declare Him to be what He is; for my own knowledge of Him is only earthly and human. But I proclaim Him, because I have received from heaven a revelation concerning Him. Cp. our Lord's saying to St. Peter, Matt. xvi. 17. The Baptist, therefore, shows by these words, that he utters his testimony concerning Christ not from any considerations of human intercourse and personal affection, but from divine revelation. John declared Christ to the people, not from human attachment, but in obedience to the divine will. (Cyril.) As son of the cousin of our Lord's Mother, he knew Jesus according to the flesh; but it was only by revelation from above that he knew and declared Him as He is, viz. the Lamb of God, the Judge of Quick and Dead, the Bridegroom of the Church, the Son of God, the Saviour of the world.

37. δύο μαθηταί] two disciples. The Baptist, as the friend of the Bridegroom, gives away the Bride to Christ, by presenting the souls of his own disciples to Christ, and espousing them to Him. (Chrys.) See above on Matt. xi. 2 as to John's conduct in this respect when he was in prison, and on the eve of death. His practice is consistent to the last: "servatur ad inum Qualis ab incepto processerat, et sibi constat."

39. ὃ λέγεται ἐρμηνευόμενον] which is to say, being interpreted. A common expression with St. John, who is careful to interpret Hebrew words (cp. i. 42; iv. 25; ix. 7), and is also accustomed to specify original Hebrew names. The word Ἐβραϊστὶ occurs seven times in his Gospel and Apocalypse (John v. 2; xix. 13. 17. 20. Rev. ix. 11; xvi. 16), and no where else in N. T.

40. Ἐρχεσθε καὶ ἴδετε] Come ye, and see. A phrase used by the Holy Spirit, particularly when speaking by St. John, to call attention to some notable thing. See i. 47. Rev. vi. 1. 5. 7. Cp. Rev. xxii. 17. 20.

— ὥρα ἦν ὡς δεκάτῃ] it was about the tenth hour, ten in the morning. On St. John's mode of reckoning the hours, see below, iv. 6. 52; xi. 9; xix. 14. Townson on the Gospels, Disc. viii. pt. i.

41. Σίμωνος Πέτρου] of Simon Peter, not yet mentioned by St. John, but supposed to be known to the reader from the other Gospels. See above, Introduction, p. 268.

42. Εὗρίσκει οὗτος πρῶτος τὸν ἀδελφόν] He first findeth his own brother Simon, and saith to him, We have found the Messiah. The proof of our having really found Christ, is seen in our finding our brother and bringing him to Christ. We find Christ by caring for the souls of our brethren. (Bede, Hom. in Vig. St. Andr.)

— Εὗρήκαμεν τὸν Μεσσίαν] We have found the Messiah. Ἰησοῦς (Messiah). Messiah in Hebrew, and Christ in Greek, the Anointed. See above, Matt. i. 1. Christos signifies unction, and Jesus is specially the Christ, through Whom all Christians derive their unction, and Who is anointed with the oil of gladness above His fellows. Ps. xlv. 8. (Aug. Tract. 7.)

43. Κηφᾶς] Cephas. He is called Petrus, 'a stone,' from Petra, 'the Rock.' (Aug.) Petrus (or Peter) has the same meaning in Greek as Cephas (כֶּפֶס) in Syriac; and the Apostle was called Peter from the firmness of his faith, by which he clave to that Petra, or Rock, of Whom the Apostle Paul speaks,— "That Rock was Christ" (1 Cor. x. 4). (Bede, Hom. i. in Vig. St. Andr.) See notes above on Matt. xvi. 18.

($\frac{18}{x}$) ⁴⁴ Τῇ ἐπαύριον ἠθέλησεν ἐξελθεῖν εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν, καὶ εὐρίσκει Φίλιππον, καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἀκολουθεῖ μοι. ^{45 d} Ἦν δὲ ὁ Φίλιππος ἀπὸ Βηθσαϊδᾶ, ἐκ τῆς πόλεως Ἀνδρέου καὶ Πέτρου. ^{46 e} Εὐρίσκει Φίλιππος τὸν Ναθαναὴλ, καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, Ὁν ἔγραψε Μωϋσῆς ἐν τῷ νόμῳ, καὶ οἱ προφῆται, εὐρήκαμεν, Ἰησοῦν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Ἰωσήφ τὸν ἀπὸ Ναζαρέθ. ⁴⁷ Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ Ναθαναὴλ, Ἐκ Ναζαρέθ δύναται τι ἀγαθὸν εἶναι; Λέγει αὐτῷ Φίλιππος, Ἐρχου καὶ ἴδε. ^{48 a} Εἶδεν Ἰησοῦς τὸν Ναθαναὴλ ἐρχόμενον πρὸς αὐτὸν, καὶ λέγει περὶ αὐτοῦ, Ἴδε ἀληθῶς Ἰσραηλῆτης, ἐν ᾧ δόλος οὐκ ἔστι. ⁴⁹ Λέγει αὐτῷ Ναθαναὴλ, Πόθεν με γινώσκεις; ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Πρὸ τοῦ σε Φίλιππον φωνῆσαι, ὅντα ὑπὸ τὴν συκὴν εἰδόν σε. ⁵⁰ Ἀπεκρίθη Ναθαναὴλ καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, Ραββί, σὺ εἶ ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, σὺ εἶ ὁ βασιλεὺς τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ. ⁵¹ Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Ὅτι εἰπὸν σοι, Εἰδόν σε ὑποκάτω τῆς συκῆς, πιστεύεις; μείζω τούτων ὄψῃ. ^{52 h} Καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ἀπ' ἄρτι ὄψεσθε τὸν οὐρανὸν ἀνεωγμένον, καὶ τοὺς ἀγγέλους τοῦ Θεοῦ ἀναβαίνοντας καὶ καταβαίνοντας ἐπὶ τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου.

^{45.} Ἦν δὲ Φίλιππος] But Philip was of Bethsaida, the city of Andrew. St. John, also of Galilee, makes other mention of Philip in connexion with Andrew his fellow-townsmen. See below, vi. 6; xii. 21.

^{46.} Ναθαναὴλ] Nathanael. $\kappa\alpha\tau\alpha\gamma\alpha\lambda\lambda\alpha\iota$ i. q. Θεόδωρος, 'gift of God.'

^{48.} Ἴδε] Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom there is no guile. All men knew Nathanael to be an Israelite. But our Saviour, piercing deeper, giveth further testimony of him than men could have done; "Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile." He declared that Nathanael belonged not only to the Church Visible (i. e. the Church as seen by man), but to the Church Invisible, i. e. to the Church as seen by God. Hooker, iii. 1.

Since Nathanael received such a testimony from Christ, why is he not found among the Apostles? Perhaps he was a learned man, skilled in the Law; and Christ would choose unlearned men to convert and confound the world. He would not convert fishermen by orators, but orators by fishermen. (Aug.) Reasons have been adduced by some, for believing Nathanael to be no other than Bartholomew the Apostle; e. g. by Robert Nelson on the Feast of St. Bartholomew, and Meyer here. Cp. John xxi. 2, where Nathanael is placed before οἱ τοῦ Ζεβεδαίου. But as the writer himself was one of the sons of Zebedee, no argument can thence be drawn that Nathanael was an Apostle. Rather, it would seem, that passage shows that he was not an Apostle, and therefore not the same as Bartholomew; for Nathanael is there placed after Thomas (ὁ λεγόμενος Διδυμος),—whereas, on the contrary, in all the Apostolic Catalogues (Matt. x. 3. Mark iii. 18. Luke vi. 14, 15), except Acts i. 13, Bartholomew is placed before Thomas.

^{49.} Πόθεν με γινώσκεις;] Whence knowest thou me? Me, so obscure a person.

— ὄντα ὑπὸ τὴν συκὴν] Something more than ὑπὸ τῇ συκῇ. The accusative intimates retirement under the shade of the fig-tree, as well as concealment there, perhaps for purposes of Prayer and Meditation.

The foliage of the fig-tree produces a thick shade; and the Jewish rabbis were accustomed to rise early and to study beneath it. See Wetstein, p. 845, and Winer, R. W. B. p. 366.

This mention of the fig-tree, under whose shade Nathanael seems to have sought for religious seclusion, indicates that the incident here recorded took place when the fig-tree was in full foliage, and therefore not in the winter or early spring. See Matt. xxiv. 32. Jahn, § 72.

Perhaps this circumstance may throw some light on the question concerning the time of year of our Lord's Birth. Our Lord was baptized at about the same season of the year as that in which He was born (see Luke iii. 23), and the incidents here mentioned appear to have occurred in the autumn, about the time of the Feast of Tabernacles, when the boughs of trees were in full leaf. (See Levit. xxiii. 40; and above, i. 14; below, vii. 2, and note at the end of the Seventh Chapter.) They must, however, have occurred more than forty days after our Lord's baptism; for the Temptation took place between it and them.

Nathanael inquires as man, Christ replies as God, "I saw thee; thou wast then seen by Me as God,"—that is, from afar, and when no other eye was upon thee. I saw thee under the fig-tree, before Philip called thee; and I saw thy heart, and pronounce thee to be an Israelite indeed, in whom there is no guile,—that is, who art not indeed free from taint of sin, but who art ready to confess thyself a sinner, and to embrace the truth. (Chrys. Aug. Tract. vii. et de Verb. Dom. Sermon. 40.)

We read, in the beginning of the Old Testament, that the Eye of God discovered Adam hiding himself among the trees of the garden (Gen. iii. 8); and thence he was brought forth to receive his sentence of condemnation. But in the beginning of the Gospel, the Eye of Christ discovers Nathanael under the fig-tree, and proclaims him an Israelite indeed. In the former case we see the Omniscience of Judgment, in the latter of Love. Adam sewed leaves of the fig-tree together to hide his shame. (Gen. iii. 7.) Christ saw Nathanael in his retirement under the fig-tree, and proclaimed him "an Israelite indeed, in whom was no guile."

At the end of our Lord's Ministry, He discovered Zacchæus amid the leaves of the sycamore-tree, and called him by his name, and abode with him at his house. See Luke xix. 5.

Christ's Eye pierces through the thick leaves of our secret thoughts. We are never less alone than when alone. He sees us in our solitude; let our eye be also on Him, for we must all one day be made manifest before His judgment-seat (see 2 Cor. v. 10); for "all things are naked and open to the eyes of Him with whom we have to do." See on Heb. iv. 13.

^{50.} Ραββί, σὺ εἶ ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ] Rabbi, thou art the Son of God. How is it that Peter, for his confession afterwards, received such excellent gifts (Matt. xvi. 16), and that those gifts were not now bestowed on Nathanael for his confession of Christ? and that our Lord said, that He would build His Church on Peter's confession as being complete; and that He promised to lead Nathanael to a higher elevation, as if his confession was not perfect? The reason seems to be, that Nathanael did not as yet confess Christ to be the true living God, the Lord of angels; and therefore Christ promises that hereafter he shall see heaven opened, and the angels of God ascending and descending to minister to the Son of Man as their King. (Chrys.) Nathanael would not have addressed Christ as Rabbi (see Matt. xix. 16, 17) if he had then known Him to be God. But Peter, although he had seen Him in His humiliation as Son of Man, yet was not staggered by what he saw, and owned Him as the Christ, the Son of the living God.

^{52.} Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν] Verily, verily. Amen, amen, or verily (see Matt. v. 18), occurs twenty five times in St. John's Gospel; always doubled, never used by any one but Christ, and always at the beginning of a sentence. It is never doubled in the other Gospels. It is found at the end of sentences, especially doxologies in the Apocalypse, i. 6, 7; v. 14; vii. 12; xix. 4, in which book CHRIST is called ὁ Ἀμὴν. Rev. iii. 14.

The utterance of the word Ἀμὴν, Amen, especially when doubled, was supposed by the Jews to have the solemnity of an adjuration. See the authorities from the Talmud in Wetst. p. 851.

God is called by Isaiah (lxv. 16) the God of Amen, or Truth; and Amen is doubled in St. John's Gospel, in which the Word of Truth is solemnly sealed for ever.

— ἀπ' ἄρτι] henceforth,—now that I am come and have begun My course as the Messiah.

Π. ¹ Καὶ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ τρίτῃ γάμος ἐγένετο ἐν Κανᾷ τῆς Γαλιλαίας· καὶ ἦν ἡ μήτηρ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἐκεῖ, ² ἐκλήθη δὲ καὶ ὁ Ἰησοὺς καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ εἰς τὸν γάμον. ³ Καὶ ὑστερήσαντος οἴνου, λέγει ἡ μήτηρ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ πρὸς αὐτὸν, Οἶνον οὐκ ἔχουσι. ⁴ Ἀλέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοὺς, Τί ἐμοὶ καὶ σοὶ, γύναι; ^a ² Sam. 16. 10. & 19. 22. οὐπω ἤκει ἡ ὥρα μου. ⁵ Λέγει ἡ μήτηρ αὐτοῦ τοῖς διακόνοις, Ὅ τι ἂν λέγῃ ² Kings 3. 13. ὑμῖν, ποιήσατε. ⁶ ^b Ἦσαν δὲ ἐκεῖ ὑδρίαὶ λίθιναι ἑξ̄ κείμεναι, κατὰ τὸν καθ- ^b Mark 7. 3.

— οὐρανὸν ἀνεφώγα] the heaven, shut by the sin of the first Adam, opened by the obedience of the second Adam.

— τοὺς ἀγγέλους τοῦ Θεοῦ] the Angels of God, in the Garden at the Agony, at the Resurrection, and at the Ascension. (Theoph.)

— ἐπὶ τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου] on the Son of Man, and ministering to Him. Thus ye shall learn the Mystery of the two Natures, of God and Man, united in the Person of Christ. This mention of homage paid by Angels to Christ in His Human Nature is appropriately introduced by St. John, as a refutation of the Gnostic error, prevalent in Asia, paying worship to Angels, and so disparaging the dignity of Christ. See below on Coloss. ii. 18.

The same truth is suggested by the mention of the Angel coming down from time to time, and troubling the water of Bethesda, in order to heal one patient on each occasion (v. 4). Christ heals by a word (v. 8); and He has come down from heaven once for all, and healed the whole human race.

CH. II. 1. τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ τρίτῃ γάμος] on the third day after His return to Galilee (i. 43). Doubtless something is designed by this precise and exact indication of time;

On the first day, John declared Jesus to the Priests and Levites (John i. 19—28), who came from Jerusalem to him at Bethany and in Peræa. It is probable that this took place soon after our Lord's Temptation, which is not described in this Gospel.

On the second day, John proclaimed Jesus as the Lamb of God, and referred to his former testimony concerning Him (John i. 29, 30), and to the descent of the Holy Ghost on our Lord at His baptism; which is nowhere mentioned in this Gospel.

On the third day, John revealed Jesus especially to Andrew and another of his disciples, who accordingly follow Jesus, and speak of Him as the Christ; and He abides with them that day (i. 40), and calls Simon by the name Cephas.

On the fourth day, Jesus returns to Galilee, and finds Philip of Bethsaida in Galilee, who finds Nathanael of Cana in Galilee.

On the third day after this event, the Marriage of Cana takes place, at which was wrought the first Miracle, the Manifestation of His Godhead.

As the Book of Genesis begins with the history of a period of Six Days, so, it would seem, does the Gospel of St. John—the Genesis of the New Testament. (Cp. Burgon, p. 38.) In Genesis, the consummation is in the Institution of Marriage in Paradise (see Gen. i. 26—28), where Adam is united to Eve,—a figure of the Mystical Union and Marriage betwixt Christ and His Church. (Eph. v. 22—32.) The consummation is here in the Marriage of Cana, where Christ manifests the Union of the two Natures, that of God and Man, in Himself. See on vv. 2, 3.

— γάμος] a Marriage Feast (see Matt. xxii. 2. Luke xii. 36), lasting for seven or eight days. See Gen. xxix. 27. Judg. xiv. 15, and Lightfoot here.

— Κανᾷ τῆς Γαλιλαίας] Perhaps Kana-el-Jelil, or Kirbet Kana, about seven miles north of Nazareth, and about ten s.w. of Capernaum. See Robinson's Palestine, iii. p. 204. Later Researches, p. 108. Winer, Real-Lex. i. p. 648.

2, 3. ἐκλήθη ὁ Ἰησοὺς καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ—ἡ μήτηρ] Jesus was bidden, and His disciples, to the marriage; and His Mother was there. Joseph, it would seem, was now dead.

He Who is the Son of God and also the Son of Mary came to the Marriage. He Who, when He was with the Father, had instituted Marriage; He Who came into the world to a Marriage, for He has espoused the Church, which He has redeemed with His own blood, and to which He has given the Holy Spirit as a pledge, and which He first united to Himself in the Virgin's Womb, from which He came forth as a Bridegroom from His chamber, rejoicing to run His course (Ps. xix. 5), when He, the Word of God, married our flesh, and so the Son of God and the Son of Man joined both in one. (Aug.) Hence we may learn to reject the heresies of Tatian and Marcion, who disparage Matrimony. (Bede, Hom. dom. 1, post Epiph.)

On the honour thus paid by Christ to Holy Matrimony, see the Marriage Office in the Book of Common Prayer.

3. ὑστερήσαντος οἴνου] when the wine failed; perhaps at the close of the feast-week.

— ἡ μήτηρ τ. Ἰ.] the mother of Jesus; never called Mary by St. John.

4. Τί ἐμοὶ καὶ σοὶ] Woman, what have I to do with thee? The Hebr. מַה לִּי וְלָךְ (mah lanu valak), Quid nobis et tibi? (Josh. xxii. 24. 2 Sam. xvi. 10. Matt. viii. 29; xxvii. 19. Mark i. 24, and Wetstein's note.)

The word γύναι, woman, is not necessarily to be understood as a rebuke. Cp. xix. 26; xx. 15; and see Kuin, here, who quotes Soph. Trachin. 370, and the words of Augustus to Cleopatra, Dio Cass. li. p. 305, θάρσει, γύναι, καὶ θυμὸν ἔχε ἀγαθόν. But yet, as the Fathers observe, it is significantly employed to remind Mary of her womanhood, and of her subjection to her Son, as God. He does not say μήτερ, but γύναι.

The sense is, What have I, as God, to do with thee, a woman? Dost thou suppose that the divine power by which I work miracles can be set in motion by thee, because thou art the mother of My humanity? S. Irenæus says (iii. 16. 7), "Dominus repellens intempestivam ejus festinationem dixit, Quid mihi et tibi, mulier?" Thus He condemns those who pray to the Virgin to command Christ, "Monstra te esse matrem, Jure matris impera Filio."

Hence Christ, Who loved and revered His earthly Mother (see Luke ii. 51. John xix. 26), teaches us to begin with love and reverence to our heavenly Father; and He here rebukes His Mother. He had great regard for her, but more for the salvation of souls. (Matt. xii. 48. Luke xi. 27.) He therefore corrects her, and prepares the way for the working of His first miracle with due dignity. (Chrys.)

Christ is the Son of Mary, and the Lord of Mary; He was made of Mary and created Mary; for He is the Son of David and the Lord of David. (Ps. cx. 1.) He is both man and God. (Aug.)

The miracle which He was now about to work, He was about to work to God. As God He has no mother. And now that He was about to perform a divine work, He ignores, as it were, the human womb, and asks, "Woman, What have I to do with thee?" As much as to say, Thou art not the Mother of that in Me which works miracles; thou art not the Mother of My Godhead. What then have I now to do with thee? (Aug., see also his Serm. 218.)

Our Lord here and elsewhere displays His Divinity more clearly, by bringing it out in contrast with His relationship to His human Mother. Cp. Mark iii. 32. Luke ii. 48.

— οὐπω ἤκει ἡ ὥρα μου] Mine hour is not yet come; the hour of My weakness derived from thee is not yet come; but it will come, and then I will acknowledge thee.

Mine hour is not yet come, but it will come hereafter. When the hour of my human infirmity arrives, and when that infirmity, of which thou art the Mother, hangs on the Cross, then I will own thee as My Mother. Accordingly He owned her, when that which was born of her was about to die; then He commended her to His Disciple, and said to him, "Behold thy mother." (Aug.) See John xix. 26, 27, the best comment on this text.

As man He had His hour (cp. vii. 30; viii. 20; xii. 27; xvii. 1). But as God He has no hour. He is the Everlasting Jehovah. He is the Author of all Time. And it was as God that He was now about to work, and to manifest His Godhead; and He calls His hour of suffering "Mine hour," because He chose the hour of His own death; He had the power of laying down His life when and as He pleased. (John x. 18.)

6. ἑξ̄] six; the number of the days in which God created the world. All things are made new by the Incarnation of Christ. See v. 11, and above, Introduction, p. 259.

— κατὰ τὸν καθαρισμόν] according to the purifying, for ablution before dinner, and for washing of the vessels. (Matt. xv. 2. Luke xi. 39.) It would appear from v. 7 that these six water-pots had been exhausted of part of their contents before the miracle was wrought.

αρισμόν τῶν Ἰουδαίων, χωροῦσαι ἀνὰ μετρητὰς δύο ἢ τρεῖς. ⁷ Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Γεμίσατε τὰς ὑδρίας ὕδατος· καὶ ἐγέμισαν αὐτὰς ἕως ἄνω. ⁸ Καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, Ἀντλήσατε νῦν καὶ φέρετε τῷ ἀρχιτρικλίνῳ καὶ ἤνεγκαν. ⁹ Ὡς δὲ ἐγεύσατο ὁ ἀρχιτρικλίνος τὸ ὕδωρ οἶνον γεγεννημένον, καὶ οὐκ ᾔδει πόθεν ἐστίν, οἱ δὲ διάκονοι ᾔδεισαν οἱ ἡντληκότες τὸ ὕδωρ, φωνεῖ τὸν νυμφίον ὁ ἀρχιτρικλίνος, ¹⁰ καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, Πᾶς ἄνθρωπος πρῶτον τὸν καλὸν οἶνον τίθῃσι, καὶ ὅταν μεθυσθῶσι, τότε τὸν ἐλάσσων· σὺ τετήρηκας τὸν καλὸν οἶνον ἕως ἄρτι.

c ch. 1. 14.

¹¹ Ταύτην ἐποίησε τὴν ἀρχὴν τῶν σημείων ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐν Κανᾷ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, καὶ ἐφάνέρωσε τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ· καὶ ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτὸν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ.

(¹⁹/_{vii}) ¹² Μετὰ τοῦτο κατέβη εἰς Καφαρναοὺμ αὐτὸς καὶ ἡ μήτηρ αὐτοῦ, καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐκεῖ ἔμειναν οὐ πολλὰς ἡμέρας.

(²⁰/_i) ¹³ Καὶ ἐγγὺς ἦν τὸ πάσχα τῶν Ἰουδαίων, καὶ ἀνέβη εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα ὁ Ἰησοῦς.

— χωροῦσαι ἀνὰ μετρητὰς] containing two or three firkins apiece. See Matt. xx. 9. Mark vi. 40. μετρητῆς is the Hebr. ma (bath). 2 Chron. iv. 5. See on Luke xvi. 6. Joseph. Ant. viii. 2. 9, and Welst. and Kuinoel here.

Since the μετρητῆς held seventy-two sextarii (Joseph. Ant. viii. 2), about nine gallons,—and since these water-pots held two or three μετρητὰ apiece, the quantity of water changed into wine was very great—about 135 gallons.

This large quantity has been perverted by some into an argument against the veracity of St. John's account, and even against the reality of the miracle itself. What use, it is asked, could there be in the supply of so much wine for a single feast? And is it consistent with the divine character of Christ to produce what would only be wasted, and was so disproportionate to the occasion?

To this it has been replied by some (Semler and Kuin.) that it is probable that only a portion of the water in the water-pots was changed. This is against the text. Others reply, that it was an act of divine benevolence to supply a large quantity of wine for the future use of the newly married pair and their friends. (Meyer.)

This may be so. But the true reason of the large surplus beyond the present need, seems to be of a higher spiritual kind,—namely, in order that there might be in this residue,—as in the twelve baskets remaining over and above the barley loaves after the miraculous feeding (Matt. xiv. 20; xvi. 9. John vi. 13),—a visible and abiding proof and record of this mighty work of Christ; and that, whenever the newly married pair brought forth any of this wine, from time to time, to welcome and regale any of their friends, they themselves might be reminded, and they might speak to others, of the divine power and love of Him Who produced it; and so the effects of the Miracle might extend far beyond the time, and place, and other circumstances of its first operation; and that the water, thus made wine, might diffuse the knowledge of the Gospel, and become a well-spring and fountain of living water for the salvation of souls. The bread of the barley loaves could not be kept long; and therefore, in that case, the surplus produced by our Lord was less. But the "good wine" of Cana might be preserved for many years. How many persons may it have afterwards refreshed in body and soul! Perhaps it may have served for many holy Eucharistic celebrations in the infant Church of Galilee.

7. Γεμίσατε τὰς ὑδρίας] fill ye the water-pots. He uses the elements of which the world consists, to show that the world was not made by any power alien from Himself, as some heretics assert. (Chrys.)

— ἕως ἄνω] up to the brim. So that any one might first see the water, and then the wine into which it was changed.

8. ἀρχιτρικλίνῳ] to the ruler of the feast, or συμποσιάρχης, cp. Ecclus. xxxii. 1, where he is called ἡγούμενος. "Convivii Magister, Modimperator." (Varro.) "Arbiter bibendi." (Horat. I. iv. 18.) "Dictator." (Plaut.) It has been supposed by some, that the ἀρχιτρικλίνος was the τραπέζοποιός; cf. Julius Pollux (Onom. iii. 41),—a chief servant or butler, whose duty it was to provide wine and food for the guests. But no authority has been quoted for this sense, and the etymology of the word seems to be against it. Besides, his language to the bridegroom (v. 10) shows that he regarded the bridegroom as the purveyor of the feast; and his words to the bridegroom are not those of a servant to a master, but of an equal. He was one of the guests, chosen to taste the wine, and to regulate the order of its consumption.

10. τὸν καλὸν οἶνον] the good wine; that is, the best wine,—a saying which may be applied spiritually by the Church, and addressed to the Divine Bridegroom Christ, Who has kept the best wine for us until now, and gives it to us here, in this the last Gospel, by His beloved servant St. John. See above, p. 257.

11. Ταύτην ἐποίησε τὴν ἀρχὴν] The beginning which He made was this,—He laid this first stone, or foundation, of the miraculous fabric. Observe, τὴν ἀρχὴν and ἐποίησε. τὴν is omitted by A, B, L, and some Editors, but without reason.

He Who changed the water into wine in the water-pots, at Cana in Galilee, works the same change every year in the rain which descends from the clouds of heaven into the vines. But this gradual operation of change in all the Vineyards of this world attracts no admiration, on account of its continuity. Therefore, the same God sometimes makes, as here, unusual demonstrations of His power, in order to awaken men from their slumber, to a sense of His Omnipotence, and to excite them to worship Him as God. See Aug. and Irenæus, iii. 12. 5,—“He Who changed water into wine thus proved Himself their Creator. He walked on the sea as on dry land, and fed thousands with a few loaves,—in order that He might show us that He is the Lord of the Universe.” (Athanasius, de Incarn. 18, p. 51.)

The whole of the passage, pp. 50, 51, is well worthy of perusal, and very seasonable in an age like the present, when a disposition manifests itself to separate the study of Physics from that of Religion, and to detach the operations and phenomena of the World of Nature from the control and government of Him Who is Supreme in the World of Grace. If we would philosophize aright, let us regard CHRIST as Creator and Lord of the Elements, and as acting in them and by them. Cp. the remarks on Matt. xiv. 20. As we admire the works wrought by the Man Christ Jesus, so let us admire those done by Jesus our God. Let us not turn our faces to the works of creation, and our backs to Him Who made them. (Aug.)

This change of Water into Wine presents a lively figure of the change wrought in our Nature by that great Event, which is the principal theme of this Gospel—the Incarnation of the Son of God. Christ's first Miracle was not an act of Creation, but it was an act of Change of an element from a lower to a better condition. Water is mellowed into Wine by the Sun. Water was changed into Wine by Christ. Christ, the Sun of Righteousness, Who now cometh forth from His chamber, and rejoiceth as a Bridegroom to run His course, has transfigured our Nature by its union with the Divine in Himself. See above, Introduction, pp. 259, 260.

On the change wrought in our Nature by the Incarnation, see Hooker, V. liv. 5.

— ἐπίστευσαν] they believed. They had already some faith (i. 41; see also ii. 23), which was increased by His miracles, but yet was not a clear and firm faith (see vii. 5). And thus we learn that faith, like other graces, is gradual in its growth, and needs continual education and cultivation by those means which God provides for its increase.

12. κατέβη] He went down. The lake of Galilee—on the n.w. shore of which was the great city of Capernaum—is very much lower than the level of the hills of Galilee. Hackett, Illustr. p. 135, cp. ix. 49. 51.

— ἀδελφοί] brethren, 'cousins.' Abraham was the uncle of Lot, and Laban of Jacob, yet Scripture calls them brethren. All the relatives of Mary are called brethren of Christ. (Aug.) See above on Matt. xii. 46; xiii. 55.

13. τὸ πάσχα] the Passover of the Jews. St. John mentions the Passover three times, and always with this addition, "of the ($\frac{21}{1}$)¹⁴ ^d Καὶ εὗρεν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ τοὺς πωλοῦντας βόας καὶ πρόβατα καὶ περιστεράς, καὶ τοὺς κερματιστὰς καθήμενους. ¹⁵ Καὶ ποιήσας φραγέλλιον ἐκ σχοινίων πάντας ἐξέβαλεν ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ, τὰ τε πρόβατα καὶ τοὺς βόας καὶ τῶν κολλυβιστῶν ἐξέχεε τὸ κέρμα, καὶ τὰς τραπέζας ἀνέστρεψε ¹⁶ καὶ τοῖς τὰς περιστεράς πωλοῦσιν εἶπεν, Ἀρατε ταῦτα ἐντεῦθεν μὴ ποιεῖτε τὸν οἶκον τοῦ Πατρός μου οἶκον ἐμπορίου. ($\frac{22}{x}$) ¹⁷ ^e Ἐμνήσθησαν δὲ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, ὅτι γεγραμμένον ἐστίν, Ὁ ζῆλος τοῦ οἴκου σου καταφάγεται με. ^f Matt. 21. 12.

Mark 11. 15.
Luke 19. 45.

($\frac{23}{iv}$)¹⁸ ^f Ἀπεκρίθησαν οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Τί σημεῖον δεικνύεις ἡμῖν, ὅτι ταῦτα ποιεῖς; ($\frac{24}{x}$) ¹⁹ ^g Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Λύσατε τὸν ναὸν τοῦτον, καὶ ἐν τρισὶν ἡμέραις ἐγερῶ αὐτόν. ²⁰ Εἶπον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, Τεσσαράκοντα καὶ ἕξ ἔτεσιν ᾠκοδομήθη ὁ ναὸς οὗτος, καὶ σὺ ἐν τρισὶν ἡμέ-ραις ἐγερεῖς αὐτόν; ²¹ Ἐκείνος δὲ ἔλεγε περὶ τοῦ ναοῦ τοῦ σώματος αὐτοῦ.

Jews" (cp. vi. 4; xi. 55); because he wrote at a time when it was requisite to distinguish it from the Christian Passover, and because he wrote for many who were not conversant with Jewish customs. See v. 6, and v. 1, and above, p. 206, and cp. the instances in which St. John translates Hebrew words, i. 38. 42, and cp. iv. 9 and 25; and Dr. Townson on the Gospels, Disc. vii. sect. 2, and above, p. 268.

This seems to have been the first Passover of our Lord's ministry. If the Feast in ch. v. 1 is the second, or a feast of Pentecost, then that at vi. 4 is the third Passover. And so, with the Passover at which He suffered, there are four Passovers in St. John's Gospel; which was the opinion of Eusebius, i. 10. Theodoret, ad Dan. ix. tom. ii. p. 1250, ed. Hal. 1770.

On the Passovers in our Lord's Ministry see below, v. 1.
¹⁴ εὗρεν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ κ.τ.λ.] He found in the Temple. Not ἐν τῷ ναῷ, the Sanctuary, but ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, in the outer courts. See Matt. xxi. 12.

— βόας—πρόβατα—περιστεράς] oxen—sheep—doves, for sacrifices in the Temple; in order that persons who came from far, and could not bring victims with them, might purchase them on the spot. The money-changers were there to facilitate the purchases of the sacrifices. See Matt. xxi. 12. Perhaps, also, to change money, for the payment of the Temple-Rate, due now. See on Matt. xvii. 24.

It might not have seemed to be a great sin to sell in the Temple what was purchased in order to be offered in the Temple. Yet our Lord drove them out. (Aug. and Bede.)

¹⁵ πάντας ἐξέβαλεν] He drove them all out. A fulfilment of the prophecy (Mal. iii. 1—3). Our Lord did this twice, as is evident from the other Gospels. (See Matt. xxi. 12. Mark xi. 15. Luke xix. 45.) The former instance is that described here by St. John. (Aug. de Cons. Evang. ii. 67.)

And yet, against the clear testimony of the Gospels, and the concurrent interpretation of antiquity, it has been recently denied by many (Lücke, De Wette, Strauss), that there was more than one Cleansing of the Temple by Christ.

Origen (in Joan. tom. x.) dwells on this act as a wonderful proof of Christ's Divinity felt by men,—even by the large multitudes who profaned the Temple. See above, S. Jerome on Matt. xxi. 12. 16.

¹⁶ μὴ ποιεῖτε] make ye not My Father's house a house of merchandise. Sellers in the Temple are they who seek their own things, not those of Jesus Christ. (Phil. ii. 21.) Simon Magus desired to purchase the gift of the Holy Spirit, that he might sell it again. He was among the Sellers of Doves. Divine Grace is so called, because it is given gratuitously. (Aug., Origen.) See on Matt. xxi. 12.

Money-Changers in the Temple are they who pursue secular interests in the Church; and God's house is made a house of merchandise, not only by those who seek to obtain money or praise, or honour, by means of holy Orders, but by those also who exercise the sacred ministry, or dispense sacred gifts, with a view to human rewards,—and not with simplicity of intention. (Bede.)

¹⁷ γεγραμμένον ἐστίν] Observe this formula of quoting Holy Scripture,—peculiar to St. John. Cp. vi. 31. 45; x. 34; xii. 14. The other formula, γράφεται, so common in the other Evangelists occurs only once in St. John's Gospel, viii. 17.

— Ὁ ζῆλος, κ.τ.λ.] The zeal for Thine house shall eat me up. Let all the members of Christ's Body be consumed with this zeal. Who is he that is eaten up with this zeal? He who never rests, but is ever endeavouring and longing, that what he sees amiss may be corrected; and if he cannot correct it himself, is patient, and mourns inwardly. You see your brother going astray, let the zeal of God's house eat thee up; prevent him if you can; restrain him if you can; terrify him if you can; persuade him if you can; never cease; do the same in your family; do whatever you can, according to your position in life. Then you will imitate Christ, of Whom it was said, "The zeal of Thine House hath even eaten me up." (Aug.)

The quotation here is from Psalm lxi. 9, which the Holy Spirit thus refers to Christ. Let the reader examine the contents of that Psalm; and he will derive comfort from the consideration that the Church in appointing it for use on Good Friday, and in applying its prophecies to Christ, is authorized by the sanction of the Holy Ghost speaking by St. John. And he will have a safeguard against that scepticism which endeavours to wrest these prophecies from Christ.

¹⁸ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι] the Jews answered. Remark St. John's peculiar use of this expression, "the Jews" (ii. 20; v. 10. 15, 16. 18; vi. 41; vii. 1; viii. 22. 48; ix. 22; x. 24, and passim), as asserting distinct from and opposed to Christ and His disciples. The reason of this is (as Wetstein observes, p. 847), that St. John wrote last of the Evangelists, at a time when the Jews were known as enemies of Christ's disciples. See above, Introduction, p. 268, and below, Introduction to the Epistle to the Hebrews, p. 365, note.

¹⁹ Λύσατε] Destroy ye; a prophecy that they would do so. Cp. xiii. 27. Matt. xxiii. 32, and Glass. Philol. S. pp. 406. 873.

He predicts at His first Passover what they would do at His last Passover.

And by His act in cleansing the material Temple at this Passover, He foreshadowed His own act in raising the Temple's antitype—His own Body, at the last Passover, and in thus reviving His mystical Body the Church.

— τὸν ναὸν τοῦτον] this vado, or sanctuary, in which the Godhead dwells, valei—this Holy Place. Observe the change of words, and the difference between them. He had purged the ἱερὸν or outer court of the Temple (see v. 14), of the sordid traffic with which they had defiled it: He would do more than this: they would destroy the vado or sanctuary itself of His Holy Body, in which the Deity was enshrined as in a Divine Oracle, but He would raise it again in three days.

Τὸν ναὸν τοῦτον is equivalent to Myself. On this use of οἶτος, see on Matt. xvi. 18. Cp. below, vi. 50.

They sought for a miracle from Christ, because He had driven their traffic from the Temple; and He tells them in reply, that the Temple was emblematic of His own Body, and that He by His own divine power would do much more than He had done in purging the type profaned by them. He would raise the antitype, His own Body, destroyed by them. (Bede.) As the Body of Christ was crucified and raised again, so will it be with His mystical Body, the Church; and with every true Christian, who is crucified with Christ, and buried with Christ, and rises again with Christ to newness of life in this world, and to eternal glory in the next. (Origen.) Compare Ezek. xxvii. 11. Rom. vi. 4. 1 Pet. ii. 5. Ephes. ii. 20; iv. 13. 1 Cor. xii. 12. 27; xv. 22.

On this text see the Sermon of Bp. Andrewes, ii. 344.

²⁰ Τεσσαράκοντα καὶ ἕξ ἔτεσιν] Forty and six years was this Sanctuary in building. On this use of ᾠκοδομήθη, see Ezra v. 16. It began to be built (or rather rebuilt) by King Herod the Great, forty-six years ago, and is not yet finished. See Joseph. Antiq. xv. 11. B. J. i. 21. "Agrippæ II. demum tempore absolutum est totum templi ædificium," ἥδη καὶ τότε τὸ ἱερὸν τετέλεστο, Joseph. Ant. xx. 8. (Kuin.) Wieseler (Chronol. Syn. p. 106) reckons that this period of forty-six years had expired at the Passover, A.U.C. 781.

²¹ ἔλεγε περὶ τοῦ ναοῦ τοῦ σώματος αὐτοῦ] He was speaking of the sanctuary of His body. Our Lord often uttered sayings

h Luke 24. 8.

²² h Ὅτε οὖν ἡγέρθη ἐκ νεκρῶν, ἐμνήσθησαν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ ὅτι τοῦτο ἔλεγεν καὶ ἐπίστευσαν τῇ γραφῇ, καὶ τῷ λόγῳ ᾧ εἶπεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς.

i ch. 6. 64.
Acts i. 24.
Rev. 2. 23.

²³ Ὡς δὲ ἦν ἐν τοῖς Ἱεροσολύμοις ἐν τῷ πάσχα ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ, πολλοὶ ἐπίστευσαν εἰς τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ, θεωροῦντες αὐτοῦ τὰ σημεῖα ἃ ἐποίει. ²⁴ Αὐτὸς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς οὐκ ἐπίστευεν ἑαυτὸν αὐτοῖς, διὰ τὸ αὐτὸν γινώσκειν πάντας, ²⁵ i καὶ ὅτι οὐ χρεῖαν εἶχεν ἵνα τίς μαρτυρήσῃ περὶ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου· αὐτὸς γὰρ ἐγίνωσκε τί ἦν ἐν τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ.

a ch. 7. 50.
& 19. 39.
b ch. 9. 16, 33.
Acts x. 38.

III. ¹ a Ἦν δὲ ἄνθρωπος ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων, Νικόδημος ὄνομα αὐτῷ, ἄρχων τῶν Ἰουδαίων. ² b Οὗτος ἦλθε πρὸς αὐτὸν νυκτὸς, καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Ῥαββί, οἶδαμεν ὅτι ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ἐλήλυθας διδάσκαλος· οὐδεὶς γὰρ ταῦτα τὰ σημεῖα δύναται ποιεῖν ἢ σὺ ποιεῖς, ἐὰν μὴ ᾗ ὁ Θεὸς μετ' αὐτοῦ. ³ c Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω σοι, ἐὰν μὴ τις γεννηθῇ ἄνωθεν, οὐ δύναται ἰδεῖν τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ. ⁴ Λέγει πρὸς αὐτὸν ὁ Νικόδημος, Πῶς δύναται ἄνθρωπος γεννηθῆναι γέρον ὢν; μὴ δύναται εἰς τὴν κοιλίαν τῆς μητρὸς αὐτοῦ δευτέρον εἰσελθεῖν καὶ γεννηθῆναι; ⁵ Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς, Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω σοι, ἐὰν μὴ τις γεννηθῇ ἐξ ὕδατος καὶ Πνεύματος, οὐ δύναται c Tit. 3. 5.

ch. 1. 13.
Gal. 6. 15.
2 Cor. 5. 17.
James 1. 18.
1 Pet. 1. 23.
1 John 3. 9.

d ver. 3.
Eph. 5. 26.
Heb. 10. 23.

which were not intelligible at first to those who heard them, but became clear afterwards; and thus He showed His divine presence. (Chrys.) Cp. St. John's own declaration concerning Christ's disciples (xii. 16).

This observation is of great importance, and answers by anticipation many objections, grounded on the erroneous supposition that Christ could not have meant to say what His words imply; merely because they, to whom He was then speaking, could not understand that meaning. The allegation virtually contravenes the claims of His Prophetic office. For it is the essence of Prophecy to be obscure when first delivered, and to be explained by the event. Examples of Christ's prophetic language, combined by didactic instruction, may be seen in iii. 5; vi. 53. See the notes there on the prolepses, or anticipations, in our Lord's Teaching, to be explained afterwards by the event.

²² εἶπεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς] Elz. has not the article; but it is in A, B, E, G, H, K, L, S, V, X.

²⁴ Αὐτὸς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, κ.τ.λ.] Yet Jesus Himself did not trust Himself to them, for that He knew all men, and because He had no need that any one should testify of man, for He knew of Himself what was in man. These two verses afford an instance of the peculiar manner in which the Holy Spirit pronounces judgment, in St. John's Gospel, on things and persons. Cf. v. 21; vi. 64. 71; vii. 39; viii. 27; xi. 51; xii. 33. 37. 43; xiii. 11; xxi. 17. This method was very suitable for the last written Gospel, and confirms the testimonials and proof that St. John's Gospel is not only an inspired History, but also an inspired Comment on that History. See above, p. 268.

²⁵ τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ] the man, generally; i. e. every man. On the force of the article, see iii. 10, and Winer, p. 105.

CH. III. 1.] For a synopsis of the contents of this Chapter, see below, p. 284.

Ἦν δὲ ἄνθρωπος] But there was a man. Observe how aptly this sentence coheres with what has just preceded. The Evangelist had just said, that Jesus "had no need that any one should testify to Him concerning man, for of Himself He knew what was τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ, in the man," i. e. in the creature called man, generally; and as an application of this proposition, he adds, but there was a man, of the Pharisees, called Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews; and the divine insight of Christ into the hearts of all men—His knowledge of human nature, its condition, its desires, and its needs—was signally exemplified in His intercourse with him; which the Evangelist now describes.

—Νικόδημος] Nicodemus. Not only a Greek name (Demosth. 549, 23), but also common among the Jews. (Lightfoot.) Nicodemus, the son of Gorion, is one of the Rabbis whose name is often cited with great veneration in the Talmud, and is supposed by some to be the Nicodemus here mentioned. See Wetstein, p. 850.

—ἄρχων] a ruler. Probably one of the Sanhedrim. See vii. 48.

2. νυκτὸς] by night. Nicodemus was of the number of those who had some faith, but were not yet born again of water and the Spirit. The Apostle says, ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord. Eph. v. 8. (Aug.) Nicodemus came at first by night, through fear, yet he was not rejected by Christ; but was tenderly received and instructed by Him; and grew in grace and wisdom and courage. He, who at first was only a timid Disciple, became in the end a courageous Confessor. He who came at first to Jesus by night, came at last boldly forward, when the disciples of Jesus had fled. See John vii. 50; xix. 39. (Chrys. and Burgen. here.)

3. ἐὰν μὴ τις] except a person be born from above; i. e. who-soever is not born from above. See on Phil. iv. 8. Cp. below, vi. 53.

—ἄνωθεν] from above. See v. 12, 13. 31; xix. 11. 23. James i. 17; iii. 15. 17.

Doubtless the word ἄνωθεν also includes the sense of being born again and anew; it declares the need of a new or second birth; and it also declares the heavenly origin of that second birth.

Thou art not yet born again; i. e. of God, by spiritual generation, and therefore the knowledge thou hast of Me is not spiritual and heavenly, but carnal and earthly. But I say to thee, that except thou be born again of God, thou canst not apprehend My glory, but wilt remain a stranger to My Kingdom. (Aug.) Cp. Justin M. Apol. i. 61, ὁ Χριστὸς εἶπεν, ἂν μὴ ἀναγεννηθῇτε, οὐ μὴ εἰσελθῇτε εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τῶν οὐρανῶν.

4. Πῶς δύναται] How can a man be born when he is old? This questioning "how?" is of the natural man (1 Cor. ii. 14), and is characteristic of a weak faith and an earthly mind, like that of Sarah when she laughed; and many, by putting such questions as to the manner of God's operations on the soul, have fallen from the faith. If a person ask,—How is a man born again by water? let us ask in return, How was Adam born from the earth? How are our bones and sinews and veins, and all our organs, formed? In both cases the work is God's, Whose the elements are, to work upon them, and by them, according to His will. Cp. Chrys., who quotes Col. ii. 12, Rom. vi. 6.

If the Earth is endued with such power that such marvels as we see every day are produced from it, so, in like manner, when the Holy Spirit is present with the Water, the marvels which exceed our comprehension are easily performed. The element of Water is there; but the whole work is wrought by the grace of the Holy Ghost. By the first creation from Earth, man became a living soul; but by the second creation from Water he is made a quickening spirit; and the old man is buried in the Water as in a tomb, and the new man rises from it. (Chrys.)

—μὴ δύναται] can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born? What the maternal womb is to the infant,—that the Baptismal Font is to the Faithful. (Chrys.)

Nicodemus knew as yet but one birth,—that from Adam and Eve; he knew not as yet that other birth from Christ and the Church; he knew the first birth which is unto death; he knew not, as yet, the second birth unto life. The one birth is from earth, the other is from heaven; the one is of the flesh, the other of the Spirit; the one is of mortality, the other of eternity; the one is from men and women, the other is from God and the Church. Each of these two births takes place once, and once only. As the birth from the womb cannot be repeated, so neither can baptism. Carnal generation takes place once, so does spiritual regeneration. (Aug. Tract. xi. xii.)

—ἐὰν μὴ τις γεννηθῇ ἐξ ὕδατος] except a person be born of water; i. e. whosoever is not born of water. See on v. 3. The εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ. ⁶ τὸ γεγεννημένον ἐκ τῆς σαρκὸς ^e Rom. 8. 5. ^f Cor. 2. 14. ^g 15. 47. ^h Eccles. 11. 5. ⁱ Cor. 2. 11. ^j ch. 6. 52, 60. ^k Isa. 49. 21. ^l 66. 8. ^m Jer. 31. 31—34. ⁿ Ezek. 36. 26, 27. ^o 37. 9, 10. ^p 1 ver. 32. ^q 7. 16. ^r 8. 28. ^s 12. 49. ^t 14. 24. ^u k ch. 6. 33, 38, 51, 62. ^v Acts 2. 34. ^w 1 Cor. 15. 47. ^x Prov. 30. 4. ^y Deut. 30. 12. ^z Eph. 4. 9, 10.

σάρξ ἐστι, καὶ τὸ γεγεννημένον ἐκ τοῦ πνεύματος πνεῦμά ἐστι. ⁷ Μὴ θαυμάσης ὅτι εἶπόν σοι, Δεῖ ὑμᾶς γεννηθῆναι ἄνωθεν. ⁸ τὸ πνεῦμα ὅπου θέλει πνεῖ, καὶ τὴν φωνὴν αὐτοῦ ἀκούεις, ἀλλ' οὐκ οἶδας πόθεν ἔρχεται καὶ ποῦ ὑπάγει· οὕτως ἐστὶ πᾶς ὁ γεγεννημένος ἐκ τοῦ Πνεύματος. ⁹ Ἀπεκρίθη Νικοδήμους καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Πῶς δύναται ταῦτα γενέσθαι; ¹⁰ Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Σὺ εἶ ὁ διδάσκαλος τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ, καὶ ^h ταῦτα οὐ γινώσκεις; ¹¹ Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω σοι, ὅτι ὁ οὐδαμὲν λαλοῦμεν, καὶ ὁ ἑωράκαμεν μαρτυροῦμεν, καὶ τὴν μαρτυρίαν ἡμῶν οὐ λαμβάνετε. ¹² Εἰ τὰ ἐπίγεια εἶπον ὑμῖν, καὶ οὐ πιστεύετε, πῶς, ἔὰν εἶπω ὑμῖν τὰ ἐπουράνια, πιστεύσετε; ¹³ καὶ οὐδεὶς ἀναβέβηκεν εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν, εἰ μὴ ὁ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καταβὰς, ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ word tis is general, and includes Infants. Cf. Jerome ad Pelagium, iii. ad fin. pp. 545, 546, on the Baptism of Infants, and especially the Synodical Epistle of S. Cyprian, and other African Bishops, to Fidus A.D. 253, "de Infantibus baptizandis," with Routh's notes, R. S. iii. p. 74.

As the Israelites were not delivered from the Egyptians before they came to the Red Sea, so none can be freed from the pressure of his sins before he comes to the waters of Baptism. And if the Red Sea, the figure of Baptism, had such a virtue as it had, how great is the power of Baptism, of which the Red Sea was a type! (Aug. Tract. xi. xlii. and Serm. 294.) Cp. S. Cyril Hieros. Cateches. 3, p. 41, who hence asserts the necessity of Baptism. "He declares the manner of Regeneration in Baptism," says Theodor. Mopsuest. "By mentioning the water, He specifies the Element, ἐν ᾧ πληροῦται τὸ ἔργον: by mentioning the Spirit, He speaks of the Agent Who ἐν τῷ ὕδατι τὴν οἰκίαν πληροῖ ἐνέργειαν." (Meyer, p. 103.) Cp. notes below on Titus iii. 5.

The sense of the primitive Church on this text is thus declared by Tertullian (de Baptismo, 13), "Nisi quis renatus fuerit, &c., obstrinxit fidem ad Baptismi necessitatem. Itaque omnes exinde credentes tinguebantur" (i.e. were baptized); and by S. Cyprian, Epist. 72 and 73, and as Hooker remarks (V. lix.), "of all Ancient Writers there is not one to be named who ever expounded this text otherwise than as implying external baptism."

Surely it is a significant circumstance that St. John's Gospel abounds with references to the Element of water. Here the son of Zacharias comes baptizing with water, i. 26. 31. 33. Our Lord's first Miracle is here wrought upon water; water is changed by Him into wine, ii. 7—9. Here he declares to Nicodemus that "Except a man be born of water and the Holy Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God," iii. 5. He is in Judæa and baptizes with water, iii. 22. Here He sits at the well of water at Sychar, and first reveals Himself as the Messias, iv. 1. 26. Here He promises the gift of living water, iv. 10—14. Here He comes to Jerusalem to the pool of water, called Bethesda, and heals the impotent man there, v. 1—8. He walks on the water of the Sea of Galilee (vi. 19), and comes to the disciples in the storm. He comes again to Jerusalem at the Feast of Tabernacles, and cries, "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me and drink. He that believeth in Me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water," vii. 38. Here He sends the blind man to wash in the water of Siloam, and the blind man returns seeing, ix. 7. At the Paschal Supper He here pours water into a basin and washes His disciples' feet, xiii. 5—10. At His Crucifixion His side is pierced, and "forthwith came there out blood and water," xix. 34. After His Resurrection He shows Himself to His disciples at the Sea of Galilee, and the only Miracle which He is recorded to have worked after He was risen was wrought there. As Tertullian says, De Baptismo, c. 9, "Nunquam sine aquâ Christus," and this is specially true of our Lord's acts and speeches as recorded in St. John's Gospel. Many of the incidents just noticed are recorded in this Gospel only. This is in harmony with the belief, that the natural element of Water is declared in this Gospel to be made by Christ the means for conveying supernatural grace.

If there are any who doubt whether Christ,—Who knew what He would do (John vi. 6), and foresaw, not only His own Institution of the Sacrament of Baptism, but every Baptism that has ever been administered in the Church,—referred here to the Holy Sacrament of Baptism, let them read the words of Hooker, V. lix., and consider the use made of this Scripture by the Church of England in her Offices for Baptism of Infants and of those of riper years. Let it not be objected that our Lord's words cannot refer to Christian Baptism, because that Sacrament was not then instituted, and because they could not then be understood by Nicodemus to refer to it. This objection (as before observed on ii. 21) is tantamount to a denial of our Lord's prophetic character and office. And it is remarkable, that a similar prolepsis, or anticipation, to be explained ab eventu, is observable in our Lord's words concerning the other Sacrament as recorded by St. John, vi. 53. See below, p. 284, and on xii. 16, where the Evangelist himself confesses that the disciples themselves did not at first understand Christ's saying, but that it was afterwards made clear to them; and above, p. 259, 260.

8. τὸ πνεῦμα] πνῆ (ruach), used, as πνεῦμα, for wind, and also for the Holy Spirit. Gen. i. 2; vi. 3. 17; vii. 15; viii. 1.

If no one can control the wind, much less can any laws of nature constrain the Spirit; and if you cannot trace the path of the wind, whose effects however you hear and see, how can you expect to scrutinize the operation of the Holy Spirit of God? (Chrys.) In the Word and Sacraments the Holy Spirit comes to us invisibly, that we may be born again. (Aug.)

9. γενέσθαι] take place, come to pass.

10. Σὺ εἶ ὁ διδάσκαλος] 'Art thou the teacher of others,—of God's own people, Israel,—and hast not learnt this?' The definite Article is used to bring out more forcibly the word διδάσκαλος, the teacher, and distinguished as such from the learners, and who has yet the very elements of divine truth to learn. Cp. Rom. ii. 21, ὁ διδάσκων ἕτερον σεαυτὸν οὐ διδάσκει;

This use of the definite Article not specifying any individual of a class, but the class itself, may be seen in the following examples: ii. 25, τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ, Matt. xiii. 3, ἐξῆλθεν ὁ σπείρων, not any one sower, but the sower, in the abstract. So 2 Cor. xii. 12, τὰ σημεῖα τοῦ ἀποστόλου, the miracles which are necessary as credentials for one who is an Apostle. Cp. note on John xiii. 10, and Acts iv. 11, οἱ οἰκοδομοῦντες. Gal. iv. 1, ὁ κληρονόμος, and Winer, p. 97.

12. τὰ ἐπίγεια] earthly things. If ye do not believe the soul's birth by Baptism, which is ministered on earth, how can you believe in the birth of the Son of God? (Theoph.)

Nicodemus had said (iii. 2), "Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God." Our Lord corrects and elevates his views thus: "True, I am a Teacher sent from God, but not as other teachers or prophets, who are of the earth; but I am from heaven, to which none of the prophets ascended, and I, though on earth, am always in heaven." (Chrys.)

13. οὐδεὶς ἀναβέβηκεν] and no one hath ascended into heaven, but He who came down from heaven, the Son of Man who is in heaven. Our Lord is here declaring heavenly things. He is revealing the mode by which we, who, by our natural birth from Adam are of the earth earthy, become partakers of the divine nature, and may ascend up to heaven and dwell for ever there. This is effected by means of His Incarnation, and by our baptismal incorporation in Him; by which we become sons of God and heirs of heaven. No one hath ascended up into heaven but He who as Son of God came down from heaven and took our nature, and is become the second Adam, and incorporates us as members of Himself, and thus unites us to God; and Who is the Son of Man, and yet being God is ever in heaven, and being our Head carries us, His members, thither.

He descended from heaven by becoming the Son of Man, and He is in heaven, because, when the Word was made flesh, He did not cease to be the Word. (Hilary, de Trin.) He was on earth and in heaven. Here in body, there in Deity. Yea, every where by his Godhead. Born of a human Mother, yet never separated from his Divine Father. He descended to us that we might ascend by Him. They whom He makes children of God by adoption ascend with Him, for He Himself says they will be equal to the Angels. (Luke xx. 36.) And one Man, Christ Jesus, ascends; because we are made one in Him, and ascend by Him;

1 Numb. 21. 9.
2 Kings 18. 4.
ch. 8. 28.
& 12. 32.
m ver. 36. & 6. 47.
Luke 19. 10.
1 John 5. 10.
n Rom. 5. 8.
& 8. 32.
1 John 4. 9.
o ch. 9. 39.
& 12. 47.
Luke 9. 56.
1 John 4. 14.
p ch. 5. 24.
& 6. 40, 47.
& 20. 31.
q ch. 1. 5, 10, 11.
& 8. 12.
r Job 24. 13, et
seqq.

s Eph. 5. 8.

t ch. 4. 1.

ἀνθρώπου ὁ ὢν ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ. ¹⁴ ¹ Καὶ καθὼς Μωϋσῆς ὑψωσε τὸν ὄφιν ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, οὕτως ὑψωθῆναι δεῖ τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, ¹⁵ ^m ἵνα πᾶς ὁ πιστεύων εἰς αὐτὸν μὴ ἀπόληται, ἀλλ' ἔχῃ ζωὴν αἰώνιον. ¹⁶ ⁿ οὕτω γὰρ ἠγάπησεν ὁ Θεὸς τὸν κόσμον, ὥστε τὸν Υἱὸν αὐτοῦ τὸν μονογενῆ ἔδωκεν, ἵνα πᾶς ὁ πιστεύων εἰς αὐτὸν μὴ ἀπόληται, ἀλλ' ἔχῃ ζωὴν αἰώνιον. ¹⁷ ^o οὐ γὰρ ἀπέστειλεν ὁ Θεὸς τὸν Υἱὸν αὐτοῦ εἰς τὸν κόσμον, ἵνα κρίνῃ τὸν κόσμον, ἀλλ' ἵνα σωθῇ ὁ κόσμος δι' αὐτοῦ. ¹⁸ ^p ὁ πιστεύων εἰς αὐτὸν οὐ κρίνεται, ὁ δὲ μὴ πιστεύων ἤδη κέκριται, ὅτι μὴ πεπίστευκεν εἰς τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ μονογενοῦς Υἱοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ. ¹⁹ ^q αὕτη δὲ ἔστιν ἡ κρίσις, ὅτι τὸ φῶς ἐλήλυθεν εἰς τὸν κόσμον, καὶ ἠγάπησαν οἱ ἄνθρωποι μᾶλλον τὸ σκότος ἢ τὸ φῶς· ἦν γὰρ πονηρὰ αὐτῶν τὰ ἔργα. ²⁰ ^r πᾶς γὰρ ὁ φαῦλα πράσσων μισεῖ τὸ φῶς, καὶ οὐκ ἔρχεται πρὸς τὸ φῶς, ἵνα μὴ ἐλεγχθῇ τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ. ²¹ ^s ὁ δὲ ποιῶν τὴν ἀλήθειαν ἔρχεται πρὸς τὸ φῶς, ἵνα φανερωθῇ αὐτοῦ τὰ ἔργα, ὅτι ἐν Θεῷ ἔστιν εἰργασμένα. ²² ^t Μετὰ ταῦτα ἦλθεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν γῆν, καὶ ἐκεῖ διέτριβε μετ' αὐτῶν, καὶ ἐβάπτιζεν.

as St. Paul says, "Our conversation is in heaven." Phil. iii. 20. (Aug.) See also Ephes. ii. 6.

This is spiritual generation, by which men from earthly become heavenly; a condition which they cannot attain, unless they become members of Christ, Who regards His Body the Church as no other than Himself. (Aug. de Pecc. mer. et remiss. c. 31. Cp. Hippolyt. adv. Noet. § 4.)

Christ ascended, before His bodily Ascension, because the Son of Man was not in heaven before His conception in the Virgin's womb; but after His conception, by virtue of the hypostatical union, was in heaven, and therefore, speaking after the manner of men, He might well say that He had ascended into heaven, because whatsoever was first on earth and then in heaven, ascended into heaven. See Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. vi. p. 507.

On what is called the communicatio idiomatum, "wherein are attributed to Man such things as properly belong to the Deity of Christ Jesus," and vice versa, see Hooker, V. liii. 4, and V. liv.

14. καθὼς Μωϋσῆς] as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up, that whosoever believeth in Him might not perish, but have everlasting life. Having described the necessity and benefits of the new and heavenly birth in Baptism, our Lord proceeds to mention the source of those benefits. The Death of Christ, God manifest in the Flesh, is the cause of the grace in Baptism. (Chrys.)

And by reference to Moses and the Serpent, He shows, that the Gospel is not contrary to the Law, but is a fulfilment of it, and thus He refutes Marcion and the Manichæans. (Theophyl.)

He thus answers the objection of Nicodemus and other Teachers of the Law. They looked only for a conquering and reigning, and not for a suffering and dying, Messiah. Our Lord teaches them, that, even according to their own Law, Christ was to conquer and to reign, and to be a cause of Life and Health, by means of suffering and death. Cp. Luke xxiv. 26.

Many died of the bite of the fiery serpents in the wilderness; and Moses, by God's command, lifted up the Serpent of brass, and they who looked on it were healed. The Serpent thus lifted up was the figure of Christ dying on the Cross, according to that mode of signification, by which that which is done is signified by that which does it; for death came from the Serpent who tempted man to sin, whose wages are death: and our Lord transferred to His own Body, not sin which is the venom of the Serpent, but death; so that in the likeness of sinful flesh (Rom. viii. 3) there might be the penalty of sin without the guilt of sin; and thus in our sinful flesh both the penalty of sin and the guilt might be done away. (Cp. Aug. de Pecc. mer. c. 32.)

Compare notes below, on Gal. iii. 13.

Justin Martyr, a very early witness to the doctrine of the Atonement, says (Dial. c. 94), that by the Serpent on the pole or cross, in the wilderness, it was declared, that the power of the Serpent, which wrought the Fall of Man, was destroyed, and that there is salvation from the wounds of the old Serpent, for those who believe in Him whom the sign in the wilderness typified, and who was to be crucified.

What did the fiery Serpents typify? Sins, from our mortal flesh. Why is the Serpent lifted up? To signify the death of Christ on the Cross. The brazen Serpent, looked at by the eye of the Israelite, saved from temporal death; Christ lifted up on the Cross, looked at by the eye of faith, saves the true Israelite from everlasting death. For since death came from the Serpent, it was figured by the Serpent. The bite of the Serpent brought death. The death of Christ brings life. Look at the Serpent; that the Serpent may not harm you. Look at death, that death may not hurt you. But at whose death? At the death of Him Who is the Life. Christ our Life died on the Cross, and in His death, Death died; Life by dying destroyed death; Life by dying swallowed up death; Death died in Christ; so that we may now say, "O Death, where is thy Sting, O Grave, where is thy Victory?" (Aug.)

As the Serpent killed and the Serpent healed, so Death killed and Death healed. The brazen Serpent resembled a Serpent, but had not the venom of a Serpent, so Christ was made in the likeness of sinful flesh, but without sin. (Cp. Chrys.) As the Israelite, who looked at the Serpent which was lifted up, was healed from the venomous bite of the Serpent, so now he, who is conformed to the likeness of Christ's death, by Faith and Baptism into Christ, is delivered from sin by Justification. (Aug. de Peccat.)

On the typical character of the Brazen Serpent, in illustration of the doctrine of divine grace, flowing from Christ's death by means of Sacraments, see Hooker, V. lvii. 4.

— ὑψωθῆναι δεῖ τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου] the Son of Man must be lifted up. His enemies designed that He should be lifted up in shame, but God overruled their designs, and made the lifting up in shame to be a lifting up in glory. On this double sense of ὑψωθῆναι, cp. Acts ii. 33; v. 31. They who crucified Him, lifted Him up in ignominy; but the Cross is the glory of Christ; for where He seemed to be condemned and executed as a slave, He condemned and conquered and slew him who condemned Him. Cp. on Matt. xxvii. 28. Col. ii. 15.

16. τὸν κόσμον] the world. Here is another answer to the surmises of Nicodemus and the Jewish Teachers. They would have confined the graces and glories of the Messiah's reign to the Jews; Christ declares that they are for the World.

18. ὁ δὲ μὴ πιστεύων] he who believeth not is condemned already; as he who commits murder is condemned by the nature of his act, before he receives the sentence of his judge. As it is said of Adam, "on the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die," Gen. ii. 17. (Chrys.) Cf. Titus iii. 11, and the ancient proverb, "Illo nocens se damnat, quo peccat, die."

19. αὕτη ἡ κρίσις] Men are condemned, in that they preferred to remain in darkness and in sin when the light came to them. They prefer darkness to light, because their deeds are evil. This explains what would otherwise be unaccountable.

21. ἔρχεται πρὸς τὸ φῶς] cometh to the Light—a gentle expostulation with Nicodemus, coming by night: he afterwards boldly professed himself a disciple of Christ, see xix. 39.

22. Ἰουδαίαν γῆν] The country of Judæa, as distinguished from Jerusalem the city. See on iv. 3, and cp. Acts i. 8; x. 39.

— ἐβάπτιζεν] was baptizing. And by baptizing He explained what He had said before to Nicodemus concerning the necessity of being born again of water and the Holy Ghost (v. 5).

It is a rule of great use in interpreting Scripture, that sayings of our Lord are often explained by immediately subsequent acts; or by our Lord's acts, mentioned immediately by the Holy Ghost in Scripture.

On the question—Why it is said that Jesus baptized, although He did not baptize in person? see note on iv. 2.

The true nature of Christ's Baptism is brought out more (²⁵/_{III}) ²³ ^u Ἦν δὲ καὶ Ἰωάννης βαπτίζων ἐν Αἰνὼν ἐγγὺς τοῦ Σαλείμ, ὅτι ὕδατα u Matt. 3. 6, 16. Mark 1. 5. Luke 3. 7. 1 Sam. 9. 4. x Matt. 14. 3. πολλά ἦν ἐκεῖ καὶ παρεγίνοντο καὶ ἐβαπτίζοντο· (²⁶/_{IV}) ²⁴ ^x οὐπω γὰρ ἦν βεβλη- μένος εἰς τὴν φυλακὴν ὁ Ἰωάννης.

(²⁷/_X) ²⁵ Ἐγένετο οὖν ζήτησις ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν Ἰωάννου μετὰ Ἰουδαίου περὶ καθαρισμοῦ. ²⁶ ^y Καὶ ἦλθον πρὸς τὸν Ἰωάννην καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Ῥαββί, ὃς ἦν y ch. 1. 7, 15, 26, 34. μετὰ σοῦ πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου, ᾧ σὺ μεμαρτύρηκας, ἵδε οὗτος βαπτίζει, καὶ Matt. 3. 11. Mark 1. 7. πάντες ἔρχονται πρὸς αὐτόν. ²⁷ ^z Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰωάννης καὶ εἶπεν, Οὐ δύναται Luke 3. 16. z 1 Cor. 4. 7. ἄνθρωπος λαμβάνειν οὐδὲν, ἐὰν μὴ ᾗ δεδομένος αὐτῷ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ. James 1. 17. Heb. 5. 4. (²⁸/_I) ²⁸ ^a Αὐτοὶ ὑμεῖς μοι μαρτυρεῖτε ὅτι εἶπον, Οὐκ εἰμὶ ἐγὼ ὁ Χριστὸς, ἀλλ' ὅτι a ch. 1. 20, 30. Mal. 3. 1. ἀπεσταλμένος εἰμὶ ἔμπροσθεν ἐκείνου. (²⁹/_X) ²⁹ Ὁ ἔχων τὴν νύμφην νυμφίος Matt. 11. 10. Mark 1. 2. ἐστίν· ὁ δὲ φίλος τοῦ νυμφίου, ὁ ἐστηκὼς καὶ ἀκούων αὐτοῦ, χαρᾷ χαίρει διὰ Luke 1. 17. & 7. 27. τὴν φωνὴν τοῦ νυμφίου· αὕτη οὖν ἡ χαρὰ ἡ ἐμὴ πεπλήρωται. ³⁰ Ἐκείνον δεῖ b ch. 8. 23. & 17. 2. αὐξάνειν, ἐμὲ δὲ ἐλαττοῦσθαι. ³¹ ^b Ὁ ἄνωθεν ἐρχόμενος ἐπάνω πάντων ἐστίν· ὁ Matt. 28. 18. Eph. 1. 21. ὢν ἐκ τῆς γῆς ἐκ τῆς γῆς ἐστι, καὶ ἐκ τῆς γῆς λαλεῖ· ὁ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἐρχόμενος 1 Pet. 3. 22. Rom. 9. 5. ἐπάνω πάντων ἐστί· ³² ^c καὶ ὁ ἐώρακε καὶ ἤκουσε τοῦτο μαρτυρεῖ, καὶ τὴν μαρ- c ch. 5. 20. & 8. 26. τυρίαν αὐτοῦ οὐδεὶς λαμβάνει. ³³ ^d Ὁ λαβὼν αὐτοῦ τὴν μαρτυρίαν ἐσφράγισεν d 1 John 5. 10. Rom. 3. 4.

clearly here by being contrasted with the Baptism of John. Cp. Acts xix. 4. Tit. iii. 5.

23. Αἰνὼν] Ænon. Probably so called from ᾠν (ayin), oculus, fons. [Reland, Pal. ii. c. 12]; hence ὕδατα πολλά, 'springs of water.'

— Σαλείμ] Salim, west of Jordan; in the northern part of Samaria, eight miles S. of Scythopolis. Euseb., Jerome, Patrit. ii. p. 447.

Hence it would appear that John exercised his ministry in three distinct places at least,—

First, in the wilderness of Judæa, where he preached, and afterwards baptized (Matt. iii. 1. Mark i. 1—5. Luke iii. 3). Secondly, in Peræa, east of Jordan, at Bethany. See i. 28. Thirdly, at Ænon, near Salim. In all these places he proclaimed Christ. In the first, by preannouncing Him as the great Baptizer, and Judge of all (Matt. iii. 11, 12). In the second, by pointing Him out as the Lamb of God (John i. 19—28; iii. 26). In the third, by declaring Him to be the Bridegroom of the Church, and by delivering the illustrious testimony which St. John the Evangelist now records (iii. 27—36).

Thus he was Christ's πρόδρομος and κήρυξ in the Holy Land, even to the Samaritans; and it is probable that the reception of our Lord by the Samaritans (see ch. iv. 37—42) was due in some measure to St. John's preaching.

— ὕδατα πολλά] many waters. Not said of the river Jordan; indeed, this would have been superfluous; but spoken of the springs at Ænon, near Salim.

24. οὐπω γὰρ ἦν βεβλημένος] for John had not yet been cast into prison.

The Evangelist takes for granted that the circumstances of the Baptist's imprisonment are already known to the reader from the other Gospels. Cp. above, p. 268.

This is the only mention of the Baptist's imprisonment in this Gospel; and the brief, parenthetical character of this notice may be regarded as one of the evidences, that this Gospel was written after, and designed to be supplementary to, the other Gospels, in which the circumstances of that imprisonment had been described. Matt. iv. 12; xi. 2; xiv. 3—10. Mark i. 14; vi. 14—30. Luke iii. 20; vii. 19; ix. 9.

John's early death seems to have been permitted by God, that there might be no distraction in the people's minds between him and Christ. (Theoph.)

25. μετὰ Ἰουδαίου] with a Jew. So the best MSS.—Elz. has Ἰουδαίων, Jews. The reason why a Jew is here mentioned seems to be, because John was now in or near Samaria, and it might otherwise have been supposed, that the objection was made by the inhabitants of that country. But though made in Samaria, it was not made by Samaritans, but by a Jew: a contrast favourable to the Samaritans, as in other parts of this Gospel. See iv. 40; v. 16.

— περὶ καθαρισμοῦ] concerning purifying. The Evangelist never calls St. John, "the Baptist." He was no longer 'the Baptist' when St. John wrote; his Baptism had passed away.

It is observable, that "Jesus baptized not, but His disciples" (iv. 2); but we never hear that any of John's disciples baptized—his Baptism died with him. Christ's Baptism remains to the end.

26. ὃς ἦν μετὰ σοῦ] who was with thee. They wish to excite the Baptist to jealousy (Chrys., compare John v. 33, 34); as much as to say, All are forsaking thee, and flocking to the baptism of Him Who was baptized by thee. (Chrys.) Observe their words of disparagement, ὅς, οὗτος. (Weist.)

— πέραν] beyond Jordan, i. e. at Bethany (i. 28), on the east of Jordan, in Peræa. Ænon and Salim were on the west.

29. Ὁ ἔχων τὴν νύμφην] He that hath the Bride. The Church, collected from all nations, which is in faith a virgin, and is espoused to Christ in Baptism. No one is the Bridegroom of the Christian soul but Christ. The Font of Baptism is the Bride-chamber, and Christ's Ministers are the Friends of the Bridegroom, who rejoice to hear His voice.

— ὁ φίλος τοῦ νυμφίου] the friend of the Bridegroom. Christ is the Bridegroom, and as a Bridegroom He comes to the Bride; and, therefore, when about to wed our nature, and to espouse to Himself a Church, He descended from heaven,—and, having espoused it, He carries His Bride to His own home to heaven. And John was the friend of the Bridegroom in bringing the Bride to Christ,—i. e. in leading the souls of others, especially his own disciples, to Jesus. (Theoph. on i. 30. 35.)

For a learned disquisition on the office of Paranymphs amongst the Jews, see Weist. here, p. 855.

— ὁ ἐστηκὼς] he that standeth. I stand still, while He marches onward. I, His friend and Paranymph, stand and look, admire and love, while the Divine Bridegroom "rejoiceth as a giant to run His course." My ministry will soon be at an end, His is everlasting.

— ἡ χαρὰ ἡ ἐμὴ πεπλήρωται] my joy has been fulfilled. He who desires to rejoice in himself is miserable; but he who loves to rejoice in God will rejoice for evermore. (Aug.)

30. Ἐκείνον δεῖ αὐξάνειν] He must increase. As the day-star which precedes the sun appears to be eclipsed by the rising sun, so the Precursor of Christ seemed to decrease when Christ arose on the world. Christ might be said to increase according as He manifested Himself by miracles; not that He increased in the power of His deity, but in the revelation of it to the world. (Theophyl.) Cp. on Luke ii. 52, and see Glass. Phil. Sac. p. 700. The Baptist was not diminished by the increase of Christ; for his ministry was perfected in Christ's Messiahship, which he came to announce. But he answers them according to their own notions: "As far as this world's fame is concerned (which you propose to my ambition), I am now nothing;" and yet he was about to be perfected by dying a martyr's death. His light seemed to wane and go out in the prison of Machærus, but it shines for ever in heaven, as a star, in glory.

Here is a mystery. God is not capable of increase or diminution. Let the glory of God increase in us, and let our own glory diminish,—so that our glory in God may increase. The more thou understandest of God, the more God will seem to increase in thee. God does not increase in Himself, but is ever perfect; our inward man increases in God, and God appears to increase in us; and as we decline in ourselves, we ascend in the glory of God. (Aug.)

32. τὴν μαρτυρίαν αὐτοῦ οὐδεὶς λαμβάνει] no man receiveth His testimony. The Baptist saw, in the Spirit, mankind divided into two classes,—unbelievers and believers; he first speaks of those on the left hand, and says this of them; how he then turns from e Eph. 4. 7.

f Matt. 11. 27.
& 28. 18.
Luke 10. 32.
& 17. 2.
Heb. 2. 8.
g vv. 15, 16.
ch. 6. 47.
1 John 5. 11.

a ch. 3. 22, 26.

ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς ἀληθὴς ἐστίν. ³⁴ ^e Ὁν γὰρ ἀπέστειλεν ὁ Θεὸς, τὰ ῥήματα τοῦ Θεοῦ λαλεῖ, οὐ γὰρ ἐκ μέτρου δίδωσιν ὁ Θεὸς τὸ Πνεῦμα. (⁸⁰/_{III}) ³⁵ ^f Ὁ Πατὴρ ἀγαπᾷ τὸν Υἱόν, καὶ πάντα δέδωκεν ἐν τῇ χειρὶ αὐτοῦ. (⁸¹/_X) ³⁶ ^g Ὁ πιστεύων εἰς τὸν Υἱὸν ἔχει ζωὴν αἰώνιον, ὁ δὲ ἀπειθῶν τῷ Υἱῷ οὐκ ὄψεται ζωὴν, ἀλλ' ἡ ὀργὴ τοῦ Θεοῦ μένει ἐπ' αὐτόν.

IV. ¹ ^a Ὡς οὖν ἔγνω ὁ Κύριος, ὅτι ἤκουσαν οἱ Φαρισαῖοι ὅτι Ἰησοῦς πλείονας μαθητὰς ποιεῖ καὶ βαπτίζει ἢ Ἰωάννης,—² καίτοιγε Ἰησοῦς αὐτὸς οὐκ ἐβάπτιζεν, ἀλλ' οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ,—(⁸²/_{VIII}) ³ ἀφῆκε τὴν Ἰουδαίαν, καὶ ἀπῆλθε πάλιν εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν.

them to those on the right, and says, "he that receiveth His testimony —" (Aug.)

³³. ἐσφράγισεν] set his seal; shows, owns, and attests, as by the affixing of a seal (vi. 27. Rev. vii. 3). Cp. Wetstein.

³⁴. οὐ γὰρ ἐκ μέτρου] for God gives the Spirit without stint or limit to Him. Cyril reads this verse thus, οὐ γὰρ ἐκ μέτρου δίδωσιν, without Θεός, which is omitted in B, C, L. Οὐκ ἐκ μέτρου means "non modicè, sed largissimè" (Wetst., Rosenmüller); and this, because His power is not limited by measure, but infinite, and because the recipient is the only begotten Son of God, and He receives the Spirit in order to give it to others; for of His fulness we all receive, i. 16.

³⁶. ἡ ὀργὴ τοῦ Θεοῦ] He does not say the wrath of God cometh on him, but it abideth; for all who are born of Adam are children of wrath, as the Apostle says (Eph. ii. 3); he, therefore, that will not believe on Christ (who came into the world without sin, and, having taken our mortality, died, that we might live for ever), the wrath of God remaineth on him (Aug.); it remaineth, because the death which it brings is eternal.

REVIEW of the contents of the foregoing Chapter.

The Evangelist had begun his Gospel by declaring the eternal Godhead of Christ (i. 1—10), and His Incarnation (i. 14), and the reasons of it, namely, that by our adoption into Him and union with Him, we might become sons of God (i. 12). He had described the Epiphany (or Manifestation) of Christ's Divinity (ii. 1—10) made more striking by its contrast with His Humanity, derived from the Virgin Mary (v. 4); and he had shown Christ cleansing His Father's house by the Majesty of His presence and power, and foretelling that He would die as man, and raise Himself as God (v. 19).

He then proceeds to describe His conversation with Nicodemus the Pharisee, who had been led by Christ's miracles to acknowledge that our Lord was "a Teacher come from God" (iii. 2). But Nicodemus, not being as yet enlightened by Divine Grace, had no faith in His Divinity, and did not feel his own need of Regeneration.

Our Lord, desiring to elevate him to a higher degree of faith, tells him that he must be born again by a birth from above, if he would see the kingdom of God,—i. e. if he would hope to understand its true nature, and to enjoy its bliss hereafter. And He proceeds to teach him that this new birth from above is to be effected by Water and the Holy Ghost. Do not be surprised because you do not understand how this is to be. You do not see whence the wind comes, but you see its effects. So in spiritual things; you do not see how Regeneration takes place, but you may see its fruits.

It ought to be enough for you, that I declare to you that you must be born again from above by means of Water and the Holy Ghost. I alone am able to teach you on these matters. For no one on earth has been in heaven except Myself, Who am in heaven as God, while I speak to you on earth as Man; and you cannot ascend to heaven but by union with Me, who am Son of Man, and so join all men to Myself, and am also Son of God, and so carry them to heaven.

This process of your elevation to life is to be effected by My Death; the Law of Moses, of which you are an appointed teacher, may instruct you here. It may show you that Life flows from My Death. The Brazen Serpent was a type of Me. (See notes v. 14.) From Me, lifted up for all as man, and giving life to all as God, Regeneration and Salvation flow to all who look with the eye of Faith on Me lifted up by death. And do not be staggered, when you see Me rejected by your brother Pharisees and the world. Men will not come to the Light, not because it is not clear, but because their deeds are evil, and because they are condemned by the Light; and thus, by shunning the Light, they condemn themselves.

The Evangelist, by a natural transition, then passes on to speak of the difference of the Baptism instituted by Christ and that administered by John (v. 26). And he brings forward the Baptist himself, proclaiming that his own office is now at an end, and declaring Christ to be the Bridegroom, who, by the Sacrament of Baptism, espouses souls to Himself (see Eph. v. 25, 26); and that He in His Baptism gives the Holy Spirit, which the Baptist confesses that he himself could not do.

Hence the Evangelist is led in the following chapter to speak of Christ baptizing those who are baptized by the instrumentality of His disciples (see on iv. 2), and as extending the blessings of the Gospel from Judæa to Samaritæ; and as revealing Himself as the expected Messiah, to a Samaritan woman, a remarkable type of the Heathen World (v. 7) coming from its manifold harlotry of false religions (iv. 18) to Christ. He relates that this Revelation took place at Sychar, Sichem, Shechem, in Samaria—the very same place as that in which Jehovah had revealed Himself first in Canaan to Abraham, the Father of the Faithful, in whose promised Seed all Nations of the earth were to be blessed (Gen. xii. 3; xviii. 18; xxii. 18; xxvi. 4; xxviii. 14); and therefore a very appropriate spot for the manifestation of the Messiah (v. 26) to those who were counted strangers by the Jews, and with whom the Jews had no dealings (v. 9), and who acknowledged Him by faith, and so became children of faithful Abraham (Gal. iii. 9); and for the divine declaration that in all places men should worship the Father (v. 21), and as promising living water to those who ask Him for it; that living water which will become in them a well of water springing up to everlasting life (v. 14).

The attentive reader will not fail to compare what is said in this chapter concerning the Holy Sacrament of Baptism with the words of our Blessed Lord, in the sixth chapter, on the other Sacrament—that of the Lord's Supper. These two chapters are, as it were, two Divine Sermons on the two Sacraments; and mutually illustrate each other. This will be further shown in the note at the end of the sixth chapter, to which the reader is now referred.

CH. IV.—On the connexion of this chapter with the foregoing, see the preceding note.

1, 2. Ἰησοῦς—βαπτίζει—καίτοιγε Ἰησοῦς αὐτὸς οὐκ ἐβάπτισεν] Jesus baptizeth—and yet Jesus Himself was not baptizing. Both are true; for Jesus did baptize, in that He cleansed those who were baptized; and He did not baptize, in that He did not administer Baptism with His own hands. The Apostles were the human instruments by which His Divine Majesty worked in His Baptism, ministered by their hands. (Aug.)

John the Baptist, a human minister, had a baptism, which was called by his name—the baptism of John. (Matt. xxi. 25.) But our Lord would not allow His own baptism to be called by any man's name, in order that He Himself might always baptize, and might be rightly said to baptize those whom He does not baptize by His own hands, but by His Ministers; and that we might understand that whosoever is baptized by His Ministers, is baptized by Christ. If He had committed His baptism to any one person like John, His baptism might have been called the baptism of Peter, or of Paul; but now it is the baptism of CHRIST, in Whom all, who are baptized, must place their hope and trust. (Aug.)

Judas was among the disciples, and they who were baptized by Judas were not baptized again; for they whom even Judas, who was Christ's Apostle, baptized, were baptized by Christ.

If Christian baptism is ministered by an evil Minister, yet it is still the baptism of Christ. So that we may always say with St. John the Baptist (Matt. iii. 11), He it is who baptizeth with the Holy Ghost. (Aug.)

It may be asked, whether the Holy Spirit was given in the Baptism now ministered by His disciples, since we read (chap. vii. 39), the Holy Ghost was not yet given, because that Jesus was not yet glorified? To which it may be replied, that the Holy Spirit was bestowed by their baptism, but not with that plenary manifestation, in which He was afterwards given at and after the Day of Pentecost.

($\frac{33}{x}$) ⁴ *Εδει δὲ αὐτὸν διέρχεσθαι διὰ τῆς Σαμαρείας.

⁵ ^b *Ερχεται οὖν εἰς πόλιν τῆς Σαμαρείας λεγομένην Συχάρ, πλησίον τοῦ χαωρίου ὃ ἔδωκεν Ἰακώβ Ἰωσήφ τῷ υἱῷ αὐτοῦ. ⁶ ἦν δὲ ἐκεῖ πηγή τοῦ Ἰακώβ. ^b Gen. 33. 19. & 48. 22. Josh. 24. 32.

Ὁ οὖν Ἰησοῦς κεκοπιακῶς ἐκ τῆς ὁδοιπορίας ἐκαθέζετο οὕτως ἐπὶ τῇ πηγῇ ὥρα

5. εἰς πόλιν τῆς Σαμαρείας] to a city of Samaria, called Sychar. Sichem (Gen. xxxiv. 2), between Mount Ebal and Mount Gerizim (Judg. ix. 7), afterwards called Νεάπολις, now Nablous, thus described by Josephus, Ant. v. 7. 2, τὸ ὅρος τὸ Γαριζὲν ὑπέρκειται τῆς Σικίμων πόλεως. iv. 8. 45, οὐ πόρρω τῆς Σικίμων πόλεως, μεταξὺ δυοῖν ὁρῶν, Γαριζαίου μὲν τοῦ ἐκ δεξιῶν κειμένου, τοῦ δὲ ἐκ λαῶν Γιβάλου (Ἰζῆ) προσαγορευμένου. xi. 8. 6, Σαμαρεῖται μητρόπολιν τότε (tempore Alexandri M.) ἔχοντες, κειμένην πρὸς τῷ Γαριζίν ὄρει καὶ κατὰ κλημένην ὑπὸ τῶν ἀποστατών τοῦ Ἰουδαίων ἔθνους. For a modern description, see note below on v. 6; Robinson, iii. 104, and Later Researches, p. 129, and G. Williams in Smith's Dict. v. Neapolis.

The change of the name to Sychar is due to the contempt shown for the Samaritans by the Jews, who charged the Samaritans with the worshipping of an Idol (ἱδῶλ), sheker, or falsehood, from ἡψ (shakar), sefellit. (See Habak. ii. 18.) Cp. Wetst. Light-foot derives it from ἡψ, inebriavit. Bengel and Wieseler (Chronol. Synops. p. 256, 8) suppose the name Sychar to be connected with sachar, 'to purchase,' with reference to Gen. xxxiii. 19.

The Samaritans were called in derision by the Jews ὁ λαὸς ὁ μαρὸς ὁ κατοικῶν ἐν Σικίμοις; perhaps (as Wetst. suggests, p. 858) with an allusion to Moreh, the ancient name of Sychem. Our Lord's prohibition (Matt. v. 22) may refer to this sarcastic appellation.

Sichem was a remarkable place in patriarchal History. It was the national sanctuary of Israel. There, God first appeared to Abraham (Gen. xii. 6). There, Jacob spread his tent and built an altar (Gen. xxxiii. 18—20). There, Joseph was buried (Josh. xxiv. 32), and all the Patriarchs (see on Acts vii. 16). There the people were assembled by Joshua to hear the blessings and the curses of the Law (Josh. viii. 33). Hence the Jews could not deny that, on the ground of local sanctity, Sichem had strong claims.

Christ the Incarnate Word now comes to the spot where God had appeared to Abraham, and where He had been worshipped by Jacob, and where the bodies of Joseph and the Patriarchs lay. God had promised unto Abraham, Unto thy seed I will give this land; and now Christ is there, Who is the seed of Abraham, and in Whom all nations are blessed. See Burgon, here, for an excellent note, and on v. 40.

On the history of Sichem, see also the preliminary note below, on Acts vii., and note on Heb. vii. 2.

6. πηγή τοῦ Ἰακώβ] Jacob's well, probably only a λάκκος, or cistern for rain water; the water that Christ gives, living water, is ὕδωρ ζωῆς. Cp. Jer. ii. 13. Zech. xiv. 8. John vii. 38.

The following description of the spot is from the pen of a recent traveller, Dr. Robinson, Researches in Palestine, sect. xiv. p. 107—112:—

"We met a Muhammedan, who acknowledged the tradition respecting Jacob's well and Joseph's tomb. He led us by the latter, which stands in the middle of the mouth of the valley; and then to the well, situated a little south of the tomb and just at the base of Gerizim. We were thirty-five minutes in coming to it from the city of Nablus, which lies nearly due east towards Salim. The well bears evident marks of antiquity, but was now dry and deserted. A large stone was laid loosely over, or rather in its mouth; by dropping in stones, we could perceive that it was deep (John iv. 11). Adjacent to the well are the ruins of an ancient church, forming mounds of rubbish, among which we remarked three granite columns.

The tradition respecting both Jacob's well and Joseph's tomb, in which by a singular tradition Jews and Samaritans, Christians and Muhammedans, all agree, goes back at least to the time of Eusebius in the early part of the fourth century.

I am not aware of any thing in the nature of the case, that goes to contradict the common tradition; but on the other hand I see much in the circumstances tending to confirm the supposition, that this is actually the spot where our Lord held his conversation with the Samaritan woman. Jesus was journeying from Jerusalem to Galilee, and rested at the well, while His disciples were gone away into the city to buy meat (John iv. 3. 8). The well, therefore, lay apparently before the city, and at some distance from it. In passing along the eastern plain, Jesus had halted at the well, and sent His disciples to the city situated in the narrow valley, intending on their return to proceed along the plain on this way to Galilee, without Himself visiting the city. All this corresponds exactly to the present character of the ground. The well too was Jacob's well, of high antiquity, a known and venerated spot; which, after having already lived for so many ages in tradition, would not be likely to be forgotten in the two and a half centuries, intervening between St. John and Eusebius.

This is probably the actual well of the patriarch; and was dug by him in some connexion with the possession of the "parcel of ground," bought of Hamor, the father of Shechem, which he gave to his son Joseph (Gen. xxxiii. 19), and near which Joseph and his brethren were buried, in a parcel of ground purchased by Abraham of another, Hamor the son of Shechem. See on Acts vii. 16. The practice of the patriarchs to dig wells wherever they sojourned, is well known; and if Jacob's field, as it would seem, was here before the mouth of the valley of Shechem, he might prefer not to be dependent for water on fountains, which lay up that valley and were not his own.

I think we may thus rest with confidence in the opinion, that this is Jacob's well, and here the parcel of ground which Jacob gave to his son Joseph. Here the Saviour, wearied with his journey, sat upon the well and taught the poor Samaritan woman those great truths which have broken down the separating wall between Jews and Gentiles. God is a spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth."

— Ἰησοῦς κεκοπιακῶς] Jesus is weary. He is both strong and weak; strong, because "In the beginning was the Word" (i. 1); and weak, because "the Word was made flesh," i. 14. (Aug.)

— ἐκαθέζετο οὕτως] οὕτως, 'thus,' i.e. in all simplicity, ἀπλῶς, ὡς ἔπρεπε, He was sitting thus on the well. (Chrys., Euthym., Theoph.); οὕτως (cp. xiii. 25. Acts xxvii. 17). He in whom is the fullness of the Godhead sat thus, as any one among men.

The well was probably shaded with trees, and a place of resort. He would have an audience there.

— ὥρα ἕκτη] the sixth hour, six in the evening. It is not likely that this was at noon; that was not an usual hour for drawing water; but six in the evening was. In Gen. xxiv. 11, the evening is described as the time that women go out to draw water.

The woman, after a short discourse, leaves her water-pot, and goes to the City, where she finds the men of Sychar, as usual in the evening, collected for conversation, and brings them to Jesus; and they entreat Him to remain that night.

Among other things, in which St. John is distinguished from the Jews and from the earlier Evangelists, is, it would seem, his mode of reckoning time. He specifies hours oftener than any of the Evangelists, and he appears to calculate them according to a different mode of computation. That method is identical with our own. It has been shown from the history of the martyrdom of S. Polycarp, the scholar of St. John, in one of the seven Churches of Asia, that this mode of reckoning the hours was there received. See Polycarp, Martyr. c. 21, p. 635, ed. Jacobson, who says, "Non enim de Romanâ, sed de Asiaticâ horas computandi ratione, hic est sermo; eadem scilicet quâ nos hodie utimur." Cp. Greswell, Dissertat. i. 260; ii. 216; iii. 229; iv. 627. The same mode of calculation is employed in the account of another martyrdom in Asia, at Smyrna, that of Pionius. (Ruinart, Acta Martyrum, p. 137. Townson on the Gospels, i. p. 26.)

This then was, it seems, the mode of reckoning received by the Asiatic Churches of the second century. St. John wrote his Gospel in Asia (see above, Introduction, p. 267), and for the use of those Churches. It is therefore probable, that St. John found such a mode of reckoning in the country where and for which he wrote his Gospel, and adapted his narrative to it. Such a method of reckoning was not unknown in other countries. "Ipsum diem," says Plin. N. H. ii. 79, "alii aliter observare. Cimbri à meridie ad meridiem. Ægyptiî et Hipparchus à mediâ nocte in mediam."

St. John, in his Gospel, speaks of the Jews (οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι) as separated from the Christian Church (see above, p. 268, and on i. 19). He is specially careful to record those acts and sayings of Christ which indicate the true character of the Jewish Sabbath (v. 9—18; vii. 22, 23; ix. 14. 16). He remarks the appearances of Christ after His Resurrection, as taking place on the first day e Luke 9. 52, 53.

ch. 8. 48.
Acts 10. 28.
2 Kings 17. 24.
d Ps. 36. 8, 9.
Isa. 12. 3.
& 41. 17, 18.
Jer. 2. 13.
Zech. 14. 8.
ch. 6. 35.
& 7. 38, 39.
& 14. 16, 17.
Rev. 7. 16.
& 21. 6.
& 22. 1, 17.
e Jer. 2. 13.
f ch. 6. 58.
g ch. 6. 27, 35.
& 7. 38, 39.
& 14. 16, 17.
Rom. 8. 10, 11.
15—17, 23.
1 Cor. 15. 44, 45.
Gal. 6. 8.
Eph. 1. 13, 14.
Isa. 12. 3.
& 41. 17, 18.
Ps. 36. 8, 9.
Zech. 14. 8.
Rev. 7. 16, 17.
& 21. 6.
& 22. 1, 17.
h ch. 6. 14.
Luke 7. 16.
& 24. 19.
i Gen. 12. 6, 7.
& 23. 18—20.
Deut. 11. 29, 30.
& 12. 5, 11.
1 Kings 9. 3.
2 Chron. 7. 12.

ἦν ὡς ἔκτη. ⁷ Ἐρχεται γυνή ἐκ τῆς Σαμαρείας ἀντλήσαι ὕδωρ. Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Δός μοι πιεῖν ⁸ οἱ γὰρ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ ἀπεληλύθεισαν εἰς τὴν πόλιν, ἵνα τροφὰς ἀγοράσωσι ⁹ λέγει οὖν αὐτῇ ἡ γυνή ἡ Σαμαρεῖτις, Πῶς σὺ Ἰουδαῖος ἂν παρ' ἐμοῦ πιεῖν αἰτεῖς οὔσης γυναικὸς Σαμαρεῖτιδος; οὐ γὰρ συγχρῶνται Ἰουδαῖοι Σαμαρεῖταις. ¹⁰ ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῇ, Εἰ ᾗδεις τὴν δωρεὰν τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ τίς ἐστιν ὁ λέγων σοι, Δός μοι πιεῖν, σὺ ἂν ᾗτησας αὐτόν, καὶ ἔδωκεν αὐν σοι ὕδωρ ζῶν. ¹¹ Λέγει αὐτῇ ἡ γυνή, Κύριε, οὔτε ἀντλημα ἔχεις, καὶ τὸ φρέαρ ἐστὶ βαθύ· πόθεν οὖν ἔχεις τὸ ὕδωρ τὸ ζῶν; ¹² Μὴ σὺ μέλλων εἶ τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν Ἰακώβ, ὃς ἔδωκεν ἡμῖν τὸ φρέαρ, καὶ αὐτὸς ἐξ αὐτοῦ ἔπινε, καὶ οἱ υἱοὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ τὰ θρέμματα αὐτοῦ; ¹³ ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῇ, Πᾶς ὁ πίνων ἐκ τοῦ ὕδατος τούτου διψήσει πάλιν ¹⁴ ὃς δ' ἂν πῖνῃ ἐκ τοῦ ὕδατος, οὐ ἐγὼ δώσω αὐτῷ, οὐ μὴ διψήσῃ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα· ἀλλὰ τὸ ὕδωρ ὃ δώσω αὐτῷ γενήσεται ἐν αὐτῷ πηγὴ ὕδατος ἀλλομένου εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον. ¹⁵ Λέγει πρὸς αὐτόν ἡ γυνή, Κύριε, δός μοι τοῦτο τὸ ὕδωρ ἵνα μὴ διψῶ, μηδὲ ἔρχωμαι ἐνθάδε ἀντλεῖν. ¹⁶ Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ὑπαγε, φώνησον τὸν ἄνδρα σου, καὶ ἐλθὲ ἐνθάδε. ¹⁷ ἀπεκρίθη ἡ γυνή καὶ εἶπεν, Οὐκ ἔχω ἄνδρα. Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Καλῶς εἶπας, Ὅτι ἄνδρα οὐκ ἔχω. ¹⁸ πέντε γὰρ ἄνδρας ἔσχες· καὶ νῦν ὃν ἔχεις οὐκ ἔστι σοῦ ἀνὴρ· τοῦτο ἀληθὲς εἶρηκας. ¹⁹ λέγει αὐτῇ ἡ γυνή, Κύριε, θεωρῶ ὅτι προφήτης εἶ σύ. ²⁰ οἱ of the week (xx. 1. 19. 26). He alone mentions the Lord's Day by name (Rev. i. 10). And, perhaps, by the peculiar method he employs of reckoning hours, he might desire to mark the separation of the Christian Church from the Jews, in hours as well as in days, and to break her off entirely from the observance of Jewish seasons as such; and to put the Christian seasons on a footing of their own. It would manifestly have been inconvenient that the Day of Christ's Resurrection, the great annual and weekly festival of the Church, should have been supposed to begin with the sunset of the seventh day, and end with the sunset of the first. These are arguments à priori, in favour of the above opinion concerning St. John's reckoning. An argument à posteriori may be recognized in the fact, that this mode of reckoning has been adopted, and is now used, by the principal nations of the Christian World.

For further illustration of this subject, see i. 40; iv. 52; xix. 14. See also note on 1 Thess. ii. 9, as showing that St. John's usage in speaking of day and night was different from the Hebrew use of St. Paul.

7. γυνή ἐκ τῆς Σαμαρείας] a woman of Samaria. Cp. ἀπὸ (xi. 1). The Samaritans were of foreign extraction (Luke xvii. 18), and were regarded as aliens by the Jews. And this Samaritan woman is a figure of the Church, coming from foreign lands; not as yet justified, but to be justified in Christ. (Aug.) See v. 18.

It was the sixth hour, the evening of the day, our six o'clock. It was the evening of the World, shown in a figure, and now the harvest of the earth was, in a figure, ripe (v. 35). How fitting was it, that at that hour of the day, and at that season of the year, and at that spot of the Holy Land, our Saviour Christ should have begun to gather in the fruits of His spiritual Harvest! . . . As Isaac's servant meets Rebekah—as Jacob himself meets Rachel—as Moses encounters Zipporah—at a well; what more fitting than that He, of whom all these were shadows, the Bridegroom, as He loved to call Himself, should meet His alien spouse, the Samaritan Church, at a well of water likewise? Verily, here was Jacob's remote descendant at last fulfilling the dying Patriarch's prophecy. It was beside Jacob's well that He sat; and in "the parcel of ground that Jacob gave to his son Joseph" that He discoursed with the woman of Samaria: and lo, Joseph becomes at once a "fruitful bough," even that "fruitful bough of a well" (Gen. xlix. 22), of which the dying Patriarch made prophetic mention,—"whose branches run over the wall," which heretofore had severed Jew and Gentile! Burton. (Serm. on John iv. 35—38).

— Δός μοι πιεῖν] Give Me to drink. Our Lord was athirst for water, but was more athirst for the salvation of her soul, from whom He asked it, and therefore He desired to give her living water, and to make her athirst for it. (Aug.)

9. οὐ γὰρ συγχρῶνται] for the Jews have no dealings with Samaritans. It is not said that Samaritans declined all dealings with Jews; and though our Lord said, "Enter not into a city of the Samaritans" (Matt. x. 5), He did not command them to repel the Samaritans. (Chrys., Theoph.) And He propounds Samaritans as examples to the Jews, Luke x. 33; xvii. 16.

The following are passages from Rabbinical works, on the relations of the Jews to the Samaritans: Rasche ad Sota p. 515, edit. Wagens., Samaritani panem comedere, aut vinum bibere, prohibitum est. Sanhedrin fol. 104, 1, Si quis Cuthæum (Samaritanum) in domum suam recipit, eique ministrat, ille caussa est, ut filii ipsius in exilium abire cogantur. Tanchuma fol. 43, 1, Dicunt, qui edit frustum Samaritani, est ut edens carnem porci et non proselytus fit Samaritanus in Israël, nec est ipsis pars in resurrectione mortuorum. Hieros. Avodah Zara fol. 44, 4, R. Jacob Bar Acha, nomine R. Lazar dicit, victualia Cuthæorum permissa sunt, si non immisceatur iis aliquid vini eorum aut aceti. Bab. Kiddushin fol. 76, 1, Azyma Cuthæorum sunt permissa, et per ea homo præstat officium suum in Paschate. (Kuin.)

10. ὕδωρ ζῶν] living water, literally, perennially flowing from a natural spring; as distinguished from water in an artificial cistern. See Weist. p. 859. So aqua viva, aqua saliens in Latin. Cp. Justin M. c. Tryph. 114, where he says that Christians joyfully die διὰ τὸ ὄνομα τῆς καλῆς πέτρας, καὶ ζῶν ὕδωρ ταῖς καρδίαις τῶν δι' αὐτοῦ ἀγαπῶσάντων τὸν πατέρα τῶν ὅλων βρυούσης, καὶ ποτιζούσης τοὺς βουλομένους τὸ τῆς ζωῆς ὕδωρ.

14. ἐκ τοῦ ὕδατος, ὃ ἐγὼ δώσω] the water that I will give; the Holy Spirit (Chrys.), which he calls living water, because the Spirit is not like a stagnant pool, but a gushing spring, ever stirring the soul to good works. (Theoph.)

— οὐ μὴ διψήσῃ] Some Editors have adopted διψήσῃ, from A, B, D, L, M, Δ. But διψήσῃ, which is in E, F, G, H, K, S, U, V, Δ, seems preferable, as intimating that he shall be preserved from thirst by divine power.

Οὐ μὴ διψήσῃ would signify only 'he will not thirst;' but Christ says that he shall not thirst; I will give him living water, by which he shall be preserved from thirst. Cp. vi. 35, where the same observation is applicable. Cp. viii. 51, 52, θάνατον οὐ μὴ θεωρήσῃ—οὐ μὴ γεύσῃται θανάτου: he shall never see, never taste death. I, Who alone can, will preserve him from it. The future is rightly preserved by the Editors in viii. 12, where the sense is 'he will not walk in darkness.'

18. πέντε ἄνδρας ἔσχες] thou hadst five husbands—a true picture of the spiritual condition of the Heathen World, which was typified by this woman (see v. 7), and which had violated its conjugal faith to the One true God, and committed the spiritual harlotry and fornication of idolatry with many lovers. Cp. Isa. xxiii. 17. Jer. iii. 1; xxii. 20. Ezek. xvi. 36. Hos. ii. 10—12.

— σοῦ ἀνὴρ] he is not the husband of thee; but he is the husband of some other woman: σοῦ is placed emphatically. See on Matt. xvi. 18.

19. θεωρῶ ὅτι προφήτης εἶ σύ] I perceive that thou art a prophet.

The woman does not excuse herself, but confesses Christ, πατέρες ἡμῶν ἐν τῷ ὄρει τούτῳ προσεκύνησαν· καὶ ὑμεῖς λέγετε, ὅτι ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις ἐστὶν ὁ τόπος, ὅπου προσκυνεῖν δεῖ. ²¹ ^k Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ^k Mal. 1. 11.

 Γύναι, πίστευσόν μοι, ὅτι ἔρχεται ὥρα, ὅτε οὔτε ἐν τῷ ὄρει τούτῳ οὔτε ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις προσκυνήσετε τῷ Πατρὶ. ²² ¹ Ὑμεῖς προσκυνεῖτε ὁ οὐκ οἴδατε· ¹ 2 Kings 17. 29.
 ἡμεῖς προσκυνούμεν ὁ οἴδαμεν, ὅτι ἡ σωτηρία ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων ἐστίν. ^{Isa. 2. 3.}
²³ ^m Ἀλλὰ ἔρχεται ὥρα, καὶ νῦν ἐστίν, ὅτε οἱ ἀληθινοὶ προσκυνηταὶ προσκυνή- ^{Luke 24. 47.}
 σουσι τῷ Πατρὶ ἐν πνεύματι καὶ ἀληθείᾳ· καὶ γὰρ ὁ Πατὴρ τοιούτους ζητεῖ ^{Rom. 3. 2, & 9. 4.}
 τοὺς προσκυνούντας αὐτόν. ²⁴ ^a Πνεῦμα ὁ Θεός· καὶ τοὺς προσκυνούντας αὐτόν ^{n 2 Cor. 3. 17.}
 ἐν πνεύματι καὶ ἀληθείᾳ δεῖ προσκυνεῖν. ²⁵ Λέγει αὐτῷ ἡ γυνή, Οἶδα ὅτι Μεσσίας ἔρχεται (ὁ λεγόμενος Χριστός)· ὅταν ἔλθῃ ἐκεῖνος, ἀναγγελεῖ ἡμῖν πάντα. ²⁶ ^o Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἐγὼ εἰμι, ὁ λαλῶν σοι. ²⁷ Καὶ ἐπὶ τούτῳ ^{o ch. 9. 37.}
 ἦλθον οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐθαύμαζον ὅτι μετὰ γυναικὸς ἐλάλει· οὐδεὶς μέντοι εἶπε, Τί ζητεῖς; ἢ τί λαλεῖς μετ' αὐτῆς; ²⁸ Ἀφῆκεν οὖν τὴν ὑδρίαν αὐτῆς ἡ γυνή, καὶ ἀπῆλθεν εἰς τὴν πόλιν, καὶ λέγει τοῖς ἀνθρώποις, ²⁹ Δεῦτε, ἴδετε ἄνθρωπον ὃς εἶπέ μοι πάντα ὅσα ἐποίησα· μήτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Χριστός;
³⁰ Ἐξῆλθον ἐκ τῆς πόλεως, καὶ ἤρχοντο πρὸς αὐτόν.
³¹ Ἐν δὲ τῷ μεταξύ ἡρώτων αὐτὸν οἱ μαθηταὶ λέγοντες, Ῥαββί, φάγε.
³² Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Ἐγὼ βρώσω ἔχω φαγεῖν ἣν ὑμεῖς οὐκ οἴδατε. ³³ Ἐλεγον οἱ μαθηταὶ πρὸς ἀλλήλους, Μή τις ἤνεγκεν αὐτῷ φαγεῖν; ³⁴ ^p Λέγει αὐτοῖς ^{p Job 23. 12.}
 ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἐμὸν βρώμᾳ ἐστίν· ἵνα ποιῶ τὸ θέλημα τοῦ πέμψαντός με, καὶ ^{ch. 17. 4.}
 τελειώσω αὐτοῦ τὸ ἔργον. ³⁵ ^q Οὐχ ὑμεῖς λέγετε, ὅτι ἐτι τετράμηνός ἐστι, ^{q Matt. 9. 37.}
^{Luke 10. 2.}

Chrys., who dwells on the particulars in which this Samaritan woman in her intercourse with Christ affords profitable instruction to Christians.

20. τῷ ὄρει τούτῳ] on this mountain. On the rivalry between Gerizim and Jerusalem, see Joseph. Ant. xiii. 3, 4. Reland, Pal. p. 503, and the authorities from the Talmud in Welstein, p. 861. The coins of Samaria exhibit a Temple on the summit of a mountain. Akermann, p. 29.

21. ἔρχεται ὥρα] the hour cometh. He removes the notion of any special privileges guaranteed to either of the two rival Cities and Mountains, and says, The hour is coming of evangelical doctrine, when the words of the Prophets will be fulfilled, and the shadows of types will pass away, and all local distinctions be abolished, and the Truth will illumine the hearts of all believers with its pure light in the true Sion, the universal Church of Christ, where true spiritual worship is offered to God. (Origen., Chrys.)

Not only has the spiritual worship of God been now diffused generally, but the special worship offered at Jerusalem and Gerizim was soon afterwards interrupted by the destruction of the Temples there, and by the expulsion of Jews and Samaritans from their own cities. See Jerome in Sophon. i. 15. Euseb. iv. 6. Tertulian, c. Jud. 15. Procopius, v. 7. Welstein.

22. Ἦ προσκυνεῖτε ὁ οὐκ οἴδατε] Ye worship what ye know not. Because ye regard God as local and particular; and mingle His worship with that of Idols; but we worship the One Lord of all. (Chrys.)

On the heathen Origin, History, and idolatrous Worship of the Samaritans, see an excellent essay in Mede's Works, i. Disc. xii. p. 46, and Lücke here, i. pp. 592—596.

— ἡ σωτηρία ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων] the salvation is of the Jews. Obs. ἡ σωτηρία, the promised salvation, the only salvation, for the Saviour of the World—He by Whom alone man can be saved (Acts iv. 12)—arises from Judæa. See also Rom. ix. 1—6.

24. Πνεῦμα ὁ Θεός] God is a Spirit. Hence they are refuted who understand literally the figurative expressions of Scripture concerning the Lord; e. g. the arm, the eyes, the feet, the wings of God, Who is a Spirit. (Origen.) God is a Spirit. He thus condemns the formal and carnal worship of the Jews, and teaches men to offer themselves a living sacrifice to God. (Chrys.)

— ἐν πνεύματι καὶ ἀληθείᾳ] in spirit and in truth. The Samaritans regarded God as limited by space, and the Jews were studious mainly of external forms in worship, and neglected the spirit: they dwelt on types and figures which were only images of truth; but the true worshippers differ from both, because they worship God in Spirit and in Truth; in Spirit, that is, in holiness and righteousness of life; and in Truth, that is, not in heresy, but in soundness of faith. There will not only be a change in the place (τόπος), but in the mode (τρόπος) of worship. And the hour of this change now is. (Theoph.)

25. Μεσσίας ἔρχεται] Messias cometh. The Jews contend for their temple, on Moriah, we for our mountain, Gerizim. The Messiah will come and teach us how to worship. (Aug.) That the Samaritans expected a Messiah appears from the fact, that Dositheus arose among them, and pretended to be the Christ. Cp. Origen (tom. 13).

This woman, who only knew the Five Books of Moses, expected the Messiah. This knowledge of the Samaritans was probably derived from the first prophecy of Holy Writ, Gen. iii. 15, and from the prophecies of Jacob, Gen. xlix. 10, and of Balaam, Numb. xxiv. 7—9. 17, and the words in Deut. xviii. 15. Hence our Lord said to the Jews, If ye had believed Moses, ye would have believed Me. (John v. 46.)

26. Ἐγὼ εἰμι, ὁ λαλῶν σοι] I that am speaking unto thee am He. The Jews said to Christ (John x. 24), If thou be the Christ, tell us plainly, and He did not reveal Himself to them; and yet He says to the woman, "I am He." Whence this difference? Because they asked in malice, she in simplicity; and because there were no Pharisees and Chief Priests in Samaria, who would pervert this knowledge into an occasion of hatred against Him; and because He foreknew that the Samaritans would believe in Him. Cp. Matt. xvi. 20.

27. ἐθαύμαζον] were wondering; the reading of A, B, C, D, G, K, L, M. Elz. has ἐθαύμασαν, which is less expressive.

— μετὰ γυναικός] with a woman; which the Jewish Rabbis, who despised women, did not willingly do. Lightfoot, Schoettgen here.

— οὐδεὶς μέντοι] yet no one said, What seekest Thou? A silent intimation of awe for their Master. See on Mark x. 32. Luke v. 7. John xii. 21, 22.

28. Ἀφῆκεν τὴν ὑδρίαν] She left her water-pot and went her way into the city. Our Lord employed this woman as an Apostle to her own city. (Origen.) And she would not have them trust implicitly in her own report of Him, but she said to them, Come and see. And she did not tell them that He had declared Himself to be the Christ, lest perhaps they might refuse to come, but she said, Come and see a man, &c. Is not this the Christ? (Chrys.)

29. Δεῦτε, ἴδετε] Come ye and see. This woman of Samaria was wiser and more courageous than the master of Israel, Nicomachus, with whom Jesus had discoursed on the same subject. He did not fetch others, or declare himself openly as a disciple; but she brought a City to Christ. (Chrys. on v. 13.)

32. Ἐγὼ βρώσω ἔχω φαγεῖν] I have meat to eat. Our salvation is the meat for which Christ hungers. (Chrys., Theoph.)

35. τετράμηνος] sc. χρόνος. (Lobeck, Phryn. p. 549.) So the best MSS. Elz. has τετράμηνον.

καὶ ὁ θερισμὸς ἔρχεται; ἰδοὺ λέγω ὑμῖν, ἐπάρατε τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς ὑμῶν, καὶ θεάσασθε τὰς χώρας, ὅτι λευκαὶ εἰσι πρὸς θερισμὸν ἤδη. ³⁶ Καὶ ὁ θερίζων μισθὸν λαμβάνει, καὶ συνάγει καρπὸν εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, ἵνα καὶ ὁ σπείρων ὁμοῦ χαίρῃ καὶ ὁ θερίζων. ³⁷ Ἐν γὰρ τούτῳ ὁ λόγος ἐστὶν ὁ ἀληθινός, ὅτι ἄλλος ἐστὶν ὁ σπείρων, καὶ ἄλλος ὁ θερίζων. ³⁸ Ἐγὼ ἀπέστειλα ὑμᾶς θερίζειν ὃ οὐχ ὑμεῖς κεκοπιάκατε· ἄλλοι κεκοπιάκασιν, καὶ ὑμεῖς εἰς τὸν κόπον αὐτῶν εἰσεληλύθατε.

³⁹ Ἐκ δὲ τῆς πόλεως ἐκείνης πολλοὶ ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτὸν τῶν Σαμαρειτῶν, διὰ τὸν λόγον τῆς γυναικὸς μαρτυρούσης, ὅτι εἶπέ μοι πάντα ὅσα ἐποίησα.

⁴⁰ Ὡς οὖν ἦλθον πρὸς αὐτὸν οἱ Σαμαρεῖται, ἡρώτων αὐτὸν μέναι παρ' αὐτοῖς· καὶ ἔμεινεν ἐκεῖ δύο ἡμέρας. ⁴¹ Καὶ πολλῶ πλείους ἐπίστευσαν διὰ τὸν λόγον αὐτοῦ, ⁴² τῇ τε γυναικὶ ἔλεγον, ὅτι οὐκέτι διὰ τὴν σὴν λαλίαν πιστεύομεν· αὐτοὶ γὰρ ἀκηκόαμεν, καὶ οἶδαμεν ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ἀληθῶς ὁ σωτὴρ τοῦ κόσμου, ὁ Χριστός.

(³⁴ VII) ⁴³ Μετὰ δὲ τὰς δύο ἡμέρας ἐξῆλθεν ἐκεῖθεν, καὶ ἀπῆλθεν εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν· (³⁵ I) ⁴⁴ αὐτὸς γὰρ Ἰησοῦς ἐμαρτύρησεν, ὅτι προφήτης ἐν τῇ

r ch. 17. 8.

s Matt. 13. 57.
ch. 7. 1.
Mark 6. 4.
Luke 4. 24.

It would seem that this was late in November or early in December. The sowing of barley was at that time, i. e. in the month Cisleu. And in four months after that time—in the month Nisan or Abib—the barley harvest began,—namely, at the Pass-over. And fifty days after that,—namely, at Pentecost, the wheat harvest commenced. Levit. xxiii. 10—17. Joseph. Ant. iii. 105. Walchii Calend. Palest. p. 25. Buhl Cal. p. 23. Kuinoel's note here; and Meyer, p. 133; and Wieseler, Synops. p. 214. Robinson, Palest. ii. p. 99. Jahn, Arch. § 62. Winer, R. W. B. p. 340 v. Erndte.

—ἐπάρατε τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς] lift ye up your eyes and see. You can calculate by the aspect of the fields how many months it wants to the natural harvest; but I say to you, Lift up the eyes of your heart, and behold the spiritual harvest present before you. Christ sees a multitude of the Samaritans coming to hear Him, and He calls them fields while to Harvest. (Chrys., Theoph.)

Christ's divine Eye had also a prophetic view of the spiritual Harvest to be gathered in Samaria, soon after His Ascension, on which see Acts viii. 1—14, and note there, and on Acts viii. 17. Cp. note on John xii. 20. 24.

³⁶ ὁμοῦ χαίρῃ] may rejoice together; at the Great Day. Their labours were at different times, the reward will be given at once. (Origen.)

³⁷ ἄλλος δὲ σπείρων] one is he who soweth, another he who reapeth. The Patriarchs and Moses, and the Prophets of the Old Testament had sown the seed; the Apostles of the New reap the harvest. (Origen, who quotes Isa. xxix. 11. Dan. viii. 27. Matt. xii. 42; xiii. 17. Eph. iii. 5. Cp. Cyril, Chrys., Aug., Theophyl.)

Hence we see that the New Testament is not contrary to the Old (as the Marcionites and Manichæans vainly say), but the Old preparatory to the New, and the New the fulfilment of the Old. (Chrys., Aug., Theophyl.) And finally the World's Harvest will be reaped by the Angels of heaven, who will gather in the sheaves of good wheat from the field of the Church, tilled by Christ's Ministers from the beginning; and many will come from the East and from the West, and will sit down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in the Kingdom of Heaven. (Matt. viii. 11.) Cp. Aug. here.

Our Lord Himself, it is probable, was now reaping in fields prepared for the harvest by the preaching of His forerunner, John the Baptist, now in prison. See on iii. 25.

³⁸ θερίζειν] to reap. Our Lord, by His example in this chapter, teaches us to spiritualize all the ordinary incidents of life. He sits at a well-side, and He makes it an occasion for speaking of living water. The disciples ask Him to eat. His meat and drink is to do the will of God. It wants four months to harvest. He sees the Samaritans coming to Him; He foresees that they will believe in Him; they are fields whitening to the harvest, yielding a crop from the seed sown by Moses 1500 years before.

This duty of Christianizing every occasion of life is well illustrated in the Rev. Robert Cooke's Exhortation to Ejaculatory Prayer, edited by W. Jones of Nayland, Lond. 1797.

⁴⁰ ἡρώτων αὐτόν] they (the Samaritans) were entreating Him.

The Jews, although they saw His miracles, rejected Him in pride, malice, and vain-glory; but the Samaritans, among whom He wrought no miracle, desired Him to remain with them, and believed on Him.

—ἐμεινεν] He abode. Jesus remains with those who desire Him to stay with them, particularly if they come forth out of the city, and pray Him to enter and abide with them. (Origen.)

Observe how these Samaritans were blessed in their subsequent history. See the honourable notice of this place (Sychar) in St. Stephen's speech (Acts vii. 16), and the mission of Philip the Deacon, to preach (Acts viii. 5), and of the Apostles Peter and John to confirm, in Samaria. (Acts viii. 14.)

To "him that hath shall be given." (Matt. xiii. 12.) And it is remarkable, that the site of Sychar is still well known, and its condition fruitful and prosperous; and its scenery is, perhaps, the most beautiful of any region in Palestine (cp. Burton's note),—while the great city of the thankless Capernaum has vanished, and no one can accurately tell the sites of Chorazin and Bethsaida. See Matt. xi. 21—23. Luke x. 15.

⁴² λαλίαν] speech. In a good sense. Cp. viii. 43, and see on Mark xvi. 19, and Winer, p. 21.

—πιστεύομεν] we believe. At first they had some belief from the woman's testimony (John iv. 39), now they believe because they had heard Him themselves. So it is with those who are brought to Christ by Christian friends, and by the preaching of the Christian Church. They believe through that report, then Christ abides with them, and He gives them the precepts of love; they are convinced, and know, by their own experience, that He is indeed the Saviour of the world. (Aug.)

The Visible Church of God, even from the beginning, exercises a manuductory office—like that of this Samaritan woman—in bringing the world to Christ in Holy Scripture, where He abides with us, and confirms, settles, and establishes us in the faith. Compare Hooker, II. iv. 3, and III. viii. 14; and the Editor's remarks on the Canon of Scripture, Lect. i. pp. 21—26.

⁴³ ⁴⁴ εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν—αὐτὸς γὰρ Ἰησοῦς] The interpretation of S. Cyril here, and others of the ancients, is that our Lord went away (ἀπῆλθεν) into Galilee, passing by (παράτρεχων) His own πατρίδα, Nazareth,—see Matt. xiii. 54. 57. Mark vi. 1. 4. Luke iv. 23, 24, where Nazareth is designated the πατρίς of Christ; for even Jesus Himself (αὐτὸς), the greatest of all Prophets, witnessed that a Prophet hath not honour in his own country. Thus we find Him at Cana, which is north of Nazareth, so that our Lord in coming from Samaria must have avoided Nazareth. Cana had profited doubtless by His first miracle there, while the Nazarenes had been offended at Him. (Luke iv. 23, 24.) Cp. Townson, i. 220. St. John takes for granted that Nazareth was already known by his readers as the πατρίς, or country, of Christ, from the earlier Gospels (Matt. xiii. 54. Mark vi. 1. Luke iv. 23). Nazareth in Galilee is contrasted here with Galilee generally,—as Jerusalem, the capital of Judæa, is contrasted by St. John with Judæa, iii. 22.

This interpretation is confirmed by what follows: "When He came to Galilee the Galilæans received Him;" they held Him in honour. But, on the other hand, we read, that the men of His own country (πατρίς)—so the Evangelists, St. Matthew and ιδία πατρίδι τιμὴν οὐκ ἔχει. ⁽³⁶⁾_x 45 Ὅτε οὖν ἦλθεν εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν, ἐδέξαντο αὐτὸν οἱ Γαλιλαῖοι πάντα ἑωρακότες ἃ ἐποίησεν ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ· καὶ αὐτοὶ γὰρ ἦλθον εἰς τὴν ἑορτὴν.

⁽³⁷⁾_π 46 Ἦλθεν οὖν πάλιν ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς τὴν Κανὰ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, ὅπου ^{t ch. 12. 1, 11.} ἐποίησε τὸ ὕδωρ οἶνον. Καὶ ἦν τις βασιλικὸς οὗ ὁ υἱὸς ἡσθένει ἐν Καφarnaούμ. 47 Οὗτος ἀκούσας ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἦκει ἐκ τῆς Ἰουδαίας εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν ἀπῆλθε πρὸς αὐτὸν, καὶ ἡρώτα αὐτὸν ἵνα καταβῇ καὶ ἰάσῃται αὐτοῦ τὸν υἱόν, ἥμελλε γὰρ ἀποθνήσκειν. 48 Ἐπεὶ οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς πρὸς αὐτόν, Ἐὰν μὴ σημεία ^{u 1 Cor. 1. 22.} καὶ τέρατα ἴδῃτε, οὐ μὴ πιστεύσητε. 49 Λέγει πρὸς αὐτὸν ὁ βασιλικός, Κύριε, κατάβηθι πρὶν ἀποθανεῖν τὸ παιδίον μου. 50 Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Πορεύου ὁ υἱός σου ζῇ. Καὶ ἐπίστευσεν ὁ ἄνθρωπος τῷ λόγῳ ᾧ εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἐπορεύετο. 51 Ἦδη δὲ αὐτοῦ καταβαίνοντος, οἱ δούλοι αὐτοῦ ἀπήντησαν αὐτῷ, καὶ ἀπήγγειλαν λέγοντες, Ὅτι ὁ παῖς σου ζῇ. 52 Ἐπύθετο οὖν παρ' αὐτῶν τὴν ὥραν ἐν ᾗ κομψότερον ἔσχε· καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Ὅτι ἐχθὲς ὥραν ἐβδόμην ἀφήκεν αὐτὸν ὁ πυρετός. 53 Ἐγὼ οὖν ὁ πατὴρ ὅτι ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ὥρᾳ ἐν ᾗ εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ὅτι ὁ υἱός σου ζῇ· καὶ ἐπίστευσεν αὐτὸς καὶ ἡ οἰκία αὐτοῦ ὅλη. 54 Τοῦτο πάλιν δεύτερον σημείον ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐλθὼν ἐκ τῆς Ἰουδαίας εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν.

V. ⁽³⁸⁾_i 1 Ἀ Μετὰ ταῦτα ἦν ἑορτὴ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, καὶ ἀνέβη Ἰησοῦς εἰς ^{a ch. 2. 13.} Ἱεροσόλυμα. ^{Lev. 23. 2.} ^{Deut. 16. 1.}

St. Luke, call Nazareth—asked in scorn, “Is not this the carpenter’s Son? and is not His mother called Mary; and His brethren and sisters, are they not all with us? And they were offended at Him.” (Matt. xiii. 54—56) And He said to them, “Ye will surely say unto Me this proverb, Physician, heal thyself. Whatsoever we have heard done in Capernaum (in Galilee) do in thy own country. And He said, Verily I say unto you, No Prophet is accepted in his own country.” (Luke iv. 23, 24.) And again we read, Jesus said, A Prophet is not without honour save in his own country. (Matt. xiii. 57.)

Thus the words of St. John in this place are explained by the words of Christ as recorded in the former Gospels; and doubtless St. John takes for granted that his own readers are acquainted with the other Gospels, and will compare and elucidate his own narrative by theirs. Cp. above, Introduction, p. 268.

46—53.] For a Homily on these verses see Greg. Mag. Hom. in Evang. 28.

46. Ἦλθεν οὖν] Jesus came again unto Cana of Galilee, where He made the water wine. And there was a certain nobleman, &c. St. John, in pursuance of his design to unfold in his Gospel the proofs of Christ’s Godhead, proceeds to recount a Miracle which exhibits Him as possessing the Divine Attributes of Omnipresence, Omniscience, and Omnipotence. In His first Miracle at Cana, Christ had shown His Divine Power. Without the utterance of a word, He had changed the water into wine by the silent fiat of His will. And now, while visible at Cana as man, He is present at Capernaum as God; He restores the sick there, and reveals what is done in that city. Go thy way, thy son liveth. The Evangelist thus teaches the necessity and blessedness of faith in the Divinity of Christ.

— βασιλικός] Probably a courtier, or officer of Herod Antipas. See the passages from Josephus in the notes of Krebs, Rosenmüller, and Kuin.

47. καταβῇ] come down, i. e. to the shore of the Sea of Galilee. See ii. 12.

The nobleman had some faith, but it was feeble, in that he did not think that Christ could give health to his son after his son’s death, or unless Christ came down in person (Chrys.); yet Christ did not reject him, but did more than he asked.

— ἥμελλε] As to the augment in this word see xi. 51; xii. 33. Winer, p. 65.

50. Πορεύου] go thy way. Set out on thy journey. I, Whom thou desirest to come down, will remain where I am; but when thou arrivest at Capernaum, thou wilt find there the effect wrought already by My Divine Power; for thy son liveth. Contrast the faith of the centurion (Luke vii. 2) with that of this courtier, and Christ’s conduct to each. Our Lord would not go down at the desire of the nobleman to heal his son, but He offered to go down to heal the servant of the centurion. (Matt. viii. 7.) He thus teaches us, that what is lofty in man’s sight is low in His eyes, and the reverse.

VOL. I.

52. κομψότερον ἔσχε] began to amend. “κομψότερον Theophylactus interpretatus est βέλτιον καὶ εὐρωστώτερον, et apud Arrian. Epictet. iii. 10, sibi invicem opponuntur formulæ κομψῶς ἔχειν atque κακῶς ἔχειν; verba ibi sunt, ὅταν ὁ ἱατρὸς εἰσέρχεται μὴ φοβέσθαι τί εἴπῃ μὴδ’ ἂν εἴπῃ, κομψῶς ἔχεις, ὑπερχαίρειν μὴδ’ ἂν εἴπῃ, κακῶς ἔχεις, ἀθυμεῖν.” (Kuin.)

— ἐχθὲς] So A, B*, C, D, K, L. “Mæris: χθὲς—Ἀττικῶς, ἐχθὲς—Ἑλληνικῶς v. ibi Pierseus p. 402. Etymol. M. ἐχθὲς καὶ χθὲς. Οἱ Ἀττικοὶ χθὲς, οἱ δὲ κοινοὶ ἐχθὲς. Hesych. χθὲς, ἐχθὲς. Sed nec Attici alterā formā ἐχθὲς, quā cæteri Græci usi sunt, planè abstinerunt, vid. Aristoph. Plut. v. 883. 1047, et interpp. ad Thom. Mag. p. 913, sq.” (Kuin.)

— ὥραν ἐβδόμην] the seventh hour; seven in the evening. It is not probable that the father should have delayed so long as he would have done if it was one o’clock p.m. ἐπορεύετο, he was setting out, immediately after our Lord’s speech to him, v. 50. Cana and Capernaum were not more than twenty-five miles apart. As this seventh hour was seven in the evening, we need not be surprised that the father did not arrive till the next day (χθὲς). Besides, the season was late in the autumn or early in the winter, when travelling was not easy. See v. 35.

On the reckoning of hours of St. John’s Gospel, see above on v. 6.

53. ἐπίστευσεν] he believed. There are degrees in faith as in other virtues; the nobleman’s faith began, when he came to Christ, it increased when our Lord said, “Thy son liveth,” it was completed when his servants told him, “yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him.” (Bede.)

CH. V. 1. ἦν ἑορτὴ] there was a feast of the Jews. What Feast was this? That it was one of the three great Feasts, seems to be implied in the words, “and Jesus went up to Jerusalem.” The incidents related in the Chapter immediately preceding occurred in an autumn or winter (iv. 35). The events narrated in the Chapter next after the present, occurred just before a Passover (vi. 1—4). At that season Our Lord was in Galilee (vi. 1—4), but He is now at Jerusalem. At that season also, a Passover was near at hand, but now a Feast is actually going on. Therefore this Feast cannot be the same as the Passover mentioned in the next Chapter.

The Feast here specified took place in an interval of time limited a parte ante by the winter at Sychar, and a parte post by the Passover in the next Chapter (vi. 1—4). That Passover could not have been the next after that winter; for, as we here see, a Feast of the Jews, at which Jesus went up to Jerusalem, took place in the interval between that winter and that Passover.

But none of the three great Feasts of the Jews fall between the winter month Cisleu, and the spring month Abib, when the Passover took place. Therefore this interval, dating from a Winter and reaching to that Passover, consisted of about sixteen months. The Feast here mentioned was, probably, as has been already observed, one of the three Great Annual Festivals. It was the Passover, the Pentecost, or the Feast of Tabernacles, which fell in that interval.

² Ἔστι δὲ ἐν τοῖς Ἱεροσολύμοις ἐπὶ τῇ προβατικῇ κολυμβήθρα, ἣ ἐπιλεγόμενη Ἑβραϊστὶ Βηθεσδὰ, πέντε στοὰς ἔχουσα. ³ Ἐν ταύταις κατέκειτο πλήθος πολὺ τῶν ἀσθενούντων, τυφλῶν, χωλῶν, ξηρῶν, ἐκδεχομένων τὴν τοῦ ὕδατος κίνησιν. ⁴ Ἀγγελος γὰρ κατὰ καιρὸν κατέβαινεν ἐν τῇ κολυμβήθρα, καὶ ἐτάρασσε τὸ ὕδωρ· ὁ οὖν πρῶτος ἐμβὰς μετὰ τὴν ταραχὴν τοῦ ὕδατος ὑγίης ἐγένετο, ᾧ δὴποτε κατείχετο νοσήματι. ⁵ Ἦν δέ τις ἄνθρωπος ἐκεῖ

It is not easy to determine which of these three Festivals it was. The ancient Expositors are divided in opinion on this subject. Irenæus (ii. 22. 3) calls it a Passover. He asserts that our Lord went up to Jerusalem for the Passover every year: first, to the Passover mentioned in John ii. 23; then, a second time, when He healed the paralytic, viz. at the Feast mentioned in this Chapter (v. 1—14); thirdly, after He had multiplied the loaves in Galilee (vi. 1); and fourthly, and lastly, when He was Crucified. This opinion is also maintained by Theodoret, ad Dan. ix. p. 1250. And this opinion has been adopted by Luther, Scaliger, Grotius, Lightfoot, Le Clerc, Hengstenberg (Christol. 176), Greswell, and Robinson: and on the whole, seems most probable. S. Cyril, Chrysostom and his followers, Euthymius, and Theophylact, supposed it to be a Pentecost.

The question is not very material to the Chronology of our Lord's Ministry. For, since there was an interval of sixteen months between the winter when He was at Sychar, and the Passover mentioned below in vi. 1—4, it is evident that a Passover must have occurred in that interval, and it is not of much importance to determine, whether that Passover is specified here by St. John. It is enough to know that St. John's narrative of our Lord's Ministry comprises a time in which there were Four Passovers, viz.

A Passover when He cleansed the Temple, ii. 13.

A Passover (after a winter, see note on iv. 35) following the Passover of chap. ii. 13, and before

A third Passover connected with the miraculous feeding, and preceding the discourse on the Eucharist, vi. 4.

The fourth Passover, at which He suffered, xiii. 1.

On the prophetic intimations of this fact, see below on vii. 8. Hence it appears that our Lord's Ministry lasted about three years and a half: and this is the result arrived at not only by Irenæus and Theodoret, arguing from these Four Passovers, but also by Eusebius, reasoning on other grounds, H. E. i. 10. See also below on vii. 14.

Jesus went up to the Feasts at Jerusalem to show His reverence for the Law of Moses, and in order to preach to the multitudes who were then assembled at Jerusalem. (Chrys.)

² Ἔστι] there is: this expression does not show that this Gospel was not written (as all Christian Antiquity believed it to have been) after the destruction of Jerusalem; as has been alleged by some in more recent times. The Pool, and even its Porches, might have continued to exist after the fall of the City. Some part of the City itself survived the siege; and they were in the suburbs. The Pool is described by Eusebius and Jerome as existing in their age: and it is probable, that the Romans, who were accustomed to ereci Baths wherever they settled themselves, would be disposed to preserve a Bath, celebrated for its medicinal properties, for the use of their own Garrison, quartered at Jerusalem: cp. Lardner, iii. p. 236. Townson, p. 223. Davidson, i. p. 230.

— τοῖς Ἱεροσολύμοις] St. John alone of the Evangelists uses the oblique cases of Ἱεροσόλυμα with the article, see x. 22; xi. 18. Winer, p. 102.

— τῇ προβατικῇ] Some ancient Interpreters joined this word with κολυμβήθρα thus, προβατικὴ κολυμβήθρα, probatika piscina, a sheep-pool (Chrys., Theophyl.), in which the entrails of the sheep which had been sacrificed were washed (Theophyl. v. 1). But modern Expositors supply πύλη, gate, after προβατικῇ. See Nehem. iii. 1. 32; xii. 39. Lightfoot, i. p. 666. West., p. 868. Winer, p. 522.

For a Homily on this miracle see S. Cyril Hieros. pp. 336—344.

— κολυμβήθρα] a pool—piscina. Water of itself has no power of healing either body or soul. But this pool, stirred by an Angel, was endued with curative power. It may be regarded as a figure of Christian Baptism, which derives its energy from God, and heals the diseases of the soul. And by the cures visibly wrought on the body with water when stirred by an Angel, by the operation of Divine power, Christ leads us to believe in the operations which He assures us are wrought by the Lord of Angels on the soul, in the Sacrament of Baptism by Water. To this pool of Baptism all mankind is invited, and every one may step in and be healed, and its virtue is never exhausted. (Chrys. Aug. Serm. 124, 125. Theoph.) — Ἑβραϊστὶ] See above on i. 39.

— Βηθεσδὰ] Bethesda, house of mercy; בֵּית (beth), 'domus et חַסֵּד (chesed), beneficentia.' See Lightfoot, Chorog. and Harmony on John v. 2, vol. i. pp. 666. 670.

Bethesda seems to be what is now called the "Fount of the Virgin," and is connected by a subterranean channel with Siloam. See on ix. 7, and Robinson, Palestine, i. p. 490—507, and Later Researches, p. 249.

— πέντε στοὰς] five arcades; probably the whole building was of a pentagonal form, the pool being in the middle, to which there was access from the five sides, covered with roofs, supported on columns. See v. 13.

The porch of Bethesda, with its five arcades, has been regarded as emblematic of the Jewish nation, lying sick and impotent in the porch of the Pentateuch; when Christ came to give them health in the living waters of the Gospel. (Cp. Aug.) See on v. 5.

3. πλῆθος] a multitude. The work of Christ, in healing the soul, is far greater than that which He wrought in healing men's bodies. But because the soul of man did not as yet know Christ, by whom she was to be healed; and because man has eyes in the body so as to be able to see bodily acts, and had not as yet eyes in the heart, so as to see God, therefore Christ wrought works of healing that were visible, on the body, in order that the soul, which could not as yet see Him, might be healed by Him. He therefore entered the porch where a great multitude lay, and chose one (who had been long there, and had no one to put him into the pool), and healed him. (Aug.)

He restored him to vigour immediately; and gave a public proof of the miracle. How great is the difference in the health restored by Christ, and that which we receive by the ministry of Physicians! (Bede, Theoph.) See above on Matt. viii. 15.

— ἐκδεχομένων—κίνησιν is omitted by A*, B, C*, L, a few cursive MSS., and the ancient Cureton Syriac.

As to the words ἐκδεχομένων τὴν τοῦ ὕδατος κίνησιν, they state nothing which is not known from v. 7. And no good reason can be assigned for which they should have been omitted, if they had been in the original text of the Gospel. But they may have been left out inadvertently from some ancient copy, and so never have found their way into the transcripts from it.

This seems more probable than that these words should have been added as a gloss to some early copy, and from that one source have been diffused into the immense majority of copies where they are now found.

4. Ἀγγελος—νοσήματι] These words are not found in MSS. B, C*, D, nor in a few cursive MSS., nor in the Cureton Syriac, but they were in copies of this Gospel in the time of Tertullian (de Bapt. 5, adv. Jud. 13), and are quoted by Chrys., Cyril, Aug., and others, and they exist in A, C, E, F, G, H, I, K, L, M, U, V, Δ, and Lr. See the evidence on the subject in Tregelles, Act. of MSS. pp. 243—246, and in Scholz, Tisch., and Alf. here.

As to this verse, which is found in the vast majority of copies, some reasons might be alleged why it should have been inserted by transcribers. They might have been desirous to assign a cause for the phenomenon. On the other hand, reasons no less valid might weigh with them for its omission. Who had seen the Angel? What Jewish writer had recorded his appearance and operation? These are questions which might have been urged by sceptics of old, as now, and the easiest way of removing the objections might seem to be to omit the words. We know that this feeling operated so strongly with some critics of old, as to lead them not only to omit a few words, but even to reject entire Books of the Sacred Canon, e. g. the Epistle to the Hebrews and the Apocalypse. See the editor's Lectures on the Canon, pp. 213. 246. 330, 2nd edit.

The evidence of the MSS. being, on the whole, so strong in favour of the words, it seems rash to reject them. They are retained by Lachmann; but rejected, as "a legendary interpolation," by Meyer.

τριάκοντα καὶ ὀκτὼ ἔτη ἔχων ἐν τῇ ἀσθενείᾳ· ⁶ τοῦτον ἰδὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς κατα-κείμενον, καὶ γνοὺς ὅτι πολὺν ἤδη χρόνον ἔχει λέγει αὐτῷ, Θέλεις ὑγιῆς γενέσθαι; ⁷ Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ ἀσθενῶν, Κύριε, ἄνθρωπον οὐκ ἔχω, ἵνα, ὅταν ταραχθῇ τὸ ὕδωρ, βάλλῃ με εἰς τὴν κολυμβήθραν· ἐν ᾧ δὲ ἔρχομαι ἐγὼ, ἄλλος πρὸ ἐμοῦ καταβαίνει. ⁸ ^b Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἐγειρε, ἄρον τὸν κράβαττόν σου, καὶ περιπάτει. ⁹ ^c Καὶ εὐθέως ἐγένετο ὑγιῆς ὁ ἄνθρωπος, καὶ ἦρε τὸν κράβαττον αὐτοῦ, καὶ περιεπάτει. Ἦν δὲ σάββατον ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ.
¹⁰ ^d Ἐλεγον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι τῷ τεθεραπευμένῳ, Σάββατόν ἐστιν, οὐκ ἔξεστὶ σοι ἄραι τὸν κράβαττον. (³⁹/_x) ¹¹ Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς, Ὁ ποιήσας με ὑγιᾶ ἐκεῖνός μοι εἶπεν, Ἄρον τὸν κράβαττόν σου, καὶ περιπάτει. ¹² Ἡρώτησαν οὖν αὐτόν, Τίς ἐστὶν ὁ ἄνθρωπος ὁ εἰπὼν σοι, Ἄρον τὸν κράβαττόν σου, καὶ περιπάτει; ¹³ Ὁ δὲ ἰαθεὶς οὐκ ᾔδει τίς ἐστιν· ὁ γὰρ Ἰησοῦς ἐξένευσεν, ὅχλου ὄντος ἐν τῷ τόπῳ.

^b Matt. 9. 6.
Mark 2. 11.
Luke 5. 24.
^c ch. 9. 14.

^d Exod. 20. 16.
Deut. 5. 13.
Neh. 13. 19.
Jer. 17. 21, &c.
Matt. 12. 2.
Mark 2. 24.
Luke 6. 2.

¹⁴ ^e Μετὰ ταῦτα εὐρίσκει αὐτὸν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Ἴδε, ὑγιῆς γέγονας· μηκέτι ἀμάρτανε, ἵνα μὴ χεῖρόν σοί τι γένηται.

^e Matt. 12. 45.
ver. 21.
ch. 8. 11.

¹⁵ Ἀπῆλθεν ὁ ἄνθρωπος, καὶ ἀνήγγειλε τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἐστὶν ὁ ποιήσας αὐτὸν ὑγιᾶ. ¹⁶ Καὶ διὰ τοῦτο ἐδίωκόν τὸν Ἰησοῦν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, καὶ ἐζήτουν αὐτὸν ἀποκτεῖναι, ὅτι ταῦτα ἐποίει ἐν σαββάτῳ. ¹⁷ ^f Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἀπεκρίνατο αὐτοῖς, Ὁ Πατήρ μου ἕως ἄρτι ἐργάζεται, καὶ γὰρ ἐργάζομαι. ¹⁸ ^g Διὰ

^f ch. 14. 10.
^g ch. 7. 19.
& 10. 33.
Phil. 2. 6.

As to the internal teaching of the verse, it will be observed that it does not say that the Angel was visible; and therefore no objection against its insertion can be grounded on the silence of profane writers.

It seems also a worthy exercise of Divine Revelation, to lead human Philosophy to regard what are Physical Phenomena, as being not produced by natural Laws, though they may be regulated according to them, but as effected by divine Agency; in a word, to elevate the human mind from the lower level of material Mechanics to the higher region of spiritual Dynamics.

Here also we have a true view of the dignity of the Medical Profession. We see the ministry of the Physician, and the visible means and appliances used by him for the restoration of health. But by such Scriptures as these, the Holy Spirit teaches us to look at the invisible power of the Great Physician acting by their instrumentality; and to ascribe all its success to Him,—"Jesus Christ maketh thee whole." (Acts ix. 34.)

So it is also in the World of Grace. We see the Bread and Wine in the Holy Eucharist; and we see the Water in the Sacrament of Baptism. But the Holy Spirit in Holy Scripture lifts up the veil which separates us from the unseen world, and discovers to us the ministry of Angels, and even His own ministry, in the spiritual Bethesda, which God has provided for the palsied and withered soul.

Hence Tertullian (de Baptismo, c. 5) speaking of the pool of Bethesda says, "That figure of corporal healing typified spiritual medicine. In proportion as God's grace towards men was increased, more honour accrued to the element of Water. What thus conveyed temporal health now bestows spiritual; what was then salutary only to a few, is now made the means of dispensing everlasting health to whole Nations, by the abolition of death in the washing away of sin."

On the spiritual uses of this narrative, as an antidote to the erroneous practice of Angel worship, see above, i. 52.

—κατέβαιεν] was wont to descend.

5. τριάκοντα—ὀκτώ] Thirty-eight. Perhaps there is a spiritual meaning and typical sense in the number specified here by the Blessed Evangelist. Cp. Hengstenberg, Christol. 765. Forty years is a term of probation: see below Chronol. Synopsis of the Acts of the Apostles; and the number here is thirty-eight (40—2); and it is probable that just two years after this cure, Christ suffered, and the time of trial of the Jewish Nation was over. Did the man (as the Fathers say, see v. 2) represent the Jewish Nation? and did his cure represent Christ's desire for their salvation?

He had no one to put him in, he was prevented by others, and yet he continued there. What a reproof to our languor and despondency, and weariness in prayer, and in other spiritual exercises for the impetration of divine grace and eternal good! (Chrys.)

8. κράβαττον] 'grabatun,' used only by St. Mark and St. John in the Gospels. See Mark ii. 4. 9. 11, 12; vi. 55.

9. σάββατον] a sabbath. The day of Rest was specially chosen by Christ as the fittest season for Divine acts of Mercy. Thus He fulfilled the Law, and showed His Oneness with the Father. (Mark iii. 1. Luke iv. 31—36. 38, 39. John ix. 14.) God rested on that day from all His works of creation; but on that Day of Rest He specially works, in doing acts of mercy to the souls of His Creatures, in the public religious exercises of His Church.

13. Ὁ δὲ ἰαθεὶς] A multitude of impotent folk lay in the porch, and one was healed by Him Who could have healed them all by a word. Why was this, but that Christ wrought rather with a view to the healing of the soul than of the body? For the health of the body, though once restored, failed again in death; but the soul once healed passes to life eternal. And to show the blessing promised to patient endurance, and faith, and resignation, He healed this one.

—ἐξένευσε] glided out of, "emersit, enatavit à turbâ tanquam à fluctibus maris;" from ἐκένειν, enatare. ἐκνεύσας = ἐκκολυμβήσας, Hesych. See Eurip. Hippol. 471, εἰς δὲ τὴν τύχην πεσοῦσ' ὅσην οὐ πῶς ἂν ἐκνεύσαι δοκεῖς; and LXX in Jud. xviii. 26. There is something beautifully significant in this word as here applied to Christ. He emerged, glided, dived forth invisibly from the waves of the crowd, and reappeared in the quiet harbour of the House of God. He thus also proved that when arrested at Gethsemane it was by His own will. See also Luke iv. 29, 30. John vii. 59.

This incident is also important as an evidence of the reality of His human body after His Resurrection, see below on xx. 19.

Our Lord has now withdrawn His bodily presence from the crowd of this world, in order that we may see Him with the eye of Faith. He has dived through the clouds of this lower world of sin and sorrow, and has emerged into the pure, crystal, empyrean of Heaven; and to the eye of Faith He is visible there, and He is there touched by the hand of Faith, see on xx. 17.

14. εὐρίσκει αὐτὸν ὁ Ἰησοῦς] Jesus seeks for and finds him; see i. 42; xii. 14. The man when healed went not to the market, but to the Temple; and there Jesus, who had conveyed Himself away from the crowd, met him who had not known Him in the crowd. Jesus escapes from the crowd; but He is found by us, and finds us, in the Temple; God is seen in solitude; the multitude makes a din around us and hides Him from us; the divine vision demands religious retirement and holy peace in His house, apart from the strife of tongues. Ps. xxxi. 20.

—μηκέτι ἀμάρτανε] sin no more. Bodily infirmities are therefore the effects of sin; and if we suffer for our sins, and fall again into the same sins, we may expect that our sufferings will be worse. (Chrys.)

—ἵνα μὴ χεῖρόν σοί τι γ.] So A, B, C, G, H, L, M, S, V.—Elz. τί σοι; but σοι is emphatic, and is rightly placed first,—"to thee who hast been healed."

16. ἐποίη] was doing, 'facitabat.'

17. Ὁ Πατήρ μου ἕως ἄρτι ἐργάζεται] My Father worketh

τοῦτο οὖν μᾶλλον ἐξήτουν αὐτὸν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι ἀποκτείνειν, ὅτι οὐ μόνον ἔλκε τὸ σάββατον, ἀλλὰ καὶ πατέρα ἰδίον ἔλεγε τὸν Θεὸν, ἴσον ἑαυτὸν ποιῶν τῷ Θεῷ.
 19 ἡ Ἀπεκρίνατο οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, οὐ δύναται ὁ Υἱὸς ποιεῖν ἄφ' ἑαυτοῦ οὐδέν, ἐὰν μὴ τι βλέπῃ τὸν Πατέρα ποιούντα· ἃ γὰρ ἂν ἐκεῖνος ποιῇ, ταῦτα καὶ ὁ Υἱὸς ὁμοίως ποιεῖ. 20 ἱ Ὁ γὰρ Πατὴρ φιλεῖ τὸν Υἱὸν, καὶ πάντα δείκνυσιν αὐτῷ ἃ αὐτὸς ποιεῖ καὶ μείζονα τούτων δείξει αὐτῷ ἔργα, ἵνα ὑμεῖς θαυμάζητε. 21 Ὡς περ γὰρ ὁ Πατὴρ ἐγείρει τοὺς νεκροὺς καὶ ζωοποιεῖ, οὕτως καὶ ὁ Υἱὸς οὓς θέλει ζωοποιεῖ. 22 κ Οὐδὲ γὰρ ὁ Πατὴρ κρίνει

h ver. 30.
 & 8. 38. & 14. 10.

i ch. 3. 35.
 Matt. 3. 17.
 Luke 9. 35.
 k Matt. 11. 27.
 & 28. 18.
 ch. 3. 35.
 & 17. 2.
 Acts 17. 31.

hitherto. τὸ ἕως ἄρτι δείκνυσιν τὸ αἰδίως. (Athanas. adv. Arian. ii. p. 386.)—ἕως ἄρτι from the Creation. (Bengel.) In His reasonings on the Sabbath, our Lord sometimes speaks as Man, as a human teacher (e.g. Matt. xii. 3), sometimes as God. Here He speaks as God, who makes His Sun to rise and His rain to fall, and clothes the grass of the field on the seventh day as well as on the other six. (Chrys.)

Our Lord says, "My Father worketh hitherto," because though He no longer maketh new creatures, yet He works in governing the Creation which was finished on the sixth day. And because the whole fabric of the Universe would be dissolved, if God's operative power and administrative rule were ever withdrawn. (Aug. super Gen. iv. 12.)

As Bengel says, "What would become of the Sabbath, unless God worked on the Sabbath?"

The man who was healed was seen by the Jews to be doing a corporal work on the Sabbath,—he carried his bed. Christ, therefore, who had commanded him to do so, teaches them thereby, that the ordinance of their Sabbath was temporary, and that its substance had now appeared in Himself, and He therefore says, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work."

The Jews, understanding the law of the Sabbath in a carnal sense, imagined that God was wearied by the labour of Creation, and was resting from fatigue. Think not that My Father so rested on the Sabbath as not to work any more; but as He worketh without labour, so I work. But it is said that God rested, because He made no more creatures after that all things were finished. (Gen. ii. 1, 2.)

God gave the precept of the Sabbath to be a shadow of the future, and to signify the spiritual rest which remaineth to the people of God (Heb. iv. 9); that is, to the faithful who have done good works in this present state of existence; and this Rest will begin when the six ages of the world (like the six days of creation) are past; and our Lord Himself confirmed the mystery of this rest by resting on the seventh day in the Grave, after He had completed His work, and had exclaimed, "It is finished" (John xix. 30). See also note on Matt. xxviii. 1.

—καὶ γὰρ ἐργάζομαι and I also am working. The Law of the Sabbath is the law of a Being who never rests from doing good. (Theoph.) See on Luke xiii. 16. What my Father made, He made without fatigue, by Me, Who work without labour; and when He governs, He governs by Me. Thus while He works I work. (Aug., Hilary de Trinit. vii.) The Father does not work except by the power and wisdom of the Son. (Cyril.) You think that the honour of the Sabbath has been disparaged by Me; but I never should have done what I have now done, unless I saw that the Father acts in like manner as I have now done; He does every thing which appertains to the constitution of the world and to the Sabbath, and does it all by Me. (Cyril.)

19. οὐ δύναται ὁ Υἱὸς ποιεῖν ἄφ' ἑαυτοῦ οὐδέν] the Son can do nothing of Himself save what He seeth the Father do. The substance of the Son is from the Father, and therefore the power of the Son is of the Father. His essence and power are synonymous. He can do nothing but what He sees the Father do; but this act of seeing is His eternal generation from the Father. As fire is to light, so is the Father to the Son; the Son who is begotten is co-eternal with the Father who begat Him. (Aug. See also Sermon. 126.) Athanas. adv. Gentes, 46, p. 37; also p. 226. The Word is the essential Wisdom, Reason, and Power of the Father. (Cp. 1 Cor. i. 24.)

For God does not see by bodily eyes, but His faculty of sight is in the virtue of His nature. (Hilary.)

When Christ says He can do nothing of Himself, He means nothing contrary to His Father's will; for He took our nature of Himself (Phil. ii. 6, 7), and died, and raised Himself (John x. 17, 18). (Chrys.)

—ἃ γὰρ ἂν ἐκεῖνος ποιῇ, ταῦτα καὶ κ.τ.λ.] whatsoever He doeth, these also doeth the Son in like manner. I work His Works as being ever from Him. The Son is the Virtue by which the Father works all things, and ever is in the Father, and declares His will by act. (Cyril.)

We are not to imagine that the two Persons of the Trinity are as it were two Artificers—the one a Master workman, the other his Scholar, so that according as the former makes a chest, the other makes another after him. Therefore our Lord does not say, whatever the Father does, the Son does other things like what the Father does; but He says that the Son does the same things. The Father made the world, the Son made the world, and the Holy Ghost made the world; one and the same world was made by the Father, through the Son, by the Holy Spirit.

We are not to suppose that Christ's power of working comes by increments of strength, supplied to Him from time to time, but from consciousness; and not so from consciousness, that the Son does subsequently what He has previously seen the Father do. But since the Son is begotten of the Father by a consciousness of His Father's power and nature in Himself, He testifies that the Son can do nothing but what He sees the Father do. (Cp. Aug. here.)

He adds the word ὁμοίως, in like manner, lest another error should rise in our minds. A servant does some things at the command of his master, the same thing is done by both, but is it done likewise? No. Therefore the Father and the Son are not in the relation of master and servant to each other. But the Son does the same things as the Father, and He does them in like manner, that is, with the same power as the Father. The Son therefore is equal to the Father. (Aug.; and see Greg. Nazian. p. 547.) It is necessary to guard the reader against the errors here noticed; which are found in a note, on this passage, derived from one of the subtlet of modern Arians, Dr. Samuel Clarke, and circulated in one of the most popular Commentaries in the English language. "I do every thing in imitation of Him and by His direction and appointment." See also the same writer's note on John xi. 41. The same caution must be given against the tendency of some notes from Dr. Whitby, whose antitrinitarian bias, afterwards openly declared in his opposition to Bp. Bull, and refuted by Waterland, is sometimes visible in them, e.g. on v. 17, "I, after His example, work that which is good." The teaching of S. Hilary, S. Athanasius, S. Cyril, and S. Augustine may serve as a corrective of these erroneous notions.

20. Ὁ Πατὴρ φιλεῖ τὸν Υἱόν, καὶ πάντα δείκνυσιν αὐτῷ] The Father loveth the Son, and sheweth Him all things that He Himself doeth. Not that the Father shows every thing to the Son by His own working, but He works through the Son by showing what He does. For the Son sees the Father showing what He does, before any thing is done; and whatever is done by the Father through the Son, is done from the Father's demonstration, and from the Son seeing what is shown. (Aug.) We are not to suppose that the only-begotten Word, Who is God, receives any teaching by demonstration. The demonstration of works inculcates here a faith in Christ's eternal generation. (Hilary, de Trin. vii.) Christ sees God by being born of God. (Aug.)

—μεῖζονα τούτων δείξει αὐτῷ ἔργα] He will show Him greater works than these. He will show Him the Resurrection of the Body and the Regeneration of the Soul. But how can He be said to show these things to the Son, co-eternal with the Father? He shows them to Him as Man; for the body will be raised at the general resurrection by the voice of the Son of Man. (Aug.)

22. ὁ Πατὴρ κρίνει οὐδένα] the Father judgeth no man. In that the Father begat the Son co-equal with Himself, and has given all judgment to the Son, the Father will judge the World with the Son; but the Father judgeth no man, because the form of God will not be visible at the Judgment-day, but the form of the Son of Man, which He received from us. At the Judgment-day no one will see the Father; but every one will see the Son; because He is the Son of Man. Those on the right hand will see Him, and those on the left hand will see Him; and both will hear His voice. But after the Judgment the righteous shall see God; for "blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God" (Matt. v. 8). (Aug.) See also below, note on v. 27, and Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. vii. pp. 554—5, 60 and notes.

οὐδένα, ἀλλ' τὴν κρίσιν πᾶσαν δέδωκε τῷ Τίῳ, ²³ ἵνα πάντες τιμῶσι τὸν Τῖον, ¹¹ John 2. 23. καθὼς τιμῶσι τὸν Πατέρα. Ὁ μὴ τιμῶν τὸν Τῖον οὐ τιμᾷ τὸν Πατέρα τὸν πέμψαντα αὐτόν.

($\frac{40}{1}$) ²⁴ Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ὁ τὸν λόγον μου ἀκούων καὶ πιστεύων τῷ πέμψαντί με ἔχει ζωὴν αἰώνιον, καὶ εἰς κρίσιν οὐκ ἔρχεται, ἀλλὰ μεταβέβηκεν ἐκ τοῦ θανάτου εἰς τὴν ζωὴν.

($\frac{41}{x}$) ²⁵ Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ἔρχεται ὥρα, καὶ νῦν ἐστίν, ὅτε οἱ νεκροὶ ἀκούσονται τῆς φωνῆς τοῦ Τῖου τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ οἱ ἀκούσαντες ζήσονται. ²⁶ ὥσπερ γὰρ ὁ Πατὴρ ἔχει ζωὴν ἐν ἑαυτῷ, οὕτως ἔδωκε καὶ τῷ Τίῳ ζωὴν ἔχειν ἐν ἑαυτῷ. ²⁷ καὶ ἔξουσιν αὐτῷ καὶ κρίσιν ποιεῖν, ὅτι Τῖος ἀνθρώπου ἐστί. ²⁸ Μὴ θαυμάζετε τοῦτο· ὅτι ἔρχεται ὥρα, ἐν ᾗ πάντες οἱ ἐν τοῖς μνημείοις ἀκούσονται τῆς φωνῆς αὐτοῦ, ²⁹ καὶ ἐκπορεύσονται· οἱ τὰ ἀγαθὰ ποιήσαντες εἰς ἀνάστασιν ζῶσι, οἱ δὲ τὰ φαῦλα πράξαντες εἰς ἀνάστασιν κρίσεως.

($\frac{42}{1}$) ³⁰ Οὐ δύναμαι ἐγὼ ποιεῖν ἀπ' ἑμαντοῦ οὐδέν· καθὼς ἀκούω, κρίνω· καὶ

— τὴν κρίσιν πᾶσαν δέδωκε] He hath delivered the work of Judging, totally, to the Son—totam Ei soli dedit.

²³ ἵνα πάντες τιμῶσι τὸν Τῖον] in order that all may honour the Son even as they honour the Father. This Scripture refutes various forms of Heresy. It shows that Christ is the Son, because He does nothing of Himself, and that He is God, because whatever the Father does He does; and that He is One with the Father, because all must honour Him as they honour the Father; and that He is not the Father, because He is sent by the Father. (Hilary, de Trin. vii.) They despise the Father of Heaven, who do not give equal honour to the Son; and we must honour the Son as we honour the Father, if we desire to honour the Father and the Son. (Aug., Chrys.)

²⁴ μεταβέβηκεν ἐκ τοῦ θανάτου] He does not say will pass, but is already passed; that is, he has passed from the death, the death of unbelief, to the life of faith; and from the death of sin to the life of righteousness.

— εἰς τὴν [ζωὴν] to the life; i. e. to life eternal; for this present life on earth does not deserve to be called life; there is no true life but what is eternal.

²⁵ ἔρχεται ὥρα, καὶ νῦν ἐστίν] the hour cometh and now is. Our Lord is about to speak of two Resurrections;

The first Resurrection is that which is not universal; it is the Resurrection of the soul from the death of sin.

The second Resurrection is that of all bodies from their graves at the last day.

If we believe the Gospel, and have been baptized, we have already risen by the first resurrection; and we, who have so risen, have risen to eternal life, if we endure in faith to the end, we have passed from the death unto the life, i. e. from that which is indeed death—sin—to that which is indeed life—the life of Christ. And then we shall rise hereafter and be equal to the Angels in Heaven. Luke xx. 36.

Let us therefore so live now as they who have already risen from the grave of sin, that we may rise hereafter with joy in our bodies to life everlasting. (Cp. Aug.)

See also Aug. Sermon 127, on the Two Resurrections here described by our blessed Lord. See also Macarius (Hom. xxxvi. p. 193), who says, “the Resurrection of dead souls now is; the Resurrection of dead bodies will be at the Great Day;” and Bp. Andrewes, Sermon xvi.

So the Church of England speaks in the Book of Common Prayer, “Baptism doth represent unto us our profession, which is to follow the example of our Saviour Christ, and to be made like unto Him; that as He died and rose again, so should we, who are baptized, die unto sin and rise again unto righteousness, continually mortifying all our evil and corrupt affections, and daily proceeding in all virtue and godliness of living.” See also the Collect for Easter Even, and compare notes below on Rom. vi. 3—11, and Col. iii. 1—5, and Rev. xx. 5, 6.

— οἱ νεκροὶ] the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; the dead in trespasses and sins (see Eph. ii. 1. 3 6; v. 14. Rom. vi. 4, 5), for we are buried with Him by Baptism into Death. (Col. ii. 13; iii. 1. 3.)

They who do not believe, or who, believing, do not live holy lives, and have not charity, are dead. Some of them shall hear; that is, shall hearken to the voice of the Son of God in the Gospel; and they that hear, i. e. that obey (‘qui audierint’), shall live. (Aug.)

— τοῦ Τῖου τοῦ Θεοῦ] of the Son of God. He does not here say the Son of Man, because He is representing to us that in which He is equal to the Father. By our incorporation in Him we are reconciled and united to God; and we, who by nature were children of the old Adam and sons of wrath (Eph. ii. 3), become sons of God (i. 12). See v. 26. (Aug.)

²⁷ ἐξουσιν αὐτῷ] He gave Him authority. He gave it to Him as Son of Man: for as Son of God He possessed it from eternity. God now raises the soul by Christ as Son of God (v. 25). He will raise all the bodies of men at the general resurrection by Christ as Son of Man. (Aug.)

— κρίσιν ποιεῖν, ὅτι Τῖος ἀνθρώπου ἐστί] to execute judgment also, because He is the Son of Man. For the form of Man will come visibly to judge; that form of Man which was once judged will judge; He who once stood before the judge will sit as Judge of all; He who was once falsely condemned as guilty will justly condemn the guilty. It is fit that they who are to be judged should behold their Judge; and both the good and wicked must be judged. It follows as a consequence, that in the Judgment, the form of a servant which Christ bore should be shown both to the good and wicked; but the Form of God will be manifested to the good alone. (Aug. Sermon lxi.)

²⁸ ἔρχεται ὥρα] the hour cometh. See above, note on v. 25. He does not add now is, because the Resurrection of which He is about to speak is future,—i. e. is the General Resurrection of the Body at the end of the world, at the last trump. (Aug.)

— πάντες οἱ ἐν τοῖς μνημείοις] all they that are in the graves. The bodies of men are in the graves, and not their souls. The souls of the righteous departed are now in Abraham's bosom, and those of the wicked are now in misery. See above on Luke xvi. 23.

He had before spoken of men's souls (v. 25), and then He did not say that all who are dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; i. e. obey it and believe; for some would remain in unbelief.

But He now says, that all who are in the graves will rise; He does not say here that all will live, as He had said before of all who believe, and by believing have passed from death to life; because some who come forth from their graves will not rise to life eternal, but will go into the resurrection of damnation. (Aug.)

Our Lord here guards by anticipation against the error of Hymenæus and Philetus, who took occasion from the doctrine of the First Resurrection by faith, to deny the Second Resurrection, or General Resurrection of the Body. 2 Tim. ii. 17, 18. (Aug.)

Consider also the words of the Athanasian Creed, declaring the sense of the Church concerning this passage of Scripture,—“At Whose Coming all men shall rise again with their bodies,” &c.; and examine the bearing of these words on the opinion that at Christ's second Advent the righteous only will rise with their bodies, and that He will reign with them for a thousand years upon earth. See below on Rev. xx. 1—7.

²⁹ ποιήσαντες—πράξαντες] Observe ποιεῖν applied to good, πράσσειν to evil. Good which is made and done has permanence for ever. Evil practised upon earth produces no good fruit for eternity.

³⁰ καθὼς ἀκούω, κρίνω] As the Father in Me speaks, so I hear, and pronounce judgment. (Aug.)

— τοῦ πεμψαντός με] Πατὴρ is added by some MSS., but it is not in A, B, D, K, L, Δ, Δ, and many Versions and Fathers.

ἡ κρίσις ἡ ἐμὴ δικαία ἐστίν· ὅτι οὐ ζητῶ τὸ θέλημα τὸ ἐμὸν, ἀλλὰ τὸ θέλημα τοῦ πέμψαντός με. ⁽⁴³⁾ ^x 31 Ἐὰν ἐγὼ μαρτυρῶ περὶ ἑαυτοῦ, ἡ μαρτυρία μου οὐκ ἔστιν ἀληθής. ³² Ἄλλος ἐστὶν ὁ μαρτυρῶν περὶ ἐμοῦ, καὶ οἶδα ὅτι ἀληθής ἐστὶν ἡ μαρτυρία ἣν μαρτυρεῖ περὶ ἐμοῦ. ³³ Ὑμεῖς ἀπεστάλκατε πρὸς Ἰωάννην, καὶ μεμαρτύρηκε τῇ ἀληθείᾳ· ³⁴ ἐγὼ δὲ οὐ παρὰ ἀνθρώπου τὴν μαρτυρίαν λαμβάνω· ἀλλὰ ταῦτα λέγω ἵνα ὑμεῖς σωθῆτε. ³⁵ Ἐκεῖνος ἦν ὁ λύχνος ὁ καίόμενος καὶ φαίνων, ὑμεῖς δὲ ἠθελήσατε ἀγαλλιαθῆναι πρὸς ὥραν ἐν τῷ φωτὶ αὐτοῦ. ³⁶ Ἐγὼ δὲ ἔχω τὴν μαρτυρίαν μείζω τοῦ Ἰωάννου· τὰ γὰρ ἔργα αὐτοῦ ἐδωκέ μοι ὁ Πατὴρ ἵνα τελειώσω αὐτὰ, αὐτὰ τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ ἐγὼ ποιῶ, μαρτυρεῖ περὶ ἐμοῦ, ὅτι ὁ Πατὴρ με ἀπέσταλκε· ³⁷ καὶ ὁ πέμψας με Πατὴρ αὐτὸς μεμαρτύρηκε περὶ ἐμοῦ. ⁽⁴⁴⁾ ⁱⁱⁱ Οὐτε φωνὴν αὐτοῦ πρόποτε ἀκηκόατε, οὐτε εἶδος αὐτοῦ ἐωράκατε· ⁽⁴⁵⁾ ^x ³⁸ καὶ τὸν λόγον αὐτοῦ οὐκ ἔχετε μένοντα ἐν ὑμῖν, ὅτι ὃν ἀπέστειλεν ἐκεῖνος τούτῳ ὑμεῖς οὐ πιστεύετε. ³⁹ Ἐρευνᾶτε τὰς γραφὰς, ὅτι ὑμεῖς δοκεῖτε ἐν αὐταῖς ζωὴν αἰώνιον ἔχειν, καὶ ἐκεῖναί εἰσιν αἱ μαρτυροῦσαι περὶ ἐμοῦ· ⁴⁰ καὶ οὐ θέλετε ἐλθεῖν πρὸς με, ἵνα ζωὴν ἔχητε. ⁴¹ Δόξαν παρὰ ἀνθρώπων οὐ λαμβάνω· ⁴² ἀλλὰ ἔγνωκα ὑμᾶς, ὅτι τὴν ἀγάπην τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐκ ἔχετε ἐν ἑαυτοῖς. ⁴³ Ἐγὼ ἐλήλυθα ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Πατρὸς μου, καὶ οὐ λαμβάνετε με· ἐὰν ἄλλος ἔλθῃ ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τῷ ἰδίῳ ἐκεῖνον λήψεσθε. ⁴⁴ Πῶς δύνασθε ὑμεῖς πιστεῦσαι δόξαν παρὰ ἀλλήλων λαμβάνοντες, καὶ τὴν δόξαν τὴν παρὰ τοῦ μόνου Θεοῦ οὐ ζητεῖτε; ⁴⁵ Μὴ δοκεῖτε ὅτι ἐγὼ κατηγορήσω ὑμῶν πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα· ἔστιν ὁ κατηγορῶν ὑμῶν Μωϋσῆς.

31. Ἐὰν ἐγὼ μαρτυρῶ περὶ ἑαυτοῦ, ἡ μαρτυρία μου οὐκ ἔστιν ἀληθής] If I bear witness of Myself, My witness is not true; that is, would be liable to suspicion from you; for no one is regarded as a credible witness in his own behalf; He therefore appeals to three several other testimonies,—the witness of John the Baptist, His miracles, and the testimony of His Father. (Chrys., Aug.)

33. Ὑμεῖς ἀπεστάλκατε] Ye have sent to John, and he hath borne witness. That is done, and it ought to have convinced you. You yourselves, yea, even your greatest men, Priests and Pharisees, have sent to John; you have thus proved your reverence for his testimony, and you even sent to ask his witness concerning himself,—“Who art thou?” (John i. 19.) and he then bare witness of Me. (Chrys.)

34. τὴν μαρτυρίαν] My testimony; the witness on which I rely.

35. Ἐκεῖνος ἦν ὁ λύχνος] He was that lamp (λύχνος) that was kindled and shone,—that greatest of Prophets. (Matt. xi. 11. Luke vii. 28.) All the Prophets were lamps (λύχνοι) kindled from heaven. The phrase κατεῖν λύχνον is in Matt. v. 15. Luke xii. 35. But Christ is the Light itself (τὸ φῶς). He is the true Light—the Light of the World—from which these lamps were kindled; and when the Light shone forth in the full lustre of mighty words and deeds, then the lamps disappeared. (Aug.) “Lychnus orto soli non foenerat lucem.” (Bengel.) —ἀγαλλιαθῆναι] You were willing enough to rejoice in his light, but not to walk in the way which he showed you. Cp. Ezek. xxxiii. 32.

36. τὰ γὰρ ἔργα—μαρτυρεῖ] for the works which the Father gave Me to finish, the very works which I am doing bear witness of Me. Moses bare witness to Christ, so did John and the other Prophets; but Christ prefers the testimony of His works to all their testimonies, because God did indeed give witness to His Son by Moses and by John; but by His works, God in the Son manifests the Son; and when we come to the Son we need go no further. We want no lamps, when we come to the Light. We need not dig deeper when we come to the Rock. (Aug.)

37. Οὐτε φωνὴν αὐτοῦ πρόποτε ἀκηκόατε] Ye have never heard His voice. A reply to the plea of the Jews,—“We know that God spake unto Moses” (John ix. 29). Ye boast of your knowledge of God, but ye know nothing of Him. Ye reject Him Whom God hath sent. He answers their thoughts, and so proves Himself God, Equal and One with the Father. (Cyril.)

39. Ἐρευνᾶτε τὰς γραφὰς] Search ye the Scriptures. ἐρευνᾶτε used by LXX for Hebr. חָפַץ (chaphas), ‘rimari, perscrutari.’ (Gen. xxxi. 35; xlv. 12.) It is probably the imperative mood. Cp. vii. 52.

—τὰς γραφὰς] ‘your Scriptures.’ The Son of God, therefore, Who knows all things, acknowledged the Holy Scriptures in the hands of the Jews. They received them as the pure and inspired Word of God, and He acknowledged the Scriptures to be what they accounted them to be, and He appealed to them as such. Whosoever therefore denies the Integrity and Inspiration of the Old Testament, rejects the testimony of Christ, the Son of God, and Judge of all. See on Luke xvi. 31.

And lest the Jews should ask, When hath the Father borne witness of thee? He refers them to the Scriptures, which they acknowledged to be from God. But observe, He commends the Scriptures to them not only for reading, but for diligent search. He did not say Read, but Search; search as for a treasure hidden in the earth. So let us Christians, when we contend with heretics, arm ourselves with weapons from thence. For all Scripture inspired by God is also profitable for doctrine, for reproof (or refutation of error), that the man of God may be perfect (2 Tim. iii. 16). (Chrys. Hom. 40, 41.)

—ὕμεῖς δοκεῖτε] ye think that in them ye have eternal life; but it is a vain imagination, if ye merely admire the Scriptures, and read the Scriptures, but do not search the Scriptures and believe the Scriptures, which testify of Me. (Chrys.) What is the use of having the Scriptures, if you do not believe in Him of Whom they testify? (Cyril.) Search the Scriptures, in order that your opinion that in them ye have eternal life may not be a mere empty theory; and in order that ye may find Me in the Scriptures which testify of Me, and declare that the Eternal Life of which they speak is to be found in Me, and only in Me.

40. οὐ θέλετε] ye are not willing. If therefore a man perishes, it is not by God’s will, but by his own sin. See 1 Tim. ii. 4. 2 Pet. iii. 9. Ezek. xxxiii. 11.

43. ἐὰν ἄλλος] if another come in his own name, him ye will receive. The Jews rejected the true Messiah, and now more than sixty false Messiahs have arisen among them from time to time, who have come in their own name, and whom they have received. (Bengel.)

The Fathers generally held an opinion, grounded on this passage, that Antichrist would be received by the Jews.

44. παρὰ τοῦ μόνου Θεοῦ] from the Only God. (1 Tim. i. 17.) Lest the Jews should imagine that He was contravening their Law which says (Deut. vi. 4), “the Lord our God is One Lord,” because He had spoken of Himself and the Father as Two Persons (vv. 17—23), He here affirms the Divine Unity, and teaches them that they who profess zeal for the ONE God do not honour Him aright (see v. 23), unless they honour the Son even as they honour the Father. A warning to those who claim for themselves the title of Unitarians, and deny the Divinity of Christ. No one can be said to believe in the Divine Unity who rejects the doctrine of the Trinity.

εἰς ὃν ὑμεῖς ἠλπικάτε. ⁴⁶ ^a Εἰ γὰρ ἐπιστεύετε Μωϋσῇ, ἐπιστεύετε ἂν ἐμοί· περὶ γὰρ ἐμοῦ ἐκείνος ἔγραψεν. ⁴⁷ Εἰ δὲ τοῖς ἐκείνου γράμμασιν οὐ πιστεύετε, πῶς τοῖς ἐμοῖς ῥήμασι πιστεύσετε ;

VI. (⁴⁶/_I) ¹ Μετὰ ταῦτα ἀπῆλθεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς πέραν τῆς θαλάσσης τῆς Γαλιλαίας τῆς Τιβεριάδος· ² καὶ ἠκολούθει αὐτῷ ὄχλος πολὺς, ὅτι ἐώρων τὰ σημεῖα ἃ ἐποίει ἐπὶ τῶν ἀσθενούντων.

(⁴⁷/_{III}) ³ Ἀνῆλθε δὲ εἰς τὸ ὄρος ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἐκεῖ ἐκάθητο μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ.

(⁴⁸/_I) ⁴ ^a Ἦν δὲ ἐγγὺς τὸ πάσχα, ἡ ἑορτὴ τῶν Ἰουδαίων.

(⁴⁹/_I) ⁵ ^b Ἐπάρας οὖν τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ θεασάμενος ὅτι πολὺς ὄχλος ἔρχεται πρὸς αὐτὸν λέγει πρὸς τὸν Φίλιππον, Πόθεν ἀγοράσωμεν ἄρτους, ἵνα φάγωσιν οὗτοι ; ⁶ τοῦτο δὲ ἔλεγε πειράζων αὐτόν· αὐτὸς γὰρ ᾔδει τί ἔμελλε ποιεῖν. ⁷ Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ Φίλιππος, Διακοσίων δηναρίων ἄρτοι οὐκ ἀρκούσιν αὐτοῖς, ἵνα ἕκαστος αὐτῶν βραχύ τι λάβῃ. ⁸ Λέγει αὐτῷ εἰς ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ, Ἀνδρέας ὁ ἀδελφὸς Σίμωνος Πέτρου, ⁹ ^c Ἔστι παιδάριον ἐν ᾧδε, ὃς ἔχει ^c 2 Kings 4. 43. πέντε ἄρτους κριθίνους καὶ δύο ὀψάρια· ἀλλὰ ταῦτα τί ἔστιν εἰς τοσούτους ; ¹⁰ Εἶπε δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ποιήσατε τοὺς ἀνθρώπους ἀναπεσεῖν· ἦν δὲ χόρτος πολὺς ἐν τῷ τόπῳ· ἀνέπεσον οὖν οἱ ἄνδρες τὸν ἀριθμὸν ὥστε πεντακισχίλιοι. ¹¹ ^d Ἐλαβε δὲ τοὺς ἄρτους ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ εὐχαριστήσας διέδωκε τοῖς μαθηταῖς, ^d 1 Sam. 9. 13.

CH. VI. 1. Μετὰ ταῦτα] After these things. See on Matt. xiv. 13—21, and cp. Mark vi. 30—44. Luke ix. 10—17. This is one of the few points at which all the narratives of the Four Evangelists touch one another and meet. This was just before the last Passover but one (v. 4). There is a similar coincidence just before the last Passover (xii. 12).

St. John by his silence, where he is silent, confirms what had been already said by the other three Evangelists. Here, where he speaks, he also confirms what they had said, by his agreement with it, and by adding to it. "Hoc unicum miraculum inter baptismum et passionem Christi, Johannes unā cum reliquis Evangelistis describit, narrativum eorum hoc ipso confirmans." (Bengel.) See above, Introduction, p. 258.

For a Summary of the contents of this chapter and their connexion, see below, the note at end of this chapter, p. 302.

—Τιβεριάδος] Tiberias, on the western coast of the Sea of Galilee; built by Herod Antipas, Tetrarch of Galilee, and named after Tiberius Cæsar. Joseph. Ant. xviii. 3. 3. Relandi Palestina p. 259 sq. Now Tabaria (Robinson, Pal. iii. 500. Winer, p. 620). Cp. John xxi. 1. St. John alone of the Evangelists uses the word Tiberias. Hence an argument arises for the genuineness of ch. xxi.

2. ἐώρων τὰ σημεῖα] they were seeing the miracles; which the Evangelist passes by without further description (Chrys., cp. xxi. 25), and because many of them had been related in the other Gospels.

3. τὸ ὄρος] the Mountain Region. See above on Matt. v. 1, and v. 15. There it is the mountain region on the N.E. of the lake near Bethsaida. Luke ix. 10.

4. πάσχα] the Passover. And therefore there was an ὄχλος πολὺς, a great multitude going to Jerusalem.

The Passover.—The mention of a great multitude is significant here. He was about to work a Miracle—that of the Feeding of the Five Thousand—which was figurative and prophetic of that other Feeding, of which He afterwards speaks (vi. 53), and which was to date from the next ensuing Passover, when He who is the true Bread that came down from heaven (as He declares in this chapter, vv. 33. 48. 50) was about to institute the Holy Sacrament of His own Body and Blood, by which He offers to feed all men in all ages and nations of the World, in the Universal Church, even unto the end; and at which Passover He was about to give His Body to be broken and His Blood to be shed on the Cross, by which He gave divine efficacy and virtue to that Sacrament for the preservation of their souls and bodies unto everlasting Life.

See Burgon's Commentary, for some excellent remarks on this chapter.

5. ἀγοράσωμεν] So A, B, E, H, L, S, and others. Elz. has ἀγοράσομεν, which would imply an intention of buying.

6. ἔλεγε πειράζων] He put the question not in order to learn, but to teach the disciple his ignorance. Chrys., who compares the case of Abraham, Gen. xxi. This mention of Philip here, and of Andrew in v. 8, is peculiar to the narrative of St. John; and he alone mentions that the loaves were of barley. He thus shows his own independent and minute knowledge of the circumstances of this miracle. St. John has other notices, peculiar to his Gospel, of Philip and Andrew his fellow-townsmen. See i. 40. 43, and xii. 21, 22; and of Philip, xiv. 8, 9.

9. παιδάριον ἐν] one person, and he a child; and he has only five loaves; and they of barley; and two fishes, and they small. The loaves are of barley; yet all eat and are filled. In the eyes of unregenerate Reason, the visible elements of the Sacraments are simple and mean, and despised by man—mere 'barley loaves,' brought by the childish simplicity of a παιδάριον. But all they who receive them with faith are filled with food from heaven by the hand of Christ.

—κριθίνους] barley; i. e. of the homeliest kind. Panibus hordeaceis apud veteres, homines plerumque vilioris sortis utebantur, v. 2 Regg. vii. 1. 16. 18. Ezech. iv. 12. Pesachim fol. iii. 2, Jochanan dixit: hordeum factum est pulchrum. Dixerunt: Nuntia hoc equis et asinis. Seneca ep. 18, non enim jucunda res est aqua, et potentia, et fructum hordeacei panis. Augustus, ut Sueton. V. Aug. c. 24, tradit, cohortes, si quæ cessissent, decimatas hordeo pavit. Frontinus iv. 1, 37, legatum cum ignominia dimisit, reliquis ex legionibus hordeum dari jussit. Liv. xxvii. 13, cohortibus, quæ signa amiserant, hordeum dari jussit, v. Wetsten. p. 876, Lamp. (Kuin.) Cp. Rev. vi. 6, where κριθῆ is contrasted with σίτος.

—ὀψάρια] A word peculiar to St. John (vi. 9. 11; xxi. 9, 10. 13), dim. from ὕψον. Hence ψαρί, the modern Greek word for fish.

All the other three Evangelists use the word ἰχθύες here. (Matt. xiv. 17. Mark vi. 38. Luke ix. 13.)

Ὀψάριον (from ὕψον, from ὀπτᾶω, ἔψω, to cook) is literally any thing cooked, and eaten as an adjunct to bread; and since fish was commonly used for this purpose, therefore ὕψον, ὀψάριον, signify fish.

Suidas: ὀψάριον τὸ ἰχθύδιον. Phavorinus: ὕψον ἰστέον δὲ καὶ ὡς οἱ ὕστερον ἐπὶ μόνου ἰχθύος τὴν λέξιν ὤρισαν—ὕβεν καὶ ὀψάριον. Eustath. in Hom. Il. λ'. p. 814, ὕψον ἀπλῶς φασι οἱ παλαιοὶ πᾶν τὸ σῖναμα σιτίους ἐσθιόμενον—ιστέον δὲ καὶ ὡς οἱ ὕστερον ἐπὶ μόνου ἰχθύος τὴν λέξιν ὤρισαν. Terent. Andr. ii. 2, paululum obsoni—pisciculos minutos. Kuin. Welst. p. 877.

10. ἦν δὲ χόρτος πολὺς ἐν τῷ τόπῳ] there was much grass in the place, and it was green, for it was the season of Spring, the Passover being near. (Theoph.) A beautiful figure also of the "green pastures" (Ps. xxiii. 2), in which Christ feeds His people in the ministry of His Word and Sacraments, where He "prepares a Table for them in the wilderness" (v. 5).

11. Ἐλαβε δὲ τοὺς ἄρτους] And Jesus took the loaves. Hence we may confute the Marcionites and the Manichæans, who condemn the visible creation, and say that it was made by an Evil Principle. Christ, who is God, might have made bread from nothing; but He designed to show that the creatures are good; for a Exod. 12. 18.

Lev. 23. 5.
Numb. 28. 16.
Deut. 16. 1.
b Matt. 14. 15.
Mark 6. 35.
Luke 9. 12.

οἱ δὲ μαθηταὶ τοῖς ἀνακειμένοις· ὁμοίως καὶ ἐκ τῶν ὀψαρίων ὅσον ᾗθελον.
 12 Ὡς δὲ ἐνεπλήσθησαν, λέγει τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, Συναγάγετε τὰ περισσεύσαντα κλάσματα, ἵνα μὴ τι ἀπολήται. 13 Συνήγαγον οὖν, καὶ ἐγένισαν δώδεκα κοφίνους κλασμάτων ἐκ τῶν πέντε ἄρτων τῶν κριθίνων, ἃ ἐπερίσσευσεν τοῖς βεβρωκόσιν. ($\frac{50}{x}$) 14 Ὁ οὖν ἄνθρωποι ἰδόντες ὃ ἐποίησε σημεῖον ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἔλεγον, Ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ἀληθῶς ὁ προφήτης ὁ ἐρχόμενος εἰς τὸν κόσμον.
 15 Ἰησοῦς οὖν γνοὺς ὅτι μέλλουσιν ἔρχεσθαι καὶ ἀρπάξαι αὐτὸν, ἵνα ποι-ῇσωσιν αὐτὸν βασιλέα, ἀνεχώρησε πάλιν εἰς τὸ ὄρος αὐτὸς μόνος. ($\frac{51}{iv}$) 16 Ὡς δὲ ὀψία ἐγένετο, κατέβησαν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τὴν θάλασσαν· καὶ ἐμβάντες εἰς τὸ πλοῖον ἤρχοντο πέραν τῆς θαλάσσης εἰς Καφαρναούμ. 17 Καὶ σκοτία ἦδη ἐγεγόνει, καὶ οὐκ ἐληλύθει πρὸς αὐτοὺς ὁ Ἰησοῦς. 18 Ἥ τε θάλασσα ἀνέμου μεγάλου πνέοντος διηγείρετο. 19 Ἑλληκαότες οὖν ὡς σταδίους εἰκοσιπέντε ἢ τριάκοντα θεωροῦσι τὸν Ἰησοῦν περιπατοῦντα ἐπὶ τῆς θαλάσσης, καὶ ἐγγὺς τοῦ πλοίου γινόμενον· καὶ ἐφοβήθησαν. 20 Ὁ δὲ λέγει αὐτοῖς, Ἐγὼ εἰμι· μὴ φοe Deut. 18. 15.

 Luke 7. 16.
 & 24. 19.
 ch. i. 21. & 4. 19.
 & 7. 40.

f Matt. 14. 22.
 Mark 6. 47.

He who is good would never have multiplied that which is evil. (Theoph.)

— εὐχαριστήσας] having given thanks. Cp. v. 23, εὐχαριστήσαντος τοῦ Κυρίου. The other Evangelists (who all use εὐλογεῖν here) use this word in relating the Institution of the Eucharist (Matt. xxvi. 26, 27. Mark xiv. 22. Luke xxii. 19), to which this Miracle was preparatory. See above, v. 4, and below, v. 23, and see on 1 Cor. xiv. 16.

— διέδωκε] He distributed. By the same divine power as that with which He multiplies the ears of corn from the grain sown in the fields, He now multiplies in His own hands the loaves, which were like unto seed—not indeed committed to the earth, but multiplied by Him who made it. (Aug.) See above, on the Miracle of changing Water to Wine, ii. 11.

13. δώδεκα κοφίνους] twelve baskets. See on Matt. xiv. 20; xvi. 9. Why did He not give the fragments to the Multitude, but to the Disciples? In order to teach the Apostles who were to be the teachers of the world. Let us admire not only the greatness of the miracle, but the exact precision of the residue; twelve baskets, neither more nor less, according to the number of the Apostles. (Chrys.) We may also see the use of the baskets as a memento of the miracle to the Apostles; and therefore He afterwards refers to them, “How many baskets full took ye up?” (Matt. xvi. 9.) See above on ii. 6.

This Miracle was introductory to our Lord’s discourse at Capernaum concerning the Holy Sacrament of the Lord’s Supper, in which He Who is the true Bread of Life from Heaven, is ever distributing Himself by the hands of the Apostles, and an Apostolic Ministry, to the hungry and weary multitudes who are in this “desert place”—the wilderness of this world, and are going up to the heavenly Jerusalem to celebrate an everlasting festival. See on Matt. xiv. 20, and note below at the end of this Chapter.

14. οὗτός ἐστιν ἀληθῶς ὁ προφήτης] this is of a truth the Prophet. They had not yet learnt to acknowledge Him as God. Christ is a Prophet, and an Angel or Messenger, and the Lord of Prophets and of Angels, because He is the Word. (Aug., Alcuin.)

It is a greater thing to rule the world, than to multiply five loaves into food for five thousand; and yet men do not admire and adore and obey Christ, in His continual government of the Universe. We ought not so to regard Christ’s miracles, as to confine our eyes to Him on the mountains of earth. He is enthroned King of Kings and Lord of Lords in heaven (cp. Aug.); and sustains all things by His Providence and Power. See Matt. xiv. 20, and on Col. i. 16, 17.

15. ἐρχεσθαι καὶ ἀρπάξαι—βασιλέα] to come and take Him by force and make Him a King. Christ is indeed a King, the Prince of the Kings of the Earth. (Rev. i. 5.) His faithful people are His Kingdom, which He has purchased with His precious blood. And hereafter His kingdom will be manifest, and the glory of His saints will appear. But the Disciples and the multitude imagined that He had come into the world in order to reign over it in person. This was to take Christ by force and make Him King. (Cp. Aug.)

— ἀνεχώρησε—αὐτὸς μόνος] He withdrew again to the mountain Himself alone. Christ has now withdrawn Himself from this world, and has gone up by Himself alone to the highest heaven to pray for us; and thence He looks down upon us, struggling in the storms of the world, and rowing in the bark of His Church; and in His own due time, after a trial of our faith and obedience, He will come to us walking on the waves of this world; and will save us when we seem to be perishing in the waterflood. See above on Matt. xiv. 23.

16. ὀψία] evening; soon succeeded by σκοτία (v. 17).

— ἤρχοντο] were going in the ship, on their passage across the Sea.

17. οὐκ ἐληλύθει—ὁ Ἰησοῦς] Jesus had not come to them. Christ in His love leaves His disciples, and is absent from them, even when they are in the sea, and in the storm and in the night; in order to exercise their faith, and quicken their desire for His presence and aid, and to show His knowledge of their needs, and to prove His power to help them. (Cp. Chrys., Cyril.)

19. σταδίους εἰκοσιπέντε ἢ τριάκοντα] five-and-twenty or thirty furlongs. The Holy Spirit inspires the Evangelists, but does not annihilate their human faculties, or destroy their personal identity. He reveals to them heavenly things beyond the range of time and space, but leaves them to calculate distances on earth and water by human measurement. He gives them Inspiration—but not Omniscience. Cp. Luke i. 56; iii. 23; ix. 14. 28; xxii. 59. John iv. 6; xi. 18; xix. 39. Acts i. 15; ii. 41; xix. 7; xxv. 6; and Lee’s Lectures on Inspiration, Lect. i. London, 1854.

— θεωροῦσι τὸν Ἰησοῦν περιπατοῦντα ἐπὶ τῆς θαλάσσης] they behold Jesus walking on the sea. Our Lord had returned to the mountain, and the disciples were rowing in the storm and in the darkness. The Ship in which they were, was an emblem of the Church. The waves and winds are the troubles that assail her; and the Ship is tossed in the storm. In proportion as the End of the World approaches, errors will increase, terrors will multiply, iniquity will abound, infidelity will prevail, the light of love will wane and be nearly extinct. The darkness will become more thick; and Jesus does not yet arrive. All this is going on, as Time proceeds, and as the world grows old, tribulation and calamities increase. But in due time, Christ, Who is the true Light, will come, walking on the waves; that is, treading beneath His feet all the proud billows and tumultuous swellings of this World. (Cp. Aug.)

Moses, as a servant, by the power of God divided the sea; but Christ, as Lord of all, by His own power walked on the sea. (Theoph.)

20. Ἐγὼ εἰμι] I am, the Everliving One, Jehovah, the Author of Life. I am always at hand and never pass by you, therefore be not afraid; but trust in Me. Our Lord allows us to be in trial and danger, to struggle in the storm, to endure for a long time, in order that our patience and perseverance and faith may be proved, and that we may resort to Him Who alone can save us. We are often in darkness and in storms, and the Devil and evil men assail and affright us: but let us listen to Christ’s voice, Ἐγὼ εἰμι, μὴ φοβείσθε, and when human help fails, then divine aid will come. Terrors pass by, but Christ never passes by. He ever says, “It is I.” I am He who always am, who ever remain; therefore have faith in Me. And if we are rowing in the Apostolic Ship of the Church, doing our duty there in our respective callings, and if we desire to receive Christ into the Ship, He will not only quell the storm, but give us a fair breeze, and we shall soon be at the harbour where we would be—the calm harbour of heavenly peace. They who are in the Ship, and are rowing in the storm; they who labour in the Church, and continue in good works to the end, will receive Christ, and will at length arrive at the waveless haven of everlasting life. (Cp. Aug. here.)

βεῖσθε. ²¹ *Ἦθελον οὖν λαβεῖν αὐτὸν εἰς τὸ πλοῖον, καὶ εὐθὺς τὸ πλοῖον ἐγένετο ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς εἰς ἣν ὑπῆγον.

($\frac{52}{x}$) ²² Τῇ ἐπαύριον ὁ ὄχλος ὁ ἐστηκὼς πέραν τῆς θαλάσσης, ἰδὼν ὅτι πλοῖάριον ἄλλο οὐκ ἦν ἐκεῖ εἰ μὴ ἐν ἐκείνῳ εἰς ὃ ἐνέβησαν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ ὅτι οὐ συνεισηῆλθε τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς τὸ πλοῖάριον, ἀλλὰ μόνοι οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ ἀπῆλθον· ²³ ἄλλα δὲ ἦλθε πλοῖάρια ἐκ Τιβεριάδος ἐγγὺς τοῦ τόπου ὅπου ἔφαγον τὸν ἄρτον εὐχαριστήσαντος τοῦ Κυρίου· ²⁴ ὅτε οὖν εἶδεν ὁ ὄχλος ὅτι Ἰησοῦς οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκεῖ, οὐδὲ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, ἐνέβησαν αὐτοὶ εἰς τὰ πλοῖα, καὶ ἦλθον εἰς Καφαρναοὺμ ζητοῦντες τὸν Ἰησοῦν.

²⁵ Καὶ εὐρόντες αὐτὸν πέραν τῆς θαλάσσης εἶπον αὐτῷ, Ῥαββί, πότε ᾤδε

²¹. *Ἦθελον λαβεῖν] they were desirous to receive Him. It is said by some Interpreters (e.g. Meyer here), that this is irreconcilable with the narrative of the other Evangelists, who say that our Lord was received into the Ship (see Matt. xiv. 32. Mark vi. 54), whereas it is alleged that St. John says here that they were only desirous to receive Him, but before He could enter the ship, the ship was at the shore.

But this allegation rests on an erroneous translation of St. John's words, ἤθελον λαβεῖν. They do not mean, that they desired to receive Him, and did not receive Him; but the sense is, they were willing and desirous to receive Him, and did receive Him; and then, after they had received Him, the ship was at land, by the divine power of Him Whom they had received.

The word ἤθελον is to be explained by what St. John knew, but did not record, because it had been related by the former Evangelists. At first the disciples were panic-struck, thinking He was a Spirit (Matt. xiv. 26), and cried out for fear (Mark vi. 49), and then they were not willing to receive Him. But Peter went on the water and was upheld by Christ (Matt. xiv. 28). And then they were no longer afraid, but were willing and desirous to receive Him. On this use of θέλω, see on viii. 44.

²². πλοῖάριον] A small ship; the greater the danger.

²³. ἐγγὺς] to the neighbourhood of the place, &c.

These other boats are mentioned, in order to explain how the people came to Capernaum.

— εὐχαριστήσαντος τοῦ Κυρίου] when the Lord had given thanks. Observe, εὐχαριστήσαντος and Κυρίου, both words appropriate here, in connexion with the Eucharist or Lord's Supper (εὐχαριστία, δέεινον Κυριακόν). The word Κύριος, Lord, is not often used in the Gospels when speaking of Christ; and, when it is used, it has a special significance. Cp. on Luke ii. 9; x. 1.

²⁵. Ῥαββί, πότε ᾤδε γέγονας:] Rabbi, when camest Thou, and how art Thou now, here? Jesus had come on the sea to the ship, and had brought the ship to land.

Our Lord had fed the multitude with bread; and in that miraculous Feeding He typified the distribution of the Bread of Life in the Holy Eucharist, even unto the end of the world; and He had thus prepared His hearers for His discourse on the Holy Eucharist in the Synagogue at Capernaum. Reason cannot understand how He is present there. And where Reason is weak, there Faith is strong. He gives no answer to the question concerning His presence—When camest Thou hither, and how art Thou here? He was there present, to be seen and heard; but as to the time and manner of his presence, which was miraculous, He says nothing. "His way is in the sea, and His paths in the great waters, and His footsteps are not known." (Ps. lxxvii. 19.)

By walking on the sea, invisibly to the eyes of the multitude, and suddenly presenting Himself to them in the synagogue at Capernaum, in a manner unintelligible to them, He instructs us, that, though He does indeed come by Water in Holy Baptism, and is verily and indeed present in the Holy Eucharist,—yet the manner of His presence is not to be scrutinized by us. Faith believes that He is present, and rejoices in His presence; and is satisfied with the pleasures of His presence, and craves nothing more. Let us not speculate inquisitively into the time and manner in which He is present in the Holy Eucharist, but let us receive Him joyfully in our hearts, as the disciples received Him into the ship; and then we shall soon be at the haven of peace, where we would be.

The words of Hooker on this subject (V. lxxvii.) deserve careful consideration:—"All things considered and compared with that success which truth hath hitherto had by so bitter conflicts with errors in this point (i.e. the nature and mode of Christ's presence in the Holy Eucharist), shall I wish that men would more give themselves to meditate with silence what we have by the Sacrament, and less to dispute of the manner how?"

"If any man suppose that this were too great stupidity and dullness, let us see whether the Apostles of our Lord themselves have not done the like. It appeareth by many examples, that they, of their own disposition, were very scrupulous and inquisitive,—yea, in other cases of less importance and less difficulty, always apt to move questions. How cometh it to pass that so few words of so high a mystery being uttered, they receive with gladness the gift of Christ, and make no show of doubt or scruple? The reason hereof is not dark to them who have any thing at all observed how the powers of the mind are wont to stir, when that which we infinitely long for presenteth itself above and besides expectation. Curious and intricate speculations do hinder, they abate, they quench such inflamed notions of delight and joy as divine graces use to raise when extraordinarily they are present. The mind, therefore, feeling present joy, is always marvellous unwilling to admit any other cogitation, and in that case casteth off those disputes whereunto the intellectual part at other times easily draweth.

"A manifest effect whereof may be noted, if we compare with our Lord's disciples, the people that are said in John vi. 24 to have gone after Him to Capernaum. These leaving Him on the one side of the sea of Tiberias, and finding Him again as soon as themselves by ship were arrived on the country side, whither they knew that by ship He came not, and by land the journey was longer than, according to the time, He could have travelled,—as they wondered, so they asked also, 'Rabbi, when camest thou hither?'"

"The disciples, when Christ appeared to them in far more strange and miraculous manner, moved no question, but rejoiced greatly in what they saw (John xx. 20). For why? The one sought and beheld only that in Christ which they knew was more than natural; but yet their affection was not rapt therewith through any great extraordinary gladness. The other, when they looked on Christ, were not ignorant that they saw the well-spring of their own everlasting felicity. The one, because they enjoyed not, disputed; the other disputed not, because they enjoyed.

"If, then, the presence of Christ with them did so much move, judge what their thoughts and affections were at the time of this new presentation of Christ, not before their eyes, but within their souls. They had learned before that His flesh and blood are the true cause of eternal life; that this they are not by the bare force of their own substance, but through the dignity and worth of His Person, which offered them up by way of sacrifice for the life of the whole world, and doth make them still effectual thereunto; finally, that to us they are life in particular, by being particularly received.

"Thus much they knew, although as yet they understood not perfectly to what effect or issue the same would come,—till at the length, being assembled for no other cause which they could imagine but to have eaten the Passover only that Moses appointeth, when they saw their Lord and Master, with hands and eyes lifted up to heaven, first bless and consecrate for the endless good of all generations till the world's end, the chosen elements of bread and wine,—which elements made for ever the instruments of life by virtue of His divine benediction, they being the first that were commanded to receive from Him,—the first which were warranted by His promise, that not only unto them at the present time, but to whomsoever they and their successors after them did duly administer the same, those mysteries should serve as conducts of life and conveyances of His body and blood unto them, was it possible they should hear that voice,—'Take eat, this is My body; drink ye all of this, this is My blood;' possible, that doing what was required, and believing what was promised, the same should have present effect in them, and not fill them with a kind of fearful admiration at the heaven which they saw in themselves? They had at that time a sea of comfort and joy to wade in; and we by that which they did are taught that this heavenly food is given for the satisfying of our empty souls, and not for the exercising of our curious and subtle wits.

g ch. 1. 32.
& 4. 14. & 5. 37.
& vv. 40, 54.
& 18. 8.
Matt. 3. 17.
& 17. 5.
Mark 1. 11.
& 9. 7.
Luke 3. 22.
& 9. 35.
2 Pet. 1. 17.
h 1 John 3. 23.
i Matt. 12. 38.
& 16. 1.
Mark 8. 11.
Luke 11. 29.
1 Cor. 1. 22.
k Exod. 16. 4, 15.
Numb. 11. 7.
Ps. 78. 24.
Wisd. 16. 20.
1 Cor. 10. 3.

l Isa. 55. 1.
ch. 4. 14.
& 7. 37.

γέγονας; ²⁶ Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν, Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ζητεῖτέ με, οὐχ ὅτι εἴδετε σημεῖα, ἀλλ' ὅτι ἐφάγετε ἐκ τῶν ἄρτων καὶ ἐχορτάσθητε. ²⁷ Ἔργάζεσθε μὴ τὴν βρῶσιν τὴν ἀπολλυμένην, ἀλλὰ τὴν βρῶσιν τὴν μένουσαν εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, ἣν ὁ Τὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ὑμῖν δώσειν· τοῦτον γὰρ ὁ Πατήρ ἐσφράγισεν ὁ Θεός. ²⁸ Εἶπον οὖν πρὸς αὐτὸν, Τί ποιῶμεν, ἵνα ἐργαζώμεθα τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Θεοῦ; ²⁹ Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Τοῦτο ἐστὶ τὸ ἔργον τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἵνα πιστεύσητε εἰς ὃν ἀπέστειλεν ἐκεῖνος.

(⁵³/_{IV}) ³⁰ Εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ, Τί οὖν ποιεῖς σὺ σημεῖον, ἵνα ἴδωμεν καὶ πιστεύσωμεν σοι; τί ἐργάζῃ; (⁵⁴/_X) ³¹ Οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν τὸ μάννα ἔφαγον ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, καθὼς ἐστὶ γεγραμμένον, Ἄρτον ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς φαγεῖν.

³² Εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, Οὐ Μωϋσῆς δέδωκεν ὑμῖν τὸν ἄρτον ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, ἀλλ' ὁ Πατήρ μου δίδωσιν ὑμῖν τὸν ἄρτον ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ τὸν ἀληθινόν. ³³ Ὁ γὰρ ἄρτος τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐστὶν ὁ καταβαίνων ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, καὶ ζωὴν διδόνς τῷ κόσμῳ. ³⁴ Εἶπον οὖν πρὸς αὐτὸν, Κύριε, πάντοτε δὸς ἡμῖν τὸν ἄρτον τοῦτον. (⁵⁵/_I) ³⁵ Εἶπε δὲ αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ἄρτος τῆς ζωῆς· ὁ ἐρχόμενος πρὸς με οὐ μὴ πεινάσῃ, καὶ ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ οὐ μὴ

"If we doubt what those admirable words may import, let him be our teacher for the meaning of Christ, to whom Christ was Himself a Schoolmaster. Let our Lord's Apostle be His interpreter, content we ourselves with His explication (1 Cor. x. 16),—My body, the communion of My body; My blood, the communion of My blood. Is there any thing more expedite, clear, and easy, than that as Christ is termed our life, so the parts of this sacrament are His body and blood, for that they are so to us, who, receiving them, receive that by them which they are termed? The bread and cup are His body and blood, because they are causes instrumental upon the receipt whereof the participation of His body and blood ensueth; for that which produceth any certain effect is not vainly or improperly said to be that very effect whereunto it tendeth. Every cause is in the effect which groweth from it. Our souls and bodies, quickened to eternal life, are effects, the cause whereof is the Person of Christ; His body and blood are the true well-spring out of which this life floweth. So that His body and blood are in that very subject whereunto they minister life, not only by effect or operation, even as the influence of the heavens is in plants, beasts, men, and in every thing which they quicken, but also by a far more divine and mystical kind of union which maketh us one with Him, even as He and the Father are one."

²⁶ Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτ. ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν] He who had retired to the mountains now preaches to the crowd. After the Mystery of the Miracle He delivers a Sermon on that Sacrament which was specially typified by the Miracle; and satiates with doctrine the souls of those whose bodies He had refreshed with food.

—(ζητεῖτέ με—ὅτι ἐφάγετε) ye seek Me—because ye ate of the loaves and were filled. How few seek Jesus for the sake of Jesus! (Aug.)

²⁷ Ἔργάζεσθε μὴ] Work, for labour is necessary; but work not for the meat that perisheth.

Ye seek me carnally, and not spiritually; ye seek temporal sustenance, and I have given you bodily sustenance, in order that ye may learn to seek that sustenance which nourishes the soul unto eternal life. (Chrys., Aug.)

—ἣν ὁ Τὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ὑμῖν δώσει] which the Son of Man will give you. When you receive the Lord's Supper from the hands of Christ's Minister, look with the eye of faith at Him whom you do not see with the bodily eye. Look at Christ. The Priest is the dispenser of the food, but not its maker. The Son of Man gives Himself in it to us, that we may dwell in Him and He in us. And do not imagine that this Son of Man is like other sons of men; for Him hath God the Father sealed, and He contains in Himself the fulness of God Who has sealed Him to be the image and impress of Himself. (Heb. i. 1—3. Cp. Hilary, de Trin. viii.) And He gives us of His own divine fulness in that Holy Communion.

²⁹ Τοῦτο ἐ. τὸ ἔργον τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἵνα πιστεύσητε] This is the work of God (which He requires and enables you by His grace to perform), that ye should believe in Him whom He hath sent. It is one thing to believe Christ, and another to believe in Christ. The Devils believe Christ, but not in Him. We believe Paul, but not in him. To believe in Him is to love Him by faith, by faith to be incorporated into Him. This is the faith which God requires of us, the faith which worketh by love. (Gal. v. 6. Cp. on Matt. xviii. 6.)

There are works which seem to be good, and yet are not good, because they are not done with an eye to Him, as an end, from Whom all good comes, for "Christ is the end of the law to every one that believeth" (Rom. x. 4); therefore Christ does not separate works from faith, but says that faith is the work of God. (Aug.)

As Hooker says (I. xi. 6) on this text—"Not that God doth require nothing at the hands of men, saving only a naked Belief (for, Hope and Charity we may not exclude), but that without Belief all other things are as nothing, and it is the ground of those other divine Virtues."

³¹ Οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν] Our fathers; more than half a million of persons ate manna, supplied miraculously for forty years in the wilderness. Thou hast only fed 5000 once, and not from heaven, but from earth.

—τὸ μάννα] the manna. See v. 49.

³² Οὐ Μωϋσῆς δέδωκεν ὑμῖν τὸν ἄρτον ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ] Moses hath not given to you the bread, the true bread, from Heaven; i. e. the true bread was not given in his days to your fathers: the bread which he gave was "meat that perisheth," and only typical of the true bread (1 Cor. x. 3), which Moses could not give; it could not be given but by Me alone, and it is now given by Me.

Compare Ignatius, ad Rom. 7, who seems to have had these words in his mind: οὐχ ἡδύμαι τροφὴ φθορᾶς οὐδὲ ἡδοναὶς τοῦ βίου τούτου Ἄρτον Θεοῦ θέλω, ὅς ἐστι σὰρξ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ, τοῦ ἐκ γένους Δαβὶδ, καὶ πόμα θέλω, τὸ αἶμα αὐτοῦ, ὃ ἐστὶν ἀγάπη ἀφθαρτος.

³³ Ὁ γὰρ ἄρτος τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐστὶν ὁ καταβαίνων] Because the bread of God is He that cometh down from heaven, and giveth life to the world. After the passage of the Red Sea, which is a figure of Baptism, the people were fed with manna, which is the figure of Christ's body and blood, Who is the Living Bread that came down from Heaven. So after our Lord has walked invisibly on the sea, the type of His presence in Baptism, He speaks of the heavenly manna which He gives in the other Sacrament to those who have been baptized. Thus Christ's passage over the sea connects His two Discourses on the two Sacraments,—that with Nicodemus and that at Capernaum.

He is the true Manna. The word Manna signifies "what is it?" and we are lost in devout admiration, when we meditate on this divine Manna, what is He? How is He the Son of God and the Son of Man? "Who shall declare His generation?" How is He given to us in this Holy Sacrament?

—καταβαίνων] coming down of its own accord (see v. 38), and not for the food of one people in the wilderness for forty years, but for the World.

³⁵ πρὸς—εἰς] Observe the difference of these two prepositions. We must come to (πρὸς) Christ, and be incorporated into (εἰς) Him by faith. Cp. v. 37.

—οὐ μὴ πεινάσῃ—διψήσῃ] Not πεινάσει—διψήσει, the reading of a few MSS. and some editions. See on iv. 14. He does not say, they will not hunger or thirst, but they shall not. He will preserve them from it. He only can.

διψήσῃ πάποτε. ³⁶ Ἄλλ' εἶπον ὑμῖν, ὅτι καὶ ἐωράκατέ με, καὶ οὐ πιστεύετε. (⁵⁶/_x) ³⁷ Πάν ὃ δίδωσί μοι ὁ Πατήρ, πρὸς ἐμέ ἤξει· καὶ τὸν ἐρχόμενον πρὸς με οὐ μὴ ἐκβάλω ἔξω. (⁵⁷/₁) ³⁸ ὅτι καταβέβηκα ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, οὐχ ἵνα ποιῶ τὸ θέλημα τὸ ἐμὸν, ἀλλὰ τὸ θέλημα τοῦ πέμψαντός με. ³⁹ Τοῦτο δέ ἐστι τὸ θέλημα τοῦ πέμψαντός με, ἵνα πάν ὃ δέδωκέ μοι μὴ ἀπολέσω ἐξ αὐτοῦ, ἀλλὰ ἀναστήσω αὐτὸ ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ. (⁵⁸/_x) ⁴⁰ Τοῦτο γάρ ἐστι τὸ θέλημα τοῦ πέμψαντός με, ἵνα πᾶς ὃ θεωρῶν τὸν Υἱὸν καὶ πιστεύων εἰς αὐτὸν ἔχῃ ζωὴν αἰώνιον, καὶ ἀναστήσω αὐτὸν ἐγὼ τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ.

(⁵⁹/₁) ⁴¹ Ἐγόγγυζον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι περὶ αὐτοῦ ὅτι εἶπεν, Ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ἄρτος ὃ καταβάς ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, ⁴² καὶ ἔλεγον, Οὐχ οὗτός ἐστιν Ἰησοῦς ὁ υἱὸς Ἰωσήφ, οὐ ἡμεῖς οἶδαμεν τὸν πατέρα καὶ τὴν μητέρα; πῶς οὖν λέγει οὗτος, Ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καταβέβηκα; (⁶⁰/_x) ⁴³ Ἀπεκριθὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Μὴ γογγύζετε μετ' ἀλλήλων· ⁴⁴ οὐδεὶς δύναται ἐλθεῖν πρὸς με, ἐὰν μὴ ὁ Πατήρ ὃ πέμψας με ἐλκύσῃ αὐτόν· καὶ ἐγὼ ἀναστήσω αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ.

⁴⁵ Ἔστι γεγραμμένον ἐν τοῖς προφήταις, Καὶ ἔσονται πάντες διδασκατοὶ Θεοῦ. Πᾶς οὖν ὃ ἀκούσας παρὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς καὶ μαθὼν ἔρχεται πρὸς ἐμέ. (⁶¹/_{III}) ⁴⁶ Οὐχ ὅτι τὸν Πατέρα ἐώρακέ τις, εἰ μὴ ὃ ὦν παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ, οὗτος ἐώρακε τὸν Πατέρα.

(⁶²/_x) ⁴⁷ Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὃ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμέ ἔχει ζωὴν αἰώνιον. ⁴⁸ Ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ἄρτος τῆς ζωῆς. (⁶³/₁) ⁴⁹ Οἱ πατέρες ὑμῶν ἔφαγον τὸ μάννα ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ καὶ ἀπέθανον· (⁶⁴/_x) ⁵⁰ οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ ἄρτος ὃ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καταβαίνων, ἵνα τις ἐξ αὐτοῦ φάγῃ καὶ μὴ ἀποθάνῃ. (⁶⁵/₁) ⁵¹ Ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ἄρτος ὃ ζῶν, ὃ ἐκ τοῦ

m Matt. 26. 39.
Mark 14. 36.
Luke 22. 42.
ch. 4. 34. & 5. 30.
n ch. 10. 28.
& 17. 12.
& 18. 9.
o ch. 3. 15, 16.

p Matt. 13. 55.
Mark 6. 3.
Luke 4. 22.

q Isa. 54. 13.
Jer. 31. 34.
Heb. 8. 10.
& 10. 16.

r ch. 1. 18.
Matt. 11. 27.
Luke 10. 22.

s ch. 3. 16, 18, 36.

t Exod. 16. 15.
Numb. 11. 7.
Ps. 78. 24.
1 Cor. 10. 5.
Heb. 3. 16, 19.
u ch. 3. 13.

37. οὐ μὴ ἐκβάλω ἔξω] I shall not cast out. He who cometh to Me is incorporated with Me, and becomes like Me, and therefore will not do his own will, but God's will; and so will never be cast out, for that which is cast out of Heaven is Pride. (Aug.)

38. καταβέβηκα ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, οὐχ ἵνα ποιῶ τὸ θέλημα τὸ ἐμὸν] I have come down from heaven not to do mine own will, but the will of Him that sent Me. In order that Pride (the root of all our diseases) might be cured, the Son of God came down from heaven and humbled himself. Therefore, O man, why art thou proud? The Son of God was made humble for thy sake. Perhaps thou mayest be ashamed to imitate a man in humility; imitate God, who humbled Himself, and sets you an example of humility. I came not to do mine own will. Humility does the will of God. (Aug. Cp. Greg. Nazian. p. 548.)

39. πάν—μή] that I should lose nothing; πᾶν μὴ, a Hebraism, ὅλην (holo-). Exod. xii. 43. Lev. iv. 2. Matt. xxiv. 22. Luke i. 37. (Vorst. Hebr. 531.)

40. Τοῦτο γάρ] So A, B, C, D, K, L.—τοῦτο δέ. Elz. — ὃ θεωρῶν] he that looketh on, contemplateth. Hebr. חָזַק (chazak). On the difference between θεωρῶ and ὁπτομαι, see below on xvi. 16.

41. Ἐγόγγυζον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι] The Jews therefore were murmuring, because He said I am the bread that came down from out of (ἐκ not ἀπὸ) heaven. They were estranged from that living bread that came down from heaven, and had not learned to feel hunger for it. That bread seeks for the craving of the inner man, and satisfies it. (Aug.)

44. οὐδεὶς δύναται—αὐτόν] no one can come to Me except the Father who sent Me draw him. ἐλκύω is used by LXX for Hebrew מָשַׁח (mashah), which does not imply violence, as Jer. xxxi. 3. (Rosenmüller.)

See the power of Divine Grace. No one can come except He is drawn. If thou dost not desire to err, do not seek to determine whom God draws, and whom He does not draw; nor why He draws one man and not another. But if thou thyself art not drawn by God, pray to Him that thou mayest be drawn. God is ready to draw every man, for He says, It is written in the Prophets, they shall all be taught of God (Isa. liv. 13). And, again, Every one that hath heard and learned of the Father cometh to me (John vi. 45), and Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out (John vi. 37). Besides, Christ says, that He will draw all, πάντας ἐλκύσω, John xii. 32. (Aug.)

This saying does not deny our free-will, which is the error of the Manichæans, but proves our need of divine grace; it does not say that the unwilling comes, but that he comes who receives grace; and we have a Teacher who is willing to give His blessing to all (as is evident from v. 45), and pours out His heavenly teaching upon all. God draws all who are willing to be drawn; but He does not draw others; as the magnet draws not every thing, but it draws iron. (Chrys., Theoph.) You are not drawn against your will. God draws by love, not by force, but “by the cords of a man,” Hos. xi. 4.

45. ἔσονται πάντες διδασκατοὶ Θεοῦ] all shall be taught of God. On the phrase διδασκατοὶ Θεοῦ, see 1 Cor. ii. 13. Vorst. Hebr. pp. 408, 409. Winer, p. 170. Cf. θεοδιδασκατοὶ, 1 Thess. iv. 9.

I may utter words that sound in your ears, but unless your minds are enlightened by God, how can you know Me? (Aug., Chrys.)

— Πᾶς ὃ ἀκούσας—ἐρχεται] Every one that hath hearkened to what is said from the Father, and hath learnt, cometh unto Me. Where true hearing is, there is obedience; for faith is not of necessity, but by persuasion. And that understanding, by way of assistance, rather than of force, which is in Christ, is supplied from the Father. For the truth of Christian doctrine teaches that the Free-will of the human soul is preserved entire. (Cyrl.) See below, Introduction to the Epistle to the Romans, p. 194.

48. Ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ἄρτος τῆς ζωῆς] I am the bread of life. The multitudes followed Him seeking food for their bodies, and remembering the manna which had been given to their fathers; but our Lord teaches them that these things were figures emblematic of the Truth now present to their eyes, and therefore proceeds to speak of spiritual food, “I am the bread of life,” which is given in the mystical Communion of His own Body. (Chrys., Theoph.)

50. οὗτος] this is the bread that cometh down from heaven; i. e. I myself. See Matt. xvi. 18, and below, v. 58.

— ἵνα τις ἐξ αὐτοῦ φάγῃ καὶ μὴ ἀποθάνῃ] that a man may eat thereof and not die. Moses ate the manna, and many who pleased God ate it, and did not die, because they received the visible food spiritually, and tasted it spiritually, that they might be satiated spiritually. We also now receive visible food. But the Sacrament is one thing, and the Virtue of the Sacrament is another; for many receive at the altar, and perish in receiving. Whence the Apostle says (1 Cor. xi. 29), “He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation.” To eat this heavenly food spiritually, is to wash our hands in innocence, and so to come to the altar (Ps. xxvi. 6): though we sin daily, let not our sin be deadly; and before we come to the altar let us reflect on the prayer, “Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us.” If you forgive, you will be forgiven. Come, then, with confidence. If any man eateth of this οὐρανοῦ καταβάς· ἂν τις φάγη ἐκ τούτου τοῦ ἄρτου, ζήσεται εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. (66/x) Καὶ ὁ ἄρτος δὲ ὃν ἐγὼ δώσω ἢ σὰρξ μου ἐστίν, ἣν ἐγὼ δώσω ὑπὲρ τῆς τοῦ κόσμου ζωῆς.

x ch. 3. 9.

y Matt. 26. 26.
1 Cor. 11. 23, &c.

z ch. 4. 14.

52 x Ἐμάχοντο οὖν πρὸς ἀλλήλους οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι λέγοντες, Πῶς δύναται οὗτος ἡμῶν δοῦναι τὴν σάρκα φαγεῖν; 53 y Εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ἂν μὴ φάγητε τὴν σάρκα τοῦ Υἱοῦ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, καὶ πίνητε αὐτοῦ τὸ αἷμα, οὐκ ἔχετε ζωὴν ἐν ἑαυτοῖς. 54 z Ὁ τρώγων μου τὴν σάρκα καὶ πίνων μου bread he shall not die; that is, if he eats what belongs to the Virtue of the Sacrament, not what belongs only to the visible Sacrament; if he feeds upon it internally; feeds upon it in his heart, not only presses upon it with his teeth. (Aug.)

51. ὁ ἄρτος δὲ ὃν ἐγὼ δώσω] the bread which I will give is My flesh. He thus shows His power and freewill. He was crucified; He was given by His Father, but He gave Himself. (Theoph.) Our Lord gave this Bread when He delivered the Sacrament of His Body and Blood to His disciples, and when He offered Himself to the Father on the Altar of the Cross. (Bede.)

I die for all, that I may quicken all by My death; and I offer My flesh as a ransom (ἀντίλυτρον) for the flesh of all. Death will die in My death; and the nature of Man which has fallen in Adam will rise again in Me. I am therefore made like you, of the seed of Abraham. Death could not otherwise have been destroyed, except Christ had given Himself a ransom for all. As the Psalmist says, "Sacrifice and burnt-offering thou wouldest not, but a body thou hast prepared Me. Then said I, Lo, I come" (Ps. xl. 8, 9). "He bare our sins in His own Body on the tree, and by His stripes we are healed" (1 Pet. ii. 24). Therefore He says (John xvii. 19), I sanctify Myself, that is, I consecrate Myself, and offer Myself as an Immaculate Victim, for the life of all. And this redemption is effected by the Union of the two Natures. For after that the Life-giving Word of God made His dwelling in our Flesh, He transformed it to His own Virtue, that is, to Life; and, by the ineffable mystery of His union with us, He quickened us and made us to be like what He is in Himself. Therefore the body of Christ quickens those who partake in it. (Cyril.)

The Fathers combat the Eutychian Heresy by arguments drawn from what our Lord says concerning the Lord's Supper.

The Sacraments which we receive of the Body and Blood of Christ are a divine thing, because through them we are made partakers of the divine nature. And yet there does not cease to exist in them the substance of bread and wine. And an image and similitude of the Body and Blood of Christ is seen and solemnized in the celebration of these mysteries; and we must have the same belief concerning Christ our Lord as we profess concerning His image (in the Sacrament), viz. that as the elements pass into a divine substance, by the operation of the Holy Spirit, and yet remain in the properties of their own nature, so they show that the principal mystery, whose efficacy and virtue they truly represent to us—namely, Christ—remains One, because entire and true; while these things (i.e. the two natures), of which Christ consists, remain in their true properties. (Gelasius, Bp. of Rome, A.D. 492—496, 'De duabus naturis in Christo.' Bibl. Patr. Lat. v. p. 671.) The bread and wine even after Consecration lose not their own nature, but remain in their proper substance, shape, and form. (Theodoret, Eranist. iv. p. 85.) See Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. iii. p. 306, who says, "hence it is observable that the Church in those days understood no such doctrine as that of Transubstantiation." See below on vv. 53, 54.

— ἡ σὰρξ μου ἐστίν] is My flesh. They who heard that saying shuddered at it, and thought it to be impossible. But the faithful people of Christ know the body of Christ, if they themselves take heed to be His Body. Let them be indeed the body of Christ, if they desire to live by the Spirit of Christ. The body of Christ cannot live but by the Spirit of Christ. Hence the Apostle says, "we are one bread and one body" (1 Cor. x. 17).

O Sacrament of Piety! O Symbol of Unity! O Bond of Charity! He who desires to have life, has a place where he may have it, and a source whence he may receive it. Let him draw near, let him have faith, let him be in the body of Christ, that he may derive life from it. And let him be a living and sound member in the body; let him cleave to the body; let him live from God to God; let him now labour on earth that he may reign in heaven. (Aug.)

— Πῶς δύναται] How can He give us His flesh to eat? A like question to that of Nicodemus, when Christ spoke to him of the other Sacrament (John iii. 9). How did He feed the five thousand? The answer is the same in both cases—by His divine Power. (Cp. Chrys.)

53, 54. Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν—ἂν μὴ φάγητε] Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink His blood, ye have no life in you. A form of speech parallel to that used prophetically by Christ to Nicodemus concerning the other Sacrament, that of Baptism (John iii. 5). Observe also that the ἂν μὴ, except, is, in the two cases, introduced by Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν, Verily, verily (used twice in both cases, iii. 3. 5; vi. 47. 53), and makes the parallel more solemn.

Our Lord did not as yet explain, how they were to eat His flesh and drink His blood; for they were not as yet ripe for the intelligence of this mystery. But He tells them what inestimable blessings were to be gained from that eating and drinking, and so quickens a more vehement desire in their minds to believe it. He would first teach them to believe Him, and would afterwards reward their faith by fruition of Himself. He afterwards explained His words, at the Institution of the Holy Eucharist (Matt. xxvi. 26, 27. Mark xiv. 22, 23. Luke xxii. 19, 20), by saying, "Take eat, this is My body," and "Drink ye all of this."

Let all hearken to Christ, who says, "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man ye have no life in you." They cannot taste that life which is in holiness and felicity, who do not receive the Son of Man in the Holy Communion.

Since Christ is the bread of life, and we have no life in us, except we eat His flesh and drink His blood, let those take heed who have been baptized, and yet rarely resort to Church to receive the Holy Communion, under a pretence of fear and reverence, and so exclude themselves from eternal life. This pretext, though it seems to be religious, is a trap and snare. Rather, they ought to strive to be cleansed from sin, and amend their lives. Satan has various devices, and when he has tempted us to sin, he then makes us shrink from divine grace. But let us break his chains, and shake off his tyrannical yoke, and serve God, and come to divine and heavenly grace, and approach the Holy Communion of Christ. So we shall conquer Satan, and be partakers of the Divine Nature, and rise to life and immortality. (Cyril.)

The mention of blood here as well as body contains a prophecy, i.e. that our Lord would not die by a natural death, but be slain and pierced; and that by this body slain and blood shed He would give life to the world. Men may have temporal life without eating that bread and drinking that blood, but eternal life they cannot have. By this food and drink He means the communion of His own Body. Our Lord therefore presented His Body and Blood in those things which are made of many into one. For the one element (the Bread, ἄρτος, or loaf) is made of many grains; the other (the Wine) flows together into one from many grapes. The Sacrament of this Unity of Christ's Body and Blood is prepared in some places daily; and in other places at stated intervals, on the Lord's Table; and by some it is received unto life, and by others it is received unto death. But the thing itself, of which it is a Sacrament, is unto life to every man, and is not to death to any one that partakes of it. (Aug.)

Before the bread is consecrated, we call it bread; but when by the ministry of the priest the divine grace sanctifies the bread, it is reputed worthy to be called the Body of Christ, although the nature of bread remains in it. (Chrys., as is generally supposed, ad Cæsar. ap. Routh, Script. Eccl. ii. 126, ed. 1840, where other ancient testimonies to the same effect may be seen.) See above, on v. 52, and below, on 1 Cor. x. 16.

54. τρώγων] he that eateth My flesh, and drinketh My blood, hath life eternal. There is a gradual ascent in the language of this Discourse, from one spiritual altitude to another. Each sentence in succession is an exercise of faith, and invites it to rise higher, and to surmount new difficulties.

First He speaks of ἄρτος, bread, what He Himself had just multiplied, to feed the bodies of the five thousand, and so connects His Sermon with the Miracle (v. 26). Then of bread from heaven (v. 32); then of the bread of God (v. 33); then of the bread of life (v. 35); then of living bread (v. 51); and then He says that this is Himself (v. 51); and then, that it is His flesh (v. 51); and then, that it is necessary to eat (φαγεῖν) that flesh and drink τὸ αἷμα ἔχει ζωὴν αἰώνιον, καὶ ἐγὼ ἀναστήσω αὐτὸν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ· (⁶⁷/₁) ⁵⁵ ἡ γὰρ σὰρξ μου ἀληθῶς ἐστὶ βρώσις, καὶ τὸ αἷμά μου ἀληθῶς ἐστὶ πόσις. (⁶⁸/_x) ⁵⁶ Ὁ τρώγων μου τὴν σάρκα καὶ πίνων μου τὸ αἷμα ἐν ἐμοὶ μένει, καὶ γὰρ ἐν αὐτῷ. ⁵⁷ Καθὼς ἀπέστειλέ με ὁ ζῶν Πατὴρ, καὶ γὰρ ζῶ διὰ τὸν Πατέρα, καὶ ὁ τρώγων με καὶ ἐμὸς ζήσεται δι' ἐμέ. ⁵⁸ Ὁ οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ ἄρτος ὁ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ^{a ch. 3. 13.} καταβάς· οὐ καθὼς ἔφαγον οἱ πατέρες ὑμῶν τὸ μάννα καὶ ἀπέθανον. Ὁ τρώγων τοῦτον τὸν ἄρτον ζήσεται εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα.

⁵⁹ Ταῦτα εἶπεν ἐν συναγωγῇ διδασκων ἐν Καφαρναούμ.

⁶⁰ Πολλοὶ οὖν ἀκούσαντες ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ εἶπον, Σκληρός ἐστὶν οὗτος ὁ λόγος· τίς δύναται αὐτοῦ ἀκοῦειν; ⁶¹ Εἰδὼς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐν ἑαυτῷ, ὅτι γογγύζουσιν περὶ τούτου οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Τοῦτο ὑμᾶς σκανδαλίζει; (⁶⁹/₁) ⁶² Ἐὰν οὖν θεωρῇτε τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἀναβαίνοντα ὅπου ἦν τὸ πρότερον; (⁷⁰/₁) ⁶³ Ὁ πνευμά ἐστι τὸ ζωοποιούν, ἡ σὰρξ οὐκ ὠφελεῖ οὐδέν· ^{b ch. 3. 13. Mark 16. 19. Luke 24. 51. Acts 1. 9. Eph. 4. 8. c 2 Cor. 3. 6.}

His blood (v. 53); and then He adopts a new word for eating—a remarkable one—τρώγω. Here, in this word, is the climax of difficulty. It is repeated no less than four times in relation to this subject (vv. 54, 56—58); and it only occurs in two other places of the N. T.—John xiii. 18. Matt. xxiv. 38. It seems to be intentionally chosen as a hard saying. It means something more than mere φαγεῖν. Etymologically it is connected with τρώω and τρώω, to pierce. Properly it is not applied to food prepared by man; and it signifies the eager appetite with which animals fix on their food and devour it. Compare the words of Christ concerning Christians as likened to birds of prey—eagles—hastening to their food (Matt. xxiv. 28. Luke xvii. 37). It shows the need of coming to Christ in the Holy Communion with spiritual hunger and with devout cravings and earnest longings and yearnings of a famished soul for heavenly food. Cp. on xiii. 18.

—ἀναστήσω] I will raise him up in the last day. I will raise him up in his body. Thus the gift of Resurrection to eternal life in a glorified body is connected with the reception of the body of Christ in the Holy Communion. And this is what the Church of England declares when she says, “The Body of our Lord Jesus Christ, which was given for thee, preserve thy body and soul unto everlasting life.” See further below, on 1 Cor. x. 16—20.

⁵⁵ ἡ γὰρ σὰρξ μου ἀληθῶς ἐστὶ βρώσις] for My Flesh is meat indeed, and My Blood is drink indeed. Being the flesh of Him Who is God,—not that Christ's flesh has been changed into the nature of God. No; but as iron when heated retains the nature of iron, and exercises the energy of fire, so His flesh remains flesh and vivifies us,—being the flesh of Him Who is God. (Theoph.)

We are called members of Christ because we receive the Son Himself, in the Holy Communion. His Blood is the Blood of Him Who is the Life. (Cyrl.) —ἀληθῶς] Some MSS. (e. g. B, C, D, K, L, T) have ἀληθῆς here, but the preponderance of authority is for ἀληθῶς.

⁵⁶ Ὁ τρώγων μου τὴν σάρκα] Observe the position of the pronoun μου; in both cases it is emphatic,—The flesh of Me, Who am God, and by My divine power quicken whom I will.

Christ is the Life, being generated from the Living Father of all. And His human Body is Life-giving, in that it is united to the Life-giving Word in one Person. For, after the Incarnation, the two Natures of God and Man were indissolubly joined in Him. Wherefore by communion in His Body we have life in ourselves, being united to that Body, as it is united to the Word Who dwells in it. (Cyrl.)

These words of our Lord are to be referred to the Holy Eucharist, in which we partake of the Body and Blood of Christ. (Chrys.)

See also Clemens Alexandrin. Pædagog c. 6. Blunt on the Early Fathers, p. 564.

By these mystical words our Lord taught us to be in His body, under Himself the Head, eating His flesh, not forsaking His Unity. But many who were present did not understand His meaning, and were offended; for they thought of nothing but the flesh, which they themselves were (i. e. they received His words carnally, being themselves carnal). But the Apostle says, to be carnally minded is death (Rom. viii. 6). Therefore we ought not to taste Christ's flesh carnally, as some did who said, “This is a hard saying; who can hear it?” (v. 60) (Aug.) and He therefore replied to them in v. 62.

He who does not dwell in Christ, nor Christ in him, without doubt neither eats His flesh nor drinks His blood, but rather eats and drinks to his own condemnation the Sacrament of so great a thing. (Aug. Cp. the MSS. collations in the last Benedictine edition, vol. iii. p. 1987, and p. lxxvii, on the words from Augustine in our 29th Article.)

⁵⁹ Καφαρναούμ] Capernaum; i. e. city of comfort (see on Matt. iv. 13),—a fit place for this discourse on those benefits which by His precious blood-shedding He has obtained to us, and on those holy “mysteries which He has instituted as pledges of His love, and for a continual remembrance of His death, to our great and endless comfort.”

⁶⁰ Σκληρός ἐστὶν οὗτος ὁ λόγος] A hard saying, to those who are hard; incredible to the incredulous. (Aug. Serm. 131.)

Because they had heard Him speak of flesh, they thought He wished to make them eaters of flesh; but we, who understand these words spiritually, are not devourers of flesh, but are spiritualized by this food. (Theophyl.)

⁶² Ἐὰν οὖν θεωρῇτε] What then if ye should behold the Son of Man ascending up where He was before? If you are staggered by the assertion that My flesh can give you life, and that it is necessary for you to eat it, if you would live indeed, how can it, like a winged bird, soar up to heaven? But if, as your own eyes will see, it raises itself to heaven, cannot it also raise you? cannot it vivify you? It is not, however, the flesh, as flesh, that will vivify you, but it is the Flesh united to the Word; it is the Flesh in which “dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily” (Col. ii. 9). It is the Spirit that dwelleth in it that quickeneth; and “the Lord is that Spirit” (2 Cor. iii. 17). (Cp. Cyril on St. Luke, p. 666, ed. Smith.)

They thought He would give them His body to eat, but He said that He, in His body entire, would ascend to heaven. Then you will perceive that He does not give His body in the way you imagine, and that His Grace is not to be fed upon by the teeth. “Gratia Ejus non consumitur morsibus.” (Aug.)

—ὅπου ἦν τὸ πρότερον] where He was before. Not that the human body of Christ came down from heaven (for that is the heresy of Marcion and Apollinarius), but because the Son of Man and the Son of God are one Christ. (Theoph.) Our Lord answers their murmurs by these words: “You imagine that I am about to give you My Body to divide as it were into parts for you to eat. What if you see Me ascend?” Certainly He Who ascended bodily, could not be eaten bodily. Let them eat and drink Him Who is our Life; and the Body and Blood of Christ will be Life to us, if that which is visibly taken in the Sacrament is indeed spiritually eaten and spiritually drunken. For our Lord proceeds to say (v. 63), “It is the Spirit that quickeneth.” (Aug. Serm. cxxxi.)

⁶³ Τὸ πνευμά ἐστι τὸ ζωοποιούν] It is the Spirit that quickeneth. Cp. 1 Cor. xv. 45, “The first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickeneth spirit,”—εἰς πνεῦμα ζωοποιούν,—i. e. by union of flesh with deity; the flesh which Christ took became by His assumption of it the flesh of Him Who is God,—and Who, as the universal and everlasting I am, quickens all. It is not by participating in His flesh as flesh, but by faith in His Divinity dwelling in that flesh, and by it communicating itself to us, that we are profited in the reception of the Holy Communion of His Body and Blood. Not that His flesh profits nothing; for our only hope of life eternal in body and soul is through His Incarnation; but what profits nothing, is to think of His flesh merely as flesh. So the Apostle says (2 Cor. iii. 6), “The letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life;” not that the letter is nothing; but the letter alone, without the Spirit, killeth. Cp. Cyrl here. We must not say that Christ's

d ch. 2. 25.
& 13. 11.

e ver. 44.

f Acts 5. 20.

g Matt. 16. 16.
Mark 8. 29.
Luke 9. 20.
ch. 11. 27.
h Luke 6. 13.
ch. 8. 44

τὰ ῥήματα, ἃ ἐγὼ λελάληκα ὑμῖν, πνεῦμά ἐστι καὶ ζωὴ ἐστιν. ($\frac{71}{x}$) ^{64 d} Ἀλλὰ εἰσὶν ἐξ ὑμῶν τινες οἱ οὐ πιστεύουσιν. ($\frac{72}{iv}$) Ἦιδει γὰρ ἐξ ἀρχῆς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, τίνες εἰσὶν οἱ μὴ πιστεύοντες, καὶ τίς ἐστιν ὁ παραδώσω αὐτόν ($\frac{73}{x}$) ^{65 e} καὶ ἔλεγε, Διὰ τοῦτο εἶρηκα ὑμῖν, ὅτι οὐδεὶς δύναται ἐλθεῖν πρὸς με, ἐὰν μὴ ᾗ δεδομένον αὐτῷ ἐκ τοῦ Πατρὸς μου.

⁶⁶ Ἐκ τούτου πολλοὶ ἀπῆλθον τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω, καὶ οὐκέτι μετ' αὐτοῦ περιεπάτουν.

⁶⁷ Εἶπεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τοῖς δώδεκα, Μὴ καὶ ὑμεῖς θέλετε ὑπάγειν; ($\frac{74}{i}$) ^{68 f} Ἀπεκρίθη οὖν αὐτῷ Σίμων Πέτρος, Κύριε, πρὸς τίνα ἀπελευσόμεθα; ῥήματα ζωῆς αἰωνίου ἔχεις. ^{69 g} καὶ ἡμεῖς πεπιστεύκαμεν καὶ ἐγνώκαμεν, ὅτι σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστὸς, ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ ζῶντος. ($\frac{75}{x}$) ^{70 h} Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Οὐκ ἐγὼ ὑμᾶς τοὺς δώδεκα ἐξελεξάμην, καὶ ἐξ ὑμῶν εἷς διάβολός ἐστιν; ⁷¹ Ἐλεγε δὲ τὸν Ἰούδαν Σίμωνος Ἰσκαριώτην· οὗτος γὰρ ἤμελλεν αὐτὸν παραδιδόναι, εἰς ὃν ἐκ τῶν δώδεκα.

flesh or body profiteth nothing (see v. 53, 54), but to understand these things merely in a carnal way profiteth nothing. (Chrys.)

Why did He say, "Except ye eat the flesh," &c.? Because the flesh considered carnally, as ye consider it, profiteth nothing. But the flesh must be quickened by the Spirit, and then the Spirit, in the flesh, and by the flesh, profits much. Your soul quickens only the members which are in your body; if you take a limb away, it is not quickened by your soul. This we say, that we may love unity and fear separation. A Christian ought not to fear any thing so much as to be separated from Christ's Body; for if he is separated from the Body of Christ, he is not a member of Christ, and if not a member of Christ, he is not quickened by His Spirit. (Aug.)

— πνεῦμα καὶ [ζωή] they are Spirit and they are Life. "Spiritualiter intelligenda." Cp. Aug. in Ps. xcvi. 9, a strong passage against Transubstantiation; and Hooker, V. lxvii. 9, who says, 'His words were spirit, that is, had reference to a mystical participation!' which mystical participation giveth life.

— ὁ παραδῶσων] he who would betray Him. The betrayal took place at the season of the Passover, and soon after the Institution of the Holy Eucharist; and so the treachery of Judas was connected with these words, concerning the Holy Eucharist, and spoken before at a Passover.

67. δώδεκα] the Twelve. That these were the Apostles, St. John supposes to be known from the other Gospels.

69. ὁ Χριστὸς, ὁ Υἱὸς] the Christ, the Son of God. B, C, D, L have ὁ ἅγιος τοῦ Θεοῦ, the Holy One of God.

— τοῦ ζῶντος] the living. Cancelled by some on the authority of a very few MSS., e.g. B, C, D, L, and six cursive copies, but confirmed by most of the Versions and Fathers; and very expressive and relevant to this place in connexion with ῥήματα ζωῆς (v. 68).

70. ἐξελεξάμην] I chose—and one of you is a devil. There is therefore an election of grace, from which men may fall. (Bengel.)

71. Ἰσκαριώτην] B, C, G, L have Ἰσκαριώτου.

REVIEW OF THE CONTENTS OF THE FOREGOING CHAPTER. —It is said by the Holy Spirit in v. 6 of this chapter, that "Christ Himself knew what He would do;" and this saying may be taken as a clue to the whole; for all our Lord's sayings and actions in it are prophetical.

St. John in his Gospel does not describe the Institution of either Sacrament. That had been done by the preceding Evangelists. But he alone records our Lord's prophetic discourses concerning both Sacraments; first, in the third chapter, concerning Baptism; and secondly, in the sixth chapter, concerning the Lord's Supper. And there is a striking resemblance in the manner in which each of the Sacraments is treated by Our Lord in this Gospel. (See, for instance, v. 53, compared with iii. 3.)

The Blessed Evangelist St. John had begun his Gospel, by proclaiming Christ's Everlasting Godhead, "In the beginning was the Word" (i. 1); He had then declared His Incarnation. "The Word was made Flesh and dwelt in us" (i. 14). He pitched His tent in the Nature of us all, became our Emmanuel, God with us, God manifest in the Flesh. He had affirmed that we all have received of His fulness, and that He has given to us, who receive Him, and believe on His Name, power to become children of God (i. 11, 12, 16).

He then introduces this Divine Personage Himself teaching us, what the instruments and means are, by which the union of each one of us with Him Who is the Life, is first formed, and afterwards maintained. This the Evangelist does by recording first Our Lord's conversation with Nicodemus, on the necessity of Regeneration, or New Birth in Himself, and of the instrument of that New Birth, namely, the Holy Sacrament of Baptism; and secondly, by relating the Miraculous Feeding on the Mountain on the N.E. of the sea of Galilee, and the miraculous passage of our Lord in the darkness and storm over the sea, and His Sermon preached on the morrow in the Synagogue at Capernaum, in which He comments on the Miraculous Feeding, and takes occasion therefrom to teach the doctrine of the other Sacrament, that of the Holy Eucharist, by which He continually strengthens the union which was begun with Himself in Baptism; and sustains the divine life which He communicated to His Members at their baptismal incorporation in Him.

Thus it is shown that there is an analogy between the two Sacraments, and that they occupy a place peculiar to themselves in the Christian Dispensation.

In a word, the Third Chapter and the Sixth Chapter of St. John's Gospel may be said to contain two Sermons upon the Sacraments, from the Divine lips of Him Who instituted them.

Our Lord employs the same method in speaking of the Second Sacrament, that of His Body and Blood, in the sixth Chapter, as He had done in speaking of the First—the Sacrament of Baptism, in the third Chapter.

The reader is requested to refer here to the Note at the end of that chapter, page 284.

If it be alleged, that Christ's Words could not refer to the Sacraments, because they were not so understood by those who then heard them; this objection, it must be replied, is grounded on a misconception of our Lord's Nature and Teaching.

He knew what He would do; and He knew that His Words would be recorded by the Holy Spirit in Holy Scripture, for the teaching and comfort of all future ages of the world. Such language as was not intelligible at the time when, and to the persons to whom, it was first uttered, was most appropriate in the mouth of Him Who foreknows all things, and spake to all men in all time. See below on xii. 16.

Its subsequent explanation by what afterwards took place proves His Divinity: it is an evidence of the truth of the Gospel, and confirms our faith in Christ.

His Teaching was prophetical. It proceeded from His foreknowledge. It was also probationary; it tried the faith of His hearers. Some would be staggered and fall away, and would no more walk with Him (v. 66). But they who meekly and lovingly trusted in Him would abide with Him in patience, because they had seen His miracles and knew that He hath the words of eternal life; and they would wait till what were at first hard sayings would be cleared up by visible actions and by spiritual illuminations.

So it was with regard to our Lord's Teaching concerning both the Sacraments. Those very persons, who at first may have been perplexed by that teaching, were afterwards enlightened by receiving those Sacraments, and by becoming Ministers of those Sacraments to others.

Consider the historical Narrative of the foregoing Chapter. Our Lord, at the approach of a Passover, goes up with His disciples to a hill on the North-eastern side of the Lake of a Lev. 23. 34.

VII. ¹ Καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα περιεπάτει ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐν τῇ Γαλιλαίᾳ· οὐ γὰρ ᾔθελεν ἐν τῇ Ἰουδαίᾳ περιπατεῖν, ὅτι ἐζήτουν αὐτὸν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι ἀποκτεῖναι.

² ^a Ἦν δὲ ἐγγὺς ἡ ἑορτὴ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἡ σκηνοπηγία.

³ ^b Ἐπὶ οὖν πρὸς αὐτὸν οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ, Μετάβηθι ἐντεύθεν, καὶ ὕπαγε εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν, ἵνα καὶ οἱ μαθηταί σου θεωρήσωσι τὰ ἔργα σου ἃ ποιεῖς·

b Matt. 12. 46.
Mark 3. 31.
Acts 1. 14.

Galilee; and the Multitudes who had seen His miracles of healing, and were going up to Jerusalem, follow Him (vi. 1—5). He preaches to them, and heals some of them (cp. Luke ix. 2).

It is probable that this Miracle of feeding the Five Thousand was wrought on a Friday, the day of our Lord's Passion; for, we find that the next day our Lord is preaching in a Synagogue (v. 22. 59), probably on the Jewish Sabbath (Luke iv. 16), or Saturday. He seems to have delivered the food to the Five Thousand at the same season of the year, and on the same day of the week as that in which He gave His body and blood as food to the world.

It was now afternoon, and He commands His disciples to arrange the multitude of five thousand men, besides women and children, in companies of fifties; and having blessed and broken the five barley loaves and two fishes, He delivers them to the disciples to deliver to the multitude; and they were all filled; and the fragments that remain are gathered up by the disciples and fill twelve baskets.

The multitude would have taken Him and made Him their King; but He retires to the mountain, and commands the disciples to embark in the ship, and pass over to the western side of the Lake. A storm arises and darkness comes on, and He sees them toiling in rowing, and comes to them walking on the sea. They are affrighted at the sight, but He says, "I AM, be not afraid," and they gladly receive Him into the ship, which was immediately at the land where they were going.

The next day, many of the people who had partaken of the loaves, came over the sea to Capernaum, and asked Jesus, Rabbi, when camest thou hither (v. 25)? He does not give a direct reply to that question; but, while teaching in the Synagogue at Capernaum (v. 59), proceeds to apply the Miracle of the loaves to their spiritual instruction concerning that Divine Food which was typified by it.

They had compared Him to Moses, and He teaches them that He is greater than Moses, in that He gives the true bread, —not manna for forty years only and for the bodies of one people, who die (v. 58), but the true living bread for the eternal life of immortal souls, as well as for the glorious resurrection of the bodies, of all Mankind (vv. 33. 39); and He tells them that He Himself is this Bread (vv. 35—41), and that it is necessary to partake of it; and further, that except they eat His Flesh and drink His Blood, they have no Life in them (v. 53); and that they who obey this command will have everlasting life, and He will raise them up at the last day (v. 54).

These were then hard sayings (v. 60); they sifted His hearers; some murmured at them (vv. 41, 42); but He said, "What if they should look with their bodily eye on Him ascending to where He was before?" and that the words he had spoken were spirit and were life, and must be received with faith in His Divinity; and then they would believe that He is the Bread that descends from heaven.

They would not indeed be able to understand how He is present in the Holy Eucharist, any more than the people could understand how He had come over the sea (vv. 19. 24). Nor should they curiously inquire, but joyfully receive Him with faith (see v. 25); and remember that He, by His Divine Power, had fed the bodies of five thousand without a word, and that He Who promised to be with them would ascend in their sight to where He was before in His Divine Nature, and He could therefore do what He promised to perform.

The hard sayings at Capernaum, like those concerning Regeneration and Baptism to Nicodemus, became easy to those who, like St. Peter (v. 68), remained with Christ in faith and patience. For all this was done when a Passover was nigh (see on v. 5); and, at the very next Passover after it, He explained this saying, in act as well as word, by instituting the Holy Sacrament of His Body and Blood, when He said, "Take, eat; this is my Body;" and "Drink ye all of this: this is My Blood which is shed for you and for many for the remission of sins." (Matt. xxvi. 26. Mark xiv. 22. Luke xxii. 19.)

Those words were spiritual, and must be received with faith. This was then made evident from the case of Judas, who received the Holy Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Christ from the hands of Christ Himself, but received it carnally, and not with faith and love, and went and betrayed his Master, and so fulfilled the prophecy here uttered by Christ concerning him (v. 70).

These hard sayings became still more easy, when the Apostles saw Christ's body slain and His blood poured out at that same Passover. And they became more easy yet, when they saw that by His Divine Power He raised His own Body at that Passover as He promised to raise them (v. 54). And they became more easy still, when they beheld Christ ascend in His Human Body to where He was before in His Divinity. And they believed that by reason of the union of the Humanity with the Divinity, He, though in Heaven in His Humanity, can ever communicate the vivifying Virtue of His Body offered and of His Blood poured out, once for all, on the Cross, to the strengthening and refreshing of the souls of those who receive them in faith and love, and to the preservation of their souls and bodies unto everlasting life. And the hard sayings at Capernaum became more easy still, when the same Apostles, who had been employed by Christ to dispense the bread and the fishes which He had blessed and broken on the mountain of Bethsaida to the weary multitudes journeying to Jerusalem, were commissioned to bless in His Name the Bread and Cup of the Eucharist (which would remind them even by its name, of Christ's act and miraculous power, see on v. 11. 23), and to break the Bread, and to dispense, and to authorize and ordain others to dispense, even till the Lord come (1 Cor. xi. 26), the Sacrament of His blessed Body and Blood, to all true Israelites journeying as travellers and pilgrims in the wilderness of this world, in their march to the rest of their spiritual Canaan, and weary of their sins, and hungering for the Bread of Life, and made to sit down on the green grass of the Lord's holy mountain, where He prepares them a Table, and anoints their head with the holy oil of His grace, and fills their cup (Ps. xxiii. 2. 5), and refreshes and cheers them on their way to an Eternal Festival in the heavenly Jerusalem, the City of the Living God.

CH. VII. 1. οὐ γὰρ ᾔθελεν for He was not willing to walk in Judaea, because the Jews sought to kill Him. Our Lord in His charity for His enemies often declined their conspiracies against Him, see Matt. ii. 13. Luke iv. 30. John viii. 59. He was accustomed, on fit occasions, to flee from His enemies as man, that He might manifest Himself as God. (Chrys.)

2. σκηνοπηγία the feast of Tabernacles; literally, the fixing of booths or tents. This Feast lasted from the 15th to 23rd of Tisri (October). On the Feast of Tabernacles, see below, note on v. 37, and Lightfoot's treatise on the Temple Service, ch. xvi. vol. i. pp. 974—979, and his Hebrew Exercitation on this Chapter, Works, ii. pp. 554—560. Mede's Works, i. p. 266, and Jahn, Archæol. § 356. It was called חג-חג (ha-chag), τὸ ἄγιον, ἡ ἑορτή, the Feast, and μεγίστη, or greatest, by Jewish writers.

It was the Feast of Ingathering of Fruits, (Exod. xxiii. 16; xxxiv. 22,) and it commemorated the dwelling in Booths in the Wilderness (Levit. xxiii. 34—43. Nehem. viii. 15). And on each day of the feast the Jews went round the Altar with shouts of Hosanna, and bearing in their hands palm branches. (2 Mac. x. 6, 7.) Hence the Hosannas in Matt. xxi. 9. 15. Some of its ceremonies also were commemorative of the gushing forth and flowing of water from the rock in the wilderness, see below on v. 37. It seems to have been typical of our Lord's Incarnation (see on i. 14, and note at end of this chapter) and sojourn in the Tabernacle of our Flesh on Earth; and of the effusion of the Holy Spirit, as a result of His Humanity, Death, Resurrection, and Ascension into heaven; see on v. 37, and note at end of this chapter.

It celebrated the Ingathering of the Fruits of the Earth, and so was typical of the Spiritual Fruits to be gathered into the Church, after the effusion of the Holy Ghost.

Occurring, as it did, in the Seventh or Sabbatical Month, and being continued for seven days, during which they dwelt in booths, and having a Great Sabbath on the Eighth day, which was the last festive day of the Jewish sacred year (see note on v. 37), it exhibited the Mystery of the Incarnation in its beginning and fulness. Cp. on Luke xxiv. 1.

3. ὕπαγε εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν go into Judaea. Thou doest miracles; show Thyself to men, that thou mayest be praised by them. Because, in thus speaking, they had regard to human glory, therefore the Evangelist adds, "not even His brethren were believing on Him." (Aug.)

c Mark 3. 21.

d ch. 3. 19.
& 14. 17.
& 15. 18.
e ch. 8. 20.

f ch. 11. 46.

g ver. 40.
& 6. 14. & 9. 16.
& 10. 19.
Matt. 21. 46.
Luke 7. 16.
h ch. 9. 22.
& 12. 42.
& 19. 38.

⁴ οὐδεὶς γὰρ ἐν κρυπτῷ τὶ ποιεῖ, καὶ ζητεῖ αὐτὸς ἐν παρρησίᾳ εἶναι εἰ ταῦτα ποιεῖς, φανέρωσον σεαυτὸν τῷ κόσμῳ. ⁵ ^c Οὐδὲ γὰρ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ ἐπίστευον εἰς αὐτόν·

⁶ Λέγει οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ὁ καιρὸς ὁ ἐμὸς οὐπω πάρεστιν· ὁ δὲ καιρὸς ὁ ὑμέτερος πάντοτε ἐστὶν ἑτοιμος. ⁷ ^d Οὐ δύναται ὁ κόσμος μισεῖν ὑμᾶς· ἐμὲ δὲ μισεῖ, ὅτι ἐγὼ μαρτυρῶ περὶ αὐτοῦ, ὅτι τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ πονηρὰ ἐστὶν. ⁸ ^e Ὑμεῖς ἀνάβητε εἰς τὴν ἑορτὴν· ἐγὼ οὐπω ἀναβαίνω εἰς τὴν ἑορτὴν ταύτην, ὅτι ὁ καιρὸς ὁ ἐμὸς οὐπω πεπλήρωται.

⁹ Ταῦτα δὲ εἰπὼν αὐτοῖς ἔμεινεν ἐν τῇ Γαλιλαίᾳ.

¹⁰ ^f Ὡς δὲ ἀνέβησαν οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ, τότε καὶ αὐτὸς ἀνέβη εἰς τὴν ἑορτὴν, οὐ φανερώς, ἀλλ' ὡς ἐν κρυπτῷ. ¹¹ ^g Οἱ οὖν Ἰουδαῖοι ἐζήτουν αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ καὶ ἔλεγον, Ποῦ ἐστὶν ἐκεῖνος; ¹² ^h Καὶ γογγυσμὸς πολλὸς περὶ αὐτοῦ ἦν ἐν τοῖς ὄχλοις. Οἱ μὲν ἔλεγον, Ὅτι ἀγαθὸς ἐστὶν· ἄλλοι ἔλεγον, Οὐ· ἀλλὰ πλανᾷ τὸν ὄχλον. ¹³ ^h Οὐδεὶς μέντοι παρρησίᾳ ἐλάλει περὶ αὐτοῦ διὰ τὸν φόβον τῶν Ἰουδαίων.

4. καὶ [ζητεῖ] On this use of καὶ, see Luke xxiv. 18.

5. Οὐδὲ γὰρ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ ἐπίστευον] For even His brethren were not believing on Him. Observe, ἐπίστευον, the imperfect: they were not believing in Him. They had made, as it were, an act of faith at Caana; there they believed, ἐπίστευσαν (ii. 11), when they saw His miracles; but it had not ripened into a habit of faith, which could stand the trial of difficulties.

They knew Christ as their kinsman in the flesh, but they were not believing in Him as God; they even charged Him with cowardice, "no man doeth any thing in secret;" and they intimated that they had suspicions as to the truth of His miracles; and they offered Him advice, dictated by carnal affection, and exciting Him to seek for worldly fame.

Observe, also, that the Evangelist does not decline to relate what at first might seem to bring disparagement on Christ and the Gospel; viz. that His brethren (i. e. His Cousins), were not believing in Him. An evidence of truth. And see how mildly their divine Master replies to their injurious speeches and mean counsels—thus teaching by His example, meekness, and forbearance to others. (Cp. Aug. and Chrys.)

6. Ὁ καιρὸς ὁ ἐμὸς] My season is not yet come. Remark the word καιρὸς, season for gathering fruit. See Matt. xiii. 30; xxi. 34. 41. Mark xi. 13. They had counselled Him to gather the fruit of fame by earthly means. He resolved to obtain Glory by Humility. The hour of My glory is not yet arrived, of that glory which I shall gain by suffering (xiii. 21. Phil. ii. 8, 9). I will manifest it when I come to judge. But your season is always ready, i. e. the season of earthly glory. That glory is always ripe. You may always gather it from the trees of this world's prairie.

We are members of the Lord's body; and whenever the lovers of this world triumph over us, let us say to them, Your season is always present; our season is not yet come. Our Country is on high, our path to it is lowly. Our vintage, our harvest, is not in the fields of earth, but it is in heaven. Cp. Aug.

There may also be a reference to the Festival then in course of celebration. My Festive Season of Ingathering is not yet come; the Festival of My Glory is not yet come. Go ye up to this Feast, ye who seek a worldly glory. I shall celebrate a Festival hereafter, a Festival not of a few days, but an everlasting Festival; joy without end, eternity without toil, serenity without a cloud. (Cp. Aug.)

Besides, in another sense, our Lord's Feast of Ingathering of Fruits was not yet come. But it would come when "He was glorified," and the Spirit was given (v. 39). Then He would celebrate a great Feast of Ingathering; for He would gather in a Harvest of Souls from all Nations. Acts ii. 5. 13. 41.

— ὁ δὲ καιρὸς ὁ ὑμέτερος] but your season is always ready. They who are friends with the world are never out of season in this life. Their season lasts as long as this world lasts. But when the fashion of this world has passed away, then they will be out of season, and then will be the season of Christ, and of all His true disciples. The Harvest is the end of the world. (Matt. xiii. 39.)

8. οὐπω ἀναβαίνω] I am not going up yet. This is the reading of the majority of MSS.—B, E, F, G, H, L, S, T, U, V, X, Γ, Δ, Λρ.—and is retained by Lachmann. Other recent Editors have received οὐκ, not, on the authority of D, K, M, and a few cursive MSS., and also of some Versions and Fathers. Chrys., who is quoted in favour of οὐκ, has οὐκ—ἄρτι, which is equivalent to οὐπω.

That οὐκ is a very ancient reading cannot be doubted (see Jerome, adv. Pelag. iv. p. 521, and August. Tract. 28, and Serm. 133). But the evidence of the MSS. being what it is, it would seem too bold a step to introduce it in the text. It is also somewhat rash to affirm, that οὐπω (not yet) has been introduced here into so many MSS. in order to meet the sceptical objection of Porphry (see Jerome l. c.), that Our Blessed Lord's conduct as recorded in v. 10, is not consistent with His saying here, οὐκ ἀναβαίνω, I am not going up. It is at least as probable, that οὐκ may have found its way into some early copies by inadvertence, and thence have passed into various Versions.

If οὐκ is the true reading, then the meaning appears to be, I am not now going up to the feast, because My season is not yet fulfilled. And when His brethren had gone up, then He went up to the feast, not, however, like one who set his face to Jerusalem for that purpose, and with a festal company, but privately; and so as not to arrive there till the Feast was half over; and then (it must be inferred) His season was come.

He did not manifest Himself till the midst of the Feast (see v. 14), which lasted a week. Doubtless there was a spiritual meaning in that act, and in those words of our Lord;

The Feast of Tabernacles, or dwelling in tents, commemorative of the sojourning of the Israelites in the desert, was figurative of our Lord's Incarnation, by which He pitched His tent in our Nature (see i. 14), and dwelt among us for a time in the wilderness of this world. See the note at the end of this chapter.

Our Lord's earthly Ministry (as seen in this Gospel, v. 1) lasted three years and a half. This appears to have been intimated by the Prophet Daniel saying that Messiah, the Prince, should confirm the covenant with many for one week, and that in the midst of the week He should cause the sacrifice and oblation to cease. (Dan. ix. 26.)

Christ fulfilled this prophecy by preaching and confirming the covenant with many for three years and a half, and by making the Sacrifices of the Temple to cease by the Sacrifice of Himself on the Cross, which was typified by those sacrifices, and was the fulfilment of them all; and by that suffering in the midst of the week His season was fulfilled. He was made perfect by suffering. (Heb. ii. 10.) All then was finished. (John xix. 30.) And as Daniel had prophesied, the sin of the Jews in killing Messiah, their Prince, would be the cause of the destruction of their city. Dan. ix. 26, 27.

10. ἀνέβη εἰς τὴν ἑορτὴν, οὐ φανερώς] It is not said that He remained concealed in Jerusalem, but that He went up privately. For three days the Jews sought Him in vain, for He was absent. And it was not till the fourth day of the Feast that He went up to the Temple (v. 14).

He would not go openly, lest by the concourse of people which His appearance and progress to Jerusalem would attract, He might give occasion to the cavils of His enemies that He was stirring up the people, and endeavouring to make Himself a King, and might so exasperate the Rulers against Him.

He went not up for temporal glory, but to teach wholesome doctrine. He went up privately, and, as it were, secretly. The Evangelical Truth of Christ lay long concealed in the figurative shadows of the Levitical law; "the body of them is of Christ," Col. ii. 17. (Cp. Aug.)

¹⁴ Ἡδη δὲ τῆς ἑορτῆς μεσουσσης ἀνέβη ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν καὶ ἐδίδασκε. ¹⁵ Ἐθαύμαζον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι λέγοντες, ἰ Πῶς οὗτος γράμματα οἶδε μὴ μεμαθηκώς; ¹⁶ ^k Ἀπεκρίθη οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν, Ἡ ἐμὴ διδασχὴ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐμῇ, ἀλλὰ τοῦ πέμψαντός με. ¹⁷ ^m Ἐάν τις θέλῃ τὸ θέλημα αὐτοῦ ποιεῖν, γνώσεται περὶ τῆς διδασχῆς, πότερον ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἔστιν, ἢ ἐγὼ ἀπ' ἐμαντοῦ λαλῶ. ¹⁸ ⁿ Ὁ ἀφ' ἐαυτοῦ λαλῶν τὴν δόξαν τὴν ἰδίαν ζητεῖ ὁ δὲ ζητῶν τὴν δόξαν τοῦ πέμψαντος αὐτὸν οὗτος ἀληθής ἐστι, καὶ ἀδικία ἐν αὐτῷ οὐκ ἔστιν. ¹⁹ ^o Οὐ Μωϋσῆς δέδωκεν ὑμῖν τὸν νόμον; καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐξ ὑμῶν ποιεῖ τὸν νόμον. τί με ζητεῖτε ἀποκτεῖναι; ²⁰ ^p Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ ὄχλος καὶ εἶπε, Δαιμόνιον ἔχεις· τίς σε ζητεῖ ἀποκτεῖναι; ²¹ Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Ἐν ἔργον ἐποίησα, καὶ πάντες θαυμάζετε διὰ τοῦτο. ²² Μωϋσῆς δέδωκεν ὑμῖν τὴν περιτομήν· οὐχ ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ Μωϋσεώς ἐστὶν ἀλλ' ἐκ τῶν πατέρων· καὶ ἐν σαββάτῳ περιτέμνετε ἄνθρωπον. ²³ Εἰ περιτομὴν λαμβάνει ἄνθρωπος ἐν σαββάτῳ, ἵνα μὴ λυθῇ ὁ νόμος Μωϋσεώς, ἐμοὶ χολάτε ὅτι ὅλον ἄνθρωπον ὑγιῇ ἐποίησα ἐν σαββάτῳ; ²⁴ ^u Μὴ κρίνετε κατ' ὄψιν, ἀλλὰ τὴν δικαίαν κρίσιν κρίνατε. ²⁵ Ἐλεγον οὖν τινὲς ἐκ τῶν Ἱεροσολυμιτῶν, Οὐχ οὗτός ἐστιν ὃν ζητοῦσιν ἀποκτεῖναι; ²⁶ καὶ ἶδε ^v παρρησίᾳ λαλεῖ καὶ οὐδὲν αὐτῷ λέγουσι· μήποτε ἀληθῶς ἔγνωσαν οἱ ἄρχοντες, ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Χριστός; ²⁷ ^w ἀλλὰ τοῦτον οἶδαμεν

i Matt. 13. 54. & 7. 28, 29. k ch. 3. 11. & 8. 28. & 12. 49. & 14. 10, 24. & 17. 8. l ch. 12. 24. m Isa. 50. 10. Hos. 6. 1—3. Matt. 6. 22. & 13. 12. Acts 8. 27—29. & 10. 1—6. Luke 8. 15. n ch. 5. 41, 43. & 8. 49, 50. Phil. 2. 3—8. o Exod. 20. 1. & 24. 3. Acts 7. 53. Matt. 12. 14. Mark 3. 6. ch. 5. 16, 18. & 10. 39. & 11. 53. p ch. 8. 48, 52. & 10. 20. q ch. 5. 1—9. ver. 23. r Gen. 17. 10. Lev. 12. 3. s Luke 13. 15, 16. & 14. 1—6. t Deut. 1. 16, 17. & 16. 19. ch. 8. 15. Prov. 24. 23. 2 Cor. 10. 7. James 2. 1. u ver. 4, 13. ch. 18. 20. v Matt. 13. 55. Mark 6. 3. Luke 4. 22.

¹⁴. τῆς ἑορτῆς μεσουσσης] when the feast was now half over He went up into the Temple and was teaching. The fourth day of the feast. He had made them more expectant by delay (see v. 11), and He had withdrawn Himself from their rage against Him; and so had endeavoured to calm them, and make them more attentive to His words. (Chrys.)

— ἐδίδασκε] was teaching: and, it is added, οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι ἐθαύμαζον, the Jews were wondering. For further explanation of this verse, see the note at end of the chapter, p. 308.

¹⁵. Πῶς οὗτος γράμματα οἶδε] How knoweth this man letters? This question ought to have led them to recognize that His wisdom was from above. And therefore Christ conducts them to this conclusion by saying “My doctrine is not Mine.” (Chrys.)

¹⁶. Ἡ ἐμὴ διδασχὴ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐμῇ] He again answers their thoughts. (Chrys.) “I am not from Myself;” thus also supplying a refutation of the Sabellian heresy, which says that the Father and the Son are One, being only two names of the same Essence. (Aug.)

¹⁷. Ἐάν τις θέλῃ τὸ θέλημα αὐτοῦ ποιεῖν] Whosoever wills it to do God's will, he shall know of the doctrine. Our Lord says, “If any one wills God's will, and not his own will, he shall know of the doctrine.” Self-will is the root of unbelief. Obedience to God's will is the root of Divine knowledge. (See John viii. 31, 32. 43.) For, “the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom (Ps. cxi. 10. Prov. ix. 10), and Mysteries are revealed to the meek (Ecclus. iii. 19), and he that keepeth the law getteth the understanding thereof” (Ecclus. xxi. 11). “Intellectus merces fidei est.” (Ambrose.)

¹⁹. Οὐ Μωϋσῆς δέδωκεν] Hath not Moses given you the Law? have you not the Law now in your hands? See next note.

— οὐδεὶς ἐξ ὑμῶν ποιεῖ τὸν νόμον] none of you keepeth the Law. If you kept the Law, you would recognize Him, of Whom the Law speaks; and you would not seek to break the Law which says, “Thou shalt not kill.” (Chrys., Aug.)

Our Lord refers to the Law three times in this chapter (vv. 19. 23), and the Law is mentioned also at vv. 49. 51. At the Feast of Tabernacles, in the seventh month in every seventh year, the Law was to be read publicly. (Deut. xxxi. 10. Nehem. viii. 13—16.) Hence the reference to the Law was pertinent now. Perhaps also this year, in which our Lord came to Jerusalem, was the Sabbatical year.

²¹. Ἐν ἔργον ἐποίησα, καὶ πάντες θαυμάζετε] I wrought one work and ye all marvel at it. I healed a man on the Sabbath-day (above, ch. v. 9); and ye do not reflect that this is not a mere single act, but part of a system of that Divine government which regulates the World; and that whosoever recovers his health on the Sabbath, is restored by no other power than that of Him with Whom you are offended because He healed a man on the Sabbath.

— διὰ τοῦτο] on account of this work. τοῦτο is emphatic; this one work as contrasted with Christ's ordinary government of the world. See preceding note. Ye marvel at one of My works, which is but a single specimen of My Power, and yet ye do not receive Me, Who prove My mission by My Works.

Therefore διὰ τοῦτο is to be best joined with what precedes, and not with what follows.

²². Μωϋσῆς δέδωκεν ὑμῖν τὴν περιτομήν] Moses hath given you circumcision. Christ thus proves that His act of healing on the Sabbath was not a violation of the Law. There are many things paramount to the law of the Sabbath,—things, by the observance of which the Law is not broken, but fulfilled. Moses himself acknowledged even a ceremonial (how much more a moral) commandment (that of Circumcision) to be superior to the law of the Sabbath, as these Jews understood it; for Circumcision is not of Moses, but of the Fathers; and I have done something superior and better than Circumcision,—i. e. I have made a man every whit whole. (Cp. Chrys. here.) Therefore Moses himself convicts you. For by the Law of Moses ye are taught to keep the Sabbath; and by the same Law ye circumcise a man on the eighth day; and if this eighth day falls on the Sabbath, ye administer Circumcision; which was given to Abraham before the Law, and is, as it were, a seal of salvation; and men ought not to rest from works of salvation on the Sabbath. (Aug.)

It was a precept of the Rabbis, that “Circumcisio pellit Sabbatum.” See the authorities from the Talmud in Welst. p. 837.

The non-observance of the Sabbath in the case of Circumcision, is in fact the observance of the Law. If the Sabbath is not broken in this case, the Law is broken. So I, in healing a man on the Sabbath, have kept the Law. You, who are not the Lawgivers, defend the Law amiss; but Moses, who gave the Law, commands the Law to be broken for the keeping of a commandment (that of Circumcision) which is not from the Law, but from the Fathers. (Chrys.)

²³. ὅλον ἄνθρωπον ὑγιῇ] I healed a whole man, not only a part (see xiii. 10, καθὰρὸς ὅλος. Cp. ix. 34); whereas Circumcision inflicts a wound. And that is to be performed on the Sabbath. Which work is the more sabbatical of the two?

The administration of Circumcision was attended with wounding of the flesh, and required the performance of certain “opera chirurgica et medicinalia, ne morbus ex vulnere ingrueret.”

Circumcision, which produces pain, is administered by you on the Sabbath, and yet ye condemn Me Who have freed a whole man from pain on the Sabbath. (Theoph.)

This saying illustrates the question of the relation of the Seventh-Day Sabbath to the Lord's Day. The Law of the Seventh-Day Sabbath gave way to the Rite of Circumcision, which took place on the Eighth Day. Circumcision was the typical forerunner of Christian Baptism, which is the Sacrament of Spiritual Resurrection from the grave of sin to newness of Life. Well, therefore, may the Jewish Seventh-Day Sabbath give way to the festival of Christ's Resurrection, which was on the Eighth Day; i. e. on the Octave of the First. See on Luke xiii. 56.

²⁴. Μὴ κρίνετε — κρίνατε] Observe the difference between κρίνετε and κρίνατε,—the one expressing habit, the other an act.

κ Matt. 24. 23.

x ch. 8. 26, 42, 55.
Rom. 3. 4.

y ch. 5. 43.
z ch. 9. 33.
& 8. 26. 33.
a Matt. 11. 27.
ch. 10. 15.

b ch. 8. 20, 37.
Mark 11. 18.
Luke 19. 47.
& 20. 19.
ver. 19.
c ch. 8. 20.
d ch. 8. 30.

e ch. 13. 33.

& 16. 16.
f ch. 12. 35.
& 13. 33.
& 16. 16.
g ch. 6. 62.
& 13. 1. 3.
& 14. 12.
& 16. 5. 10, 28.
& 17. 11.
h ch. 8. 21.
& 13. 33.
Matt. 23. 39.
Luke 13. 13.
i ch. 4. 14.
& 6. 35.
Lev. 23. 36.
Isa. 55. 1.
Rev. 22. 17.
j Isa. 12. 3.
& 44. 3.

πόθεν ἐστὶν ὁ δὲ Χριστὸς ὅταν ἔρχηται ὡς οὐδεὶς γινώσκει πόθεν ἐστὶν. ^(76/III) 28 * Ἐκραξεν οὖν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ διδασκων ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ λέγων, Καμὲ οἴδατε, καὶ οἴδατε πόθεν εἰμί ὃ καὶ ἀπ' ἐμαντοῦ οὐκ ἐλήλυθα, ἀλλ' ὅτι ἐστὶν ἀληθινὸς ὁ πέμψας με, ὃν ὑμεῖς οὐκ οἴδατε. ^{29 a} Ἐγὼ οἶδα αὐτὸν, ὅτι παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμί, κακὴν δὲ με ἀπέστειλεν.

^(77/I) 30 b Ἐζήτουν οὖν αὐτὸν πιάσαι καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐπέβαλεν ἐπ' αὐτὸν τὴν χεῖρα, ὅτι οὐπω ἐληλύθει ἡ ὥρα αὐτοῦ. ^(78/X) 31 d Πολλοὶ δὲ ἐκ τοῦ ὄχλου ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτὸν, καὶ ἔλεγον, Ὅτι ὁ Χριστὸς ὅταν ἔλθῃ, μῆτι πλείονα σημεῖα ποιήσῃ ὧν οὗτος ἐποίησεν;

^(79/I) 32 * Ἦκουσαν οἱ Φαρισαῖοι τοῦ ὄχλου γογγύζοντος περὶ αὐτοῦ ταῦτα καὶ ἀπέστειλαν οἱ Ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι ὑπηρέτας, ἵνα πιάσωσιν αὐτόν. ^(80/X) 33 e Εἶπεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἔτι μικρὸν χρόνον μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμι, καὶ ὑπάγω πρὸς τὸν πέμψαντά με. ^(81/X) 34 h ζήτήσετέ με, καὶ οὐχ εὑρήσετε καὶ ὅπου εἰμί ἐγὼ ὑμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἐλθεῖν. ³⁵ Εἶπον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι πρὸς ἑαυτοὺς, Ποῦ οὗτος μέλλει πορεύεσθαι, ὅτι ἡμεῖς οὐχ εὑρήσομεν αὐτόν; μὴ εἰς τὴν διασπορὰν τῶν Ἑλλήνων μέλλει πορεύεσθαι, καὶ διδάσκειν τοὺς Ἕλληνας; ³⁶ Τίς ἐστὶν οὗτος ὁ λόγος ὃν εἶπε, Ζητήσετέ με, καὶ οὐχ εὑρήσετε, καὶ ὅπου εἰμί ἐγὼ ὑμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἐλθεῖν;

^{37 i} Ἐν δὲ τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ μεγάλῃ τῆς ἑορτῆς εἰστήκει ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἔκραξε λέγων, Ἐάν τις διψᾷ, ἐρχέσθω πρὸς με καὶ πινέτω. ^{38 j} Ὁ πιστεύων

27. ὁ δὲ Χριστὸς ὅταν ἔρχηται οὐδεὶς γινώσκει] but when the Christ cometh no one knoweth whence He is. Yet the Scribes had answered from the Prophet Micah that He would be born in Bethlehem. (Matt. ii. 1—6.) Why then did they say, “no one knoweth,” &c.? Because the Scripture had prophesied this also,—“Who shall declare His generation?” (Isa. liii. 8.) The Scriptures had foreshown the place of His birth as Man,—but as God He was hidden from the evil, and sought the good. Hence our Lord said,—“Ye know whence I am” (v. 28).

28. Ἐκραξεν] He cried aloud, as a Prophet. (See on i. 15, and below, v. 37.) Contrast this with ὡς ἐν κρυπτῷ, in secret, v. 10. Here was the promulgation of His Divine Message; here His public manifestation. He was now at Jerusalem, the capital City, in the Temple, at the great final Festival of the Jewish year, and He cried aloud twice; once in the middle of the Festival, once at the end (v. 37). Cp. also xii. 44, and His last Cry with a loud voice on the cross (Matt. xxvii. 50. Mark xv. 37).

—οἴδατε πόθεν εἰμί] ye know whence I am; i. e. as Man; but in that I am God, “I am not come of myself, but He that sent Me is true, Whom ye know not.” (Origen, tom. xix.) And in this respect ye neither know Me nor my Father. (John viii. 19.) Ye know Me, and therefore your responsibility is greater, and your sin is heavier. But ye do not know Me spiritually and morally, so as to confess Me and obey Me; as it is said of the sons of Eli, “they knew not the Lord.” 1 Sam. ii. 12, and compare Isa. i. 3. Titus i. 16. (Chrys., Theoph.)

30. οὐπω ἐληλύθει ἡ ὥρα] His hour was not yet come; i. e. because it was not His will to be then taken. Our hour is His will; what is His hour but His own will? By His hour He means the time when He deigned to be slain,—not any time when He was compelled to die. (Aug.) See on ii. 4.

33. Ἔτι μικρὸν χρόνον μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμι] Yet a little while I am with you. Why are you in haste to kill Me? Wait a little, and I will depart from you. (Chrys., Aug.)

34. ζήτήσετέ με] ye will seek Me. Ye will weep over Me when ye have slain Me. (Chrys., Aug.)

—ὅπου εἰμί ἐγὼ] He does not say where I shall be, but where I am; and He does not say ye will not be able, but ye are not able to come; thus showing, that though on earth according to His visible Body, He is both in heaven and earth, according to His invisible Majesty. (See iii. 13.) But He would not drive them to despair; and, therefore, when He had said, “Whither I go, ye cannot come” (John xiii. 33), He said in His prayer, “Father, I will that they be with Me where I am” (John xvii. 24); and to Peter He said, “Whither I go, thou canst not follow Me now, but thou shalt follow Me afterwards” (John xiii. 36).

35. τὴν διασπορὰν τῶν Ἑλλήνων] Will He go to the Jews scattered among the Heathen, and teach them, and the Heathen by them? ἡ διασπορά means the tribes of the dispersion (James i.

1); the Jews dispersed among the Gentiles. (Chrys. Winer, p. 169.)

διασπορά is the word used by the LXX for the dispersion of the Jews. See Deut. xxx. 4. Nehem. i. 9. 2 Macc. i. 27, οἱ διασπαρέντες ἐν τοῖς Ἑλλήσι.

The question is one of incredulous mockery. Will He leave us who inhabit the Holy Land and Holy City, and go to strange and heathen Countries, in quest of those who are scattered like seeds strewn broadcast over the world? And yet this sceptical question (like many others of the same kind) was partly answered in the affirmative on the Day of Pentecost, when three thousand of the various Dispersions from all lands believed; and it will be completely answered, when the dry bones of Israel, scattered every where in the valley of this world, are revived by the breath of Christ. (Ezek. xxxvii. 1—11.)

On the various διασποράι, Dispersions, of the Jews among the Ἕλληνας, see on Acts ii. 9.

37. τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ μεγάλῃ] on the last day, the great day of the Feast; i. e. the eighth. See Levit. xxiii. 36. 39. Nehem. viii. 18. 2 Macc. x. 6, μετ' εὐφοροσύνης ἦγον ἡμέρας δέκτῳ σκηνωμάτων τρόπον, μνημονεύοντες ὡς πρὸ μικροῦ τὴν τῶν σκηνῶν ἑορτὴν ἐν τοῖς ὕρσι καὶ ἐν τοῖς σπηλαίοις θηρίων τρόπον ἦσαν νεμόμενοι. Joseph. Ant. iii. 10, ἐφ' ἡμέρας δέκτῳ ἑορτὴν ἔχοντας κ.τ.λ.: ἀνένται δὲ ἀπὸ παντὸς ἔργου κατὰ τὴν ὁδοδὴν ἡμέραν—καὶ ταῦτα μὲν Ἑβραίοις τὰς σκηνὰς πηγνύουσιν ἐπιτελεῖν ἐστὶ πάτριον.

The Feast of Tabernacles was itself called μεγίστη, the greatest feast, by the Jews (see Lightfoot, Jahn, as cited above, v. 2), and this was the greatest day of the greatest Festival. On this the eighth day only one bullock was to be offered; whereas on the first day thirteen bullocks, and on the second day twelve bullocks were to be offered; and so on, in a decreasing series. (Numb. xxix. 13—36.) The victim of the eighth, or greatest day of the Feast, seems to have been typical of the one Sacrifice offered on the Cross, to which all others were preparatory. Cp. Maithon on Types, p. 425.

—Ἐάν τις διψᾷ] If any one thirst, let him come to Me and drink. An allusion to the water drawn in a golden vase from the pool of Siloam, at the foot of Mount Zion, by the Priests, and poured on the Great Altar in the Temple, when the people sang the great Hallel (Psalms 113—118); according to the words of Isaiah, “With joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation” (Isa. xli. 3); as a memorial of the water from the Rock smitten in the wilderness, and typical of the living water of the Spirit, which would be poured forth, when the true Rock (1 Cor. x. 4) had been smitten. Cp. Zech. xiv. 8. 14, a prophecy read at the Feast of Tabernacles (Bengel) concerning the living water to flow in the spiritual Jerusalem to all Nations from Him whose Incarnation was indeed the Feast of Tabernacles, (see on John i. 14, and Surenhus., p. 356,) and Who says to all in the Gospel, εἰς ἐμὲ, καθὼς εἶπεν ἡ γραφή, ποταμοὶ ἐκ τῆς κοιλίας αὐτοῦ ρεύσουσιν ὕδατος ζῶντος. ³⁹ ^k Τοῦτο δὲ εἶπε περὶ τοῦ Πνεύματος οὗ ἐμελλον λαμβάνειν οἱ πιστεύοντες εἰς αὐτόν· οὕτω γὰρ ἦν Πνεῦμα ἅγιον, ὅτι Ἰησοῦς οὐδέπω ἐδοξάσθη.

(⁸²/_{vii}) ⁴⁰ ^l Πολλοὶ οὖν ἐκ τοῦ ὄχλου ἀκούσαντες τῶν λόγων ἔλεγον, Οὗτός ἐστιν ἀληθῶς ὁ προφήτης. ⁴¹ ^m Ἄλλοι ἔλεγον, Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Χριστός· (⁸³/_{vii}) ἄλλοι δὲ ἔλεγον, Μὴ γὰρ ἐκ τῆς Γαλιλαίας ὁ Χριστὸς ἔρχεται; ⁴² ⁿ οὐχὶ ἡ γραφή εἶπεν, ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ σπέρματος Δαυὶδ, καὶ ἀπὸ Βηθλεὲμ τῆς κώμης ὅπου ἦν Δαυὶδ, ὁ Χριστὸς ἔρχεται; (⁸⁴/_x) ⁴³ ^o σχίσμα οὖν ἐν τῷ ὄχλῳ ἐγένετο δι' αὐτόν. (⁸⁵/_i) ⁴⁴ ^t Τινὲς δὲ ᾔθελον ἐξ αὐτῶν πιάσαι αὐτόν, ἀλλ' οὐδεὶς ἐπέβαλεν ἐπ' αὐτόν τὰς χεῖρας. (⁸⁶/_x) ⁴⁵ ^s Ἦλθον οὖν οἱ ὑπηρέται πρὸς τοὺς Ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ Φαρισαίους· καὶ εἶπον αὐτοῖς ἐκεῖνοι, Διὰ τί οὐκ ἡγάγετε αὐτόν; ⁴⁶ ^p Ἀπεκρίθησαν οἱ ὑπηρέται, ^p Οὐδέποτε οὕτως ἐλάλησεν ἄνθρωπος ὡς οὗτος ὁ ἄνθρωπος. ⁴⁷ ^q Ἀπεκρίθησαν οὖν αὐτοῖς οἱ Φαρισαῖοι, ⁴⁸ ^q Μὴ καὶ ὑμεῖς πεπλάνησθε; ^q μή τις ἐκ τῶν ἀρχόντων ἐπίστευσεν εἰς αὐτόν, ἢ ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων; ⁴⁹ ^r ἀλλὰ ὁ ὄχλος οὗτος ὁ μὴ γινώσκων τὸν νόμον ἐπικατάρατοί εἰσι. ⁵⁰ ^s Λέγει Νικόδημος πρὸς αὐτοὺς, ὁ ἐλθὼν νυκτὸς πρὸς αὐτόν, εἰς ὧν ἐξ αὐτῶν, ⁵¹ ^t Μὴ ὁ νόμος ἡμῶν κρίνει τὸν ἄνθρωπον, ἐὰν μὴ ἀκούσῃ παρ' αὐτοῦ πρότερον, καὶ γινῶ τί ποιεῖ; ⁵² ^u Ἀπεκρίθησαν καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Μὴ καὶ σὺ ἐκ τῆς Γαλιλαίας εἶ; ἐρεύνησον καὶ ἴδε, ^v ὅτι προφήτης ἐκ τῆς Γαλιλαίας οὐκ ἐγγίγεται. ⁵³ ^v Καὶ ἐπορεύθη ἕκαστος εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ.

“Ho! every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters.” (Isa. lv. 1.)

When the water from Siloam was poured out upon the Altar, solemn Prayers were recited for a due supply of Rain in the year. See the citations from Jewish writers in Welst. p. 888, 9.

This the eighth day, or consummation of the feast, was prophetic of the full outpouring of the Blessings consequent on the Incarnation of Christ. See note at end of the chapter, p. 308.

38. καθὼς εἶπεν ἡ γραφή] as the Scripture saith. These words introduce a saying which is nowhere literally in Scripture. But it is found in spirit and in substance in several places of Scripture (Isa. xii. 3; xxxv. 6, 7; xlii. 19; xlv. 3. Joel ii. 28. Zech. xii. 10; xiv. 8. Cp. John iv. 14). And the Holy Spirit often quotes Scripture in this way. See on Matt. ii. 23. And thus Christ appropriates Scripture to Himself, and declares its sense. See Cyril here, who well says, εἰδέναι καλὸν, ὅτι περ οὗ τὸ ρητὸν οὕτως ἔχον ὡς προεφήνευται παρὰ τῇ θεῇ γραφῇ τοῖς αὐτοῦ λόγοις ἐνέθηκεν ὁ Σωτὴρ, ἐρμηνεύσας δὲ μάλλον πρὸς διάνοιαν.

— ἐκ τῆς κοιλίας] out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. κοιλία = Hebr. beten (Ps. cxxi. 10, where it is used with soul. (Cp. Job xv. 35.) The LXX often interchange καρδία and κοιλία. (See the passages in Kuin, here.) They will flow from his conscience and from his heart, for which the word belly is sometimes employed by a Hebrew figure. (Theoph. Cp. Glass. Phil. 5, p. 795.)

Or perhaps the sense is, even the κοιλία itself, or seat of natural appetites, will be changed and spiritualized by the grace of God, so as to become a fountain of holiness. Cp. Mark vii. 19, where the κοιλία is contrasted with the καρδία. Drink of this water, and the inward parts will be cleansed and become a fountain, and flow for others. They drink who believe. But if he who drinks deems that he ought to minister only to himself, the fountain does not flow; but if he is eager for his neighbour's good, it is not dry, but flows. (Aug.) Christ speaks of rivers, not of one river only; and thus intimates the richness and abundance of divine grace. The Holy Spirit, having been poured forth into the heart, flows forth more copiously than any stream, and never fails, nor is stagnant. Witness the wisdom of Stephen, the eloquence of Peter, the impetuosity of Paul. Nothing was able to resist them; they flowed like torrents in their course, and carried every thing with them. (Chrys.)

Thus our Lord explains the character of the water of Siloam as figurative of the illuminating graces of the Holy Spirit, sent by Him Who is ὁ ἀπεσταλμένος. (See ix. 7.)

39. οὕτω γὰρ ἦν Πνεῦμα ἅγιον] the Holy Spirit was not yet; i. e. was not yet given. Cp. Acts xix. 2. B adds δεδομένον, but this is probably only a gloss. The waters could not flow from the Rock, which is Christ, till the Rock had been smitten.

How then is it that we read that John the Baptist was filled with the Holy Ghost from his mother's womb, and that Zacharias, Mary, Simeon, and Anna were filled with the Holy Ghost? Because the gift of the Holy Ghost after the glorification of Christ was distinguished by certain peculiar characteristics from all previous bestowals of the Spirit. (Aug. de Trin. iv. 20.) But why now that Christ is glorified do not men speak with tongues, by the operation of the same Spirit who came at Pentecost? Because the Church herself, being diffused every where, speaks now with the tongues of all nations. You may ask me, Do I speak with tongues? Yes; because I am a member of Christ's body the Church, which speaks in every language of the world. (Aug.)

— ὅτι Ἰησοῦς οὐδέπω ἐδοξάσθη] because Jesus was not yet glorified; as He was afterwards by His Death, Resurrection, and finally by His Ascension into heaven. But now that Jesus has been glorified, the gift of the Holy Ghost has been bestowed. Hence we may refute the Montanists and Manichæans, who pretend to have received the promise of the Holy Ghost, as if the gift had not been given to any before them. (Aug.) Cp. note below, Acts ii. 1—33. 36; iv. 10.

40. τῶν λόγων] His words. So Twelve Uncials.—Elz. τὸν λόγον.

41. Μὴ γὰρ ἐκ τῆς Γαλιλαίας ὁ Χριστός;] Doth then Christ come out of Galilee? They knew what the prophets had foretold of Christ; they knew where Jesus had been brought up, but did not pay attention to the place of His birth. But did they not know that He was of the seed of David? They were wilfully blind, and would not inquire into the evidence; they were not like Nathanael, who at first had asked, “Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?” (John i. 46,) but He was an Israelite indeed, in whom there was no guile, and therefore he came and saw. (Chrys., Alcuin.)

49. ὁ ὄχλος οὗτος] this multitude which knoweth not the Law are cursed. And yet they, of whom these Rulers said that they knew not the Law, believe in Him who had given the Law, whereas they, who professed to teach it, condemned Him, so that our Lord's saying might be fulfilled, “I have come that they who see not may see, and they who see may be made blind.” John ix. 39. (Aug.) Here is their condemnation; the People believed, and the Rulers did not believe; they who were Teachers of the Law, disobeyed the Law (for, as Nicodemus says, “Doth the Law judge any one before it know what he doeth?”); they who know not the Law, obey the Law. (Chrys., who quotes Isa. i. 10. Mic. iii. 1.)

52. προφήτης ἐκ τῆς Γαλιλαίας οὐκ ἐγγίγεται] out of Galilee hath arisen no Prophet. Yet Jonah and Nahum, and perhaps k Joel 2. 28.

Acts 2. 17.
& 19. 20, 44.
ch. 16. 7.

l ch. 1. 21.
& 4. 42. & 6. 14.
Deut. 18. 15.
Matt. 21. 46.
Luke 7. 16.
m ch. 1. 46.
ver. 52.
n Ps. 132. 11.
Micah 5. 2.
Matt. 2. 5.
Luke 2. 4.
l Sam. 16. 1, 4.
o ch. 9. 16.
& 10. 19.

p Matt. 7. 28, 29
q ch. 12. 42.
l Cor. 1. 20, 26—
29. & 2. 7, 8.
Acts 6. 7.
r Mark 12. 37.
s ch. 3. 2.

t Exod. 23. 1
Lev. 19. 15.
Deut. 1. 17.
& 17. 4. 8.
& 19. 15—19.
u Isa. 9. 1, 2.
Matt. 4. 15.
ch. 1. 46.
v ver. 41.
ch. 1. 46.

VIII. ¹ Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἐπορεύθη εἰς τὸ ὄρος τῶν Ἐλαιῶν. ² Ὁρβρου δὲ πάλιν παρεγένετο εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν, καὶ πᾶς ὁ λαὸς ἤρχετο πρὸς αὐτόν· καὶ καθίσας ἐδίδασκεν αὐτούς.

Elijah, did arise from Galilee. So that they prove themselves ignorant of their own History, while they condemn Christ. Some MSS. (B, D, K, T, Γ, Δ) have ἐγείρεται, ariseth; a reading worthy of consideration.

REVIEW OF THE CONTENTS OF THE FOREGOING CHAPTER.—The Gospel of St. John is eminently a πνευματικὸν εὐαγγέλιον, and to be interpreted spiritually. (See Clemens Alex. ap. Euseb. vi. 14.) Especially does it dwell on the Mystery of the Incarnation of the Eternal Word, and on the blessed results of that great Mystery to the World.

In this Gospel, the Holy Spirit says that the Eternal Word became Flesh, and pitched His Tabernacle in Human Nature, ἐσκήνωσεν ἐν ἡμῖν (i. 14). And now, in this Chapter, He describes the Incarnate Word coming up and preaching in the Temple at Jerusalem, at the Feast of Tabernacles, the Σκηνοπηγία.

There were three Great Yearly Festivals, on which all the male adults of God's people were commanded to appear before God. (Exod. xxiii. 14—17. Levit. xxiii. 4—18. Deut. xvi. 16.)

The two Great Festivals, the Feast of Passover and the Feast of Pentecost, were figures of things to come, and had a typical reference to the Blessings of the Gospel in Christ, Who is the substance of the Law. (Col. ii. 17.)

It is therefore reasonable to suppose, that the third Great Annual Festival of the Ancient People of God,—viz. the Feast of Tabernacles,—had also a symbolical relation to Christ.

What relation was that?

St. John seems to have suggested the answer to that question by saying, ὁ Λόγος ἐσκήνωσεν ἐν ἡμῖν (i. 14), 'the Word tabernacled in us.' The Incarnation of Christ is the Evangelical Scenopagia, or Feast of Tabernacles.

This conclusion is confirmed by other considerations. The Greek word σκηνή, as used by the LXX, represents two things,—

The Tabernacle, מִשְׁכָּן (mishcan), in which the Divine Presence, or Shechinah dwelt, שָׁכַן (shachan). (See above, on i. 14.)

The Tents, or Booths, or Tabernacula, סֻכּוֹת (succoth), in which the Ancient People of God dwelt in the Wilderness. And these tents were represented in the Feast of Tabernacles, when the people dwelt in booths. It also commemorated the overshadowing of the People with the Pillar of the Cloud, or heavenly Tabernacle of the Divine Glory, in their course through the Desert. See Buxtorf, Synag. Jud. cap. xxi.

The word Σκηνή, therefore, represents both a divine and human habitation. And ἐσκήνωσε fitly describes the sojourn of our Lord in His Divine and human Nature in this lower world. He pitched His tent (σκηνήν ἔπηξε) at His Incarnation in our Nature, and became our Emmanuel, God with us; and the Shechinah of Deity was enshrined in the Σκηνή of our humanity.

The Σκηνοπηγία was pre-eminently the Feast of the Jews. It is called μεγίστη, the greatest, by Philo (de Septenario, p. 1193). See above, on v. 2. And the Feast of our Lord's Nativity in our Flesh, is the Queen and Mother of all Festivals. Without it, no Christian Passover, no Christian Pentecost.

The Holy Spirit speaks of the Israelites coming forth from Egypt as typical of Christ. (Matt. ii. 15.)

Solomon's Temple was dedicated at the Feast of Tabernacles. (2 Chron. v. 2, 3, 7.) And the Temple of God was a type of Christ's Body, in which the Fulness of the Godhead dwells. (John ii. 19, 21.)

At the Feast of Tabernacles, water from Siloam was poured forth upon the Altar. This was typical of the outpouring of the Holy Ghost (v. 37). The first effusion of the Holy Ghost upon our Nature was in the Incarnation of Him Who as Man was conceived by the Holy Ghost. (Luke i. 35.) A fresh effusion took place at His Baptism (Matt. iii. 16), and the final consummation was at Pentecost; but all were due to the condescension of the Son of God taking our Flesh.

At the Feast of Tabernacles, there was special joy and exultation in the Court of the Women in the Temple. There lights were kindled (see below on viii. 12), while the Priests sung the Songs of Degrees, i. e. of the Pilgrims going up to Jerusalem. (Ps. cxx.—cxxxiv.) At the Incarnation of Christ, the promised seed of the Woman was born (Gen. iii. 15), and then Woman, who had been the cause of man's expulsion from Paradise, became in God's hands the instrument of His restoration (see on 1 Tim. ii. 15); and by her Seed we ascend to the Jerusalem that is above, which is the Mother of us all. (Gal. iv. 26.)

Supposing, then, the Feast of Tabernacles to be typical of our Lord's Incarnation, and sojourn in this world, we may thence see some fresh light reflected on the incidents of this chapter, describing our Lord's ascent to this Feast at Jerusalem.

Our Lord went up to this Feast (v. 10), not openly, but as it were in secret; His Nativity was private, in a poor inn. He spent a great part of His Life in obscurity at Nazareth. The Evangelist's words here are literally true of that time, before His Manifestation to the world, He abode in Galilee (v. 9).

But when His season was come, He went up and taught publicly at Jerusalem in the Temple (see Luke xix. 47; xx. 1; xxi. 37; xxii. 53). Especially did He manifest Himself twice with power in the Temple, in His Ministry, at the beginning of it and the end; when He cleansed the Temple. (John ii. 14, 15. Matt. xxi. 12.)

His sojourn upon Earth divides itself into two parts; the first part when He was in obscurity, the latter part when He came forth publicly and taught in Jerusalem.

Accordingly, we find that He came up to the Temple in the midst of the week of the Feast of Tabernacles (v. 14), ἐορτῆς μεσούσης, i. e. when three and a half days remained to its close. And it may be worthy of notice, that in all probability His public Ministry lasted three and a half years. See Dan. ix. 27, and above on v. 14.

During His teaching in the Temple, as here recorded by St. John (v. 35), the Jews asked whether He would go to the dispersion among the Gentiles? He did go to them by His Apostles; and they came to Him at the outpouring of the Holy Ghost at Pentecost, to which He refers v. 39; and by means of which His Gospel was preached in all tongues to those who were scattered abroad. (Acts ii. 9—12.)

On the eighth day of the Feast (v. 37), He cried, "If any one thirst, let him come unto Me and drink." This spake He of the SPIRIT, which they who should believe in Him would receive after He was glorified.

The Feast of Tabernacles, properly speaking, lasted for seven days. That is, they dwelt in tents for a week. See Levit. xxiii. 34—42. Numb. xxix. 12—35. Deut. xvi. 13. Neh. viii. 14—18. The eighth day, or Great Day, was a Feast by itself; it was the consummation of that Feast, and of all the Feasts of the year. The outpouring of the Holy Spirit was the crowning boon, and final gift which Christ bestowed on the Church, after that the week of His sojourn in His fleshly Tabernacle on earth was over, and when He was glorified (v. 39), and the Tabernacle of our Nature was carried up by Him into Heaven. It was the consummation of all the Blessings of the Incarnation.

The Jews omitted to keep the Feast of Tabernacles for many centuries, even from Joshua to Ezra. (Nehem. viii. 13.) And now, for many centuries, they have refused to receive the Eternal Word, Who became Flesh and tabernacled in us. (John i. 14.)

It is prophesied that all Nations will come up to keep the Feast of Tabernacles. (Zech. xiv. 16—19.) Is not this a prediction of the universal preaching of Christ, as Emmanuel, God with us?

It is said at the close of this narrative (viii. 1), that Jesus went to the Mount of Olives,—the place of His future Ascension into Heaven; whence He would send the gift of the Holy Ghost.

The Law of Moses was read at this Feast (see note on v. 19), and the cycle of the Jewish Calendar of Lessons of the Law to be read in the Synagogues commenced with this Feast. And our Lord defends His own practice from the Law, and compares His own beneficent miracles with the ceremonies of the Law to which He appeals. He came not to destroy the Law, but to fulfil. (Matt. v. 17.) The Law was given by Moses, but Grace and Truth came by Jesus Christ (i. 17).

A question arises (v. 27, 41, 42) concerning the place at which Christ was to be born, i. e. to become Incarnate, or pitch His Tabernacle in our Nature; it was very appropriate at the Σκηνοπηγία; and our Lord tells the Jews that the time of His sojourn with them on earth is short (v. 33). His bodily Σκηνή would soon be removed from them.

At the Feast of Tabernacles, water from Siloam was poured forth on the Altar of Burnt Sacrifices in the Temple (see on v. 37). This water was commemorative of the water miraculously flowing from the Rock smitten in the wilderness, to refresh the Israelites on their journey; and that Rock was Christ (1 Cor. x.

³ Ἀγοῦσι δὲ οἱ Γραμματεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι πρὸς αὐτὸν γυναῖκα ἐν μοιχείᾳ κατεilhμμένην, καὶ στήσαντες αὐτὴν ἐν μέσῳ ⁴ λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, Διδάσκαλε, αὕτη

4), smitten for the sins of the world, and pouring out His Life for the supply of living streams to the soul; and for the hallowing of all sacrifices of prayer and praise to God. He is the true foot of Siloam, "which is by interpretation sent" (ix. 7), for He was sent to save the world, and He is true who sent Him (v. 28), and He will return to Him that sent Him (v. 33). The water poured on the Altar was also figurative of the effusion of the Holy Spirit, which He sent, and which they who believed in the Incarnation of the Eternal Word should receive, after He was glorified (v. 39).

It has been affirmed by some learned writers that the Feast of Tabernacles was also prophetic of Christ's Incarnation in another respect, namely, in time; and that our Lord's Nativity coincided with it in the season of the year in which this Festival was celebrated, see Mede's Works, pp. 266—270. Mather on Types, pp. 424—428. This opinion deserves consideration. Many in ancient times believed that our Lord's Ministry lasted three years and a half; see above on v. 1, and vii. 8 and 14. If this belief is sound, then since His Ministry ended at a Passover, it must have commenced in the fourth year before that Passover at or about the Feast of Tabernacles in that year. His Baptism must have taken place at or about that season. And the season of His Baptism seems to have been nearly contemporaneous with that of His Birth; see Luke iii. 23, and above, i. 49.

NOTE on ch. vii. 53—viii. 1—11.—This passage, from ch. vii. 53, to ch. viii. 1—11 inclusive, is rejected as spurious by many Editors, on the following grounds ¹.

It is not found in some of the oldest and best Manuscripts, viz. A, B, C, L, T, X, Δ, nor in the Leicester MS. (Scriv. p. 394), and above fifty cursive copies.

It is not found in many Ancient Versions; particularly the Old Latin (Codd. Vercel. and Brixian.), the Old Syriac (Curretton), the Peschito and Harclean Syriac, the Armenian and other Versions.

It is not commented on by Origen, Cyril, Chrysostom, Theophylact, and others, in their Expositions of this Gospel; nor is it quoted by Tertullian and Cyprian on occasions when they could hardly have failed to notice it; nor by any Father of the second century.

It is not found in any consistent form in those MSS. where it exists, but in a variety of diverse recensions, with many discrepancies of various readings. (Lücke, 254. Davidson, p. 359. Alf., p. 708. Tisch., p. 602.)

It differs in style from the rest of St. John's Gospel, e. g. παρεβόμαι with ἐἰς is not found in this Gospel; nor ὄρθρον, nor παραβόμαι ἐἰς, nor ὁ λαὸς in this sense, but ὁ ὄχλος; nor such an expression as ἐδίδασκον αὐτοὺς, nor οἱ γραμματεῖς as the adversaries of our Lord; nor does St. John usually connect his sentences by means of δέ, as here, vv. 1—3. 5—7. 9—11, but οὖν. See Lücke, ii. p. 256. Alf., p. 710. Meyer, p. 214.

It is said that it was derived from a narrative of Papias, a scholar of St. John, which was first inserted in the Gospel of the Hebrews (Euseb. iii. 39), and thence passed into this Gospel. Cp. Routh, R. S. i. 39.

On the other hand, it is found in D, E, F, G, H, K, M, S, U, T, and in more than 300 cursive MSS.

It is, however, to be observed, that in E it is marked with asterisks in the margin, and in sixteen cursive copies. In S it is marked with obeli, and in forty cursive copies. It is placed at the end of the Gospel in ten cursive copies. In some MSS. (e. g. Gr.) it is placed at the end of St. Luke xxi.

It is found in some MSS. of the Old Latin Version, and in the Vulgate, and in the Arabic, Persian, Coptic, Philoxenian Syriac, and Æthiopic Versions.

It is commented on by Augustine, in his Exposition of the Gospel (Tract. xxxiii.); and he adverts in another place (de Conj. Adulterii. ii. 6, 7) to its omission from some MSS. "Hoc infidelium sensus exhorret, ut nonnulli modicæ, vel potius inimici veræ fidei, credo, metuentes peccandi impunitatem dari mulieribus suis, illud quod de Adulteræ indulgentiâ Dominus fecit (Joh. viii. 3—11) auferrent de Codicibus suis; quasi permissionem peccandi tribuerit Qui dixit 'Deinceps noli peccare.'" Cp. Aug. de Cons. Evang. iv. 17. De verâ Pœnit. c. 13.

It is also quoted by S. Ambrose (Apol. David. ii. 1), who refers to the scruple which the hearing of this Chapter read in the Church might cause in some minds. "Non mediocrem scrupulum movere potuit imperitis Evangelii lectio, quæ decursa est, in quo advertitis Adulteram Christo oblatam, eamque sine damnatione dimissam. Nam profectò si quis ea auribus acceperit otiosis, incentum erroris incurrit, cum legit . . . Adulteræ absolutionem. Lubrica igitur ad lapsum via." See also Ambrose, de Spiritu Sanc. iii. 3. Epist. vii. 58; ix. 76.

It is also adduced by S. Jerome, in his argument against the Pelagians (ii. 6), with an assertion that it is found "in Evangelio secundum Joannem, in multis et Græcis et Latinis Codicibus."

It is treated as genuine in the Apostolic Constitutions, ii. 24. Some assert that it was in the MSS. of the Armenians, and that they expunged it, βλαβεράν εἶναι λέγοντες τοῖς πολλοῖς τὴν τοιαύτην ἀκρόασιν. (Nicon in Cotelier. Patr. Apostol. i. p. 238.)

The various readings of this passage are indeed very numerous. But they may be reduced on the whole to three main Recensions:—that of the 'Textus Receptus,' that of the Codex D (Codex Bezae), which is a somewhat abridged form of the narrative; and that of other MSS. differing from those on which the 'Textus Receptus' is grounded.

These Recensions are printed below ².

Wotstein, Semler, Wegscheider, Paulus, Tittman, Knapp, Lücke, Credner, Tholuck, Olshausen, Davidson, Bleek, De Wette, Tischendorf, Lachmann, Tregelles, Meyer, and others; and defended as genuine by Muldner, à Lapide, Mill, Whately, Fabricius, Wolf, Lampe, Bengel, Michaelis, Storr, Stuedlein, Hug, Kuinoel, Scholz, and others.

¹ Cp. Lücke, Commentar. vol. ii. pp. 243—279. Davidson's Introduction, pp. 356—367. Tregelles on the Text of the Greek Test., pp. 236—243; and the Notes and Collations of Griesbach, Kuinoel, Scholz, Bloomfield, Tischendorf, Alfard, and Meyer. The passage has been regarded as an interpolation by Erasmus, Calvin, Beza, Grotius, ² Textus receptus à Scholzio emendatus.

Καὶ ἐπορεύθη ἕκαστος εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ. Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἐπορεύθη εἰς τὸ ὄρος τῶν ἐλαιῶν. Ὁρῶν δὲ πάλιν παρεγένετο εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν, καὶ πᾶς ὁ λαὸς ἤρχετο πρὸς αὐτὸν, καὶ καθίσας ἐδίδασκεν αὐτούς. Ἀγοῦσι δὲ οἱ μοιχεῖς κατεilhμμένην, καὶ στήσαντες αὐτὴν ἐν μέσῳ λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, διδάσκαλε, αὕτη ἡ γυνὴ κατεilhμμένη ἐπ' αὐτοφώρῳ μοιχομενῇ. Ἐν δὲ τῷ νόμῳ Μωσῆς ἡμῖν ἐτελείατο τὰς τοιαύτας λιβάσεις· σὺ οὖν τί λέγεις περὶ αὐτῆς; Τοῦτο δὲ ἔλεγον περὶ αὐτῆς αὐτὴν, ἵνα ἔχουσιν κατηγορίαν κατ' αὐτοῦ. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς κῆρας κῆρας τῷ δακτύλῳ ἔγραφεν εἰς τὴν γῆν. Ὅς δὲ ἐπέμενον ἐρωτῶντες αὐτὸν, ἀνακίψας εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς· ὁ ἀναμάρτητος ἡμῶν πρῶτος τὸν λίθον ἐπ' αὐτὴν βαλέτω. Καὶ πάλιν κῆρας κῆρας ἔγραφεν εἰς τὴν γῆν. Οἱ δὲ ἀκούσαντες καὶ ὑπὸ τῆς συνεδίσσεως ἐλεγχόμενοι ἐξήρχοντο εἰς αὐτὴν, ἵνα ἔρξονται ἀπὸ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων ἕως τῶν ἐσχάτων, καὶ κατεilhμμένη μόνος ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ ἡ γυνὴ ἐν μέσῳ οὖσα. Ἀνακίψας δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ κηδένα θεασάμενος πλὴν τῆς γυναῖκος εἶπεν αὐτῇ· γύναι, ποῦ εἰσιν ἐκεῖνοι οἱ κατηγοροὶ σου; οὐδεὶς σε κατέκρινεν; Ἡ δὲ εἶπεν· οὐδεὶς, κύριε. εἶπε δὲ αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς· οὐδὲ ἐγὼ σε κατακρίνω· πορεύου καὶ μηκέτι ἀμάρτανε.

Textus codicis D.

Καὶ ἐπορεύθησαν ἕκαστος εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ. Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἐπορεύθη εἰς τὸ ὄρος τῶν ἐλαιῶν. Ὁρῶν δὲ πάλιν παρεγίνετο εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν, καὶ πᾶς ὁ λαὸς ἤρχετο πρὸς αὐτόν. Ἀγοῦσι δὲ οἱ γραμματεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι ἐπὶ ἀμαρτίᾳ γυναῖκα εἰλημμένην καὶ στήσαντες αὐτὴν ἐν μέσῳ, λέγουσιν αὐτῷ ἐκτεπείζοντες αὐτὸν οἱ ἱερεῖς, ἵνα ἔχουσιν κατηγορίαν αὐτοῦ· διδάσκαλε, αὕτη ἡ γυνὴ κατεilhμμένη ἐπαυτοφώρῳ μοιχομενῇ Μωσῆς δὲ ἐν τῷ νόμῳ ἐκέλευσε τὰς τοιαύτας λιβάσεις· σὺ δὲ νῦν τί λέγεις; Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς κῆρας κῆρας τῷ δακτύλῳ κατέγραφεν εἰς τὴν γῆν. Ὅς δὲ ἐπέμενον ἐρωτῶντες, ἀνέκλυσε καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς· ὁ ἀναμάρτητος ἡμῶν πρῶτος ἐπ' αὐτὴν βαλέτω λίθον. Καὶ πάλιν κατακίψας τῷ δακτύλῳ κατέγραφεν εἰς τὴν γῆν. Ἐκαστος δὲ τῶν Ἰουδαίων ἐξήρχοντο, ἀρξάμενοι ἀπὸ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων· ὥστε πάντας ἐξελεῖν καὶ κατεilhμμένη μόνος, καὶ ἡ γυνὴ ἐν μέσῳ οὖσα. Ἀνακίψας δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, εἶπεν τῇ γυναῖκι· ποῦ εἰσιν; οὐδεὶς σε κατέκρινεν; Κάκειντι εἶπεν αὐτῷ· οὐδεὶς, κύριε. ὁ δὲ εἶπεν· οὐδὲ ἐγὼ σε κατακρίνω· ὑπάγε, ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν μηκέτι ἀμάρτανε.

Textus codicum multorum.

Καὶ ἀπῆλθεν ἕκαστος εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ. Καὶ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐπορεύθη εἰς τὸ ὄρος τῶν ἐλαιῶν. Ὁρῶν δὲ πάλιν βαθεῖος ἦλθεν (ὁ Ἰησοῦς) εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν, καὶ πᾶς ὁ ὄχλος ἤρχετο· καὶ καθίσας ἐδίδασκεν αὐτούς. Φέρονται πρὸς αὐτὸν (αἱ καὶ προσήνεγκαν αὐτῷ) οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι γυναῖκα ἐπὶ μοιχείᾳ καταληβθεῖσαν· καὶ στήσαντες αὐτὴν ἐπὶ τῷ μέσῳ. Εἶπον περὶ αὐτῆς διδάσκαλε, αὕτη ἡ γυνὴ ἐπ' αὐτοφώρῳ μοιχομενῇ. Καὶ ἐν τῷ νόμῳ Μωσῆς ἐτελείατο τὰς τοιαύτας λιβάσεις· σὺ οὖν τί λέγεις περὶ αὐτῆς; Τοῦτο δὲ εἶπον περὶ αὐτῆς (ἐκτεπείζοντες), ἵνα ἔχουσιν (σχῶσι) κατηγορίαν κατ' αὐτοῦ· ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς κῆρας κῆρας τῷ δακτύλῳ (τῷ δ. = αἱ) κατέγραφεν (S. ἔγραφεν) εἰς τὴν γῆν, μὴ προσποιούμενος (αἱ καὶ προσποιοῦμενος). Ὅς δὲ ἐπέμενον ἐρωτῶντες αὐτὴν, καὶ ἀναβλέψας (ἀνέκλυσε καὶ) λέγει αὐτοῖς· ὁ ἀναμάρτητος ἡμῶν πρῶτος λίθον βαλέτω ἐπ' αὐτὴν (S. ἐπ' αὐτὴν τὸν λ. βαλέτω· αἱ αἰτεῖ). Καὶ πάλιν κῆρας κῆρας ἔγραφεν εἰς τὴν γῆν ἕως ἑκάστου αὐτῶν τὰς αμαρτίας. Καὶ ἐξῆλθεν εἰς ἕκαστος αὐτῶν (S. εἰς καθ' εἰς) ἀρξάμενοι ἀπὸ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων, καὶ κατεilhμμένη ὁ Ἰησοῦς (S. ὁ Ἰησοῦς μόνος) καὶ ἡ γυνὴ ἐν μέσῳ οὖσα. Ἀναβλέψας δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶδεν αὐτὴν καὶ (εἶδεν αὐτὴν καὶ = αἱ) εἶπε γύναι· (γύναι = αἱ), ποῦ εἰσιν οἱ κατηγοροὶ σου; (αἱ) ποῦ εἰσιν οἱ κ. σ. =, αἱ ποῦ εἰσιν; habent) Ἡ δὲ εἶπεν· οὐδεὶς, κύριε· καὶ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπε· οὐδὲ ἐγὼ σε κρίνω· πορεύου, καὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν μηκέτι ἀμάρτανε.

a Lev. 20. 10.
Deut. 22. 21—24.

ἡ γυνὴ κατελήφθη ἐπ' αὐτοφάρω μοιχευομένη. ⁵ Ἐν δὲ τῷ νόμῳ Μωϋσῆς ἡμῖν ἐνετείλατο τὰς τοιαύτας λιθάξαι σὺ οὖν τί λέγεις περὶ αὐτῆς; ⁶ Τοῦτο

Many of the objections from stylé may be in part removed by an examination of the various readings;

It is said that πορεύομαι is not used with εἰς by St. John, but it is found in vii. 35; and it is not easy to say what other preposition he should have employed here. ἔθρονον is not used by him elsewhere in this Gospel. It is used by St. Luke, but only once in his Gospel (xxiv. 1), and ἔθροια only once (xxiv. 22). ὁ λαός is found in D here, but ὁ ὄχλος is in S and other MSS.: ἐδίδασκεν αὐτοὺς is not in D; and for οἱ γραμματεῖς some MSS. have οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς.

As to the narrative by Papias, it is not clear that it relates to the same incident as that before us. Eusebius says (iii. 39) concerning it, that "Papias has put forth a history concerning a woman accused before the Lord of many sins (ἐπὶ πολλαῖς ἀμαρτίαις), which the Gospel of the Hebrews contains." And even if it were the same history as that in this passage, it is not evident that it might not have been recorded by St. John, as well as by his scholar Papias after him.

We find, then, that the external evidence on both sides is strong. The Western Church of the fourth century appears to have pronounced in its favour. Not so (it seems) the primitive Western. It does not appear to have been known to Tertullian or Cyprian. And the authority of the Eastern Church is against it.

There is, however, a difference in the nature of these two testimonies. That of the West is affirmative; that of the East negative. The evidence of the former is the evidence of positive testimony; that of the latter is rather the evidence of silence.

For example: much stress has been laid on the omission of this passage by Chrysostom in his Exposition; and his example seems to have given a bias to the Eastern Church in this respect. As the Athenian Editor of Euthymius Zigabenus says (p. 560, ed. 1842),—Εὐθύμιος, εἰς τὸ κύρος τοῦ Χρυσόστομου στηρίζομενος, θεωρεῖ αὐτὴν (τὴν περικοπὴν) παρέγγραπτον. Hence also perhaps it was omitted by Theophylact and others. It may be observed also, on the evidence of Chrysostom, that he omits it in his Exposition, but nowhere says that it is spurious, though it is not improbable that he knew of its existence in some MSS. of his age. He passes it by in his Exposition. But it must be remembered, that his Exposition is not a theological treatise, but a series of Homilies ad Populum. And for such reasons as are suggested by Augustine and Ambrose (above, p. 309, col. 2), Chrysostom might have thought that this history might be perverted to evil purposes in the licentious age and city in which he lived and preached, and therefore have passed it by in his Homilies. We have it in our Bibles now; but how few Sermons are preached and published upon it! Still, there is the silence of Origen, Cyri, and others, to be accounted for. It may however be thought, that the Discipline of the Eastern Church, which was very severe towards such sins as that of the woman in this history, may have acted as an impediment to its reception. "S. Basil's Canons prescribe fifteen years' penance for adultery; the Council of Ancyra imposes seven years. The Council of Eliberis (in Spain) five for a single act, and ten years if repeated." (Bingham, xvi. c. 11.)

As to internal evidence, it seems to be rather in favour of the passage.

The Pharisees had been publicly convicted by our Lord of ignorance and violation of the Law of Moses, of which they were the guardians and teachers, with regard to the Sabbath. (See vii. 19. 22.) They had sent officers to take Him, but He had escaped (vii. 44—46). Exasperated by this exposure and discomfiture, they would, it is probable, have endeavoured to set themselves right in the eyes of the people, and to show, if possible, that He Who charged them with contravening the Law of Moses was Himself at variance with Moses. They once tried to do this in vain, in regard to the Bill of Divorce. (Matt. xix. 7—9.) Then they had attempted to show that He had contradicted the Law of Moses by too much severity. (Matt. v. 31, 32.) Now they might think they would be sure of exposing Him to a charge of inconsistency with Moses and Himself by too much laxity. "Moses in the Law commanded that such as this woman should be stoned. But what sayest thou?" This they said tempting Him." (Cp. Matt. xix. 3.)

Thus this passage seems to be coherent with what precedes. The mode also by which our Lord turned back, as it were, the horns of the dilemma on those who pressed Him with it, and by its retorted force drove them from His presence, even by means of their own question, is very like what He did with divine wisdom and power on another occasion, when they assailed Him with the captious question concerning the tribute-money. (Matt. xxii. 17.)

Upon the whole, on considering the evidence of the case, we may come to the following conclusions:—

That this passage contains a true history of an event which occurred at the time here specified. The Early Church would never have invented such a History as this. Its tendencies were in the other direction;

That it is in all probability from St. John;

That it may have been delivered by him orally; but that it was not written by him as a part of his Gospel. Hence the variety of Recensions; hence also, perhaps, the narrative of Papias, which may have been derived from St. John's oral teaching (cp. Euseb. iii. 39), and so it may have been added, first to the margin here of some MSS., and thence have passed into the text. Hence also, perhaps, we may account for the fact that it is found in some MSS. at the end of his Gospel;

That it is not to be called a part of Canonical Scripture, as the rest of his Gospel is Canonical Scripture. For by the term "Canonical Scripture" we mean, not only what is true, nor only what was delivered by holy men, but what they were inspired by the Holy Ghost to deliver to the Church as divinely inspired Scripture, and what they did deliver as such, and what also has been received as divinely inspired Scripture, not only by particular Churches, such as the Churches of Italy or Africa, but by the Universal Church of Christ.

These conditions, which are necessary to constitute Canonical Scripture, are not satisfied by the present passage. It is indeed now received as Scripture by the Church of Rome (Conc. Trid. Sess. iv.), but it was not received by the ancient Eastern Church, nor, even, by the primitive Western Church. It cannot be said to have ever been received as Canonical Scripture by the consentient voice of Christendom. It seems to occupy a peculiar position; namely, a middle place, between Canonical Scripture and those few narratives of incidents concerning our Blessed Lord, which are found in primitive writers, and are probably true (see Fabric. Cod. Apocr. p. 330), but have never found their way into any Manuscripts of the Gospel.

Some moral inferences may close this investigation. It serves to inculcate the duty of thankfulness to Almighty God, for the solid foundation on which the proof of the Genuineness and Inspiration of the Canon of Scripture rests. This passage is found in three hundred MSS., and numerous Versions and Fathers. But it does not quite stand the test, nor quite satisfy the conditions requisite for its admission into the Canon of Holy Writ. How severe an ordeal, therefore, have the Canonical Books of Holy Scripture gone through! The strong claims of this rejected candidate for admission bring out more clearly and forcibly the value and strength of those which have been admitted into the Canon of Scripture. This passage consists only of twelve verses. Few persons doubt its authenticity. But its canonicity is the question at issue. How much and minutely has that been discussed! How rigid, therefore, is the scrutiny to which Canonical Scripture has been subjected, and which it has passed through, before it has been acknowledged as Scripture, i. e. before it has been received as the work of the Holy Spirit by the Universal Church of Christ! And in proportion to the rigour of that scrutiny is the solidity of the ground of our belief of its Inspiration.

It reminds us, also, of our own privileges in possessing many Manuscript Copies of the New Testament, which mount in antiquity up to a time before this passage was received even (as it seems) in the Western Church; i. e. to the primitive age of Christendom, and which enable us to read the Text in its pristine and original purity.

It leads us to examine carefully the grounds on which we receive the Scripture as Scripture, viz. as the divinely inspired Word of Almighty God; and to thank Him, that He has not only given us Holy Scripture, but has also planted in the World His Church Universal to guard Holy Scripture, and to assure us of its Inspiration. See above, on Mark xvi. 9—19.

CH. VIII. 5. ἐνετείλατο] commanded us to stone such women as this. See Levit. xx. 10. Deut. xxii. 22, which, however, do not authorize the assertion that such women were to be stoned; unless this was a particular case specified Deut. xxii. 24. The Jews seem to have interpreted the Law, which commanded capital punishment, as prescribing death by stoning. See Mi-δὲ ἔλεγον πειράζοντες αὐτὸν, ἵνα ἔχωσι κατηγορεῖν αὐτοῦ. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς κάτω κύψας τῷ δακτύλῳ ἔγραφεν εἰς τὴν γῆν. ⁷ ^b Ὡς δὲ ἐπέμενον ἐρωτῶντες αὐτὸν, ^b Deut. 17. 6, 7 Rom. 2. 1. ἀνακύψας εἶπε πρὸς αὐτοὺς, Ὁ ἀναμάρτητος ὑμῶν πρῶτος τὸν λίθον ἐπ' αὐτῇ βαλέτω. ⁸ Καὶ πάλιν κάτω κύψας ἔγραφεν εἰς τὴν γῆν. ⁹ Οἱ δὲ ἀκούσαντες, καὶ ὑπὸ τῆς συνειδήσεως ἐλεγχόμενοι, ἐξήρχοντο εἰς καθ' εἷς, ἀρξάμενοι ἀπὸ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων ἕως τῶν ἐσχάτων· καὶ κατελείφθη μόνος ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἡ γυνὴ ἐν μέσῳ οὔσα. ¹⁰ Ἀνακύψας δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ μηδένα θεασάμενος πλὴν τῆς γυναικὸς εἶπεν αὐτῇ, Ποῦ εἰσιν ἐκεῖνοι οἱ κατήγοροί σου; οὐδεὶς σε κατέκρινεν; ¹¹ ^c Ἡ δὲ εἶπεν, Οὐδεὶς, Κύριε. Εἶπε δὲ αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Οὐδὲ ἐγὼ σε κατακρίνω· ^d πορεύου καὶ μηκέτι ἀμάρτανε. ^c Luke 9. 56. & 12. 14. ch. 7. 17. & 12. 47. d ch. 5. 14. e Isa. 49. 6. ch. 1. 4, 5, 9. & 9. 5. & 12. 46. f ver. 18, &c. ch. 5. 31. g ch. 5. 31. h ch. 7. 28, 29. & 9. 29. i ch. 7. 24. j ver. 11. k ver. 29. ch. 16. 32. & 5. 22, 27. 1 Deut. 17. 8. & 19. 15. Matt. 18. 16. 2 Cor. 13. 1. Heb. 10. 28.

¹² ^e Πάλιν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς αὐτοῖς ἐλάλησε λέγων, Ἐγὼ εἰμι τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου· ὁ ἀκολουθῶν ἐμοὶ οὐ μὴ περιπατήσῃ ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ, ἀλλ' ἔξει τὸ φῶς τῆς ζωῆς. ¹³ Εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι, Σὺ περὶ σεαυτοῦ μαρτυρεῖς· ἡ μαρτυρία σου οὐκ ἔστιν ἀληθής. ¹⁴ ^s Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Κἂν ἐγὼ μαρτυρῶ περὶ ἐμαυτοῦ, ἀληθὴς ἐστίν ἡ μαρτυρία μου· ὅτι ^h οἶδα πόθεν ἦλθον, καὶ ποῦ ὑπάγω· ὑμεῖς δὲ οὐκ οἰδατε πόθεν ἔρχομαι, ἢ ποῦ ὑπάγω. ¹⁵ ⁱ Ὑμεῖς κατὰ τὴν σάρκα κρίνετε· ^j ἐγὼ οὐ κρίνω οὐδένα. ¹⁶ Καὶ ἐὰν κρίνω δὲ ἐγὼ, ἡ κρίσις ἡ ἐμὴ ἀληθὴς ἐστίν, ^k ὅτι μόνος οὐκ εἰμὶ, ἀλλ' ἐγὼ, καὶ ὁ πέμψας με Πατήρ. ¹⁷ ¹ Καὶ ἐν τῷ νόμῳ δὲ τῷ ὑμετέρῳ γέγραπται, ὅτι δύο ἀνθρώπων ἡ μαρτυρία

chaelis in Mosaisch. Recht, § 262. "Sic quoque Exod. xxxi. 14; xxxv. 2, poena mortis indicitur violatori religionis sabbati, sed Num. xv. 32, 35, ejusmodi violator sabbati lapidatus esse perhibetur, cf. et Ezech. xvi. 38. 40." (Kuini.) They quote the Law amiss, for hasty accusers often forget the terms of the Law which they desire to put in force: cp. Aug.

— σὺ οὖν τί λέγεις] What then sayest Thou? They thought to accuse Him of breaking the Law. But our Lord avoided their snare, and maintained Justice, without swerving from Mercy. (Aug.)

6. κάτω κύψας] having stooped down He was writing on the ground. An emblem that the Law, which He Himself had given, had been written on earthly and stony hearts. (Cp. Aug. de Con. Evang. iv. 10.) "Hoc digito mysticē scribebat in terrā, cūm a Judeis adultera esset oblata, significans, quando de peccatis alterius judicamus, nostri nos debere meminisse peccati." (Ambrose, de Spir. Sanct. iii. 3.)

Bengel and others have supposed that there is a reference here to the curses written by the Priest against women charged with unfaithfulness, and drunk by them in the 'water of jealousy' (Numb. v. 17), and that our Lord changes the order of proceeding by writing a curse against the accusers. See Burgon. here.

7. Ὁ ἀναμάρτητος ὑμῶν] Let him that is without sin among you first cast the stone at her. Let the Law be enforced, but not by those who infringe it; let her who is a sinner be punished, but not by sinners. (Aug.) He is not fit to judge another who does not first judge himself. (Gregor. Moral. xiv. c. 13.) τὸν λίθον is the stone which was to inflict the sentence, and to be a signal for other stones to follow. (Cp. Deut. xiii. 9; xvii. 5.)

9. εἰς καθ' εἷς] one by one. A Hebrew formula, echad-ke-echad, 'unus et alter.' (Rosenm.) Cp. Mark xiv. 19.

— κατελείφθη μόνος ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἡ γυνή] Jesus was left alone, and the Woman. Two things were here left together alone; Misery and Mercy. (Aug.)

11. Οὐδὲ ἐγὼ σε κατακρίνω] Neither do I condemn thee. What? does our Lord favour sin? No; observe what follows: "Go and sin no more." He therefore condemned sin, while He pardoned the sinner. Let them, who love Christ's mercy, also fear His truth; for "gracious and righteous is the Lord" (Ps. xxv. 7). (Aug.) "Vade et ne pecces." Habes auctoritatem, quia vetera donavit; habes judicium, quia futura præscrepsit." (Ambrose, Apol. Dav. ii. 75.)

Observe also that this acquittal was pronounced by Christ under special circumstances, viz. when the Teachers of the Law were breakers of the Law: as was shown by our Lord's test, 'let him that is without sin among you first cast the stone at her,' v. 7; and consequently, great indulgence was due to those who were subject to their teaching, and looked to their example.

Hence our Lord's merciful reply. But let it not be abused by misapplication to the times of the Gospel, when the sin of Adultery has been made more heinous by the Incarnation of Christ, and by clearer teaching on the sanctity of Marriage (Eph. v. 32), and by still more awful denunciations on the sins of Uncleanness and Adultery (1 Cor. vi. 9. Eph. v. 3. 5. 1 Thess. iv. 5—7. Heb. xiii. 4. Rev. xxi. 8).

Christ is the Lion of the Tribe of Judah (Rev. v. 5) as well as the Lamb of God (John i. 29. 36). Let us not presume on the meekness of the Lamb, lest we feel the wrath of the Lion.

12. τὸ φῶς] the light. It was early dawn (see v. 2); hence the allusion. (Bengel.) Christ is the Ἀνατολή (Luke i. 78), the Day-spring from on high; the rising Sun. This also perhaps may confirm the truth of the above history (vv. 1—11).

There may be also a reference here to the Lights kindled with special exultation at the Feast of Tabernacles in the Temple, and particularly in the court of the women where our Lord now was. See v. 20, and the quotations from the Talmud in Wetstein, p. 894. In Christ's Incarnation a special light sprung up for Woman (see note at end of the foregoing chapter), and in Him, the promised Seed of the woman, is pardon even for such as that woman who was now before Him. This Festival was distinguished by an effusion of Water (vii. 37) and Light—both typical of Christ's office in the world.

This passage also serves happily as a contrast to the darkness and blindness of the Pharisees as just described; and as a transition to the assertion in v. 56, that Abraham, whom they claimed as their father, rejoiced to see His Day—that Light, which they, his children, strove to extinguish!

Observe, that our Lord in His former Discourse at the Feast of Tabernacles had declared the mystery of His Incarnation; He now describes its gracious influences, especially in opposition to the Powers of Darkness, and for the Illumination of the World.

14. ὑμεῖς δὲ οὐκ οἰδατε πόθεν ἔρχομαι] but ye know not whence I am coming. I am the Sun of Righteousness. You neither know My rising nor My setting. But I, like the Sun, bear witness to Myself by My own light.

The Sun illuminates the face of him who sees, and of him who is blind; but it is seen by the one, and not by the other. So Christ, the Light of the world, is every where present to all, even to the unbelieving; but they cannot see Him, because they have no eyes in their hearts.

15. ἐγὼ οὐ κρίνω οὐδένα] I am not judging any one. For I have not now come to judge the world, but to save the world. (John xii. 47.) (Chrys., Aug.) This also perhaps may be thought to be an allusion to the case of the Woman brought to Him for judgment. (See vv. 10, 11.)

17. δύο ἀνθρώπων ἡ μαρτυρία] the testimony of two men is true. In this reference of our Lord to the Law (Deut. xix. 15) we have an evidence of the plurality and distinction of Persons in the one Godhead. (Aug., Chrys.) When the Witnesses are said to be two, it is implied also that they are of the same Nature. If one is a creature, so is the other. If One is God, both are God. Compare what is said of the Three Witnesses (1 John v. 7). Sabellius teaches heretically that the Father is the same as

m ch. 4. 26.
& ver. 37.

ἀληθής ἐστιν. ^{18 m} Ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ μαρτυρῶν περὶ ἑαυτοῦ, καὶ μαρτυρεῖ περὶ ἐμοῦ ὁ πέμψας με Πατήρ. (⁸⁷ III) ¹⁹ Ἐλεγον οὖν αὐτῷ, Ποῦ ἐστιν ὁ πατήρ σου; Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς, Οὐτε ἐμὲ οἶδατε, οὔτε τὸν Πατέρα μου· εἰ ἐμὲ ᾔδειτε, καὶ τὸν Πατέρα μου ᾔδειτε ἄν.

n ch. 7. 8, 30.

(⁸⁸ I) ^{20 n} Ταῦτα τὰ ῥήματα ἐλάλησεν ἐν τῷ γαζοφυλακίῳ, διδάσκων ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ· καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐπίασεν αὐτὸν, ὅτι οὐπὼ ἐληλύθει ἡ ὥρα αὐτοῦ.

o ch. 7. 34.
& 13. 33.
Ezek. 3. 18, 19.
Eph. 2. 1.
p ch. 7. 34.
& ver. 24.
q ch. 3. 31.
& 15. 19.
James 4. 4
1 John 2. 15, 16.
& 4. 5. & 5. 19.
r ch. 7. 28.
& 3. 32.
& 15. 15.
s Deut. 18. 18.
vv. 28, 38, 40.
ch. 12. 49, 50.
& 14. 10.
& 15. 15. & 17. 8.
t ch. 3. 14.
& 12. 32.
Acts 2. 36—41.
& 4. 4.
& 6. 7, &c.

(⁸⁹ X) ^{21 o} Εἶπεν οὖν πάλιν αὐτοῖς, Ἐγὼ ὑπάγω, καὶ ἡζήτησέ με, καὶ ἐν τῇ ἁμαρτία ὑμῶν ἀποθανεῖσθε· ὅπου ἐγὼ ὑπάγω, ὑμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἐλθεῖν. ²² Ἐλεγον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, Μήτι ἀποκτενεῖ ἑαυτὸν ὅτι λέγει, Ὅπου ἐγὼ ὑπάγω, ὑμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἐλθεῖν; ²³ Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Ὑμεῖς ἐκ τῶν κάτω ἐστέ, ἐγὼ ἐκ τῶν ἄνω εἰμὶ· ὑμεῖς ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου ἐστέ, ἐγὼ οὐκ εἰμὶ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου. ²⁴ Εἶπον οὖν ὑμῖν, ὅτι ἀποθανεῖσθε ἐν ταῖς ἁμαρτίαις ὑμῶν· ἐὰν γὰρ μὴ πιστεύσητε ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμι, ἀποθανεῖσθε ἐν ταῖς ἁμαρτίαις ὑμῶν. ²⁵ Ἐλεγον οὖν αὐτῷ, Σὺ τίς εἶ; εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Τὴν ἀρχὴν ὃ τι καὶ λαλῶ ὑμῖν. ^{26 r} Πολλὰ ἔχω περὶ ὑμῶν λαλεῖν καὶ κρίνειν· ἀλλ' ὁ πέμψας με ἀληθής ἐστι, ^s καὶ γὰρ ἡ ἡκουσα παρ' αὐτοῦ, ταῦτα λέγω εἰς τὸν κόσμον. ²⁷ Οὐκ ἔγνωσαν ὅτι τὸν Πατέρα αὐτοῖς ἔλεγεν. ²⁸ Εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ὅταν ὑψώσητε τὸν the Son. The Father is distinct from the Son, but not greater than the Son. He is of one substance with the Son, but He is a distinct Person from the Son. Our Lord says, "I and my Father are One" (John x. 30), "Ego et Pater meus unum (not unus) sumus;" one Substance, not one Person. The word 'unum' is an antidote to Arianism; the word 'sumus' is a refutation of Sabellianism. (Aug.)

19. Οὐτε ἐμὲ οἶδατε] See above, vii. 28.
— τὸν Πατέρα μ.—ᾔδειτε ἄν] ye would have known my Father also. A proof of the Unity of Substance, as v. 17 is of the Plurality of Persons in the One Godhead.

20. ἐν τῷ γαζοφυλακίῳ] in the treasury. In the Court of the Women (Mark xii. 41. Luke xxi. 1); a public place, where He might easily have been taken, if it had been His Will to be taken.

Whenever we read it recorded that our Lord spake such and such words in such and such a place, if we attend to the narrative, we shall find the propriety of the addition. "The Treasury" was a depository of money collected for the honour of God and relief of the poor; and the coin may be regarded as emblematic of the Divine Word stamped with the image of the Great King. Let every one contribute according to his power to this spiritual Treasury. Christ, teaching in the Temple, offered, as it became Him, rich gifts—the words of eternal life. (Origen.) The appropriateness and pertinency of these words to the Court of the Women, when He had before Him a Woman brought for condemnation, but pardoned, is obvious. See v. 12.

21. ἐν τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ ὑμῶν ἀποθανεῖσθε] ye shall die in your sin. This was the misery of the Jews—not only to commit sins, but to die in them. This is what every Christian ought to fear. Hence we resort to Baptism. Hence even the suckling is borne by the pious hands of its mother to the Church, that it may not depart this life unbaptized, and may not die in the sins in which it was born. (Augustine.)

— ἐγὼ ὑπάγω, ὑμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἐλθεῖν] They who die in their sins cannot come to the place where Christ is. (Origen.)

22. Μήτι ἀποκτενεῖ ἑαυτὸν] Will he kill himself? Our Lord's answer shows that such a thought is sinful. (Chrys.) The suggestion of it was worthy of them who were about to kill the Prince of Life.

23. ἐγὼ ἐκ τῶν ἄνω] I am from above. Hence the Manichæans and Apollinarians erroneously argue that Christ brought His Body from Heaven, and they quote St. Paul also (1 Cor. xv. 47), "The second Man is the Lord from heaven." Did then our Lord mean that His Apostles had a heavenly body when He said, "Ye are not of the world?" (John xv. 19.) No; but He means that the thoughts of the Jews are from the earth, earthy, and that His thoughts are not as theirs. (Theoph.)

— ἐγὼ οὐκ εἰμὶ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου] I am not from this world. I am not of those who, like you, are of, i. e. from the earth, and entertain earthly and sinful thoughts; and therefore I could not entertain such an idea as ye impute to me, saying, "Will He kill Himself?" (Theoph.); but I am from the Father. (Aug.) Compare below, His words to Pilate, xviii. 36.

24. ἐὰν γὰρ μὴ πιστεύσητε ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμὶ] for except ye believe that I am, ye shall die in your sins. ὅτι εἰμὶ, literally, "that I am." Referring to the words of Jehovah to Moses (Exod. iii. 13—15), "I AM that I AM." And therefore He means, unless ye believe that I am God, ye shall die in your sins. (Aug.) Cp. above, on vi. 20, and below, v. 58.

25. Τὴν ἀρχὴν] Altogether, according to Rosenmüller, Glass. (Phil. p. 461), Loesner, and others. Winer, p. 412. Others read the sentence as a question, First of all, why do I even speak to you? So Lachm., Lücke. Others, as Meyer, Do ye ask what I say to you at the first?

But these interpretations do not seem to give a sense worthy of the occasion and of the Divine Speaker. Rather, with S. Cyril and Augustine, we may explain it;—I am what I am also declaring to you, the Beginning. The use of the accusative may be compared with "urbem quam statuo vestra est" (Virgil); and compare the accusative in Mark iv. 31. Acts x. 36. And this sense is adopted in the Vulgate and Æthiopic Versions. Cp. i. 1, ἐν ἀρχῇ ὁ λόγος, and He is ἡ ἀρχὴ καὶ τὸ τέλος (Rev. xxi. 6; xxii. 13); cp. 1 John i. 1, ὃ ἦν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς; ii. 13, ἐγνώκατε τὸν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς; whereas the Διάβολος is a murderer ἀπ' ἀρχῆς (v. 44).

This appears to be one of those speeches of our Lord, occurring often in St. John's Gospel, which can only be understood by reference to His Divine Nature; which He is asserting in this discourse.

It is no valid objection to this interpretation, that this speech would thus be a hard saying to those who first heard it. Many of our Lord's sayings, when first uttered, were not intelligible even to His own disciples (see xii. 16), and St. John says (v. 27), that the Jews did not understand Him. Our Lord spake to all future ages; and when the disciples perceived what afterwards took place, and when they were enlightened by the Holy Ghost, then they saw clearly what before was dark; and they there beheld a proof of the prophetic power of Christ. And we must read the sayings of Christ in the Gospel, by the light of subsequent events, and of that spiritual knowledge which He has given us by the illumination of the Holy Ghost. See above, p. 258. 2^l 1. 302.

26. κρίνειν] to judge. Observe the infatuation of the Jews, who, after so much teaching, and so many miracles from Christ, ask, "Who art thou?" Our Lord, therefore, rebukes them as unworthy of further instruction, and proceeds now to speak to them of judgment. (Chrys.)

27. Οὐκ ἔγνωσαν—ἔλεγεν] They understood not that He was speaking to them of the Father. Another instance of the expository character of St. John's Gospel; see on ii. 24 and p. 268.

28. Ὅταν ὑψώσητε] When ye have lifted up the Son of Man. See above, iii. 14. You will desire to crucify Me; and when you have crucified Me, you will imagine that you have destroyed Me. But I tell you, that then especially, when you have lifted Me up, in shame, and yet in glory, you will know from My Resurrection, and from the Miracles wrought in My Name, and even from your own Captivity, consequent on your sin in rejecting Me, and from the graces of the Holy Ghost poured upon you to enlighten your minds,—from all these things you will know that I am He, i. e. that I am One with the Father, God with God. For God would never have worked such miracles by Me, as He will then work, if I had not been all-pleasing to God, and if I had not been the Son

Τὶδὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, τότε γνώσεσθε ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμι, καὶ ἀπ' ἐμαντοῦ ποιῶ οὐδέν· ἀλλὰ, καθὼς ἐδίδαξέ με ὁ Πατὴρ μου, ταῦτα λαλῶ. ²⁹ ^u καὶ ὁ πέμψας με μετ' ἐμοῦ ἔστιν· οὐκ ἀφήκέ με μόνον ὁ Πατὴρ, ὅτι ἐγὼ τὰ ἀρεστὰ αὐτῷ ποιῶ πάντοτε.

u ch. 7. 28.
& 4. 34. & 5. 30.
& ver. 16.

³⁰ Ταῦτα αὐτοῦ λαλοῦντος πολλοὶ ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτόν.

³¹ Ἐλεγεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς πρὸς τοὺς πεπιστευκότας αὐτῷ Ἰουδαίους, ὅτι Ἐὰν ὑμεῖς μείνητε ἐν τῷ λόγῳ τῷ ἐμῷ, ἀληθῶς μαθηταὶ μου ἔστέ, ³² καὶ γνώσεσθε τὴν ἀλήθειαν, καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια ἐλευθερώσει ὑμᾶς. ³³ Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ, Σπέρμα Ἀβραάμ ἐσμεν, καὶ οὐδενὶ δεδουλεύκαμεν πώποτε· πῶς σὺ λέγεις, Ὅτι ἐλεύθεροι γενήσεσθε; ³⁴ ^w Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι πᾶς ὁ ποιῶν τὴν ἁμαρτίαν δοῦλός ἐστι τῆς ἁμαρτίας. ³⁵ ^x Ὁ δὲ δοῦλος οὐ μένει ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα· ὁ υἱὸς μένει εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. ³⁶ ^y Ἐὰν οὖν ὁ υἱὸς ὑμᾶς ἐλευθερώσῃ, ὄντως ἐλεύθεροι ἔσεσθε. ³⁷ Οἶδα ὅτι σπέρμα Ἀβραάμ ἐστε· ἀλλὰ ζητεῖτέ με ἀποκτεῖναι, ὅτι ^z ὁ λόγος ὁ ἐμὸς οὐ χωρεῖ ἐν ὑμῖν. ³⁸ ^a Ἐγὼ δ' ἐώρακα παρὰ τῷ Πατρὶ μου λαλῶ, καὶ ὑμεῖς οὖν ὁ ἐώρακατε παρὰ τῷ πατρὶ ὑμῶν ποιεῖτε. ³⁹ ^b Ἀπεκρίθησαν καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Ὁ πατὴρ ἡμῶν Ἀβραάμ ἐστι. Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Εἰ τέκνα τοῦ Ἀβραάμ ἦτε, τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Ἀβραάμ ἐποιεῖτε ἂν. ⁴⁰ Νῦν δὲ ζητεῖτέ με ἀποκτεῖναι, ἄνθρωπον ὃς τὴν ἀλήθειαν ὑμῖν λελάληκα, ^d ἣν ἤκουσα παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ· τοῦτο Ἀβραάμ οὐκ ἐποίησεν. ⁴¹ ^e Ὑμεῖς ποιεῖτε τὰ ἔργα τοῦ πατρὸς ὑμῶν. Εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ, Ἡμεῖς ἐκ πορνείας οὐ γεγεννήμεθα· ἓνα πατέρα ἔχομεν τὸν Θεόν. ⁴² ^f Εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Εἰ ὁ Θεὸς πατὴρ ὑμῶν ἦν, ἡγαπᾶτε ἂν ἐμέ· ἐγὼ γὰρ ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθον καὶ ἤκω· οὐδὲ γὰρ ἀπ' ἐμαντοῦ ἐλήλυθα, ἀλλ' ἐκεῖνός με ἀπέστειλε. ⁴³ ^g Διατί τὴν λαλιὰν τὴν ἐμὴν οὐ γινώσκετε; ὅτι οὐ δύνασθε ἀκοῦναι τὸν λόγον τὸν ἐμόν. ⁴⁴ ^h Ὑμεῖς ἐκ πατρὸς τοῦ Διαβόλου ἐστέ, καὶ τὰς ἐπιθυμίας τοῦ πατρὸς ὑμῶν θέλετε ποιεῖν. ⁱ Ἐκεῖνος ἀνθρωποκτόνος ἦν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, καὶ ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ οὐχ ἔστηκεν· ὅτι οὐκ ἔστιν ἀλήθεια ἐν αὐτῷ· ὅταν λαλῇ τὸ ψεῦδος, ἐκ τῶν ιδίων λαλεῖ· ^j ὅτι ψεύστης ἐστὶ καὶ ὁ πατὴρ αὐτοῦ. ⁴⁵ Ἐγὼ δὲ ὅτι τὴν ἀλήθειαν

v Acts 13. 43.
& 14. 22.
Rom. 11. 22.
Col. 1. 23.
2 Tim. 3. 14.
James 1. 25.
Matt. 10. 22.
w Rom. 6. 6, 7, 19.
2 Pet. 2. 19.
x Gal. 4. 30, 31.
ch. 4. 7.
y Rom. 8. 2.
Gal. 5. 1.
Heb. 3. 5, 6.
ver. 32.
z ver. 47.
& ch. 5. 38.
a ch. 3. 32.
& ver. 26.
b Matt. 3. 9, 33.
Rom. 4. 12.
& 9. 7.
Gal. 3. 7.
c Rom. 2. 28, 29.
& 4. 12.
Gal. 3. 7, 29.
d ver. 26, 33.
e Isa. 63. 16.
& 64. 8.
f Heb. 1. 3.
1 John 5. 1.
ch. 16. 27.
& 17. 8, 15.
& 1. 18. & 5. 43.
g ch. 5. 44.
Matt. 13. 14.
h Matt. 3. 7.
& 13. 38.
i John 3. 8.
Jude, ver. 6.
1 Gen. 3. 4, 5.
1 John 3. 12.
Heb. 2. 14.
1 Pet. 5. 8.
j 2 Cor. 11. 3.
2 Chron. 18. 20, 21.
Acts 5. 3.
& 13. 10.
2 Thess. 2. 9, 10.
Rev. 12. 9.

of God. (Chrys., Theoph.) Ye will then acknowledge that I am He, i. e. that I am God. (Aug.)

³¹ Ἐὰν ὑμεῖς μείνητε ἐν τῷ λόγῳ τῷ ἐμῷ] If ye remain sted-fast in My word. He refers to some, who, after they had believed, had gone away from Him; see vi. 66. It is a little thing to come to Christ, we must abide in Him. (Aug.)

³² γνώσεσθε τὴν ἀλήθειαν] ye shall know the truth. They who believe in Christ, by abiding in Christ learn to see the Truth which is unchangeable, and is the bread of the soul, and is not changed into him who feeds on it, but changes him. (Aug.)

³³ οὐδενὶ δεδουλεύκαμεν] we have never been in bondage. Not true; for they had been in bondage to the Egyptians, Babylonians, and others; but Christ was speaking of the slavery of sin, and does not correct them. (Chrys.)

³⁴ πᾶς ὁ ποιῶν τὴν ἁμαρτίαν δοῦλός ἐστι τῆς ἁμαρτίας] every one that worketh sin is the slave of sin. What slavery is that! A man may find escape and rest from a tyrannical master, but whither can the slave of sin fly? He drags his master with him. He alone can free us from sin, Who came into the world without sin, and offered Himself a sacrifice for sin. (Aug.)

³⁵ δοῦλος οὐ μένει ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ] the slave abideth not in the house. Many sinners enter the Church which is Christ's house, but Christ abides in it for ever. Here is our hope that we may cease to be slaves, and be freed by Him Who is free, and gave not silver and gold, but His own blood for us; and Who is our Head; and "if He makes us free, we are free indeed." (Aug.)

³⁶ ὄντως ἐλεύθεροι ἔσεσθε] ye will be free indeed. Do not therefore abuse your freedom, to sin freely; but use it, not to sin; your will is free if it is holy; you will be free, if you are servants of righteousness. (Aug.)

³⁷ σπέρμα Ἀβραάμ ἐστε] ye are Abraham's seed, by the propagation of the flesh, not by faith of the heart, or imitation of life. "If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham." They were therefore a degenerate seed; we are made true sons of Abraham by God's grace: for if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. Gal. iii. 16. 29. (Aug.)

VOL. I.

³⁸ ἐώρακατε] ye have seen. Some MSS. (B, C, K, L, X) have ἤκούσατε, ye heard—a reading which deserves consideration.

⁴⁰ τοῦτο Ἀβραάμ οὐκ ἐποίησεν] this did not Abraham. But how could he do it? Because the spiritual Advent of Christ has ever cheered the Saints of God. Wherefore we may conclude that they, who after their regeneration, and other graces conferred on them, are guilty of sin, "crucify afresh the Son of God." (Origen.)

⁴¹ ἐκ πορνείας οὐ γεγεννήμεθα] we be not born of fornication. The Jews who heard our Lord, had now begun to perceive that He was speaking spiritually; and it is the usage of Scripture to describe as fornication, the prostitution of the soul to false gods. (Aug.)

⁴² ἐξῆλθον καὶ ἤκω] I came forth from the Father, and am come to you. "Exii et adsum."

⁴³ οὐ δύνασθε ἀκοῦναι τὸν λόγον τὸν ἐμόν] ye cannot hear My word, i. e. will not; cannot, on account of your perverse will, and malignant minds. (Theoph.) ἀκοῦναι, with an accusative, means something more than to hear, namely, to consider, and understand. See Acts ix. 7.

⁴⁴ ἐκ πατρὸς τοῦ Διαβόλου ἐστέ] ye are of your father the devil; not by generation, but imitation. (Aug.) In words you claim to be children of God; by works ye show yourselves children of the Devil. (Theoph.)

—θέλετε ποιεῖν] ye love to do. It is your (θέλημα) will to do them. On this use of θέλω, see on Phil. 14; above, v. 35; vi. 21. Acts x. 10.

—Ἐκεῖνος ἀνθρωποκτόνος ἦν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς] Therefore to tempt a man to evil, as the Devil tempted Adam, is murder; and since in Adam all died, the Devil was a murderer from the beginning. (Aug., Origen.)

—ψεύστης ἐστὶ καὶ ὁ πατὴρ αὐτοῦ] he is a liar and the father of it. Some interpreters (e. g. Bengel, Meyer) interpret πατὴρ αὐτοῦ to mean "father of the liar," i. e. the liar is a child of the Devil. But αὐτοῦ refers to τοῦ ψεύδους, to be supplied from the preceding sentence. So αὐτοῦ in Rom. ii. 26. Cp. 2 Thess. ii. 11; and the sense is, I am the Truth; but he is a liar, and something more than a liar; he is the father of that which is false. Cp. Lücke here, and Winer, pp. 104. 132. 169.

k Matt. 26. 60. λέγω οὐ πιστεύετέ μοι. ⁴⁶ ^k Τίς ἐξ ὑμῶν ἐλέγχει με περὶ ἁμαρτίας; εἰ δὲ ἀλήθειαν λέγω, διατί ὑμεῖς οὐ πιστεύετέ μοι; ⁴⁷ ^l Ὁ ὢν ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ τὰ ῥήματα τοῦ Θεοῦ ἀκούει· διὰ τοῦτο ὑμεῖς οὐκ ἀκούετε, ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐκ ἐστέ.

m ch. 7. 20. ⁴⁸ ^m Ἀπεκρίθησαν οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Οὐ καλῶς λέγομεν ἡμεῖς, ὅτι Σαμαρείτης εἶ σὺ, καὶ δαιμόνιον ἔχεις; ⁴⁹ Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς, Ἐγὼ δαιμόνιον οὐκ ἔχω· ἀλλὰ τιμῶ τὸν Πατέρα μου, καὶ ὑμεῖς ἀτιμάζετέ με. ⁵⁰ ⁿ Ἐγὼ δὲ οὐ ζητῶ τὴν δόξαν μου· ἔστιν ὁ ζητῶν καὶ κρίνων. ⁵¹ ^o Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ἐάν τις τὸν λόγον τὸν ἐμὸν τηρήσῃ, θάνατον οὐ μὴ θεωρήσῃ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα.

o ch. 3. 16. & 5. 24. & 6. 40. ⁵² Εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, Νῦν ἐγνώκαμεν ὅτι δαιμόνιον ἔχεις. Ἀβραὰμ ἀπέθανε, καὶ οἱ προφῆται· καὶ σὺ λέγεις, Ἐάν τις τὸν λόγον μου τηρήσῃ, οὐ μὴ γεύσῃται θανάτου εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. ⁵³ ^p Μὴ σὺ μείζων εἶ τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν Ἀβραάμ, ὅστις ἀπέθανε; καὶ οἱ προφῆται ἀπέθανον· τίνα σεαυτὸν σὺ ποιεῖς; ⁵⁴ ^q Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς, Ἐὰν ἐγὼ δοξάζω ἐμαυτὸν, ἡ δόξα μου οὐδὲν ἔστιν· ἔστιν ὁ Πατὴρ μου ὁ δοξάζων με, ὃν ὑμεῖς λέγετε ὅτι Θεὸς ἡμῶν ἐστι, ⁵⁵ ^r καὶ οὐκ ἐγνώκατε αὐτὸν, ἐγὼ δὲ οἶδα αὐτὸν, καὶ ἐὰν εἴπω ὅτι οὐκ οἶδα αὐτὸν, ἔσομαι ὅμοιος ὑμῶν ψεύστης· ἀλλὰ οἶδα αὐτὸν, καὶ ^s τὸν λόγον αὐτοῦ τηρῶ. ⁵⁶ ^t Ἀβραὰμ ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν ἠγαλλιάσατο ἵνα ἴδῃ τὴν ἡμέραν τὴν ἐμὴν, καὶ εἶδε καὶ ἐχάρη. ⁵⁷ Εἶπον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι πρὸς αὐτὸν, Πεντήκοντα ἔτη οὕτω ἔχεις, καὶ Ἀβραὰμ ἐώρακας; ⁵⁸ ^u Εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν

From these words πατὴρ αὐτοῦ, some have imagined that the Devil has a father. This is the error of the Manichæans. But "Pater ejus" means "Pater mendacii," Jerome (on Isa. xviii.), and cp. Glass. Phil. S. p. 329. Our Lord calls the Devil the Father of falsehood in the abstract, τοῦ ψεύδους; as God is the Father of the Truth.

Men, when they tell a lie, use what does not belong to them, but to the Devil; but the Devil, when he tells a lie, uses what is his own offspring, for he is the Father of lies. And ye will not believe in Me, because I speak the truth; and thus ye prove yourselves the children of him who is the Father of lies. (Theoph.)

46—59.] On these verses, see Greg. M. Hom. in Ev. i. 18. 48. Σαμαρείτης εἶ σὺ; Thou art a Samaritan. Yes, truly; He is the "Good Samaritan." See on Luke x. 23—27. 37.

51. θάνατον οὐ μὴ θεωρήσῃ] shall never see death, that is, never feel. He who spake was about to die, and He spake to men who were about to die. What then did He mean, when He spake thus? He meant, that whosoever keeps His saying shall never see that Death, from which He came to save us, viz. everlasting death, the death of damnation with the Devil and his angels; that is real death. Other death is only a blessed translation to a better life. (Aug.) When, therefore, the Psalmist asks, "What man is he that liveth and shall not see death?" (Ps. lxxix. 48,) we may reply, "he who keepeth Christ's Word." And this our Lord meant, when He said (Matt. xvi. 28), "Verily I say unto you, there be some standing here that shall not taste of death." They who stand by Christ, and continue to stand by Him to the end, they shall never taste of death. (Origen.) See on Matt. xvi. 28.

52. Ἀβραὰμ ἀπέθανε] Abraham died. The Jews were blind, and only looked at the death of the flesh, and therefore could not see the light of Christ's words. (Greg. M. Hom. xviii. in Evang.) According to that death, of which our Lord spake, neither Abraham was dead nor the Prophets. They were dead, but alive. The Jews were alive, but dead. Consider what our Lord said to the Sadducees, who were dead in soul, concerning the Patriarchs, who were alive. Matt. xxii. 31, 32.

Our Lord declared in a remarkable manner, in the history of Dives and Lazarus, that Abraham is not dead; for He said that the beggar was carried by angels into Abraham's bosom. Luke xvi. 22, 23. Could the place of rest and joy, in which are the departed spirits of the righteous, be the bosom of one who is dead? Could Paradise, to which our Lord's soul went at His death (Luke xxiii. 43), be the bosom of one who is dead? No; Abraham never saw death, he never tasted death; but death with him was the joyful passage to a better life. And why? Because he saw Christ's day with faith, and was glad; because he saw the day of Him Who has tasted death for every man (Heb. ii. 9); Who has taken away its sting (1 Cor. xv. 55, 56), and opened the kingdom of heaven to all believers.

— γέννηται] So A, C, D, K, L, S, U, X, Δ, Λ, and ninety Cursives. Elz. has γέννεται. See above, iv. 14.

53. σὺ ποιεῖς] σὺ is expunged by some recent Editors (Lachm., Tisch., Alf.); but it is found in the major part of the MSS., and adds force to the sense.

54. ἡμῶν] of us. Rightly received by recent Editors (Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., Tisch., Alf.) from A, C, D, E, G, H, K, L, M, S, U, Δ, Λ, and many Cursives. Elz. has ὑμῶν. Cp. x. 36, λέγετε ὅτι βλασφημεῖς, and Acts i. 4,—where the words of the speaker are adopted as here.

56. Ἀβραὰμ ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν ἠγαλλιάσατο—ἡμέραν] He rejoiced with faith and hope that he should see. The particle ἵνα often serves to connect verbs of willing and desiring in N. T., as vā does in modern Greek. (See John iv. 47; xv. 8; xvii. 15, 24. Matt. vii. 12. Mark vi. 25.) So Teles in Stob. Serm. 95, ἵνα Ζεὺς γέννηται ἐπιθυμῇσει. Cp. 1 Cor. ix. 15, καλὸν ἵνα, and Winer, pp. 301—303.

The name Isaac (laughing), Gen. xvii. 17, had a reference to this ἀγαλλίασις,—for in Isaac, the promised seed, Abraham had a vision of Christ, in Whom all rejoice. See S. Jerome ad loc. Jones, Proper Names of O. T. p. 163. Here is a glorious testimony given to Abraham by the Creator of Abraham, and Seed of Abraham.

— τ. ἡμέραν τ. ἐ.] My Day. Christ's coming is beautifully called the Day; for it is the sequel of, and is opposite to, Night. And it is happily so called here, where He is describing Himself as the Light of the World. See above, v. 12, and cp. Cyril here.

My day. Does our Lord mean the Day in which He was incarnate, or the day of His Divinity—that Day which has neither morning nor evening? Abraham saw both by faith and hope, and therefore in joy. How great was the joy of his heart when he saw the Word of God, and His brightness beaming on holy minds, and yet remaining as God with the Father; and hereafter about to come in the flesh, and yet never to be separated from the bosom of the Father! (Aug.)

Abraham saw the day of Christ, i. e. the cross of Christ, when he laid the wood on his son, and in will offered up Isaac, Heb. xi. 19; and when he believed the promise, that of his seed should come the Saviour, in Whom all nations would be blessed, Gen. xxii. 18. (Chrys., Theoph.)

On this text see the Sermon of Bp. Andrewes, i. 118.

See also Article VII. of the Church of England, and the passages quoted from Holy Scripture and the Fathers by Bp. Beveridge and Prof. Browne, and notes below on Gal. iii. 6. Heb. xi. 19.

57. Πεντήκοντα ἔτη οὕτω ἔχεις] Thou art not yet fifty years old. Chrysostom reads τεσσαράκοντα, forty, and so Δ; but Irenæus had πεντήκοντα. Our Lord was then about thirty-three years old. Cp. Theophyl., who inquires why they did not rather say forty than fifty?

The inference of S. Irenæus (ii. 39) from this passage, that our Lord's life upon earth extended to fifty years, was corrected by the writers of the fourth century, e. g. Euseb. (i. 10), Theodoret (ad Dan. ix. tom. ii. p. 1250). And indeed S. Hippolytus, the scholar of Irenæus, had already rectified it. See his Comment λέγω ὑμῖν, πρὶν Ἀβραὰμ γενέσθαι ἐγὼ εἰμι. ⁵⁹ Ἦραν οὖν λίθους ἵνα βάλωσιν ἐπ' αὐτόν· Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἐκρύβη, καὶ ἐξῆλθεν ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ διελθὼν διὰ μέσου αὐτῶν, καὶ παρήγεν οὕτως.

v ch. 10. 31, 39.
& 11. 8.
Luke 4. 30.

IX. ¹ Καὶ παράγων εἶδεν ἄνθρωπον τυφλὸν ἐκ γενετῆς· ² καὶ ῥώτησαν αὐτόν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ λέγοντες, Ῥαββί, τίς ἥμαρτεν, οὗτος, ἢ οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ, ἵνα τυφλὸς γεννηθῇ; ³ Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς, Οὐτε οὗτος ἥμαρτεν οὔτε οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ· ^a ἀλλ' ἵνα φανερωθῇ τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν αὐτῷ. ⁴ ^b Ἐμὲ δεῖ ἐργάζεσθαι τὰ ἔργα τοῦ πέμψαντός με ἕως ἡμέρα ἐστίν· ἔρχεται νῦν ὅτε οὐδεὶς

a ch. 11. 4, 40—
42. & 2. 11.
b ch. 4. 34.
& 11. 9.
& 12. 35.

on Daniel, Num. iv., where he says that our Lord suffered in His thirty-third year.

58. πρὶν Ἀβραὰμ γενέσθαι, ἐγὼ εἰμι] before Abraham was born, I am. It would seem that the words ἐγὼ εἰμι are used by our Lord singly (i. e. without any predicate) three times (v. 23, 24, 28) in this chapter to signify His own Divine Pre-existence, —I AM, i. e. from everlasting, and His co-existence with the Father. (See S. Cyril on chap. i.) Why did He not say, —before Abraham was I was, but I am? because He uses this word, “I am,” as His Father uses it; for it signifies perpetual existence, independent of all time. And therefore they charged Him with blasphemy. (Chrys.)

Acknowledge your Creator, and distinguish Him from the creature. He who speaks was the Seed of Abraham; and yet He was before Abraham, and Abraham himself was made by Him. Abraham was a creature, therefore Christ did not say, “before Abraham existed,” —“antequam esset,” πρὶν Ἀβραὰμ εἶναι, —but He said, “before Abraham was made,” —“antequam Abraham factus esset,” πρὶν Ἀβραὰμ γενέσθαι, —and He did not say, “I was made,” but “I am.” (Aug.) The Deity has no past or future, but a perpetual present, and therefore He uses the present tense, and says, “I am.” He does not say, I was before Abraham, but I am, —according to that in Exodus (iii. 14), “I AM that I AM.” (Greg.) Our Lord uses the same language, “I AM,” when proving His Deity by walking on the sea, Mark vi. 50.

59. Ἦραν οὖν λίθους ἵνα βάλωσιν ἐπ' αὐτόν] They therefore took up stones to cast at Him, as if He was guilty of blasphemy in claiming to be God. Here is a plain proof of Christ's Divinity, against the Socinians. Our Lord said to the Jews, “Destroy this Temple, and in three days I will raise it up again (ii. 19). I have power to lay down My life, and I have power to take it up again. Before Abraham was I AM (viii. 58). I and My Father are one (x. 30).” The Jews understood Him to claim divine power by such words as these, and St. John relates that on several occasions, they took up stones to cast at Him, because, by speaking thus, He made Himself equal with God. Cp. below, x. 31; xi. 8.

They charged Him with blasphemy for doing so. And if He had not really claimed to be equal with God, He, in His love to them and to the world, and in His dutiful reverence to His Father, which ever characterized His conduct, would certainly have undeceived them. But He never disclaimed the meaning which they assigned to His words. That meaning therefore is true. He did claim to be Equal and One with God, —He did claim to be God. And how did God, on His side, regard that claim? He is “a jealous God, and will not give His glory to another” (Isa. xlii. 8; xlviii. 11). He severely punished His servant Moses, because in the heat of passion he let fall one hasty expression, and “spake unadvisedly with his lips” (Ps. cvi. 33), and claimed more than human power to himself, and said, “Must we fetch you water out of this rock?” (Num. xx. 10.) For this one saying, in which Moses appeared to arrogate to himself what belonged to God, God excluded him from the promised land, notwithstanding his long and faithful service, and his earnest entreaties to be admitted into it. If, then, Jesus Christ had been a great prophet like Moses, and nothing more; if He had not been what He claimed to be, Equal and One with the Father, the everlasting I AM, then we may be sure, that the same God, “with Whom is no variableness nor shadow of turning” (James i. 17), and who visited one vain-glorious expression in the case of Moses with such a severe penalty, would have marked His displeasure against Him who repeatedly and uniformly laid claim to divine power. Jesus did this. God therefore would have disowned Him, if what He did had not been rightly done; and He would have rewarded the Jews for their pious zeal in behalf of His own Divine Honour, and for taking up stones to execute the Law of God on one who was guilty of blasphemy.

But what was the fact? God gave witness to Him in their presence by miracles, and wonders, and signs, “which God did by Him in the midst of them” (Acts ii. 22), and He gave assurance to all men of the truth of what He spake by calling Him His beloved Son in Whom He is well pleased (Matt. iii. 17; xii. 18; xvii. 5. 2 Pet. i. 17); and by raising Him from the dead, and by setting Him at His own right hand in heavenly places (Acts iii. 15; iv. 10; xiii. 30; xvii. 31. Eph. i. 20. Phil. ii. 9). Thus God has shown His approval of Christ's preaching.

But on the other hand He has displayed His severe indignation against the Jews for their rejection of that preaching. He has inflicted a severer punishment upon them for that sin, than He ever inflicted on their forefathers, even for the sin of idolatry. He destroyed Jerusalem of old, and He carried their fathers captive to Babylon for idolatry; but on their repentance, He restored them to their own land. He has now destroyed Jerusalem for their sin in rejecting the claims of Christ; and for eighteen hundred years the Jews have been scattered as outcasts among all nations. Thus they themselves bear witness to the truth of Christ's claim; they attest His divinity. May He hasten the time when their eyes may be opened, that they may see Him, and worship Him, and so be restored to the favour of God! (2 Cor. iii. 14—16.)

— ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ διελθὼν διὰ μέσου] He went out of the Temple, going through the midst of them. That is, He rendered Himself invisible, and thus showed His divine power. He fled from the stones which might have touched Him as man. Woe to them from whose stony hearts God flies! (Aug.)

They take up stones to cast at Him. He had told them, “Let him who among you is without sin first cast the stone at her” (v. 7). Was their present act one of vindictiveness for that saying? And is this another mark of the coherence of the context with that passage? Christ escaped unseen from His enemies (viii. 59), and saw a man who had never seen from his birth, and made him see; and showed Himself to be the Light of the world; and proved, that they who thought that they could see better than others, were blind in body and soul, because they would not see Him Who is the Light, but sought to extinguish Him.

Our Lord rendered Himself invisible. For other reflections on this subject, see on Luke iv. 30, and below, on John xx. 19.

CH. IX. 2. τίς ἥμαρτεν] who sinned? The Apostles could not have imagined that a man had sinned before his birth; nor does it appear that they believed in a transmigration of souls, or that children are punished for their parents. (Cp. Ezek. xviii. 2—4.) But this question of theirs may have been occasioned by our Lord's speech to the paralytic whom He had healed (John v. 14), —“Sin no more, lest a worse thing come upon thee;” and it may have been a statement of an objection on their part to the assertion of our Lord that sin is the cause of physical evils. (Cp. Chrys.)

3. Οὐτε οὗτος ἥμαρτεν] Both he and his parents were sinners; but their sin was not the cause of his being born blind.

— ἵνα φανερωθῇ τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν αὐτῷ] in order that the works of God might be made manifest in him. But had this man been punished with blindness that God might be glorified? Would not this have been unjust? We may reply, that the conjunction that does not here indicate the cause, but the effect, —i. e. the man was not born blind in order that God might be glorified, but God's glory was an effect of his blindness. So it is in our Lord's words (John ix. 39), “I came into the world that they who see might be made blind;” but we cannot suppose that Christ, Who is the Light of the world, came in order to make men blind. So also we may explain the words of St. Paul (Rom. iii. 4; v. 20), —“The Law entered in that the offence might abound,” whereas in fact the Law was given as a check to sin. In all these and other cases the conjunction signifies consequence and event, and not a reason or cause. Cp. Chrys., Theophyl., who quote other parallels, and Glass., Phil. S. pp. 529, 530. Matt. xxiii. 34, 35. See below, v. 39; xii. 40. 1 Cor. xi. 19.

4. Ἐμὲ δεῖ ἐργάζεσθαι] I must work the works of Him that sent Me. Observe, this was said on a Sabbath (v. 14), when God specially does works of mercy, —to the body by rest, and to the soul by grace. Observe also, —the cripple at the other pool—

c ch. 1. 5, 9.

& 8. 12.

& 12. 35, 46.

d Mark 7. 33.

& 8. 23.

e Neh. 3. 15.

f 2 Kings 5. 14.

δύναται ἐργάζεσθαι ⁵ ὅταν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ ᾧ, φῶς εἰμι τοῦ κόσμου. ⁶ Ταῦτα εἰπὼν ἔπτυσσε χαμαὶ, καὶ ἐποίησε πηλὸν ἐκ τοῦ πτύσματος, καὶ ἐπέχρισε τὸν πηλὸν ἐπὶ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς τοῦ τυφλοῦ, ⁷ καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Ὑπαγε νύφαι εἰς τὴν κολυμβήθραν τοῦ Σιλωάμ· ὃ ἐρμηνεύεται ἀπεσταλμένος· ^f ἀπῆλθεν οὖν καὶ ἐνίψατο, καὶ ἦλθε βλέπων.

⁸ Οἱ οὖν γείτονες καὶ οἱ θεωροῦντες αὐτὸν τὸ πρότερον ὅτι προσαίτης ἦν ἔλεγον, Οὐχ οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ καθήμενος καὶ προσαιτῶν; Ἄλλοι ἔλεγον, Ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν· ⁹ ἄλλοι δὲ, Ὅτι ὁμοιος αὐτῷ ἐστιν. Ἐκείνος ἔλεγεν, Ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμι. ¹⁰ Ἐλεγον οὖν αὐτῷ, Πῶς ἀνεῴχθησαν σοῦ οἱ ὀφθαλμοί; ¹¹ Ἀπεκρίθη ἐκείνος καὶ εἶπεν, Ἄνθρωπος λεγόμενος Ἰησοῦς πηλὸν ἐποίησε, καὶ ἐπέχρισε

Bethesda,—was healed on the Sabbath (above, ch. v. 2—10). The two pools of Bethesda (the house of Mercy) and of Siloam were from one spring (see below, on v. 7); and these two Miracles, both wrought on the Sabbath, may serve as mementos that all streams of Mercy are from the One source of Him, Who is also the Sent, and in Whom is our Rest. See also above, p. 261, 262.

— ἐρχεται νύξ] the night cometh. While you have life, do what you have to do; for after death there is no place for faith or repentance. (Chrys.)

5. φῶς εἰμι τοῦ κόσμου] I am the Light of the World, 'even to the end of the world' (Matt. xxviii. 20); for the day of Christ's presence has no Evening: His Sun never sets. (Aug.)

6. ἔπτυσσε] He spat: this would not have seemed strange to the mind of Easterns in that age, which ascribed a medical virtue to the human saliva. See the authorities in Weinstein's note, p. 902. But the making of clay with the saliva, as if it were to be an eye-salve, would indeed have appeared extraordinary.

— ἐπέχρισε τὸν πηλόν] He anointed the eyes of the blind with the clay. Observe the faith of the man who had been born blind. He did not say, that clay is apt to blind the eye, rather than to open it, or that he had often washed in Siloam, and was not a whit the better; or that if Christ could heal him He would have done it by His word. He did not speak of Christ as Naaman did of Elisha (2 Kings v. 11); but he obeyed. He went his way; he washed, and the result was, he came seeing.

Observe also the manner in which Christ wrought the miracle. It was one of tenderness to the Jews. They might see the clay on the blind man's eyes; and might see him go to Siloam. All these things were done, that their eyes might be opened, and that they might see and believe.

He thus reminds us that He is the Creator of all who made us live and see. He who anoints the blind with clay, and makes him see, formed Adam from the clay of the earth, and breathed into him a living soul, and made him see and live. (Cp. Cyril.)

Christ anointed the eyes with clay, and so gave sight to one who had been born blind. He opened his eyes by means of that which seemed only to seal them up. Here is an answer to those who object that sight cannot be given to the soul by means of things so feeble and inadequate to the purpose, as Sacraments. Almighty God can perform the greatest works by the weakest instruments; and He loves to effect them by such means, in order that the power of the Agent may be more manifested and magnified thereby. He is wont to work by means, which, as far as human knowledge could predict, would not produce any such result. He has walled the sea with sand. He clears the air with storms. He warms the earth with snow. So in the world of His grace. In the desert He brings water, not from the soft earth, but from the flinty rock; He heals the sting of the serpent of fire by the serpent of brass; He overthrows the walls of Jericho by rams'-horns; He slays a thousand men with the jaw-bone of an ass; He cures salt-water by salt; He buoys up iron with water. He fells the giant with a sling and a stone. And thus the Son of God works in His Gospel. He cures the blind man by what seemed only likely to increase his blindness; He opens his eyes by anointing them with clay. He exalts us to heaven by the stumbling-block of the cross. In the simplest symbols He hides supernatural grace. In the weakest creatures He conceals Divine power. He regenerates us by water; He gives immortal food in bread and wine,—in order that, from the weakness of the instruments used, the excellency of the power may be seen to be not of man, but of God. Cp. 2 Cor. iv. 7.

The Anointing with Clay may also be designed to remind us, that the blessings of spiritual illumination are derived from the Incarnation of Christ. The first Adam was formed of the clay of the earth, and he derived his name Adam therefrom. He was, ἐκ γῆς χοικὸς (1 Cor. xv. 47. 49). He was, from χοῦς, χέω,—i. e. from earth fused and moulded. The Son of God, who is "the Lord from heaven," became the Second Adam, and took our Nature of clay; and in it He became the Messiah, the Christ, the Anointed One; and by virtue of the unction of the Holy Ghost, which He received in that Nature, and has poured down upon us, He has regenerated, illumined, and sanctified that Nature, which ever since the Fall was born blind; and He has sent it to Siloam to wash. See note on v. 7.

7. νύφαι εἰς] Cf. Mark i. 9, ἐβαπτίσθη εἰς.

— Σιλωάμ· ὃ ἐρμηνεύεται ἀπεσταλμένος] Siloam, which is interpreted, Sent. Shiloh, Isa. vii. 2; viii. 6; xxii. 9. Neh. iii. 15; from root שָׁלַח (shalah), to send forth. So called from the sending forth of the water from one source into the two pools of Bethesda and Siloam. Lightfoot (in loc. ii, p. 677), and see above, v. 2, and Meyer's note here, p. 357, and compare also Rosenmüller and Mintert, Lex. in v. The sense of the word ἐρμηνεύεται is not to be pressed too closely; it does not mean always a literal interpretation, but rather an allusion. See Acts iv. 36.

Our Lord, by sending the blind man to Siloam, here appears to refer to His own words as recorded above in v. 4, "I must go to the works of Him that sent Me." The Jews endeavoured to set Him in opposition to Moses, who was sent by God (see vii. 19—23; ix. 28, 29), and He proves His own Divine Mission by His Works. The words "He that sent Me," or "the Father that sent Me," are repeated by Him no less than seventeen times in the first nine chapters of this Gospel. And it would appear that by sending the blind man to wash in the pool of Siloam, He intended to teach that He Himself, Who was sent by the Father, is the true "Fountain to be opened in Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness" (Zech. xiii. 1. Joel iii. 18). He is the Fount of Siloam. As St. John says, "This is He that came by Water and Blood; and the Blood of Christ cleanseth us from all sin." (1 John i. 6; v. 6.) "He loved us, and washed us from our sins in His own Blood (Rev. i. 5); and the Saints have washed their robes, and made them white in the Blood of the Lamb." (Rev. vii. 14.) Hence S. Cyril says here, "No one is 'the Sent' but the only-begotten Son, Who came from the Father to destroy sin and Satan. And when we know Him operating invisibly in the Waters of the baptismal fount, we wash with faith,—not by putting away the filth of the flesh, as the Scripture says (1 Pet. iii. 21), but cleansing off the uncleanness of the eyes of the mind, so that we may be able to behold the beauty of the Lord." The name Siloam, says Bengel, had a prophetic character; "quia Christus eo misurus erat cæcum; et ab hoc tempore erat monumentum miraculi facti?" The same may be said of Bethesda (above, ch. v. 2).

— ἦλθε βλέπων] he came seeing. This opening of the eyes of the blind was one of the signs of the Messiah. (Isa. xxix. 18; xxxv. 5.) And this opening of the eyes was very different from all human operations on the organ of sight. It was the bestowal of a new faculty—an act of Creation; and it was the gift of immediate power to use that faculty; a power no less wonderful than the faculty itself. Cp. Burton, here.

8. προσαίτης] a beggar. So A, B, C*, D, K, L, X, and many Versions.—Ἐλξ. τυφλός. But it is not probable, that if τυφλός had been the genuine reading, it would have been altered in so many MSS. to προσαίτης, a word no where else occurring in N. T. Cp. Acts iii. 10, ἐπεγίνωσκον αὐτὸν ὅτι οὗτος ἦν ὁ πρὸς τὴν ἐλεημοσύνην καθήμενος.

The Evangelist mentions that he was a beggar, to teach us by Christ's example not to despise any. (Theoph.)

10. Πῶς ἀνεῴχθησαν σοῦ οἱ ὀφθαλμοί;] How were thine eyes opened? No one knew the mode, but what wonder? The Evangelist himself did not know, nor did he who was healed know; but the fact he knew, and we know it also. (Chrys.) σοῦ is emphatic; see on v. 11.

11. Ἄνθρωπος λεγόμενος Ἰησοῦς] A man called Jesus made clay, and anointed my eyes. Remark the appropriateness of these μοῦ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς, καὶ εἶπέ μοι, Ὑπαγε εἰς τὴν κολυμβήθραν τοῦ Σιλωὰμ καὶ νύψαι· ἀπελθὼν δὲ καὶ νυψάμενος ἀνέβλεψα. ¹² Εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ, Ποῦ ἐστὶν ἐκεῖνος; λέγει, Οὐκ οἶδα.

¹³ Ἀγουνισιν αὐτὸν πρὸς τοὺς Φαρισαίους τὸν ποτὲ τυφλόν. ¹⁴ Ἦν δὲ σάβ- g Matt. 12. 10.
Luke 13. 10—17.
& 14. 1—5.
ch. 5. 5—11.

βατον ὅτε τὸν πηλὸν ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἀνέωξεν αὐτοῦ τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς. ¹⁵ Πάλιν οὖν ἡρώτων αὐτὸν καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι, πῶς ἀνέβλεψεν; Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Πηλὸν ἐπέθηκε μοῦ ἐπὶ τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς, καὶ ἐνύψαμην, καὶ βλέπω.

¹⁶ Ἐλεγον οὖν ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων τινες, Οὗτος ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὐκ ἔστι παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὅτι τὸ σάββατον οὐ τηρεῖ. Ἄλλοι ἔλεγον, ¹⁷ Πῶς δύναται ἄνθρωπος ἀμαρτωλὸς τοιαῦτα σημεῖα ποιεῖν; καὶ σχίσμα ἦν ἐν αὐτοῖς. ¹⁷ Ἀγουνισιν οὖν τῷ τυφλῷ πάλιν, Σὺ τί λέγεις περὶ αὐτοῦ, ὅτι ἤνοιξε σοῦ τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς; Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν, Ὅτι ¹⁸ προφήτης ἐστίν. h ver. 31, 33.
ch. 3. 2.
& 7. 12.
i ver. 31—33.
ch. 10. 19—21.
j ch. 4. 19.

¹⁸ Οὐκ ἐπίστευσαν οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι περὶ αὐτοῦ, ὅτι τυφλὸς ἦν καὶ ἀνέβλεψεν, ἕως ὅτου ἐφώνησαν τοὺς γονεῖς αὐτοῦ τοῦ ἀναβλέψαντος, ¹⁹ καὶ ἡρώτησαν αὐτοὺς λέγοντες, Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ υἱὸς ὑμῶν, ὃν ὑμεῖς λέγετε ὅτι τυφλὸς ἐγεννήθη; πῶς οὖν ἄρτι βλέπει; ²⁰ Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτοῖς οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ καὶ εἶπον, Οἶδαμεν ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ υἱὸς ἡμῶν, καὶ ὅτι τυφλὸς ἐγεννήθη. ²¹ πῶς δὲ νῦν βλέπει, οὐκ οἶδαμεν· ἢ τίς ἤνοιξεν αὐτοῦ τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς, ἡμεῖς οὐκ οἶδαμεν· αὐτὸς ἡλικίαν ἔχει, αὐτὸν ἐρωτήσατε· αὐτὸς περὶ αὐτοῦ λαλήσει. ²² Ταῦτα εἶπον οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ, ²³ ὅτι ἐφοβοῦντο τοὺς Ἰουδαίους· ἦδη γὰρ συνετέθειντο οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, ἵνα ἐάν τις αὐτὸν ὁμολογήσῃ Χριστὸν, ἀποσυνάγωγος γένηται. ²³ Διὰ τοῦτο οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ εἶπον, Ὅτι ἡλικίαν ἔχει, αὐτὸν ἐρωτήσατε. k ver. 32, 33.
ch. 3. 2.
& 4. 19.
& 6. 14.

²⁴ Ἐφώνησαν οὖν ἐκ δευτέρου τὸν ἄνθρωπον ὃς ἦν τυφλός, καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Δὸς δόξαν τῷ Θεῷ· ἡμεῖς οἶδαμεν ὅτι ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος ἀμαρτωλὸς ἐστίν. n Josh. 7. 18, 19.
1 Sam. 6. 5.
ver. 16.

²⁵ Ἀπεκρίθη οὖν ἐκεῖνος, Εἰ ἀμαρτωλὸς ἐστίν, οὐκ οἶδα· ἐν οἶδα, ὅτι τυφλὸς ὦν ἄρτι βλέπω. ²⁶ Εἶπον δὲ αὐτῷ πάλιν, Τί ἐποίησέ σοι; πῶς ἤνοιξε σοῦ τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς; ²⁷ Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς, Εἶπον ὑμῖν ἤδη, καὶ οὐκ ἠκούσατε· τί πάλιν θέλετε ἀκούειν; μὴ καὶ ὑμεῖς θέλετε αὐτοῦ μαθηταὶ γενέσθαι; ²⁸ Ἐλοιδόρησαν αὐτὸν καὶ εἶπον, Σὺ εἰ μαθητὴς ἐκείνου· ἡμεῖς δὲ τοῦ Μωϋσέως ἐσμέν μαθηταί.

²⁹ Ἡμεῖς οἶδαμεν ὅτι Μωϋσῇ λελάληκεν ὁ Θεός· τοῦτον δὲ οὐκ οἶδαμεν πόθεν ἐστίν. ³⁰ Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ ἄνθρωπος καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, ³¹ Ἐν γὰρ τούτῳ θαυμαστόν ἐστιν, ὅτι ὑμεῖς οὐκ οἴδατε πόθεν ἐστὶ, καὶ ἀνέφξέ μου τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς. o ch. 8. 14.
p ch. 3. 10.

³¹ οὐκ οἶδαμεν δὲ ὅτι ἀμαρτωλῶν ὁ Θεὸς οὐκ ἀκούει, ἀλλ' ἐάν τις θεοσεβῇς ἢ καὶ τὸ θέλημα αὐτοῦ ποιῇ, τούτου ἀκούει. ³² ἐκ τοῦ αἰῶνος οὐκ ἠκούσθη, ὅτι ἤνοιξέ τις ὀφθαλμούς τυφλοῦ γεγεννημένον. q Prov. 15. 8, 29.
& 28. 9.
Isa. 1. 15.
Jer. 14. 10—12.
Ezek. 8. 17, 18.
Micah 3. 4.
Zech. 7. 13.
r ver. 16.

³³ εἰ μὴ ἦν οὗτος παρὰ Θεοῦ, οὐκ ἠδύνατο ποιεῖν οὐδέν. ³⁴ Ἀπεκρίθησαν καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Ἐν ἀμαρτίαις σὺ ἐγεννήθης ὄλος, καὶ σὺ διδάσκεις ἡμᾶς; Καὶ ἐξέβαλον αὐτὸν ἔξω.

³⁵ Ἦκουσεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ὅτι ἐξέβαλον αὐτὸν ἔξω· καὶ εὐρὼν αὐτὸν εἶπεν words in a spiritual sense, as applicable to ourselves. The Son of God became man (ἄνθρωπος) and Saviour (Ἰησοῦς). He came to us in our blindness, as we sat and begged by the wayside of life; He made clay, i. e. He took of the mortal dust of our earthy Nature (see v. 6), and moulded it by the breath and moisture of His mouth, and blended it with the Divine Nature, and anointed it with the Holy Ghost; and sent us to Siloam; and by the co-operation of our Faith and Obedience with His Divine Power and Love, our eyes are opened and we see.

— μοῦ] emphatic here, and so placed in the best MSS., and not after ὀφθαλμοῦς as in Elz.; cp. vv. 15. 30. The eyes of me—who was born blind. And so σοῦ, vv. 10. 17. 26.

— εἰς τ. κ. τ. Σιλωὰμ] B, D, L, X have εἰς τὸν Σιλωὰμ.

12. Ποῦ ἐστίν] Where is He? Christ withdrew Himself after His miracles. He did not seek glory from man. (Chrys.)

14. Ἦν δὲ σάββατον] It was the Sabbath, the end of the week; Christ illumined the world in the last age. (Cyri.) See also above on v. 4.

17. Ὅτι] In regard to that: εἰς ἐκεῖνο ὅτι—ὅπερ ὦν ὅτι. (Meyer.) See xi. 47.

22. ἀποσυνάγωγος] put out of the synagogue. On the forms of Excommunication among the Jews, see Wetstein, p. 904.

27. γενέσθαι] to become.

34. ἐξέβαλον αὐτὸν ἔξω] they cast him out. The children of falsehood cast out the confessor of Truth. The Jews cast him out of the Synagogue for confessing Christ; and the Lord of the Temple found him: they who suffer for the truth will be found by Christ. (Chrys., Theoph.) It was no evil to be so put out; they excommunicated him who confessed Christ, and Christ received him. (Aug.)

35. εὐρὼν αὐτόν] having gone in quest of, and having found. ἡδῶν is the Hebr. מַטְסָא (matsa), for which it is often used by the LXX. Cp. above, i. 42. 44; v. 14; and below, xii. 14.

The Pharisees cast him out; Jesus went in search of him. "When my father and my mother forsake me, the Lord taketh me up" (Ps. xxvii. 10). "Blessed are they that are persecuted for αὐτῷ, Σὺ πιστεύεις εἰς τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ; ³⁶ Ἀπεκρίθη ἐκεῖνος καὶ εἶπε, Καὶ τίς ἐστι, Κύριε, ἵνα πιστεύσω εἰς αὐτόν; ³⁷ ἔπειτα δὲ αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Καὶ ἑώρακας αὐτόν, καὶ ὁ λαλῶν μετὰ σοῦ ἐκεῖνός ἐστιν. ³⁸ Ὁ δὲ ἔφη, Πιστεύω, Κύριε· καὶ προσεκύνησεν αὐτῷ. ³⁹ Καὶ εἶπεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Εἰς κρίμα ἐγὼ εἰς τὸν κόσμον τοῦτον ἦλθον, ἵνα οἱ μὴ βλέποντες βλέπωσι, καὶ οἱ βλέποντες τυφλοὶ γένωνται.

⁴⁰ Καὶ ἤκουσαν ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων ταῦτα οἱ ὄντες μετ' αὐτοῦ, καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Μὴ καὶ ἡμεῖς τυφλοὶ ἐσμεν; ⁴¹ ἔπειτα αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Εἰ τυφλοὶ ἦτε, οὐκ ἂν εἶχετε ἁμαρτίαν· νῦν δὲ λέγετε, Ὅτι βλέπομεν· ἡ οὖν ἁμαρτία ὑμῶν μένει.

X. ¹ Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὁ μὴ εἰσερχόμενος διὰ τῆς θύρας εἰς τὴν αὐλὴν τῶν προβάτων, ἀλλὰ ἀναβαίνων ἀλλαχόθεν, ἐκεῖνος κλέπτῃς ἐστὶ καὶ ληστής· righteousness' sake, for their's is the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. v. 10: see also v. 11, and Luke vi. 22).

This history affords comfort, direction, and encouragement to members of the Church of England, in regard to the Church of Rome. Our Lord commanded His disciples to love all men, even their enemies (Matt. v. 44. 46), and to hearken even to His worst enemies, the Scribes and Pharisees, "sitting in Moses' seat" (Matt. xxiii. 2); that is, as far as they taught in accordance with His law; but to beware of their false doctrine (Matt. xvi. 6. 11). And therefore it is the duty of all His disciples to cherish a spirit of Christian Love and Unity toward all men, and to submit in all godly obedience to those who are over them in the Lord.

But if those who sit in Moses' seat teach things contrary to the Law of Moses, and proceed to impose false doctrines as terms of Communion; if they threaten with Excommunication those who do not receive those false doctrines, but hold fast to the truth as taught by Christ and His Apostles,—then no desire of Unity, no love of Enemies, no fear of separation from Parents and spiritual Superiors, no dread of spiritual censures and penalties may deter the disciples of Christ from confessing Him Who is the Truth, and from holding the Faith whole and undefiled; but they must boldly acknowledge Christ, and leave the issue to Him.

Our Lord Himself has set the seal of His Divine sanction on these principles. He went in quest of the man who had been put out of the Synagogue. He Who is the lover of Unity, and Who commanded His Disciples to love their Enemies, and prayed "that they all might be one" (John xvii. 21), and taught them to hearken to the Scribes and Pharisees; and Who hates strife and disobedience, showed by seeking out the man whom the Pharisees had excommunicated, that he, whom He sought and found, was not guilty of sin, when he confessed Christ, though he had been excommunicated as a sinner; and that he had done his duty in confessing Christ; and that the sin of schism,—for a schism there was, and there cannot be schism without sin,—lay at the door of those who cast him out.

So it is now. We do not say that the communion of spiritual Pastors is to be forsaken, simply because they teach some doctrines that are false. Spiritual Pastors are men; and men are fallible; and wherever fallibility is, there error may arise. And if separations were allowable for every error in a Church, there would be no such thing as Church Communion left. Our duty is to communicate with those who sit in Moses' Seat, but not to communicate with them in any false doctrines by which they may corrupt his Law.

Let it then be allowed, for argument's sake, that the Bishop of Rome sits in the Chair of Authority. Then we do not say, that, merely because he is fallible, or because he teaches some false doctrines, Communion with him is impossible. Christ communicated with Scribes and Pharisees. He taught with them in the Synagogue, and worshipped with them in the Temple. So, though the Bishop of Rome teaches some false doctrines, we might yet communicate with him in what he still retains of Christian truth.

But he has gone beyond this. He has proceeded to impose false doctrines as terms of Church Communion. He makes communion in error to be essential to communion with himself. He teaches in opposition to Christ. He has endeavoured to supersede Christ's Copy of the Old Testament by an Old Testament of his own. He adds human codicils, as of equal authority, to the Divine Testaments. He mutilates the Sacraments of Christ. He substitutes other objects of worship in the room of Christ. And he teaches Articles of Faith which were not preached by Christ and His Apostles, and were unknown for fifteen centuries to the Church of Christ. And he requires all men to receive these novel corruptions, on pain of excommunication. He thus contravenes Christ; and puts himself in the place of Christ. Therefore, if we confess Jesus to be the Christ, we are "put out of the Synagogue" (John ix. 22).

We do confess Jesus to be the Christ. We believe Him to be "the Way, the Truth, and the Life" (xiv. 6). We know that He hath the Words of Eternal Life (vi. 68), and that if any one preach any thing beside what He and His Apostles preached, he is to be anathema (Gal. i. 8, 9); and that in vain they worship Him, if they teach for doctrines the commandments of men. (Matt. xv. 9.) We know that the Church of Rome, in excommunicating us for confessing Christ, has excommunicated herself; we believe that the sin of the separation between us lies at her door. And we humbly hope and trust that we have been found by Christ; and are in communion with Him Who is the Head of the Church; and if, being illumined by Him Who is the Light, we walk in the Light, "we have fellowship one with another" (1 John i. 7); we are in communion with Christ the Head, and with all His Members throughout the world; and with all of every age who have departed in His true faith and fear.

— πιστεύεις εἰς τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ;] believest thou on the Son of God? It is not enough to believe in Jesus as the Christ, we must also believe in Him as the Son of God. (Hilary, de Trin. vi.) And it is not enough to believe, we must worship Him as God. Hence the Evangelist relates of the blind man healed, "he said, Lord, I believe, and he worshipped Him" (Aug.); and Christ approves this, for He says, "I am come, that they which see not might see," as much as to say, he who was blind from his birth, now sees both in body and soul. (Theoph.) The Worship of Christ is the Vision of the soul.

36. Καὶ τίς ἐστὶν] The καὶ is omitted by Elz., but is found in B, D, E, F, G, K, M, S, U, X, Δ, Δ, and many Cursive MSS.

37. ἑώρακας αὐτόν] thou hast seen Him. Thou who wast born blind hast seen Christ. This is His gift. This Scripture may be used against the Nestorian heresy, which separates the Son of Mary as a different person from the Son of God. Christ says, that in seeing Him we see the Son of God. (Theoph.)

We are all born blind, and we must all repair to Siloam, the font of baptism, and be baptized in Him Who is Sent, that is, Christ. And when we are baptized, we must expect to be tempted. We may be brought before Kings and Rulers for His sake who has healed us. We must then quit ourselves valiantly, and not be afraid to confess Christ; and if need be, to suffer excommunication according to Christ's words, "They will put you out of their synagogues, and ye shall be hated of all men for My name's sake" (John xvi. 2. Matt. x. 22. Mark xiii. 13. Luke xxi. 17). Then Jesus will find us, and He will bless us with fuller knowledge and firmer faith. (Theoph.)

39. κρίμα] Incorrectly printed κρίμα in some edd. here and elsewhere in N. T. The ι is long by nature. Æsch. Suppl. 392, οὐκ εὐκρίτων τὸ κρίμα.

— βλέπωσι] may see: now, and in other ages. A general proposition applicable to all times.

41. Εἰ τυφλοὶ ἦτε] If ye were blind; if ye had no access to the Scriptures your sin would not be so great as it is; but now that ye profess to be teachers of the law, ye are self-condemned.

CH. X. 1. Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν—ληστής] This chapter is a Divine Pastoral, addressed especially to Bishops, Priests, and Deacons.

The blind man had been excommunicated by the Pharisees for confessing Christ (ix. 34). They were the Doctors of the Law and Pastors of the People (Matt. xxiii. 2); but they had become hireling shepherds and idol pastors (Ezek. xxxiv. 2. Jer. xxiii. 1. Zech. xi. 17). And from this act of theirs our Lord takes occasion to show that they had excommunicated themselves.

And why? Because He is the Door of the Fold. And by

² ὁ δὲ εἰσερχόμενος διὰ τῆς θύρας ποιμὴν ἐστὶ τῶν προβάτων. ³ Τούτῳ ὁ θυρωρὸς ἀνοίγει· καὶ τὰ πρόβατα τῆς φωνῆς αὐτοῦ ἀκούει· καὶ τὰ ἴδια πρόβατα καλεῖ κατ' ὄνομα, καὶ ἐξάγει αὐτά. ⁴ Καὶ ὅταν τὰ ἴδια πρόβατα ἐκβάλῃ, ἔμ- προσθεν αὐτῶν πορεύεται, καὶ τὰ πρόβατα αὐτῷ ἀκολουθεῖ, ὅτι οἶδασιν τὴν φωνὴν αὐτοῦ. ⁵ Ἀλλοτρίῳ δὲ οὐ μὴ ἀκολουθήσουσιν, ἀλλὰ φεύξονται ἀπ' αὐτοῦ· ὅτι οὐκ οἶδασιν τῶν ἀλλοτρίων τὴν φωνήν.

⁶ Ταύτην τὴν παροιμίαν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς· ἐκεῖνοι δὲ οὐκ ἔγνωσαν τίνα ἦν ἃ ἐλάλει αὐτοῖς.

⁷ Εἶπεν οὖν πάλιν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ θύρα τῶν προβάτων. ⁸ Πάντες ὅσοι πρὸ ἐμοῦ ἦλθον κλέπται εἰσὶ καὶ λησταί· ἀλλ' οὐκ ἤκουσαν αὐτῶν τὰ πρόβατα.

⁹ Ὁ ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ θύρα· δι' ἐμοῦ ἐάν τις εἰσέλθῃ, σωθήσεται καὶ εἰσελεύσεται καὶ ἐξελεύσεται, καὶ νομὴν εὕρήσει. ¹⁰ Ὁ κλέπτης οὐκ ἔρχεται εἰ μὴ ἵνα κλέψῃ καὶ θύσῃ καὶ ἀπολέσῃ· ἐγὼ ἦλθον ἵνα ζῶν ἔχωσι, καὶ περισσὸν ἔχωσιν.

¹¹ Ὁ ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλός· ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλὸς τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ τίθησιν ὑπὲρ τῶν προβάτων· ¹² ὁ μισθωτὸς δὲ, καὶ οὐκ ὢν ποιμὴν, οὗ οὐκ εἰσὶ τὰ πρό-

a ch. 14. 6.
Eph. 2. 18.
Heb. 10. 19, 20.
b ch. 14. 6.
Rom. 5. 1.
Eph. 2. 18.
Heb. 10. 19, 20.
Ps. 23. 1, 4.
c ver. 3, 4.
Isa. 40. 11.
Ezek. 34. 11—16.
d Isa. 40. 11.
Ezek. 34. 23.
& 37. 24.
Zech. 11. 16, 17.
& 13. 7.
Micah 5. 4.
Heb. 13. 20.
1 Pet. 2. 25.
ch. 15. 13.
Rom. 5. 7, 8.
Eph. 5. 2.
Isa. 53. 10, 11.
Dan. 9. 24, 26.
Tit. 2. 14.
1 Pet. 1. 18, 19.
Rev. 5. 9.

casting out a man who had come in by the Door of a good confession to Christ, they, who cast him out, had proved that they did not know the Door, and were therefore not in the fold.

Besides, they had endeavoured to make Moses into a Door, in opposition to Christ (ix. 28, 29). They had accused Christ of breaking the Law of Moses, which was given by Christ. Thus they had shown that they did not understand the relation of Moses to Christ. Christ therefore here declares that He Himself is the Only Door; and that Moses and all true Prophets have passed through that Door; and that there is no other entrance for Pastors or People but by Him; and that all who profess to be Shepherds, but do not pass through that Door, are "thieves and robbers."

This may be applied more generally, as follows:

Many persons, who are called good men according to the language of this world, and yet are not true Christians, ask, as the Pharisees did, "Are we blind also?" (John ix. 40.) Many who compose subtle treatises on Morals and Metaphysics, and have formed Schools of Philosophy, and draw disciples after them, yet will not stoop to pass through the Door. To them our Lord says, "He that entereth not by the door is a thief and a robber." He says the same to many, who boast that they alone can see, and that they are even enlightened by Christ, but are, in fact, teachers of false doctrine. Such are the Sabellians, for example, who say that the Son and the Father are but One person. Such are the Arians, who say that the Father and Son are not of the same substance. Such are the Photinians and Socinians, who say that Christ is a mere man and not God; and, in fine, all who preach such a Christ as they invent for themselves in their own imaginations, and not such a Christ as the Scriptures reveal. They do not enter by the Door. In a word, none can have a solid hope of eternal life, unless he knows the true Life, which is Christ, and enters by this Door into the fold. Let him not only preach Christ's name, but seek Christ's glory, and not his own glory. Christ's Door is lowly, and he who enters by this door must humble himself; he must stoop, in order that he may enter by it. (Cp. Aug. here, and Serm. 137, 138.)

On κλέπτης and ληστής see further, v. 8.

3. Τούτῳ ὁ θυρωρὸς ἀνοίγει] To him the porter openeth. Christ is the Door of the fold, and the Keeper of the door as well as the Shepherd of the Sheep. He is the Truth, and opens Himself, and reveals to us the Truth. (Aug.)

He uses various metaphors here, in order that we may not interpret His words literally, and may know Him to be All in All.

— καλεῖ] A, B, D, L, X have φωνεῖ.

4. πρόβατα] B, D, L, X have πάντα.

— τὰ πρόβατα αὐτῷ ἀκολουθεῖ] the sheep follow Him. The Saints before the Advent of Christ in the flesh, believed in Him who was to come, as we believe in Him Who has come. The seasons are changed, but the Faith is One. All who before the Incarnation believed the faith which was taught by Abraham and the Patriarchs, and Moses and the Prophets, preannouncing Christ, were Sheep of Christ, and heard and knew His Voice speaking by them. (Aug.) All the saints follow Christ (cp. Rev. xiv. 4); none go before Him (see on v. 8); He goes before them all (v. 4).

7. ἡ θύρα] He is the Door by Whom Abraham entered and the Prophets, as well as the Apostles. (Ignatius ad Philad. 9.) Cp. Hermæ Pastor. iii. 9, who says, "As no one can enter into a city but by its gate, so no one can enter into the kingdom of God but by the name of the Son of God." Cp. Eph. ii. 18. "Christus et Ostium, et Pastor, et Omnia." (Bengel.)

8. Πάντες — λησταί] All, as many who came before Me, are thieves and robbers. Did not Moses and the Prophets come before Him? No; they came with Him. He Who is the Eternal Word sent them as His heralds, and He possessed their hearts. All who preached the Truth came with Him who is the Truth. But others, who put themselves before Him, who do not come from Him, and do not acknowledge His Eternity, are thieves and robbers. (Chrys.) "In venientibus presumptio temeritatis, in missis obsequium servitutis." (Jerome, in Matt. i., who quotes Ezek. xiii. 3. Jer. xiv. 14; xxiii. 21.) Similarly Aug. ad Ps. xc. They who come of their own accord, and were not sent by Christ, are thieves and robbers; but all true Prophets were ministers of Christ; and the Church is "built on Apostles and Prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief corner-stone" (Eph. ii. 20). Elias raised the dead by the power of Christ. Cp. above on v. 4.

The Manichæans perverted these words of Christ by applying them to the Prophets of the Old Testament; and by alleging therefrom that the Old Testament is contrary to the New. But our Lord is speaking only of false prophets. For He says, "as many as came before Me," that is, who were not sent; according to what God says by Jeremiah (xxiii. 21), "I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran; I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied." They defrauded Him of His own prerogative, and spoiled men's souls of the only faith and hope that can save them. (Col. ii. 8. 2 Tim. iii. 6.) (Theoph.) Hence they who came,—claiming to themselves the incommunicable attributes of Christ, Who is the only Door,—are thieves and robbers. Hence St. Paul uses the words ὁ ἐρχόμενος to describe a false teacher who sends himself, and is thus distinguished from an Apostle who is sent by Christ. (2 Cor. xi. 4.)

Hence the Church of England says in her Collect for the third Sunday in Advent, "O Lord Jesus Christ, Who at Thy first Coming didst send Thy Messenger to prepare Thy way before Thee." He Who is the Eternal Word sent him who was the Voice. He Who is the Way sent His own forerunner to prepare it in the hearts of men.

11—16.] See the Homily of Greg. M. on these verses, in Evang. i. 14, p. 1484.

11. Ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλός] I am the good Shepherd; and yet He had said before (v. 9), "I am the Door." How does He enter through Himself? He by Himself knows the Father, and we know the Father by Him; He enters the sheepfold by Himself, and we by Him; He declares Himself, as a light shows other things as well as itself.

Christ is the Shepherd, and yet He grants to others to be Shepherds. Peter is a Shepherd, and the rest of the Apostles are Shepherds, and all good Bishops are Shepherds: but none of us calls himself the Door. (Aug.)

— ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλὸς — πρόβατων] the good shepherd lays down his life for the sheep. The phrase τίθεμαι τὴν ψυχὴν, to lay down his life, is peculiar to St. John (xiii. 37; xv. 13. 1 John iii. 16).

Βατα Ἰσρα. θεωρεῖ τὸν λύκον ἐρχόμενον, καὶ ἀφήσιν τὰ πρόβατα καὶ φεύγει καὶ ὁ λύκος ἀρπάξει αὐτὰ. καὶ σκορπίζει τὰ πρόβατα. ¹³ ὁ δὲ μισθωτὸς φεύγει, ὅτι μισθωτὸς ἐστίν. καὶ οὐ μέλει αὐτῷ περὶ τῶν προβάτων. ¹⁴ Ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλός· καὶ γινώσκω τὰ ἐμὰ καὶ γινώσκονται ὑπὸ τῶν ἐμῶν. ^(90/111) ¹⁵ καθὼς γινώσκει με ὁ Πατήρ, καὶ γὰρ γινώσκω τὸν Πατέρα· καὶ τὴν ψυχὴν μου τίθῃμι ὑπὲρ τῶν προβάτων. ^(91/11) ¹⁶ Καὶ ἄλλα πρόβατα ἔχω ἃ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκ τῆς αὐλῆς ταύτης· καλέσά με δεῖ ἀγαγεῖν, καὶ τῆς φωνῆς μου ἀκούσουσιν· καὶ γειήσεται αὐτὰ ποίαν, εἰς ποιμήν. ^(92/8) ¹⁷ Διὰ τοῦτο ὁ Πατήρ με ἀγαπᾷ, ὅτι ἐγὼ τίθῃμι τὴν ψυχὴν μου ἵνα πάλιν λάβω αὐτήν. ¹⁸ Οὐδεὶς αἶρει αὐτήν ἀπ' ἐμοῦ, ἀλλ' ἐγὼ τίθῃμι αὐτήν ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ· ἐξουσίαν ἔχω θεῖναι αὐτήν, καὶ ἐξουσίαν ἔχω πάλιν λαβεῖν αὐτήν· ταύτην τὴν ἐπιτολήν ἔλαβον παρὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς μου. ¹⁹ Σχίσμα οὖν πάλιν ἐγένετο ἐν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις διὰ τοὺς λόγους τούτους· ²⁰ ἔλεγον δὲ πολλοὶ ἐξ αὐτῶν, Δαιμόνιον ἔχει καὶ μαίνεται· τί αὐτοῦ ἀκούετε; ²¹ ἄλλοι ἔλεγον, Ταῦτα τὰ ῥήματα οὐκ ἔστι δαιμονιζόμενον· μή δαιμόνιον δύναται τυφλῶν ὀφθαλμοὺς ἀνοίγειν; ²² Ἐγένετο δὲ τὰ ἐγκαίνια ἐν τοῖς Ἱεροσολύμοις, καὶ χειμὼν ἦν· ²³ καὶ περιπατεῖ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ ἐν τῇ στοᾷ Σολομῶνος.

It seems to be derived from the act of depositing or laying down a sum of money as a price for something bought or redeemed (see Meyer), and is expressive of the act performed by Christ in giving His life as a ransom or ἀντίλυτρον a price or ransom for all men (see Matt. xx. 28. 1 Tim. ii. 6. Tit. ii. 14. 1 Pet. i. 18), and is an assertion of the doctrine of the Atonement.

The faithfulness of the Shepherd is tested by his sufferings for the Sheep. Hence St. Paul recounts his own perils in answer to the false Apostles his accusers. (2 Cor. xi. 23.) (Chrys.) Here is an instruction to all Pastors: first, to give of their external good things to their sheep; and next, if necessary, to give their lives. He who does not give of his substance for his sheep, how will he give his life? They who love their substance more than their sheep, feed not in love, but for lucre, and forfeit the name of Shepherds, and become hirelings. (Greg. Hom. xiv. in Evang.)

Here is true martyrdom. Not all who give their bodies to be burnt give their lives for the sheep. But we must have charity. (1 Cor. xiii. 3.) And how can a man be said to have charity who does not love Unity? (Aug.) Here then is a warning to the Shepherds against Schism.

— τίθωμι lays down: a word repeated by our Lord five times here with great emphasis. (Bengel.) The death of Christ is the source of all life. Isa. lxi. 10. See above on i. 29.) He gave His life on the Cross; and He gives it in the Holy Communion of His Body and Blood. (Greg. M.)

12. θεωρεῖ τὸν λύκον ἐρχόμενον, he beholds the wolf coming. The Wolf—especially Satan. It is the coming of the wolf that proves the fidelity of the Shepherd. In times of tranquillity the hireling stands on guard as well as the Shepherd. The hour of trial shows the difference of the two. (Greg. Hom. i. 14.)

13. μισθωτὸς οὖν ἐστιν The hireling doeth because he is a hireling, and seeks earthly gain, and does not love the sheep, and therefore fears to expose himself to peril, lest he lose what he loves. Such is he who declines to exercise godly discipline, or to minister godly rebuke to sinners, and so lets the sheep fall into the jaws of the wolf, who is the devil. (Aug., Greg.) Woe to those who consult their own temporal welfare and not the spiritual good of the flock. Woe to the Shepherds who feed themselves and not the flock. See Ezek. xxxiv. 2. and Phil. ii. 21. (Chrys.)

Yet the hireling is sometimes necessary, and we may hear the Good Shepherd speaking by the hireling's mouth. Many in the Church who seek their own, yet preach Christ; and the Voice of Christ is heard speaking by them; and the sheep follow—not the hireling—but the Shepherd speaking by the hireling. See Matt. xxiii. 2. (Aug.) We may not therefore separate ourselves from Christ's Church, because of hirelings in it.

14. γινώσκω τὰ ἐμὰ I know my own. An exemplary lesson to Pastors. The hireling does not know his sheep, because he does not often visit them; but the true Pastor, who is like Christ, knows his sheep, because he takes care of them; and is known by them, because they are visited by him, and know their guardian by intimacy with him. (Theoph.) — γινώσκω I am known of them, as My Father knoweth Me, and as I know My Father. Cp. vi. 57; xiv. 20; xvii. 22.

The word γινώσκω signifies the knowledge of love; see Acts xv. 18.

16. Ἄλλα πρόβατα ἔχω] I have other sheep beside the sheep of the Israel after the flesh; namely, the sheep of the Israel in faith. He came to make both one in Himself. (Eph. ii. 14, 15. 1 Cor. vii. 19.) (Chrys., Aug.) Our Lord came to redeem the Gentiles and Samaritans as well as the Jews. (Greg. Hom. 14.)

— γειήσεται will become. This is not yet; but is an end to be attained by the missionary labour and prayers of the Church. See the third Collect for Good Friday. And its full end will be, when the Sheep are folded together, on the Right Hand of the Chief Shepherd at the Great Day. (Matt. xxv. 33.)

— μία ποίαν, εἰς ποιμήν one flock, the Church Universal; and One Shepherd, Christ. There is one seal of baptism to all; one Shepherd, He who is the Word of God, and God. Hence we may refute the Manicheans, and prove against them that there is one Shepherd and one God, both in the Old and New Testament. (Theoph., who quotes Col. iii. 10.)

17, 18. ἐγὼ τίθωμι τὴν ψυχὴν μου κ.τ.λ.] I pay the price of the world's ransom freely. See on v. 11. However men may conspire against Me, they cannot take my life from Me, but I surrender it willingly. He goes spontaneously to His Passion, and endured it because He so willed, and when He willed, and as He willed. He had power to lay down, and He had power to take His life again, because He is the Word; and He proves this by prophesying that He will take it up again when He has laid it down. (Chrys.) Whatever Christ suffered, He suffered willingly; and we are not to imagine that His sufferings were any sign of His Father's anger against Him; they were indeed proofs of His Father's anger against sin for which He suffered, and so proofs of His Father's love to Him for taking away sin by suffering. Here is an answer to those who cavil at the doctrine of the Atonement as inconsistent with God's love and justice. (See on Matt. xvii. 5 and xx. 28.) "Amor Patris non modò erga nos, sed etiam erga Christum in Passione Christi spectandus est; non solum severitas ultrix." (Bengel.)

By this saying of Christ we may refute the Apollinarians, who deny that Christ has a reasonable human soul. At Christ's death the human flesh laid down the human soul, by the power of the Word which dwelt in the flesh, and which took a human soul, but was never separated from the soul. (Chrys., Aug.)

22. τὰ ἐγκαίνια] the Encenia, or Feast of Dedication of the Temple; i.e. its renewal or restoration by Judas Maccabeus, after its pollution by Antiochus Epiphanes. Cp. 1 Macc. iv. 59. 2 Macc. i. 18; x. 6; called by Josephus ῥῆτα (Ant. xii. 7). It fell in the month Cisleu or December. See Lightfoot, i. p. 979; ii. 576. Mede, p. 268. Weiststein, p. 909, who observes that it was usual to read then the seventh chapter of Numbers concerning the dedication of the Tabernacle. Buxtorf, Synagog. xxviii. Prideaux, Connexion, at b.c. 165. Winer, i. 659. The dedication of Solomon was in the autumn; that of Zerubbabel in the spring; that of Judas Maccabeus in the winter; and therefore the Evangelist adds the words, "it was winter." (Alcuin.) St. John tacitly reminds the reader that our Lord in His mercy, now approaching the end of His Ministry, abode longer than usual at

24 Ἐκύκλωσαν οὖν αὐτὸν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, καὶ ἔλεγον αὐτῷ, Ἔως πότε τὴν ψυχὴν ἡμῶν αἴρεις; εἰ σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστὸς, εἰπέ ἡμῖν παρρησίᾳ. 25 Ὁ Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ο ch. 5. 36. ver. 38.
ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Εἶπον ὑμῖν, καὶ οὐ πιστεύετε· τὰ ἔργα ἃ ἐγὼ ποιῶ ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Πατρὸς μου, ταῦτα μαρτυρεῖ περὶ ἐμοῦ. 26 Ὁ Ἀλλὰ ὑμεῖς οὐ πιστεύετε· οὐ γάρ p ch. 8. 47. 1 John 4. 6.
ἐστε ἐκ τῶν προβάτων τῶν ἐμῶν, καθὼς εἶπον ὑμῖν, 27 τὰ πρόβατα τὰ ἐμὰ τῆς φωνῆς μου ἀκούει, καὶ γὰρ γινώσκω αὐτὰ, καὶ ἀκολουθοῦσίν μοι, 28 καὶ γὰρ ζωὴν αἰώνιον δίδωμι αὐτοῖς· καὶ οὐ μὴ ἀπόλυνται εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, καὶ οὐχ ἀρπάσει τις q ch. 18. 9. & 17. 2, 6.
αὐτὰ ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς μου. 29 Ὁ Πατὴρ μου ὃς δέδωκέ μοι μέζων πάντων ἐστίν, r ch. 14. 28.
καὶ οὐδεὶς δύναται ἀρπάζειν ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς τοῦ Πατρὸς μου. 30 Ὁ Ἐγὼ καὶ ὁ s ch. 17. 11, 22.
Πατὴρ ἐν ἑσμέν. 31 Ὁ Ἐβάστασαν οὖν πάλιν λίθους οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, ἵνα λιθάσωσιν αὐτόν. t ch. 8. 59.

Jerusalem and in its neighbourhood, in order to win the Jews to Himself. Our Lord suffered in the following spring.

This then was the last celebration of the Encania, or Feast of Dedication, next before Christ's Passion. He Who was the true Temple (ii. 19. 21) was now walking in a Porch which bore the name of the royal builder of the First Temple, and was a remnant of his fabric; and at the festival which commemorated the restoration of the Second Temple. The Temple itself was soon to be profaned again, and to be destroyed, because they who should have been builders rejected the head Stone of the corner. But He, the true Solomon, the Divine Architect of the Temple, was now about to raise up the Temple of His own body (John ii. 19), and so to institute a great Encania; and to build up the Temple of His Church, Universal and Indestructible.

The lawfulness and reasonableness of appointing religious Festivals and Holy Days by human authority, is inferred from the practice of the Ancient Church of God in appointing that of Purim (Esther ix. 27), and this of Dedication. See Hooker, V. lxx. lxxi.

— χειμὸν ἦν] it was winter. A circumstance well known to the Jews, but not to all or many for whom St. John wrote; and showing that the Feast of Dedication here mentioned was that of the Maccabees; see preceding note.

Probably he had also some other design in specifying this season: he thus showed that it was not long before our Lord's Passion.

Nothing is insignificant in the Gospel. And in this Gospel especially, every touch of the Spirit, however slight, has its meaning. May we not venture to suggest, that an intimation may be here given of an inner sympathy between the world of Nature and that of Grace? Both are from the same Divine hand; both were made by Him, Who was from the beginning with God (John i. 1, 2), and both are tributary to Him. The Sun and the Earth paid homage to Him at His Passion: and now the season of contradiction of sinners at Jerusalem is one of Winter in the natural world. Their hearts are frozen. But the Spring will come; and Christ, Who is to fall like a seed into the earth in winter (John xii. 24), will rise from the grave and ascend to heaven, and send the Holy Ghost, in vernal showers, in the season of May, to refresh His inheritance (Ps. lxxviii. 9); and to open the flowers, and expand the leaves, and ripen the fruits of the Church; and the spiritual mustard-seed will shoot forth its branches and overshadow the earth. Compare the words of Christ to the Church in the Canticles (ii. 10—13), "Lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land; the fig-tree putteth forth her green figs, and the vines with the tender grape give a good smell. Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away." Consider also our Lord's words (Matt. xxiv. 20), "Pray ye that your flight be not in the winter." May there not perhaps be a similar suggestion in the words of the Evangelist concerning the going out of Judas on his dark and unholy errand, "It was night" (xiii. 30); and also concerning the morning of the Passion, when the love of the world was chilled (xvii. 18),—"It was cold?" See further below on v. 23.

But after the Passion and Burial, the Morning of the Resurrection is ushered in with more joyful words (Matt. xxviii. 1), "when the day was dawning into the first day of the week." Mark xvi. 2, "when the sun was arisen,"—that sun which had been darkened, Matt. xxvii. 45. Cp. there, vv. 51, 52.

23. περιεπάτει] He was walking, i. e. when they came and surrounded Him,—a proof of the impression He had made at Jerusalem.

— στοᾷ Σολομώνος] in the arcade, cloister, or colonnade, VOL. I.

at the east side of the Temple, and a remnant of the original Temple of Solomon. See Joseph. B. J. v. 6. Ant. viii. 3; ix. 11; xx. 9.

Observe that this discourse of our Lord, concerning His own Divine power as proved by His works, was delivered in Winter, in Solomon's Porch. And then the Jews rejected Him (v. 39). But afterwards, Solomon's Porch was the place, in which His Apostles, having wrought mighty works in Christ's name, boldly proclaimed His Messiahship and Divine Power to the People, who gladly accept the Gospel. (Acts iii. 11; v. 12.) Both in Nature and in Grace it was then Spring. Christ had ascended; the Comforter was come. See the last note but one.

24. Ἔως πότε τ. ψυχὴν ἡμῶν αἴρεις;] How long dost thou hold our mind lifted up in suspense? μετέωρον ποιεῖς. See Luke xii. 29.

28. οὐχ ἀρπάσει τις αὐτὰ ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς μου.] none shall pluck them out of My hand; "for I have given them upon the palms of My hands." Isa. xlix. 16. (Burgon.)

But did not Judas perish? Yes; because he did not "endure unto the end;" and if any man separates himself from the flock, and forsakes the Shepherd, he incurs peril of perdition. Heb. ii. 3, 4. (Theoph.)

29. χειρὸς τοῦ Πατρὸς μου] the hand of My Father. See v. 28. He thus shows that His own hand and His Father's hand are one. (Chrys.)

30. ἐν ἑσμέν] we are one. Listen to both words, 'are' and 'one.' The word 'are' delivers you from the heresy of Sabellius; the word 'one' ('unum') delivers you from that of Arius. (Aug.) Sail thou in the midst, between the Scylla of the one and the Charybdis of the other. Christians framed a new word 'Homoiōsion Patris' (consubstantial with the Father), against the impiety of Arianism; but they did not coin a new thing by a new word. For the doctrine of the Homoiōsion is contained in our Lord's own words,—"I and my Father are one,"—"unum," one substance. (Aug. Tract. xcvi. See also Aug. Sermon. 139.) And there were Christians in fact, before the name "Christians," was given to believers at Antioch. (Acts xi. 26.) The same remark applies to the words 'Trinity,' Θεοτόκος, and some others; against which exceptions have been made by some in modern times.

It has been objected by Socinians and others, that these words of Christ do not signify oneness of substance, because our Lord used a similar expression when speaking of His Disciples, in His prayer,—ἵνα πάντες ἐν ὅσῳ, καθὼς σὺ, Πάτερ, ἐν ἐμοί, καὶ ἐν σοί, ἵνα καὶ αὐτοὶ ἐν ἡμῖν ἐν ὅσῳ, xvii. 21; cp. vv. 22, 23.

That language of Christ does indeed prove that the Father and the Son are not the same person; and so it is valid against the Sabellian heresy. But it does not show that they are not consubstantial. It is a comparison; and things compared are not identical. It contains a prayer, that all believers may be one in heart and will, as the Persons of the Trinity are; that by virtue of Christ's Incarnation, by which He became Emmanuel,—God with us, God manifest in the flesh,—or, as He there expresses it, ἐγὼ ἐν αὐτοῖς (xvii. 23. 26)—they may be united in the One God-head. Indeed that language proves the consubstantiality of the Three Persons. Men are not of different natures from each other; they are all of one blood (Acts xvii. 26), of one substance,—being all from Adam and Eve. If the Son is inferior in nature to the Father, and different in substance from Him, the comparison could not have been made. The consubstantiality of all men, with a diversity of persons in each individual, and their union in God, is an apt illustration, as far as human things can be, of the true doctrine of the One Nature and Plurality of Persons in the God-head.

31. Ἐβάστασαν] The Jews therefore again took up stones to 2 T

³² Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Πολλὰ καλὰ ἔργα ἔδειξα ὑμῖν ἐκ τοῦ Πατρὸς μου· διὰ ποῖον αὐτῶν ἔργον λιθάζετε με; ³³ Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, Περὶ καλοῦ ἔργου οὐ λιθάζομέν σε, ἀλλὰ περὶ βλασφημίας, καὶ ὅτι σὺ ἄνθρωπος ὢν ποιεῖς σεαυτὸν Θεόν. ³⁴ Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Οὐκ ἔστι γεγραμμένον ἐν τῷ νόμῳ ὑμῶν, Ἐγὼ εἶπα, θεοὶ ἐστε; ³⁵ εἰ ἐκείνους εἶπε θεοὺς, πρὸς οὓς ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐγένετο, καὶ οὐ δύναται λυθῆναι ἡ γραφή, ³⁶ ὃν ὁ Πατὴρ ἡγίασε καὶ ἀπέστειλεν εἰς τὸν κόσμον, ὑμεῖς λέγετε, Ὅτι βλασφημεῖς, ὅτι εἶπον, Τὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ εἰμι; ³⁷ Εἰ οὐ ποιῶ τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Πατρὸς μου, μὴ πιστεύετε μοι. ³⁸ εἰ δὲ ποιῶ, κἂν ἐμοὶ μὴ πιστεύητε, τοῖς ἔργοις πιστεύσατε, ἵνα γνῶτε καὶ πιστεύσητε, ὅτι ἐν ἐμοὶ ὁ Πατὴρ καὶ ἐγὼ ἐν αὐτῷ. (93) ³⁹ Ἐξήλθον οὖν πάλιν αὐτὸν πιάσαι· καὶ ἐξῆλθεν ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς αὐτῶν. ⁴⁰ Καὶ ἀπῆλθε πάλιν πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου, εἰς τὸν τόπον ὅπου ἦν Ἰωάννης τὸ πρῶτον βαπτίζων καὶ ἔμεινεν ἐκεῖ. (94) ⁴¹ Καὶ πολλοὶ ἦλθον πρὸς αὐτὸν καὶ ἔλεγον, Ὅτι Ἰωάννης μὲν σημεῖον ἐποίησεν οὐδέν· ⁴² πάντα δὲ ὅσα εἶπεν Ἰωάννης περὶ τούτου ἀληθὴ ἦν· καὶ ἐπίστευσαν πολλοὶ ἐκεῖ εἰς αὐτόν.

XI. ¹ Ἦν δέ τις ἀσθενῶν Λάζαρος ἀπὸ Βηθανίας ἐκ τῆς κώμης Μαρίας

stone Him. On the evidence thus given by them to His Divinity, see above on viii. 58, 59, and below on v. 33.

³³. Ἰουδαῖοι] Elz. and many MSS. add λέγοντες, which is not in A, B, K, L, M*, X.

— περὶ βλασφημίας] for blasphemy, and because thou being a man makest thyself God. The Jews understood what the Arians do not understand, viz. that our Lord asserted Himself to be God, and affirmed the equality of the Father and the Son. (Aug., Hilary, de Trin. vii., Chrys.; and see Athanas., de Decret. Nicen. p. 165.)

Our Lord did not disclaim the assertion which they imputed to Him; which He certainly would have done if the imputation was false. Thus the sin of the Jews charging Him with blasphemy is a proof of His Divinity. Their error is a confirmation of our Faith. The arguments of Christ against the Jews, are our best arguments against Socinians. See on Matt. xvi. 14. Acts ii. 36.

³⁴. ἐν τῷ νόμῳ ὑμῶν] in your Law. The reference here is to the Psalms. (Ps. lxxii. 6.) Cp. xii. 34; xv. 25; and 1 Cor. xiv. 21. Our Lord sometimes called all the Jewish Scriptures by the name of Law. Sometimes He distinguishes the Law and the Prophets (Matt. xxii. 40), and He calls the whole Hebrew Canon of Scripture "Moses and the Prophets" (Luke xvi. 29; xxiv. 27); sometimes He divides the Scripture into Three Classes. See on Luke xxiv. 44.

— θεοὶ ἐστε] ἑῷ (Elohim).

³⁵. εἰ ἐκείνους εἶπε θεοὺς—ἐγένετο] if He called them gods, to whom the word of God came? He lowers His language to calm their indignation; and, having so done, He raises it again, v. 37. (Chrys.)

If they, to whom God's Word came, might be called sons of gods, is not the Word Himself God? Behold,—He claims to be God; and He proves Himself to be God, by the mighty works which He performs. He said these words, and forthwith showed His Divine Power by escaping out of their hands, v. 39, and left Judæa, and went His way beyond Jordan.

³⁶. βλασφημεῖς] See on viii. 54.

⁴⁰. ἀπῆλθε πάλιν πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου] He went His way again beyond Jordan, i. e. to Bethany in Peræa. See on John i. 28. He went afterwards from that Bethany (in Peræa) to the other Bethany (that of Lazarus) in Judæa (xi. 1).

According to one etymology, Bethany signifies a "place of transit" (see on i. 28; cp. xii. 2). Our Lord, Who is the true Passover, was now about to pass,—μεταβαίνειν (see on John xiii. 1),—"from this world to the Father." He was about to cross the flood of His own Passion; to pass through the Red Sea of His own Blood. From one Bethany, the scene of His first manifestation at the beginning of the Gospel, where John declared Him to be the Lamb of God, the true Passover (John i. 29), He passes to another Bethany, where He proves His Divine Power by raising Lazarus; and thence He passes in His triumphal procession to Jerusalem, on the first day of the Paschal Week (Luke xix. 28. John xii. 12, 13),—and thence finally He passes, in a still more sublime transit, by His glorious Ascension, into heaven, "from this world to the Father." (Luke xxiv. 50.)

— ὅπου ἦν Ἰωάννης τὸ πρῶτον βαπτίζων] Not to be translated "where John at first baptized;" for John began to baptize in the wilderness of Judæa, on the west of Jordan (see Matt. iii. 1—12. Mark i. 1—5), and not in Peræa. The meaning is,

"where John was at the first, baptizing,"—i. e. where John was at the beginning of the preaching of the Gospel (ἐν ἀρχῇ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου), executing his office. Cp. Acts xiii. 24; and the use of τὸ πρῶτον, xii. 16.

An honourable testimony is thus paid by Christ and the Holy Ghost to the teaching of the Baptist. Its effects were permanent; and they whom he taught bear witness that all he said of Christ was true. Our Lord, at the end of His ministry, resorted to the place where John had been baptizing at the beginning; and found that the way had been prepared for Him there (see v. 41). And the Holy Spirit records this as a tribute of praise to the blessed memory of the Baptist.

We may add from Chrys., that our Lord did this to remind the people of John's testimony to Himself, and to give occasion to the reminiscences and reasonings which the Evangelist relates vv. 41, 42. When our Lord had uttered any high and mysterious language which might offend the prejudices of the Jews, He retired for a while to avoid their rage, to give time for their passion to cool, and for their reason to exercise itself on His words.

⁴². ἐπίστευσαν πολλοὶ ἐκεῖ] many believed on Him there. They were posthumous fruits of John's ministry leading to Christ. (Beng.) How different was their temper from that of the Priests and Pharisees putting the man out of the Synagogue for confessing Him!

CH. XI. 1. Ἦν δέ τις ἀσθενῶν] He whom Christ loved, and whose sisters Christ loved (v. 5), was sick. Those persons and families, which are dearest to God, are often tried by sickness. Heb. xii. 6.

A question has been asked,—Why the other Evangelists omitted to mention this crowning miracle of our Lord's Ministry, the raising of Lazarus—concerning which Spinoza said, that "could he believe it, he would renounce his whole system, and embrace Christianity?" (Bayle, Dict.)

Some exceptions have been made, on the ground of this question,—supposed to be unanswerable,—to the veracity of the three Evangelists on the one hand, or of St. John on the other;

The following summary is given by Meyer (Kommentar, p. 298) of various opinions of Biblical Critics in his own country:—

"Ueber die Geschichte der Auferweckung des Lazar. ist zu merken: 1) Die Annahme eines Scheintodes (Paulus, Gabler in s. Journ. f. auelr. theol. Lit. iii. p. 235 ff., Ammon L. J. iii. p. 128, Kern in d. Tüb. Zeitschr. 1839. I, p. 182. Schweizer p. 153 ff.) streitet entschieden gegen die Darstellung und Tendenz des durch sinnige Zartheit, Sicherheit u. Wahrheit ausgezeichneten Referats und gegen den Charakter Jesu selbst.

"2) Die Auflösung der Geschichte in ein wunderliches Missverständnis, wornach entweder ein Gespräch Christi mit den beiden Frauen bei dem Tode des Lazar. über die Auferstehung zur Wundererzählung ausgebildet (Weisse ii. p. 260 ff.), oder diese mit der Erweckungsgeschichte des (scheinotoden) Jünglings zu Nain (welches eine Abkürzung des Namens Bethanien sei) verwechselt worden (Gfrörer Heiligth. u. Wahrh. p. 311 ff.), ist voller Gewaltsamkeit, und mit der Aechtheit des Evang. absolut unvereinbar.

"3) Die völlige Vernichtung der Geschichte zu einem Mythus (Strauss) ist eine Consequenz von Voraussetzungen, welche grade

καὶ Μάρθας τῆς ἀδελφῆς αὐτῆς· ^{2 b} ἦν δὲ Μαρία ἡ ἀλείψασα τὸν Κύριον μύρω, καὶ ἐκμάξασα τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ ταῖς θριξίν αὐτῆς, ἧς ὁ ἀδελφὸς Λάζαρος

b ch. 12. 3.
 Matt. 26. 7.
 Mark 14. 3.

bei dieser so ausführlichen und originellen Darstellung die Spitze der Kühnheit und des Machtpruchs erreichen, und erst in Missdeutungen einzelner Züge nach einer Stütze suchen müssen.

“4) Die Subjectivierung des Facti, wornach es eine vom Schriftsteller selbst gebildete Form zur Darstellung der Idee von der δόξα Christi sein soll (Baur p. 191 ff.), welche sich erst dann recht zu erkennen gebe wenn sie sich auch in ihrer den Tod negirenden Macht bethätige, macht aus dem Wunder der Geschichte ein Wunder der Production, welches, in der zweiten Hälfte des zweiten Jahrhunderts geschehen, auffallender wäre als jenes.

“5) Befremdend erscheint zwar, dass die Synoptiker von der Erweckung des Lazarus schweigen, da dieselbe an sich so überzeugungsmächtig, und auf die letzte Entwicklung des Lebens Jesu so einflussreich war. Allein diess hängt mit der ganzen unterscheidenden Eigenenthümlichkeit des Joh. zusammen, und das gegen diesen gebrauchte argumentum e silentio müsste, die Aechtheit des Evangel. zugestanden, vielmehr gegen die Synoptiker, sich kehren, wenn ihr Schweigen nur als die Folge ihrer Unbekanntschaft mit der Geschichte (Lücke, De Wette, Baur) begreiflich wäre. Begreiflich aber ist dieses Schweigen, zwar nicht aus der Annahme schonender Rücksichtnahme auf die Bethanische Familie (Epiph., Grot., Wetst. z. 12, 10, Herder, Schulthess, Olsh., so auch, mit ausmalender Phantasie, Lange L. J. ii. 2, p. 1133 f.), womit man etwas dem Sinn und Geist jener ersten Christenzeit Zuwiderlaufendes, und zwar ganz willkürlich, supponirt, wohl aber daraus, dass die Synoptiker einen dermassen begrenzten Kreis ihrer Referate inne halten, dass sie, bevor sie mit dem Einzuge Christi in Jerus. (Matth. 21. u. Parall.) den Schauplatz der letzten Entwicklung eröffnen, von der Wirksamkeit des Herrn in der Hauptstadt und dessen nächster Umgebung nichts aufgenommen haben, sondern sich bis dahin lediglich auf die Galiläische und überhaupt von Jerus. entfernte Thätigkeit Jesu beschränken (das geographisch nächste Wunderwerk ist noch die Blindenheilung zu Jericho Matth. 20, 29 ff.). Diess ist, wie ihre Evangelien thatsächlich beweisen, ihr Plan, und dieser schloss die Galiläischen Todtenerweckungen ein, aber die des Lazarus aus.”

A similar analysis of recent theories on this subject may be seen in De Wette's Erklärung, 4th ed. p. 197; with this addition, that De Wette rejects Meyer's solution; as Meyer does De Wette's.

The recital of the opinions above specified, concerning this stupendous Miracle, deserves serious meditation, and excites reflections of melancholy interest.

These opinions are not put forth by illiterate men, or in an unlearned age and country, but by persons celebrated for erudition, and well furnished with material appliances of literature and science, for discovering the Truth; men to whom others look up for instruction in their investigation of it. And yet what is the result?

Looking at it merely in an intellectual point of view, we see a strange phenomenon. The theories above mentioned reflect discredit on the rational faculties of those who propound them. Some of them might excite surprise, and even appear ridiculous in the eyes of peasants and of children.

But yet they are instructive, and teach momentous truths. They show, that together with great literary advantages for Biblical criticism, such as learned leisure and patient toil, extensive knowledge of languages, accurate collations of MSS., careful examination of Versions, there may co-exist lamentable ignorance of the meaning of Holy Scripture; strange perversions of its evidence, and wild and extravagant speculations concerning it, put forth in the specious name of superior intelligence and critical acumen.

They suggest the reflection, that the present age may perhaps be chargeable with presumption, in claiming for itself the merit of having made great advances in the Science of Biblical Criticism.

Let any candid reasoner examine the contents of the above summary of opinions of those distinguished Biblical Critics there mentioned, living in an age and country celebrated for learning; and let him compare them with the Commentaries of the ancient Christian Writers of the fourth and fifth centuries on this same History. What will he infer from the comparison? Will he say that the advantage lies on the side of the nineteenth century? that its speculations as there displayed show any signs of progress? Will he not rather say, that they exhibit melancholy evidence of intellectual decline? And in moral and spiritual respects, how great is the fall! And who can say, how much lower yet that fall may be?

What is the cause of this unhappy descent and degradation?

How is the recovery to be effected? Some reply to these important inquiries is offered for the reader's consideration, in the Preface of this Volume, p. vi—ix.

But how (it may be asked) are we to account for the fact, that this stupendous miracle is not recorded by any of the former Evangelists, and that it was left to be related by St. John, whose Gospel was not written till about sixty years after the Ascension of Christ?

The following considerations are offered on this subject.

It is asserted by an ancient writer of good credit that Lazarus survived thirty years after his resurrection from the dead. (Epiphanius. Hær. 66.)

This Miracle, wrought at the close of our Lord's Ministry, was probably designed by the Holy Spirit to be a signal specimen of His Divine Power generally; and a sample of the evidence which He gave to the Jews of His Mission; and a rehearsal of His Divine Operation in raising Himself, and in raising all men at the Great Day.

It was very important, therefore, that in the description of this miracle, the particulars of place, and name of person, and manner of its operation, should be given in full and accurate detail.

But to do this, while Lazarus was still living, might be attended with great inconvenience, on account of the malice of the Jews, who sought to kill him (see xii. 10); and on account of the curiosity which such a history, generally circulated, would excite. Many, coming up to the feasts at Jerusalem, from all parts of the world, would be eager to visit Lazarus and the family at Bethany (see xii. 9), and to put questions to him concerning the mysterious things of that other world from which he had been brought back; and a morbid and irreverent spirit might thus be engendered, injurious alike to him who was the object of their public gaze and inquisitiveness, and to them who indulged it. To keep him and his sisters in the background, to throw over them and theirs a veil of delicate reserve, seems most consistent with the love that Jesus bore them; and to be quite in keeping with that beautiful spirit of modesty and silence which the Evangelists have used toward her whom our Lord specially loved—His Mother. We see something of this feeling in the three Gospels with regard to St. John himself. We do not learn from them that he was the disciple whom Jesus loved. That there was a disciple whom Jesus singularly loved, we learn only from St. John—and he does not mention his name.

Something of the same feeling, it is probable, restrained the other Evangelists from mentioning the name of the woman who anointed our Lord on the Saturday before His burial. We know from St. John, and from him alone, that it was Mary of Bethany, the sister of Lazarus. See on xii. 3.

If it be said that something of the same feeling might have restrained the first three Evangelists from describing the resurrection of Jairus' daughter (Mark v. 42. Luke viii. 41) and of the widow's son at Nain (Luke vii. 11), it may be observed, that, as to the first case, the name of the father is not mentioned by St. Matthew (ix. 18), and his daughter was only twelve years old at the time (Luke viii. 42); and as to the second, the names of the young man and his mother are not mentioned.

None can doubt that many dead persons were raised to life by our Lord (Matt. xi. 5. Luke vii. 22); and the fact, that so few are particularly specified by the Evangelists, and not one by name but Lazarus and Jesus Himself, suggests that there were good reasons for partial and temporary reserve at the time in the case of the resurrection of Lazarus, as there was good reason for immediate and universal publicity in the case of the resurrection of Jesus.

The miracle of the raising of Lazarus at Bethany, just before our Lord's last Passover, though not explicitly mentioned by the three earlier Evangelists, yet falls in harmoniously to explain the remarkable facts related by them all, viz. the enthusiastic reception which our Lord met with on coming from Bethany to Jerusalem. The raising of Lazarus from the dead (as has been remarked by S. Cyril) is the true explanation of the plaudits and hosannas of our Lord's triumphal entry to Jerusalem. Indeed, St. John himself declares (xii. 18), that the multitude followed Him because they heard that He had done this miracle. See also note on John xii. 17.

There is a remarkable analogy between this great Miracle and one of our Lord's Parables—the Parable of Dives and Lazarus (Luke xvi. 20—25)—the only one that deals with the mysterious subject of the 'Intermediate State,'—(i. e. the condition of the disembodied soul in the interval between Death and Judgment) ἡσθένει. ³ Ἀπέστειλαν οὖν αἱ ἀδελφαὶ πρὸς αὐτὸν λέγουσαι, Κύριε, ἴδε ὃν φιλεῖς ἀσθενεῖ. ⁴ Ἀκούσας δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν, Αὕτη ἡ ἀσθένεια οὐκ ἔστι πρὸς θάνατον, ἀλλ' ὑπὲρ τῆς δόξης τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἵνα δοξασθῇ ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ δι' αὐτῆς.

⁵ Ἠγάπα δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς τὴν Μάρθαν καὶ τὴν ἀδελφὴν αὐτῆς, καὶ τὸν Λάζαρον.

⁶ Ὡς οὖν ἤκουσεν ὅτι ἀσθενεῖ, τότε μὲν ἔμεινεν ἐν ᾧ ἦν τόπῳ δύο ἡμέρας·

⁷ ἔπειτα μετὰ τοῦτο λέγει τοῖς μαθηταῖς, Ἀγωμεν εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν πάλιν.

⁸ Λέγουσιν αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταί, Ῥαββί, νῦν ἐξήτουν σε λιθάσαι οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, καὶ from which the spirit of Lazarus was recalled to revivify his Body at his resurrection.

That is the only Parable in which any of the persons introduced is mentioned by name. And this is the only Miracle of which the subject is specified by name. And in the Parable and the Miracle the name is the same, Lazarus. And when our Lord delivered that Parable, He put into the mouth of Abraham the words (in reply to the prayer of Dives, "Send Lazarus to my five brethren"), "If they hear not Moses and the Prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead." He thus delivered a prophecy. Though one rose from the dead,—though a Lazarus be sent to them, they will not be persuaded. No. And the fact was, that when Lazarus was raised, they, who would not hear Moses, sought 'to kill Lazarus' (xii. 10), and did kill Him who had recalled him to life.

Thus the Parable, recited by St. John, is a prophecy in harmony with the Miracle, recorded by St. John. And the Miracle fulfilled the Parable. And the one confirms the other.

The question why the Raising of Lazarus is not described by the three Evangelists who wrote before St. John, may be a perplexing one to those who do not acknowledge that all the Gospels form but one Gospel; that they are all from One Everlasting Spirit, who, when He was inspiring St. Matthew, foreknew that He would also inspire St. John; and when He wrote some things by the first Three Evangelists, knew what He would write by the Fourth and last. But they who believe that this was the case are not staggered here. They read the Sermon on the Mount in St. Matthew. But they read other divine Discourses of our Blessed Lord in St. John concerning the highest Mysteries of the Truth, which they do not read in any of the other Three; and they expect to find Divine works also in St. John's Gospel which they do not find recorded in them. See above, p. 257.

The Holy Spirit doubtless exercised His Divine influence over the minds of the Evangelists, not only by suggestion and dictation, but also by restraint. He inspired them not only in what they wrote, but in what they did not write. There is Inspiration in their Silence. He exerted His divine attributes not only in enabling the Apostles to preach, but even sometimes in forbidding them to do so. See on Acts xvi. 6, 7.

The Holy Spirit restrained the first three Evangelists from mentioning the first Miracle of our Lord, that at Cana; and left that for St. John. The fact, therefore, that three of the Evangelists do not mention one of the last Miracles,—this at Bethany, is not at variance, but quite in harmony, with what we know of the other operations of the Holy Spirit in diffusing the Gospel.

There was also a remarkable fitness in the reservation of this narrative for the Gospel of St. John, which is pre-eminently the Gospel of the Resurrection. See above, Introduction, p. 265.

"Thou hast kept the good wine until now" (John ii. 10). It is God's own method to keep the best to the last. Four thousand years elapsed before Christ came into the World. The Gospel itself has been reserved to the last age of the world. How many nations have not yet heard it! And we have reason to believe that some glorious manifestations of the power of the Holy Spirit—for example, in raising a national Lazarus from the dead,—that is, softening the hard hearts of the Jews, and disposing them to receive the Gospel—are still in store for the Church before the Advent of Christ. What wonder then, that, as the working of this stupendous miracle was deferred by Christ to the close and consummation of His public ministry upon Earth, so the narration of it should have been reserved by the Holy Spirit to the Conclusion of the Evangelical Canon?

We may close these remarks with observing, that there is one great purpose which this Miracle has answered, during many centuries, and is now answering, and which may have been designed by the Holy Ghost, and which deserves careful attention.

This Miracle itself was a moral test to the Jews. It proved the tempers, and displayed the dispositions, of those who saw and heard it. It was like a savour of life to some, and of death to others. (See vv. 48—54.) So the Narrative of the miracle. It has been a moral test to the world. They, whose spirit is like that of the obdurate Jews, have stumbled at it. Instead of receiving it humbly, they have criticized and cavilled at it. Instead of accepting it gratefully from the Holy Spirit, tendering it to them by the hands of St. John, they have asked—why He did not give it them by St. Matthew, St. Mark, and St. Luke? He has therefore been provoked to leave them to themselves, and to their own proud hearts. And when they are forsaken by Him whose grace dwells only with the meek, their intellectual eye is blinded, and they fall into childish errors, and are distracted by discordant opinions.

But they who have the spirit of the family 'which Jesus loved' will accept this holy narrative as the sisters received their brother from the grave. They will reflect that the Holy Spirit by reserving many of our Lord's divine Discourses on the most sublime verities, and some of His most wonderful Works, to be recorded in the last Gospel, has given a striking proof of His own Divine Foreknowledge and Providential love; and that He also suggests to us,—what indeed He explicitly declares,—that as there are many things written by St. John, which were not written by the former three, so there are many other great and glorious things which Jesus spake and did, which are not written in this Book (John xx. 30), and which will be revealed hereafter to those who thankfully accept and faithfully use what is revealed therein. If also these things which are revealed are glorious, and show Christ to be full of Glory, how glorious will He appear hereafter, when all that He ever did or said will be unfolded to the eye!

— Λά[απος] Lazarus. On the meaning of the name, see note on Luke xvi. 20.

Bethany itself is now called Azirieh, bearing in its name a record of Lazarus. And why should he have given it a name, unless he had been distinguished in some remarkable manner? St. John supplies the reason.

For an exposition of this history, see Chrys. tom. v. p. 271.

— ἀπὸ Βηθανίας] of Bethany. So οἱ ἀπὸ Ἰραλάς, Heb. xiii. 24.

2. ἣν δὲ Μαρία ἡ ἀλειψασα] it was that Mary which anointed the Lord with ointment; a prolepsis,—it was she who afterwards did it (see John xii. 3), not the woman who was a sinner. Luke vii. 37. (Theoph.)

Did she do it as a thank-offering for the resurrection of her brother, as well as with a presentiment of the Death of Him Who raised him?

The other Evangelists relate that she poured the ointment on His head (Matt. xxvi. 7. Mark xiv. 3), but they also mention His body (Matt. xxvi. 12. Mark xiv. 8), which includes the anointing of the feet, noticed by St. John.

3. ὃν φιλεῖς ἀσθενεῖ] he whom Thou lovest is sick. They did not say, "Come and heal him," nor did they say, "Speak the word where Thou art and it will be done."

5. Ἠγάπα δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς τὴν Μάρθαν] Jesus loved Martha.

For ἡγάπα (the reading of almost all the MSS.) D has ἐφίλει. But the Evangelists never use the word φιλεῖν when speaking of His affection for women. The use of φιλεῖν in the sense of osculari (Matt. xxvi. 48. Mark xiv. 44. Luke xxii. 47), may, perhaps, serve to explain this. He φιλεῖ Λάζαρον, but ἀγαπᾷ Μάρθαν καὶ τὴν ἀδελφὴν αὐτῆς. See Tittmann, Synonym. p. 53. Trench on the Miracles, p. 392. The Vulgate generally translates ἀγαπᾷν by diligere, and φιλεῖν by amare. See Buttmann in Lachmann's N. T. p. xlv, and see below on xxi. 15—17.

The Evangelist thus teaches not to grieve overmuch for worldly calamities, which often happen to good men whom God loves. (Chrys.)

7. εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν] into Judæa. He was now in Peræa. See above, x. 40, and on Luke x. 1. The place at which our Lord was, was called Bethany (see on John i. 28, cp. with x. 40). And our Lord, while in one Bethany, tells His Disciples what is going on in the other Bethany, many miles off.

8. ἐξήτουν σε λιθάσαι οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι] the Jews were just now πάλιν ὑπάγεις ἐκεῖ ; ⁹ ὁ Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς, Οὐχὶ δώδεκα ὥραι εἰσιν τῆς ἡμέρας ; ^c ch. 12. 35.

Ἐάν τις περιπατῇ ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, οὐ προσκόπτει, ὅτι τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου τούτου βλέπει ¹⁰ ἐὰν δέ τις περιπατῇ ἐν τῇ νυκτὶ, προσκόπτει, ὅτι τὸ φῶς οὐκ ἔστιν ἐν αὐτῷ.

¹¹ Ταῦτα εἶπε, καὶ μετὰ τοῦτο λέγει αὐτοῖς, Δάζαρος ὁ φίλος ἡμῶν ^d κεκοί- ^d Matt. 9. 24.
μηται ἀλλὰ πορεύομαι ἵνα ἐξυπνίσω αὐτόν. ¹² Εἶπον οὖν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, ^e Acts 7. 60.
Κύριε, εἰ κεκοίμηται, σωθήσεται. ¹³ Εἰρήκει δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς περὶ τοῦ θανάτου, ^f & 13. 36.
αὐτοῦ· ἐκείνοι δὲ ἔδοξαν ὅτι περὶ τῆς κοιμήσεως τοῦ ὕπνου λέγει. ¹⁴ Τότε οὖν ¹ Cor. 15. 6, 18, εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς παρῥησίᾳ, Δάζαρος ἀπέθανε· ¹⁵ καὶ χαίρω δι' ὑμᾶς, ἵνα ¹ Thess. 4. 13—πιστεύσητε, ὅτι οὐκ ἤμην ἐκεῖ· ἀλλ' ἄγωμεν πρὸς αὐτόν. ¹⁵ & 5. 10.

¹⁶ Εἶπεν οὖν Θωμᾶς, ὁ λεγόμενος Δίδυμος, τοῖς συμμαθηταῖς, Ἄγωμεν καὶ ἡμεῖς, ὅτινα ἀποθάνωμεν μετ' αὐτοῦ.

¹⁷ Ἐλθὼν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶρεν αὐτὸν τέσσαρας ἡμέρας ἤδη ἔχοντα ἐν τῷ μνημείῳ.

¹⁸ Ἦν δὲ ἡ Βηθανία ἐγγὺς τῶν Ἱεροσολύμων, ὡς ἀπὸ σταδίων δεκαπέντε· ¹⁹ καὶ πολλοὶ ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων ἐληλύθεισαν πρὸς τὰς περὶ Μάρθαν καὶ Μαρίαν, ἵνα παραμυθῇσονται αὐτὰς περὶ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ αὐτῶν. ²⁰ Ἡ οὖν Μάρθα, ὡς ἤκουσεν ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἔρχεται, ὑπήντησεν αὐτῷ· Μαρῖα δὲ ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ ἐκαθήζετο.

²¹ Εἶπεν οὖν ἡ Μάρθα πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν, Κύριε, ^f εἰ ἥς ὦδε, ὁ ἀδελφός μου οὐκ ^f ver. 32.
ἂν ἐτεθνήκει. ²² Ἀλλὰ καὶ νῦν οἶδα ὅτι ὅσα ἂν αἰτήσῃ τὸν Θεόν, δώσει σοι ὁ ^g ch. 5. 28, 29.
Θεός. ²³ Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἀναστήσεται ὁ ἀδελφός σου. ²⁴ ^g Δέγει αὐτῷ ^g ch. 6. 39, 40, 44.
Λέγει αὐτῷ ^g Luke 14. 14.

seeking to stone Thee. He had fled from their stones as man, He will return and work a miracle as God. (Aug.)

9. Ἐάν τις περιπατῇ ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ] If any one walketh in the day, he stumbleth not. He thus calms their fears, and comforts them. If any one sees the light of this world, he is safe; much more is he secure, if he is with Me. (Chrys.)

11. Δάζαρος ὁ φίλος ἡμῶν κεκοίμηται] Lazarus, our friend, sleepeth. He was dead in the eye of man, but asleep in the sight of Christ.

Death is called in Scripture a sleep (1 Thess. iv. 13); but as some when they sleep have sweet dreams, and others have fearful visions, so in Death. Every one sleeps with his moral condition upon him, and every one will wake with it. And great is the difference between the dormitories, in which they who sleep are guarded, and from which they will come forth to Judgment. The soul of the poor man was carried to his own place, and that of the rich man to his; the former to Abraham's bosom, the latter to a place where he was athirst, and had not a drop of water to cool his tongue. Luke xvi. 22—24. Cp. Aug., and see on Luke xxiii. 43, and an interesting fragment on this subject by S. Hippolytus, Bp. of Portus, and scholar of S. Irenæus, in the edition of Fabrics, i. p. 220, and in "Hippolytus and the Church of Rome," pp. 156—160.

— ἵνα ἐξυπνίσω] in order that I may awaken him. To raise the dead is as easy to Christ as to wake the sleeping. Cp. Matt. ix. 24. Mark v. 39. Luke viii. 52.

14. Δάζαρος ἀπέθανε] He does not say τέθνηκε, but ἀπέθανε. Lazarus died; but, in regard to Christ, οὐ τέθνηκε, he is not dead; for He is going to wake him. Yet he is ὁ τεθνηκὼς in the eye of men, vv. 39—44. Cp. on v. 32.

He shows His Divine Power, by telling them of things at a distance, and thus prepares them for the miracle.

15. ἵνα πιστεύσητε] that your faith in Me may become more strong than it is (Aug., see on ii. 11).

— ὅτι οὐκ ἤμην] that I was not there. As if it were inconsistent with Christ's dignity and holiness, that any one should die in the presence of Him Who is the Author of Life, and is "the Life" (i. 4; xi. 25). We never read in Scripture that any one died in His presence. Cp. vv. 21. 32. (Bengel.) The thieves died after Him. (John xix. 32. 34.)

16. Θωμᾶς—Δίδυμος] Thomas. See on Matt. x. 3. St. John alone translates his name, and does it three times (xx. 24; xxi. 2).

— ἵνα ἀποθάνωμεν μετ' αὐτοῦ] in order that we may die with Him—with Jesus. This was said aside.

The disciples were afraid of the Jews, and Thomas especially; but afterwards he became firm in faith. He who feared to go to Judæa, went and died for the faith in India. (Chrys.)

17. τέσσαρας ἡμέρας] four days. Lazarus was therefore buried on the day of his death. See vv. 6 and 39. (Bengel.)

18. ἀπὸ σταδίων] On this use of ἀπὸ, see xxi. 8. Rev. xiv. 20; and Winer, p. 491. Cp. xii. 1.

— σταδίων δεκαπέντε] fifteen stadia, two miles; hence many from Jerusalem had come to Bethany. Some came to Martha and Mary, whom Jesus loved, although the Jews had agreed that if any man did confess Jesus to be Christ, he should be put out of the synagogue. (John ix. 22.) Yet Mary and Martha received Him—a proof of constancy and courage,—rewarded by His love and mercy.

19. τὰς περὶ Μάρθαν καὶ Μαρῖαν] Martha and Mary. See Glass. Phil. S. p. 320, or it may mean also friends and relatives with them. See Acts xiii. 13.

Μαριάμ is the form of this name in B, C, D, K, L, Δ, and is received by Tisch. here and in vv. 28. 31. 32. 45. A, E, F, G, H, M, U, X, Δ, Lr. have Μαρίαν, and so Elz. In v. 32, B, C*, E*, L, have Μαριάμ even as the nominative case, but there A, C, D, E, F, G, H, M, S, U, X, Δ, Δ, have Μαρία: in v. 2 B alone is cited as having Μαριάμ: in Matt. i. 20, B and L alone of the Uncial MSS. are cited as having Μαρίαν; the rest have Μαριάμ; and in Matt. xiii. 55 B has Μαριάμ. In Luke ii. 19 B has Μαρία, but in Luke i. 27. 30. 34. 38 B has Μαριάμ, whence it appears that B is not uniform in this respect.

— ἵνα παραμυθῇσονται αὐτὰς] in order to comfort them, usually for seven days. See Gen. i. 10. 1 Sam. xxxi. 13. 1 Chron. x. 12.

20. ἐκαθέετο] she was sitting in the house; while Martha, it would seem, was out of it, and therefore heard the news first. (Chrys.) Cp. Luke x. 39.

21. Κύριε, εἰ ἥς ὦδε] if thou hadst been here my brother had not died, and been now dead: observe, the plusquam perfectum, not the aorist, is used. Her faith was yet weak; and consequently she adds, "whatsoever thou wilt ask of God." She did not yet know that Christ could raise the dead by His divine power, but regarded Him as a holy man. Jesus correcting her erroneous notions, and strengthening her weak faith, says to her, "Thy brother shall rise again."

23. Ἀναστήσεται ὁ ἀδελφός σου] Thy brother shall rise again. That is, his body shall rise again from the grave. A prophecy which was to have a double fulfilment, and to be explained by the event; first by an immediate Resurrection of Lazarus, in the sight of his sisters and others; for Christ knew what He would do; and this first Resurrection was to be a proof to them and to the world, of His truth in preannouncing the Universal Resurrection of the Body.

h ch. 5. 21.
& 6. 39.
1 Cor. 15. 21, 22.
Phil. 3. 20, 21.
Col. 3. 3, 4.
Rev. 1. 18.
i ch. 6. 35.
& 10. 28.
Luke 20. 36.
1 Cor. 15. 25, 26,
39—42, 53.
Rev. 21. 4.
j Matt. 16. 16.
& ch. 11. 3.
ch. 4. 42. & 6. 69.
k Matt. 11. 3.
& 21. 9.
Ps. 118. 26.
Deut. 18. 15—18.
Isa. 7. 14.
& 35. 1—6. & 53.
& 61. 1—3.
Dan. 9. 24, 26.
Micah 5. 2.
Hag. 2. 7.
Mal. 3. 1. & 4. 2.

1 ver. 38.
Mark 7. 34.
& 8. 12.

Μάρθα, Οἶδα ὅτι ἀναστήσεται ἐν τῇ ἀναστάσει ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ. ²⁵ Εἶπεν αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ^h Ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ἀνάστασις καὶ ἡ ζωὴ· ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ, κὰν ἀποθάνῃ, ζήσεται, ²⁶ ⁱ καὶ πᾶς ὁ ζῶν καὶ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ οὐ μὴ ἀποθάνῃ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα· πιστεύεις τοῦτο; ²⁷ ^j Λέγει αὐτῷ, Ναί, Κύριε· ἐγὼ πεπίστευκα, ὅτι σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστὸς, ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, ^k ὁ εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἐρχόμενος.

²⁸ Καὶ ταῦτα εἰπούσα ἀπήλθε καὶ ἐφώνησε Μαρίαν τὴν ἀδελφὴν αὐτῆς λάθρα εἰπούσα, Ὁ διδάσκαλος πάρεστι, καὶ φωνεῖ σε.

²⁹ Ἐκείνη ὡς ἤκουσεν ἐγείρεται ταχὺ καὶ ἔρχεται πρὸς αὐτόν. ³⁰ Οὐπω δὲ ἐληλύθει ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς τὴν κώμην, ἀλλ' ἦν ἐν τῷ τόπῳ ὅπου ὑπῆντησεν αὐτῷ ἡ Μάρθα. ³¹ Οἱ οὖν Ἰουδαῖοι οἱ ὄντες μετ' αὐτῆς ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ καὶ παραμυθούμενοι αὐτὴν, ἰδόντες τὴν Μαρίαν ὅτι ταχέως ἀνέστη καὶ ἐξῆλθεν, ἠκολούθησαν αὐτῇ λέγοντες, Ὅτι ὑπάγει εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον ἵνα κλαύσῃ ἐκεῖ.

³² Ἡ οὖν Μαρία ὡς ἦλθεν ὅπου ἦν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἰδοῦσα αὐτὸν ἔπεσεν αὐτοῦ εἰς τοὺς πόδας λέγουσα αὐτῷ, Κύριε, εἰ ἦς ὧδε, οὐκ ἂν ἀπέθανε μοῦ ὁ ἀδελφός.

³³ Ἰησοῦς οὖν ὡς εἶδεν αὐτὴν κλαίουσαν, καὶ τοὺς συνελθόντας αὐτῇ Ἰουδαίους κλαίοντας, ^l ἐνεβριμήσατο τῷ πνεύματι, καὶ ἐτάραξεν ἑαυτὸν, ³⁴ καὶ εἶπε, Πού

He does not say, I will ask God that he may rise again; but "he shall rise;" for "I am the Resurrection and the Life." I need not ask aid in raising him. I am the Resurrection; all who desire to partake in the Resurrection must ask of Me, must pray to Me. Thus He raises her mind, and teaches us what the Resurrection is; which is far more important to her and to us, than that Lazarus should be raised to life. (Chrys., Theophyl.)

^{24.} ἐν τῇ ἀναστάσει.] The Day of Resurrection and the Last Day are here represented as identical. Cp. v. 28, 29; vi. 39, 44. ^{25.} ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ἀνάστασις καὶ ἡ ζωὴ] "Ego sum Resurrectio morientium, et Vita viventium." (Benig.) See John xiv. 6. Deut. xxx. 20. 1 Cor. i. 30.

— ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ, κὰν ἀποθάνῃ, ζήσεται] he that believeth in Me, though he die, yet shall he live; and what is more, his death shall be the gate to everlasting life, or, as S. Aug. paraphrases it, He that believeth in Me, although he die in the body, yet will remain alive in the soul, even until the day when his body will rise again, never more to die; for death is the life of the soul, and every one who lives in the body, although he may die in the body for a time, yet shall he live.

I am the Life; and he that believeth in Me shall never die; therefore, whether I am present to your bodily eye or no, I am able to give Life; and you must come to Me for life. This is a reply to her who said, "whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee;" and "if Thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." (Chrys.)

^{26.} οὐ μὴ ἀποθάνῃ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα.] shall never die. See viii. 51, 52; x. 28, i. e. shall live for ever. So οὐ μὴ διψήσῃ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, shall never thirst. See also xiii. 8. 1 Cor. viii. 13. The Greek οὐ μὴ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα is equivalent to the Hebrew עַל־לֵוֹלָם (lo-leolam). Ps. lv. 22. Prov. x. 30. Cp. Vorst. de Hebr. pp. 730—735. And therefore the words "shall not die eternally" (non morietur in eternum), in the last Prayer of our Burial Service (cp. the first sentence of it from John xi. 25, 26), are to be understood in this sense, 'shall never die.'

^{28.} λάθρᾳ] secretly. Perhaps Martha did not say it openly for fear of the Jews, and so she is contrasted with Mary (v. 32).

^{32.} Μαρία—ἔπεσεν αὐτοῦ εἰς τοὺς πόδας] So A, B, C, E, G, H, K, L, M, S, U, X, Δ, Λ.—Elz. has εἰς τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ,—but αὐτοῦ is emphatic, His feet. Mary was more fervent in spirit than her sister, and did not care for the crowd, nor for the jealousy, suspicion, and hatred, with which the Jews regarded Jesus, Whom they and their Rulers sought to kill; but she threw aside all human considerations, and having "chosen the better part," cared only for the one thing needful, and in a spirit of noble courage and affectionate devotion, meek and gentle as she was, paid public homage to Christ by casting herself at the feet of Him, Who was regarded with envious feelings by many around her,—even her private friends,—who had come from Jerusalem to comfort her.

— οὐκ ἂν ἀπέθανε μοῦ ὁ ἀδελφός] Observe the difference between these words and Martha's, v. 21. Mary says, "If Thou hadst been here, Death would never have come to one so dear to Thee and me as that brother of mine" (μοῦ ὁ ἀδελφός). Martha says, "If Thou hadst been here, my brother (ὁ ἀδελφός μου) would not have been dead,—as he now is."

^{33.} Ἰουδαίους κλαίοντας] Jews weeping. Many witnesses, therefore, were present at this miracle, and many of them bitter enemies of Christ. (Aug., Theoph. See vv. 45, 46, and xii. 17.) A strong evidence of its truth.

— ἐνεβριμήσατο τῷ πνεύματι] was vehemently affected in spirit. This word ἐμβριμάμαι, repeated in v. 38, ἐμβριμάμενος ἐν ἑαυτῷ, is from the root βρέω, 'fremo,' and signifies to be angry, to rebuke, to menace, to forbid, to restrain, with vehemence and indignation; see the passages where it is used, Matt. ix. 30. Mark i. 43; xiv. 5. The LXX use ἐμβριμήμα for צַר (zaam), 'indignation.' (Lament. ii. 6.)

What was the cause of this ἐμβριμήσις? Some say that He was troubled by a contemplation of the ravages of sin; some, by the hypocrisy and malice of the Jews; some, by the grief of those around Him. The reason of this grief and indignation seems rather to have been, that now at the close of His Ministry, and after so many miracles of might and mercy, those persons who had been witnesses of His works, had so little faith in His power and love. See below, xii. 37, and Mark viii. 12, where our Lord is described in like manner as groaning in spirit on account of the unbelief of man; and below, xiii. 21, where it is said that He was troubled in spirit for the treachery of Judas. They were weeping vehemently for the dead, whom Jesus loved;—as if He, Who is the Resurrection and the Life, were not now with them; or as if He could not or would not comfort them. Indeed, some of them were so sceptical as to say, "Could not this man, who opened the eyes of the blind, have caused also that this man should not have died?" v. 37. The Evangelist shows that this was the cause of our Lord's indignation, by adding, "Jesus therefore again ἐμβριμάμενος ἐν ἑαυτῷ cometh to the grave," in order to work the miracle immediately, and so put an end at once to their faithless surmises and cavils. For a like reason He had asked, v. 34, "Where have ye laid him?" as much as to say, "I will raise him to life."

Some of the ancient Fathers supposed this word to indicate an internal act, by which our Blessed Lord kept His human affections under control, and, as it were, rebuked and restrained them from bursting into an immoderate excess of grief. Thus S. Cyril says, ἐπιπλήττει τρόπον τινα τῇ ἰδίᾳ σαρκί. He does not allow His human affections to break forth, but represses and chides them. And again he says, ἀγριώτερον τῇ λύπῃ ἐπετίμησε· ὡς γὰρ Θεὸς παιδαγωγικῶς ἐντιμᾷ. And so Euthym. ἐπετίμησε τῷ πάθει. S. Cyril adds, that to be overpowered by grief, τυραννεῖσθαι ταῖς λύπαις,—is a disorder of human nature, and that this was overcome by Christ.

We may say with reverence, that this wonderful work was not only a proof of the Divine power and love of the Incarnate Lord, and a pledge of our future Resurrection, by His might and mercy, but also the manner of its operation was exemplary to us in the exercise of our own human affections. Our Lord loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus; He wept as man at the grave (v. 35). But He checked His affections from breaking forth into passionate grief; He did not allow them to disturb His reason, to overpower His will, or to impair His quietness and dignity. He showed grief for the incredulity of the Jews; for unbelief is the death of the soul. He thus taught us to regulate and moderate our passions; and particularly, "not to be sorry, as men without hope, for them that sleep in Him." (1 Thess. iv. 13.) He showed human feeling, that we may surely know that He has a τεθείκατε αὐτόν; Λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, Κύριε, ἔρχου καὶ ἴδε. ³⁵ Ἐδάκρυσεν ὁ ^m Luke 19. 41.

 Ἰησοῦς. ³⁶ Ἐλεγον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, Ἴδε πῶς ἐφίλει αὐτόν. ³⁷ Ἄ Τινὲς δὲ ἐξ ^{Heb. 4. 15.}
 αὐτῶν εἶπον, Οὐκ ἡδύνατο οὗτος ὁ ἀνοίξας τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς τοῦ τυφλοῦ ποιῆσαι ^{n ch. 9. 6.}
 ἵνα καὶ οὗτος μὴ ἀποθάνῃ; ³⁸ Ἰησοῦς οὖν πάλιν ἐμβριμώμενος ἐν ἑαυτῷ ^{o ch. 9. 1.}
 ἔρχεται εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον. Ἦν δὲ σπήλαιον, καὶ λίθος ἐπέκειτο ἐπ' αὐτῷ. ³⁹ Λέγει ^{Luke 7. 21.}
 ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἄρατε τὸν λίθον. Λέγει αὐτῷ ἡ ἀδελφὴ τοῦ τετελευτηκότος Μάρθα, Κύριε, ἥδη ὅζει, τεταρταῖος γάρ ἐστι. ⁴⁰ Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Οὐκ εἶπόν σοι, ὅτι ἐὰν πιστεύσης, ὅψῃ τὴν δόξαν τοῦ Θεοῦ; ⁴¹ Ἦραν οὖν τὸν λίθον, οὗ ἦν ^{p ver. 4. 23—26.}
 ὁ τεθνηκὼς κείμενος· ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἦρε τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς ἄνω καὶ εἶπε, Ἰ Πάτερ, ^{q Matt. 11. 25.}
 εὐχαριστῶ σοι ὅτι ἤκουσάς μου. ⁴² Ἐγὼ δὲ ᾔδειν ὅτι πάντοτέ μου ἀκούεις· ^{ch. 17. 1.}
 ἄλλὰ διὰ τὸν ὄχλον τὸν περιεστῶτα εἶπον, ἵνα πιστεύσωσιν ὅτι σὺ μὲ ἀπ- ^{r ch. 12. 30.}
 έστειλας. ⁴³ Καὶ ταῦτα εἰπὼν φωνῇ μεγάλῃ ἐκραύγασε, Λάζαρε, δεῦρο ἕξω· ^{s ch. 5. 34—36.}
⁴⁴ καὶ ἐξῆλθεν ὁ τεθνηκὼς, δεδεμένος τοὺς πόδας καὶ τὰς χεῖρας κειρίαις, καὶ ^{& 10. 25, 37, 38.}
^{Acts 2. 22.}
^{1 John 5. 9.}

human nature; and He was affected to tears when He saw Mary weeping, for "He is touched with our infirmities." But He controlled His feelings, in order to teach us (says Theophylact) what are the proper bounds of sorrow, and its opposites,—τὸ γὰρ ἀσυμπαθὲς καὶ ἔδακρυ θηριώδες, τὸ δὲ πολὺδακρυ καὶ φιλόδθρνον καὶ πολὺλυπον γυναικάδες.

Let Christians endeavour to be like Christ. They are not Stoics, nor yet are they overpowered by their feelings; they are not agitated by passions properly so called. (Beng.)

—ἐτάραξεν ἑαυτόν] He troubled himself. A remarkable expression. It was His own will and deed: it was in His own power to be affected as He would. The Eternal Word of God took a human soul as well as human flesh, associating with Himself the complete nature of man in the Unity of His Person; and therefore human infirmity is troubled according to His will in His Person, where resided Divine power. (Aug.)

The affections of Christ were not passions, but voluntary emotions, which He held under control. And this self-commotion was orderly, rational, full of dignity, and directed to proper ends. And therefore, when He is said afterwards τεταρτάχθαι (xii. 27; xiii. 21), some suffering of a more violent kind is indicated by the contrast.

35. Ἐδάκρυσεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς] Jesus shed tears; ἐδάκρυσεν, not ἐκλαυσεν: non ploravit, sed flevit; i. e. gently, and without passion. When our Lord is about to do mighty works as God, He does something else to remind us that He is also man. He now sheds tears as man, when He is about to raise the dead as God; so He slept, just before He stilled the storm. See Matt. viii. 24. Our Lord was affected with the tears of the sisters of the dead, and sympathized with them. "Ipse Saluator ploravit quem resuscitaturus erat." (Jerome, Ep. Nepot. p. 269.)

St. John studiously records, that Jesus shed tears, to show that He was really clothed with our nature; and because St. John relates more lofty things of Christ than the other Evangelists do, therefore he takes care to record the lowly also. Christ also thus teaches us to weep for our departed friends,—but to weep moderately, and in the fear of God, and in the faith of the Resurrection. Our Lord, being partaker of our flesh and blood, was partaker in our human affections, and has taught us how to regulate them . . . The words describe what was seen,—but who shall describe what was felt? (Chrys., Theoph.)

Our Lord ἐδάκρυσεν, shed tears at the grave of Lazarus, but He ἐκλαυσεν, wept over Jerusalem. (Luke xix. 41.) So much more lamentable is the death of the soul than that of the body.

37. ὁ ἀνοίξας τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς] He that opened the eyes of the blind. Thus our Lord's enemies bear witness to the truth of that miracle.

38. σπήλαιον, καὶ λίθος] a cave; and a stone was lying upon it. See Matt. xxvii. 60. 66. Mark xv. 46.

39. Ἄρατε τὸν λίθον] Take ye away the stone. Why did our Lord say, "Where have ye laid him?" and "Take away the stone," and "Loose him?" Why did He not at once raise Lazarus? Because He designed to make those, to whom He gave these commands, to be so many witnesses, by the eye and touch, to the reality of the miracle. (Chrys.) —τεταρταῖος] quadriduanus. See v. 17. Cp. προκείμεθα πεμπταῖον. (Aristoph.) "τεταρταῖος, ap. Xen. Cyr. v. 3. 1. τριταῖος, Herodot. ii. 89. δευτεράτος, id. vi. 106. δωδεκατάτος, Theocrit. Id. ii. 4. Philostr. Apollon. vii. 10. πεμπταῖος ἀφίκετο." (Kuin.) See the examples in Matth. Gr. Gr. § 144. Cp. τριταῖος, 1 Sam. ix. 20; xxx. 13.

Observe this word in reference to Christ Himself Lazarus was dead four days, and ἥδη ὅζει,—he saw corruption. But Christ raised Himself the third day, and "saw no corruption." Acts xiii. 37.

41. οὐ—κείμενος] These words are not found in five uncials, B, C*, D, L, X, and a few cursives, and in some Versions, and are omitted by many recent Editors; but the evidence of MSS. preponderates in their favour; and their omission makes an inharmonious sound between ἦραν λίθον and ἦρεν ὀφθαλμοὺς.

—Πάτερ, εὐχαριστῶ σοι] Father, I thank Thee. Christ prayed not because He needed aid, but because we need instruction. (Hilary, Chrys.) Cp. Mark i. 41; iv. 39; ix. 25. John ii. 4—11; v. 9, which shows that Christ wrought His greatest miracles without prayer, and by His own authority. He prayed to show that He was not against God, or God against Him; and that what He did was done with God's approval, as much as to say,—I pray, not because prayer on My part is necessary, nor in order that My will may be made effectual; but in order to show that My will and the Father's will is one and the same will. And this He proceeded to prove by saying, "Lazarus, come forth,"—i. e. I, by My power, command thee to rise from the dead. (Chrys.)

43. φωνῇ μεγάλῃ ἐκραύγασε] He cried with a loud voice. The Loud Voice of Christ raising Lazarus from the dead, is a prelude to the Loud Voice of the Trumpet at the Great Day, when all who are in the graves will hear His Voice (John v. 28); and the effect of that Voice will be immediate,—in the twinkling of an eye, as the raising of Lazarus was. (Cyril, Theophyl.)

—Λάζαρε, δεῦρο ἕξω] Lazarus, come forth. He calls all His sheep by name (x. 3). He knows them dead as well as alive.

When our Lord works miracles, He speaks and acts with sovereign authority: "Damsel, arise;" "Young man, arise;" "Stretch forth thy hand;" "Thy sins are forgiven thee;" "Peace, be still!" "Take up thy bed and go to thy house;" "I say to thee, thou evil spirit, come out of him;" "Be it unto thee even as thou wilt;" "Say, the Lord hath need of him;" "To-day shalt thou be with Me in Paradise." (Chrys.)

44. ἐξῆλθεν ὁ τεθνηκὼς] he who was dead came forth. This history may be considered as symbolical of what is done in the spiritual world, when the soul is raised by Christ's voice from the death of sin, and released from its bands by the Ministry of Reconciliation (2 Cor. v. 18, 19), which He has instituted in His Church. It is Christ Who quickens the dead, and raises from the grave. The Ministers of Christ, at His command, loose him who is bound, and who has been quickened and raised by Christ. Aug. See also Aug. Sermon 98, and Quæst. 65, and Burgon. here.

—κειρίαις] with graveclothes. σχολῖνα ἐντάφια, Gloss. Used by LXX for Hebr. מרבדים (marbadim). Prov. vii. 16, "tapetes lectorum." κειρίαι sunt fasciæ quævis, et hoc nomine insigniuntur fasciæ, quibus infantes vinciri, lecti subendi, et mortuorum cadavera, linteo prius involuta (v. ad Matt. xxvii. 59), ut aromata, quibus corpora condiebantur, melius servarentur, circumligari solebant. Suidas: κειρία: εἶδος ζώνης ἐκ σχοινίων, παρεοικὺς ἱμάντι, ἣ δεσμοῖσι τὰς κλῖνας. Moschorius: κειρία ὁ τῶν νηπίων δεσμός, ἡγουν ὁ κοινὸς φασκία, καὶ ἣ δεσμοῖσι τοὺς νεκροὺς. Fnerunt qui putarent totum Lazari corpus involutum, fasciisque circumligatum fuisse, instar infantum recens natorum. Basilius Homil. de gratiar. actione T. i. ὁ νεκρὸς ἐζωοποιεῖτο καὶ ὁ δεδεμένος παριπάτει. Θαῦμα ἐν θαύματι, κειρία δεδεῖσθαι τοὺς πόδας, καὶ μὴ κωλύεσθαι πρὸς κίνησιν. Eandem sententiam secuti Lightfoot, Lampius. (Kuin. Cp. Wetst. p. 918.)

ἡ ὄψις αὐτοῦ σουδαρίῳ περιεδέδετο. Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Λύσατε αὐτὸν καὶ ἄφετε ὑπάγειν.

⁴⁵ Πολλοὶ οὖν ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων οἱ ἐλθόντες πρὸς τὴν Μαρίαν καὶ θεασάμενοι ἃ ἐποίησεν, ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτόν. ⁴⁶ Τινὲς δὲ ἐξ αὐτῶν ἀπήλθον πρὸς τοὺς Φαρισαίους, καὶ εἶπον αὐτοῖς ἃ ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς. ⁴⁷ Συνηγάγον οὖν οἱ Ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι συνέδριον, καὶ ἔλεγον, Τί ποιούμεν, ὅτι οὗτος ὁ ἄνθρωπος πολλὰ ποιεῖ σημεῖα; ⁴⁸ ἔαν ἀφώμεν αὐτὸν οὕτω, πάντες πιστεύουσιν εἰς αὐτόν· καὶ ἐλεύσονται οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι, καὶ ἀροῦσιν ἡμῶν καὶ τὸν τόπον καὶ τὸ ἔθνος. ⁴⁹ Εἷς δὲ τις ἐξ αὐτῶν Καϊάφας, ἀρχιερεὺς ὢν τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ ἐκείνου, εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Ὑμεῖς οὐκ οἴδατε οὐδὲν, ⁵⁰ οὐδὲ λογίζεσθε, ὅτι συμφέρει ἡμῖν ἵνα εἷς ἄνθρωπος ἀποθάνῃ ὑπὲρ τοῦ λαοῦ, καὶ μὴ ὅλον τὸ ἔθνος ἀπόληται. ⁵¹ Τοῦτο δὲ ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ οὐκ εἶπεν, ἀλλὰ ἀρχιερεὺς ὢν τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ ἐκείνου ἐπροφῆτευσεν, ὅτι ἡμελλεν Ἰησοῦς ἀποθνήσκειν ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἔθνους, ⁵² καὶ οὐχ ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἔθνους μόνον, ἀλλ' ἵνα καὶ τὰ τέκνα τοῦ Θεοῦ τὰ διεσκορπισμένα συναγάγῃ εἰς ἓν. ⁽⁹⁵⁾ ⁵³ Ἀπ' ἐκείνης οὖν τῆς ἡμέρας συνεβουλεύσαντο ἵνα ἀποκτείνωσιν αὐτόν.

⁵⁴ Ὁ Ἰησοῦς οὖν οὐκ ἔτι παρῆρσία περιεπάτει ἐν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις· ἀλλὰ

— σουδαρίῳ] with a napkin. See Luke xix. 20. John xx. 7. ⁴⁷ τί ποιούμεν, ὅτι—ποιεῖ;] what are we to do? ὅτι = in regard to that. See ix. 17.

⁴⁸ ἐλεύσονται οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι] the Romans will come and take away our place and nation. They feared temporal loss, and incurred eternal, and did not escape the temporal; for the Romans did come after Christ's passion, and took away their place and nation, because they did not let Christ alone, but slew Him Who is now reigning in heaven, while they are scattered through the world. (Aug., Chrys.) Cp. Luke xx. 15, 16, where our Lord predicts the destruction of the Jewish polity, as a penalty to be inflicted on the Jews for their rejection of Himself. See here the results of preferring Political Expediency to Justice, Piety, and Truth.

⁴⁹ Καϊάφας] Caiaphas. See on Matt. xxvi. 3. Luke iii. 2. He had been intruded into the office by Valerius Gratus, A.D. 25, and was put out by Vitellius, A.D. 36. Joseph. A. xviii. 4. 3.

⁵⁰ λογίζεσθε] So A, B, D, L.—Elz. διαλογίζεσθε. — ὑπὲρ τοῦ λαοῦ] in behalf of the people. Caiaphas, in a Jewish spirit, prophesied of what would be expedient for the Jews; but God designed the benefit of Christ's death for the whole World; and made Caiaphas an instrument for conferring that benefit, which the Jews reject.

⁵¹ ἀρχιερεὺς ὢν τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ ἐκείνου] being High Priest that year he prophesied. Annas was the High Priest de jure. (Cf. on Luke iii. 2, and below, xviii. 13. 24.) The addition "of that year" is a silent indication of the irregular character of the tenure by which Caiaphas held office. The High Priesthood, by God's Institution, was in the family of Aaron and for life; but through the ambition and strife of the Jews the office had ceased to be hereditary, and indeed there were sometimes more than one High Priest in one year; and Caiaphas had bought the office with money. But even then the Spirit of God had not yet forsaken the sacerdotal office, though they who bare it were unworthy and abused it to their own destruction. Who He deserted them, when they had crucified Christ, and the veil of the Temple was rent in twain.

Caiaphas was High Priest in that year, the year in which Jesus died; and in that year he prophesied. Jewish Prophecy expired with a prediction of Christ's death on its lips.

This power, however, in the case of Caiaphas is ascribed by the Evangelist to a divine mystery, because he was "High Priest that year" (Aug.); the last in the seventy weeks of Daniel (Bengel); not that Caiaphas was made High Priest that year; he had been High Priest for several years. (See Josephus, Ant. xviii. 2 and 4; and on Matt. xxvi. 3.)

The expression "that year" is repeated in vv. 49. 51, and is emphatic. He prophesied as High Priest of that year in which the Levitical Priesthood and Ritual was about to be superseded by the Sacrifice offered by the One Great High Priest. But God would thus show, that He had not withdrawn all His graces from them, till they forfeited them by rejecting and crucifying Christ; and then the veil of the Temple was rent; and the People and the Priesthood became the victims of False Prophets.

Although there were many other High Priests in other years, yet we do not hear that any prophesied except the High Priest of that year in which Jesus was about to die. (Origen.)

Caiaphas spoke with a view to political expediency, but God overruled his words to spiritual edification. So He did with those of Pilate when he wrote the title on the Cross, xix. 19—22. "Out of the eater came forth meat" (Judges xiv. 14.) "The fierceness of man shall turn to Thy praise, O Lord" (Ps. lxxvii. 10.)

— ἐπροφῆτευσεν] he prophesied; here is one of the Comments on the History, according to St. John's manner. See ii. 25; v. 21; vi. 64. 71; vii. 39; xii. 33. 37. 43; xiii. 11; xxi. 17.

Sometimes evil men, as Balaam and Caiaphas, may be endued with prophetic gifts, and evil spirits themselves may confess Christ—"We know Thee who Thou art" (Luke iv. 34.)

See the power of the High Priesthood. Caiaphas, being invested in this office, prophesied, although unworthy and not knowing what he said, but was made an instrument in God's hands for declaring the truth. Thus we are taught to honour the Priest's office on account of the grace given by it. He prophesied, but not with a prophetic soul; and therefore was not a prophet.

See also the power of the Holy Spirit, for He used Caiaphas as an organ, and made him utter a prophecy concerning Christ and the efficacy of His death. Many, though unworthy, have foreseen and foretold the future—Pharaoh, Balaam, Saul, Nebuchadnezzar, Caiaphas, Pilate. (Theoph., Chrys.) Prophetic and miraculous powers, eloquence, faith, and other ministerial gifts, may be found in evil men. And nothing profiteth without Charity (1 Cor. xiii. 1—3.)

We may look for the time, when Ministers of Antichrist, seducing men to idolatry, will be permitted to try the faith of the world by uttering prophecies, working signs and miracles. (See Matt. xxiv. 24. 2 Thess. ii. 9.) But the Holy Spirit, in the Old and New Testament, has provided a safeguard against these seductions. (See Deut. xiii. 1—4 and 1 Cor. xiii. 1—3.) The test to be applied is—Do they, who prophesy and work miracles, also preach true doctrine? or do they lead to idolatry? Have they Charity? Do they show love to God and to Man in God? Or are they like Caiaphas, uttering a prophecy concerning Christ, and yet ready to kill Him?

⁵² ἵνα—συναγάγῃ εἰς ἓν] that He might gather together into one. The prophecy took effect, but in the opposite way to which Caiaphas designed. Christ was slain, and the people of the literal Israel were scattered. "Their house is left to them desolate" (Matt. xxiii. 38.), and the true Israel were gathered together in one in Christ. (Chrys.)

⁵³ συνεβουλεύσαντο] they took counsel together. What, as individuals, they had designed, they now deliberate in common to execute. (Cyril.) And so they fulfilled the second Psalm (Ps. ii. 1.)

— ἵνα ἀποκτείνωσιν αὐτόν] that they might put Him to death. They perverted a prophecy in behalf of Christ into an occasion of sin against Him. So evil men deal with the words of the Holy Ghost in the Holy Scriptures, which were written for our learning. "They wrest them to their own destruction" (2 Pet. iii. 16.) (Origen.)

⁵⁴ οὐκ ἔτι παρῆρσία περιεπάτει ἐν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις] He was walking no more openly among the Jews. He would not offer any temptation to the impiety and malice of His persecutors, or give the wicked any cause of becoming more wicked. (Origen; see Matt. x. 23.) Their time of probation was past. He thus gave His disciples an occasion of showing their stedfastness and ἀπῆλθεν ἐκεῖθεν εἰς τὴν χώραν ἐγγὺς τῆς ἐρήμου, εἰς ^zἘφραῖμ λεγομένην πόλιν, ^z 2 Chron. 13. 19.

καὶ καὶ διέτριβε μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ.

(⁹⁶/_I) ⁵⁵ Ἦν δὲ ἐγγὺς τὸ πάσχα τῶν Ἰουδαίων (⁹⁷/_x) καὶ ἀνέβησαν πολλοὶ εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα ἐκ τῆς χώρας πρὸ τοῦ πάσχα, ^{zz} ἵνα ἀγνίσωσιν ἑαυτοὺς.

^{zz} 2 Chron. 30.
17—19.

⁵⁶ Ἐζήτουν οὖν τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ ἔλεγον μετ' ἀλλήλων ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ ἐστηκότες, τί δοκεῖ ὑμῖν; ὅτι οὐ μὴ ἔλθῃ εἰς τὴν ἑορτήν; ⁵⁷ Δεδώκεισαν δὲ οἱ Ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι ἐντολήν ἵνα ἐάν τις γνῶ ποῦ ἐστὶ μνηύσῃ, ὅπως παῖδωσιν αὐτόν.

XII. ¹ Ὁ οὖν Ἰησοῦς πρὸ ἑξ ἡμερῶν τοῦ πάσχα ἦλθεν εἰς ^bΒηθανίαν, ^a Matt. 26. 6.
ὅπου ἦν Λάζαρος ὁ τεθνηκώς, ὃν ἤγειρεν ἐκ νεκρῶν ὁ Ἰησοῦς. ^c Mark 14. 3.
^b ch. 11. 1, 43.

(⁹⁸/_I) ² Ἐποίησαν οὖν αὐτῷ δεῖπνον ἐκεῖ, καὶ ἡ Μάρθα διηκόνει, ὁ δὲ Λάζαρος εἰς ἣν τῶν ἀνακειμένων σὺν αὐτῷ. ³ Ἡ οὖν Μαρία λαβοῦσα λίτρον μύρου ^c ch. 11. 2.

νάρδου πιστικῆς πολυτίμου ἤλειψε τοὺς πόδας τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, καὶ ἐξέμαξε ταῖς θριξίν αὐτῆς τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ· ἡ δὲ οἰκία ἐπληρώθη ἐκ τῆς ὁσμῆς τοῦ μύρου.

⁴ Ἀλέγει οὖν εἰς ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ, Ἰούδας Σίμωνος Ἰσκαριώτης, ὁ μέλλων ^d Matt. 10. 4.

αὐτὸν παραδιδόναι, ⁵ Διατί τοῦτο τὸ μύρον οὐκ ἐπράθῃ τριακοσίων δηναρίων, καὶ ἐδόθη πτωχοῖς; ⁶ Εἶπε δὲ τοῦτο, οὐχ ὅτι περὶ τῶν πτωχῶν ἔμελεν αὐτῷ, ^e ch. 13. 29.

ἀλλ' ὅτι κλέπτῃς ἦν, καὶ τὸ γλωσσόκομον εἶχε, καὶ τὰ βαλλόμενα ἐβάσταζεν.

allegiance to Him; and therefore He afterwards said, "Ye are they who have continued with me in my temptations" (Luke xxii. 28). (Chrys.) — Ἐφραῖμ λεγομένην πόλιν] See on Luke x. 1. Cp. Winer, R. W. in v. Ephraim.

⁵⁵. τῆς χώρας] from that country or region where Jesus had been (v. 54). Does the Evangelist intimate that the men of that region were solicited to deliver up Christ (see v. 56, 57); and does he thus bring out more strongly the treachery of Christ's own Apostle who betrayed Him?

— ἵνα ἀγνίσωσιν] in order that they might purify themselves. On this use of ἀγνίζω, see Acts xxi. 24. 26; xxiv. 18. That they might purify themselves from such ceremonial defilements as they might have contracted; in order to participation in the Paschal feast. (See Numb. ix. 10. 2 Chron. xxx. 17.) This purification was effected by sacrifices, sprinkling of water, fasting, prayer, and other observances, which lasted from one to six days. (See Lightf. and Lampe.) This, and the other prescribed rites, brought a great concourse of people together at Jerusalem, before the Festival. Indeed, all who went had to undergo the rites in question. So a Rabbinical writer, cited by Welstein, says, 'Tenetur uniusquisque ad purificandum se ad festum.' And Jos. Ant. iv. 3. 12, ἀθμίτων ἡγείτο—μὴ προηγηκεὶς εἰσάγειν τὸ πλῆθος. The rites are described by Jos. Ant. viii. 3, and Bell. v. 2.

Probably in reference to this usage at this time our Lord Himself says, "for their sakes I sanctify Myself" (xvii. 19). The People were sanctifying themselves for the Levitical Passover. The True Passover was sanctifying Himself to be an Oblation for the whole world. Like them also, He came to the Holy City before the Passover. See xii. 1.

CH. XII. 1. Ὁ οὖν Ἰησοῦς—ἦλθεν εἰς Βηθανίαν] Jesus then came to Bethany six days before the Passover. On the Sabbath before the Passover, the eve of Palm Sunday, see v. 12. This is the same narrative as in St. Matt. (xxvi. 6) and in St. Mark (xiv. 3), concerning the woman in the house of Simon, who had been a leper. Aug. (de Cons. Evang. ii. 89.)

— πρὸ ἑξ ἡμερῶν τοῦ πάσχα] six days before the Passover. The term 'eight days' is equivalent to a week. On the construction cp. xi. 18, ἐγγὺς τῶν Ἱεροσολύμων ὡς ἀπὸ σταδίων δεκαπέντε. So LXX, Amos i. 1, πρὸ δύο ἐτῶν τοῦ σεισμοῦ; iv. 7, πρὸ τριῶν μηνῶν τοῦ τρυγητοῦ (Winer, p. 492).

². δεῖπνον] This Supper at Bethany was probably on the Sabbath before His death. It was on a Sabbath,—the Sabbath, or day of Rest before that great Sabbath, the last Sabbath which was of divine obligation, on which Christ rested in the grave, and fulfilled the Sabbath, and prepared the grave as a place of Rest for all who pass from this life in His faith and fear. This Supper, in which He was anointed and embalmed beforehand for His burial (see on v. 7), may be regarded as presenting a type of that rest and refreshment in the Sabbath of the grave, where all who are cleansed from the leprosy of sin, as Simon was from bodily leprosy, and who are raised from the death of sin, as Lazarus from the grave, and all whom Jesus loves, as Martha and Mary, recline at a spiritual banquet, in Paradise,—which is a blessed Bethany, or House of Passage (see i. 28; x. 40), from this world to the heavenly Jerusalem.

³. Ἡ οὖν Μαρία] Then took Mary a pound of ointment of pure spikenard. See above on xi. 2, where St. John says ἀλείψασα τὸν Κύριον, though he dwells specially on the anointing of the feet.

St. John alone mentions the name of Mary here; St. Matthew and St. Mark say only 'a woman' (Matt. xxvi. 7. Mark xiv. 3). Probably she was still alive when they wrote their Gospels; and they would not draw her forth from her retirement into publicity. See above, p. 323. St. John shows his independent knowledge by specifying her name; and thus also fulfils our Lord's prophecy that it would be illustrious for ever in the whole world. Matt. xxvi. 13. Mark xiv. 9.

— νάρδου πιστικῆς] of pure spikenard. See on Mark xiv. 3. The distillations of pure oil are called ἔδολοι by Æschyl. Ag. 95.

— τοὺς πόδας] Mary anointed His feet. We may imitate her in her love and ministry to Christ. For all Christians are members of Christ; and what we do, from love of Christ, to the lowest of His members is accepted by Him as done unto Himself (Matt. xxv. 40). We therefore may be said to anoint His feet, when we show mercy to His poor. (Theoph.)

— ἡ δὲ οἰκία ἐπληρώθη ἐκ τῆς ὁσμῆς] the house was filled with the odour. And the world is now filled with its fragrance. Do thou also anoint the feet of Jesus, and wipe His feet with thy hair. If thou hast more than enough, give to the poor, which are the feet of Christ's body, so thou mayest wipe them with thy hair. (Aug.) This will be an odour of a sweet smell (ὁσμὴ εὐωδίας), a sacrifice well-pleasing to God (Phil. iv. 18); "as Christ also hath loved us and hath given Himself for us, an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling savour" (εἰς ὁσμὴν εὐωδίας, Eph. v. 2).

⁴. Ἰούδας] Judas. The other Evangelists do not specify him. Here is an evidence of the later date of this Gospel. Cp. the mention of Peter and Malchus, xviii. 10, and Lazarus, xi. 1.

Judas, we see, was permitted to remain in Christ's company to the end. Our Lord, by His forbearance to the Traitor, teaches us to tolerate evil men in the Church, that we may not divide the body of Christ. Be thou holy, and tolerate the evil, that thou mayest attain the reward of the good, and not be condemned with the evil. Imitate Christ. (Aug.)

⁶. Εἶπε τοῦτο] He said this, not because he cared for the poor, but because he was a thief and had the bag. This comment is peculiar to St. John's narrative of this fact. See above, p. 268.

— γλωσσόκομον] Properly, (1) a case for the stops or keys of pipes or flutes; (2) a chest, scrip, or purse for money, 2 Chron. xxiv. 10, 11; below, xiii. 29. See Welst. p. 921, and Kuin, who says, "γλωσσόκομον, vocabulum compositum ex γλῶσσα lingua, item lingua tibiærum, et κομῶ servo, propriè notat thecam, s. cistellam, in quâ tibiæcines linguas tibiærum reponabant, ne attritu corrumperebantur. Hesychius: γλωττόκομον, ἐν ᾧ οἱ αὐληταὶ f Deut. 15. 11.

Matt. 26. 11.
Mark 14. 7.

⁷ Εἶπεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἄφες αὐτὴν, ἵνα εἰς τὴν ἡμέραν τοῦ ἐνταφιασμοῦ μου τηρήσῃ αὐτό. ⁸ τὸν πτωχοὺς γὰρ πάντοτε ἔχετε μεθ' ἑαυτῶν, ἐμὲ δὲ οὐ πάντοτε ἔχετε.

(⁹⁹/_x) ⁹ Ἐγὼ οὖν ὄχλος πολὺς ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων ὅτι ἐκεῖ ἐστὶ καὶ ἦλθον, οὐ διὰ τὸν Ἰησοῦν μόνον, ἀλλ' ἵνα καὶ τὸν Λάζαρον ἴδωσιν, ὃν ἤγειρεν ἐκ νεκρῶν. ¹⁰ Ἐβουλευσάντο δὲ οἱ Ἀρχιερεῖς ἵνα καὶ τὸν Λάζαρον ἀποκτείνωσιν, ¹¹ ὅτι πολλοὶ δι' αὐτὸν ὑπῆγον τῶν Ἰουδαίων, καὶ ἐπίστευον εἰς τὸν Ἰησοῦν.

g Matt. 21. 1—11.
Mark 11. 1—10.
Luke 19. 29—38.
h Ps. 118. 25, 26.

(¹⁰⁰/_i) ¹² Ἐτὴ ἐπαύριον ὄχλος πολὺς ὁ ἐλθὼν εἰς τὴν ἑορτὴν, ἀκούσαντες ὅτι ἔρχεται Ἰησοῦς εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, ¹³ ἔλαβον τὰ βατὰ τῶν φοινίκων, καὶ ἐξῆλθον εἰς ὑπάντησιν αὐτῶν, καὶ ἔκραζον, Ὡσαννὰ, εὐλογημένος ὁ ἐρχόμενος ἐν ὀνόματι Κυρίου ὁ βασιλεὺς τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ.

(¹⁰¹/_{vii}) ¹⁴ Εὐρὼν δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὀνάριον ἐκάθισεν ἐπ' αὐτό, καθὼς ἐστὶ γεγραμ-ἀπετίθεισαν τὰς γλωσσίδας, deinde verò hoc idem nomen adhibetur etiam de arcuā quāvis; sic Exod. xxxvii. 1, Arcam foderis Aquila dixit γλωσσόκομον, Alexandrini ibi usi sunt vocabulo κιβωτός. Cistulam, in quam Philistaei aureos mures et simulacra coniecerant, quæ in textu Hebraico יִצְחָא dicitur, Josephus, Ant. vi. 1, 2, γλωσσόκομον dixit quod nomen § 3 explicuit, τὸ ἄγγος δ' τοὺς ἀνδριάντας εἶχε καὶ μύας, arcuā in quā erant simulacra et mures. Inprimis autem γλωσσόκομον usurpatur loculo pecuniis asser-vandis apto sive marsupio, ut h. l. in versione Alexandrinā 2 Par. xxiv. 8. 10, 11. Plutarch. Galba, p. 1060, ἐκέλευσεν (Galba) αὐτῷ κομισθῆναι τὸ γλωσσόκομον, καὶ λαβὼν χρυσοῦς τινὰς ἐπέδωκε τῷ Κάνῳ. Lex. Cyrill. ined. γλωσσόκομον βαλάντιον, ἢ φυλίνην θήκη. Euthymius Zigabenus ad Matth. 26, γλωσσόκομον δὲ ἦν βαλάντιον, ἐν ᾧ τὰ προσαγόμενα χάριν τῶν πενήτων ἐναπε-θησαν (εἶτο). Etiam in scriptis Rabbiorum reperitur vocabulum κερσίν (quo h. l. Syrus usus est) et κερσίν per Daleth, et vulgò ponitur de arcu sepulchrali, v. Lightfootus ad h. l. et Buxtorfius Lex. Talm. p. 443." Cp. on xiii. 29.

Observe the striking contrast—Mary and Judas; the three hundred pence, and the thirty pieces of silver; her ἀλάβατρον, his γλωσσόκομον; she in a Simon's house, he Simon's son; the fragrant deed of the one, the miserable end of the other. Let all covetous men,—all who grudge Christ and His House what they lavish on themselves,—all robbers of Him and of His Church, beware. Let them cast away the spirit of Judas, lest they be condemned with him; and imitate Mary, that they may be glorified with her.

—βαλλόμενα] Offerings to Christ, from those who ministered to Him of their substance. See on Luke viii. 3.

Why had Judas the custody of the oblations to Christ, and why did not our Lord, who knew his thoughts and secret acts, put him out of his stewardship? This is a question which has received different answers from various quarters. Some have replied, that He would not give Judas any occasion for betraying Him. (Chrys., Euthym.) Some have ventured to affirm, that his acts of embezzlement were unobserved by Christ. (Lücke.) This is certain, that He has thus left a warning to all, and especially to the Clergy, on the solemn responsibility of pecuniary trusts and possessions; and on the dreadful consequences to themselves and to their own spiritual being, from dealing dishonestly with Church revenues. He has also thus bequeathed to all an example of patience and forbearance. We may not forsake the Communion of the Church, even though a sacrilegious Judas ministers therein.

7. Ἀφες αὐτὴν] Let her alone. Observe the tenderness of Christ's words: He does not condemn Judas, but praises and encourages Mary. (Aug.)

—ἵνα εἰς τὴν ἡμέραν—τηρήσῃ αὐτό] Let her alone, she did not sell it for 300 pence and bestow it upon the poor, not because she has no love for the poor—as thou, O Judas, uncharitably alleget, who carest not for the poor, and who wouldst have its price for thyself—but she preserved it in order to keep it for the day of my burial.

B, D, L, Q, X, and Vulg., and Æthiopic, Coptic, Sahidic, and Armenian Versions, have the reading in the text.—Elz. and A, E, F, G, H, I, M, S, U, Δ, Δ, and Syriac and Gothic Versions, and the majority of Cursives, have τετήρηκεν, a reading which was perhaps derived from the narrative of the other Evangelists, Matt. xxvi. 12. Mark xiv. 8.

The allegation of some, that St. John is at variance with the other Evangelists, and that Mary anointed only the feet of Christ, and had a surplus of nard which she reserved for the burial, is grounded on a misconstruction of his words. See xi. 2, where he says that she anointed the Lord (i. e. His body), and wiped His feet with her hair. This allegation of discrepancy, like many others of the same kind, is founded on the hypothesis, that St. John, in relating any given event, was bound to record all the circumstances related by his predecessors, or is else to be regarded as contradicting them! whereas, on the contrary, his practice of not repeating all that they had related, and in dwelling on some particular circumstances (e. g. the anointing of the feet here) not mentioned by them, ought rather to be regarded as evidence of his agreement with them. He takes for granted that his readers are well acquainted with the earlier Gospels, given by the Holy Ghost for their use, and are satisfied of their veracity. See above, p. 268.

There is something impressive and affecting in the mention of day of burial, because, probably, this anointing took place on the day-week before our Lord's rest in the grave. See above on v. 2.

8. ἐμὲ δὲ οὐ πάντοτε ἔχετε] but Me ye have not always. He is speaking of His bodily presence; for, according to His Divine Majesty and Grace, He is ever with us, as He promised, "Lo, I am with you alway." Matt. xxviii. 20. (Aug.) He was speaking of the flesh which He took of the Virgin Mary, and in which He was crucified and buried, when He said, "Me ye have not always," for in that flesh He ascended into heaven, and is not here, but He is sitting at God's right hand. But the presence of His Divine Majesty is not withdrawn from us; that is here, and every where. Here is a divine caution against the erroneous notion of a carnal presence in the Holy Eucharist.

10. ἵνα καὶ τὸν Λάζαρον ἀποκτείνωσιν] in order that they might put Lazarus also to death. See the blindness of their rage; as if Christ could raise one who died, and not raise one who was killed. He did both. He who raised Lazarus raised Himself. (Aug.)

12. Τῇ ἐπαύριον] On the morrow. The first day of the week—Sunday. This triumphal entry took place on what is called Palm Sunday. See on v. 1. Cp. Ps. cxviii. 24 and next note.

13. τὰ βατὰ τῶν φοινίκων] the branches of the Palms which grew there. The Palm, which is said to grow better when weight is hung upon its boughs, is emblematic of Victory, and specially of such a victory as that of Christ, which was made more glorious by the weight of suffering for the sins of the world laid upon Him, Who, from the lowest depths of sorrow and humility, and from the pit of the grave raised Himself, and ascended on the clouds to the right hand of God.

These Palms of Victory, now strewn in His triumphal entry to Jerusalem, prefigured the conquest He would achieve over death, by dying and triumphing over the Devil, the Prince of Death, by the trophy of the Cross (Aug.), and of that glorious march of Triumph, by which He would mount upon the clouds, into the heavenly Jerusalem.—They prefigured that Victory by which the Saints also are enabled to overcome, and to stand with palms in their hands, and sing hallelujahs to the Lamb. (Rev. vii. 9, 10.) S. Cyril, Bishop of Jerusalem in the fourth century, speaks of the Palm-tree, from which these branches were stripped, as still existing in his day. See the interesting topographical passage, Cateches. x. pp. 246, 247.

—Ὡσαννὰ] Hosanna, a word of prayer and worship, "Save us." See on Matt. xxi. 9. They are inspired to recognize Christ as greater than a prophet; Christ is God; for salvation is from God alone. (Chrys., Aug., Theoph.)

14. Εὐρὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὀνάριον] Jesus having gotten a young ass. εἰπεῖν is the Hebrew מָצָא (matsa), to procure; and means, having sent in quest of and found. See i. 42. 46, and ix. 35.

The young ass was one on which no one had ever sat, and was emblematic of the Gentile world, which had never been broken in, and was about to submit to Christ. (Aug., Chrys.) See below on v. 20. Matt. xxi. 7. Mark xi. 2.

μένον, ¹⁵ ἢ Μὴ φοβοῦ θυγάτηρ Σιών· ἰδοὺ ὁ βασιλεὺς σου ἔρχεται i Zech. 9. 9.
καθήμενος ἐπὶ πῶλον ὄνου.

(¹⁰²/_x) ¹⁶ ^k Ταῦτα δὲ οὐκ ἔγνωσαν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ τὸ πρῶτον· ἀλλ' ὅτε ^k Matt. 17. 9.
ἔδοξάσθη Ἰησοῦς, τότε ἐμνήσθησαν ὅτι ταῦτα ἦν ἐπ' αὐτῷ γεγραμμένα, καὶ ^{Luke 18. 34.}
ταῦτα ἐποίησαν αὐτῷ. ¹⁷ Ἐμαρτύρει οὖν ὁ ὄχλος ὁ ὢν μετ' αὐτοῦ, ὅτι τὸν ^{ch. 7. 39.}
Δάξαρρον ἐφώνησεν ἐκ τοῦ μνημείου, καὶ ἤγειρεν αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν. ¹⁸ Διὰ τοῦτο καὶ ὑπήντησεν αὐτῷ ὁ ὄχλος, ὅτι ἤκουσαν τοῦτο αὐτὸν πεποιηκέναι τὸ σημεῖον.
¹⁹ Οἱ οὖν Φαρισαῖοι εἶπον πρὸς ἐαυτοὺς, Θεωρεῖτε ὅτι οὐκ ὠφελεῖτε οὐδέν; ἴδε ὁ κόσμος ὀπίσω αὐτοῦ ἀπῆλθεν.

²⁰ Ἦσαν δέ τινες ¹ Ἕλληνες ἐκ τῶν ἀναβαινόντων ἵνα προσκυνήσωσιν ἐν τῇ ^l Acts 8. 27.
ἑορτῇ. ²¹ οὗτοι οὖν προσῆλθον Φιλίππῳ τῷ ἀπὸ Βηθσαϊδᾶ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, καὶ ^{& 13. 42, 43.}
ἡρώτων αὐτὸν λέγοντες, Κύριε, θέλομεν τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἰδεῖν. ²² Ἐρχεται Φίλιππος ^{& 17. 4.}
καὶ λέγει ^m τῷ Ἀνδρέᾳ, καὶ πάλιν Ἀνδρέας καὶ Φίλιππος λέγουσι τῷ Ἰησοῦ. ^{comp. 1 Kings 8.}
(¹⁰³/_{iv}) ²³ Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἀπεκρίνατο αὐτοῖς λέγων, Ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα ἵνα δοξασθῇ ^{41—43.}
ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. (¹⁰⁴/_x) ²⁴ Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ἐὰν μὴ ὁ κόκκος τοῦ ⁿ Matt. 10. 39.
σίτου πεσὼν εἰς τὴν γῆν ἀποθάνῃ, αὐτὸς μόνος μένει· ἐὰν δὲ ἀποθάνῃ, πολλὴν ^{& 16. 25.}
καρπὸν φέρει. (¹⁰⁵/_{iii}) ²⁵ Ὁ φιλῶν τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἀπολέσει αὐτήν· καὶ ὁ ^{Mark 8. 35.}
^{Luke 9. 24.}
^{& 17. 33.}

— γεγραμμένον] written. St. John does not often quote the Hebrew Scriptures, and gives the substance rather than the letter. See vv. 38—40.

15. ὁ βασιλεὺς σου ἔρχεται] thy King cometh, not like most of thy kings, proud and cruel, but meek; and not leading an army, and riding on a war-horse, but on the colt of an ass.

16. Ταῦτα οὐκ ἔγνωσαν οἱ μαθηταί] These things understood not His disciples at the first. Observe the modesty of the Evangelist. He is not ashamed to confess their former ignorance. (Chrys.) An evidence of truth. Compare Matt. xvi. 9. Mark viii. 17. John ii. 17, 22; viii. 28; xiii. 7; xvi. 12, 13 (Burgon), passages which show that many things were done and said by our Lord to the Apostles, which they could not understand at the time.

This confirms the principle, which is ever to be borne in mind in reading the Gospels, that much of His teaching was anticipatory and prophetic, and is to be interpreted by the light of what He afterwards did or said. See particularly the doctrine in the Third and Sixth Chapters of this Gospel. Here also is an evidence of their Inspiration. If the Holy Ghost had not been given to lead them into all truth, and to bring to their remembrance what Christ had spoken to them (John xiv. 26), they would never have been enabled, nor would have attempted, to record long discourses on abstruse matters; discourses which, when delivered, they themselves, as St. John here candidly confesses, did not understand.

17. Ἐμαρτύρει οὖν—ἔτι] The multitude, therefore, that was now with Him, was bearing witness that He raised Lazarus from the dead. Some MSS., e.g. A, B, E*, G, H, M, Q, S, U, X, Δ, have ὅτε. But the sense is, that by this triumphal manifestation the people bare witness that He raised Lazarus from the dead. Their hosannas were a public proof of the Miracle. See v. 18. And here is an answer to modern cavils against that Miracle, on the plea that it is not mentioned by the other Evangelists. (Cp. on xi. 1.) These hosannas are mentioned by them. And these Hosannas of the Multitude are Echoes of the Voice of Christ,—"Lazarus, come forth." This reflection on the fact is quite in the manner of St. John's Gospel. See above, Introduction, p. 268.

19. ὁ κόσμος—ἀπῆλθεν] the world is gone away after Him. These words of the Pharisees are very like what they afterwards spake to St. James, the Bishop of Jerusalem, at the Passover of A.D. 62, just before they killed him, ὁ λαὸς πλανᾶται ὀπίσω Ἰησοῦ τοῦ σταυρωθέντος. And it is remarkable, that the people then also, as now (v. 13), cried ὡσαννά τῷ υἱῷ Δαβὶδ. See the interesting narrative of Hegesippus preserved by Eusebius ii. 23, and note above on Luke xxiii. 34, whence it is evident that St. James, at his martyrdom, had a lively remembrance of our Lord's words and actions at His death at the Passover about thirty years before.

20. Ἦσαν δέ τινες Ἕλληνες] Gentile proselytes; like the Eunuch in the Acts of the Apostles (Acts viii. 27. Cp. Acts xiii. 43), who came up to Jerusalem to worship. "Commodè ergo et h. l. Proselyti simpliciter dici poterunt Ἕλληνες." (Kuin.)

Observe that the young ass, brought to Him by two disciples, typified the Gentile world coming to Christ. See on Matt. xxi.

2—7. Mark xi. 2—7. And now in the next verses (20, 21) we see Gentiles, brought by two disciples, and coming to Him. Thus the type is explained by the Antitype. Thus, when our Lord had withered the leafy Fig-tree, He went up to Jerusalem and the Temple, typified by the Fig-tree. (See Matt. xxi. 19, 20. Mark xi. 13—20.)

The Jews seek to kill Jesus, and the Greeks seek to see Him. But the Apostles who laid their garments on the colt and who bring these Greeks to Jesus—are Jews. Now, therefore, the two walls—that is, the wall of the Circumcision and that of the Uncircumcision—are coming together in the one Corner-stone, Christ Jesus, and Jew and Greek are meeting together in the one faith of Christ, with a kiss of peace.

21. προσῆλθον Φιλίππῳ] These Greeks come to Philip, and he to Andrew, and they together came to Jesus (one would not come alone), a proof of reverence and awe for Jesus, after the stupendous miracle He had just wrought.

— τῆς Γαλιλαίας] Galilee of the Gentiles, and therefore a very fit person to bring them to Christ.

— θέλομεν] we desire. See above, vi. 21.

23. ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα] the hour is come. Before, He had charged His Apostles, "Go ye not into the way of the Gentiles." (Matt. x. 5. Cp. also Matt. xv. 24.) But now the case is altered, and He was about soon to give a general commission to His Apostles. "Go and teach all nations." (Matt. xxviii. 19.) He foresaw that many of the Gentiles would believe after His Passion and Resurrection; and on this occasion of the Greeks wishing to see Him, He beheld the firstfruits of the harvest of the Gentiles, and He speaks of Himself as of a grain sown in the earth, and ripening into a spiritual Harvest of believers, who were to spring up from Him after His death, burial, and resurrection.

24. ἐὰν μὴ ὁ κόκκος] unless the grain of wheat fall into the earth and die, it abideth alone, but if it die, it beareth much fruit. He compares Himself to a grain of corn, which would be buried by the unbelief of the Jews, but would fructify in the faith of the Gentiles. (Aug., Chrys.) As much as to say: The Jews desire to kill Me; but the Gentiles desire to see Me. My hour is come. I will comply with the desire of the Jews, that I may comply with that of the Gentiles. I will die, that they may live. My death will be their birth. As when a grain of corn is sown and dies in the earth it bears much fruit, so My death will yield an abundant harvest. If this is true of a grain of corn, how much more so of Me, Whose death is the cause of life!

When I have died and have raised Myself from the dead, then will My power be much more manifest, and the world will believe in Me as God.

In another sense, also, Christ's death is the cause of life. He dies and rises from the dead, and becomes the "firstfruits of them that slept." For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ all shall be made alive; and therefore, from this saying of our Lord St. Paul derives His argument on the Resurrection. 1 Cor. xv. 36.

25. Ὁ φιλῶν τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ] He that loveth his life shall lose it. See Matt. x. 39; xvi. 25. Luke ix. 24; xvii. 33. As much as to say, As I give My life for you, so you must be ready

o ch. 14. 3.
& 17. 24.
1 Thess. 4. 17.
p ch. 14. 3.
& 17. 24.
2 Cor. 5. 8.
Phil. 1. 23.
1 Thess. 4. 17, 18.
2 Tim. 2. 12.

q ch. 16. 11.

r ch. 3. 14.
& ver. 24.
Isa. 53. 10, 11.
Rom. 1. 16.
1 Cor. 1. 23, 24.

s 2 Sam. 7. 13.
Ps. 89. 29, 36.
& 110. 4.
Isa. 9. 6, 7.
Ezek. 37. 25.
Dan. 2. 44.
& 7. 14, 27.
t ch. 1. 9.

μισῶν τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ τούτῳ εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον φυλάξει αὐτήν. ⁽¹⁰⁶⁾_x 26 Ὁ ἔμοι τις διακονῇ, ἐμοὶ ἀκολουθείτω· καὶ ὅπου εἰμὶ ἐγώ, ἔκει καὶ ὁ διάκονος ὁ ἐμὸς ἔσται· καὶ ἐάν τις ἐμοὶ διακονῇ, τιμῆσει αὐτὸν ὁ Πατήρ.

⁽¹⁰⁷⁾_{iv} 27 Νῦν ἡ ψυχὴ μου τετάραται· καὶ τί εἶπω; Πάτερ, σῶσόν με ἐκ τῆς ὥρας ταύτης· ἀλλὰ διὰ τοῦτο ἤλθον εἰς τὴν ὥραν ταύτην. ⁽¹⁰⁸⁾_x 28 Πάτερ, δόξασον σοῦ τὸ ὄνομα. Ἦλθεν οὖν φωνὴ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, Καὶ ἐδόξασα, καὶ πάλιν δοξάσω. 29 Ὁ οὖν ὄχλος ὁ ἐστὼς καὶ ἀκούσας ἔλεγε βροντὴν γεγονέναι· ἄλλοι ἔλεγον, Ἄγγελος αὐτῷ λελάληκεν. 30 Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν, Οὐ δι' ἐμὲ ἡ φωνὴ αὕτη γέγονεν, ἀλλὰ δι' ὑμᾶς. 31 Νῦν κρίσις ἐστὶ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου· νῦν ὁ ἄρχων τοῦ κόσμου τούτου ἐκβληθήσεται ἔξω. 32 Καγὼ ἐὰν ὑψωθῶ ἐκ τῆς γῆς πάντας ἐλκύσω πρὸς ἑμαυτόν. 33 Τοῦτο δὲ ἔλεγε σημαίνων ποίᾳ θανάτῳ ἤμελλεν ἀποθνήσκειν.

34 Ὁ ὄχλος, Ἡμεῖς ἠκούσαμεν ἐκ τοῦ νόμου, ὅτι ὁ Χριστὸς μένει εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα· καὶ πῶς σὺ λέγεις, Ὅτι δεῖ ὑψωθῆναι τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου; τίς ἐστὶν οὗτος ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου; 35 Εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἔτι μικρὸν χρόνον τὸ φῶς μεθ' ὑμῶν ἐστί· περιπατεῖτε ἕως τὸ φῶς ἔχετε, ἵνα μὴ σκοτία ὑμᾶς καταλάβῃ· καὶ ὁ περιπατῶν ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ οὐκ οἶδε ποῦ ὑπάγει. 36 Ἔως τὸ φῶς ἔχετε, πιστεύετε εἰς τὸ φῶς, ἵνα υἱοὶ φωτὸς γένησθε.

to die for Me; and as I bear fruit by dying, so will you. Love not thy life in Time, lest thou lose it in Eternity. (Cp. Aug.)

— ὁ μισῶν τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ] he who hateth his life in this world shall guard it unto life eternal. He who does not give way to the temptations of sinful lusts, but crucifies his appetites, when they rebel against God, shall live for evermore. (Chrys.)

26. ἐὰν ἐμοὶ τις διακονῇ] If a man is a minister (διάκονος, servant) to Me, let him follow Me. If a man seeks not his own things, but Mine, and walks in My ways and not in his own, and does all his good works, not for his own glory but for Mine, let him be ready to die, as I am, and his reward shall be to be where I am, that is, in heaven. Therefore let us not love our lives, nor the things of earth, but of heaven. Thither let us ascend in heart and mind, and dwell with Christ. (Theoph., Aug., Chrys.)

— ὅπου εἰμὶ ἐγώ, ἐκεῖ καὶ ὁ διάκονος ὁ ἐμὸς] where I am, there shall My minister be. These words were remarkably fulfilled in St. Stephen, one of the first διάκονοι, or deacons, and the first martyr. He followed Christ; he imitated Christ in a signal manner in his death; and doubtless will be ever with Christ. See below on Acts vii. 59, 60.

27. ἡ ψυχὴ μου τετάραται] My soul is troubled. In these and the following words we see proofs of His Humanity. Our Lord was liable to human infirmities, and as Man He clung to life. Christ's body was free from sin; but if His body had been exempt from the necessities of Humanity, it would not have been body. There was nothing sinful in this, any more than there is in hunger or in sleep; but He controls and corrects this human longing for life, and says, "For this cause came I to this hour,"—that is, to the hour of death, for the redemption of the world. Thus He teaches, that we must not endeavour to fly from trouble or from death for the truth's sake; and by saying, "Glorify Thy name," He teaches us that the cross is the road to glory. See above, xi. 33; below, xiii. 21; and Matt. xxvi. 41.

29. βροντὴν] thunder. An evidence of St. John's veracity, not concealing the doubts of the people. If the Evangelists had wished to deceive, they might perhaps have related that thunder was a voice from heaven to Christ, but they would never have related that any one said, that a voice to Christ was thunder.

30, 31. Νῦν κρίσις ἐστὶ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου· νῦν ὁ ἄρχων τ. κόσμου τ. ἐκβληθήσεται] Now is the season of judgment, by which men will be tried, tested, sifted. One man will be discerned from another, as the chaff from the wheat by winnowing.

The Prince of this world is the Prince of the evil who dwell in the world; not that he is the Lord of the world.

Formerly, the Devil possessed the human race, and reigned in the hearts of the unbelieving, and beguiled them to forsake the Creator, and worship the creature, and held them captive in his chains. But now, by faith in Christ, and by the efficacy of His blood, and by the virtue of His Resurrection and Ascension, multitudes have been delivered from the Devil by Christ, Who has bound the strong man and spoiled him of his goods. (Mark iii. 27.)

We are not to suppose, that the Devil is as yet finally vanquished, or that he does not continue to tempt men, now that he is cast out. No: he never ceases to tempt us; but it is one thing for him to reign within us, and another to assail us from without. And now, if we follow the Apostle's advice, he cannot hurt us (1 Thess. v. 8); and if he does hurt us, we have One at hand to heal us (1 John ii. 1, 2). The Devil has been cast out from us; let us not give place to him; let us not call him back to dwell within us. (Theoph., Aug.)

32. ἐὰν ὑψωθῶ] if I be lifted up from the earth. A prophecy to be interpreted by the event (cp. iii. 14); compare the prophecy concerning St. Peter, xxi. 18.

— πάντας ἐλκύσω] I will draw all to Myself. He had said before, that none can come to Him, but whom the Father draws. (John vi. 44.) When the Father draws, the Son draws. By the word "drawing," He intimates that we are by nature bound and held in chains by a tyrant, and that we cannot escape from the Devil's bondage and approach Christ, of ourselves. (Chrys.)

34. ἠκούσαμεν ἐκ τοῦ νόμου] we heard out of the Law, that Christ abideth for ever. And yet they had the Prophet Isaiah predicting the death of the Messiah (liii. 7). Christ shows them that He would both suffer, and abide for ever (Chrys.); as the light of the sun is withdrawn, and then rises again.

It is no wonder, that the Jews were not able to believe, because in their pride they desired to establish their own righteousness, and would not submit themselves to God's righteousness. (Rom. x. 3.) When we read, therefore, that they "could not believe," let us understand that they would not believe. (Aug.)

Some are elated by presumption by too much confidence in their own will; and others are cast down into recklessness by too much diffidence. The former say, "Why do we pray to be delivered from temptation, which is in our own power?" Others say, "Why do we endeavour to live well, which is only in God's power?" O Lord, Our Father, which art in heaven, do not Thou lead us into either of these two temptations, but "deliver us from the Evil one." On the one hand, if we are self-confident with Peter, let us listen to the Lord's words,—"I have prayed for thee, Peter, that thy faith fail not" (Luke xxii. 32), lest we imagine that our faith is so much dependent on our own free-will as not to need divine grace. On the other hand, if we doubt and despond, let us hear the Evangelist St. John saying,—"He gave them power to become the sons of God" (John i. 12), lest we imagine that it is not at all in our own power to believe. In both respects let us acknowledge God's goodness (i. e. both for our own power and for His grace). Let us bless Him that He gives us power, and let us pray to Him lest our weakness fail; and in all things, "he that glorieth, let him not glory in himself, but in the Lord." (2 Cor. x. 17.)

35. τὸ φῶς μεθ' ὑμῶν] For μεθ' ὑμῶν, some MSS. (B, D, K, L, M, N, X, and several Cursives and Versions) have ἐν ὑμῶν, which may perhaps be the right reading, and then the ἐν is equivalent to in the midst of you, or in your presence. See xv. 24. 1 Cor. vi. 2.

Ταῦτα ἐλάλησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἀπελθὼν ἐκρύβη ἀπ' αὐτῶν.

³⁷ Τοσαῦτα δὲ αὐτοῦ σημεῖα πεποιηκότος ἔμπροσθεν αὐτῶν οὐκ ἐπίστευον εἰς αὐτόν, ³⁸ ἵνα ὁ λόγος Ἡσαΐου τοῦ προφήτου πληρωθῇ ὃν εἶπε, Κύριε, τίς ἐπίστευσε τῇ ἀκοῇ ἡμῶν; καὶ ὁ βραχίον Κυρίου τίνι ἀπεκαλύφθη; (¹⁰⁹/_I) ³⁹ Διὰ τοῦτο οὐκ ἠδύναντο πιστεῦειν, ὅτι πάλιν εἶπεν Ἡσαΐας, ⁴⁰ Τετύφλωκεν αὐτῶν τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς, καὶ πεπώρωκεν αὐτῶν τὴν καρδίαν ἵνα μὴ ἴδωσι τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς, καὶ νοήσωσι τῇ καρδίᾳ, καὶ ἐπιστραφῶσι, καὶ ἰάσωμαι αὐτούς. (¹¹⁰/_X) ⁴¹ Ταῦτα εἶπεν Ἡσαΐας, ὅτε εἶδε τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐλάλησε περὶ αὐτοῦ. ⁴² ὅμως μέντοι καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἀρχόντων πολλοὶ ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτόν· ἀλλὰ διὰ τοὺς Φαρισαίους οὐχ ὁμολόγουν, ἵνα μὴ ἀποσυνάγωγοι γένωνται. ⁴³ Ἡγάπησαν γὰρ τὴν δόξαν τῶν ἀνθρώπων μάλλον ἥπερ τὴν δόξαν τοῦ Θεοῦ.

(¹¹¹/_I) ⁴⁴ Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἔκραξε καὶ εἶπεν, Ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ οὐ πιστεύει εἰς ἐμὲ, ἀλλ' εἰς τὸν πέμψαντά με. ⁴⁵ καὶ ὁ θεωρῶν ἐμὲ θεωρεῖ τὸν πέμψαντά με. (¹¹²/_X) ⁴⁶ Ἐγὼ φῶς εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἐλήλυθα, ἵνα πᾶς ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ μὴ μένη. ⁴⁷ Καὶ ἐὰν τίς μου ἀκούσῃ τῶν ῥημάτων καὶ μὴ φυλάξῃ, ἐγὼ οὐ κρίνω αὐτόν· οὐ γὰρ ἦλθον ἵνα κρίνω τὸν κόσμον, ἀλλ' ἵνα σώσω τὸν κόσμον. ⁴⁸ Ὁ ἀθετῶν ἐμὲ, καὶ μὴ λαμβάνων τὰ ῥήματά μου, ἔχει τὸν κρίνοντα αὐτόν· ὁ λόγος ὃν ἐλάλησα ἐκείνος κρινεῖ αὐτόν ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ. ⁴⁹ ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐξ ἐμαντοῦ οὐκ ἐλάλησα· ἀλλ' ὁ πέμψας με Πατήρ, αὐτός μοι ἐντολὴν δέδωκεν τί εἴπω καὶ τί λαλήσω. ⁵⁰ καὶ οἶδα ὅτι ἡ ἐντολὴ αὐτοῦ ζωὴ αἰώνιος ἐστίν· ἃ οὖν λαλῶ ἐγὼ, καθὼς εἶρηκέ μοι ὁ Πατήρ, οὕτω λαλῶ.

XIII. ¹ Ἀπὸ δὲ τῆς ἐορτῆς τοῦ πάσχα, εἰδὼς ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὅτι ἐλήλυθεν αὐτοῦ

— ἔως] A, B, D, K, L, X, have ὡς here, and so A, B, D, L, in v. 36, for ἔως.

37—43. Τοσαῦτα] The Holy Spirit, as it were, sums up the evidence and pronounces judgment in these verses. This is an appropriate characteristic of the last Gospel.

39. οὐκ ἠδύναντο πιστεῦειν] they were not able to believe. It was not possible for the prophets to utter what was false, but it was not, therefore, impossible for them to believe. For God would not have prophesied as He did, if they had been about to believe. But why could they not believe? Because they were not willing to believe. (Chrys.) Because Almighty God "gave them over to a reprobate mind," and, by a just retribution, punished them with blindness for their sin in closing their eyes (see v. 40).

40. Τετύφλωκεν] He hath blinded their eyes. St. John gives a paraphrase of Isa. vi. 9. See above, v. 14, and Surenhus. p. 366.

— ἵνα μὴ ἴδωσι] that they should not see. Our own sins are the cause of God's alienation from us, and of our own consequent suffering. (Isa. lix. 2. Hos. iv. 6.) See above, ix. 3. 39.

41. ὅτε εἶδε τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ] when he beheld His glory. The Evangelist here says that Esaias (Isa. vi. 1—9) saw the glory of the Son. St. Paul says (Acts xxviii. 25) that he heard the words of the Holy Spirit. There is one glory, therefore, of the Holy Trinity: and the glory of the Father is the glory of the Son, and is the glory of the Holy Ghost. (Theoph.) The glory of the Ever-blessed Trinity appeared to Isaiah, when he heard the Angelic Holy, Holy, Holy (Isa. vi. 3); and the glory of the Trinity is here called the Glory of Christ, because Christ is God. (Cyril.)

There is a remarkable resemblance to this passage in the Book of Revelation (Rev. iv. 8—11), compared with Rev. v. 12—14, where the Glory ascribed to the Holy Trinity, and the Worship paid to the Holy Trinity, is ascribed and paid to Christ; and is therefore a clear evidence of His Divinity.

A, B, L, M, X, have ὅτι here.

44. ἔκραξε] He cried aloud; contrary to His custom. (Matt. xii. 19.) A rebuke. (Cyril.) When Christ is said κρᾶζειν, or κραυγάζειν, doubtless there is a special emphasis in what He says. He is said only once in St. Matt. κρᾶζει (xvii. 50), at His death; and once, at the same time, in St. Mark xv. 39 (cp. Heb. v. 7); not once in St. Luke. But in St. John He is said κρᾶζει ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ twice (vii. 28. 37; and xi. 43); κραυγάζει φωνῇ μεγάλῃ at the raising of Lazarus from the dead, and lastly here. This was His last cry as a Prophet to the world. Cp. Rev. vii. 2 and x. 3. St. John particularly appears to dwell on the word κρᾶζω (the Hebr. קרא, kara, 'to cry;' see i. 15), and κραυγή, as expressive of prophetic and evangelical teaching in his Gospel and Book of Revelation. And perhaps the τρία μυστήρια κραυγῆς (the three mysteries of crying) in the Epistle of St. John's scholar S. Ignatius (ad Ephes. 19), may mean the three great mysteries of Prophecy and Preaching; viz. as he explains them, the Virginity of Mary, her bearing of the child Jesus, and His Death. These Christian Verities were three great Mysteries of κραυγή, or crying aloud, inasmuch as they were hidden from the world, and could never be discovered by human reason, and were distinguished from all other Mysteries which are generally kept secret, or uttered in private to a few; but these were to be proclaimed aloud to the whole World.

— Ὁ πιστεύων] Our Lord speaks to those who believed, but would not confess Him. See vv. 42, 43.

47. φυλάξῃ] So A, B, D, K, L, X.—Elz. πιστεύσῃ.

47, 48. ἐγὼ οὐ κρίνω αὐτόν—ὁ λόγος ὃν ἐλάλησα] I am not the cause of his destruction, but he himself is the cause, because he will not hear My word which will judge him at the last day. (Chrys.)

47. ἦλθον ἵνα κρίνω] Now is the time of mercy; hereafter will be the time of judgment. (Aug.)

48. ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ] in the last day. Therefore the Resurrection and Universal Judgment will be on the same day. (Bengel.)

49. τί εἶπω καὶ τί λαλήσω] "εἶπω de sermone brevi et mutuo; λαλήσω de copioso; קרן (amar), et דבך (dabhar), apud Hebr." (Bengel.)

CH. XIII. 1. Ἀπὸ δὲ τῆς ἐορτῆς τοῦ πάσχα] The words πρὸ τῆς ἐορτῆς do not mean the day before, for they were spoken on the first day of unleavened bread; but they intimate that this act was introductory to the Passover. Cp. v. 29.

— ἐλήλυθεν] A, B, K, L, M, X, and many Cursive MSS. have ἦλθεν.

ἡ ὥρα ἵνα μεταβῇ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα, ἀγαπήσας τοὺς ἰδίους τοὺς ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ εἰς τέλος ἡγάπησεν αὐτούς.

b Luke 22. 3.
Matt. 13 19.
Acts 5. 3.
c Matt. 11. 27.
& 28. 13.
ch. 3. 35.
& 17. 2.

(¹¹³/_{IX})² Καὶ δείπνου γενομένου, ^b τοῦ Διαβόλου ἥδη βεβληκότος εἰς τὴν καρδίαν Ἰούδα Σίμωνος Ἰσκαριώτου ἵνα αὐτὸν παραδῷ, (¹¹⁴/_{III})³ εἰδὼς ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὅτι πάντα δέδωκεν αὐτῷ ὁ Πατὴρ εἰς τὰς χεῖρας, καὶ ὅτι ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθε καὶ πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν ὑπάγει, (¹¹⁵/_X)⁴ ἐγείρεται ἐκ τοῦ δείπνου, καὶ τίθησι τὰ ἱμάτια, καὶ λαβὼν λέντιον διέζωσεν ἑαυτὸν, ⁵ εἶτα βάλλει ὕδωρ εἰς τὸν νιπτῆρα, καὶ ἥρξατο νίπτειν τοὺς πόδας τῶν μαθητῶν, καὶ ἐκμάσσειν τῷ λεντίῳ ᾧ ἦν διεζωσμένος. ⁶ Ἐρχεται οὖν πρὸς Σίμωνα Πέτρον, καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ ἐκείνος, Κύριε, σὺ μού νίπτεις τοὺς πόδας; ⁷ Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Ὁ ἐγὼ ποιῶ σὺ οὐκ οἶδας ἄρτι, γνώσῃ δὲ μετὰ ταῦτα. ⁸ Λέγει αὐτῷ Πέτρος, Οὐ μὴ νύψῃς τοὺς πόδας μου εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ^d Ἐὰν μὴ νύψω σε, οὐκ ἔχεις μέρος μετ' ἐμοῦ. ⁹ Λέγει αὐτῷ Σίμων Πέτρος, Κύριε, μὴ τοὺς πόδας μου

d ch. 3. 5.
1 Cor. 6. 11.
Eph. 5. 26.
Tit. 3. 5.

— ἵνα μεταβῇ] that He should pass. The word pascha here used signifies passing-by, 'transitus,' μετάβασις. See on Matt. xxvi. 2; and the Evangelist seems to refer to this meaning, when he says that Jesus knew that the time had come, that He should pass to the Father. He is our true Passover (1 Cor. v. 7), for Whose sake the destroying Angel passes by us, and by whom we pass from the kingdom of the Evil one to the Kingdom of God, and from this world to a better. Cp. above on x. 40.

2. δείπνου γενομένου] when supper had begun. Our Lord had already reclined (see v. 12, ἀναπεσὼν πάλιν), and He rose from the couch to do this act (v. 4). The reason of this seems to be, that He desired thus to show that the act itself was an extraordinary one, and not like that of the usual washing before dinner, but had a spiritual sense, that it was symbolical of a spiritual purification by love. See note, v. 10. 14. 34. The inhabitants of Eastern countries bathed their bodies before they went out to dinner; and when they had come to the house of entertainment, their feet were cleansed with water from the dust they might have contracted in the way thither, and that they might not soil the cushions of the couch on which they reclined at meat. Cp. Luke vii. 44, and Welstein, p. 929.

The bodily washing had already taken place before supper (cp. Luke vii. 44; xi. 38); the washing which Christ now performed was of another kind. It had a mystical meaning, and an enlarged reference to the well-being of the Church in all places and ages. This was specially the character of His actions which immediately preceded the Crucifixion, or accompanied it, or followed it during His forty days' sojourn on earth. They are to be explained from the sequel. The clue to their interpretation may be found in His own words to St. Peter (v. 7), "What I do, thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter."

— τοῦ Διαβόλου ἥδη βεβληκότος] when the devil had already put into the heart of Judas to betray Him. This is introduced to show that our Lord deigned to wash the feet of him who was about to betray Him, and proves the malice of the traitor when in the hands of Satan; such an act of condescension on Christ's part could not move him from his purpose. (Chrys.) He Who sitteth above the Cherubim washed the feet of Judas.

3. εἰδὼς ὁ Ἰησοῦς] Observe—εἰδὼς repeated. See v. 1. He knew that His hour was come; He knew that the Father had given all things into His hands. He was conscious of man's ingratitude and of His own glory; and yet He did what He did now. The Evangelist says this, in a spirit of astonishment at Christ's humility, into Whose hands the Father had given all things, the traitor, and all His enemies and persecutors. (Cp. Chrys.)

The traitor was delivered into the hands of Him Whom he betrayed; and it was so ordered, under Christ's controlling power, that from the evil done by the traitor, that good, which he designed not, was elicited by Christ. Our Lord knew what He Himself was doing for His friends, in patiently availing Himself of His enemies. The Father had so given all things into His hands; even the worst things, for good use of them.

The Evangelist, being about to describe Christ's humility, first speaks of His exaltation, in order that we may remember from what a height of glory and majesty He stooped down to do the work of a servant. God gave all things into His hands, and yet He washed the feet of His Disciples, even of Judas, whom He foreknew as about to betray Him. (Cp. Origen, Aug., Gregor. Moral. iii. c. xii.)

4. ἐγείρεται ἐκ τοῦ δείπνου] He riseth from the supper. Observe ἐγείρεται, present tense. So τίθησι, βάλλει, ἔρχεται, λέγει: the whole is described and presented to the eye, with the graphic liveliness of a picture. He rises from the supper. By the word δείπνον, St. John refers the reader's mind to the δείπνον, the great δείπνον, the δείπνον Κυριακόν, the Lord's Supper, just instituted by Christ, and described by the preceding Evangelists. The act now described took place soon after that Institution.

— τίθησι τὰ ἱμάτια—ἐαυτὸν] He layeth aside His upper garment (see on Matt. xxvi. 65), and took a λέντιον (linteum), towel, and girded Himself.

He did not wash them before they had reclined, but after; He then rises (Chrys., see on v. 2) and girds himself; that is, He appears before them as a servant. Cp. Luke xii. 37; xvii. 8, where He says, "He shall gird Himself, and will come forth and serve them," and "gird thyself, and serve me, till I have eaten. Doth he thank that servant?"

To wash the feet, was to perform a servile act, especially of women. See 1 Sam. xxv. 41, "Let thine handmaid be a servant to wash the feet of thy servants." Luke vii. 38. 1 Tim. v. 10. Schemoth Rabba, sect. 20, fol. 119, qualis est consuetudo omnis terræ? Resp. Quisquis emit servos, ut se lavent, ungant, vestiant, gessent, et lucem praeferant: vid. Lightfootus et Schoettgenius ad h. l. Suet. Calig. c. 26, nihilo reuerentior leniorque erga senatum: quosdam summis honoribus functos—ad pedes stare succinctos linteo passus est.

Each of these actions was symbolical. The Everlasting Word, being in the form of God, divested Himself of His royal robe of heavenly dignity and glory, and "made Himself of no reputation, and took upon Him the form of a servant" (Phil. ii. 7); and as He said Himself (Luke xii. 27), "I am among you as he that serveth." He pours out water to wash His disciples' feet. He was about to pour out His blood to cleanse us from sin. He wipes the feet of His Disciples with the towel with which He was girded. He refreshes us by the Flesh with which He clothed Himself for our sakes. His Passion is our Purification. He commended to us humility by His example. We should have been lost for ever through pride, unless God, humbling Himself, had found us and saved us. (Luke xix. 10.) We had been lost, by following the pride of our Deceiver; let us, now that we are found, follow the humility of our Saviour. (Cp. Aug.) On these incidents see Williams, Holy Week, pp. 392—420.

5. βάλλει ὕδωρ εἰς τὸν νιπτῆρα] He poureth water into the basin. He does not employ any one else to do these menial works, but performs them all with His own Hand. (Chrys.) He alone cleanseth us from all sin. Cp. 1 John i. 7.

— νίπτειν τοὺς πόδας τῶν μαθητῶν] When the feet of the Disciples were washed by Christ, then it might be said that what was spoken prophetically of the Apostles was fulfilled, "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the Gospel of peace!" (Isa. lii. 7. Rom. x. 15.) (Origen.)

6. σὺ μού νίπτεις τοὺς πόδας:] Dost Thou, the Lord of all, wash the feet of me—thy unworthy servant? The pronouns σὺ and μού are emphatic.

7. Ὁ ἐγὼ ποιῶ σὺ οὐκ οἶδας ἄρτι] What I am doing, thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter. Our Lord thus intimates that there was something mystical in this act. See on v. 2. The word νίπτω is repeated eight times in these first fourteen verses. The Evangelist dwells upon it as containing a divine truth of great importance.

8. Οὐ μὴ—εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα] On this phrase, see viii. 51, 52. — Ἐὰν μὴ νύψω σε, οὐκ ἔχεις μέρος μετ' ἐμοῦ] If I wash μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰς χεῖρας, καὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν. ¹⁰ Δέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ὁ ^{e ch. 15. 3.} λελουμένος οὐκ ἔχει χρεῖαν ἢ τοὺς πόδας νύσασθαι, ἀλλ' ἔστι καθαρὸς ὅλος. Καὶ ὑμεῖς καθαροὶ ἐστε· ἀλλ' οὐχὶ πάντες. ¹¹ ἥδ' ἔτι γὰρ τὸν παραδιδόντα αὐτόν. ^{f ver. 18. ch. 6. 64, 70, 71. & 18. 4.} διὰ τοῦτο εἶπεν, Οὐχὶ πάντες καθαροὶ ἐστε.

¹² Ὅτε οὖν ἔνιψε τοὺς πόδας αὐτῶν, καὶ ἔλαβε τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ, ἀναπεσὼν ^{g ver. 6. 9. Matt. 23. 8, 10. Luke 2. 11. h Rom. 12. 10. i Pet. 5. 5.} πάλιν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Γινώσκετε τί πεποίηκα ὑμῖν; ^(¹¹⁸/_{III}) ¹³ ὅς γ' ὦμαι φωνεῖτέ με, ὁ διδάσκαλος, καὶ ὁ Κύριος, καὶ καλῶς λέγετε, εἰμὶ γάρ. ^(¹¹⁷/_X) ¹⁴ Εἰ οὖν ἐγὼ ἔνιψα ὑμῶν τοὺς πόδας, ὁ Κύριος καὶ ὁ διδάσκαλος, καὶ ὑμεῖς ὀφείλετε ἀλλήλων ^{i Luke 22. 27.} νίπτειν τοὺς πόδας. ¹⁵ ὅς γ' ὦμαι ὑμῖν, ἵνα καθὼς ἐγὼ ἐποίησα ὑμῖν, καὶ ὑμεῖς ποιήτε.

^(¹¹⁸/_{III}) ¹⁶ ὅς γ' ὦμαι ὑμῖν, οὐκ ἔστι δούλος μέιζων τοῦ κυρίου αὐτοῦ, ^{k ch. 15. 20. Matt. 10. 24. Luke 6. 40. i James 1. 25.} οὐδὲ ἀπόστολος μέιζων τοῦ πέμψαντος αὐτόν. ¹⁷ Εἰ ταῦτα οἴδατε, μακάριοί ^{m Ps. 41. 9.} ἐστε ἐὰν ποιήτε αὐτά.

^(¹¹⁹/_X) ¹⁸ Οὐ περὶ πάντων ὑμῶν λέγω· ἐγὼ οἶδα οὓς ἐξελεξάμην· ἀλλ' ἵνα ἡ ^{m Ps. 41. 9.} γραφὴ πληρωθῇ, Ὁ τρώγων μετ' ἐμοῦ τὸν ἄρτον ἐπὶ ἐμὲ τὴν

(νύψω) thee not, thou hast no part with Me. If I wash not thy feet, i. e. if I cleanse not thy affections, so that thou mayest walk aright, thou hast no share in Me and My glory. (Origen.) The unholy cannot enter into the mansions above, but only they who have their conscience cleansed by love of Christ, and are sanctified by the Spirit in holy Baptism. (Cyril.)

^{10.} Ὁ λελουμένος οὐκ ἔχει χρεῖαν ἢ τοὺς πόδας νύσασθαι] These words cannot be understood of a bodily washing, they must be interpreted spiritually;

Observe the words λελουμένος and νύσασθαι. One total, the other partial. He that hath been bathed by the waters of Baptism, λελουμένος λουτρῷ παλιγγενεσίας (Tit. iii. 5. Eph. v. 26. Heb. x. 22), is wholly washed, and needeth not but to wash his feet. (Aug.) After he has been bathed, once for all, in the laver of regeneration in Baptism, his affections are sullied by intercourse with the world, and contract dust and mire in his daily walk amid the cares and pleasures of life, he must therefore wash his feet by repentance, and cleanse his affections; “for if we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us; but if we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness” (1 John i. 8, 9).

He Who is ever making intercession for us (Heb. vii. 25), daily washes our feet; and we have daily need of washing our feet,—that is, of directing the paths of our spiritual steps, as we confess in the Lord's Prayer, “Forgive us our trespasses” (Matt. vi. 12).

They who have been bathed with the Baptism of Christ, and have their feet washed by Him, have a capacity to receive the cleansing graces of the Holy Ghost. (Cp. Origen.)

^{13.} φωνεῖτέ με, ὁ διδάσκαλος] ye call Me, Master. On this use of the nominative, see Luke xix. 29. 1 Sam. ix. 9, τὸν προφήτην ἐκάλε, ὁ λαός, ὁ βλέπων. (Winer, p. 164.)

^{14.} Εἰ οὖν ἐγὼ] If I then, your Lord and Master, washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet. Christ, as Lord, washed the feet of His servants; as Master or Teacher, He washed the feet of His Disciples, and gave them a lesson in both respects. Observe how the Word of God humbled Himself. Abraham gave water to the three men (Gen. xvii. 4); Joseph did the same to his brethren (Gen. xlii. 24); but neither of them did to them what Christ did to His Disciples. (Origen, who quotes Matt. xi. 29.)

Ye ought to wash one another's feet. This is to be understood figuratively. (Origen.) Sometimes it is done, literally, when Christians receive their brethren in hospitality (1 Tim. v. 10). It is done spiritually when we confess our faults to each other (James v. 16), and ask forgiveness one of another (Col. iii. 13). It is also done by those who are competent to teach others by Christian doctrine; they wash their feet, and make them clean by leading them from the impure ways of sin into the path of God's commandments. (Cp. Aug., Origen.)

It has been asked by some,—Are we not bound to imitate Christ's example, and to comply with His precept literally, in this particular? And if we are not bound to do so in this case—why are we bound to imitate and obey Him in other respects? If, after His example and command, we are justified in not washing one another's feet, may we not also decline to imitate and obey Him in other respects? Are we not also at liberty to set aside

His commandment, “Take eat, this is My Body; drink ye all of this?” May we not, in short, abstain from the Holy Communion?

What is the difference between the two cases?

The answer is: that the Holy Communion was instituted by Christ as the means for conveying what is necessary to all for the attainment of a permanent end; that is to say, for the reception of spiritual grace, which is requisite for everlasting salvation. And it has ever been regarded and observed as such by the Apostles of Christ, and by the Universal Church in all time; and therefore the administration and reception of the Holy Communion are things of universal and perpetual obligation, even to the end of Time. But this is not the case with the washing of feet. We do not find, that it was designed to be an instrument of conveying present grace for the attainment of future glory: or that it was ever regarded and observed as such by the Apostles and Apostolic Churches, who were the best Expositors of Christ's words and actions. It is therefore not obligatory on Christians, as to the letter; but all persons are ever bound to cherish the spirit which is embodied in this act; that is, to demean themselves to one another in lowliness and love. Rom. xii. 9, 10. Gal. v. 13, 14. 22. 1 Pet. v. 5. 1 John iii. 10, 11. 14. 16. 18. 23; iv. 7, 8. 11. 20, 21.

On this point see Hooker, E. P. I. xv., and III. x., and III. xi. 15—18.

Whatever was appointed and used by Christ or His Apostles (who were inspired by the Holy Ghost), for the attainment of necessary ends, that we must hold to be always necessary to be observed in the Church, even to the day of doom.

^{18.} Οὐ περὶ πάντων ὑμῶν λέγω] I am not speaking of you all. For He had said, “Ye are clean, but not all” (xii. 10, 11). Judas had been washed by Christ, but was not clean, as it is said, “Let him that is filthy be filthy still” (Rev. xxii. 11). The Eleven, when washed by Jesus, became more clean; but Judas, who was unclean, and into whom Satan had entered after the sop (xiii. 2), became more unclean. (Origen.)

—ἐγὼ οἶδα οὓς ἐξελεξάμην] I know whom I chose. Cp. John vi. 71. He does not openly upbraid the traitor, but speaks to his conscience; in order to show him that He knows his secret thoughts, and to deter him from his sin against One who thus proves Himself to be God.

—ἵνα ἡ γραφὴ πληρωθῇ] that the Scripture might have its full and final accomplishment. See on Matt. i. 22. St. Matthew's formula of quoting the Old Testament is ἵνα or ὥπως πληρωθῇ, or τότε ἐπληρώθη τὸ ῥηθὲν (“in order that what was spoken might be fulfilled”), which he uses ten times (i. 22; ii. 15. 17. 23; iv. 14; viii. 17; xii. 17; xiii. 35; xxi. 4; xxvii. 9), and which is never used by St. John, who employs the form ἵνα ἡ γραφὴ πληρωθῇ (in order that what is written might be fulfilled) four times (xiii. 18; xvii. 12; xix. 24. 36).

St. Matthew wrote specially for the Jewish Nation, to whom the Old Testament was delivered vivā voce; St. John wrote for those to whom it was a written volume.

—Ὁ τρώγων μετ' ἐμοῦ τὸν ἄρτον] Ps. xli. 9. St. John gives a paraphrase of the text, which is, ‘he that eateth my bread.’ See above, xii. 39. This is said in order that we may not be irritated by injuries from our friends, when we remember what Christ suffered from one who ate of His bread in the Lord's Supper. (Chrys. ibid. and Aug.) It is also corrective of the n ch. 14. 29.

& 16. 4.

o Matt. 10. 40.

p ch. 12. 27.
Matt. 26. 21.
Mark 14. 18.
Luke 22. 21.

q ch. 21. 20.
Luke 16. 22.
r ch. 19. 26.
& 20. 2.
& 21. 7, 20, 24.

πτέρναν αὐτοῦ. ^{19 n} Ἀπ' ἄρτι λέγω ὑμῖν πρὸ τοῦ γενέσθαι, ἵνα ὅταν γένηται πιστεύσητε ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμι.

(¹²⁰/_I) ^{20 o} Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, Ὁ λαμβάνων ἐάν τινα πέμψω ἐμὲ λαμβάνει· ὁ δὲ ἐμὲ λαμβάνων λαμβάνει τὸν πέμψαντά με.

(¹²¹/_{IV}) ^{21 p} Ταῦτα εἰπὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐταράχθη τῷ πνεύματι, καὶ ἐμαρτύρησε καὶ εἶπεν, Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι εἷς ἐξ ὑμῶν παραδώσει με.

(¹²²/_I) ²² Ἐβλεπον οὖν εἰς ἀλλήλους οἱ μαθηταὶ ἀπορούμενοι περὶ τίνος λέγει.

(¹²³/_X) ^{23 q} Ἦν δὲ ἀνακείμενος εἷς ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ ἐν τῷ κόλπῳ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, ὃν ἡγάπα ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ²⁴ νεύει οὖν τούτῳ Σίμων Πέτρος πυθέσθαι τίς ἂν εἴη περὶ οὗ λέγει. ²⁵ Ἐπιπεσὼν δὲ ἐκείνος οὕτως ἐπὶ τὸ στήθος τοῦ Ἰησοῦ λέγει αὐτῷ, Κύριε, τίς ἐστιν; (¹²⁴/_{IX}) ²⁶ Ἀποκρίνεται ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἐκεῖνός ἐστιν, ᾧ ἐγὼ βάψας τὸ ψωμίον ἐπιδώσω· καὶ ἐμβάψας τὸ ψωμίον δίδωσιν Ἰούδα spirit of ambition and rivalry which showed itself in the Twelve at this time, among whom there was a strife who of them should be greatest (Luke xxii. 24); and it inculcates humility and love as the fittest accompaniments of that holy Feast.

He says ὁ τρώγων μετ' ἐμοῦ τὸν ἄρτον, He that eateth with Me the Bread, the Sacramental Bread of the Holy Eucharist. (Cp. John vi. 54. 56. 58.) They (says Aug.), whom Christ had chosen, ate the Lord, Who is the Bread; Judas ate the Bread of the Lord ("illi manducabant panem Dominum, ille panem Domini, contra Dominum"). They ate Life; he ate Punishment; for the Apostle says (1 Cor. xi. 29), "He that eateth unworthily eateth to himself damnation." Peter and Judas received of one bread. Peter received it unto life; Judas unto death. (Cp. 2 Cor. ii. 16.)

Our Lord here refers to the Holy Communion just instituted by Himself. St. John does not describe the Institution of that Sacrament, because it had been already fully described in the preceding Gospels. His silence in this particular respect, as in many others, is an eloquent testimony to the completeness of their accounts. He supposes their Gospels to be familiar to his readers; and writes accordingly. At the time when he wrote, the Holy Communion had been administered many years. And by that administration the history of its Institution was kept alive in the minds of all Christians. In all probability, the Evangelic history of its Institution formed part of the Ritual of its celebration. Then therefore the time was come, when our Lord's prophetic teaching concerning the Holy Eucharist could be fully understood. Hence the fitness of the insertion of that teaching in the Gospel of St. John, in the sixth chapter (vv. 27—71).

Our Lord appears to refer here to what He had said before, as St. John records in that chapter. Compare v. 18 here with what He had said vi. 70, "Have I not chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil? He spake concerning Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, who would betray Him, being one of the Twelve." Thus He connects the Institution of the Holy Communion in the upper room at Jerusalem, with His prophetic discourse concerning it in the Synagogue at Capernaum. See above, p. 302, 303.

In this most eventful part of the history of our Lord's Ministry, St. John makes his own silence a more emphatic comment of approval on the narratives of the preceding Evangelists, by not recording a single action of our Lord on the Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday of Passion Week. He passes at once from the Triumphal Entry on Sunday to the Paschal Meal on Thursday Evening. See xii. 12; xiii. 1.

20. Ὁ λαμβάνων] He that receiveth whom I send, receiveth Me. An answer to the secret thoughts of His hearers, perhaps of Judas, and of others in all time. If one whom Thou hast chosen (v. 18) will betray Thee,—if one who eats Thy Sacramental bread with Thee will lift up his heel against Thee,—why didst Thou choose him? Why (might Judas think) didst Thou choose me?

Do not suppose that My purpose has been frustrated even in his ministry. Whosoever receives My Apostle in My Name,—even though he be a traitor,—receiveth Me. Here is an answer to the objection derived from Christ's choice of Judas. Here is a consolation to the Church in all ages, when evil men bear rule in her communion. See on Matt. x. 4.

21. ἐταράχθη τῷ πνεύματι] He was troubled in spirit. See on John xi. 33. He thought on the ingratitude and treachery of Judas and of his consequent doom; and He was now about to reveal the Traitor whom He had foreknown in His own mind, but had not yet disclosed to His Apostles. He was troubled by feelings of pity for him. Human infirmity was troubled in Him by a prospect of the violence that awaited Himself, and was now about to assail Him. Christ, Who transfigured the body of our humility to be like to His glory (Phil. iii. 21), transfigured into Himself the affection of our weakness through compassion for us; and when by His own will He is troubled, He consoles us who are troubled against our will. Away then with the arguments of Philosophers, who say that a wise man is not liable to be troubled. Let the soul of the Christian be troubled with fear lest others perish, with sorrow when others perish, with desire that others may not perish, with joy when others are saved from perishing, with fear lest we ourselves perish, with sorrow because we are absent from Christ. And let us not despair when we are troubled by a prospect of death; for Christ was troubled by it. Thus He cheers infirm members in His Body, the Church, by the voluntary example of His own infirmity; thus He encourages Christians, if they find themselves troubled by the prospect of death, and invites them to look to Him, and not to suppose themselves reprobate, if they are troubled as He was. (Cp. Aug.)

22. ἀπορούμενοι περὶ τίνος λέγει] being in doubt about whom He spake. See Matt. xxvi. 21, 22. Mark xiv. 18. Luke xxii. 23. They were not conscious of such a sin in themselves or others, but they believed the judgment of Christ to be more credible than their own thoughts. (Chrys.)

23. ἀνακείμενος εἷς] there was reclining at meat on Jesus' bosom one of His disciples, whom Jesus loved. This disciple was reclining on the bosom of Jesus, as He reclined at the table. See Luke xvi. 22. Thus St. John speaks of himself. Cp. xx. 2; xxi. 7. 20. He Who loved all His Disciples, loved him especially, and made him lean on His bosom at supper; perhaps, in order that He might specially commend to us the Gospel which He was about to deliver by St. John (Aug.), and which we receive from the mouth of him who imbibed wisdom from the lips of Christ.

St. John does not speak of himself by name, but in the third person; so St. Paul of himself (2 Cor. xii. 2). St. John was writing for the whole world, and by mentioning his own name he might have made his name celebrated in the world; but he shuns the mention of his own name. "Optabilis est amari ab Jesu, quam nomine proprio celebrari." (Beng.)

If thou desirest to be loved by Jesus, and to recline on the bosom of Jesus, and to know divine mysteries, imitate the innocence, and meekness, and gentleness, the modesty and simplicity of St. John; and receive those divine words which the Evangelist, who leaned on His bosom at supper, drank in from the mouth of Christ. (Cp. Theoph.)

24. πυθέσθαι τίς ἂν εἴη] So Elz. with A, D, E, F, G, K, M, S, U, Δ, Δ; but B, C, L, N, X have καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ εἰπέ τίς ἐστι. 25. Ἐπιπεσὼν] Having leant back upon His breast. So A, C*, D, E, F, G, H, M, S, U, Δ, Δ. Some MSS. (B, C*, K, L, X) have ἀναπιεσθῶν. John was already reclining ἐν τῷ κόλπῳ, on the bosom (v. 23), but he now leant back, more closely ἐπὶ τὸ στήθος, on His breast, and whispered the question into the ear of His Master.

It appears from this chapter that our Lord Himself and His disciples did not sit nor kneel at the Holy Communion, but reclined;

Hence arises the question, On what grounds do Christian Churches now require persons to do what our Lord did not do, i. e. to kneel at the Lord's Table? And on what ground do they celebrate the Lord's Supper at a different time of day from that on which He celebrated it at its first institution?

For a reply to these inquiries, which have led to conflicts in the Church in our own land, see Hooker, III. x. xi., and Bp. Sanderson, Lectures on Conscience, Lect. iii. § 19, vol. iv. pp. 55. 278, and vol. ii. 136. 159; iii. 235. 301.

—οὕτως] See iv. 6.

26. ψωμίον] the sop—which He held in His hand. ψωμίον

Σίμωνος Ἰσκαριώτῃ. (¹⁹⁵/_x) ²⁷ Καὶ μετὰ τὸ ψωμίον τότε εἰσῆλθεν εἰς ἐκεῖνον ὁ Σατανᾶς. Λέγει οὖν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ὁ ποιεῖς, ποιήσον τάχιον. ²⁸ Τοῦτο δὲ οὐδεὶς ἔγνω τῶν ἀνακειμένων πρὸς τί εἶπεν αὐτῷ. ²⁹ τινὲς γὰρ ἐδόκουν, ἐπεὶ τὸ γλωσσόκομον εἶχεν ὁ Ἰούδας, ὅτι λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἀγόρασον ὧν χρεῖαν ἔχομεν εἰς τὴν ἑορτὴν, ἣ τοῖς πτωχοῖς ἵνα τι δῶ. ³⁰ Λαβὼν οὖν τὸ ψωμίον ἐκεῖνος εὐθέως ἐξῆλθεν· ἦν δὲ νύξ.

³¹ Ὅτε ἐξῆλθε, λέγει ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Νῦν ἔδοξάσθη ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς ἐδοξάσθη ἐν αὐτῷ. ³² Ἐὶ ὁ Θεὸς ἐδοξάσθη ἐν αὐτῷ, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς δοξάσει αὐτὸν ἐν ἑαυτῷ, καὶ εὐθὺς δοξάσει αὐτόν. ³³ Ὑ Τεκνία, ἔτι μικρὸν μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμι· ζητήσετέ με, καὶ καθὼς εἶπον τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, ὅτι ὅπου ἐγὼ ὑπάγω, ὑμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἐλθεῖν, καὶ ὑμῖν λέγω ἄρτι. ³⁴ Ὑ Ἐντολὴν καινὴν δίδωμι ὑμῖν, ἵνα ἀγαπάτε ἀλλήλους, καθὼς ἡγάπησα ὑμᾶς, ἵνα καὶ ὑμεῖς ἀγαπάτε ἀλλήλους. ³⁵ Ἐν

s ch. 12. 6.
t ch. 12. 23.
& 14. 13.
& 17. 1, 4.
1 Cor. 1. 30, 31.
Phil. 2. 10, 11.
1 Pet. 4. 11.
u ch. 17. 1, 5, 6.
v ch. 7. 33, 34.
& 8. 21. & 14. 19.
& 16. 16.
w ch. 15. 12, 17.
Lev. 19. 18.
1 John 2. 7, 8.
& 3. 11.
& 4. 16, 21.
James 2. 8.
Gal. 6. 2.
Rom. 12. 10.
Eph. 5. 2.
1 Thess. 4. 9.
Heb. 13. 1.
1 Pet. 1. 22.
& 3. 8.

(from ψάω, rado, frango) is used by LXX for πῆ (path), 'frustum,' a morsel. (Jud. xix. 5. Ruth ii. 14.) In the N. T. it is only used by St. John here and 27. 30. It is now the usual word (ψῶμι) in Greece for bread,—as ψᾶρι (ὀψάριον), a word used only by St. John in N. T. (vi. 9. 11; xxi. 9, 10, 13), is the common word for fish.

Ψωμίον non tantum de frustulo panis adhibetur (et sic h. l. Vulg. Syrus et Arabs hoc vocabulum intellexerunt), sed et omnis generis esculentorum frusta, sive buccellas designat. Schol. Hom. Odys. i. 374, ψῶμοι· σάρκες, μέλη. In versione Alexandrina Job. xxii. 7, ψῶμος respondet Hebr. עֲרֵב panis. Suidas: ψῶμός· ὁ ἄρτος. Etiam verbum ψωμίζω quo Alexandrini interpretes expresserunt Hebraicum מִנְחָה Num. xi. 4. 18. Deut. viii. 3. 16. Prov. xxv. 21, notat omnino: vescendum cibum præbere, nutrire. Hesychius: ψωμιεῖ· τρέφει. (Kuini.) Cp. 1 Cor. xiii. 3.

To give a ψωμίον at an Eastern Repast was an ordinary mark of friendship, and would not have attracted any attention. It was in this case like our Lord's word to Judas, ἔραψε (Matt. xxvi. 50).

It has been supposed by some, that as John was doubtless next our Lord, on His right hand (vv. 23. 25), so Judas was on His left hand. (Cp. Matt. xxv. 33, 34. Luke xxiii. 33.) Certainly Judas must have been very near Jesus; for no one could have heard the reply. (Matt. xxvi. 25.)

We are not to suppose that when Judas received the sop he received the Body of Christ, says Aug., for Christ had already distributed to all the Sacrament of His Body and Blood, and among them to Judas, as St. Luke relates (xxii. 19—21). The act of giving the sop was one of kindness. Judas, though admitted to the same table with Christ, was not deterred from his design, although Christ gave him this mark of love, which ought to have overwhelmed him with shame. (Aug., Chrys.) — Ἰσκαριώτῃ B, C, L, M, N, X, have Ἰσκαριώτων.

²⁷. τότε εἰσῆλθεν ε. ἐ. ὁ Σατανᾶς] At first, Satan did not enter in, but only put it into the heart of Judas to betray his Master. (John xiii. 2.) But Judas gave place to the Devil (Eph. iv. 27), instead of resisting him (James iv. 7). After the sop, Satan entered in, and possessed Judas as his own.

Let us be on our guard against the first suggestions of Satan. If he puts evil into our hearts and we resist not, he will enter in and dwell there (Origen, who quotes Matt. xxv. 29. Luke x. 6. 2 Cor. vi. 15. Rev. xxii. 11, on the effect of good things on evil men). Hence learn how dangerous it is to receive good things ill. (Aug.)

Observe the contrast, μετὰ τὸ ψωμίον, εἰσῆλθεν ὁ Σατανᾶς, and v. 30, λαβὼν τὸ ψωμίον, εὐθέως ἐξῆλθε. When Satan entered into him, he went out from the presence of Christ, as Cain went out from the presence of the Lord. Gen. iv. 16. (Burgon.)

Here also is a proof of St. John's inspiration. Who could reveal to him the successive invisible operations of the Evil One on the heart of Judas, except the Holy Spirit, Who seeth all things, even the hidden things of darkness? The Holy Spirit alone knows the wiles of the Evil Spirit.

— ποιήσον τάχιον] do more quickly. "Non jubet facere, sed, si facere pertendat, maturare. Judas ex hoc radio Omniscientiæ poterat sentire se nosci." (Bengel.) On the sense of this imperative see on ii. 19. Our Lord did not command the deed, but prophesied,—to Judas evil, to us good; and showed His own readiness to suffer, and His eagerness to save. Judas delivered up Christ. Christ delivered up Himself. (Gal. ii. 20.) By delivering up Christ, Judas sold himself to death; by delivering up Himself, Christ delivered us from death. (Aug.)

VOL. I.

²⁸. οὐδεὶς ἔγνω] no one knew. It appears that John had asked the question privately, and none could believe that Judas was going out to betray his Master. (Chrys.)

²⁹. τὸ γλωσσόκομον εἶχεν] he kept the purse. See on xii. 6. Christ had a Purse, and kept there what was requisite for His own needs, and for the Poor. Here is the primitive form of a Church Fund; and thence we learn that when Christ commanded us not to be careful about to-morrow (Matt. vi. 34), He did not forbid us to possess money, but He forbade us to serve God in the hope of gaining it, or to forsake righteousness for fear of losing it. (Aug., who refers to 1 Tim. v. 16.) See on Acts ii. 44; iv. 32—35.

³⁰. ἐξῆλθεν] he went out. See on v. 27. — ἦν δὲ νύξ] it was night. A proof that Judas was present at the Holy Communion which followed the Paschal feast, in the evening. On St. John's notice of times and seasons in connexion with human actions, and in relation to Christ, see on x. 22. Some MSS. and Editions connect ἦν δὲ νύξ with what follows; but the mention of the time is made more impressive by the termination of the sentence at νύξ. And the glorification of Christ by the going out of the Tempter is also rendered more emphatic by the connexion of ὅτε ἐξῆλθε with λέγει, and so Aug.

³¹. Νῦν ἐδοξάσθη] When Judas goes out, Jesus is glorified; when the Son of Perdition goes out, the Son of Man is glorified. Jesus, foreknowing His Disciples, had said, "Ye are clean, but not all; for He knew who should betray Him" (John xiii. 10); and now that he is gone out, they remain all clean with Him Who cleanses them. He foresees that future time of glory, when all things that offend shall be taken away from His Church (Matt. xiii. 41); when all the tares will be gathered up, and the Wheat alone will remain; "and the righteous shall shine as the sun in the kingdom of their Father" (Matt. xiii. 43). (Aug.)

He says the Son of Man is glorified; for the glory of which He speaks is not the glory of Christ reigning as God, but the glory now to be acquired by Him as Man, and as a reward for His sufferings on the Cross (Phil. ii. 8, 9), "by which He spoiled principalities and powers, and made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in it" (Col. ii. 14, 15); and God reconciled all things to Himself, "having made peace through the blood of the Cross by Christ" (Col. i. 20). (Cp. Origen.) Thus also He raises the minds of the Disciples, which had been depressed by sorrow. (Chrys.)

³⁴. Ἐντολὴν καινὴν] A new command. Our Lord having told His Apostles that they cannot yet come where He is, and cannot follow Him now, but will follow Him afterwards (vv. 33. 36), now proceeds to point out the way (1 Cor. xii. 31),—the more excellent way by which they must follow Him, the way of love; and He therefore says, a new commandment I give unto you.

But how was it new? Was it not commanded in the old law, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself?" (Lev. xix. 18.) Why then is it called a new commandment? Because, He adds, as I loved you; this is a new commandment, to love as Christ loves us—who were enemies and rebels against Him. And yet He died for us. And it is new, because this love renews us, makes us new creatures, heirs of the new covenant, and singers of a new song. This love renewed the Apostles, and renews Nations throughout the world, and knits together a New People,—namely, the body of the newly-married Spouse of the only-begotten Son of God; and by reason of this New Commandment her members are eager for each other's welfare; and if one member suffer, or one rejoice, the others suffer and rejoice with it (1 Cor. xii. 26). And they love one another, not as men love τοῦτ᾽ αὖ γινώσκονται πάντες ὅτι ἐμοὶ μαθηταὶ ἔστε, ἐὰν ἀγάπην ἔχητε ἐν ἀλλήλοις.

 (126) ³⁶ x λέγει αὐτῷ Σίμων Πέτρος, Κύριε, ποῦ ὑπάγεις; Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ὅπου ὑπάγω, οὐ δύνασαι μοι νῦν ἀκολουθῆσαι ὕστερον δὲ ἀκολουθήσεις μοι. ³⁷ λέγει αὐτῷ Πέτρος, Κύριε, διατί οὐ δύναμαί σοι ἀκολουθῆσαι ἄρτι; τὴν ψυχὴν μου ὑπὲρ σοῦ θήσω. ³⁸ y Ἀποκρίνεται Ἰησοῦς, Τὴν ψυχὴν σου ὑπὲρ ἐμοῦ θήσεις; ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω σοι, οὐ μὴ ἀλέκτωρ φωνήσῃ ἕως οὗ ἀπαρνήσῃ με τρίς.

XIV. (127) ¹ a Μὴ ταρασσέσθω ὑμῶν ἡ καρδιά· ^b πιστεύετε εἰς τὸν Θεόν, καὶ εἰς ἐμὲ πιστεύετε· ² c ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ τοῦ Πατρὸς μου μοναὶ πολλαὶ εἰσιν· εἰ δὲ μὴ, εἶπον ἂν ὑμῖν ὅτι πορεύομαι ἐτοιμάσαι τόπον ὑμῖν. ³ d Καὶ ἐὰν πορευθῶ καὶ ἐτοιμάσω ὑμῖν τόπον, πάλιν ἔρχομαι καὶ παραλήψομαι ὑμᾶς πρὸς ἐμναυτόν· ἵνα ὅπου εἰμὶ ἐγὼ καὶ ὑμεῖς ᾔητε. ⁴ Καὶ ὅπου ἐγὼ ὑπάγω οἴδατε, καὶ τὴν ὁδὸν οἴδατε. ⁵ λέγει αὐτῷ Θωμᾶς, Κύριε, οὐκ οἶδαμεν ποῦ ὑπάγεις· καὶ πῶς δυνάμεθα τὴν ὁδὸν εἰδέναι; ⁶ e λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ὁδὸς, καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια, καὶ ἡ ζωὴ· οὐδεὶς ἔρχεται πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα, εἰ μὴ δι' ἐμοῦ. ⁷ f Εἰ ἐγνώκετε μὲ, καὶ τὸν Πατέρα μου ἐγνώκετε ἂν· ⁸ g καὶ ἀπ' ἄρτι γινώσκετε αὐτόν, καὶ ἐωράκατε αὐτόν. ⁸ λέγει αὐτῷ Φίλιππος, Κύριε, δεῖξον ἡμῖν τὸν Πατέρα, καὶ ἀρκεῖ ἡμῖν. ⁹ h λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Τοσοῦτον χρόνον μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμι, men, but as children of God, and brethren and sisters in Christ, with the love with which Christ loved us. (Cp. Aug., Chrys.)

And what did He love in us?—God; not Whom we had in us, but He loved us in order that we might have Him in us. So let us love our brother that he may have God in himself. He who loves his neighbour with a divine love, as Christ loved us, what does he love in him but God? (Aug.) By loving God in man our life is hid with Christ in God, and love thus becomes a death to the world and a life unto God. 'O God' (says Aug. Conf. 9), 'blessed is the man who loves Thee, and his friend in Thee, and his enemy for the sake of Thee.'

³⁵ 'Ἐν τούτῳ γινώσκονται] Here is the true "Note of the Church," Love; Love of God and of Man in God and for God. "What would the Apostles say, if they heard men propounding almost any other 'notes of the Church' than that which was given by Christ?" (Grot.) Christ does not say that they shall be known to be His Disciples by their power of working miracles, but by Love. (Theoph.)

³⁶ οὐ δύνασαι] thou canst not follow Me now, but thou shalt follow Me afterwards. Thou canst not follow Me now, because thou relyest now on thine own strength. Now therefore thou art weak. But when thou art humbled, and trustest in Me, and not in thyself, then thou wilt be strong; then thou wilt be able to follow Me. And therefore our Lord said to him afterwards, "Follow thou Me" (xxi. 19. 22). Thou canst not now be a Peter, for the Petra (or Rock) has not yet consolidated thee with His Spirit; but hereafter thou shalt follow Me by dying on the cross, as I shall die for thee. See on John xxi. 18, 19.

—ὕστερον—μοι] B, C*, L, X have ἀκολουθήσεις δὲ ὕστερον. ³⁷ τὴν ψυχὴν μου ὑπὲρ σοῦ θήσω] Peter imagined that he would lay down his life for Christ; whereas Christ had come to lay down His life for all, among whom was Peter. Peter imagined that he could precede his Guide. Presumptuous supposition! It was necessary that Christ should first lay down His life for the salvation of Peter, before Peter could be able to lay down his life for the Gospel of Christ. But when Christ had died for Peter, and redeemed him by His own Blood, and had risen from the dead, then Peter was able to follow Christ, even to the cross. (Aug.)

CH. XIV. 1. Μὴ ταρασσέσθω] This discourse was uttered at table after the celebration of the Lord's Supper. (See v. 31.)

—πιστεύετε εἰς τὸν Θεόν, καὶ εἰς ἐμὲ πιστεύετε] A proof of Christ's Divinity. The word πιστεύετε, followed by εἰς and an accusative, as here, when said of a person in the N. T., is never applied to a man, but only to God. See Vorst. de Hebr. p. 676.

If ye believe in God, ye must also believe in Me; because I am God. The prospect of My death makes you fearful. I have taken the form of a servant, but I am in the form of God (Phil. ii. 6). As God, I will raise Myself, Who am Man. Let not therefore your heart be troubled. (Aug.)

² μοναὶ πολλαὶ] many mansions; μοναί, mansiones; for there alone we have a continuing city, μένουσαν πόλιν (Heb. xiii. 14).

One of Christ's Disciples may be more holy, more wise, more righteous than another; but none of His Disciples will be excluded from that paternal house, where every child of God will have a mansion proportioned to the use he has made of the grace given him in this life. The term 'many mansions' signifies that there will be different degrees of felicity in the same eternity, as there are stars differing from one another in glory in the same sky, "So is the Resurrection of the dead" (1 Cor. xv. 41, 42). See above on Luke xix. 17.

So God will be all in all; and since God is Love, the effect of Love will be that what each has severally, will be common to all; there will be no envy arising from disparity of glory, since the unity of love will reign in all. (Aug.)

—πορεύομαι ἐτοιμάσαι τόπον ὑμῖν] Christ πορεύεται, sets out on a journey, to prepare a place for us. Let Him then depart; let Him ascend, and not be visible to the bodily eye; let Him be hidden from it, that thus He may be seen by the eye of faith; and being so seen, may be desired; and being desired, may be possessed for ever; the desire of our Love is the preparation of our house in heaven. (Aug.)

³ πορευθῶ] I shall have made My journey, from earth to heaven. See xiv. 12. 28; xvi. 7.

⁶ Ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ὁδὸς, καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια, καὶ ἡ ζωὴ] "Ego sum Via, Veritas, Vita." From the verb of existence, εἰμι, as used here and in other places of St. John's Gospel, S. Athanasius (p. 329) infers the eternal existence of Christ, ἐν τῷ εἰμι τὸ αἰδιον τοῦ νου σημαίνεται.

I am the Way, by which you desire to go; the Truth, to which you desire to come; the Life, in which you desire to remain.

The Eternal Word, Who being with the Father, is the Truth and the Life, became the Way to us by taking our nature. Walk therefore in Him Who is Man, that you may come to Him Who is God. (Aug. Sermon. 141.) He Who is the Way cannot lead us astray; He Who is the Truth cannot deceive; He Who is the Life cannot desert us in death. (Hilary, de Trin. vii. 9. Chrys.) He is the Way—by Doctrine, by Example, by Suffering (Heb. x. 20), by Prayer.

You need not inquire for the Way. He Who is the Way has come to you. Arise and walk. Walk in the Way. Many run, but do not run in the Way. 'Melius est claudicare in viâ, quam currere extra viam;' it is better to limp in the Way, than to run out of the Way. (Aug. Sermon. ibid.)

He said before, "No one can come to Me, except the Father, which hath sent Me, draw him" (John vi. 44). He now says, "No one can come to the Father but by Me," making Himself equal with the Father. "If ye had known Me, ye would have known the Father." They had known Him, but not rightly; but afterwards the Holy Spirit would come and give them true knowledge; and therefore He adds, "hereafter ye shall know Him." (Chrys.; see also Aug. Sermon. 141, 142.)

⁹ Τοσοῦτον χρόνον μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμι] Have I been so long time with you, and yet dost thou not know Me, Philip? To walk on the waves, to command the winds, to forgive sins, to raise the καὶ οὐκ ἔγνωκās με, Φίλιππε; ὁ ἑωρακώς ἐμὲ ἑώρακε τὸν Πατέρα· καὶ πῶς σὺ λέγεις, Δείξον ἡμῖν τὸν Πατέρα; ^{10 i} Οὐ πιστεύεις ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ Πατρὶ, καὶ ὁ ^{i ver. 20.} Πατὴρ ἐν ἐμοί ἐστι; Τὰ ῥήματα ἃ ἐγὼ λαλῶ ὑμῖν ἀπ' ἑμαντοῦ οὐ λαλῶ· ὁ δὲ ^{ch. 10. 32, 36, 38.} Πατὴρ ὁ ἐν ἐμοὶ μένων αὐτὸς ποιεῖ τὰ ἔργα. ¹¹ Πιστεῦτέ μοι ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ Πατρὶ, καὶ ὁ Πατὴρ ἐν ἐμοί· εἰ δὲ μὴ, διὰ τὰ ἔργα αὐτὰ πιστεῦτέ μοι. ¹² Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ, τὰ ἔργα ἃ ἐγὼ ποιῶ κάκεινος ποιήσει, ^{j ch. 15. 7, 16. & 16. 23, 24. & ver. 14.} καὶ μείζονα τούτων ποιήσει, ὅτι ἐγὼ πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα μου πορεύομαι, ^{Matt. 7. 7. & 18. 20. & 28. 18.} (128 ^{IV}) ^{13 j} καὶ ὁ ^{2 Cor. 12. 8, 9.} τι ἂν αἰτήσητε ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου, τοῦτο ποιήσω· ἵνα δοξασθῇ ^{Mark 11. 24. 1 John 5. 14. k ver. 21. 23.} ὁ Πατὴρ ἐν τῷ Υἱῷ. ¹⁴ Ἐάν τι αἰτήσητε ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου, ἐγὼ ποιήσω. ^{15 k} Ἐὰν ἀγαπάτέ με, τὰς ἐντολὰς τὰς ἐμὰς τηρήσατε· ¹⁶ καὶ ἐγὼ ἐρωτήσω τὸν Πατέρα, καὶ ἄλλον Παράκλητον δώσει ὑμῖν ἵνα μένη μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰς τὸν dead; these are acts of God, and these acts were done by Christ in the presence of His Disciples. He therefore reproves Philip because he had seen Him do these mighty works by His own authority, and yet did not recognize the Divine nature dwelling in Him Who had taken the nature of man. (Hilary, de Trin. vii.)

Philip saw Christ's Body, but he did not yet know Him as God. Philip thought that he had seen the Son of God, because he had seen His body; and he now wished to see the Father; but Christ tells him that he had not yet seen, i. e. known, the Son aright; and if he did see Him aright, i. e. as God, he would see the Father, Who is consubstantial with the Son. (Chrys.)

— ὁ ἑωρακώς ἐμὲ ἑώρακε τὸν Πατέρα] he that hath seen Me hath seen the Father. Some have perverted these words into an occasion of the Sabellian Heresy. (Chrys.) On the ill use made of them by the Noetian School at Rome, under Zephyrinus and Callistus, see S. Hippolytus, Philosophumena, p. 289, ed. Miller, and the present Editor's notes, p. 261, and cp. S. Hippol. c. Noet. § 7, where he vindicates the true sense of this text. See also S. Cyril here. He that hath seen Me, hath seen the Father. Not that I am both Father and Son (the Error of the Patripassians, and Noetians, and Sabellians), but because the Son is co-equal with the Father. He reproves Philip for desiring to see the Father, as if the Father were greater than the Son; and because Philip did not know the Son aright, in that he thought that another Person was greater than the Son. Therefore our Lord said, "Dost thou not believe that I am in the Father and the Father in Me?" (Aug.) We acknowledge the nature of God subsisting in Christ, since God is in God, and there is no other God besides Him Who is in God. (Hilary, de Trin. v.) He who sees My divine substance, sees the substance of the Father. Whence it is clear that Christ is not a creature, for they who see the creature see not God. Christ is therefore consubstantial with the Father. (Chrys.)

10. ἀπ' ἑμαντοῦ οὐ λαλῶ] I speak not from Myself, alone: I say nothing contrary to, or independent of, My Father. (Chrys. on John xvi. 15.)

11. διὰ τὰ ἔργα αὐτὰ πιστεῦτέ μοι] believe Me for the very works' sake. Not only for those which I do on earth, when present in My human nature, but for those works, which after My Ascension, I shall enable others to do, thus showing My divine power, and coequality with the Father. (Chrys., Aug.)

12. μείζονα τούτων ποιήσει] He shall do greater works than these. Behold the power of the Only-begotten Son. He, when absent from Earth in body, can give to others the ability to do greater works than He Himself did while He was on earth. And by adding, "Whatsoever ye shall ask in My Name, I will do," He showed that these other works would be done by His power. (Cp. Theoph.) What were these greater works? Such as the healing of the sick by the shadow of Peter (Acts v. 15), and by handkerchiefs from the body of Paul (Acts xix. 12), and the speaking in new tongues, (we do not hear that Christ ever spoke in a foreign language,) and the conversion of the world by their means. Jesus Christ, in heaven, did all these things by means of His Disciples on earth; He enabled them to do them. He did more when He preached by them after His Ascension than He had done by speaking in person to those who heard Him on earth. (Cp. Aug.) He declares the reason of this in these words, "because I go to the Father." These mighty Works were due to the gift of the Holy Ghost, which Christ obtained for His Church by suffering, and which He received on His Ascension and Session at the right hand of the Majesty on High, when He had gone to the Father.

See below, the Introduction to the ACTS of the APOSTLES, p. vii—xxxiii, where it is shown that the design of the Holy Spirit in that book is to reveal CHRIST glorified in heaven, and working by means of His Apostles, and other Ministers, upon earth.

This promise of Christ was not only true, as was just said, in the Apostolic age after the Ascension, but it is ever true in the Church. "He that believeth in Me shall do greater works than those which I do here." See the power of Faith! As the Apostle says, "To him that believeth on Him that justifieth the ungodly, his Faith is counted for Righteousness" (Rom. iv. 5),—that is, it justifies him; it is the hand which applies the merits of Christ for the forgiveness of our own sins, and for our acceptance with God. Herein we do the work of Christ, for to believe in Christ is the work of Christ. And to be justified is more than to be created. This is the work done when the ungodly is justified, and his faith is counted to him for righteousness. This work is wrought by Christ in him, but not without him, and this is a greater work than even to create heaven and earth. For heaven and earth will pass away, but the Justification and Salvation of God's elect abideth for ever. And Christ inspires us with lively faith and hope when we pray to Him, by adding, "Because I go to the Father;" and, "Whatsoever ye ask in My Name, I will do it." (Cp. Aug.)

This promise of Christ is fulfilled in His Ministers, when by the working of the Holy Ghost in the Word and Sacraments they raise the dead to life eternal.

13. ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου] in My Name. Therefore the Apostles said, when working miracles, "In the Name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk." (Acts iii. 6.) He, sitting in heaven, wrought all the miracles which were worked by their agency on earth; "the Hand of the Lord was with them," enabling them to do what they did. Mark xvi. 19, 20. Acts iv. 30; xi. 21; xiii. 11. (Chrys.)

14. ἐγὼ ποιήσω] I will do it. ἐγὼ is emphatic. Whatsoever ye ask in My Name, i. e. in submission to My Will; and conducive to your own salvation and to God's glory, which are purposed by My Will, I will do it. St. Paul asked that the thorn in his flesh might be removed (2 Cor. xii. 8), but his prayer was not granted, because it was more expedient for him that he should have grace to bear it. (Cp. Aug.)

15, 16.] On this text see the Sermon of Bp. Andrewes, iii. 145.

16. ἄλλον Παράκλητον] another Paraclete.

The word παράκλητος, Paraclete, as used in the N. T., represents two Hebrew words;

מְנַחֵם (menachem), 'a Comforter,' for which the LXX had used παρακλητωρ in Job xvi. 2; cf. Zech. i. 13. One of the Names of the Messiah was Menahem. See Lightfoot, who refers to Luke ii. 25, the consolation of Israel.

מְלִיצִי (melits), an Interpreter or Mediator, an Advocate called in to plead a cause, or a friendly assistant in a judicial suit; for which the Chaldee Paraphrasts use מְלִיצִי (praelit), i. e. παράκλητος. (Job xvi. 20; xxxiii. 23. Cf. Buxtorf, Lex. Talm. p. 1843.) Hence παράκλητος sometimes signifies, as here, one who consoles or comforts, by counsel and aid (see below, xv. 26), and sometimes one who mediates or interprets, and presents petitions to another, as an Intercessor. The word παρακαλεῖν is used in the LXX and N. T. in the sense of beseech, exhort, comfort, summon. (Ps. xxii. 5. Matt. viii. 5. Luke vii. 4. Acts xxviii. 20. 1 Thess. ii. 11; iii. 2. 2 Cor. i. 4. 1 Tim. vi. 2. Tit. ii. 15.)

Christ Himself is called a Paraclete or Advocate by St. John. "We have an Advocate (Παράκλητον) with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous." (1 John ii. 1.)

Some have attempted to limit the sense of Παράκλητος in the New Testament to 'Advocatus,' or 'Adjutor.' But the word is one of large acceptance. And it was probably chosen for that reason, as best signifying the manifold gifts and offices of the Holy Ghost (1 Cor. xii. 3—11), as the Sanctifier, Teacher, Comforter, Exhorter, Remembrancer, Inspirer, Enlightener, Counsellor, i ch. 15. 26.

& 16. 13.
1 John 5. 6.
m ver. 16.
Rom. 8. 9, 14—16.
1 Cor. 3. 16.
& 6. 19.
n ch. 15. 26.
1 John 4. 6.
o Matt. 18. 20.
& 23. 20.
p 2 Cor. 5. 6—8.
Heb. 12. 1—3.
q 1 Pet. 1. 8.
ch. 6. 57.
& 10. 28.
& 15. 4—6.
Col. 3. 3, 4.
Rom. 8. 3, 10, 11.
r Matt. 10. 3.
Luke 6. 16.
s Rev. 3. 20.
t ch. 12. 26.
& 16. 26, 27.
& 17. 26.
2 Thess. 2. 16, 17.
1 John 3. 1.

u Luke 24. 49.
ch. 15. 26.
& 16. 7.

v Rom. 8. 6.
& 16. 17.
2 Cor. 1. 3—5.
Phil. 4. 6, 7.
Hagg. 2. 9.
2 Thess. 3. 16.
w ver. 3, 18.
ch. 10. 29.
x ch. 13. 19.
& 12. 16.

αἰῶνα, ¹⁷ τὸ Πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας, ὃ ὁ κόσμος οὐ δύναται λαβεῖν, ὅτι οὐ θεωρεῖ αὐτὸ, οὐδὲ γινώσκει αὐτό· ὑμεῖς δὲ γινώσκετε αὐτὸ, ^m ὅτι παρ' ὑμῖν μένει, καὶ ἐν ὑμῖν ἔσται. ¹⁸ οὐκ ἀφήσω ὑμᾶς ὀρφανούς· ἔρχομαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς.

¹⁹ ὅτι ἔτι μικρὸν, καὶ ὁ κόσμος με οὐκ ἔτι θεωρεῖ, ^p ὑμεῖς δὲ θεωρεῖτέ με· ^q ὅτι ἐγὼ ζῶ, καὶ ὑμεῖς ζήσεσθε. ²⁰ Ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ γνώσεσθε ὑμεῖς ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ Πατρὶ μου, καὶ ὑμεῖς ἐν ἐμοὶ, καὶ ἐν ὑμῖν. ²¹ Ὁ ἔχων τὰς ἐντολάς μου καὶ τηρῶν αὐτάς ἐκεῖνός ἐστιν ὁ ἀγαπῶν με· ⁽¹²⁹⁾ ὁ δὲ ἀγαπῶν με ἀγαπηθήσεται ὑπὸ τοῦ Πατρὸς μου· καὶ ἐμφανίσω αὐτῷ ἐμάντον. ⁽¹³⁰⁾ ²² λέγει αὐτῷ Ἰούδας, οὐχ ὁ Ἰσκαριώτης, Κύριε καὶ τί γέγονεν, ὅτι ἡμῖν μέλλεις ἐμφανίζειν σεαυτὸν, καὶ οὐχὶ τῷ κόσμῳ; ²³ Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Ἐάν τις ἀγαπᾷ με, τὸν λόγον μου τηρήσει· καὶ ὁ Πατήρ μου ἀγαπήσει αὐτὸν, καὶ πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐλευσόμεθα, καὶ μονὴν παρ' αὐτῷ ποιήσομεν. ²⁴ ὁ μὴ ἀγαπῶν με τοὺς λόγους μου οὐ τηρεῖ· ⁽¹³¹⁾ καὶ ὁ λόγος ὃν ἀκούετε οὐκ ἔστιν ἐμὸς, ἀλλὰ τοῦ πέμψαντός με Πατρὸς.

²⁵ Ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν παρ' ὑμῖν μένων. ⁽¹³²⁾ ²⁶ Ὁ δὲ Παράκλητος, τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, ὃ πέμψει ὁ Πατήρ ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου, ἐκεῖνος ὑμᾶς διδάξει πάντα, καὶ ὑπομνήσει ὑμᾶς πάντα ἃ εἶπον ὑμῖν.

²⁷ Εἰρήνην ἀφήμι ὑμῖν, εἰρήνην τὴν ἐμὴν δίδωμι ὑμῖν· οὐ καθὼς ὁ κόσμος δίδωσιν, ἐγὼ δίδωμι ὑμῖν. Μὴ ταρασσέσθω ὑμῶν ἡ καρδία, μηδὲ δειλιάτω. ²⁸ Ἠκούσατε ὅτι ἐγὼ εἶπον ὑμῖν, Ὑπάγω καὶ ἔρχομαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς. Εἰ ἠγαπᾷτέ με, ἐχάρητε ἂν, ὅτι πορεύομαι πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα· ὅτι ὁ Πατήρ μου μέζων μου ἐστί. ²⁹ Καὶ νῦν εἶρηκα ὑμῖν πρὶν γενέσθαι, ἵνα, ὅταν γένηται, πιστεύσητε.

Guide, Helper, and Advocate of the Church. Cp. Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. viii. pp. 608—616. Barrow, Sermon. xxxiv. on the Creed, vol. v. pp. 185—189. See Bp. Andrewes, iii. pp. 130. 174—178, Sermon v. on the sending of the Holy Ghost.

Here the Paraclete is the Holy Ghost, Whom the Faithful confess to be consubstantial with the Father and the Son. By calling the Person here promised to be sent “another Paraclete,” He shows that there is One Person, Who sends, of the Son, and another, to be sent, of the Holy Ghost. (Aug.) Here is a warning to the Sabellians, who do not give due honour to the Holy Ghost. By the word ‘another,’ Christ shows the distinction of Persons; by the word ‘Paraclete,’ He declares the equality of dignity. (Cp. Chrys.)

The Holy Spirit is here represented in opposition to the Evil Spirit. The Evil Spirit is Διάβολος, our Calumniator, Ἐχθρὸς, our Adversary, enemy, Satan; our Κατήγορος or Accuser. (Job i. 9; ii. 4. Zech. iii. 1. Rev. xii. 10.) The Holy Spirit is our Παράκλητος; compare on Rom. viii. 26.

¹⁷ ὃ ὁ κόσμος οὐ δύναται λαβεῖν] the world cannot receive Him; because worldly hearts desire what is visible; the world does not rise to the love of what is invisible. (Aug.)

¹⁸ οὐκ ἀφήσω ὑμᾶς ὀρφανούς] I will not leave you orphans. ὀρφανὸς is used by LXX for ὕαθον (yathom), ‘fatherless.’ (Ps. lxxviii. 5, 6.) He calls them τέκνια, children (xiii. 33),—a word used eight times by St. John. Cp. St. Paul’s language 1 Thess. ii. 17.

— ἔρχομαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς] I am coming to you. Do not think that I am deserting you. I am even now coming to you in spiritual gifts.

¹⁹ ἔτι μικρόν] In a short time I shall be withdrawn from you in body; but you will see Me with the eye of faith, and feel My presence by that of the Spirit. See Cyril, and xiii. 33, and xvi. 16.

²² οὐχ ὁ Ἰσκαριώτης] not Iscariot, for he had ‘gone out.’ Cp. xiii. 30.

^{23—31}] For an exposition of these verses see Greg. M., Hom. in Ev. xxx. p. 1575.

²³ ποιήσομεν] B, L, X have ποιησόμεθα.

²⁶ ὑπομνήσει] He shall bring to your remembrance all things which I spake to you. The Spirit taught them those things which Christ did not teach them, because they were not able to bear them. (John xvi. 12.) And He brought to their remembrance those things which, either through obscurity or slowness of understanding, they were not able to recall. (Theoph.)

The Writers of the Gospels, who were unlearned and illiterate men, were enabled by the Holy Ghost to record with minuteness and accuracy the sublime sayings and marvellous acts of Christ. Here is the refutation of all objections to their veracity. They were inspired by the Spirit of Truth (v. 17), Who taught them all things, and brought to their remembrance all things that Christ had said to them. Therefore objections against the truth and inspiration of the Sacred Writers are in fact sins against Christ, Who sent the Holy Ghost, and against the Holy Ghost, Who was sent to teach them all things, and to lead them into all the truth.

²⁷ Εἰρήνην ἀφήμι ὑμῖν] Peace I leave to you. He gives us peace in this world, and He will give us His peace in the world to come. He Himself is our peace. (Ephes. ii. 14.) The peace of Christ is serenity of mind, tranquillity of spirit, the bond and fellowship of love; and no one can attain to the inheritance of the Lord, who does not keep this testament of peace, nor can any one have concord with Christ who foments discord among Christians. (Aug.)

— οὐ καθὼς ὁ κόσμος δίδωσιν] not as the world giveth. Men who love the world love not Christ, and love not one another in Christ; and when they give peace, it is for their own sake and for the world’s sake, not for God’s sake. (Aug.)

²⁸ Εἰ ἠγαπᾷτέ με, ἐχάρητε ἂν] If ye loved Me, ye would have rejoiced. He was going in that nature which He had as Man; but He remained with them as God. In that nature by which He is not equal to the Father He was going to the Father, from Whom He will come again to judge the quick and the dead. In that other nature by which He is equal to the Father, He never came away from the Father, but is present with Him every where, and entire, co-equal with Him in that Divinity, which no place can contain.

Ye would have rejoiced. Human nature may well rejoice, in that it has been taken up to heaven by the Only-begotten Word; so that Earth is exalted, and Dust sits incorruptible in Christ, at the right hand of the Father. Who does not rejoice, that loves Christ, and contemplates his own nature, now made immortal in Christ, and hopes that he himself will one day be together with Christ? (Aug.)

— ὅτι πορεύομαι] because I am going. So A, B, D, L, X, and many cursive MSS. and Versions. Elz. has ὅτι εἶπον πορεύομαι.

— ὁ Πατήρ μ. μέζων μου] My Father is greater than I am, as Man. Christ is speaking of going, which cannot be predicated of God. My Father is greater than I am, in that nature which goes to Him. But I am equal to Him in that Nature which is now and ever with Him. See on iii. 13, and x. 30, and 1 Cor. xv. 28, and S. Cyril here, and Bp. Bull., Def. Fid. Nic. sect. 4.

Bp. Pearson (on the Creed, Art. i. p. 62) observes that some ³⁰ Οὐκ ἔτι πολλὰ λαλήσω μεθ' ὑμῶν ἔρχεται γὰρ ὁ τοῦ κόσμου ἄρχων, γ ch. 12. 31.

καὶ ἐν ἐμοὶ οὐκ ἔχει οὐδέν· ³¹ ἄλλ' ἵνα γινῶ ὁ κόσμος, ὅτι ἀγαπῶ τὸν Πατέρα, & 16. 11.
καὶ, καθὼς ἐνετείλατό μοι ὁ Πατὴρ, οὕτω ποιῶ. Ἐγείρεσθε, ἄγωμεν ἐντεῦθεν. z ch. 10. 18.

XV. ¹ Ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ἀμπελος ἡ ἀληθινή, καὶ ^a ὁ Πατὴρ μου ὁ γεωργὸς ἐστίν· a Matt. 20. 1.
² ^b πᾶν κλῆμα ἐν ἐμοὶ μὴ φέρον καρπὸν αἵρει αὐτὸ, καὶ πᾶν τὸ καρπὸν φέρον 1 Cor. 3. 9.
^c καθαίρει αὐτὸ, ἵνα πλείονα καρπὸν φέρῃ. ³ ^d Ἦδη ὑμεῖς καθαροὶ ἐστε διὰ b Matt. 7. 21.
τὸν λόγον ὃν λελάληκα ὑμῖν. ⁴ ^e Μείνατε ἐν ἐμοὶ, καὶ γὰρ ἐν ὑμῖν καθὼς τὸ c Ps. 51 7—13.
κλῆμα οὐ δύναται καρπὸν φέρειν ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ, ἐὰν μὴ μένῃ ἐν τῇ ἀμπέλῳ, d ch. 13. 10.
οὕτως οὐδὲ ὑμεῖς, ἐὰν μὴ ἐν ἐμοὶ μένῃτε. ⁵ ^f Ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ἀμπελος, ὑμεῖς τὰ e 1 John 2. 6.
κλήματα· ὁ μένων ἐν ἐμοὶ, καὶ γὰρ ἐν αὐτῷ, ^g οὗτος φέρει καρπὸν πολὺν, ὅτι f Hos. 14. 8.
χωρὶς ἐμοῦ οὐ δύνασθε ποιεῖν οὐδέν. ⁶ ^h ἐὰν μὴ τις μένῃ ἐν ἐμοὶ, ἐβλήθη g Rom. 6. 4.
ἔξω ὡς τὸ κλῆμα καὶ ἐξηράνθη· καὶ συνάγουσιν αὐτὰ καὶ εἰς τὸ πῦρ βάλλουσι, h 8. 10.
καὶ καίεται· (133) ⁱ ἐὰν μένῃτε ἐν ἐμοὶ, καὶ τὰ ῥήματά μου ἐν ὑμῖν μένῃ, ὁ ἐὰν i Eph. 3. 16—21.
θέλητε αἰτήσασθε, καὶ γενήσεται ὑμῖν. (134) ^k ^x Ἐν τούτῳ ἐδοξάσθη ὁ Πατὴρ col. 1. 6.
μου ἵνα καρπὸν πολὺν φέρητε· καὶ γενήσεσθε ἐμοὶ μαθηταί. 2 Pet. 3. 18.
h Matt. 3. 10.
& 7. 19.
i ch. 16. 23.
1 John 3. 22.
k Matt. 5. 16.
Phil. 1. 11.
ch. 8. 31.

⁹ Καθὼς ἠγάπησέ με ὁ Πατὴρ, καὶ γὰρ ἠγάπησα ὑμᾶς, μένατε ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ τῇ of the Ancients interpreted this text of Christ "as the Son of God," the Second Person of the Trinity, but still with reference not to His Essence, but to His Generation.

— Πατὴρ μου] μου is omitted by A, D, L, X, and some Cursive Versions.

30. ἔρχεται γὰρ ὁ τοῦ κόσμου ἄρχων] for the ruler of the world cometh. The devil is not the prince of creation, but of sinners. Hence the Apostle speaks of our warfare "against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." Ephes. vi. 12. (Aug.)

— ἐν ἐμοὶ οὐκ ἔχει οὐδέν] he hath nothing in Me; because Christ had come as God without sin, and the Virgin conceived and brought forth His flesh, but without any mortal taint of sin. (Aug.) Why then did our Lord die? Death in Him was not the penalty of sin, but a gift of mercy to us, that He might free us from eternal death. (Aug., Tract. 3.)

31. Ἐγείρεσθε] Rise up. They had been reclining at supper till He said these words. (Aug.) They now leave the upper room, in which the Lord's Supper had been instituted, to go to Gethsemane. See xv. 1 and Matt. xxvi. 30. Mark xiv. 26. Luke xxii. 39.

CH. XV. 1. Ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ἀμπελος ἡ ἀληθινή] I am the true Vine.

The People of God had been compared to a Vine in the Old Test. (Ps. lxxx. 8. Isa. v. 1—7. Jer. ii. 21. Ezek. xv. 2; xix. 10.) But in the New the Son of God is incarnate, and one with His People.

The discourse of our Lord in the last chapter was delivered at the table in the chamber of the paschal supper (see xiv. 31). The following seems to have been suggested by the Vineyards and Gardens, through which they passed in their way toward the Mount of Olives.

They had also lately partaken of the fruit of the Vine, in the Communion of the Blood of the True Vine; and He said that He would no more drink of the fruit of the Vine, till He should drink it new with them in His Father's kingdom. (Matt. xxvi. 29.) And so this discourse related by St. John falls in with what is recorded by other Evangelists.

He is the Vine, because He is the Head of the Church, the Man Christ Jesus, and we are His members; and the Vine and branches are of the same nature; and He is the true Vine, as distinguished from that mentioned Isa. v. 4. Jer. ii. 21. (Aug.) For other instances of the word ἀληθινός as distinguished from what is counterfeit, and as applied to Christ, see i. 9, φῶς ἀληθινόν· vi. 32, ἄρτον ἀληθινόν, and Rev. iii. 7. 14; xix. 11.

On this discourse see Williams, Holy Week, pp. 490—498.

— Πατὴρ μου ὁ γεωργός] My Father is the husbandman. He tills our hearts with the ploughshare of His Word, and scatters the seeds of His precepts there, and sends us the dew and rain of the Spirit, that He may reap the fruits of holiness.

2. πᾶν κλῆμα ἐν ἐμοὶ μὴ φέρον καρπὸν] Unless we bear the fruit of good works, we cannot be said to be branches of the Vine, which is Christ. (Chrys.) The genuine fruits of the true Vine are described in Gal. v. 22.

— καθαίρει] He pruneth us by afflictions, in order that we may put forth shoots and bear more fruit. (Chrys.) Observe the connexion of καθαίρει and καθαρός. We are purified by being pruned.

3. ὑμεῖς καθαροὶ ἐστε διὰ τὸν λόγον] ye are clean through the Word. Why did He not say, "Ye are clean by Baptism?" Because it is the Word which cleanses in the water. Take away the Word, and what is the water? The Word is added to the Element, and it becomes a Sacrament. Whence is this power of the water, that it touches the body and the heart is cleansed? Whence, but because the Word operates, not merely in being spoken, but in being believed. This word of faith is of so great power in the Church of God, that by means of him (Al. "ipsam," i. e. "Ecclesiam") who believes, and offers an infant for baptism, and by means of him who blesses and baptizes the infant, it cleanses the infant, although as yet not capable of believing unto repentance, and of making confession unto salvation. (Aug.)

4. τὸ κλῆμα] the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the Vine. Behold here the need of grace. This truth is set at nought by those, who think that they have not need of God for the performance of good works. He who imagines that he can bear fruit of himself is not in the Vine; and he who is not in the Vine is not in Christ, Who said, "Without Me ye can do nothing." Here is a proof also of the Two Natures of Christ. If He were not man, He would not be the Vine, of which we are the branches; if He were not God, He could not give grace to the branches, so that without Him they can bear no fruit. (Aug.)

6. ἐβλήθη—ἐξηράνθη] Observe the past tense in ἐβλήθη and ἐξηράνθη. Whosoever severs himself from Me, is already cast out, and withered. He is the cause of his own destruction.

— συνάγουσιν αὐτὰ] i. e. the Angel-reapers will gather them and cast them into everlasting fire. On this use of the third person plural, see on Luke xii. 20.

— εἰς τὸ πῦρ] Elz. omits τὸ, which is in A, G, L, M, S, and very many cursive MSS., and is emphatic, 'the fire,' which is an emblem of that fire which is reserved to the wicked, the πῦρ αἰώνιον (Matt. xviii. 8; xxv. 41).

One of two things remains for every branch; either to be in the Vine, or to be in the fire; and if we do not dwell in the Vine, we shall be cast into the fire. (Aug.)

7. ἐὰν μένῃτε ἐν ἐμοὶ] if ye abide in Me. We abide in Christ, when we do what Christ commands, and love what He promises. (Aug.)

— ὃ ἐὰν θέλητε αἰτήσασθε] ask whatsoever ye will, and it shall be done unto you. Some MSS. (E, G, H, K, S, U, Δ, Λ) have the future tense here αἰτήσεσθε. They who abide in Christ can only will what He wills, viz. those things which lead to everlasting salvation. Here is the use of the Lord's Prayer; if we never decline from the words and spirit of that prayer in our own prayers, then whatsoever we ask, it shall be done for us. (Aug.)

8. γενήσεσθε] B, D, L, M, X have γένεσθε.

9. Καθὼς ἠγάπησέ με ὁ Πατὴρ] As the Father loveth Me, even so love I you. The Father also loves us in Christ. (Aug.) If the Father loveth us, let us be of good cheer; if the Father is thus glorified, let us bring forth much fruit. And in order that we may never faint and fall away, He adds, "Abide ye in My love;" and how? by keeping My commandments. "If ye keep My commandments, ye shall abide in My love." (Chrys.) Let no

1 ch. 14. 15.

m ch. 17. 13.
& 16. 24.n ch. 13. 34.
Eph. 5. 2.
1 John 3. 11, 16.
& 4. 21.
1 Thess. 4. 9.
o ch. 14. 15.
& ver. 10, 11.
Matt. 12. 50.
James 2. 23.
p Rom. 8. 15.
Gal. 4. 1—7.
q ch. 6. 70.
& 13. 18.
1 John 4. 10.r 1 John 3. 1, 13.
& 4. 5.s ch. 13. 16.
Matt. 10. 24.
Luke 6. 40.
t ch. 13. 16.
Matt. 10. 24.
Luke 6. 40.
ch. 15. 20.
Heb. 12. 2—4.
u ch. 16. 3.
Matt. 24. 9.
v ch. 9. 41.w Ps. 35. 19.
& 69. 5.x ch. 14. 26.
& 16. 7.
Luke 24. 49.

ἐμῇ. ¹⁰ ¹ ἐὰν τὰς ἐντολάς μου τηρήσητε, μενεῖτε ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ μου· καθὼς ἐγὰ τὰς ἐντολάς τοῦ Πατρὸς μου τητήρηκα, καὶ μένω αὐτοῦ ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ. ¹¹ ^m Ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν, ἵνα ἡ χαρὰ ἡ ἐμὴ ἐν ὑμῖν μένῃ, καὶ ἡ χαρὰ ὑμῶν πληρωθῇ. ¹² ⁿ Αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ ἐντολὴ ἡ ἐμὴ, ἵνα ἀγαπάτε ἀλλήλους, καθὼς ἡγάπησα ὑμᾶς· (¹³⁵/_{IV}) ¹³ μείζονα ταύτης ἀγάπην οὐδεὶς ἔχει, ἵνα τις τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ θῇ ὑπὲρ τῶν φίλων αὐτοῦ· (¹³⁶/_X) ¹⁴ ^o ὑμεῖς φίλοι μου ἐστέ, ἐὰν ποιῇτε ὅσα ἐγὼ ἐντέλλομαι ὑμῖν· ¹⁵ ^p οὐκέτι ὑμᾶς λέγω δούλους, ὅτι ὁ δοῦλος οὐκ οἶδε τί ποιεῖ αὐτοῦ ὁ κύριος· ὑμᾶς δὲ εἴρηκα φίλους, ὅτι πάντα ἃ ἤκουσα παρὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς μου ἐγνώρισα ὑμῖν. ¹⁶ ^q Οὐχ ὑμεῖς μὲ ἐξελέξασθε, ἀλλ' ἐγὼ ἐξελεξάμην ὑμᾶς, καὶ ἔθηκα ὑμᾶς ἵνα ὑμεῖς ὑπάγητε καὶ καρπὸν φέρητε, καὶ ὁ καρπὸς ὑμῶν μένῃ, (¹³⁷/_{IV}) ἵνα ὁ ^τι ἂν αἰτήσητε τὸν Πατέρα ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου δῶ ὑμῖν. (¹³⁸/_X) ¹⁷ Ταῦτα ἐντέλλομαι ὑμῖν, ἵνα ἀγαπάτε ἀλλήλους.

¹⁸ Εἰ ὁ κόσμος ὑμᾶς μισεῖ, γινώσκετε ὅτι ἐμὲ πρῶτον ὑμῶν μεμίσηκεν. ¹⁹ ^r Εἰ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου ἦτε, ὁ κόσμος ἂν τὸ ἴδιον ἐφίλει· ὅτι δὲ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου οὐκ ἐστέ, ἀλλ' ἐγὼ ἐξελεξάμην ὑμᾶς ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου, διὰ τοῦτο μισεῖ ὑμᾶς ὁ κόσμος. (¹³⁹/_{III}) ²⁰ ^s Μνημονεύετε τοῦ λόγου οὗ ἐγὼ εἶπον ὑμῖν, 'Οὐκ ἔστι δοῦλος μεῖζων τοῦ κυρίου αὐτοῦ·' (¹⁴⁰/_X) εἰ ἐμὲ ἐδίωξαν, καὶ ὑμᾶς διώξουσιν· εἰ τὸν λόγον μου ἐτήρησαν, καὶ τὸν ὑμέτερον τηρήσουσιν· (¹⁴¹/_I) ²¹ ^u ἀλλὰ ταῦτα πάντα ποιήσουσιν ὑμῖν διὰ τὸ ὄνομά μου, (¹⁴²/_{III}) ὅτι οὐκ οἶδασιν τὸν πέμψαντά με. (¹⁴³/_X) ²² ^v Εἰ μὴ ἦλθον καὶ ἐλάλησα αὐτοῖς, ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ εἶχον· νῦν δὲ πρόφασιν οὐκ ἔχουσι περὶ τῆς ἁμαρτίας αὐτῶν. (¹⁴⁴/_I) ²³ ^w Ὁ ἐμὲ μισῶν καὶ τὸν Πατέρα μου μισεῖ. (¹⁴⁵/_X) ²⁴ Εἰ τὰ ἔργα μὴ ἐποίησα ἐν αὐτοῖς ἃ οὐδεὶς ἄλλος πεποιήκεν, ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ εἶχον· νῦν δὲ καὶ ἑωράκασι καὶ μεμισήκασι καὶ ἐμὲ καὶ τὸν Πατέρα μου· ²⁵ ^w ἀλλ' ἵνα πληρωθῇ ὁ λόγος ὁ γεγραμμένος ἐν τῷ νόμῳ αὐτῶν, Ὅτι ἐμίσησάν με δωρεάν.

²⁶ ^x Ὅταν δὲ ἔλθῃ ὁ Παράκλητος, ὃν ἐγὼ πέμψω ὑμῖν παρὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς, τὸ

one therefore deceive himself by saying that he loves Christ, when he does not obey Christ. We love Christ in the exact proportion that we keep His commandments. (Aug.)

He tells us next, v. 12, what His will is that we must do. This is My commandment, that ye love one another as I have loved you. (Theoph.) And hence it appears, that all the commandments are rooted in Love. As the different boughs of a tree spring from the stem, so the Christian Virtues branch out from Love; and the boughs of good works have no verdure, unless they abide in the root of Love. (Gregor. Hom. xxvii. in Evang.)

12. ἵνα ἀγαπάτε ἀλλήλους] that ye love one another. And so love to God and man are woven into one chain. (Euthym.)

— καθὼς ἡγάπησα ὑμᾶς] as I loved you. Hence we may discern true love from false; divine love from human. Why did Christ love us? In order that we might reign with Him in glory. Let us love one another with the same intent, and then we shall love one another rightly. (Aug.) To what degree did He love us? Even so as to lay down His life for us. And because He laid down His life for us, we ought to lay down our own life for the brethren (1 John iii. 16). This the Martyrs did, in the fervour of their love. With one and the same love let us love God and our neighbour; let us love God for Himself, and let us love ourselves and our neighbour for God's sake. (Aug. de Trin. viii. 8.)

13. ἵνα ψυχὴν θῇ] that he should lay down his life. See on x. 11.

For a homily on these verses, 12—14, see Greg. Mag. in Evang. xxvii.

15. οὐκέτι ὑμᾶς λέγω δούλους] I call you no more servants. For He hath given us power to become sons—sons of God (i. 12). And yet He will say to the blessed, "Well done, good and faithful servant" (Matt. xxv. 23). And we must call ourselves unprofitable servants (Luke xvii. 10). Thus we must be as it were servants, and yet not servants, but sons; servants without servile fear, but with that holy fear which belongs to the servant that entereth "into the joy of his Lord;" and sons of God, in casting out that slavish fear which belongs to him who "abideth not in the house for ever" (John viii. 35); and loving God as our Father.

16. Οὐχ ὑμεῖς μὲ ἐξελέξασθε] But I chose you. μὲ is emphatic. Ye, My disciples, did not choose Me, Your Master.

He did not choose men who were already good, but He makes good those whom He has chosen. We may not say, 'I did good works before I believed, and was therefore chosen.' What good work can there be, before faith? (Rom. xiv. 23.) (Aug.)

— ὁ ^τι ἂν αἰτήσητε—δῶ ὑμῖν] that whatsoever ye ask the Father in My Name He may give it you. Yet even St. Paul asked, and did not receive what he asked (2 Cor. xii. 9). "Imò; sed si id quod non expedit petitur, non in nomine Jesu petitur. Jesus est Salvator. Paulus non exaudivit, quia si liberaretur a tentatione, ei non proderat ad salutem." (Greg. M.)

20. εἰ—ἐτήρησαν] if they kept My saying; which is not the case, except in some particular instances, though it ought to have been the case in all. Do not therefore despond, if your preaching is rejected, when you remember what has been the reception of Mine.

— μου] emphatic.

22. Εἰ μὴ ἦλθον] If I had not come and preached to them, they had not had sin; i. e. the sin of which they are now guilty, in rejecting Him Who came, that they might believe in Him and be saved by faith in Him. (Aug.)

— εἶχον] B, L* have εἶχσαν here and v. 24, and so Lachm., Tisch. Cp. Winer (p. 71), who observes that the termination -σαν is frequent in the LXX. In the N. T. it is found in MSS. of the Alexandrine family. Cp. 2 Thess. iii. 6.

24. οὐδεὶς ἄλλος] no other person. For they had compared the works of Moses to those of Christ. (See vi. 31.) Cp. Matt. xii. 28; xvi. 1.

25. δωρεάν = ἄν (chinnam) (Job i. 9. Ps. xxxv. 15; lxix. 4. Ezek. vi. 10), "sine causâ." See Vorst. de Hebr. p. 228.

26. Ὅταν δὲ ἔλθῃ ὁ Παράκλητος] He calls the Holy Ghost by the name of Comforter on account of His operations, because He frees those with whom He dwells from all perturbations, and imparts to them ineffable joy (see above on xiv. 16); and He is sent by the Son, not as an Angel or Prophet or Apostle is sent, but as it befits the dignity of the Spirit of God to be sent by the Wisdom and Virtue of God; with which Virtue and Wisdom the Spirit of God has the same Nature undivided and entire. The Son of God, when sent by the Father, is not separated from the Father, but y Acts 1. 21.

Πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας, ὃ παρὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς ἐκπορεύεται, ἐκείνος μαρτυρήσει περὶ ἐμοῦ. ²⁷ καὶ ὑμεῖς δὲ μαρτυρεῖτε, ὅτι ἀπ' ἀρχῆς μετ' ἐμοῦ ἐστε.

& 5. 32.
a ch. 15. 18—21.
Matt. 13. 21.

XVI. ¹ Ἄ ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν, ἵνα μὴ σκανδαλισθῆτε. ² Ἀποσυναγωγους ποιήσουσιν ὑμᾶς· ⁽¹⁴³⁾ ἀλλ' ἔρχεται ὥρα, ἵνα πᾶς ὁ ἀποκτείνας ὑμᾶς δόξῃ λατρείαν προσφέρειν τῷ Θεῷ. ³ Καὶ ταῦτα ποιήσουσιν, ὅτι οὐκ ἔγνωσαν τὸν Πατέρα οὐδὲ ἐμέ. ⁴ Ἀλλὰ ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν, ἵνα, ὅταν ἔλθῃ ἡ ὥρα, μνημονεύητε αὐτῶν, ὅτι ἐγὼ εἶπον ὑμῖν· ⁽¹⁴⁷⁾ ταῦτα δὲ ὑμῖν ἐξ ἀρχῆς οὐκ εἶπον, ὅτι μεθ' ὑμῶν ἦμην· ⁵ νῦν δὲ ὑπάγω πρὸς τὸν πέμψαντά με· καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐξ ὑμῶν ἔρωτᾷ με, Ποῦ ὑπάγεις; ⁶ ἀλλ' ὅτι ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν, ἡ λύπη πεπλήρωκεν ὑμῶν τὴν καρδίαν. ⁷ Ἀλλ' ἐγὼ τὴν ἀλήθειαν λέγω ὑμῖν, συμφέρει

b ch. 15. 21.

c Matt. 9. 15.
& 24. 23.

Ma. k 2. 19.
Luke 5. 34.
ch. 13. 19.
& 14. 29.

d ch. 7. 39.
Acts 2. 33.

remains in Him, and has the Father in Himself. And the Holy Spirit, being sent by the Son, comes forth from the Father, but does not migrate to any other place. For as the Father is not confined to place, no more is the Holy Spirit; being incorporeal, and transcending the essence of all created beings. And when the Son sends the Spirit, the Father sends Him also, since the Spirit comes by the same will both of Father and Son. (Didymus, de Spiritu Sancto, ii.)

— τὸ Πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας, ὃ παρὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς] the Spirit of truth who proceedeth from the Father. Some one may inquire, whether the Spirit proceeds also from the Son? The Son is the Son of the Father, and the Father is the Father of the Son alone. But the Holy Spirit is the Spirit of both Father and Son. Hence our Lord says, "It is the Spirit of your Father that speaketh in you" (Matt. x. 20); and yet the Apostle says (Gal. iv. 6), "God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son into your hearts." And if the Spirit did not proceed from the Son, Christ would not have breathed on His Apostles and said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost" (John xx. 22). Why then did He say, "The Spirit of Truth that proceedeth from the Father?" Because He ascribes what is His own to the Father, from Whom He, the Son, Himself is; as when He says, "My doctrine is not Mine, but His that sent Me" (John vii. 16). (Aug. See also Origen, in Joan. tom. ii. 6.)

The Son is of the Father alone; but the Holy Spirit is of the Father and the Son. (See Matt. x. 20. Gal. iv. 6. Rom. viii. 9. 11.) And there are many other passages of Scripture which evidently show that the Person in the Holy Trinity, Who is called the Holy Spirit, is the Spirit of the Father and the Son. (Aug.)

On the Procession of the Holy Spirit, see Bp. Andrewes, Works, iii. 262. 284; Ninth and Tenth Sermons on the Sending of the Holy Ghost; and Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. viii. pp. 489—492, and Notes; and below, xvi. 13. Some fresh testimonies from S. Cyril—to the Procession of the Spirit from the Son—may be seen in Mr. Payne Smith's edition of S. Cyril on St. Luke, p. 59.

²⁷ ὑμεῖς δὲ μαρτυρεῖτε] and ye also are witnesses. See the proof of the truth of Christ's prophecy, and of the Comforter's power, in the wonderful change wrought in the character and conduct of St. Peter, once so infirm as to deny Christ, and yet, after the day of Pentecost, coming forward to preach Christ to those who had lately crucified Him (Acts ii. 14).

CH. XVI. 1. ἵνα μὴ σκανδαλισθῆτε] that ye should not be offended, or made to stumble by your sufferings for Me (Aug.), as He had prophesied they would be (Matt. xxvi. 31).

2. Ἀποσυναγωγους ποιήσουσιν ὑμᾶς] They will put you out of the synagogues. Thus our Lord prophesied that the Jews would not receive Himself preached by the Apostles; and therefore would not be true children of Abraham; and thus the natural branches would be cut off (Rom. xi. 17. 21) by putting out of the synagogues those who preached the Gospel of the true Seed of Abraham.

— ἀλλ'] in, yea.

— λατρείαν προσφέρειν] to offer sacrifice. See Rom. viii. 36; xii. 1.

3. ποιήσουσιν] Elz. adds ὑμῖν with D and L; but it is not in A, B, E, G, H, K, M, S, U, Γ, Δ, Δ, and many Cursives and Versions.

5. οὐδεὶς ἐξ ὑμῶν ἔρωτᾷ με] and none of you asketh Me, Whither goest thou? The disciples on hearing what they themselves were to suffer, and that they who killed them would think that they did God service, were absorbed with sorrow, and asked no such question of Christ. (Chrys.) Before this time they had asked, "Lord, whither goest thou?" (xiii. 36,) and had heard from Him that they could not follow Him then. He was now going to heaven, to His Father; and they sought to detain Him; and He knew what was in their hearts, and that, not having yet received the spiritual presence of the Comforter, they feared to lose His own corporal presence, and were therefore sad: "Because I have said these things unto you, sorrow hath filled your hearts." But He knew what was best for them, viz. the internal vision with which the Holy Spirit would comfort them, and therefore He adds, "It is expedient for you that I go away."

7. συμφέρει ὑμῖν ἵνα ἐγὼ ἀπέλθω] it is expedient for you, that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come. Christ is ever with us in His divinity; but if He had not departed from us corporally, we should always be looking carnally for His Body, and should never believe; for Faith is the evidence of things not seen, Heb. xi. 1; and so never be justified and beatified by that Faith which qualifies us to see Him as God. (Cp. Aug., Sermon. 143.) It was good for them, that the "form of a servant," in which they beheld Christ present with their bodily eyes, should be removed from them, because by looking on that they might think that He was only what they saw. I, Who am "the Word made flesh," dwell in you; but I would not that you should love Me after the flesh, and so be content with only the milk of babes (1 Cor. iii. 1). Therefore I remove My Body from you; for if after a fleshly manner you cling to My flesh, you will not be capable of receiving the Spirit. (Cp. Aug., de Trin. i. 9, and Tract. xciv.)

Here is a reproof to those who crave a carnal presence in the Holy Eucharist. See above on Mark v. 30, 31, and below, on our Lord's speech to Mary Magdalene (xx. 17).

He says that the Holy Spirit will not come, unless He Himself departs. Why is this? Could not Christ, remaining on earth in His bodily presence, send the Holy Spirit, Who had descended on Him at His Baptism, and Who is never separated from Christ? Yes; but we cannot receive the Spirit, so long as we know Christ only according to the flesh. (2 Cor. v. 16.) But when Christ disappears from our bodily sight, then the Spirit will come. When Christ had departed corporally, not only the Holy Spirit, but the Father and Son also, were present spiritually; for He said, "If a man love Me, he will keep My words, and My Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him" (John xiv. 23); and "Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world." (Matt. xxviii. 20.) Thus we are taught to believe in, and recognize the presence of, the Holy Trinity, in which a distinction of Persons is clearly presented to us, while there is no diversity of substance. (Cp. Aug. here, and Sermon. 143.)

It was predetermined in the divine counsel, that each of the Three Persons of the Holy Trinity should exercise His office severally in the salvation of men. The Father sends the Son; the Son redeems them; the Holy Spirit perfects the work of salvation, by sanctifying those who are redeemed. But this several operation of each of the Three Persons would not have been so clearly manifested, unless the Son had gone away. (Euthym.)

Our Lord says, it is expedient that He should depart, or the Comforter would not come. Is then the Comforter greater than Christ? No; but Christ's acts would not be fully available for our salvation, unless the Comforter had come to perfect the work of Christ, by doing His own proper office in sanctifying those whom Christ has redeemed. Cp. S. Basil, Quæst. 69. (Maldonat.)

See also Greg. Nazian. p. 566, Orat. xxxi.—an excellent treatise on the Divine Personality and office of the Holy Ghost.

Besides, it was necessary for them to receive the gift of the Holy Ghost; and the gift of the Holy Ghost was to be a consequence of Christ's Ascension; it was to be the inauguration of His Heavenly Coronation and Royal Session in His glorified humanity at the right hand of God (Ps. lxxviii. 18. 28. Eph. iv. 8); and the Descent of the Holy Ghost from heaven was to be the proof of His Ascension into heaven. See Bp. Andrewes, Sermon. iv. on the Sending of the Holy Spirit, vol. iii. p. 163. Dr. Barrow, Sermon. iii. 481 (on Acts ii. 38), and below, notes on Acts ii. 1.

e Acts 2. 22—37.
 & 4. 13—18.
 & 5. 26—28, 32,
 33.
 & 7. 54, 57, 58.
 Eph. 4. 8.
 f ch. 12. 31.
 Acts 26. 18.
 Luke 10. 18.
 Gal. 2. 15.
 Heb. 2. 14.
 g 1 Cor. 3. 2.
 h ch. 14. 26.
 & 15. 26.
 i John 2. 20, 27.

ὑμῖν ἵνα ἐγὼ ἀπέλθω· ἐὰν γὰρ ἐγὼ μὴ ἀπέλθω, ὁ Παράκλητος οὐκ ἐλεύσεται πρὸς ὑμᾶς· ἐὰν δὲ πορευθῶ, πέμψω αὐτὸν πρὸς ὑμᾶς· ⁸ καὶ ἐλθὼν ἐκεῖνος ἐλέγξει τὸν κόσμον περὶ ἁμαρτίας, καὶ περὶ δικαιοσύνης, καὶ περὶ κρίσεως· ⁹ περὶ ἁμαρτίας μὲν, ὅτι οὐ πιστεύουσιν εἰς ἐμέ· ¹⁰ περὶ δικαιοσύνης δὲ, ὅτι πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα μου ὑπάγω, καὶ οὐκ ἔτι θεωρεῖτέ με· ¹¹ περὶ δὲ κρίσεως, ὅτι ὁ ἄρχων τοῦ κόσμου τούτου κέκριται.

¹² Ἔτι πολλὰ ἔχω λέγειν ὑμῖν, ἀλλ' οὐ δύνασθε βαστάζειν ἄρτι· ¹³ ὅταν δὲ ἔλθῃ ἐκεῖνος, τὸ Πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας, ὁδηγήσει ὑμᾶς εἰς πᾶσαν τὴν ἀλή-— ἐὰν γὰρ ἐγὼ μὴ ἀπέλθω] Elz. omits ἐγὼ, which is emphatic, and found in A, E, G, H, K, M, U, F, Δ, Δ, and very many cursive MSS. and Versions.

— πορευθῶ] shall have made My journey from earth to heaven, and from you to My Father. See above, xiv. 3.

8. ἐλέγξει] 'arguet;' He will convict the world, in the judgment of others, if not convince it in its own. See the use of ἐλέγχω, John viii. 9. 46. 1 Cor. xiv. 24. Eph. v. 13. Jude 15. From these passages it appears, that ἐλέγχειν signifies in the N. T. a process of argument, generally public, by which an offender is proved to be such, and is "pricked to the heart," and "smitten in conscience" (cp. Acts ii. 37), and put to shame and brought to repentance by salutary rebuke and reproof, or, although callous in himself, yet manifestly proved and convicted as a sinner in the eyes of others.

— ἐλέγξει τὸν κόσμον περὶ ἁμαρτίας] He will convict the world for sin, because they believe not in Christ. It is one thing to believe Christ, and another to believe in Him. The devils believe Him (James ii. 19), but not in Him; we believe in Christ when we hope in Christ and love Christ. (Aug.) Cp. xiv. 1.

He will convict the world of sin, and take from the world all excuse for its unbelief, when the world sees the gift of the Holy Spirit poured forth in answer to prayers addressed to Me (Aug., Quæst. Nov. et Vet. Test. 89), and when it sees the fruits of your righteousness or justification by Faith in Me. See Moberly on the Great Forty Days, p. 88.

He will not only convict the world of sin, in not believing the Gospel, but of sinfulness generally; by showing that it needed so great a sacrifice as My death to reconcile it to God, and that all, who do not receive Me as their Saviour, are yet in their sins, and in danger of perdition. Cp. Cyril. (Maldonat.)

10. δικαιοσύνης] of righteousness, because I am going to the Father, and ye see Me no more. He will convict the world of sin for its unbelief, and convince it of My Righteousness, when it sees Me accepted by the Father, and sending the Holy Ghost. And it will convince the world of your righteousness or justification through Me, when you believe in Me no longer present with you in Body, after My departure from you to the Father. The unbeliever says, "How shall we believe in Him Whom we do not see?" Your belief will be an answer to that question; and so the faith of the believer will be a condemnation of the unbelief of the world. "Blessed are they who have not seen, and yet have believed." (John xv. 29. Cp. Aug. here, and Serm. 143.)

He will convince the world of My righteousness. I shall be condemned by the world as unrighteous. But My going to the Father and reception into glory, and the outpouring of the Holy Ghost by My power, and your miracles wrought in My Name, will prove that the world was guilty in condemning Me; and that I am righteous, and the cause of righteousness to others, and am accepted of God as such. (Cp. Chrys.) See on Rom. iv. 25.

When you no longer continue to behold Me with the bodily eye, yet you will continue to behold Me with faith, and thus be justified by Me. For He says (xiv. 19), ἔτι μικρὸν, καὶ ὁ κόσμος με οὐκ ἔτι θεωρεῖ, ὑμεῖς δὲ θεωρεῖτέ με.

11. ὁ ἄρχων τοῦ κόσμου τούτου κέκριται] the ruler of this world has been cast out and condemned; and therefore the world, being delivered by Me from the power of Satan, has no excuse for unbelief. (Aug., Serm. 143, 144.) See above, xii. 31. Cp. Rev. xx. 9, 10.

The Rebellion of the Prince of this world and his adherents in the world, is also condemned by the obedience of the servants of Christ, even weak women and children, who show, by their love to Him, and by their courage and endurance in persecution and martyrdom, that His grace is sufficient for them, and that "His commandments are not grievous." (1 John v. 3.) The life and death of the Saints is a condemnation of Satan and the world, and at the Great Day it will judge them. See 1 Cor. vi. 2, 3.

12. Ἔτι πολλὰ ἔχω λέγειν ὑμῖν] I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Some heretics hence seek to derive a pretext for their false doctrines; as if their heresies were the things which Christ had then to say, and the disciples could not bear, and which were afterwards revealed by the Spirit.

But how do we know what the things are which Christ had then to say, and they could not bear? But some may say,—"Have not spiritual men some things in their doctrine, which they may withhold from carnal minds, and unfold to those that are spiritual?" Spiritual men may not withhold altogether spiritual things from the carnal (Matt. x. 27); for the Catholic Faith is to be preached to all. And yet they may not so declare them, that in their desire to bring them to the knowledge of persons who cannot receive them, they may make them rather loathe their discourse, by the truth it contains, than teach them the truth by their discourse. But in order that we may grow in knowledge and receive the food of Christians, and in proportion as we grow may receive it more and more, we must all pray for grace from Him Who gives the increase. (See Aug., Tract. 66—68, who quotes 1 Cor. i. 23; ii. 6. 14; iii. 1, 2; xiv. 37. Gal. iv. 9. Phil. iii. 15. Heb. v. 12—14; vi. 1—12.)

These "many things" which the Apostles could not then bear, are not to be sought in the oral traditions of Rome, which indeed "cannot be borne" by Apostles and Apostolic men, who have the Comforter; but they are to be found in the Acts of the Apostles, the Apostolic Epistles, and the Apocalypse,—which, together with the Gospels and the Old Testament, constitute "all the truth" (v. 13. Cp. Bengel here.)

Tertullian says (Præscr. Hær. 22), that heretics were "wont to allege, that the Apostles were not acquainted with all Christian doctrine, or that they did not declare it fully to the world; not perceiving, that, by these assertions, they exposed Christ Himself to obloquy, for having chosen men who were either ill-informed or else not honest." And this heretical allegation has been revived in recent times by the advocates of the "Doctrine of Development." But our blessed Lord says to His Apostles, that the "Holy Spirit should teach them all things, and guide them into all the truth, and bring all things to their remembrance whatever He had said unto them." (John xiv. 26.)

He also orders them to proclaim to the world what they had heard from Him:—"What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light; and what ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the housetops." (Matt. x. 27.) "Teach all nations to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." (Matt. xxviii. 19.) Accordingly, St. John testifies that Christ's Disciples "have an unction from the Holy One, and know all things." (1 John ii. 20.) And St. Paul declares that he has kept nothing back from his hearers; and has not shunned to declare unto them "all the counsel of God;" and he intimates that he would not have been "pure from their blood,"—that is, he would have been guilty of destroying their souls if he had done so (Acts xx. 26, 27); and that he "uses great plainness of speech" (2 Cor. iii. 12); and "not being rude in knowledge, has been thoroughly made manifest among them in all things" (2 Cor. xi. 6); and he warns all men against building "hay and stubble on the only foundation which is laid" (1 Cor. iii. 11); and says, that, "though an angel from heaven preach unto them any thing beside what he preached unto them, and they received from him, let him be accursed," Gal. i. 8, ἐὰν εὐαγγελίζηται, παρ' ὃ εὐηγγελισάμεθα, where remark the expression παρ' ὃ, i. e. 'besides what,' &c. These, the words of the original, are very observable, and are conclusive against the "Doctrine of Development." See notes below on that passage.

13. ἐκεῖνος, τὸ Πνεῦμα] He, the Spirit. Lest by the use of a neuter word Πνεῦμα, we should suppose the Spirit to be only a quality or thing, He uses the word ἐκεῖνος here and v. 14, which shows Him to be a Person. (See also xiv. 26; xv. 26; xvi. 8.)

— εἰς πᾶσαν τὴν ἀλήθειαν] into all the truth; all that truth which is opposed to what is false, and is alone able to save, and is necessary to salvation. D, L have ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ πᾶσιν.

Here is a divine testimony to the inspiration of Holy Scripture. The Apostles and Evangelists delivered to us the Gospel, which they first preached by word of mouth; and afterwards committed, by God's will, to the Holy Scriptures. After our Lord's Resurrection, they were endued with the power of the Holy Ghost from on high, and had perfect knowledge of all things, and went forth preaching one and the same Gospel to all. Irenæus, iii. 1.

θειαν, οὐ γὰρ λαλήσει ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ, ἀλλ' ὅσα ἂν ἀκούσῃ λαλήσει, καὶ τὰ ἐρχόμενα ἀναγγελεῖ ὑμῖν. ¹⁴ Ἐκεῖνος ἐμὲ δοξάσει, ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ ἐμοῦ λήψεται, καὶ ἀναγγελεῖ ὑμῖν. (¹⁴⁸/_{III}) ¹⁵ Πάντα ὅσα ἔχει ὁ Πατὴρ ἐμὰ ἐστὶ διὰ τοῦτο εἶπον, ^{i ch. 17. 10. & 3. 35.} ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ ἐμοῦ λαμβάνει, καὶ ἀναγγελεῖ ὑμῖν.

(¹⁴⁹/_X) ¹⁶ Μικρὸν καὶ οὐ θεωρεῖτέ με καὶ πάλιν μικρὸν, καὶ ὄψεσθέ με ὅτι ^{j ch. 7. 33. & 12. 35. & 13. 33. & 14. 19.} ὑπάγω πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα. ¹⁷ Εἶπον οὖν ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ πρὸς ἀλλήλους, Τί ἐστὶ τοῦτο ὃ λέγει ἡμῖν, Μικρὸν καὶ οὐ θεωρεῖτέ με καὶ πάλιν μικρὸν καὶ ὄψεσθέ με καὶ, ὅτι ὑπάγω πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα; ¹⁸ Ἐλεγον οὖν, Τοῦτο τί ἐστὶν ὃ λέγει, τὸ μικρὸν; οὐκ οἶδαμεν τί λαλεῖ. ¹⁹ Ἐγὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὅτι ἤθελον αὐτὸν ἐρωτᾶν καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Περὶ τούτου ζητεῖτε μετ' ἀλλήλων, ὅτι εἶπον, Μικρὸν καὶ οὐ θεωρεῖτέ με, καὶ πάλιν μικρὸν καὶ ὄψεσθέ με. ²⁰ Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ^{k ver. 33. Matt. 9. 15. Luke 6. 21. 1 Isa. 26. 17.} κλαύσετε καὶ θρηνήσετε ὑμεῖς, ὃ δὲ κόσμος χαρήσεται ὑμεῖς δὲ λυπηθήσεσθε, ἀλλ' ἡ λύπη ὑμῶν εἰς χαρὰν γενήσεται. ²¹ Ἡ γυνὴ ὅταν τίκτῃ λύπην ἔχει, ὅτι ἦλθεν ἡ ὥρα αὐτῆς· ὅταν δὲ γεννήσῃ τὸ παιδίον, οὐκ ἔτι μνημονεύει — οὐ γὰρ λαλήσει ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ] for He will not speak from Himself (see xiv. 10). He will speak nothing contrary to, or independently of, Me. His knowledge and Mine are one.

— τὰ ἐρχόμενα ἀναγγελεῖ ὑμῖν] He will declare to you the things that are coming to pass. A proof of the Godhead of the Holy Ghost, for no one can reveal the future, but God. (Chrys.)

¹⁴. Ἐκεῖνος ἐμὲ δοξάσει] He shall glorify Me. Glory is fame with praise. And yet Christ's glorification in the world does not confer any thing on Christ, but it confers something on the world, because the praise of what is good brings a benefit to those who give the praise, not to that which receives it. (Aug.)

¹⁵. λαμβάνει] So B, D, E, G, L, M, S, U, Y, Γ, Δ, Λ.—Elz. has λήψεται.

— καὶ ἀναγγελεῖ ὑμῖν] This Scripture shows the distinction of Persons, and the co-equality of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. (Chrys., who dilates on this doctrine here.)

¹⁶. Μικρὸν καὶ οὐ θεωρεῖτέ με] A little while and ye do not behold Me present, and again a little while and ye shall see Me appearing. Compare vii. 33; xiii. 33; and on xiv. 9. There is a difference in the sense of the words θεωρεῖτε and ὄψεσθε, as used in the Gospels; θεωρεῖν is to behold a thing present, to contemplate it (cp. v. 10); ὄψεσθαι is to see it, or Him, appearing (Rev. i. 7, and cp. Acts xx. 38).

The primary sense of this sentence therefore appears to be,

A little time will elapse, and ye no longer continue to see Me present (οὐ θεωρεῖτέ με), because I shall die and be buried. And again a little time will elapse, and ye shall see Me reappear (ὄψεσθέ με), because I shall rise again, and then be visible to you.

The words, "Because I go to the Father," which are not found in B, D, L, are omitted by some Editors. But these words are quite in harmony with the sense above expressed. For, in order that Christ should go to the Father, and be exalted to His Right Hand, it was necessary that He should first die, and be buried, and rise again. His Passion, and Burial, and Resurrection, were necessary preliminaries to His Ascension. See Phil. ii. 8, 9.

This interpretation (authorized by Cyri], Chrysos., Theodor. Mops., Euthym.) does not, however, exhaust the meaning of the words,—addressed, as they appear to be, not only to the Apostles, but to all Christians.

We may also (with Augustine, Bede, Maldonatus, and others) see in them a more comprehensive sense, as follows:

A little while will elapse, and ye will no longer continue to see Me; for I shall withdraw from you My bodily presence, by departing from you to the Father. (Cp. v. 10, where He says, "I go to the Father, and ye no longer see Me.") And again a little time will elapse, and ye will see Me reappear, because I go to the Father, in whose glory I shall come again. The time between the Ascension and the Second Advent is a little while, in comparison with Eternity; and when that little while is over, ye shall see Me again. This is a promise to the Universal Church; and when this little while is past, and Christ comes again, and we are admitted to the joys of Eternity, we shall feel how little a time it has been since His absence from the world.

²⁰. κλαύετε κ. θ. ὑμεῖς] These words also, as well as the preceding, appear to have a double sense; first applicable to the Apostles personally, and next to the Church Universal, of all place and time, to the end.

First. Ye, My Apostles, shall weep and lament, when ye see Me crucified and slain; and My enemies—the Jewish World, and Vol. I.

Satan himself the Prince of this world, will exult over Me as conquered,—but I will raise Myself, and ascend in glory; and then ye will rejoice with great joy. (Luke xxiv. 52. John xx. 20.)

Secondly. In a larger sense;—after My Ascension, even till the time of My Second Advent, My Church will be in a state of widowhood. She will weep and lament; and the World will persecute her and triumph over her. (See Rev. xi. 10.) But I shall reappear in glory, and her sorrow shall be turned into joy (Rev. xi. 12); and her light affliction, which is but for a moment, will work for her a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory (2 Cor. iv. 17); and she will be for ever with her Lord (1 Thess. iv. 17).

²¹. Ἡ γυνὴ ὅταν τίκτῃ] The woman when she is in travail, hath sorrow because her hour is come, but as soon as she is delivered of the child, she remembereth no more the anguish. Observe ἡ γυνή, the woman in her womanhood, and in her peculiar sorrow (see Gen. iii. 16). On this use of the article, see on John iii. 10. So, διὰ τὴν χαρὰν, for the joy; her joy, as a mother.

This reference to the woman in travail before the birth of the Man child, has a near and beautiful connexion with our Lord's Discourse on His own approaching Death and Resurrection;

His Resurrection was a Birth; a Birth from Death to Life Everlasting; a Birth which is the source of all other Births, from the Death of Sin to newness of life in this world; and from the Death of the Grave to a glorious Resurrection and a Blessed Immortality, in body and soul, in the life to come. The primitive Church of God went through the throes of parturition, until the day of the Resurrection, when the Second Adam came forth from the womb of the grave; and then she no longer remembered her sorrow, for joy that a Man,—the Man Christ Jesus,—the first-begotten from the dead (Col. i. 18. Rev. i. 18) was born into the world. And all Humanity was born into the world with Him, for "as in Adam all die, so in Christ all are made alive." (1 Cor. xv. 22.) He Himself is the 'Man Who is born into the world,' and by His Resurrection the new man is born. (Cp. Theoph. here.)

See below on Acts ii. 24, and the sublime description in St. John's Apocalypse, describing the Woman in the Wilderness in travail, and pained to be delivered (xii. 2), persecuted by the Dragon; and bringing forth a man child who is to rule all nations with a rod of iron, and is caught up to God and His throne. See the note there; and compare the words of S. Ignatius (the scholar of St. John), quoted in note on Acts ii. 24; and the note on Acts xiii. 33.

In a secondary and wider sense, the Church in this world is the Woman in travail; she is in travail with souls for the new-birth to grace and glory. (Gal. iv. 19.) She groans in the pangs of parturition even till the great Day of Regeneration, the Day of the glorious Reappearing of Christ, and the general Resurrection and new-birth to Immortality. (Rom. viii. 22.) Then, indeed, "a man will be born into the world." Humanity will cast off its grave-clothes, and be glorified for ever in Christ.

The Church may be compared to this woman, because she brings forth children to God. Now is her time of travail; but when that time is over and her hour is come, then she will rejoice at the birth of a faithful progeny to life eternal. She is now in travail in looking for Christ, she will then be delivered, when she sees Him. (Aug.)

— τὸ παιδίον] the child, which has caused her pain.

m Luke 24. 41.
Acts 13. 52.
1 Pet. 1. 8

n ch. 14. 13.
& 15. 16.
Matt. 7. 7.
& 21. 22.
Mark 11. 24.
James 1. 5.
o ch. 14. 13, 14.
& 15. 7, 16.
Matt. 7. 7.
p ch. 17. 13.
& 1. 16.
& 3. 34.
Eph. 4. 7.
1 Cor. 1. 4—8.
Col. 2. 9, 10.
q ch. 17. 8, 25.

r ch. 17. 8.
s ch. 21. 17.
Matt. 9. 4.
t Matt. 26. 31, 56.
Mark 14. 27, 50.
u ch. 14. 27.
v ver. 1, 2.
ch. 15. 18—20.
1 Thess. 5. 3, 4.
2 Tim. 3. 12.
1 Pet. 5. 9.
Rev. 7. 14.
a ch. 12. 23.
b Matt. 28. 18.
ch. 5. 27.
c ch. 20. 31.
1 John 4. 9, 14.
& 5. 20.
1 Cor. 8. 4.
ch. 6. 29, 37.
& 7. 29.
Jer. 9. 23, 24.
& 31. 33, 34.
2 Cor. 4. 6.
2 Pet. 1. 2—4.

τῆς θλίψεως, διὰ τὴν χαρὰν ὅτι ἐγεννήθη ἄνθρωπος εἰς τὸν κόσμον· ²² ^m καὶ ὑμεῖς οὖν λύπην μὲν νῦν ἔχετε· πάλιν δὲ ὄψομαι ὑμᾶς, καὶ χαρήσεται ὑμῶν ἡ καρδιά, καὶ τὴν χαρὰν ὑμῶν οὐδεὶς αἶρει ἀφ' ὑμῶν. ²³ ⁿ Καὶ ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐμὲ οὐκ ἐρωτήσετε οὐδέν. ⁽¹⁵⁰⁾ ^{iv} Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ὅσα ἂν αἰτήσητε τὸν Πατέρα ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου, δώσει ὑμῖν· ²⁴ ἕως ἄρτι οὐκ ἤτήσατε οὐδέν ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου· ^p αἰτεῖτε καὶ λήψεσθε, ἵνα ἡ χαρὰ ὑμῶν ᾗ πεπληρωμένη.

⁽¹⁶¹⁾ ^x ²⁵ Ταῦτα ἐν παροιμίαις λελάληκα ὑμῖν· ἔρχεται ὥρα ὅτε οὐκ ἔτι ἐν παροιμίαις λαλήσω ὑμῖν, ἀλλὰ παρῥησίᾳ περὶ τοῦ Πατρὸς ἀπαγγελῶ ὑμῖν. ²⁶ Ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου αἰτήσεσθε· καὶ οὐ λέγω ὑμῖν ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐρωτήσω τὸν Πατέρα περὶ ὑμῶν, ²⁷ ^q αὐτὸς γὰρ ὁ Πατὴρ φιλεῖ ὑμᾶς, ὅτι ὑμεῖς ἐμὲ πεφιλήκατε, καὶ πεπιστεύκατε ὅτι ἐγὼ παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθον. ²⁸ ^r Εξῆλθον παρὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς, καὶ ἐλήλυθα εἰς τὸν κόσμον· πάλιν ἀφίημι τὸν κόσμον, καὶ πορεύομαι πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα.

²⁹ Δέγουσιν αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, Ἴδε νῦν παρῥησίᾳ λαλεῖς, καὶ παροιμίαν οὐδεμίαν λέγεις. ³⁰ ^t νῦν οἶδαμεν ὅτι οἶδας πάντα, καὶ οὐ χρεῖαν ἔχεις ἵνα τίς σε ἐρωτᾷ· ἐν τούτῳ πιστεύομεν ὅτι ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθες. ⁽¹⁵²⁾ ^{iv} ³¹ Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἄρτι πιστεύετε; ³² ^u ἰδοὺ ἔρχεται ὥρα, καὶ νῦν ἐλήλυθεν, ἵνα σκορπισθῇτε ἕκαστος εἰς τὰ ἴδια, καὶ ἐμὲ μόνον ἀφήτε· καὶ οὐκ εἰμὶ μόνος, ὅτι ὁ Πατὴρ μετ' ἐμοῦ ἐστι.

⁽¹⁵³⁾ ^x ³³ ^v Ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν ἵνα ἐν ἐμοὶ εἰρήνην ἔχητε. Ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ θλίψιν ἔχετε, ἀλλὰ θαρσεῖτε, ἐγὼ νενίκηκα τὸν κόσμον.

XVII. ¹ ^a Ταῦτα ἐλάλησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἐπήρε τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς αὐτοῦ εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ εἶπε, Πάτερ, ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα· δόξασόν σου τὸν Υἱόν, ἵνα ὁ Υἱός σου δοξάσῃ σέ· ² ^b καθὼς ἔδωκας αὐτῷ ἐξουσίαν πάσης σαρκὸς, ἵνα πᾶν ὃ δέδωκας αὐτῷ, δώσῃ αὐτοῖς ζωὴν αἰώνιον· ³ ^c αὕτη δέ ἐστιν ἡ αἰώνιος — ἄνθρωπος] 'homo,' not ἀνὴρ, 'vir'; and, in a spiritual sense, the new man; regenerate humanity.

²³ οὐκ ἐρωτήσετε] Ye shall ask no questions, for gladness and fullness of fruition. Ye shall know all things, enjoy all things, and have no need of any thing.

Observe the difference of αἰτεῖν and ἐρωτᾶν; αἰτεῖν is said of a beggar who asks alms; ἐρωτᾶν of any one who asks questions, or inquiries; or of an equal who desires something to be done by another. Cp. Trench, Syn. xl.

— ὅσα ἂν αἰτήσητε τὸν Πατέρα ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου] B, C, L, X, Y, Δ, place ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου after δώσει ὑμῖν, and this is adopted in some editions. But the language of Scripture (xiv. 13; xv. 16; xvi. 26, &c.) and the majority of MSS. is in favour of the received text. And it is not any prayer that obtains a favourable answer from God, but only prayer in Christ's Name; and every prayer so offered is granted, for it is offered in a spirit of submission to His Will.

They who do not believe rightly concerning Christ do not ask in His Name. (Aug.)

²⁵ ἀπαγγελῶ] So A, B, C*, D, K, L, M, U, X, Y.—Elz. has ἀναγγελῶ. See iv. 25; xvi. 13—15.

²⁸ ἀφίημι τὸν κόσμον] I leave the world and go to the Father. Christ left the world as Man, and has gone to the Father by bodily Ascension; but as God, He has not left the world, which He governs with His Divine presence; just as when He came forth from the Father into the world, He did not leave the Father. (Aug.)

³² ἵνα σκορπισθῇτε] that ye shall be scattered, not only in body, by deserting Me personally, but also in mind, by falling away from faith in Me. This was fulfilled when He was apprehended, "and they all forsook Him and fled." Matt. xxvi. 56. (Aug.)

³³ ἔχετε] So A, B, C, E, G, H, K, L, M, S, U, X, Y, Γ, Δ, and many Cursive MSS.—Elz. has ἔχετε, but ἔχετε seems preferable. Tribulation is your portion in this life; it is what you have; suffering is your inheritance here, in order that you may reign hereafter.

— νενίκηκα] I have conquered the world. See the sublime vision in St. John's Apocalypse, where Christ goes forth "conquering and to conquer," vi. 2. The Victory of Christ over the World, and the Victory of Christians by means of that Victory, are themes specially appropriated to the last Evangelist St. John. See 1 John ii. 13, 14; iv. 4; v. 4. Rev. ii. 7. 11. 17. 26; iii. 5 12. 21; xii. 11; xv. 2; xvii. 14; xxi. 7.

CH. XVII. 1. Ταῦτα ἐλάλησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς] He had said that in the world they should have tribulation, and He now teaches them by His example, that in tribulation they should resort to prayer. (Chrys.)

— καὶ ἐπήρε—καὶ εἶπε] and He lifted up His eyes to heaven and said. He might have prayed in silence; but He would teach us by His prayer, how to believe and pray aright. This prayer, offered in the hearing of His Disciples, is designed to instruct us what our own desires, and thoughts, and actions should be. (Aug., Theoph.)

— ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα] the hour of suffering is come; and yet in suffering Christ was glorified, so that the Centurion confessed Him to be the Son of God. (Matt. xxvii. 54. Hilary, de Trin. iii.) And if He was glorified in His Passion, how much more in His Resurrection! (Aug.)

— ἵνα ὁ Υἱός σου δοξάσῃ σέ] in order that Thy Son may glorify Thee; not by adding to Thy divine glory, but by making it known to all Nations by the Gospel. And as far as Christ's part was concerned, all Nations, to whom it has been offered, have received the Gospel; He has died for all; and has given a commission that the Gospel should be preached to all. (Aug. Hilary, de Trin. iii. Chrys.)

² ἔδωκας—δέδωκας] Thou gavest Him power over all flesh. Observe these words expressive of gifts to Christ, frequently repeated in this Prayer (vv. 4. 6, 7, 8, 9, 11, 12. 22. 24), commemorating what Christ has received from the Father. Thus this Prayer may be regarded as an example of Thanksgiving;

But how is Christ said to receive?

First, in that He is the Son of God; secondly, in that His human nature has the honour of union with Deity, by virtue of His Incarnation; thirdly, in that by means thereof, sundry eminent graces have flowed, as effects from Deity, into that human nature which is coupled with it. On Christ, therefore, there is bestowed the gift of Eternal Generation, the gift of Union, and the gift of Union.

By the gift of Eternal Generation Christ hath received of the Father one, and in number the selfsame, substance, which ζωῇ, ἵνα γινώσκωσί σε τὸν μόνον ἀληθινὸν Θεὸν, καὶ ὃν ἀπέστειλας Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν. ⁴ Ἐγὼ σε ἐδόξασα ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς· τὸ ἔργον ἐτελείωσα ὃ δεδωκάς μοι ἵνα ποιήσω· ⁵ καὶ νῦν δόξασόν με σὺ, Πάτερ, παρὰ σεαυτῷ· ⁶ τῇ δόξῃ ἣ εἶχον πρὸ τοῦ τὸν κόσμον εἶναι παρὰ σοί. ⁶ Ἐφανερώσά σου τὸ ὄνομα τοῖς ἀνθρώποις, οὓς δέδωκάς μοι ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου. Σοὶ ᾗσαν, καὶ ἐμοὶ αὐτοὺς δέδωκας, καὶ τὸν λόγον σου τετηρήκασι. ⁷ Νῦν ἔγνωκαν ὅτι πάντα ὅσα δέδωκάς μοι παρὰ σοῦ ἐστίν· ⁸ ὅτι τὰ ῥήματα ἃ δέδωκάς μοι, δέδωκα αὐτοῖς· καὶ αὐτοὶ ἔλαβον, καὶ ἔγνωσαν ἀληθῶς ὅτι παρὰ σοῦ ἐξῆλθον· καὶ ἐπίστευσαν ὅτι σὺ με ἀπέστειλας.

d ch. 1. 1, 3.
& 3. 13. & 6. 62.
i Cor. 15. 47.
Phil. 2. 6, 7.
Col. 1. 15—17.
e Ps. 22. 22.
Heb. 2. 12.
ch. 1. 18.
f ch. 7. 16.
& 16. 27, 30.
ver. 25.

the Father hath of Himself, unreceived from any other. For every beginning is a Father unto that which cometh of it; and every offspring is a Son unto that out of which it groweth. Seeing, therefore, the Father alone is originally that Deity which Christ originally is not (for Christ is God, by being of God, Light by issuing out of Light), it followeth hereupon, that whatsoever Christ hath common unto Him with His heavenly Father, the same of necessity must be given Him, but naturally and eternally given, not bestowed by way of benevolence and favour, as the other gifts both are. And, therefore, where the Fathers give it out for a rule, that whatsoever Christ is said in Scripture to have received, the same we ought to apply only to the manhood of Christ; their assertion is true of all things which Christ hath received by grace, but to that which He hath received of the Father by eternal nativity or birth it reacheth not;

Touching union of Deity with manhood, it is by grace, because there can be no greater grace showed towards man, than that God should vouchsafe to unite to man's nature the person of his only-begotten Son. Because "the Father loveth the Son" as man, He hath, by uniting Deity with manhood, "given all things into His hands." It hath pleased the Father that in Him "all fulness should dwell." The "Name" which He hath "above all names" is given Him. "As the Father hath life in Himself," the "Son in Himself hath life also" by the gift of the Father. The gift, whereby God hath made Christ a fountain of life, is that "conjunction of the nature of God with the nature of man" in the person of Christ, "which gift," saith Christ to the woman of Samaria, "if thou didst know, and in that respect understand Who it is which asketh water of thee, thou wouldest ask of Him that He might give thee living water." The union, therefore, of the flesh with Deity, is to that flesh a gift of principal grace and favour. For by virtue of this grace man is really made God, a creature is exalted above the dignity of all creatures, and hath all creatures else under it. (Hooker, V. liv.)

— ἐξουσίαν σαρκὸς authority over flesh. So Matt. x. 1, ἐξουσίαν πνευμάτων.

3. ἵνα γινώσκωσί that they may know; i. e. acknowledge, love, honour, and obey, suitably to the attributes of God and Christ, which that knowledge reveals.—γινώσκειν is the Hebr. יָדָה (yadha), which not only signifies mental knowledge, but also the moral and spiritual affections, and acts consequent on it. See Buxtorf in v.

— τὸν μόνον ἀληθινὸν Θεόν the only true God. Not that (as the Socinians say) Christ is not God. Christ is praying. He first speaks as Man; and of what is given to Him as such (v. 1, 2, and in v. 6). He then speaks of the Glory, that He Himself had with the Father, before the world was; and says, that all things that the Father has are His (v. 10), and that He and the Father are one (ἐν, one nature and substance, v. 11, 22). And He says that the Father is in Him, and He in the Father (v. 21). Our knowledge, therefore, of the Father, as the Only true God, must include the knowledge of the Son as in Him, and Co-equal, Co-eternal, and Consubstantial with Him; and it would be incomplete without it; as the knowledge of the Solar Orb includes the knowledge of the Light which beams from it.

The Father, as πηγὴ Θεότητος, or fountain of Deity, may in Himself be called μόνος, only, and in this sense the text was understood by some in ancient times. See Hooker, quoted on v. 2, and Bp. Bull (Def. Fid. Nic. iv. 1), who says, "The ancients did not shrink from calling God the Father the One and Only God, as being the principle, cause, author, and fountain of the Son. For thus the Nicene fathers themselves commence their creed: 'We believe in one God the Father Almighty,' &c. And thus subjoin, 'and in one Lord Jesus Christ, . . . God of God.' And the great Athanasius, in his Oration against the Sabellians, not far from the beginning, allows that the Father is rightly designated 'the Only God, because He alone is unbegotten, and alone is the fountain of Godhead.' To his testimony I will only add that of Hilary, who, in the third book of his work on the Trinity, setting forth the passage of the Evangelist John (xvii. 3), where the Father is called 'the Only true God,' writes as follows: 'Due honour is rendered by the Son to the Father,' when He says, 'Thee, the Only true God;' the Son, however, does not separate Himself from the truth of Godhead when He adds, 'And Jesus Christ whom Thou hast sent.' The confession of the faithful puts no interval [between Them], because in Both is the hope of life; nor is true God[head] wanting to Him, Who, when They are put together, comes second in order. When, therefore, it is said, 'That they may know Thee, the Only true God, and Jesus Christ whom Thou hast sent,' under this meaning, that is, 'that of Sender and Sent, the truth and Godhead of the Father and of the Son, is not distinguished under any difference of meaning or extent, but the faith of [our] religion is instructed unto the confessing of the Begetter and the Begotten.' And now to all these testimonies I will add this, by way of conclusion; that the doctrine, that in the Trinity there is Only One Beginning without Beginning, even the Father, was so fixed, decreed, and established in the primitive Church, that in the forty-ninth of what are called the Apostolical Canons, he is condemned who shall baptize into 'three [Persons] without beginning,' εἰς τρεῖς ἀνάρχους. On which canon Zonaras has made this comment; 'For the Church has received to worship One without beginning, even the Father, because of His being uncaused; and One Son because of His ineffable generation; and One Comforter, the Holy Ghost, by reason of His procession.'"

Observe, also, our Lord adds the word ἀληθινόν, true. This shows, that He is not contemplating the Father as distinct in His Divine Nature from the Son, but as the true God, distinguished from false gods, who have no life, and cannot give it. Thus St. Paul says, "There is none other God but One" (1 Cor. viii. 4). "And ye turned from idols to serve the living and true God" (1 Thess. i. 9. Cp. Rom. xvi. 27. 1 Tim. i. 17). Thus Christ shows, that the distinction He makes between Himself and the Father is not in regard to Godhead, but as to Manhood; as St. Paul does, when he says, "There is One God and One Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus." (1 Tim. ii. 5.) And yet St. Paul calls Christ the blessed and Only Potentate, King of Kings, and Lord of Lords. (1 Tim. vi. 15. Cp. Jude 4. 25, where Christ is called the Only Lord.) This is the sense in which the passage is understood by Cyprian, Exhort. ad Martyr. Greg. Nazian. Orat. 4. Basil. c. Lunom. lib. v. Chrys. and Cyril here, and Theodoret in Caten. See Maldonat., who well says: "These words, the only true God, are to be referred to the Father, not however to the exclusion of the Son, but to the exclusion of idols. The Father is not here contrasted with the Son, or with the Holy Ghost, but with idols." And see Waterland (Defence of some Queries, Qu. 2, vol. i. p. 6), and Trench (Syn. N. T. § viii.) on the distinction between ἀληθινός and ἀληθής. St. John himself has thus explained the passage by what he says at the close of his first Epistle, which is the best comment on it: "We know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us understanding that we may know Him that is true (τὸν ἀληθινόν); and we are in Him that is true (τῷ ἀληθινῷ), in His Son Jesus Christ; this is the true God (ὁ ἀληθινός Θεός) and eternal Life. Little children, keep yourselves from idols."

5. νῦν δόξασόν με σὺ, Πάτερ] now, O Father, glorify Thou Me with Thine own self, with the glory which I had with Thee before the world was. He prays that His human nature, which He had assumed in time, may be received into that Divine Glory, which He had with the Father from eternity. (Hilary, de Trin. iii. Chrys., Cyril. Cp. Iren. iii. 14.) See on 1 Cor. xv. 24.

7. ἔγνωκαν] On this Alexandrine form for ἐγνώκασι, see Winer, p. 71. Cp. Rev. xix. 3, εἶρκαν.

g Luke 22. 32.
Rom. 8. 34.
Heb. 7. 25.
& 9. 24.
1 John 2. 1.
h ch. 16. 15.
i ch. 10. 30.
& ver. 21.

j ch. 6. 39.
& 18. 9.
Heb. 2. 13.

k ch. 15. 11.
& 16. 24.

l ch. 15. 13.
1 John 3. 13.

m Matt. 6. 13.
2 Thess. 3. 3.
1 John 5. 18.

n ch. 15. 3.
Ps. 119. 142.

o 1 Cor. 1. 2, 30.
Heb. 10. 10.

p ch. 10. 38.
& 14. 10.
1 John 1. 3.
& 3. 24.

⁹ Ἐγὼ περὶ αὐτῶν ἐρωτῶ· οὐ περὶ τοῦ κόσμου ἐρωτῶ, ἀλλὰ περὶ ὧν δέδωκάς μοι, ὅτι σοί εἰσι· ¹⁰ καὶ τὰ ἐμὰ πάντα σὰ ἐστὶ, καὶ τὰ σὰ ἐμὰ· καὶ δεδόξασμαι ἐν αὐτοῖς· ¹¹ καὶ οὐκέτι εἰμὶ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ, καὶ οὗτοι ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ εἰσὶ, καὶ ἐγὼ πρὸς σε ἔρχομαι. Πάτερ ἅγιε, τήρησον αὐτοὺς ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί σου, ᾧ δέδωκάς μοι, ἵνα ὦσιν ἐν καθὼς ἡμεῖς. ¹² Ὅτε ἤμην μετ' αὐτῶν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ, ἐγὼ ἐτήρουν αὐτοὺς ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί σου· οὓς δέδωκάς μοι ἐφύλαξα, καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐξ αὐτῶν ἀπώλετο, εἰ μὴ ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀπωλείας, ἵνα ἡ γραφὴ πληρωθῇ. ¹³ Νῦν δὲ πρὸς σε ἔρχομαι, καὶ ταῦτα λαλῶ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ, ἵνα ἔχωσιν τὴν χαρὰν τὴν ἐμὴν πεπληρωμένην ἐν αὐτοῖς. ¹⁴ Ἐγὼ δέδωκα αὐτοῖς τὸν λόγον σου· καὶ ὁ κόσμος ἐμίσησεν αὐτοὺς, ὅτι οὐκ εἰσὶν ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου, καθὼς ἐγὼ οὐκ εἰμὶ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου. ¹⁵ Οὐκ ἐρωτῶ ἵνα ἄρῃς αὐτοὺς ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου, ἀλλ' ἵνα τηρήσῃς αὐτοὺς ἐκ τοῦ πονηροῦ. ¹⁶ Ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου οὐκ εἰσὶ, καθὼς ἐγὼ οὐκ εἰμὶ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου. ¹⁷ Ἁγιάσον αὐτοὺς ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ σου· ὁ λόγος ὁ σὸς ἀλήθειά ἐστι. ¹⁸ Καθὼς ἐμέ ἀπέστειλας εἰς τὸν κόσμον, καὶ γὰρ ἀπέστειλα αὐτοὺς εἰς τὸν κόσμον· ¹⁹ καὶ ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν ἐγὼ ἀγιάζω ἑμαυτὸν, ἵνα ὦσι καὶ αὐτοὶ ἡγιασμένοι ἐν ἀληθείᾳ.

²⁰ Οὐ περὶ τούτων δὲ ἐρωτῶ μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ περὶ τῶν πιστευόντων διὰ τοῦ λόγου αὐτῶν εἰς ἐμέ, ²¹ ἵνα πάντες ἐν ὧσι, καθὼς σὺ, Πάτερ, ἐν ἐμοὶ, καὶ γὰρ ἐν

9. οὐ περὶ τοῦ κόσμου ἐρωτῶ] I pray not for those who live according to the lusts and vanities of the world. (Aug., Theoph.)

11. ὧ] So A, B, C, E, G, H, K, L, M, S, Y, Γ, Δ, Δ, and many Cursives. Elz. οὓς. The ὄνομα or Name here specified is not the divinity of Christ, but the attributes which He has by virtue of His Incarnation. These are said to be given Him by the Father. Hence St. Paul says, that "God has given Him a Name above every Name, that at the Name of Jesus every knee should bow." Phil. ii. 9, 10. See note there, and on Matt. xxviii. 18. John iii. 34, 35; v. 27; xiii. 3; xvii. 8. Rev. vi. 2, and above on v. 2.

— ὦσιν ἐν] may be one. See vv. 20—22.

12. ἐγὼ ἐτήρουν] I was keeping them in Thy Name. Observe ἐτήρουν and ἐφύλαξα here; one the imperfect tense, and signifying conservabam,—the other the aorist, and meaning custodivi.

— οὓς δέδωκάς μοι] whom Thou hast given Me. It appears from this and the following words that Judas was given to the Son by the Father, and that therefore he was once in a state of salvation; and became a betrayer and murderer (ἐγένετο προδότης, Luke vi. 16) by his own will. Even after he had betrayed Christ, he might have been saved by the merits of the innocent blood, which he had betrayed. (Aug. in Ps. lxxviii. Leo M., Sermon i. 3, 5, de Passione; and Chrys. here.) Our Lord appears to have referred to Judas here for the purpose of saying that none of His Sheep had been lost by the Shepherd, but by their own sin; and even in that there was a proof of His own truth. See next note, and on Luke xv. 9.

On the case of Judas, see Hammond, Letter to Sanderson concerning God's grace and decrees, in Bp. Sanderson's Works, v. p. 324.

— ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀπωλείας] the son of perdition: one who is moved by the spirit of destruction (Ἀβασδδών, Rev. ix. 11, רִיבְיָא, rendered by the LXX ἀπάλεια), and who draws others to destruction, and whose end is destruction. This phrase is a Hebrewism, בְּנֵי-מַלְאֶכֶת (ben-maleth), υἱὸς θανάτου (1 Sam. xxvi. 16. 2 Sam. xii. 5), בְּנֵי מַשְׁחִית (ben mashchith), Isa. i. 4, i.e. 'filius mortis et perditionis, quatenus morte et perditione dignus eaque puniendus.' Cp. Rosenmüller here, and Matt. xxiii. 15, υἱὸν γεέννης, and note on υἱὸν νομφῶνος (Matt. ix. 15).

On the use of the term "Son of Perdition," applied to the "Man of Sin" prefigured by Judas, the Traitor Apostle, see on 2 Thess. ii. 3.

— ἵνα ἡ γραφὴ πληρωθῇ] He perished in order that the Scripture might be fulfilled. But the Scripture would not have been written by God, unless God had foreseen that he would perish. And this divine Prescience, though it foreknew and foretold that he would perish, did not in any way cause him to perish. Why then was this Scripture written? In order that even his perishing might be an evidence of God's foresight; and so the Traitor himself, even in the hands of Satan, and betraying Christ, might be a witness of the truth, even by his perishing; and so Judas, 'the son of Perdition,' might still, even in his perdition, be an Apostle of the Son of God.

14. οὐκ εἰσὶν ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου] they are not of the world, but citizens of heaven. (Chrys.)

15. τοῦ πονηροῦ] the Evil One.

17. Ἁγιάσον αὐτοὺς ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ σου] Make them holy by the gift of the Spirit and sound doctrine. Set them apart from the world and consecrate them as living sacrifices for Thyself. (Chrys., Theoph.)

The word ἅγιος, holy, properly signifies what is set apart from profane and common uses, and dedicated to God; and is therefore opposed to κοινὸς, common, or unclean. Hence τὸ ἅγιον in the Temple is the Holy Place, and ἅγια ἁγίων the Most Holy; separated from all other places by partitions, and consecrated to God. And ἀγιάζω means, to set apart as holy to God, and is explained by Theodore (ad Joel iii.) as equivalent to ἀφορίω. Cp. Matt. xxiii. 17. 19. Rom. xv. 16. 2 Tim. ii. 21. (Schlesner.)

19. ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν ἐγὼ ἀγιάζω ἑμαυτὸν] for their sakes I sanctify Myself; I set Myself apart from the world, and dedicate Myself to Thee. I offer Myself as an oblation, a holy victim to Thee, that they also may be sanctified and presented as oblations to Thee. Cp. John x. 11. 15. 17. Heb. ix. 14.

I sanctify or hallow Myself, My Body, as an offering for sin (Heb. x. 5), and I sanctify My Body the Church, whose members are members of Christ and are sanctified in Him. Heb. ii. 11. (Aug.) Cp. on xi. 55.

Christ, our Great High Priest, Who offers Himself, is our Head, and we are His members. And as He offered Himself, so must we, according to the Apostolic saying (Rom. xii. 1): "I beseech you, brethren, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." (Chrys., Theoph.) — ἵνα ὦσι καὶ αὐτοὶ] This is the order of the words in many of the best MSS. and Versions.

20. ἐρωτῶ μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ περὶ τῶν πιστευόντων] Elz. has πιστευόντων. But πιστευόντων, the reading of the best MSS., is preferable as signifying all believers, present at once to the Eye of Christ's Omniscience.

21. ἵνα πάντες ἐν ὧσι] that they all may be one. On the Socinian objection drawn from these words, see above on x. 30. Our Lord prays that all may be one ('unum') as Thou, O Father, in Me, and I in Thee, are one ('unum'). The Father is in such a manner in the Son, that they are 'unum' (one substance). We may be in them, but we cannot be 'unum' with them, for we are not consubstantial with them; inasmuch as the Son with the Father is God. The Father and Son are in us, as God is in a temple; and we are in them, as a creature is in its Creator. He adds, that they may be one ('unum') in us, because our unity in Love is due not to ourselves, but to Divine Grace. Aug., Hilary, de Trin. viii.; and cp. Athanas. c. Arian. iii. 17, pp. 449—454. For a fulfilment of this petition, see Acts iv. 32.

He prays that we all may be one—"perfectly joined together σοὶ, ἵνα καὶ αὐτοὶ ἐν ἡμῖν ἐν ὧσιν, ἵνα ὁ κόσμος πιστεύσῃ ὅτι σύ με ἀπέστειλας.

 22 Καὶ ἐγὼ τὴν δόξαν ἣν δέδωκάς μοι δέδωκα αὐτοῖς, ἵνα ὧσιν ἐν, καθὼς ἡμεῖς ἐν ἐσμεν, 23 ἐγὼ ἐν αὐτοῖς καὶ σὺ ἐν ἐμοί, ἵνα ὧσι τετελειωμένοι εἰς ἐν, καὶ ἵνα γινώσκῃ ὁ κόσμος ὅτι σύ με ἀπέστειλας, καὶ ἡγάπησας αὐτοὺς, καθὼς ἐμε ἡγάπησας. 24 Ὁ Πάτερ, οὗς δέδωκάς μοι, θέλω ἵνα ὅπου εἰμὶ ἐγὼ κἀκεῖνοι ὧσι μετ' ἐμοῦ, ἵνα θεωρῶσι τὴν δόξαν τὴν ἐμὴν ἣν δέδωκάς μοι, ὅτι ἡγάπησάς με πρὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου. (154) 25 Ὁ Πάτερ δίκαιε, καὶ ὁ κόσμος σε οὐκ ἔγνω, ἐγὼ δέ σε ἔγνω, (155) καὶ οὗτοι ἔγνωσαν ὅτι σύ με ἀπέστειλας, 26 καὶ ἐγνώρισα αὐτοῖς τὸ ὄνομά σου, καὶ γνωρίσω, ἵνα ἡ ἀγάπη ἣν ἡγάπησάς με ἐν αὐτοῖς ᾗ, κἀγὼ ἐν αὐτοῖς.

XVIII. (156) 1 Ὁ Ταῦτα εἰπὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐξῆλθε σὺν τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ πέραν τοῦ χειμαρροῦ τῶν Κέδρων, ὅπου ἦν κήπος, εἰς ὃν εἰσῆλθεν αὐτὸς καὶ

q ch. 12. 26.
 & 14. 3.
 1 Thess. 4. 17.
 ver. 5.
 r 1 Pet. 2. 23.
 ch. 8. 19, 49, 50.
 & 15. 21. & 16. 3.
 Rom. 3. 3, 4.
 Matt. 11. 25—27.
 ch. 6. 68, 69.
 & 16. 27, 30.

a Matt. 26. 36.
 Mark 14. 32.
 Luke 22. 39.
 2 Sam. 15. 23.

in one Will and Mind and Judgment"—as He and the Father are One. Nothing is such a stumbling-block to those who learn, as discord among their Teachers. How will any one be willing to listen to those who have not the same mind? Therefore Christ prays that they may be one, as He and the Father are One. Theoph., Euthym., whose words deserve to be transcribed: "Our Lord foresaw that nothing would be so great a hindrance to the Preaching of the Gospel, as discord among its Preachers, whether in discrepancy of teaching, or in personal animosity. Because, if they are at variance with one another, men will say, that they cannot be indeed disciples of Him Who was the Prince of Peace, and if they are not His disciples, they are not sent by God. 'But if they are all of one mind, and keep My commandments,' says Christ, 'all men will know that they are My disciples indeed, and that Thou, O Father, hast sent Me.'" Memorable words; deserving to be engraven on the minds of all Missionaries and Ministers of Christ, and of all who endeavour to promote the Missionary cause at home and abroad.

In ourselves we cannot be one, on account of our lusts and sins, which divide us; and from which we are cleansed through the One Mediator, that we may be one with Him. (Aug. de Trin. iii. 9.)

24. θέλω ἵνα ὅπου εἰμὶ ἐγὼ κἀκεῖνοι ὧσι] I will that they also whom Thou hast given Me, be with Me where I am. He had said before (iii. 13), "No man hath ascended up to heaven but He that came down from heaven;" and what He now says is in unison with that; for our Lord is the Head of His members, and we are made one in Him. He ascends and carries us to that place, whence He Himself alone came down. See Eph. ii. 6. Greg. Mor. xxvii. 1.

—θεωρῶσι] may contemplate. See xii. 45; and on xiv. 19; xvi. 16.

25. Πάτερ δίκαιε] Righteous Father. When our Lord prays that they may be sanctified, He says Πάτερ ἁγίε (xvii. 11); He now appeals to His Father's Justice, which will be seen in punishing the world, which refused to know Him (v. 25), and in glorifying those who are sanctified by the offering of Christ (v. 10), and who recognize that God has sent Him, and are sanctified in His truth, and will therefore be glorified with Him (v. 24).

CH. XVIII. 1. ἐξῆλθε] He went out of the City and its suburbs.

—τῶν Κέδρων] Cedron. Its vernacular form is קִדְרֹן (Kidron, 2 Sam. xv. 23. 1 Kings xv. 13. 2 Kings xxiii. 4), from root קדר (kadhar), to be black. This brook flows in the valley or ravine between the City and the Mount of Olives, toward the Dead Sea. Cp. Robinson, Palestine, ii. 32. Winer, i. p. 655.

I have not ventured to follow some recent Editors here in changing this reading into τοῦ Κεδρών. It may perhaps be the right reading; but there is not sufficient evidence to justify its adoption. The very great majority of MSS. have τῶν Κέδρων. The other reading, τοῦ Κεδρών, is only found in three uncials, A, S, Δ, and one cursive MS.

Doubtless τοῦ Κεδρών is etymologically correct; though according to strict etymology, it should be Κιδρών. But the Greek and Latin inhabitants of Jerusalem may have Grecized and Latinized the Hebrew Kidron into a form which gave an intelligible sense in their own languages; and so the "brook Kidron" may have been known to them as the brook τῶν Κέδρων, of Cedars.

Thus it might have been accommodated in its name to other neighbouring places, such as the Garden of Gethsemane and the Mount of Olives. It is observable that the Hebrew brook Kishon has also been Grecized in like manner into χειμαρροῦς τῶν

Κισσῶν, or brook of Ivy. See Suidas, v. Ἰαβίν. (Cp. Br. Middleton.)

We see this process of modification, for the sake of intelligibility, operating on the names of places in all languages. Thus Μαλόεις became first Maleventum, and then Beneventum; which no Critic would correct on etymological grounds. Thus the Euripus has been Italianized into Negro-ponte. Thus the Hebrew name of Jerusalem itself has been Grecized into Ἱεροσόλυμα, which no one would expunge on principles of strict etymological accuracy from the pages of the New Testament. See the remarks of Gregory Nazianz. Orat. xlv. § 10, on the word πάσχα.

Besides, we find the very words of the text of the MSS. here, χειμαρροῦς τῶν Κέδρων, actually used as a translation of the Hebrew 'brook Kidron' in the LXX Version of 2 Sam. xv. 23, describing David's sorrowful passage over it: πάσα ἡ γῆ ἐκλαίει φωνῇ μεγάλῃ· καὶ πᾶς ὁ λαὸς παρεπορεύοντο ἐν τῷ χειμαρρῷ τῶν Κέδρων· καὶ ὁ βασιλεὺς διέβη τὸν χειμαρρὸν Κέδρων. Had not St. John this passage in his mind, when he described the mournful transit of the Son of David over the same brook?

It may indeed be alleged, that almost all the MSS. have been altered here by a blunder of the Copyists, who did not understand Hebrew, and have introduced a Greek form. But is this consistent with a due regard to the authority of the MSS.? And if we are to abandon that authority, and resort for refuge to the individual opinions of a discordant criticism, where will be the Text itself? Is it not at least as probable, that the four MSS. which have τοῦ Κεδρών here, may have been altered to suit the Hebrew sense, as that the four hundred which have τῶν Κέδρων have been altered to suit the Greek? The reading τῶν Κέδρων appears also to be recommended by the usage of Josephus. He uses the form Κεδρών (φάραγξ κεδρώνος, Ant. ix. 7. 3. Cp. viii. 1. 5. B. J. v. 6. 1); and every Greek reader would suppose that as Ἑλαιὼν is to be rendered Olivetum, or a place of Olives; so Κεδρών is Cedretum, a place of Cedars. Cp. ἱρεὼν, salicetum; ῥοδῶν, rosetum; ἰῶν, violetum; μυρτῶν, myrtetum; ἀμπελῶν, vinetum; and many others. The word Κέδρος, Cedrus, Cedar, may also be derived from the Hebrew root signifying dark; and it is by no means improbable that there were Cedars near the brook Kedron.

On the whole, it seems more consistent with reverence for the sacred Text, and with respect for its readers, not to disturb the reading of the vast majority of the MSS., than to insert in the Text another reading in its place upon very slender authority.

As was before observed, the name of the brook is probably here mentioned by the Evangelist in order to suggest a reference to the history of David in his passage 'over the brook Kidron' when he fled from his rebellious son (2 Sam. xv. 23). So He, Who in His sufferings was prefigured by David, now passes over it, being rejected by His own City and People.

This was the time of His Agony; and now His Passion may be said to begin. The descent into this Vale, and the passage over this dark Brook, were His path to light and glory. "He drank of the Brook in the way; therefore shall He lift up His head" (Ps. cx. 7.)

This brook lay at the foot of the Mount of Olives, where He had been hailed by prophetic hosannas, and His path had been strewn by branches of palm; from that Mount He was about to ascend into heaven, and to hold forth the Olive branch of Peace to a reconciled World. Thus the dark boughs of the Cedars of the brook, in the Vale of Suffering, which led our Saviour to the Hill of Glory, were entwined with Palm branches of Victory, and with Olive leaves of Peace. Such was the Path of Christ; and such is the path of all, who would follow Him to glory.

—ὅπου ἦν κήπος] where was a garden. The Garden of Gethsemane. (See Matt. xxvi. 36. Mark xiv. 32. Luke xxii. 40.)

- b Luke 22. 39. οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ. ($\frac{157}{x}$) ² b* Ἦδει δὲ καὶ Ἰούδας ὁ παραδιδούς αὐτὸν τὸν τόπον, ὅτι πολλάκις συνήχθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐκεῖ μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ. ($\frac{158}{I}$) ³ c* Ὁ οὖν Ἰούδας λαβὼν τὴν σπείραν, καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἀρχιερέων καὶ Φαρισαίων ὑπηρέτας, ἔρχεται ἐκεῖ μετὰ φανῶν καὶ λαμπάδων καὶ ὄπλων.
- d Matt. 16. 21. ($\frac{159}{x}$) ⁴ Ἰησοῦς οὖν ^d εἰδὼς πάντα τὰ ἐρχόμενα ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἐξελθὼν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Τίνα ζητεῖτε ; ⁵ Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ, Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον. Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἐγὼ εἰμι· εἰστήκει δὲ καὶ Ἰούδας ὁ παραδιδούς αὐτὸν μετ' αὐτῶν.
- e Matt. 26. 53, 54. ⁶ Ὡς οὖν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμι, ^e ἀπήλθον εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω, καὶ ἔπεσον χαμαί.
- ch. 10. 18. Acts 1. 3. ⁷ Πάλιν οὖν αὐτὸς ἐπηρώτησε, Τίνα ζητεῖτε ; οἱ δὲ εἶπον, Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον.
- f ch. 17. 12. ⁸ Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς, Εἶπον ὑμῖν, ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμι· εἰ οὖν ἐμὲ ζητεῖτε, ἄφετε τούτους ὑπάγειν· ⁹ ἵνα πληρωθῇ ὁ λόγος ὃν εἶπεν, Ὅτι οὓς δέδωκάς μοι, οὐκ ἀπώλεσα ἐξ αὐτῶν οὐδένα.
- g Matt. 20. 22. ($\frac{160}{I}$) ¹⁰ Σίμων οὖν Πέτρος ἔχων μάχαιραν εἵλκυσεν αὐτὴν, καὶ ἔπαισε τὸν τοῦ ἀρχιερέως δοῦλον, καὶ ἀπέκοψεν αὐτοῦ τὸ ὠτίον τὸ δεξιόν· ἦν δὲ ὄνομα τῷ δοῦλῳ Μάλχος. ($\frac{161}{I}$) ¹¹ Ἐἶπεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τῷ Πέτρῳ, Βάλε τὴν μάχαιραν εἰς τὴν θήκην· τὸ ποτήριον ὃ δέδωκέ μοι ὁ Πατήρ, οὐ μὴ πῖω αὐτό ;
- h Matt. 26. 57. Mark 14. 53. Luke 22. 54. i Luke 3. 2. ($\frac{162}{I}$) ¹² b* Ἡ οὖν σπείρα καὶ ὁ χιλιάρχος καὶ οἱ ὑπηρέται τῶν Ἰουδαίων συν- ἔλαβον τὸν Ἰησοῦν καὶ ἔδησαν αὐτὸν, ($\frac{163}{x}$) ¹³ i καὶ ἀπήγαγον αὐτὸν πρὸς Ἀνναν

Our Lord's Passion began with His Agony in the Garden; and He arose from the dead in a Garden. The first Adam fell, and we fell with him, in a Garden, in a Gan-Eden, or Garden of Delight. And we suffered with the Second Adam in the Garden of Agony, the Garden of Gethsemane; and we arose with Him in the Garden of Calvary, and by that we are restored to the Paradise of God; the Gan-Eden of everlasting joy.

Our Lord was wont to teach on mountains and in gardens, places sequestered from tumults, and congenial to religious meditation. (Chrys.)

3. τὴν σπείραν] The band assigned by the Procurator to attend the Sanhedrim on the great festivals; part of the garrison of the Temple. (Michaelis, Rosenmüller.) Cp. Luke xxii. 52.

— φανῶν καὶ λαμπάδων] lanterns and torches,—‘lanterns et facibus.’ (Vulg.) Eustathius says that φανῶν are made of ‘lighted twigs.’ Lobeck, Phryn. p. 60. λαμπάς is a torch generally in the LXX and N. T. Cp. Trench. Syn. xlv.

They came with lanterns and torches, to look for Him (though it was full moon), lest He should hide Himself among the trees of the Garden. But He comes forth and says ‘Εγὼ εἰμι, I am; and they fall to the ground.

Here is a striking contrast between the quest in the Garden of Eden for the First Adam, and this search in the Garden of Gethsemane for the Second. The first Adam hides himself amongst the trees of the Garden (Gen. iii. 8). He trembles before Him Who seeks for him. The Second Adam comes forth and says I am. And at the sound of His Voice, they who came to take Him, go back and fall to the ground. The First Adam inculcates Eve; the Second Adam pleads for His disciples. The First Adam is overcome by the Tempter, and loses Paradise; the Second Adam overcomes Satan, and restores His spouse, the Church, to Paradise, and raises her to Heaven.

4. ἐξελθὼν] having come forth; not out of the garden (see v. 26), but He came forward voluntarily from the company of the disciples.

6. ἀπήλθον εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω, καὶ ἔπεσον χαμαί] they went backward, and fell to the ground. On the effects of our Lord's aspect and demeanour see note on Mark x. 32. A single word from Christ threw them prostrate,—them who were armed and exasperated against Him. He did this, when He was about to be judged; how awful therefore will be His power and majesty when He comes to judge! He who did this when about to die, what will He do when reigning in Glory?

In order that no one might say that Christ tempted the Jews to commit the sin of taking Him, by delivering Himself into their hands, the Gospel records how He did every thing that might have deterred them from doing so. (Chrys.)

10. τὸν δοῦλον] ‘the servant.’ So in all the Evangelists. The Article does not imply (as some have thought) that the person struck was a special officer in command over the rest, but it marks Peter's boldness. He whom he struck was not an ordinary person, but he was in the service of the High Priest. It distinguishes the person struck, from all who were not servants of the High Priest.

See this use of the Article above, iii. 10. It is certain that this servant was not the only servant of the High Priest that was in the Garden (see v. 26); and therefore he is not distinguished here from other servants, but from those who were not servants of the High Priest. So ὁ ἐσθλὸν in Mark xiv. 18, and cp. on Acts xviii. 8, and note on 2 Cor. xii. 12, τοῦ ἀποστόλου.

— Μάλχος] The names of Peter and Malchus are mentioned only by St. John; St. Peter being then dead. Cp. Matt. xxvi. 51. Mark xiv. 47. Luke xxii. 50.

11. τὸ ποτήριον] the cup. An expression explained by His Prayer, recited in the other Gospels,—Matt. xxvi. 39. Mark xiv. 36. Luke xxii. 42.

The cup, which His Father gave Him, is that to which the Apostle refers (Rom. viii. 32),—“He spared not His own Son, but freely gave Him for us all.” And yet He Who drank the cup, gave to Himself the cup; for the same Apostle says, “Christ loved us, and hath given Himself for us.” Eph. v. 2. (Aug.)

12. ἔδησαν αὐτόν] they bound Him. The binding of our Lord is mentioned by St. John alone. They bound Him, Who came to loose all from the chains of Satan and of sin (Luke iv. 18), and “to bind the strong man in his house” (Matt. xii. 29).

13. Ἀνναν] Annas. St. John omits for the most part what had been already narrated by the former Evangelists, and here he does not describe the leading of our Lord to Caiaphas (Matt. xxvi. 57. Mark xiv. 53. Luke xxii. 54), except by the single word πρῶτον, which intimates that our Lord was led to Annas before He was led to Caiaphas, and by saying (v. 24) ἀπέστειλεν αὐτὸν ὁ Ἀννας δεδεμένον πρὸς Καϊάφαν τὸν ἀρχιερέα.

It has been said by some (e. g. by Meyer, and see above on Luke xxii. 54) that there is a discrepancy here between St. John and the other Evangelists, as if he asserted that the interrogatory examination of our Lord, and one of Peter's denials, took place in the house of Annas, whereas they describe it as in that of Caiaphas. But cp. John xviii. 18, with Mark xiv. 54. 67. Luke xxii. 55, 56. From the mention of the fire, it appears that all the Evangelists are speaking of one and the same place; which is described as the palace, or rather, the court-yard of the High Priest, by Matt. xxvi. 58, compared with Mark xiv. 53. Luke xxii. 54.

St. John here calls the place, into which our Lord was brought, the court-yard of the High Priest (v. 15), and it is evident that by the word ‘High Priest’ he means Caiaphas. See v. 24, ἀπέστειλεν αὐτόν ὁ Ἀννας δεδεμένον πρὸς Καϊάφαν τὸν ἀρχιερέα.

But it may be asked, If the events narrated in vv. 15—18, and the conversation recorded by St. John in vv. 19—23, did not take place in the house of Annas, why is the leading to Annas mentioned at all? The reason seems to be, that St. John designed to show that our Lord passed through all the successive stages of interrogation that were possible under the circumstances; and that the Jewish Nation, by all its Representatives, made itself responsible for His condemnation and crucifixion.

Annas was an important person, being High Priest de jure, and the head of the sacerdotal order. (See on Luke iii. 2.) Our Lord is brought bound to him, and Annas does nothing to release πρῶτον ἦν γὰρ πενθερὸς τοῦ Καϊάφα, ὃς ἦν ἀρχιερεὺς τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ ἐκείνου ^{14 k} ἦν δὲ Καϊάφας ὁ συμβουλευσας τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, ὅτι συμφέρεי ἓνα ἄνθρωπον ^{k ch. 11. 50.}

 ἀπολέσθαι ὑπὲρ τοῦ λαοῦ. (¹⁶⁴_{IV}) ¹⁵ Ἦκολούθει δὲ τῷ Ἰησοῦ Σίμων Πέτρος, ^{1 Matt. 26. 58.}
 καὶ ὁ ἄλλος μαθητής· (¹⁶⁵_X) ὁ δὲ μαθητὴς ἐκείνος ἦν γνωστὸς τῷ ἀρχιερεῖ, καὶ ^{Mark 14. 54.}
 συνεισηγήθη τῷ Ἰησοῦ εἰς τὴν αὐλὴν τοῦ ἀρχιερέως· (¹⁶⁶_I) ^{16 m} ὁ δὲ Πέτρος ^{m Matt. 26. 69.}
 εἰσθήκει πρὸς τῇ θύρᾳ ἔξω. (¹⁶⁷_X) Ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ μαθητὴς ὁ ἄλλος, ὃς ἦν γνωστὸς τῷ ἀρχιερεῖ, καὶ εἶπε τῇ θυρωρῷ καὶ εἰσῆγαγε τὸν Πέτρον. (¹⁶⁸_I) ¹⁷ Λέγει οὖν ἡ παιδίσκη ἡ θυρωρὸς τῷ Πέτρῳ, Μὴ καὶ σὺ ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν εἶ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τούτου; λέγει ἐκείνος, Οὐκ εἰμί. (¹⁶⁹_X) ¹⁸ Εἰσθήκεισαν δὲ οἱ δοῦλοι καὶ οἱ ὑπηρέται, ἀνθρακιὰν πεποιηκότες ὅτι ψῦχος ἦν, καὶ ἐθερμαίνοντο· ἦν δὲ μετ' αὐτῶν ὁ Πέτρος ἐστὼς καὶ θερμαινόμενος. ¹⁹ Ὁ οὖν ἀρχιερεὺς ἠρώτησε τὸν Ἰησοῦν περὶ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ, καὶ περὶ τῆς διδαχῆς αὐτοῦ. (¹⁷⁰_I) ^{20 n} Ἀπἐκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ὅτι Ἐγὼ παρῥησία λελάληκα τῷ κόσμῳ· ἐγὼ πάντοτε ἐδίδαξα ἐν συναγωγῇ καὶ ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, ὅπου πάντες οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι συνέρχονται, καὶ ἐν κρυπτῷ ἐλάλησα οὐδέν. (¹⁷¹_X) ²¹ Τί μὲ ἐρωτᾷς; ἐπερώτησεν τοὺς ἀκηκο-ότας, τί ἐλάλησα αὐτοῖς· ἰδε οὗτοι οἶδασιν ἃ εἶπον ἐγώ. (¹⁷²_I) ^{22 p} Ταῦτα δὲ
^{n ch. 7. 26.}
^{Luke 4. 15.}
^{Matt. 26. 55.}
^{o ch. 7. 14, 25,}
^{26, 28.}
^{Matt. 4. 23.}
^{& 9. 25. & 13. 54.}
^{Mark 1. 31, 39.}
^{Luke 4. 15, 16,} ^{44.}
^{p Jer. 20. 2.}
^{Acts 23. 2.}

Him. On the contrary, he sends Him bound to Caiaphas (v. 24), whose murderous counsel and intentions he must have known; and therefore St. John refers to them here (v. 14; cp. xi. 49). And thus Annas, the High Priest de jure, adopts the policy of the High Priest de facto, and makes himself also responsible for it. This was a sufficient reason for the mention of the leading to Annas first. Cp. notes on Luke iii. 2 and Acts iv. 6.

The next stage of interrogation was before Caiaphas, described here by St. John, and by him only (vv. 19—23). This took place before daybreak, and before the Sanhedrim had been assembled in the palace of the High Priest.

As soon as it was day, the Sanhedrim came together at the High Priest's house (Luke xxii. 66, cp. with John v. 28); and then, at that meeting of the Sanhedrim, at which Caiaphas presided, our Lord went through the next process of interrogation described by the first three Evangelists (Matt. xxvi. 57—68. Mark xiv. 53—65. Luke xxii. 67—71) in the High Priest's palace, and not mentioned by St. John, as being already known from their Gospels.

The next stage of proceeding is the arraignment before Pilate, mentioned by all the Evangelists; and with some particulars, supplementary to those of the former three, by St. John. (Matt. xxvii. 1. 2. 11—23. Mark xv. 1—15. Luke xxiii. 1—5. John xviii. 28—38; xix. 1—16.)

The next arraignment is before Herod. (Luke xxiii. 6—12.)

Thus from the narratives of the Evangelists taken together, it appears that all the Authorities of Judea and Galilee, Civil and Ecclesiastical, Roman and Jewish, Rulers and People, were concerned in the condemnation of Christ, and were responsible for it.

It is true that some of the Fathers understand the narrative in vv. 13—23 to describe what took place before Annas, and not Caiaphas. Thus Augustine: “Explicat quod in domo Annæ de trinâ ejus negatione confiterat.” But Aug. supposes that Annas and Caiaphas were together at the same place, “in domo Annæ, quo ad audiendum Jesum ambo convenerant.” See also Aug., de Consensu Evang. iii. 20. Chrys. says on v. 24, εἴτα μὴδ οὕτως εὑρίσκοντες τι πλέον, πέμπουσιν αὐτὸν δεδεμένον πρὸς Καϊάφαν. But he also supposes Caiaphas to have been in the same place with Annas. He says of Peter after this, ἔτι θερμαίνεται, and that our Lord looked upon him διὰ βλέμματος ἄνιστάς, and that all the Evangelists συμφάνως περὶ αὐτοῦ ἀνέγραψαν. And so Theophyl. This is clearly stated by Euthymius, who says (on Matt. xxvi. 58, p. 545), “The three Evangelists say that Peter denied his Master thrice in the court-yard of Caiaphas; but John says that it was in that of Annas, his father-in-law. There is no discrepancy here; for both had one house and one court-yard, which had in it two separate establishments.”

S. Cyril (p. 1030) adopts the opinion which is expressed in the Syriac and Arabic Versions, and in our own,—viz. ἀπεστάλθαι τὸν Ἰησοῦν παρὰ τοῦ Ἀννα πρὸς τὸν Καϊάφαν, and that the interrogation in vv. 19—22 was before Caiaphas. St. John, when he wrote his Gospel, knew what had been written by the other Evangelists in their Gospels. He knew that they had related that St. Peter denied his Master three times in the house of the High Priest; and St. John's narrative is to be construed accordingly. In no case does any one of the Four Evangelists speak of the house or court-yard of Caiaphas, or of the house or court-yard of Annas; they speak of the house and court-yard of the High Priest. The three denials took place in the official residence of the High Priest. There is much probability in the opinion above expressed by Euthymius, that Annas and Caiaphas dwelt together in that official house; at least, it is very probable that they were both together in the sacerdotal palace on that important occasion.

15. ὁ ἄλλος μαθητής] the other disciple; He does not say ἕτερος; but ἄλλος. He is not different in degree, but second in number. Cp. Gal. i. 6. This is one of the modes of speech by which St. John,—who seems to avoid the mention of his own name in his Gospel, in which it never occurs,—describes himself. See v. 16, and xx. 2, 3, 4, 8. In his humility he loves to describe himself as a disciple (see here, 15, 16, and xxi. 23, 24), the disciple whom Jesus loved (xix. 26, 27; xx. 2; xxi. 7. 20). The adjunct ὁ ἄλλος, the other, seems to have been adopted with reference to St. Peter. It first occurs in connexion with him here. Compare xx. 2, 3, and would be very intelligible to the Christian world, from the History of the Acts of the Apostles, where he and St. Peter are constant companions; and it is an edifying record of their fraternal affection in the discipline of Christ.

The word μαθητής, disciple, is never used in the Epistles to designate an apostle, as here. After the Day of Pentecost the Disciples had become Teachers.

— αὐλήν] court-yard, atrium, open to the sky, probably paved; hence perhaps the fire kindled in it (v. 18); a rectangular area, entered from the street by a προαίλιον, or vestibule (Mark xiv. 68), and πυλὼν, or portal (Matt. xxvi. 71), in which was a θύρα, or wicket (v. 16).

The interrogation before Caiaphas and the Sanhedrim appears to have taken place in an apartment raised above the ground, and looking, with a large open window, into this court-yard. St. Peter was beneath, in the court-yard (Mark xiv. 66), when our Lord looked down upon him from the audience-chamber. (Luke xxii. 61.) This court-yard was the scene of St. Peter's triple denial. “Unâ in aulâ Pontificis, quamquàm in diversis ejus locis, ter negavit Christum Petrus.” (Bengel.)

16. Ἐξῆλθεν ὁ μαθητής—τὸν Πέτρον] Then the other disciple went out and brought in Peter. St. John alone adds these particulars to the narrative of the other Evangelists concerning the denials of St. Peter. He thus intimates that he himself had some share in St. Peter's sin in denying Christ; in not reminding him of our Lord's warning to him, and in bringing him, weak as he then was, into a place of temptation, after that warning which he had heard.

— τῷ ἀρχιερεῖ] B, C*, L, X have τοῦ ἀρχιερέως, received by Tisch. and Alf.

17. καὶ σὺ] thou also. It seems that she knew some one else there present (viz. St. John) to be Christ's disciple. Did St. John boldly confess it?

19. περὶ τῶν μαθητῶν] concerning His disciples. Another reason for St. Peter's fear; cp. v. 24.

20. ἐν συναγωγῇ] So the best MSS. Elz. has ἐν τῇ. He taught in the Temple, and “in Synagogue;” i. e. in Synagogues, generally.

— πάντες] So A, B, C*, L, X. Elz. has πάντοτε.

21. μέ] me, emphatic.

αὐτοῦ εἰπόντος, εἰς τῶν ὑπηρετῶν παρεστηκὼς ἔδωκε ράπισμα τῷ Ἰησοῦ εἰπὼν, Οὕτως ἀποκρίνη τῷ ἀρχιερεῖ; ($\frac{173}{x}$)²³ Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Εἰ κακῶς ἐλάλησα, μαρτύρησον περὶ τοῦ κακοῦ· εἰ δὲ καλῶς, τί με δέρεις;

q Matt. 26. 57.
Mark 14. 53.
Luke 22. 54.
r Matt. 26. 69.
Mark 14. 66.
Luke 22. 55.

($\frac{174}{I}$)²⁴ q Ἀπέστειλεν αὐτὸν ὁ Ἄννας δεδεμένον πρὸς Καϊάφαν τὸν ἀρχιερέα.
($\frac{175}{I}$)²⁵ r Ἦν δὲ Σίμων Πέτρος ἐστὼς καὶ θερμαινόμενος· εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ, Μὴ καὶ σὺ ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ· εἰ; ἡρνήσατο ἐκείνος καὶ εἶπεν, Οὐκ εἰμί.
²⁶ Λέγει εἰς ἐκ τῶν δούλων τοῦ ἀρχιερέως, συγγενὴς ὢν οὐ ἀπέκοψε Πέτρος τὸ ὠτίον, Οὐκ ἐγὼ σε εἶδον ἐν τῷ κήπῳ μετ' αὐτοῦ; ²⁷ Πάλιν οὖν ἡρνήσατο Πέτρος, καὶ εὐθέως ἀλέκτωρ ἐφώνησεν.

s Matt. 27. 1.
Mark 15. 1.
Luke 23. 1.
Acts 10. 25.
& 11. 3.
t Matt. 26. 17.

($\frac{176}{I}$)²⁸ s Ἀγουσιν οὖν τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἀπὸ τοῦ Καϊάφα εἰς τὸ πραιτώριον ἦν δὲ πρῶτ' ($\frac{177}{x}$) καὶ αὐτοὶ οὐκ εἰσῆλθον εἰς τὸ πραιτώριον, ἵνα μὴ μianθῶσιν, ἄλλ' ἵνα φάγωσι τὸ πάσχα.

23. Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς] Jesus answered. What more true, mild, and just, than this answer? He Who received the blow was He Who created the world, and might have consumed with fire or earthquake him who gave the blow. He was able to do this. The world was made by Him; but He preferred to teach us patience, by which the world is overcome.

It may be asked here, why did not Christ follow His own precept, "to him that smiteth thee on the one cheek turn the other also?" (Matt. v. 39. Luke vi. 29.)

He did so in spirit. For He replied mildly, and gave His cheek to the smiter (Isa. l. 6), and His body to them that pierced it and nailed it to the cross. He thus showed us that His precepts of patience are not to be followed so much by visible exhibition of the body, as by the spiritual preparation of the heart, "non ostentatione corporis, sed preparatione cordis." An angry man may turn, in sullenness, the other cheek visibly to the smiter; better is he, who makes a true answer with mildness, and prepares his heart in peace to endure greater sufferings. (Aug.)

24. Ἀπέστειλεν] Annas sent Him bound to Caiaphas the High Priest. This is not an instance of an arist for a plusquam perfectum (though for clearness' sake it is properly rendered had sent, in the Authorized Version), but it is an example of a mode of speech very common in the N. T., according to which, the writer goes back to a previous point, and writes from it.

The full meaning is, Annas sent Him bound to Caiaphas, when Annas sent Him to that interrogation which I have described (vv. 15—23), and to that more formal trial which has been already fully described by the three former Evangelists. The emphatic word is δεδεμένον, in chains. See on v. 13. It makes Annas responsible for the Acts of Caiaphas. It shows that the indignities done to Christ (v. 22) were done to Him bound. It suggests a reason for St. Peter's fears (who saw his Master accused and in chains), which led so soon to the denial. It anticipates the objections which have been made on the ground of alleged discrepancy between St. John and the other Evangelists. It shows that the first denial did not take place when our Lord was before Annas (as might have been, perhaps, supposed from v. 17, compared with v. 13), but, as the other Evangelists had related, in the court-yard of the High Priest Caiaphas. So ἔθηκεν, Matt. xiv. 3. John iv. 45, 46; vi. 16; ix. 18; xi. 30; xii. 12; xix. 23; xxi. 9. Acts i. 2; v. 24. Winer, Gr. Gr. § 40, p. 246.

B, C*, L, X, Δ have οὖν after ἀπέστειλεν, and so Elz., but οὖν is not in A, D, E, G, H, K, M, S, U, Y.

25. εἶπον] they said. An example of the silent manner in which St. John's Gospel reconciles seeming discrepancies in the preceding ones.

St. Matthew says (xxvi. 71), ἅλλη λέγει.

St. Mark says (xiv. 69), ἡ παιδίσκη (the same as before, not ἅλλη) ἤρξατο λέγειν.

St. Luke says (xxii. 58), ἄνθρωπος (a man, not a maiden). Here are three accounts of three different persons doing the same thing.

St. John reconciles them all by his εἶπον, 'they said;' each and all did so.

— ἡρνήσατο] He denied. Observe, Christ is denied, not only by those who deny Him to be Christ, but by those who deny themselves to be Christians. Our Lord did not say to Peter, thou shalt deny thyself to be My Disciple, but, thou shalt deny Me. St. Peter denied Christ when he said, "I am not His disciple." We deny Christ, by speaking and acting in a manner unbecoming the disciples of Christ. (Cp. Aug.)

27. Πάλιν οὖν ἡρνήσατο—ἐφώνησεν] Peter then denied again. See the prediction of the Divine Physician accomplished, and the presumption of the human patient convicted. The latter had said, "I will lay down my life for Thy sake;" the other, "Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny Me thrice." But what wonder that God should prophesy what was true, and man presume what is false? (Aug.) All the Evangelists narrate the denial of Peter, not for the sake of blaming him, but in order to instruct us how dangerous it is to trust in ourselves, and not in God. (Chrys.)

St. John, who is thus minute in his history of his brother Apostle's sin, would certainly have also described his repentance, if he had not known that this had been sufficiently done by the other Evangelists; cp. v. 16.

28. εἰς τὸ πραιτώριον] into the Prætorium, or palace of Pilate, the Roman Procurator. See on Matt. xxvii. 2, 27, and Phil. i. 13.

— ἵνα μὴ μianθῶσιν] in order that they might not be defiled, by contracting a ceremonial pollution from intercourse with heathens, but that they might be legally clean, and eat the Passover.

Here the questions arise,—Had not the Passover been eaten on the preceding day? Had not our Lord Himself eaten the Passover? And if He did eat it, did He not eat it at the right time? or did He anticipate the time by a day, and eat it on the day before it was eaten by the Jews?

To these questions it has been replied by Lightfoot (ii. p. 610), and many others, that by φαγεῖν τὸ πάσχα, St. John here does not mean to eat the Paschal Lamb, but to eat the Chagigah, or festive thank-offering at the Passover. Deut. xvi. 2, 3. 2 Chron. xxxv. 8, 9.

But this is not the proper signification of the words, and has no example in the Gospels, and it has not been shown that the Chagigah was eaten on the fifteenth day.

How then are these words to be explained?

There can be no reasonable doubt, that our Lord and His disciples killed and ate the Passover at the proper time appointed by the Levitical Law. See Mark xiv. 12. Luke xxii. 7.

But it appears (from Matt. xxvii. 1, 2. Mark xv. 1. Luke xxiii. 1) that they who led our Lord to Pilate were "the Chief Priests and Elders," "the whole Council."

Now it seems that they had been continually engaged during the whole of the preceding afternoon, in taking counsel how they might kill Jesus. See Matt. xxvi. 3. 14. 47, 50—66. Mark xiv. 10, 11. Luke xxii. 1—6. 52. John xviii. 3.

In a word, they were so eager to kill Him, Who was the Evangelical Passover, that they had no time to go to the Temple to kill the Levitical Passover, and to go to their own houses to eat it.

This appears to be the true solution of the difficulty.

It has already been suggested in the fourth century by Eusebius (de Paschale, in Mai. Coll. Vat. iv. p. 216). See above, note on Luke xxii. 1. Compare also Chrysostom, who says (on Matt. xxvi. 56), that our Lord ate the Passover at the right time; but the High Priest, and those who were with him, spent their time in plotting against Christ during the night when they ought to have eaten the Passover; and they would not enter Pilate's Hall (John xviii. 28), that they might afterwards eat it; and so they broke the Law in their malignant zeal against Christ.

Thus, also, we see there was something strikingly prophetic in our Lord's words, "Did not Moses give you the Law, and yet none of you keepeth the Law? Why go ye about to kill Me?" (John vii. 19.)

The Priests, perhaps, pleaded for themselves, and quieted their consciences, by the pretext that they were engaged in doing God service by putting Christ to death, and that therefore they might be excused for postponing their Paschal meal to another day.

²⁹ Ἐξήλθεν οὖν ὁ Πιλάτος πρὸς αὐτοὺς καὶ εἶπε, Τίνα κατηγορίαν φέρετε κατὰ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τούτου; ³⁰ Ἀπεκρίθησαν καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Εἰ μὴ ἦν οὗτος κακοποιὸς, οὐκ ἄν σοι παρεδώκαμεν αὐτόν. ³¹ Εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Πιλάτος, Λάβετε αὐτὸν ὑμεῖς, καὶ κατὰ τὸν νόμον ὑμῶν κρίνατε αὐτόν. Εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, Ἡμῖν οὐκ ἔξεστιν ἀποκτείνειν οὐδένα. ³² Ὡς ὁ λόγος τοῦ Ἰησοῦ πληρωθῇ, ὃν εἶπε σημαίνων ποῖω θανάτῳ ἤμελλεν ἀποθνήσκειν.

u Matt. 20. 19.
Mark 10. 33.
Luke 18. 32.

(¹⁷⁸/₁) ³³ Ἐισήλθεν οὖν πάλιν εἰς τὸ πραιτώριον ὁ Πιλάτος, καὶ ἐφώνησε τὸν Ἰησοῦν καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Σὺ εἰ ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων; (¹⁷⁹/_x) ³⁴ Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ σὺ τοῦτο λέγεις, ἢ ἄλλοι σοὶ εἶπον περὶ ἐμοῦ; ³⁵ Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Πιλάτος, Μήτι ἐγὼ Ἰουδαῖός εἰμι; τὸ ἔθνος τὸ σὸν καὶ οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς παρέδωκάν σε ἐμοί· τί ἐποίησας; ³⁶ Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς, Ἡ βασιλεία ἡ ἐμὴ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου· εἰ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου ἦν ἡ βασιλεία ἡ ἐμὴ, οἱ ὑπηρέται ἂν

v Matt. 27. 11.
Mark 15. 2.
Luke 23. 3.

w ch. 6. 15.
Dan 2. 44, 45.
& 7. 13, 14, 27.
Rev. 11. 15.

There seems to be a confirmation of this opinion in St. Luke's words, ἐν ᾗ ἔδει θύεσθαι τὸ πάσχα (xxii. 7, where see note).

It is well said by S. Leo (Serm. lvi. p. 126), that the Institution of the Christian Passover was the consummation of the Levitical Passover; and in that, Christ represented His own Passion, at the time when the Levitical Passover was slain; and that He kept the Passover, and consummated the Passover, while the Chief Priests in their impious haste to kill Him Who is the true Passover, neglected to keep the Passover. Oportebat enim ut manifeste implemēt effectū, quæ diu fuerunt figuratō promissæ mysterio; ut ovem significativam Ovis vera removeret, et ut uno expleretur Sacrificio variarum differentia victimarum. Nam omnia illa, quæ de immolatione Agni divinitus per Moysen fuerant præstituta, Christum prophetaverant, et Christi occisionem propriè nuntiaverant.

Ut ergo umbræ cederent corpori, et cessarent imagines sub præsentia veritatis, antiqua observantia novo excluditur Sacramento, hostia in Hostiam transit, Sanguine sanguis aufertur, et legalis festivitas, dum mutatur, impletur.

Unde cum scribas et seniores populi ad impietatis concilium Pontifices congregarent, omniumque animos sacerdotum cura admittendi in Jesum sceleris occupasset, ipsi se doctores legis lege privarunt, et spontaneo defectu ritus sibi patrios sustulerunt. Incipiente enim festivitate Paschali, qui ornare templum, munda vasa, victimas providere, et legitimis purificationibus sacratorem diligentiam adhibere debebant, parricidalis odii furore concepti, ad unum opus vacante, et in unum facinus simili crudelitate conjuncti. Quid assecuturi supplicio innocentie, condemnatione justitie, nisi ut et nova mysteria non apprehenderent, et antiqua violarent?

Providentibus ergo principibus, ne in die sancto tumultus oriretur, non devotioni, sed facinori studebatur; nec religioni serviebat hæc cura, sed crimini. Diligentes enim Pontifices, et solliciti Sacerdotes seditiones turbarum fieri in præcipuâ solennitate metuebant, non ut populus non peccaret, sed ne Christus evaderet.

At Jesus consilii sui certus, et in opere Paternæ dispositionis intrepidus, Vetus Testamentum consummabat, et Novum Pascha condebat. Discumbentibus enim Discipulis ad edendam mysticam cœnam, cum in Caiaphæ atrio tractaretur quomodò Christus posset occidi, ille Corporis et Sanguinis sui ordinans Sacramentum docebat qualis Deo hostia deberet offerri.

Similarly, be it observed, that the Chief Priests violated the holy rest of the great Paschal Sabbath by going into Pilate's presence, and begging a watch of Roman soldiers, and going to the sepulchre with the soldiers to seal it (Matt. xxvii. 62—66), while the faithful women were resting on the Sabbath-day, "according to the Commandment" (Luke xxiii. 56), and while Christ rested in the grave.

They went not in, lest they should be defiled. O impious blindness! they are afraid of being defiled by the hall of a heathen judge, and yet do not fear to shed the blood of their own innocent Brother, who is the Lord of Life! (Aug.)

He, the good Shepherd—the true Abel, offered an acceptable sacrifice to God; they, like Cain, were rejected, and slew their brother, and have been driven out from the presence of the Lord.

In confirmation of the above statement, that there is no ground for the allegation of a discrepancy between St. John's account and that of the other Evangelists, who assert that Christ ate the Passover on the legal day, —the fourteenth day of Nisan, —it is observable, that the primitive Asiatic Churches began to celebrate the Christian Passover on the fourteenth day of the Moon, being the same day as that on which the Jews kept their Passover ('when they removed the heaven'); and that the Christians appealed, in support of their practice, to the testimony of St. John himself. See Euseb. v. 23, 24, and the notes of Valesius there.

³⁰ Εἰ μὴ ἦν οὗτος κακοποιός] If he were not a malefactor. Let those be examined, on whom Christ worked His miracles of mercy; those who were delivered by Him from evil spirits, the blind to whom He gave sight, the dead raised by Him to life, and those who before were ignorant, to whom He gave true wisdom; let them be asked, whether He is a malefactor? But what Jesus had before prophesied by the Psalmist (Ps. xxxviii. 20), is now fulfilled. "They also that reward evil for good are against Me." (Aug.)

³¹ Ἡμῖν οὐκ ἔξεστιν ἀποκτείνειν οὐδένα] We have not authority to put any one to death. Because the power of life and death was now taken away from them by the Romans; and because they wished to show that His crime was against Cæsar and the government; and that He was setting up a rival kingdom to theirs, and ought therefore to suffer by a Roman punishment, viz. Crucifixion, and so become more infamous. Thus our Lord's prophecy was fulfilled, signifying by what manner of death He should die; viz. "Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of Man shall be delivered unto the Chief Priests, and unto the Scribes; and they shall condemn Him to death, and shall deliver Him to the Gentiles." (Mark x. 33.) The Son of Man shall be delivered to be crucified. (Matt. xxvi. 2.) See Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. iv. ("Suffered under Pontius Pilate"), p. 305.

³² Ὡς ὁ λόγος] that the saying of Jesus might be fulfilled, signifying by what kind of death He should die. This saying is not recorded by St. John; but he takes for granted that it is well known to the reader, from the other Gospels. Matt. xx. 19. Cp. below, xx. 1.

³⁴ ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ] of thyself. On this use of the pronoun see Winer, p. 136. Rom. xiii. 9. Gal. v. 14.

³⁶ Ἡ βασιλεία ἡ ἐμὴ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου] My kingdom is not from this world. Our Lord would first show the vanity of the opinion,—whether of Gentiles or of Jews,—that He was guilty of death, for aspiring to an earthly dynasty; and that therefore it was necessary for them to take care, lest His kingdom should be imagined to supplant theirs. He replies as follows: Hear this, ye Jews and Gentiles; I do not impede your domination in the world. What do ye desire more? Come ye by faith to that kingdom which is not of this world. For what is Christ's kingdom, but the kingdom of those who believe in Him, and to whom He says, ye are not of, or from, this world (cp. viii. 23. John xv. 19; xvii. 14. 16), although He wills that they shall be in the world? (John xvii. 15.)

Therefore He does not say, "My kingdom is not in this world," but it is not of—is not derived from—this world. But His kingdom is in this world, and the world is ruled by Him; and He orders every thing here as He wills, and His kingdom will so remain to the end. (Aug.) Is not Christ King of the world? Certainly He is. He does not say, that He does not rule here, but that His power came from above, and is not human, but far more glorious. How then was He seized and taken by a worldly power? By His own free-will, and because He delivered Himself; and it is greater than any earthly kingdom, for He adds, "if My kingdom were from this world, My servants would have fought in My behalf;" thus showing the weakness of all earthly kingdoms, because they derive their strength from the swords of their servants; whereas His kingdom is from above, and is self-existing, and needs no such aid. Since, then, His kingdom is greater than οἱ ἐμοὶ ἡγωνίζοντο, ἵνα μὴ παραδοθῶ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις· νῦν δὲ ἡ βασιλεία ἡ ἐμὴ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐντεῦθεν. ⁽¹⁸⁰⁾³⁷ Εἶπεν οὖν αὐτῷ ὁ Πιλάτος, Οὐκοῦν βασιλεὺς εἶ σύ ; Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς· ⁽¹⁸¹⁾³⁸ Σὺ λέγεις ὅτι βασιλεὺς εἰμι ἐγώ. Ἐγὼ εἰς τοῦτο γεγέννημαι, καὶ εἰς τοῦτο ἐλήλυθα εἰς τὸν κόσμον, ἵνα μαρτυρήσω τῇ ἀληθείᾳ· ἵνα παῖς ὁ ὢν ἐκ τῆς ἀληθείας ἀκούει μου τῆς φωνῆς. ⁽¹⁸²⁾³⁹ Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Πιλάτος, Τί ἐστὶν ἀλήθεια ;

Καὶ τοῦτο εἰπὼν πάλιν ἐξῆλθε πρὸς τοὺς Ἰουδαίους, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, Ἐγὼ οὐδεμίαν αἰτίαν εὐρίσκω ἐν αὐτῷ. ⁽¹⁸³⁾⁴⁰ Ἐστὶ δὲ συνήθεια ὑμῖν, ἵνα ἕνα ὑμῖν ἀπολύσω ἐν τῷ πάσχα· βούλεσθε οὖν ἀπολύσω ὑμῖν τὸν βασιλέα τῶν Ἰουδαίων ; ⁽¹⁸⁴⁾⁴¹ Ἐκραύγασαν οὖν πάλιν πάντες λέγοντες, Μὴ τοῦτον, ἀλλὰ τὸν Βαραββᾶν· ἦν δὲ ὁ Βαραββᾶς ληστής.

XIX. ⁽¹⁸⁵⁾¹ Τότε οὖν ἔλαβεν ὁ Πιλάτος τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ ἐμαστίγωσε. ⁽¹⁸⁶⁾² Καὶ οἱ στρατιῶται πλέξαντες στέφανον ἐξ ἀκανθῶν ἐπέθηκαν αὐτοῦ τῇ κεφαλῇ, καὶ ἱμάτιον πορφυροῦν περιέβαλον αὐτὸν, ⁽¹⁸⁷⁾³ καὶ ἔλεγον, Χαίρε, ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων· καὶ ἐδίδουν αὐτῷ ῥαπίσματα.

⁽¹⁸⁸⁾⁴ Ἐξῆλθεν οὖν πάλιν ἔξω ὁ Πιλάτος, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, Ἴδε, ἄγω ὑμῖν αὐτὸν ἔξω, ἵνα γνῶτε ὅτι ἐν αὐτῷ οὐδεμίαν αἰτίαν εὐρίσκω.

⁽¹⁸⁷⁾⁵ Ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἔξω φορῶν τὸν ἀκάνθινον στέφανον, καὶ τὸ πορφυροῦν ἱμάτιον. Καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, Ἴδε, ὁ ἄνθρωπος. ⁽¹⁸⁸⁾⁶ Ὅτε οὖν εἶδον αὐτὸν οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ ὑπηρέται, ἐκραύγασαν λέγοντες, Σταύρωσον, σταύρωσον αὐτόν. ⁽¹⁸⁹⁾⁷ Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Πιλάτος, Λάβετε αὐτὸν ὑμεῖς καὶ σταυρώσατε, ἐγὼ γὰρ οὐχ εὐρίσκω ἐν αὐτῷ αἰτίαν. ⁽¹⁹⁰⁾⁸ Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, ⁽¹⁹¹⁾⁹ Ἡμεῖς νόμον ἔχομεν, καὶ κατὰ τὸν νόμον ἡμῶν ὀφείλει ἀποθανεῖν, ὅτι ἐαυτὸν Υἱὸν Θεοῦ ἐποίησεν.

⁽¹⁹²⁾¹⁰ Ὅτε οὖν ἤκουσεν ὁ Πιλάτος τοῦτον τὸν λόγον μᾶλλον ἐφοβήθη, ⁽¹⁹³⁾¹¹ καὶ εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸ πραιτώριον πάλιν, καὶ λέγει τῷ Ἰησοῦ, Πόθεν εἶ σύ ; Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἀπόκρισιν οὐκ ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ. ⁽¹⁹⁴⁾¹² Λέγει οὖν αὐτῷ ὁ Πιλάτος, Ἐμοὶ

any earthly kingdom, it was an act of His own free-will to deliver Himself up to an earthly power. He does not say, My kingdom is not in this world, for He governs the world, and disposes all things in it according to His Will; but He says, that it is not derived from beneath, but from above, and it is from everlasting. (Chrys., Theoph.)

This passage has been abused by some, alleging that Christ is not identical with the Creator of the world. Why, then, did St. John say of Christ, "He came unto His own, and His own received Him not?" (John i. 11.) But when Christ says, "My kingdom is not from hence," He does not deprive the world of His providence and pre-eminence, but declares that His kingdom is not a human or corruptible kingdom. (Chrys.)

He says that He does not need the exercise of earthly power in His behalf; but He does not say that earthly power needs not to be so exercised. On the contrary, since He is King of kings, and Lord of lords, it needs His aid, protection, and blessing, which it cannot have, unless it be exercised in dependence on His grace, in obedience to His law, for the promotion of His glory, for the advancement of His kingdom, and for the propagation of His Gospel through the world.

— νῦν—ἐντεῦθεν] νῦν is conclusive here—not an adverb of time.

37. Οὐκοῦν βασιλεὺς εἶ σύ ;] Art thou a king, then? Thou, so despised and insulted by Thine own people? Thou a King!

— Σὺ λέγεις] Thou speakest the truth in saying, that a King am I: I, even such as I am now.

On σὺ λέγεις, see Matt. xxvi. 25. 64; xxvii. 11.

— ἀκούει μου τῆς φωνῆς] Observe μου emphatic, he hears My Voice; not that of others; not that of a whole People clamouring, as now, for My crucifixion.

38. Τί ἐστὶν ἀλήθεια ;] What is Truth? As if ἀλήθεια and βασιλεία, Truth and policy, had little connexion; a heathen notion, the speech of Pilate.

CH. XIX. 1. ἐμαστίγωσε] he scourged Him. See on Matt. xxvii. 26. Luke xxiii. 16. Pilate did this and what follows, that the Jews, being satisfied with the infliction of these injuries, might desist from pursuing their rage further, even to His death. (Aug.)

2. στέφανον ἐξ ἀκανθῶν] A crown of thorns for a royal diadem; and the purple robe for that purple attire which is worn by kings. (Bede.) When thou readest this, meditate on the King of the world, and the Lord of Angels, bearing these contumelies in silence, and do thou imitate Him. (Chrys.) See on Matt. xxvii. 28. Thus the prophecies concerning Christ were accomplished. Thus martyrs have been trained to bear all things from their persecutors. Thus the kingdom which is not of this world has conquered the world; not by fierceness of fighting, but by patience of suffering. (Aug.)

3. καὶ ἔλεγον] B, L, U, X, Δ, and some cursive MSS. and Versions, have καὶ ἤρχοντο πρὸς αὐτὸν καὶ ἔλεγον.

— ἐδίδουν—ῥαπίσματα] were smiting Him—a repeated act. B, L, X have ἐδίδουσαν here, and so Lach., Tisch. See above, xv. 22.

5. Ἴδε, ὁ ἄνθρωπος] Behold the man! Though you reject Him as a king, yet spare Him as a man, now so abject and afflicted. His ignominy waxes hot, let then your malignity wax cold. (Aug.)

6. αὐτόν] Him. Omitted by Elz., but in A, D, E, H, K, L, M, S, U, V, X, Y, Δ; and it is emphatic: Release Barabbas, crucify Him. See how often αὐτόν is repeated by the Evangelist in this chapter,—Him, even Him,—the Prince of Life!

7. ἐαυτὸν Υἱὸν Θεοῦ ἐποίησεν] He made Himself the Son of God. See v. 18; viii. 53; x. 33. He was before charged with making Himself a King. He had a right to both dignities; for He is the Only-begotten Son of God, and God has set Him as a King upon His Holy Hill of Sion. (Ps. ii. 6.)

8. μᾶλλον ἐφοβήθη] he was the more afraid—showing that he had before been awe-struck by our Blessed Lord's demeanour.

9. ἀπόκρισιν οὐκ ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ] Jesus gave him no answer. Pilate had heard before from Jesus, "My kingdom is not of this world; and to this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness to the truth." (John xviii. 36.) The Roman Judge ought therefore to have resisted the Jews, and to have delivered Jesus from them; but he yielded to their malice x 1 Tim. 6. 13.

Rev. 1. 5.
& 3. 14.
ch. 14. 6.
y ch. 6. 45.
& 7. 17. & 8. 47.
& 10. 26, 27.
Matt. 17. 5.
1 John 3. 19.
& 4. 6. & 5. 20.
z ch. 19. 4, 6.
Matt. 26. 60.
aa Matt. 27. 15—
17.
Mark 15. 6—11.
Luke 23. 17—19.
bb Acts 3. 14.

a Matt. 27. 26.
Mark 15. 15.
& 10. 34.
Isa. 50. 6.

b Acts 3. 13.

c Lev. 24. 16.
Matt. 26. 65.
ch. 5. 18.
& 10. 33.
d ch. 5. 18.
& 10. 32, 33.

οὐ λαλεῖς ; οὐκ οἶδας ὅτι ἐξουσίαν ἔχω σταυρῶσαί σε, καὶ ἐξουσίαν ἔχω ἀπο-λῦσαί σε ; ¹¹ ὁ Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς, Ὁὐκ εἶχες ἐξουσίαν κατ' ἐμοῦ οὐδεμίαν, εἰ μὴ ἦν σοι δεδομένον ἄνωθεν διὰ τοῦτο ὁ παραδιδούς μέ σοι μείζονα ἁμαρτίαν ἔχει. ¹² Ἐκ τούτου ἐζήτει ὁ Πιλάτος ἀπολύσαι αὐτόν.

¹³ Οἱ δὲ Ἰουδαῖοι ἔκραζον λέγοντες, Ἐὰν τοῦτον ἀπολύσῃς, οὐκ εἶ φίλος τοῦ
 Καίσαρος· πᾶς ὁ βασιλέα ἑαυτὸν ποιῶν ἀντιλέγει τῷ Καίσαρι. ¹⁴ Ὁ οὖν Πιλάτος ἀκούσας τῶν λόγων τούτων ἤγαγεν ἔξω τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ ἐκάθισεν ἐπὶ βήματος εἰς τόπον λεγόμενον Λιθόστρωτον, Ἑβραϊστὶ δὲ Γαββαθᾶ. ¹⁵ Ἦν δὲ παρασκευὴ τοῦ πάσχα, ὥρα ἦν ὡς ἕκτη καὶ λέγει τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, Ἴδε ὁ βασιλεὺς ὑμῶν. ¹⁶ Οἱ δὲ ἐκραύγασαν, Ἄρον, ἄρον, σταύρωσον αὐτόν.
 (Ἰ) Δέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Πιλάτος, Τὸν βασιλέα ὑμῶν σταυρώσω ; Ἀπεκρίθησαν οἱ ἄρχιερεῖς, Οὐκ ἔχομεν βασιλέα εἰ μὴ Καίσαρα. ¹⁷ Τότε οὖν παρέδωκεν and therefore Jesus now holds His peace, for Pilate's questions are idle and vain. Since also the works of Jesus witnessed of Him, He would not win him by words. We find that our Lord was silent at various times in this hour of trial; and thus He fulfilled the prophecy, "As a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so opened He not His mouth." Isa. liii. 7. (Aug.)

10. Οὐκ οὐ λαλεῖς ;] Mihine non respondes? Mihi, Legato Caesaris!

— ἐξουσίαν ἔχω σταυρῶσαί σε] I have authority to crucify, and have authority to release thee. Thus Pilate pronounces sentence of condemnation on himself; for if he had authority to do either the one or the other, why did he crucify Him Whom he had pronounced innocent? (Chrys.)

11. Οὐκ εἶχες ἐξουσίαν] Thou wouldst have had no authority at all against Me, except it had been given thee from above—to exercise authority. Observe, the participle δεδομένον (given) does not agree in gender with ἐξουσία, authority. Authority against Christ was not given him from above; for no abuse of authority is from above; but what is given from above to Governors, is a grant from God to exercise authority; and the manner of exercising it is their probation; and of this they will have to give a strict account at the judgment-seat of Christ.

There is no authority but of God. All authority is from Him. (See on Rom. xiii.) Thou, O Pilate, art a Vicegerent of God. But do not therefore imagine thyself to be innocent, if thou usest it against Christ. And therefore He adds what follows;

— ὁ παραδιδούς μέ σοι] he that delivereth Me to thee hath the greater sin. Thou, therefore, hast some sin. But he that delivereth Me to thee (i. e. the Jews and Judas) hath a greater sin than thine, because they have had more opportunities of knowing the truth; thou art a heathen, but they were favoured of God; they act from malice and envy; thou, in part, from ignorance. Therefore their sin is greater than thine. (Cp. Chrys., Aug., Theoph.)

It is a sin to deliver an innocent man to death from fear, as Pilate did; but it is a greater sin to deliver Him through envy; theirs is therefore a greater sin than thine; but do not thou imagine that thine is no sin, because theirs is greater than thine. Lest Pilate, having heard the words "if it were not given thee from above," should imagine that he himself was blameless, Christ adds these words, "although it is given from above (i. e. given by Myself), yet he that betrayed Me has a great sin, and thou hast a sin likewise." Therefore Pilate was moved, and sought to release Him. (Cp. Chrys.)

Since the knowledge, which Judas, the Chief Priests, and the Jews had of God, was greater than what Pilate, a heathen, could have, therefore they who delivered Jesus to Pilate, and clamoured for His destruction, sinned more heinously than Pilate, who "strove to release Him," and would have done so, but for them.

All power is from above, i. e. from Christ (see Matt. xxviii. 18); "by Him were all things created, that are in heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities, or Powers: all things were created by Him and for Him." (Col. i. 16.) Therefore the abuse of civil power, in Christian lands, is far greater than in heathen, if it be not used for Christ and His Gospel; and how great is the sin, if it be used against Him!

B, E, U, Δ, Δ have παραδούς.

12. Ἐκ τούτου ἐζήτει ὁ Πιλάτος ἀπολύσαι] Upon this Pilate was seeking to release Him. That he might not be guilty of condemning the innocent. (Aug.)

— οὐκ εἶ φίλος τοῦ Καίσαρος] thou art not Caesar's friend. φίλος, as here used, is illustrated by the common expressions on the coins of that age, φιλό-καισαρ, φιλο-κλαύδιος, and the like—which are found on the coins of Herod Agrippa the First. See Akermann, p. 30. The Caesars appear to have been very desirous of seeming to have friends. See Plin. Ep. x. 22. Arrian, Epict. iii. 4, and other passages in Westl., p. 952.

13. τῶν λόγων τούτων] So the best MSS. Elz. has τούτον τὸν λόγον.

— βήματος] The judicial tribunal. Pilate, when he administered justice, sat upon it. And this judgment-seat was on a pavement (called gabbatha, from the Hebr. גַּבְבָּתָא (gabbaḥ), elevari, from its height),—so that the Judge, seated on high, was conspicuous and audible to the people.

There seems to be, in St. John's mind, a contrast between the Tribunal of Pilate, before which Christ stood on this mosaic pavement, and the glorious high Throne of God, with its pavement of sapphire (Exod. xxiv. 10), and the Throne of Christ, before which Pilate and the World will stand. (Rev. xx. 11, 12. Cp. Rev. iv. 2. 6.)

— Λιθόστρωτον] A tessellated mosaic pavement; such as was common in the mansions of Roman patricians and magistrates in Italy and the Provinces. See Plin. N. H. xxxvi. 25. Horat. Ep. i. 10. 19. Julius Cæsar used to carry such tessellated pavements as this with him in his military expeditions, and place them in his Prætorium in his encampments. Sueton. Vit. c. 46. Kuhn. Westl. p. 953.

— Ἑβραϊστὶ] in Hebrew. A word used by St. John twice in the history of the Crucifixion; see v. 17, Ἑβραϊστὶ Γολγοθᾶ. It occurs in one other place in the Gospels, John v. 2, Ἑβραϊστὶ Βηθεσδα. How striking is the contrast! After His works of mercy at their Bethesdas and Siloams, they brought Him to Gabbatha and Golgotha! And this was done by Hebrews, the favoured people of God!

14. παρασκευὴ] the preparation. It has been erroneously inferred by some from these words that the Passover was on the next day. But the true meaning is,—"It was the preparation for the Sabbath of the Passover." It was the preparation in the Paschal week (cp. Winer, p. 170). Hence St. Mark calls it προσάββατον, Mark xv. 42. Cp. Matt. xxvii. 62. Luke xxiii. 54.

Christ's death is the true preparation for the Sabbath, or Rest, of Eternity. It was on the sixth day of the week, on which day they made the preparation for the Sabbath, as it is said, "On the sixth day they shall prepare that which they bring in, and it shall be twice as much as they gather daily" (Exod. xvi. 5).

On the sixth day of the week the First Adam was created, and on the seventh day God rested from His works. On the sixth day of the week, Christ, the Second Adam, dies for man; and by His death, man was created anew, and on the seventh day He rests in the grave.

— ὥρα ἦν ὡς ἕκτη] it was about the sixth hour, 'six in the morning.' St. Mark says (xv. 25) that it was ὥρα τρίτη, or nine o'clock, when they crucified Him; so that there were three hours between the hearing before Pilate and the Crucifixion.

St. John reckons his hours (as we do) from midnight to noon, and from noon to midnight. See above on iv. 6, and Lee on Inspiration, pp. 383, 384; and Wieseler, Chron. Synop. 410—414, and below on 1 Thess. ii. 9.

15. Οὐκ ἔχομεν βασιλέα εἰ μὴ Καίσαρα] We have no King but Cæsar. Thus they declared, that 'the sceptre was departed from Judah;' and that therefore Shiloh was come. (Gen. xlix. 10.) Thus they rejected the kingdom of Christ; and armed against themselves, by God's retributive justice, the kingdom of Cæsar, by which their own kingdom was overthrown. And so, by murdering Christ, they brought on themselves that doom which they thought, in their worldly policy, by murdering Him to avoid. (John xi. 48.) Such are the fruits of godless Expediency!

i Matt. 27. 31—33.
Mark 15. 20—22.
Luke 23. 26, 32, 33.
j Lev. 15. 35.
Heb. 13. 12.
k Matt. 27. 38.
Mark 15. 27, 28.
Luke 23. 32, 33.
l Matt. 27. 37.
Mark 15. 26.
Luke 23. 38.

αὐτὸν αὐτοῖς ἵνα σταυρωθῇ. ⁽¹⁹⁷⁾ ⁱ Παρέλαβον δὲ τὸν Ἰησοῦν καὶ ἀπήγαγον. ¹⁷ ^j Καὶ βαστάζων τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ ἐξῆλθεν εἰς τὸν λεγόμενον Κρανίου τόπον, ὃς λέγεται Ἑβραϊστὶ Γολγοθᾶ, ¹⁸ ὅπου αὐτὸν ἐσταύρωσαν, ⁽¹⁹⁸⁾ ^k καὶ μετ' αὐτοῦ ἄλλους δύο ἐντεῦθεν καὶ ἐντεῦθεν, μέσον δὲ τὸν Ἰησοῦν.

⁽¹⁹⁹⁾ ¹⁹ ^l Ἐγράψε δὲ καὶ τίτλον ὁ Πιλάτος, καὶ ἔθηκεν ἐπὶ τοῦ σταυροῦ ἦν δὲ γεγραμμένον ἸΗΣΟΥΣ Ὁ ΝΑΖΩΡΑΙΟΣ Ὁ ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥΣ ΤΩΝ ἸΟΥΔΑΙΩΝ. ⁽²⁰⁰⁾ ²⁰ Τοῦτον οὖν τὸν τίτλον πολλοὶ ἀνέγνωσαν τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ὅτι ἐγγὺς ἦν ὁ τόπος τῆς πόλεως ὅπου ἐσταυρώθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς· καὶ ἦν γεγραμμένον Ἑβραϊστὶ, Ἑλληνιστὶ, Ῥωμαϊστὶ. ²¹ Ἐλεγον οὖν τῷ Πιλάτῳ οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς τῶν Ἰουδαίων, Μὴ γράφῃ, Ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἀλλ' ὅτι ἐκεῖνος εἶπε, Βασιλεὺς εἰμι τῶν Ἰουδαίων. ²² Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Πιλάτος, Ὁ γέγραφα, γέγραφα.

m Matt. 27. 35.
Mark 15. 24.
Luke 23. 34.

n Ps. 22. 18.

⁽²⁰¹⁾ ²³ ^m Οἱ οὖν στρατιῶται, ὅτε ἐσταύρωσαν τὸν Ἰησοῦν, ἔλαβον τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐποίησαν τέσσαρα μέρη, ἐκάστῳ στρατιώτῃ μέρος, καὶ τὸν χιτῶνα ἦν δὲ ὁ χιτῶν ἀρράφος, ἐκ τῶν ἄνωθεν ὑφαντὸς δι' ὅλου. ²⁴ ⁿ Εἶπον οὖν πρὸς ἀλλήλους, Μὴ σχίσωμεν αὐτὸν, ἀλλὰ λάχωμεν περὶ αὐτοῦ τίνος ἔσται ἵνα ἡ

16. ἀπήγαγον] Some uncial MSS. (E, H, I, K, S, Y, Δ, Λ), and many Cursives have ἤγαγον, which has been received by Griesb. and Schol. B, L, X omit ἀπήγαγον, which is in A, M, U, and many Cursives and Versions. For δὲ B, L, X have οὖν.

17. βαστάζων τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ ἐξῆλθεν εἰς] He bearing His cross went forth. The Jews deemed the Cross an accursed thing, and would not touch it, but laid it on Jesus. Thus they fulfilled the type, according to which Isaac, the son of Abraham, bare the wood. (Gen. xxii. 6, 7.) And as Isaac was released, and the ram was offered up, so Christ's divine nature remained impassible, but in His humanity He suffered for the world. (Chrys., Theoph.)

Mysterious spectacle! A bitter mockery in the eyes of Unbelief,—a divine mystery in the eye of Faith! Infidelity sees there a King bearing a Cross instead of a Sceptre; Faith sees Christ bearing the wood on which He would first offer Himself, and which He would afterwards plant on the diadems of kings; which would be scorned by the impious, but in which the Saints would glory. And as conquerors bear their own trophies, so Christ bears the symbol of His own victory. (Aug., Chrys.)

The Cross, when erected on Golgotha, became a Tribunal. There the Judge sat in the midst between the two thieves; the one malefactor, believing, was acquitted; the other, who railed on Him, condemned. And thus Christ showed what He will do hereafter at the Great Day with the quick and dead, some of whom He will set on His right hand and bless,—the others on His left He will condemn.

See above on Matt. xxvii. 28. Luke xxiii. 33.

B, L, X have βαστάζων αὐτῷ τὸν σταυρὸν, and so Lach., Tisch., and for δς they read ὅ.

— Γολγοθᾶ] See on Matt. xxvii. 33. Luke xxiii. 33.

19. Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων] Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews. All the Four Evangelists mention the Inscription on the Cross; and no two of them set it down in precisely the same words. (Cp. Matt. xxvii. 37. Mark xv. 26. Luke xxiii. 38. John xix. 19.) Hence it has been alleged by some, that there are inaccuracies in the Gospels; and that whatever we may say of the spirit, yet the letter of the Evangelical History could not have been under the superintending care and guardianship of the Holy Ghost, and could not have been suggested and dictated by Him.

As to the question of veracity,—if there were any contradictions in the recitals of the superscription on the cross in the several Gospels, or if any one of them had professed to give every word of the inscription, as it existed in all of the three several languages in which it was written, then, indeed, it must be allowed that the charge of inaccuracy is proved. But this is not the case. In this and in other particulars one Evangelist tells more than another; but no one of the Evangelists contradicts what any other of them has said. And therefore it is not true that their reports, if literally taken, are incompatible with each other. This is clear from an inspection and comparison of the several recitals;

Ὅτιός ἐστιν Ἰησοῦς ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων (Matt.).

Ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων (Mark).

Ὅτιός ἐστιν ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων (Luke).

Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων (John).

From all which, taken together, we may infer, that none of them has given the whole; and that the τίτλος was as follows:

ὁτιός ἐστιν Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων. Or, the superscription may have varied in the different languages in which it was written (Townson, i. p. 200); and perhaps one Evangelist gives it as it stood in one language, and another as it stood in another.

Why has none of them set down the whole of the Title? Why has each of the Four given a portion of it? Why is that portion not the same as that which any of the other three has given?

May not one reason be, that in this remarkable example we might have a rule for directing our own reasonings concerning the parallelisms in the Gospels; that we should look upon each of the Four Gospels by itself as perfectly true, and truly perfect, and yet as having a relation to the other three, and lending its aid to consummate the One Fourfold Gospel?

May not another reason be, that we should not confine our attention to one of the Four Gospels, but examine and compare them all; and that our faith and patience, humility and diligence, should be tried by this exercise of examination and comparison; that it should be our moral probation: that men's tempers should be tested thereby; and that it should be seen whether they have the spirit of the Gospel? See further above, in the Introduction to the Four Gospels, "On the Variations in the Gospels."

— ὁ Ναζωραῖος] The Man who is the Branch. (See on Matt. ii. 23.) Then, at the Crucifixion, The Branch was grafted on the Tree of the Cross (ξύλον); and by virtue thereof, the Cross of death, planted in the Garden of Calvary, became a Tree of Life in Paradise; and "its leaves are for the healing of the Nations" (Rev. xxii. 2).

— Ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων] The King of the Jews. Is not Christ also King of the Gentiles? Yes. (Ps. ii. 8.) And in Christ's cross the wild olive becomes a partner in the fatness of the olive; all are grafted together in Him. Christ is King of the Jews—of all who are the true seed of Abraham, the children of promise, the sons of God; the Israel of God, not according to the circumcision of the flesh, but of the heart; "not in the letter, but in the spirit, whose praise is not of men, but of God" (Rom. ii. 28, 29. Cp. Gal. iv. 24). Cp. Aug.

20. Ἑβραϊστὶ, Ἑλληνιστὶ, Ῥωμαϊστὶ] i. e. in the three languages which were then eminent above all others; the Hebrew, for God's law; the Greek, for human wisdom; the Latin, for the Empire, then almost universal, of Rome. (Aug.)

See on Luke xxiii. 38.

B, L, X, and a few Cursives, place Ῥωμαϊστὶ before Ἑλληνιστὶ, and so Tisch.

22. Ὁ γέγραφα, γέγραφα] What I have written I have written. Unspeakable power of divine operation working even in the hearts of those who know it not! A mysterious voice whispered silently to Pilate what had been before prophesied in the Psalms. (Here is a reference to the title prefixed to Ps. lvi. lvii. lviii. in the Septuagint.) Pilate wrote what he wrote, because God had said what He said. (Aug.)

The Jewish nation prophesied in Caiaphas, its official Representative (xi. 51); and the Roman world prophesied in Pilate, its supreme Magistrate in Judæa; God prophesied in them, unwitting and unwilling, and proclaimed Jesus to be the Christ. See above on Matt. xxvii. 37.

23, 24. Οἱ οὖν στρατιῶται] The soldiers then when they cru- γραφὴ πληρωθῇ ἢ λέγουσα, Διεμερίσαντο τὰ ἱμάτιά μου ἑαυτοῖς, καὶ ἐπὶ τὸν ἱματισμόν μου ἔβαλον κλῆρον. Οἱ μὲν οὖν στρατιῶται ταῦτα ἐποίησαν.

($\frac{202}{x}$) ²⁵ ° Εἰστήκεισαν δὲ παρὰ τῷ σταυρῷ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἡ μήτηρ αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἡ ^o Matt. 27. 55, ^{56.} ἀδελφὴ τῆς μητρὸς αὐτοῦ, Μαρία ἡ τοῦ Κλωπᾶ, καὶ Μαρία ἡ Μαγδαληνὴ. ^{Mark 15. 40, 41. Luke 23. 49.}

²⁶ Ἰησοῦς οὖν ἰδὼν τὴν μητέρα, καὶ τὸν μαθητὴν παρεστῶτα ὃν ἠγάπα, λέγει τῇ μητρὶ αὐτοῦ, Γύναι, ἰδοὺ ὁ υἱός σου. ²⁷ Εἵτα λέγει τῷ μαθητῇ, Ἰδοὺ ἡ μήτηρ σου. Καὶ ἀπ' ἐκείνης τῆς ὥρας ἔλαβεν ὁ μαθητὴς αὐτὴν εἰς τὰ ἴδια.

($\frac{203}{iv}$) ²⁸ P Μετὰ τοῦτο εἰδὼς ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὅτι ἤδη πάντα τετέλεσται, ἵνα τελειωθῇ ^p Ps. 69. 21. ^{56.} ἡ γραφὴ, λέγει, Διψῶ. ²⁹ ° Σκευὸς ἔκειτο ὄξους μεστὸν οἱ δὲ πλήσαντες ^{Luke 18. 31. & 22. 37.} σπόγγον ὄξους, καὶ ὑσώπῳ περιθέντες προσήνεγκαν αὐτοῦ τῷ στόματι. ^{Acts 13. 29. ver. 30. q} Matt. 27. 48.

($\frac{204}{I}$) ³⁰ ° Ὅτε οὖν ἔλαβε τὸ ὄξος ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπε, Τετέλεστα καὶ κλίνας τὴν ^r ch. 17. 4. κεφαλὴν παρέδωκε τὸ πνεῦμα.

($\frac{205}{x}$) ³¹ ° Οἱ οὖν Ἰουδαῖοι, ἵνα μὴ μείνῃ ἐπὶ τοῦ σταυροῦ τὰ σώματα ἐν τῷ ^s ver. 42. ^{49.} σαββάτῳ, ἐπεὶ παρασκευὴ ἦν, ἡν γὰρ μεγάλη ἡ ἡμέρα ἐκείνου τοῦ σαββάτου, ^{Mark 15. 42. Deut. 21. 23. t} ^u Lev. 23. 5—8. ἠρώτησαν τὸν Πιλάτον, ἵνα κατεαγῶσιν αὐτῶν τὰ σκέλη, καὶ ἀρθῶσιν. ³² ° Ἡλθον οὖν οἱ στρατιῶται, καὶ τοῦ μὲν πρώτου κατέαξαν τὰ σκέλη, καὶ τοῦ ἄλλου τοῦ συσταυρωθέντος αὐτῷ. ³³ ἐπὶ δὲ τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἐλθόντες, ὡς εἶδον αὐτὸν ἤδη τεθνηκότα, οὐ κατέαξαν αὐτοῦ τὰ σκέλη. ³⁴ ἀλλ' εἰς τῶν στρατιωτῶν λόγχῃ αὐτοῦ τὴν πλευρὰν ἔνυξε, καὶ ^v εὐθὺς ἐξῆλθεν αἷμα καὶ ὕδωρ. ³⁵ Καὶ ὁ ἑωρακὼς ^v 1 John v. 6—8.

cified Jesus took His outer garment, and made four parts, to every soldier a part; and also His tunic. Now the tunic was without seam, woven from the top throughout. They said therefore, Let us not rend it, but cast lots whose it shall be. The quadripartite outer garment, or ἱμάτιον, of Jesus may be regarded as emblematic of the Church in its Universality; extended to the four quarters of the earth, and diffused equally in all places; wherefore He says that He will send His angels to gather His elect from the four winds (Matt. xxiv. 31). (Aug.) The inner garment, or tunic, or coat, which was without seam and was not rent, is an emblem of the Church in its Unity, girt with the zone of charity (Col. iii. 14). (Aug. Cp. Cyprian, de Unit. Eccl. 7.) They who break the Unity of the Church by schisms rend the coat of Christ. They who treat religion as a matter of indifference, or cast lots for it; they who make it a question of private interest, divide His garment among themselves. And St. John describes this as the employment of those who crucified Christ.

25. Μαρία—Κλωπᾶ] Mary, the wife of Klopas (cp. Winer, p. 119), or Alphæus; for this Mary is called the mother of James and Josès (Matt. xxvii. 56. Mark xv. 47), and James is called the son of Alphæus. See on Matt. x. 3; xxviii. 1. Mark iii. 18.

26. τὸν μαθητὴν] the disciple standing by whom He loved. St. John stands at the Cross. He, the Eagle of the Gospel, is gathered to the place where the Body is (see Luke xvii. 36), "where the Slain is, there is he" (Job xxxix. 30).

—Γύναι, ἰδοὺ ὁ υἱός σου] Woman, behold thy Son. Our Lord at His death on the cross made a private testament as well as a public one. He bequeathed the offices of love to His disciple and His mother. (Ambrose, Epist. ad Vercell.) He provided at His death another son for her, from whom He had taken human flesh; caring for her as Man for His Mother. (Aug.)

He says γύναι, woman,—the same address as He had used at Cana of Galilee, when He wrought His first miracle as God (ii. 4). But He no longer says now, "What have I to do with thee?" for "His hour," the hour of His Humanity, which He had derived from her, and in which He suffered for all men, is now come. Cp. above, note on ii. 4, and see the following note. These two passages are the best comments on each other.

27. ἀπ' ἐκείνης τῆς ὥρας] from that hour. This is "the hour" of which our Lord had spoken at the marriage of Cana in Galilee, "Woman, what have I to do with thee? Mine hour is not yet come" (John ii. 4). On that occasion, being about to work a Miracle and manifest Himself to be God, He repelled, as unknown to Him, her who was not the mother of His Divinity, but of His Humanity. But now, when He is enduring human sufferings, He owns her; and bequeaths with human love her whom He loved, and from whom He had received His Humanity, to the Disciple whom He loved. At Cana, He Who had created Mary manifested forth His glory; but now at Calvary, that which Mary had brought forth from her womb, hangs upon the Cross. Thus the Cross became a Teacher's Chair, from which Christ inculcates by example the duty of filial love.

29. ὑσώπῳ] hyssop: the reed mentioned Matt. xxvii. 48. Mark xv. 36.

30. κλίνας τὴν κεφαλὴν] having bowed His head. Christ died when He willed to die. If His power and dignity were so great at His death, what will it be when He comes to judge! (Aug.)

31. ἐκείνου] So in many of the best MSS. Elz. ἐκείνη.

34. εἰς τῶν στρατιωτῶν—αἷμα καὶ ὕδωρ] one of the soldiers pierced His side with a spear, and forthwith came there out blood and water. The first woman, Eve, was created from the side of Adam, as he slept. And here the Second Adam bowed His Head and fell asleep on the Cross, in order that His Spouse the Church, the spiritual Eve,—Εἰς, πῆγ, —the Mother of all living (Gen. iii. 20),—might be formed by means of that which flowed from His side as He slept.

Adam sleeps, that Eve might live. Christ dies, that the Church may live. Eve is made of Adam's side as he slept; the side of Christ is pierced, that the life-giving Sacraments may flow forth from it, by the virtue of which, derived from His death, the Church lives. Cp. Hieron. ad Ephes. c. v.: "Quomodo de Adam et uxore ejus omne hominum nascitur genus, sic de Christo et Ecclesia omnis credentium multitudo generata est." Chrysost. in Ephes. c. v. p. 864, Savil. Ambros. in S. Luc. iii. 22: "Adam novissimus Christus est: Costa Christi vita Ecclesiae. Hæc est Eva mater omnium viventium." Aug. Serm. 22: "Parentes qui nos genuerunt ad mortem, Adam et Eva; parentes qui nos genuerunt ad vitam, Christus et Ecclesia."

The soldiers, gratifying the Jews, pierced the Body of Christ. Thus they fulfilled a prophecy (Zech. xii. 10); and thus they supplied the means of overcoming the incredulity of Thomas. Thus an ineffable mystery was completed. For, thence "came out Blood and Water." And from both of these the Church subsists; as is well known by us who are regenerate by Water, and are fed by the Body and Blood. Hence the holy Sacraments derive their efficacy, in order that thou shouldst approach the sacred Cup, as if thou wert about to drink from the very side of Christ. (Chrys.)

By means of the wounded side our wounds are healed. O death by which the dead live! What more pure than that blood! what more healing than that wound! (Cp. Aug. and Theoph.)

The Church is in Christ, as Eve was in Adam; yea, by grace we are every of one us in Christ and in His Church, as by nature we are in those our first Parents. God made Eve of the rib of Adam, and His Church He frameth out of the very wounded and bleeding Side of the Son of Man. His Body crucified, and His Blood shed for the life of the world, are the true elements of that heavenly being, which maketh us such as Himself is, of whom we come. Hooker, V. lvi. 7. See also Cudworth's Works, tom. ii. Bp. Beveridge on Article XXV. ii. p. 210.

μεμαρτύρηκε, καὶ ἀληθινῇ αὐτοῦ ἐστὶν ἡ μαρτυρία· καὶ οὗτος οἶδεν ὅτι ἀληθῆ λέγει, ἵνα καὶ ὑμεῖς πιστεύσητε. ³⁶ ^w Ἐγένετο γὰρ ταῦτα, ἵνα ἡ γραφὴ πληρωθῇ, Ὅσπου οὐ συντριβήσεται αὐτοῦ. ³⁷ ^x Καὶ πάλιν ἑτέρα γραφὴ λέγει, Ὅψονται εἰς ὃν ἐξεκέντησαν.

^y Matt. 25. 57—61. Mark 15. 42 to end. Luke 23. 50—56. ch. 12. 42. ^z ch. 3. 1, 2. & 7. 50—52. ⁽²⁰⁶⁾ ³⁸ ^y Μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα ἠρώτησε τὸν Πιλάτον Ἰωσήφ ὁ ἀπὸ Ἀριμαθαίας, ὢν μαθητὴς τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, κεκρυμμένος δὲ διὰ τὸν φόβον τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἵνα ἄρῃ τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ· καὶ ἐπέτρεψεν ὁ Πιλάτος. Ἦλθεν οὖν καὶ ἦρε τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ· ⁽²⁰⁷⁾ ³⁹ ^z ἦλθε δὲ καὶ Νικοδήμους, ὁ ἔλθων πρὸς αὐτὸν νυκτὸς τὸ πρῶτον, φέρων μίγμα σμύρνης καὶ ἀλόης ὡς λίτρας ἑκατόν. ⁽²⁰⁸⁾ ⁴⁰ Ἐλαβον οὖν τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, καὶ ἔδωκαν αὐτὸ ἐν ὀθονίοις μετὰ τῶν ἀρωμάτων, καθὼς ἔθος ἐστὶ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις ἐνταφιάζειν.

⁴¹ Ἦν δὲ ἐν τῷ τόπῳ ὅπου ἐσταυρώθη κήπος, καὶ ἐν τῷ κήπῳ μνημεῖον καὶνόν, ἐν ᾧ οὐδέπω οὐδεὶς ἐτέθη. ⁴² Ἐκεῖ οὖν, διὰ τὴν παρασκευὴν τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ὅτι ἐγγὺς ἦν τὸ μνημεῖον, ἔθηκαν τὸν Ἰησοῦν.

XX. ⁽²⁰⁹⁾ ¹ ^a Τῇ δὲ μιᾷ τῶν σαββάτων Μαρία ἡ Μαγδαληνὴ ἔρχεται πρῶτῃ, σκοτίας ἔτι οὔσης, εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον καὶ βλέπει τὸν λίθον ἡρμένον ἐκ τοῦ μνημείου. ⁽²¹⁰⁾ ² Τρέχει οὖν καὶ ἔρχεται πρὸς Σίμωνα Πέτρον, καὶ πρὸς τὸν ἄλλον μαθητὴν ὃν ἐφίλει ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, Ἦραν τὸν Κύριον ἐκ τοῦ μνημείου, καὶ οὐκ οἶδαμεν ποῦ ἔθηκαν αὐτόν. ³ ^b Ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ Πέτρος, καὶ ὁ ἄλλος μαθητὴς, καὶ ἤρχοντο εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον. ⁴ Ἐτρεχον δὲ οἱ δύο ὁμοῦ, καὶ ὁ ἄλλος μαθητὴς προέδραμε τάχιον τοῦ Πέτρον, καὶ ἦλθε πρῶτος εἰς τὸ “Christ is He who cometh (i. e. is our Messiah and Saviour) by water and blood” (see on I John v. 4); and S. Ignatius says (ad Ephes. c. 18), that “Christ purified the Water (of Baptism) by His Passion.” He cometh to us by Water in Baptism, and by Blood in the Holy Eucharist.

It is observable, that the Evangelist St. John, who alone of the Apostles saw the blood and water flow from Christ's side, is he who records in his Gospel Christ's sayings, “Except a man be born of water,” and “Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink His blood.” See above on vi. 53, 54.

35. καί] Not in Elz., but in A, D, K, L, X, and other MSS. The sense is, that you also who hear, as well as I who saw, may believe. For this Gospel is to be read in the Church to you and to all Christians, even to the end of time.

36. Ὅσπου οὐ συντριβήσεται αὐτοῦ] A bone shall not be broken of Him. By these words the Holy Ghost teaches, that the History of the Paschal Lamb is typical of Christ. (Cp. Exod. xii. 46. Numb. ix. 12. Ps. xxxiv. 20.)

37. ἐξεκέντησαν] they pierced; ἡρᾶν (dakar), Zech. xii. 10, from root ἡρ (dakar), to pierce (cp. δάκνω, dig), rightly rendered by St. John here (and Rev. i. 7) ἐξεκέντησαν. The Septuagint, who have καταρχίσαντο, appear to have read ἡρᾶν, from root ἡρ (rakadh), to dance for joy, to insult.

On this passage of Zechariah, see Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. iv. p. 379; and Dr. Waterland, ii. p. 19, who observes that this application of the prophecy to Christ is a clear assertion of His Godhead; for it is Jehovah Himself who says, “They shall look on Me whom they pierced.”

38. Ἰωσήφ] Joseph of Arimathea. See on Matt. xxvii. 57. 59. Luke xxiii. 53.

39. σμύρνης καὶ ἀλόης ὡς λίτρας ἑκατόν] a mixture of myrrh and aloes about a hundred pound weight; not to anoint the body, but in order to wrap it up in folds with these aromatic spices (see v. 40). The myrrh was the dried juice of the Arabian shrub described by Dioscorides, i. 60. Plin. N. H. xiii. 15. The aloes, probably the agallochum or xylaloe, which was used by the Egyptians for embalming. Salmas. ex Plin. p. 745. (Kuini.)

As to the large quantity of spices here specified, it is probable that some portion was used for burning in the sepulchre. Cp. 2 Chron. xvi. 14. Josephus relates that 500 slaves, bearing aromatic spices, followed the body of Herod to the grave. (Ant. xvii. 8. 3.)

Norbergius de religione et lingua Sabæorum, p. 12: Exsequias prosequendi Galilæis (Sabæis) hic est mos. Mortuum domi lavatum, rebus odoratis suffutum, et in arcula vestitum positum, ad sepulturam effertur. Masseecheth Semachoth, c. 8, cum mortuus esset R. Gamaliel senior, combussit super eum Onkelosus prosepultus ultra lxxx. libras opobalsami. (Kuini.)

40. ἐν] Not in Elz., but in many of the best MSS.

41. κήπος] a Garden. Christ changes the valley of the shadow of death into a Garden.

Christ's human body was laid in a natural garden. His human soul was in a spiritual garden (Luke xxiii. 43), and by His death and burial He has prepared a garden for the souls and bodies of all who depart hence in the Lord; and He will make them to be like the dew of herbs (Isa. xvi. 19), and to rise up and blossom in a glorious spring-time.

He provides Paradise, or a garden, for the departed soul (Luke xxiii. 43), and He makes the Grave itself to be a Garden of Paradise; from which at the great Day the bodies of the faithful, which have been sown in hope, will rise in vernal beauty, and be united for ever in unfading glory to their souls.

CH. XX. 1. Τῇ δὲ μιᾷ τῶν σαββάτων] On the first day of the week, which we now call the Lord's Day, on account of the Lord's Resurrection. (Aug., Chrys.) Our Lord arose while the stone was yet on the mouth of the cave, and the seals upon the stone; but the Tomb was opened after the Resurrection by an Angel, in order that others might be convinced of it. (Chrys., Theoph.)

On this Chapter of St. John, see the conclusion of the Tenth Book of S. Ambrose on St. Luke, ch. xxiv., and on vv. 1—9, see Greg. M. Hom. in Ev. xxii.

—τὸν λίθον] ‘the stone,’ not mentioned before by St. John; but supposed to be known from the other Gospels. Matt. xxvii. 60. Mark xv. 46. Cp. above, iv. 43; xviii. 32, and p. 268.

—ἡρμένον ἐκ] taken out. Observe, ἐκ, out of, showing that the stone had been fitted into the mouth of the tomb. (Cp. Mark xvi. 3.)

2. Τρέχει—πρὸς Σίμωνα Πέτρον] She runneth, and cometh to Simon Peter. A confirmation of St. Mark's account, which relates that the Angels had given to the women a special message to St. Peter. (Mark xvi. 7.)

—Ἦραν τὸν Κύριον] They took away the Lord. See v. 13. Mary Magdalene came to seek the Body only, which she calls her Lord (Greg. Moral. iii. 29), and which, as St. Mark relates (xvi. 1), she had come to anoint.

—οὐκ οἶδαμεν] we know not; we women who have been to the Sepulchre. A silent confirmation of the narrative of the other Evangelists (Matt. xxvii. 1—8. Mark xvi. 1—8), that Mary Magdalene had been accompanied by others, Mary the mother of James, and Salome, St. John's mother, of whom St. John says nothing.

μνημείον, ⁵ καὶ παρακύψας βλέπει κείμενα τὰ ὀθόνια· οὐ μέντοι εἰσῆλθεν. ⁶ Ἐρχεται οὖν Σίμων Πέτρος ἀκολουθῶν αὐτῷ, καὶ εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸ μνημείον, καὶ θεωρεῖ τὰ ὀθόνια κείμενα, ⁷ καὶ τὸ σουδάριον, ὃ ἦν ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς αὐτοῦ, οὐ μετὰ τῶν ὀθονίων κείμενον, ἀλλὰ χωρὶς ἐντετυλιγμένον εἰς ἓνα τόπον. ⁸ Τότε οὖν εἰσῆλθε καὶ ὁ ἄλλος μαθητὴς ὁ ἐλθὼν πρῶτος εἰς τὸ μνημείον, καὶ εἶδε καὶ ἐπίστευσεν. ⁹ οὐδὲπω γὰρ ᾗδειςαν τὴν γραφὴν, ὅτι δεῖ αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν ἀναστῆναι. ¹⁰ Ἀπῆλθον οὖν πάλιν πρὸς ἑαυτοὺς οἱ μαθηταί.

(²¹¹/_T) ¹¹ Ἡ Μαρία δὲ εἰστήκει πρὸς τῷ μνημείῳ κλαίουσα ἔξω. Ὡς οὖν ἔκλαιε, παρέκυνσεν εἰς τὸ μνημείον, ¹² καὶ θεωρεῖ δύο ἀγγέλους ἐν λευκοῖς καθεζομένους, ἓνα πρὸς τῇ κεφαλῇ καὶ ἓνα πρὸς τοῖς ποσίν, ὅπου ἔκειτο τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ. (²¹²/_X) ¹³ Καὶ λέγουσιν αὐτῇ ἐκείνοι, Γύναι, τί κλαίεις; Λέγει αὐτοῖς, Ὅτι ἤραν τὸν κούριόν μου, καὶ οὐκ οἶδα ποῦ ἔθηκαν αὐτόν.

¹⁴ Ταῦτα εἰπούσα ἐστράφη εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω, καὶ θεωρεῖ τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἐστῶτα, καὶ οὐκ ᾗδει ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἐστι. ¹⁵ Λέγει αὐτῇ Ἰησοῦς, Γύναι, τί κλαίεις; τίνα ζητεῖς; Ἐκείνη δοκοῦσα ὅτι ὁ κηπουρός ἐστι λέγει αὐτῷ, Κύριε, εἰ σὺ ἐβάστασας αὐτόν, εἰπέ μοι ποῦ ἔθηκες αὐτόν, καὶ γὰρ αὐτὸν ἀρῶ. ¹⁶ Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Μαρία· στραφέισα ἐκείνη λέγει αὐτῷ, Ῥαββουνί· ὃ λέγεται, διδάσκαλε. ¹⁷ Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Μὴ μοῦ ἅπτου, οὐπω γὰρ ἀναβέβηκα

c Ps. 16. 10.
Acts 2. 25, 31.
& 13. 34, 35.
Isa. 55. 3.
d Mark 16. 5.

e Matt. 23. 9.
Mark 15. 9.
Luke 24. 16. 31.
& 21. 4.

f Ps. 22. 23.
Heb. 2. 11.
Eph. 1. 17.

6. θεωρεῖ] he views, considers: stronger than βλέπει in v. 5, a proof of John's modesty when speaking of himself, as compared with his brother Apostle Peter.

— τὰ ὀθόνια] the linen cloths lying, and the napkin. A characteristic instance of St. John's manner of refuting calumnies, without mentioning the authors of them; a lesson of speaking the truth in love. The Evangelist had mentioned, that the Body was buried with a mixture of myrrh (xix. 39), which fastened the cloths to the body, and which binds linen to flesh with as much tenacity as lead. And by this particular he guards against the allegations of those, who had said that Christ's body was stolen by His Disciples. (See Matt. xxviii. 11—15.) For if any one had taken away, or stolen it, they would not have spent so much time, and been at the pains to unwrap it, and to lay the cloths apart, and to wrap the Napkin by itself. But they would have taken all away together. (Cp. Chrys.)

8. ἐπίστευσεν] they believed that He was risen.

9. οὐδὲπω] as yet they knew not the Scripture: now they knew it. Before this time, they had not believed the report of the women, who had been at the Sepulchre. See Luke xxiv. 11, ἡπίστουν αὐταῖς.

11—18.] For an exposition of these verses, see Greg. M. Hom. in Ev. xxv., and Bp. Andrewes, Sermon, vol. iii. p. 3—39.

On the appearances of our Lord to Mary Magdalene, as related by the different Evangelists, see Euseb. ad Marinum, Qu. 2 and 3, ed. Mai, p. 257 (Bibl. Patr. Vatic. vol. iv.).

11. τῷ μνημείῳ] This is the reading of many of the best MSS. Elz. has τὸ μνημείον.

— Ὡς ἔκλαιε] As she was weeping.

15. κηπουρός] the Gardener. Tertullian (de Spectac. 30) refers to a strange calumny propagated in his time, by the enemies of Christianity, in regard to the Resurrection. Speaking of Christ's second Advent, he says, "Hic est quem clam discentes surripuerunt ut resurrexisse dicatur; vel hortulanus detrahit, ne lactuæ suæ frequentia comœtantium adlidentur."

— εἰ σὺ ἐβάστασας] if thou didst bear Him hence. Mary Magdalene, as yet, had only feeble and low notions of Christ's power; and speaks of bearing, laying, and taking away; all applicable to the body only. But Christ gradually weans her mind from carnal notions, and raises it to higher and heavenly thoughts.

16. Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Μαρία] Jesus saith to her, Mary. Our Lord had first called her by the common name of her sex, Woman (v. 13), and was not recognized by her. He then calls her by her own name, Mary, as if He had said, Do thou recognize Him Who recognizes thee. (Greg.)

He did not produce recognition by means of the eye, but of the ear, and by the sound of her own name. (Chrys., who supposes that Mary saw the two Angels doing reverence to Christ.)

— λέγει αὐτῷ] B, D, L, O, X, Δ add Ἐβαδιστί, which has been received by Scholz, Tisch., Alf. Cp. v. 2; xix. 13. 17.

17. Μὴ μοῦ ἅπτου, οὐπω γὰρ ἀναβέβηκα] Cling not to Me, for I have not yet ascended. Mary had fallen at His knees, and made a movement to embrace the feet of Him Who had recognized her.

(Chrys., Greg.) He says to her Μὴ μοῦ ἅπτου. Observe the verb ἅπτου, from ἅπτομαι, properly, to fasten on to an object, to cling to it with a view of communicating something to it, or of eliciting something from it. Hence it is applied to the sick who touched our Lord's garment, in order to be healed (Matt. xiv. 36. Mark vi. 56), and especially to the faithful woman who is said to touch Him, ἅψασθαι, while the crowd only pressed on Him. See above, the notes on Matt. ix. 20, and cp. Mark v. 27. 30. Luke viii. 44—47.

Observe the position of the pronoun μοῦ placed emphatically before its verb, Cling not to Me (cp. Matt. xvi. 18), Me, who am about to ascend, Me, who am to be touched by Faith.

Observe also, the tense of the verb, ἅπτου. It indicates not only a prohibition of a particular act, but forbids a habit; i. e. that of clinging to Him with the bodily touch.

And the words οὐπω ἀναβέβηκα, I have not yet ascended, contain a precept concerning the time, when the habit of touching Christ is to be exercised. He is to be touched, after He has ascended; that is, He is then to be truly touched, when He is beyond the reach of the bodily touch. And one of the purposes of His Absence, and of His Ascension into Heaven, was to elicit and to exercise that touch, by which alone He can now be touched, and by which He must be touched, if Virtue is to go out of Him to heal us,—the touch of Faith.

Where the power of the bodily touch ends, there the function of the spiritual touch begins; and that is the touch which Christ loves, because it most honours Him, and most profits us. Hence He says, "Touch Me not." Think not, Mary, of Me as you now do; dwell not on what I have been made for thy sake, but aspire to That by which thou thyself wast created. I have not yet ascended, but when I have ascended, and am no longer visible and tangible to mortal sense, and when you believe in Me as God, Equal with the Father, then you will really touch Me.

Do not strive to detain Me now carnally by the bodily touch, which is not the touch I desire; but learn to touch Me spiritually; and this you will do, when you can no longer touch Me on earth. Then you will learn to touch Me with the spiritual organ, and to hang on Me by the tenacious grasp and loving embrace of Faith.

Besides, now that Christ is ascended, He presents and pleads His atoning sacrifice, and intercedes for us, and a special virtue goes out of Him (Mark v. 30), in gracious response to the touch of faith; viz. the virtue of the divine gift of the Holy Ghost Himself; who was not given till Christ had ascended, but who was given in consequence of His Ascension, and who is given to the touch of Faith.

This is thus expressed by some of the Fathers:

Mary, as yet, believed only carnally in Him. She had been weeping for Him as Man; and now that with her bodily eye she saw Him restored in bodily presence, she imagined that He would abide with her as before. But Jesus raises her mind, and inspires her with greater reverence; He teaches her that He must be touched spiritually, that is, by Faith; that is, He must be touched not only as man, but as God, One with the Father. (Aug., Chrys.)

πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα μου πορεύου δὲ πρὸς τοὺς ἀδελφούς μου, καὶ εἰπὲ αὐτοῖς, Ἀναβαίνω πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα μου καὶ Πατέρα ὑμῶν, καὶ Θεόν μου καὶ Θεὸν ὑμῶν. 18 ὧρχεται Μαρία ἡ Μαγδαληνὴ ἀπαγγέλλουσα τοῖς μαθηταῖς ὅτι ἑώρακε τὸν Κύριον, καὶ ταῦτα εἶπεν αὐτῇ.

g Matt. 28. 10.
Luke 24. 10.

h ver. 26.
Mark 16. 14.
Luke 24. 36.
Acts 20. 7.
1 Cor. 15. 5.
& 16. 2.
1 ver. 21, 26.
ch. 14. 27.

(²¹³/_{IX}) 19 ὧσῃς οὖν ὀψίας, τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ, τῇ μιᾷ σαββάτων, καὶ τῶν θυρῶν κεκλεισμένων, ὅπου ἦσαν οἱ μαθηταὶ συνηγμένοι, διὰ τὸν φόβον τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἦλθεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ ἔστη εἰς τὸ μέσον, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, Ἐιρήνῃ ὑμῖν. 20 καὶ τοῦτο εἰπὼν ἔδειξεν αὐτοῖς τὰς χεῖρας καὶ τὴν πλευρὰν αὐτοῦ.

We must touch Him Who has ascended as Man (for Ascension is an act of body), and Who is to be worshipped as every where present, as God, and Who is ever to be touched by Faith. (Aug. Tract. 121, Serm. 143, 144.)

"Merito (says S. Ambrose, on Luke xxiv.) prohibetur tangere Dominum, non enim corporali tactu Christum, sed fide tangimus." And again; "Prohibetur tangere, quia nondum in Christo inhabitare corporaliter plenitudinem Divinitatis acceperat. Deus est qui adoratur; homo qui tenetur. Ergo non supra terram, nec in terrâ secundum carnem Te querere debemus, si volumus invenire. Nunc enim secundum carnem non novimus Christum (2 Cor. v. 16). Stephanus non supra terram quæsit, qui stantem Te ad dexteram Dei vidit; Maria autem quia quærebat in terrâ, tangere non potuit. Stephanus autem tetigit, quia quæsit in celo." Hence also S. Leo well says (Serm. lxxii. p. 154, Noli me tangere, &c.), "Nolo ut ad Me corporaliter venias, nec ut Me sensu carnis agnoscas; ad sublimiora te differo, et majora tibi præparo. Cum ad Patrem ascendero, tunc Me perfectius, veriusque palpabis, apprehensa quod non tangis, et creditura quod non cernis. . . . Tunc Filius hominis, Dei Filius, excellentius sacratiusque immotuit, cum in Paternâ Majestatis gloriam Se recepit, et ineffabili modo cepit esse divinitate præsentior Qui factus est humanitate longinquior." See also Jerome, iv. 174.

Cp. on Rom. x. 6—9, and 2 Cor. v. 16, and Bp. Andrewes, iii. 23. 39, Sermons xv. and xvi. on the Resurrection, and Dr. Moberly, on the Sayings of the Great Forty Days, pp. 81—95.

See also the notes on v. 29, on the contrast between Mary's case and that of St. Thomas.

We have here, also, divine instruction concerning the presence of Christ in the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. When discoursing on that subject at Capernaum, He had said to His disciples, "What and if ye shall see the Son of Man ascend up where He was before?" (John vi. 62.) He had thus taught them not to crave a carnal presence in that Sacrament. He now says to Mary, "Touch Me not, for I am not ascended." Touch Me not till I have ascended. Touch Me when I have ascended. And go and tell My disciples that I am about to ascend. Thus He teaches her, and He teaches us His disciples by her, not to dote upon a bodily presence, and not to yearn for that. By seeking to detain Him on earth, we contravene His gracious purposes in ascending to Heaven. By clinging to Him with a carnal grasp, we lose Him. By so touching Him, we touch Him not. He says to us, Sursum corda, Lift up your hearts. Depress not Me to yourselves on earth, but raise yourselves to Me in heaven. Touch Me by the hand of Faith. Cling to Me by the embraces of your souls. Thus Divine Virtue will flow from Me to heal you and refresh you, and to make you partakers of the Divine Nature, and to qualify you for the fruition of the Divine Presence for ever. My Body given for you, and Blood shed for you, will be to you meat indeed and drink indeed, and preserve your souls and bodies to everlasting Life.

B, D omit μου after Πατέρα, and so Tisch. and Lach.

— τὸν Πατέρα μου καὶ Πατέρα ὑμῶν] I ascend to Him Who is Father of Me and Father of you (plural). He does not say, 'our Father,' but, 'Father of Me,' by nature; and 'Father of you,' by grace. (Aug.) God is Father of us, because He is Father of Christ, and because we are made sons of God by adoption in Christ. See Gal. iv. 4—6, 7, and Bp. Pearson, Art. i. p. 55. Hence we may refute the Noetian and Sabellian heresy, which confounds the Father with the Son. He who goes must be a different person from Him to Whom He goes. (S. Hippolyt. adv. Noet. § 657.)

19. τῶν θυρῶν κεκλεισμένων—ἦλθεν] the doors being shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, Jesus came and stood in the midst. But let no one on this account doubt, that our Lord had a real Human Body after His Resurrection. "He showed Himself alive after His Passion by many infallible proofs (Acts i. 3.) He said, Handle Me and see; for a Spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see Me have; and He ate before them" (Luke xxiv. 37—43.)

What therefore may we infer from this sudden apparition of Christ's Body in the presence of His disciples, assembled within closed doors? We are thus taught, that together with the reality of a human body, Christ possessed Divine Power over those laws which regulate the condition of human bodies. Indeed those laws themselves are only expressions of His Divine Will. And by suspending those laws, He showed that He is not bound by them, but is Lord over them. He showed that the machine of the Universe does not move in the iron groove of a fatal necessity, but is governed and regulated by the sovereign Will and free agency of His own Omnipotence.

He, Who is God and Man, and Who has a human body, as well as Divine Power, had shown by means of that human body, before His Death and Resurrection, His dominion over the laws which regulate the ordinary condition and functions of the human body. He had shown this, on several occasions, before His Death and Resurrection, by making Himself unseen; and by gliding invisibly through the midst of His enemies; just as now, after His Resurrection, He passes invisibly through the streets of Jerusalem, and presents Himself suddenly to His assembled disciples, when the doors were shut where they were assembled for fear of the Jews. At Nazareth, when the people had thrust Him out of the city, and led Him to the brow of the hill, to cast Him down headlong, "He passed through the midst of them and went His way" (Luke iv. 30.) So again at Jerusalem, when the Jews had taken up stones to cast at Him, "He hid Himself from them and went through the midst of them, and so passed by" (John viii. 59.)

He had shown also His Divine Power over the ordinary laws affecting the human body, by walking upon the sea. By His Divine Will, the liquid wave had become a solid pavement beneath His feet. He had also enabled a man,—the Apostle St. Peter,—to walk on the sea in the storm (Matt. xiv. 29.) And no one can doubt that Peter had a real human body. But the laws, which ordinarily regulated the functions of St. Peter's body, were modified by the supreme Lawgiver Christ, according to St. Peter's faith in Christ's Godhead.

After our Lord's Resurrection from the Dead, the condition in which His own human body lived and moved, was different from the manner of its ordinary being and acting before His Passion. What had been extraordinary then, became ordinary now. But that which He had sometimes done before His Resurrection in regard to His own Body, and also to St. Peter's body, was an evidence that Our Lord had a real body after His Resurrection. It was a refutation of all doubts and objections derived from the suddenness of these apparitions after His Resurrection; and it was a reply to all allegations therefrom that He had not a real human body at that time.

Assuredly this was done for our sakes. For thus He has given us an assurance, that if we have faith in Him, we also, as St. Peter did, may walk on the waves of this world, and live and move in a spiritual calm, and enjoy peace amid the storms of life, and find a quiet path amid its turmoil and perturbations. And, in a literal sense, we may hence derive a joyful hope, that, when our bodies shall be raised from the grave, they will mount with eagle's wings, and "be caught up to meet the Lord in the air" (1 Thess. iv. 17.), and walk on the waves of the clouds, and traverse the liquid fields of the sky, and tread the starry courts of heaven, and be with the Angels of God.

On these verses, see Aug. Serm. 247. Greg. M. Hom. 26. Bp. Andrewes, Serm. ii. 238, and above, Luke xxiv. 31.

— Εἰρήνῃ] Peace be unto you: a greeting twice uttered. Well might it be so now; for now He "Who is our Peace," had made Peace between God and men; and had made Peace between Jew and Gentile, and united all men in Himself to God. See Eph. ii. 14—17, the best comment on this salutation.

On the Apostolic Salutation expounded from this divine greeting, see 1 Thess. i. 1.

A, B, D, I, Δ* omit συνηγμένοι, and so Lach., Tisch.

20. ἔδειξεν αὐτοῖς] He showed them His hands and His side. The marks of His wounds were remedies to heal the heart of un-

Ἐχάρησαν οὖν οἱ μαθηταὶ ἰδόντες τὸν Κύριον. ⁽²¹⁴⁾ ^x 21 Εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς πάλιν, Ἰεῖρήνη ὑμῖν^k καθὼς ἀπέσταλκέ με ὁ Πατὴρ, καὶ γὰρ πέμπω ὑμᾶς. 22 Καὶ τοῦτο εἰπὼν ἐνεφύσησε, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, Λάβετε Πνεῦμα ἅγιον· ⁽²¹⁵⁾ ^{vii} 23 ἂν τινων ἀφήτε τὰς ἁμαρτίας, ἀφίενται αὐτοῖς, ἂν τινων κρατῆτε, κεκράτηνται.

⁽²¹⁶⁾ ^x 24 Θωμᾶς δὲ, εἷς ἐκ τῶν δώδεκα, ὁ λεγόμενος Δίδυμος, οὐκ ἦν μετ' αὐτῶν ὅτε ἦλθεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς. 25 Ἐλεγον οὖν αὐτῷ οἱ ἄλλοι μαθηταί, Ἐωράκαμεν τὸν Κύριον. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Ἐὰν μὴ ἰδῶ ἐν ταῖς χερσὶν αὐτοῦ τὸν τύπον τῶν ἥλων, καὶ βάλῃ τὸν δάκτυλόν μου εἰς τὸν τύπον τῶν ἥλων, καὶ βάλῃ τὴν χεῖρά μου εἰς τὴν πλευρὰν αὐτοῦ, οὐ μὴ πιστεῦσά.

⁽²¹⁷⁾ ^{ix} 26 Καὶ μεθ' ἡμέρας ὀκτὼ πάλιν ἦσαν ἔσω οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ Θωμᾶς μετ' αὐτῶν ἔρχεται ὁ Ἰησοῦς, τῶν θυρῶν κεκλεισμένων, καὶ ἔστη εἰς τὸ μέσον καὶ εἶπεν, Εἰρήνη ὑμῖν· 27 εἶτα λέγει τῷ Θωμᾷ, Φέρε τὸν δάκτυλόν σου ὧδε, καὶ ἰδε τὰς χεῖράς μου· καὶ φέρε τὴν χεῖρά σου καὶ βάλε εἰς τὴν πλευράν μου· καὶ μὴ γίνου ἄπιστος, ἀλλὰ πιστός. ⁽²¹⁸⁾ ^x 28 Ἀπεκρίθη Θωμᾶς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Ὁ

j ver. 20, 26.
ch. 14. 27.
k ch. 17. 18.
2 Tim. 2. 2.

1 Matt. 16. 19.
& 18. 18.
1 Cor. 4. 18—21.
& 5. 3—5.
2 Cor. 2. 10.

m Luke 2. 11.
ch. 1. 1.
Acts 7. 59, 60.
1 Tim. 3. 16.

belief. (Greg. Hom. xxvi. in Evang.) And in this sense, also, it may be truly said that "by His stripes we are healed." (Isa. liii. 5.)

See also on v. 27.

— Ἐχάρησαν] They were glad. They did not inquire, how He had come to them through closed doors, but received Him with great joy. An example to the disciples of Christ. He who came forth to life at His Nativity from the Virgin's womb, He who came forth at His Resurrection from a sealed tomb, He Who came through closed doors and stood before His disciples, can come to us in ways far beyond our present powers of comprehension. He assures us that He does come to us in the Holy Eucharist. Here is the trial of our Faith. Let us not debate, but believe, and welcome Him with joy. See above on vi. 25.

21. καθὼς] i. e. with authority to send others; as I, who have been sent by My Father, send you; and I send you with the Holy Ghost; as I was anointed at My Baptism with the Holy Ghost.

22. ἐνεφύσησε] He breathed on them. They felt His presence, as well as saw Him present. He Who breathed into the first man, and he became a living soul (Gen. ii. 7), now breathes on His Apostles, and thus reminds them that His own Resurrection is the beginning of the new Creation; that the breath of Christ risen from the dead is the origin of our new Life, and the pledge of Life Everlasting; "for as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive" (1 Cor. xv. 22); "and as the first man Adam was made a living soul; so the last Adam was made a quickening Spirit," πνεῦμα ζωοποιούν (1 Cor. xv. 45). The act of breathing was a proper preparation for communicating the Holy Ghost; and for the exercise of that power, by which, in consequence of Christ's Death and Resurrection, the soul, dead in trespasses and sins, was to be raised from death to life by their Apostolic Ministrations. See on v. 23.

Thomas was not present when He breathed on them; yet we cannot doubt that the breathing extended its virtue to him, and to all who are duly called and sent by Christ. (Cyril.) Cp. Numb. xi. 24—26.

— Λάβετε Πνεῦμα ἅγιον] Receive ye the Holy Ghost. A proof that the Holy Ghost proceeds from the Son as well as from the Father. (Aug. de Trin. iv. 20.) He gave now, that they might receive more abundantly hereafter (on the day of Pentecost), and He gave now privately, that they might receive afterwards publicly. (Aug. Tract. lxxiv.) Cp. Jerome, iv. 178. See also Bp. Andrewes, Sermons, iii. p. 260.

23. ἂν τινων ἀφήτε] whosoever sins ye remit they are remitted unto them. The Resurrection of Christ from the dead is preparatory to, and effective of, our Resurrection from the death of sin; which spiritual Resurrection is called by St. John, in the Revelation, "the first Resurrection" (see Rev. xx. 5, 6), and is necessary as a safeguard against the second death (Rev. xx. 6. 14; xxi. 8), and as a qualification for the joys of the second, or general, Resurrection. Hence, as soon as Christ is risen from the dead, He proceeds to speak of Remission of sin. The bands of death being burst, those of sin and guilt are now broken also. See Jerome, iv. 178, "Primâ die Resurrectionis acceperunt Spiritus Sancti gratiam, quâ peccata dimitterent et baptizarent;" and cp. Bp. Andrewes, Sermon. ix. "On the sending of the Holy Ghost," vol. iii. p. 261, and "On the Power of Absolution," v. pp. 83—103, and see above on Matt. xvi. 19.

26. μεθ' ἡμέρας ὀκτὼ] after eight days; i. e. on the next Lord's Day. Our Lord does not seem to have shown Himself to His disciples in the intervening six days. Thus He distinguished the first day from all other days of the week, as His Own Day. And the Holy Spirit, by recording those appearances in Holy Scripture, and by calling it "the Lord's Day" (Rev. i. 10), has consecrated that Day to Him. Cp. above on Matt. xxviii. 1.

Christ rose from the dead on this day; He appeared twice in succession on this day; He gave special evidence of His Resurrection on this day; on this day He gave the spiritual power to His Apostles, by which the soul is raised from the Death of Sin (v. 23); He gave the earnest of the Spirit (v. 22); and, finally, on this day He sent the full effusion of the Holy Ghost to His Church (see on Acts ii. 1).

Hence it appears, that the proper exercise of the Lord's Day is to "rise more and more from the death of sin to newness of life." "If ye be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above" (Col. iii. 1); to "reckon ourselves dead unto sin, and alive unto God through Jesus Christ" (Rom. vi. 9—11); to be "in the Spirit on the Lord's Day" (Rev. i. 10). Every Lord's Day ought to be a Day of spiritual Resurrection. Every succeeding Lord's Day ought to find us better prepared for the Day of the Lord. Every succeeding Lord's Day ought to be a step in a ladder of Angels toward heaven. (Gen. xxviii. 12.) Then, "when Christ, Who is our life, shall appear, we also shall appear with Him in glory" (Col. iii. 1—4).

27. ἰδε τὰς χεῖρας] behold My hands. Our Lord might have erased all marks of His wounds from His Body risen and glorified, but He has preserved them there; He showed them to Thomas, who would not believe, unless he saw, and so He convinced him; He will show His wounds to those who will not believe, and will convict them, and say, Behold Him Whom ye crucified; behold the wounds ye inflicted, see the side which ye pierced. (Aug. de Symb. ad Catech. ii. 8.) Our Lord arose with the marks of His crucifixion imprinted in His Body, in order that we might believe that He arose with the same Body as that in which He suffered. (Chrys.)

Observe, therefore, that the wounds which Satan inflicted in malice and scorn on our Lord's crucified Body, have been converted by His controlling power and wisdom into proofs of His Resurrection, and marks of His personal Identity. They have become indelible evidences of His Power, graven, as it were, with an iron pen, on the Rock of Ages, to be read by eyes of Angels and men for eternity; and they remain for ever, as glorious trophies of His victory over death and sin, and over Satan himself.

This action and these words of Christ seem to be referred to in the Fragment De Resurrectione, in Justin Martyr's Works, Append. ii. p. 188. Cp. Justin c. Tryphon. 97, and Apol. i. 35.

— μὴ γίνου ἄπιστος] Remark γίνου: Do not become unbelieving. Thomas was doubtful, not unbelieving. Our Lord warns us, through him, that if we miss opportunities of having our scruples removed, if we close our eyes to the evidences He gives us of the truth, our doubts will be hardened into unbelief.

n 1 Pet. 1. 8.
2 Cor. 5. 7.

o ch. 21. 25.

p Luke 1. 3, 4.
Rom. 15. 4.
2 Tim. 3. 15.
1 John 1. 1—4.

Κύριός μου καὶ ὁ Θεός μου. ²⁹ Ἄγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ὅτι ἐώρακάς με, πεπίστευκας· μακάριοι οἱ μὴ ἰδόντες, καὶ πιστεύσαντες.

³⁰ Πολλὰ μὲν οὖν καὶ ἄλλα σημεῖα ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐνώπιον τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ, ἃ οὐκ ἔστι γεγραμμένα ἐν τῷ βιβλίῳ τούτῳ· ³¹ ταῦτα δὲ γέγραπται, ἵνα πιστεύσητε ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἐστὶν ὁ Χριστὸς ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ ἵνα πιστεύοντες ζωὴν ἔχητε ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι αὐτοῦ.

XXI. (²¹⁹/_{IX}) ¹ Μετὰ ταῦτα ἐφάνερωσεν ἑαυτὸν πάλιν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τοῖς μαθηταῖς

28. Ὁ Κύριός μου καὶ ὁ Θεός μου] My Lord and my God. An address to Christ as God. Cp. Christ's own address on the cross to His Father, Mark xv. 34, ὁ Θεός μου, ὁ Θεός μου, εἰς τί με ἐγκατέλειπες; and see below on Heb. i. 8, 9.

Thomas confesses, that He Whom he now sees, is the same Person, as He Whom he had before known as his Lord. He owns His identity. And he acknowledges this Person to be God. He had felt His Divine power exercised in reading his own thoughts. He recognizes Him as Man, and adores Him as God. This saying, therefore, was regarded by the Ancient Church as an assertion of Christ's Divinity. See Cyri], Chrys., Athanas., in Maldonat. Thomas beheld and touched Christ as Man, and confessed Him to be God, Whom he did not see nor touch. (Aug.)

29. με] Some MSS. add Θωμά, which is not found in the best MSS.

From the two examples of Mary Magdalene and of St. Thomas respectively, as described by St. John in this chapter, we learn two several duties to Christ, risen from the dead and ascended into heaven;

The case of Mary Magdalene (v. 17) was very different from that of St. Thomas. She acknowledged His bodily Resurrection, and clung with joy to His human Body risen from the grave, and was satisfied with His visible presence, and wished to retain that. She had yet to learn—and we by her—to see Him that is invisible; to touch Him by faith; to ascend to Him with heart and mind, and to cling to the hem of the garment of Him our great High Priest in heaven, and adore Him as God. Therefore our Lord said to her, "Touch Me not, for I am not ascended; touch Me not, till I have ascended; touch Me when I am ascended; touch Me by Faith. That is the touch, which I require; that is the touch, by which I am to be held, and by which you may have My Presence with you."

But St. Thomas would not believe that He was risen indeed; or, if risen, that He was risen in the same human body as that which He wore before, and at His crucifixion. This was what he was to learn, and we by him,—faith in our Lord's Resurrection; faith in our own future Resurrection; faith in the Identity of Christ's risen Body; faith in the identity of our own bodies to rise hereafter.

Therefore Christ, Who had said "Touch Me not" to Mary, said "Touch Me" to St. Thomas.

Thus we are taught the True Faith in His Divinity, Humanity, and Personality, by His providential and gracious correction of the too material yearnings of a woman's love, and of the too spiritual doubts of an Apostle's fears.

—μακάριοι] blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed. Let those who wish they had lived in the times of the Apostles, and had seen Christ working miracles, meditate on these words. See Heb. xi. 1. (Chrys.)

30. Πολλὰ μὲν οὖν καὶ ἄλλα σημεῖα] Many other signs truly did Jesus. He intimates that the Evangelists did not write all, but they wrote enough for our salvation; and that they who are not convinced by what is written, would never have been convinced by more. (Chrys.)

On the connexion of these verses with what precedes and follows, see the note at the head of the next chapter.

31. γέγραπται] have been written.

—ἵνα] The design of the Gospel is Faith in Christ, and Eternal Life through Faith in Him. (Bengel.)

NOTE on the Genuineness of the following CHAPTER.

CH. XXI. It has been said by some, that this Gospel, as originally written by St. John, ended with the close of the preceding Chapter—the Twentieth; and that this Chapter,—the Twenty-first,—was added afterwards, either by himself or by some other hand.

The main ground for this allegation is,—that the words which conclude the Twentieth Chapter appear to be designed (as, it is said, their tenour indicates) to form the conclusion of the Gospel.

On the evidence of the authorship of the Twenty-first Chapter, it is to be observed; that all the MSS. have it, without any distinction or separation of it from the body of the Gospel; that it is also received as an integral part of the Gospel in the Ancient Versions and Expositions of it; and that the internal evidence is very strong in favour of its genuineness. For example; this Chapter contains many expressions which are characteristic of, and peculiar to, St. John. St. John often uses μετὰ ταῦτα, as in v. 1. See iii. 22; v. 1. 14; vi. 1; vii. 1; xix. 38. St. John, and St. John alone, uses the words θάλασσα ἡ Τιβεριὰς (v. 1). Cp. above on v. 1, and Trench on the Miracles, p. 152. He alone of the Evangelists uses μέντοι (v. 4); he alone uses the double Amen (v. 18); he alone uses the form Θωμάς ὁ λεγόμενος Δίδυμος (v. 2); he often uses the form Σίμων Πέτρος (vv. 2, 3. 7. 11. 15), which is very rare in the other Gospels; he alone uses the term οὐράριον (vv. 9, 10. 13); he alone uses παιδία, as in v. 5. Cp. 1 John ii. 13. 18; and he alone uses the expression ὁ μαθητὴς ὃν ἠγάπα ὁ Ἰησοῦς (v. 7). The word μένειν, to abide, as applied to St. John by Christ (vv. 22, 23), and characteristic of St. John's duty and life, seems to have made such an impression on him, that he repeats it twenty-six times in his Epistles. And the words of Christ, ἔως ἔρχομαι, till I come (vv. 22, 23), find a striking echo in the last chapter of St. John's Revelation (xxii. 20), ἄμην ἔρχου, Κύριε Ἰησοῦ, Amen, come, Lord Jesus.

This Chapter must have been written in St. John's lifetime; for, if it had been written after his death, it is clear that the observation on our Lord's prophecy in v. 23 would have been illustrated by an addition to the effect that St. John had died; and that therefore the prophecy could not have meant that he would not die. And it is not probable, that any other person would have ventured, during St. John's lifetime, or have been permitted by him, to add to his Gospel.

Besides; the Writer of this Chapter distinctly claims to be St. John. See v. 24 compared with the preceding vv. 20—23.

And, lastly, this Chapter has been received by the Universal Church of Christ as an integral part of St. John's Gospel.

There does not seem, therefore, to be any ground for doubting that this Chapter was written by St. John.

But may it not have been written and published by St. John himself after he had written and published the preceding part of the Gospel? May it not (as some suppose) have been annexed as an Appendix to his Gospel by himself?

In reply to this question, let it be observed, that St. John's Gospel was written in order to be read publicly in the Churches of Christendom. Copies were made of it for this purpose as soon as it was written. And if two editions had been published of it, it is probable, that some MSS. of the Gospel would now be extant, representing the original edition. But none of the MSS. of this Gospel omit the twenty-first chapter. No Version or Exposition affords any sign of the existence of two editions of the Gospel; nor does any ancient writer appear to have received any record, or even the least intimation, of their existence.

It has been alleged, that St. John wrote the twenty-first chapter to correct the erroneous notion that he himself would not die. (See v. 23.) But suppose this to have been so. St. John's Gospel was not written till fifty years after our Lord's prophecy concerning him was delivered. And he relates that the saying that he should not die, went forth in consequence of that prophecy (v. 23). If, therefore, that erroneous notion was the occasion of his writing the twenty-first chapter, it would have operated as strongly when he first published the Gospel, as at any subsequent time after its publication.

But it is said, that the Gospel ends with the conclusion of the Twentieth chapter. What follows (it is alleged) is the result of an after-thought.

This allegation appears to proceed from a non apprehension of the connexion between the Twentieth and Twenty-first Chapters. These two Chapters are closely united, as follows:

Toward the close of the Twentieth Chapter, our Lord says to St. Thomas, "Because thou hast seen Me thou hast believed; Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed" (xx. 29).

ἐπὶ τῆς θαλάσσης τῆς Τιβεριάδος· ἐφάνερωσε δὲ οὕτως. ² Ἦσαν ὁμοῦ Σίμων Πέτρος καὶ Θωμᾶς ὁ λεγόμενος Δίδυμος, καὶ Ναθαναὴλ ὁ ἀπὸ Κανᾶ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, καὶ οἱ τοῦ Ζεβεδαίου, καὶ ἄλλοι ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ δύο. ³ Λέγει αὐτοῖς Σίμων Πέτρος, Ὑπάγω ἁλιεύειν. Λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, Ἐρχόμεθα καὶ ἡμεῖς σὺν σοί. Ἐξῆλθον καὶ ἐνέβησαν εἰς τὸ πλοῖον εὐθὺς, καὶ ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ νυκτὶ ἐπίασαν οὐδέν.

⁴ ^a Πρωτὰς δὲ ἤδη γινομένης ἔσθῃ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς τὸν αἰγιαλόν· οὐ μέντοι ^a ch. 20. 14. ἦδειςαν οἱ μαθηταὶ ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἐστί. ⁵ ^b Λέγει οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Παιδιά, ^b Luke 24. 41. μή τι προσφάγιον ἔχετε; Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ, Οὐ. ⁶ ^c Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, ^c Luke 4. 5—7. Βάλετε εἰς τὰ δεξιὰ μέρη τοῦ πλοίου τὸ δίκτυον, καὶ εὐρήσετε. Ἐβαλον οὖν, καὶ οὐκέτι αὐτὸ ἐλκύσαι ἴσχυσαν ἀπὸ τοῦ πλήθους τῶν ἰχθύων. (²²⁰/_x) ⁷ ^d Λέγει ^d ch. 13. 23.

St. John then proceeds to intimate to the readers and hearers of his Gospel, that they may obtain for themselves this blessing; and in this respect be more blessed than St. Thomas, and even than the Apostles themselves. He therefore adds, that "Jesus did many other miracles in the presence of His disciples, which have not been written in this book:" that is, He did them in the sight of those who were convinced by them and believed (v. 30).

But do not therefore imagine, that you, the hearers and readers of the Gospel, are less privileged than we His disciples who saw them. For these have been written (ταῦτα γέγραπται) for your sake, that you, who have not seen them, might believe, and so gain the blessing pronounced by Christ on all those who believe without seeing; and that, believing, ye might have life in His name.

He thus closes the Twentieth Chapter; and in order to prove this more fully, St. John proceeds to add, in the twenty-first chapter, a specimen of what was done by Jesus after these things which had been written.

His argument now is—If these things (ταῦτα) which have been already written in this book ought to constrain you to believe, and enable you to have life in the Name of Jesus, and to obtain the blessing He has promised to those who have not seen them and yet have believed, the ground of your belief will be still more strong, and your hope and assurance of the promised blessing will be yet more steadfast, if I proceed to record, by way of specimen, and ex abundanti, what Jesus did in addition to, and after, these things which have been already written.

Therefore he proceeds immediately to corroborate his declaration by writing the Twenty-first chapter. That chapter is an illustration and expansion of the assertion at the close of the Twentieth;

Observe how it begins: μετὰ ταῦτα, 'after these things.' He takes up the word ταῦτα from the last verse of the preceding chapter. After these things, which have been written, he goes on to say, Jesus manifested Himself to His disciples. He here also repeats the word μαθηταί, 'disciples,' from the last verse but one of the foregoing chapter. He reiterates this word 'disciples' in vv. 2. 4. 8. 12. 14. Jesus manifested Himself to His disciples: to those who saw and believed,—to Simon Peter, to us the two sons of Zebedee, and to others. But do not suppose that this manifestation was not also for your sakes who hear and read this Gospel. "Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed." You who have not seen, but who hear and read and believe, may, by believing, inherit a blessing which is not enjoyed by us, who were His disciples when He was alive on earth; you may enjoy a blessing which was not possessed by St. Thomas, no, nor even by Simon Peter, and by the Israelite in whom was no guile, and by the disciple whom Jesus loved, and who saw and wrote these things (xxi. 24), and we know that his testimony is true.

Nor is this all. As if to press this argument home still more forcibly on his hearers and readers, St. John repeats at the close of the last chapter some words which he had used at the end of the preceding one. These words are ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς. The works which He did (ἃ ἐποίησεν), these bear witness of Him (vv. 34. 36). Enough and more than enough of these His works has now been written, in order that you may believe and have life. And now at the close of this Gospel,—the last of all the Gospels,—the Gospel written by the disciple whom Jesus loved, the last surviving Apostle, hear this solemn declaration from me; that not only, as I have said before, did Jesus many things which have not been written in this book (xx. 30), but that, if all His mighty works were written severally and in each particular, not even the world itself would contain the books that should be written.

Therefore, on the whole, you may derive instruction and assurance not only from what has been written in this book (xx. 30), but also from what has not been written. Believe, therefore, that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God. Believe, and have life in His Name (xx. 30). Believe, and inherit the blessing—For, Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed (xx. 29).

1. ἐφάνερωσε δὲ οὕτως] He manifested Himself thus. After the Resurrection He was not seen, except when He willed to show Himself. (Chrys.)

For an exposition of these verses, 1—14, see Greg. M. Hom. in Ev. xxiv. p. 1543.

2. Ναθαναὴλ] Nathanael. This is added by St. John to show the truth of Christ's promise to him, i. 46—52. On the question whether Nathanael was the same as Bartholomew, see above, i. 49.

—οἱ τοῦ Ζεβεδαίου] the sons of Zebedee. Another indication that this chapter was not written, as some suppose, by some other person than St. John. Any other writer would have placed them next to St. Peter, and not after Thomas and Nathanael. (Cp. Bengel; see also v. 24.)

3. Ὑπάγω ἁλιεύειν] I go a fishing. How was this, after St. Peter had become a Fisher of men, and when our Lord had said, "No man having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God?" (Luke ix. 62.) The Apostle Peter was not prohibited from seeking the necessities of life by means of his former calling, any more than the Apostle St. Paul was forbidden to work with his hands, that he might not be burdensome to any. (Aug., Greg.) St. Peter went a fishing,—an innocent occupation,—but we do not read that St. Matthew returned to the seat of custom.

Simon goes a fishing; Christ was not now continually present in person with His Apostles, and the Holy Ghost was not yet given. They had not yet received their commission. They had lost the guidance of one Master, and had not received that of the other Comforter. They therefore go a fishing; and thus show that they are mere fishermen, without Divine grace; and are incapable of themselves to do any thing to convert others. (Chrys.)

—ἐπίασαν οὐδέν] they caught nothing. This was emblematic of the labours of the Prophets in the night of heathenism, before the coming of Christ. But when He appeared, a large draught of Jews and Gentiles was enclosed in the Apostolic Net. (Theoph.)

They caught nothing in the night, the best time for fishing. Christ had not yet come to them. But when He came in the morning, and commanded them to let down the net, they could not draw it for the multitude of fishes (v. 6). There is no success for "the fishers of men" without Christ. With His aid, the Net which has been drawn in vain through the Sea, in the most favourable times according to human calculation, is filled, and does not break. These circumstances, so similar in many respects, must have recalled the thoughts of the Apostles to the time when our Lord called Simon and Andrew from their nets at the same lake to be "fishers of men." They were designed to teach them, and all "Fishers of men," that this Fishing was figurative and prophetic of what they, and their successors after them, were to do and expect in the great work of drawing the Net of the Gospel through the Sea of the World to the Shore of Everlasting Life. Thus also they proved the reality and power of the gift the Apostles afterwards received when Christ had ascended into heaven, and sent them the Holy Ghost, on the Day of Pentecost.

5. Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ, Οὐ] They answered him, that they had no προσφάγιον, i. e. no ὀψάριον, or fish; in order that we might know, that the fish, which was afterwards seen on the shore (v. 9), was not provided by any human means, but by the creative power of Christ.

οὖν ὁ μαθητὴς ἐκεῖνος ὃν ἡγάπα ὁ Ἰησοῦς τῷ Πέτρῳ, Ὁ Κύριός ἐστι. Σίμων οὖν Πέτρος, ἀκούσας ὅτι ὁ Κύριός ἐστι, τὸν ἐπενδύτην διεζώσατο, ἣν γὰρ γυμνός, καὶ ἔβαλεν ἑαυτὸν εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν. ³ Οἱ δὲ ἄλλοι μαθηταὶ τῷ πλοιαρίῳ ἦλθον, οὐ γὰρ ἦσαν μακρὰν ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς, ἀλλ' ὡς ἀπὸ πηχῶν διακοσίων, σύροντες τὸ δίκτυον τῶν ἰχθύων.

(²⁹¹/_{IX}) ⁹ Ὡς οὖν ἀπέβησαν εἰς τὴν γῆν, βλέπουσιν ἀνθρακιὰν κειμένην, καὶ ὀψάριον ἐπικείμενον, καὶ ἄρτον. ¹⁰ Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἐνέγκατε ἀπὸ τῶν ὀψαρίων ὧν ἐπιάσατε νῦν. (²²²/_{IX}) ¹¹ Ἀνέβη Σίμων Πέτρος, καὶ εἴλκυσε τὸ δίκτυον ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, μεστὸν ἰχθύων μεγάλων ἑκατὸν πεντηκοντατριῶν καὶ τοσούτων ὄντων οὐκ ἐσχίσθη τὸ δίκτυον.

e Acts 10. 41.

(²²⁴/_X) ¹² Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Δεῦτε ἀριστήσατε (²²⁴/_X) οὐδεὶς δὲ ἐτόλμα τῶν μαθητῶν ἑξετάσαι αὐτὸν, Σὺ τίς εἶ; εἰδότες ὅτι ὁ Κύριός ἐστιν. (²²⁵/_X) ¹³ Ἐρχεται οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ λαμβάνει τὸν ἄρτον καὶ δίδωσιν αὐτοῖς, καὶ τὸ ὀψάριον ὁμοίως. (²²⁶/_X) ¹⁴ Τοῦτο ἤδη τρίτον ἐφανερώθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς τοῖς μαθηταῖς ἐγερθεῖς ἐκ νεκρῶν.

f ch. 20. 19, 26.

7. ἐπενδύτην] A fisher's coat or tunic, insula, superaria. Cp. Isa. xx. 2, 3. 1 Sam. xix. 24. 2 Sam. vi. 14. 20.

— γυμνός] Not having his upper garment on. See Mark xiv. 51. 52.

8. ἀπὸ] See xi. 18. B, C, D, L, A have ἴσχυον, and so Lach., Tisch.

9. βλέπουσιν ἀνθρακιὰν κειμένην] they see a coal-fire, Fish, and Bread,—provided not by themselves (see v. 5), but by the creative power of Christ. The fire was kindled, the fish and the bread were created, by Him.

What did this teach?

That He is God; the Creator of all things. All the elements were here combined. The ἀνθρακες (charcoal) and ἄρτος (bread) from the Earth, representing the Vegetable World. The Fish from the Water. Fire was there, burning the coals, and Air fanning the flame.

It also showed that the miraculous draught was due to Him. He could provide fish not only in the liquid sea, but even on the sandy shore.

Hence in the great work, to which the Apostles and others, Preachers of the Gospel, are called as "Fishers of Men," they are instructed to look to Him; they must rely on Him. He will enable them to catch fish in the Net of the Gospel, even in the least favourable times and places. He could even supply them with fish on the dry shore. A memorable example of this was seen in the history of Philip the Deacon, catching a great fish in the Net of the Gospel (r. 11) even on the desert road to Gaza. See on Acts viii. 26—29.

They must, therefore, ascribe all their success to Him alone; and they should never faint in their work. He can and will feed them by food supplied and fire kindled—they know not how—by His divine power.

10. Ἐνέγκατε] Bring ye of the fish which ye just now caught. Our Lord commanded them to bring of the fish they had caught, and then invited them to eat (rr. 12, 13). He takes the bread, and the fish likewise, and gives them. He combines the fruits of their labour and of His own Omnipotence, and invites them to partake of them.

So it is with the preaching of the Gospel. "We are fellow-workers with God" (1 Cor. iii. 9); and in every good work there is an union of human labour with divine grace (Phil. ii. 12); and at the Great Day, the good and faithful servant who has improved his Lord's money will enter into the joy of his Lord. (Matt. xxv. 21. 23. Luke xix. 17.)

On other occasions, our Lord produced more food from food already existing. Thus He acted in multiplying the loaves, and changing water to wine (John ii. 9); and thus He showed that the creatures are His, and are good (see on John vi. 11). But after His Resurrection He creates, without any pre-existing matter; and thus He proved that He is the Creator of all, out of nothing. (Chrys.)

They did not dare to ask who He was; but they ate what He had created, and which He ordered to be brought and eaten by them, in order that they might be able to bear witness to His act of Creation. On the word ὀψάριον see vi. 9.

11. εἴλκυσε τὸ δίκτυον ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς] he drew the net on the shore full of great fishes. This Draught of fishes, recorded at the close of the Gospels, is emblematic of the work of the Church at the end of time, when the net of Evangelic Preaching will be full, and drawn to the shore of eternal life. Matt. xiii. 47, 48. (Aug.)

All the fishes were great. Such will be the glory of the Saints in heaven.

This miraculous draught after the Resurrection is to be contrasted with the former miraculous draught at the beginning of our Lord's ministry. (Matt. iv. 18—22. Mark i. 16—20. Luke v. 1—11. See Aug., Sermon. 249—251.) There the fishes were hauled up into the boats on the sea, here they are drawn to the land; there the net was on the point of bursting asunder (διεβρίγγνυτο), here it is not torn at all (οὐκ ἐσχίσθη); there the fishermen were called to be fishers of men (Matt. iv. 19), here they are invited to sit down and feast with Christ.

The former miraculous Draught represents the fishers tossed in the ship of the Church, on the sea of this world, and drawing bad and good fish (Matt. xiii. 47) into the Net of the Church Visible, which is always strained by schisms, and ever on the point of breaking asunder. This second miraculous Draught—that after the Resurrection—represents her labour done, and the good fish drawn to the land of everlasting life, and the Fishers of the Gospel sitting down at a spiritual Banquet with their Lord, on the peaceful Shore of Life Everlasting, after their own Resurrection, through the Resurrection of Christ.

A, B, C, L, P, X, Δ have εἰς τὴν γῆν, and so Tisch. in ed. 1849, not in ed. 1859.

— ἑκατὸν πεντηκοντατριῶν] one hundred and fifty-three. S. Jerome (on Ezek. xlvii.) says that the ancients supposed that all the genera of fishes were 153; and that this number indicates that "omne genus hominum de mari hujus sæculi extrahetur ad salutem." The mention of this number 153 is more remarkable, because it is so near a round number 150, to which ὡς might have been prefixed.

But may it not be said, that this very nearness to a round number serves to bring out more clearly the truth, that the great God and Judge of all does not look ad generalia, but counts every one of His elect children, whose very hairs are all numbered (Matt. x. 30)?

The number 153 is composed of $50 \times 3 + 3$; 50 is the number of jubilee (Levit. xxv. 9—13), when every Israelite returned to his inheritance; 3 is the number of the Persons of the Godhead, and symbolizes what is Divine (cp. on Matt. x. 2), and perhaps this number 153 may be expressive of the Jubilee of the true Israel of beatified Saints coming to their inheritance in God and dwelling in God, as their all in all (1 Cor. xv. 28) in the heavenly Canaan.

— οὐκ ἐσχίσθη τὸ δίκτυον] the net was not rent. The net is a figure of the Church of the elect. There are divisions in the Church on earth; but there are no schisms in the Church of the Saints. (Aug.)

12. ἀριστήσατε] come to breakfast. ἄριστον μὲν ἐστὶ τὸ ὑπὸ τῆν ἑω λαμβανόμενον, Athen. i. 9, 10. ἄριστον τὸ πρόϊνον ἐμβρωμα, οἷον τὸ ἀκράτισμα, Apollon. Lex. Hom. p. 206. It was now early Dawn, πρῶτα (v. 4), a proper emblem of the Morning of the Resurrection, when Christ will appear, standing on the sea-shore of Eternity, and invite His disciples to sit down with Him at His Table. (Cp. Luke xii. 37.)

13. Ἐρχεται—ὁμοίως] See on v. 9.

(²²⁷/_{IX}) ¹⁵ Ὅτε οὖν ἡρίστησαν, λέγει τῷ Σίμωνι Πέτρῳ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Σίμων Ἰωνᾶ, ἀγαπᾷς με πλεῖον τούτων; λέγει αὐτῷ, Ναί, Κύριε, σὺ οἶδας ὅτι φιλῶ σε. ^g Matt. 26. 33. λέγει αὐτῷ, Βόσκει τὰ ἀρνία μου. (²²⁸/_X) ¹⁶ λέγει αὐτῷ πάλιν δεύτερον, Σίμων Ἰωνᾶ, ἀγαπᾷς με; (²²⁹/_{IX}) λέγει αὐτῷ, Ναί, Κύριε, σὺ οἶδας ὅτι φιλῶ σε. λέγει αὐτῷ, ⁱ Ποίμαινε τὰ πρόβατά μου. (²³⁰/_X) ¹⁷ λέγει αὐτῷ τὸ τρίτον, Σίμων Ἰωνᾶ, φιλεῖς με; Ἐλυπήθη ὁ Πέτρος, ὅτι εἶπεν αὐτῷ τὸ τρίτον, Φιλεῖς με; καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Κύριε, σὺ πάντα οἶδας· σὺ γινώσκεις ὅτι φιλῶ σε. (²³¹/_{IX}) λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Βόσκει τὰ πρόβατά μου. (²³²/_X) ¹⁸ Ἰ· Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω σοι, ὅτε ἡς νεώτερος ἐξώνυες σεαυτὸν, καὶ περιεπάτεις ὅπου ἤθελες, ὅταν δὲ γηράσῃς ἐκτενεῖς τὰς χεῖράς σου, καὶ ἄλλος σε ζώσει, καὶ οἴσει ὅπου οὐ θέλεις. ¹⁹ Τοῦτο

15. Ἰωνᾶ] B, D have Ἰωάνου, and so Lach. Tisch. has Ἰωάννου here, and in v. 16.

— πλεῖον τούτων] more than these; thy brethren? Thou, who once didst say that although they all should be offended with Me, yet wouldst thou never be offended (Matt. xxvi. 33. Mark xiv. 29. Luke xxii. 33. John xiii. 37); and thus didst claim to thyself the credit of special constancy and love, “Dost thou love Me more than these do?”

— σὺ οἶδας] Thou knowest; repeated thrice. St. Peter had now learnt that Christ knew him better than he knew himself.

15—17.] The questions of our Lord, the answers of St. Peter, and our Lord’s commission to him, stand thus:—

- | | | |
|-------------------|--------------------|-----------------|
| 1. (v. 15) ἀγαπᾷς | Ναί, Κύριε, σὺ οἶ- | βόσκει τὰ ἀρνία |
| με πλεῖον τούτων; | δας ὅτι φιλῶ σε. | μου. |
| 2. (v. 16) ἀγαπᾷς | Ναί, Κύριε, σὺ οἶ- | Ποίμαινε τὰ |
| με; | δας ὅτι φιλῶ σε. | πρόβατά μου. |
| 3. (v. 17) φιλεῖς | Κύριε, σὺ πάντα | βόσκει τὰ πρό- |
| με; | οἶδας· σὺ γινώ- | βατά μου. |
| | σκεις ὅτι φιλῶ σε. | |

In the Hebrew and Syriac there are not the same shades of difference in words of loving, as there are in the Greek of the New Testament and in the Vulgate Latin Version, which (as Buttmann observes in Lachmann’s edition of N. T., p. xlv) renders uniformly ἀγαπᾷν by diligere, and φιλεῖν by amare and osculari. The last word osculari serves better than any comment to mark the difference between ἀγαπᾷν and φιλεῖν.

Though therefore it would not seem safe to build any thing upon the Syriac words, which our Lord may be supposed to have uttered, yet the Holy Spirit, the Searcher of hearts, Who knew what was in our Lord’s mind and in St. Peter’s mind, signified something by availing Himself of the variations of Greek in the words for love, and also for feed, in this Evangelical narrative.

Our Lord asks St. Peter, ἀγαπᾷς με; “Diligis me?” St. Peter dares not presume to say that he has that constant, unwavering, practical love which ἀγάπη implies (see 1 Cor. xiii.), such as was the love of Christ for His friends, especially for St. John (see v. 20). He can only answer for the emotions of his heart at the time, which he now knows by experience to be weak, though fervent and tender. Therefore he says φιλῶ σε. He will not rise above professions of φιλῶ.

Our Lord, having first deigned to waive the words πλεῖον τούτων (more than these, see v. 15), at length condescends still further to his humility and diffidence, and adopts St. Peter’s own word, and says φιλεῖς με;

Our Lord had known, that St. Peter, in his self-confidence, had formerly professed more than he would perform; and now He knows that St. Peter will hereafter perform more than in his humility he professes.

Formerly St. Peter had professed ἀγαπᾷν, but his ἀγαπᾷν proved to be only a short-lived φιλεῖν. Now he only professes φιλεῖν, but Christ knows that it will be a long-lived ἀγαπᾷν; it will be an ἀγάπη in old age (v. 18), an ἀγάπη stronger than death. Therefore our Lord commands him to prove his love by feeding the Lambs and Sheep of His Flock (for which He had shed His Blood) with the milk of His Word and spiritual herbage, and by tending His Sheep with his pastoral crook. And He Who knew Peter better than Peter knew himself, foretells that Peter will prove his ἀγάπη by the best of all tests (John xv. 13), the test which Christ, the good Shepherd, has given of His own love for His Sheep—namely, by his death.

On this passage, see Dean Trench’s Synonyms of N. T. p. 48. Meyer refers to Tittmann, Synon. p. 53.

— Βόσκει τὰ ἀρνία μου] Feed My Lambs. The appointed way, by which St. Peter must prove his love to Christ, was by being a faithful shepherd under the Chief Shepherd. St. Peter had probably these words of Christ in his mind, when he wrote what he says in his Epistle, 1 Pet. v. 1—4.

Peter answers, one for all, and Christ addresses all Shepherds in Peter. (Aug. Serm. 137. 295, 296.)

The command Βόσκει, pasce, is repeated: it stands first and last (vv. 15. 17) with ποίμαινε between, v. 16. To provide wholesome food for Christ’s Sheep and Lambs is the first and last thing; the love of the Shepherd who tends, and leads, and guards, and lays down his life for the flock, is the central spring of all, which shows itself in outward acts.

16. πρόβατα] B, C have προβάτια, and so Tisch. Cp. ἐρίφια, Matt. xxv. 33.

17. λέγει αὐτῷ τὸ τρίτον] He says to him the third time. This triple confession is made a counterpoise to the triple denial, that Peter’s tongue may be an organ of love no less than of fear; and that the presence of Life may not elicit less, than the imminence of Death had done. (Aug.)

— Βόσκει τὰ πρόβατά μου] Feed not thyself, but feed My sheep; the sheep of Christ. Not thy sheep, not the sheep of man. They who feed Christ’s sheep with a desire to make them their own sheep, convict themselves of loving themselves more than Christ. Let us not love ourselves, but Him; and in feeding His sheep, let us not seek our own things, but His. He who loves himself and not God, is no true lover of himself; for of himself he cannot live, and he therefore dies by loving himself. Hence the Apostle traces the evils of the last days to self-love (2 Tim. iii. 1—5). We love ourselves best by not loving ourselves; but by loving Him, from Whom our life comes. (Aug. Tract. 123.)

— πρόβατα] A, B, C have προβάτια, and so Tisch. S. Ambrose says, “tertio meretur audire, Pasce agniculos Meos, Pasce agnos Meos, Pasce oves Meas.”

Christ addresses His Church in Peter, whom He desires to make a good Shepherd in His own Body the Church, and asks him, “Lovest thou Me?” And in saying, “Feed My Sheep,” and in foreshowing Peter’s death, He intimates the duty of the good Shepherd to “lay down his life for the Sheep” (John x. 11. 15). (Aug. Tract. 47.)

What Christ is, a good Shepherd, that He enables His members to be. Peter is a Shepherd, and Paul is a Shepherd, and the rest of the Apostles are Shepherds, and good Bishops are Shepherds, but none of us calls himself the Door of the Sheep. Paul was a good Shepherd, because he entered by the Door; and when the Sheep at Corinth began to call themselves by names of different Shepherds, saying, “I am of Paul, I am of Cephas,” he exclaimed, “Whither are ye going, miserable that ye are? Was Paul crucified for you?” (1 Cor. i. 12, 13.) Aug. Tract. 47. Cp. Dr. Barrow on the Pope’s Supremacy, vol. vi. pp. 110—118. Dr. Moberly on the Forty Days, pp. 134—192.

18. ἐκτενεῖς τὰς χεῖρας] thou shalt stretch out thine hands, that is, be crucified; as he was at Rome. Aug. See Tertullian, Præsc. Hæret. 36. Eusebius, ii. 25.

— οἴσει ὅπου οὐ θέλεις] will carry thee whither thou wouldst not. Peter desired to be released from the burden of the body, and to be with Christ; but, if it might be so, he desired life eternal without the pains of a violent death; he shrunk from those pains through natural infirmity, and was carried to them unwillingly; but he overcame them and suffered willingly. Peter had said, “I will never deny Thee; I will lay down my life for Thee.” Christ grants him his will; but in saying “whither thou wouldst not,” He intimates the sympathy and necessity of nature, and that the soul is unwilling to be severed from the body; otherwise there would be often self-murders. Peter was carried unwillingly to be crucified, but he suffered willingly on the cross.

However grievous may be the pain of death, it is to be overcome by the power of Love for Him Who is our Life, and Who willingly suffered death for our sakes.

Christ reserved the glory of martyrdom for the old age of Peter. (Aug. Chrys.) His old age was no hindrance to his δὲ εἶπε σημαίνων ποίῳ θανάτῳ δοξάσει τὸν Θεόν· καὶ τοῦτο εἰπὼν λέγει αὐτῷ, Ἀκολουθεῖ μοι. ²⁰ κ' Ἐπιστραφεῖς ὁ Πέτρος βλέπει τὸν μαθητὴν, ὃν ἡγάπα ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ἀκολουθοῦντα, ὃς καὶ ἀνέπεσεν ἐν τῷ δεῖπνῳ ἐπὶ τὸ στήθος αὐτοῦ, καὶ εἶπε, Κύριε, τίς ἐστὶν ὁ παραδιδούς σε; ²¹ τοῦτον ἰδὼν ὁ Πέτρος λέγει τῷ Ἰησοῦ, Κύριε, οὗτος δὲ τίς; ²² Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἐὰν αὐτὸν θέλω μένειν ἕως ἔρχομαι, τί πρὸς σέ; σὺ μοι ἀκολουθεῖ. ²³ Ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ λόγος οὗτος εἰς τοὺς ἀδελφούς, ὅτι ὁ μαθητὴς ἐκεῖνος οὐκ ἀποθνήσκει· καὶ οὐκ εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ὅτι οὐκ ἀποθνήσκει, ἀλλ', ἐὰν αὐτὸν θέλω μένειν ἕως ἔρχομαι, τί πρὸς σέ;

²⁴ m Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ μαθητὴς ὁ μαρτυρῶν περὶ τούτων, καὶ γράψας ταῦτα, καὶ οἶδαμεν ὅτι ἀληθής ἐστιν ἡ μαρτυρία αὐτοῦ. ²⁵ *Ἔστι δὲ καὶ ἄλλα πολλὰ ὅσα ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ἅτινα ἐὰν γράφηται καθ' ἓν, οὐδὲ αὐτὸν οἶμαι τὸν κόσμον χωρῆσαι τὰ γραφόμενα βιβλία. Ἀμήν.

courage, for he was a new man in Christ, and was invigorated by the Holy Ghost. (Cp. Chrys.)

19. σημαίνων] signifying by what manner of death he would glorify God. He does not say 'die.' To suffer for Christ is to glorify God. Peter, who had promised, in presumptuous haste, that he would die for Christ, at last died for Him in perfect love. It was needful that Christ should first die for the salvation of Peter, before Peter could die for the Gospel of Christ. (Aug.)

— Ἀκολουθεῖ μοι] Follow Me. Thou hast heard My words, which are the words of Him Whom thou hast proved by thine own denial of Him. He Who prophesied that thou wouldest deny Him, now prophesies that thou wilt die for Him. Now thou mayest no more fear to die, for He liveth, Whom thou didst weep as dead, and Whom thou didst endeavour with earnest love to deter from dying for all. (Matt. xvi. 22.) Peter not only followed Christ to death, but in the manner of his death—crucifixion. (Aug.)

22. Ἐὰν αὐτὸν θέλω μένειν ἕως ἔρχομαι] If I will that he should not follow Me, as thou wilt, by martyrdom on the cross, but that he should tarry for a placid consummation of his life, and wait in expectation till I come to take him to Myself in peace. (Aug. Cp. Sermon. 253.) See on v. 28.

Our Lord had before said to Peter (John xiii. 36), thou canst not follow Me now: now that thou boastest of thine own strength, saying that thou wilt not deny Me, but wilt lay down thy life for Me. But, He added, thou wilt follow Me hereafter; and He now explains that saying.

— ἕως ἔρχομαι] while I am coming, and till I come (1 Tim. iv. 13).

— σὺ μοι] Both pronouns are emphatic. The oblique cases of the pronoun Ἐγὼ (viz. μοῦ, μοι, μέ) are often used in the New Testament in a manner peculiar to it; and this usage imparts much strength and clearness to the sense. See the remarkable example in Matt. xvi. 18, οἰκοδομήσω μοῦ τὴν ἐκκλησίαν. When so used, they do not follow their substantive, but precede it. They are not enclitic, but emphatic. The same may be said of their relation to verbs, as here, where the sense is, "Do thou follow Me, instead of inquiring what will become of him." In the present Edition these oblique cases have been accentuated accordingly.

23. Ἐξῆλθεν οὖν] This saying then went forth among the brethren that that disciple would not die. And this notion lingered in certain quarters even to the age of S. Augustine, who relates that some persons imagined that St. John was not dead, but only asleep in his grave at Ephesus.

— ἀποθνήσκει] Cp. Matt. ii. 4, ποῦ ὁ Χριστὸς γεννᾶται; — καὶ οὐκ εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς] and yet Jesus said not unto him that he was not to die, but If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?

Our Lord delivered here two prophecies, one concerning the death of St. Peter, the other concerning the death of St. John;

The prophecy concerning St. Peter's death had been fulfilled. and had been explained by its fulfilment, when St. John wrote his Gospel. It had been fulfilled and explained by the manner of St. Peter's death, in which he followed Christ to the cross, and so glorified God (v. 19).

But the other prophecy—that concerning St. John's own death—was not yet fulfilled. But it also was to be fulfilled, and to be explained by its fulfilment when the Evangelist came to die. And those persons who survived him, or lived after him, knew that it was fulfilled by St. John's patient waiting, and in the quiet endurance of life, protracted among many trials, after the death of all his brother Apostles, till Christ came and took him to Himself by a natural death. St. Peter followed Christ; St. John tarried for Him. St. Peter's was the martyrdom of death, St. John's was the martyrdom of life.

The Holy Spirit, by commenting here on a fulfilled prophecy, that concerning St. Peter, teaches us to attend to the fulfilment of prophecy in our own times. And by only correcting an error with regard to an unfulfilled prophecy,—that concerning St. John,—He teaches us not to speculate curiously on unfulfilled prophecies; but to wait patiently, till Christ comes to us in the events of History, and interprets His own Prophecies by fulfilling them.

24. Οὗτός ἐστιν] This is he, St. John himself. On οὗτος, used by a speaker when designating himself, see the note on Matt. xvi. 18.

— οἶδαμεν] we know. I, and you whom I address, know that His testimony is true, for it is the testimony of the Spirit of Truth (cp. 1 John v. 9. 3 John 12). Here is an assertion of Inspiration. Who could have recorded Christ's Discourses on the mysterious doctrines revealed in this Gospel, and have solemnly affirmed that his record was true, if he had not been enabled to do so by the illumination of the Holy Ghost?

The writer unites himself with his hearers and readers in one confession of the truth. Compare the Amen at the end of St. Luke's Gospel, and of this Gospel.

25. ὅσα] what and how many; not for & simply, but indicating multitude and greatness, "quæ et quanta." So used by St. John, Rev. i. 2, ὅσα εἶδε, "quæ et quanta vidit."

— οὐδὲ αὐτὸν οἶμαι τὸν κόσμον χωρῆσαι] A manner of speech which is employed when that which is evident is amplified, without any deviation from truth. The expressions used may exceed the fact, but so as to show the desire of the speaker without any illusion being practised on the hearer. This figure of speech, called hyperbole, is found in other places of Holy Writ. Aug. Cp. Aug. Civ. Dei, xvi. 21. Cp. Rom. ix. 3. Glass. Philog. Sacr. tract. i. cap. xix. p. 905, ed. 1711.

St. John testifieth this, with as great certainty of truth as height of hyperbole. (Bp. Pearson.)

— οἶμαι] I deem, the first person singular; very appropriate after οἶδαμεν the first person plural in the preceding verse, lest any one should attribute this verse to any but one person, namely, the beloved disciple, who wrote these things—St. John. Some, however, have questioned the genuineness of this verse. But it is found in all the MSS. with scarcely more than a single exception (Cod. 63).

St. John ends his Gospel with the recital of the manifestations of Christ after His Resurrection; and he does not describe the Ascension of Christ into heaven. This had been already done in the preceding Gospels. (Mark xvi. 19. Luke xxiv. 51. Cp. Acts i. 2—12.) He takes for granted, that it is well known to those for whom he wrote. And though he does not describe it, yet he records three speeches of Christ referring to it (iii. 13; vi. 62; xx. 17). See note on Mark xvi. 19, and above, p. 268.

THE NEW TESTAMENT

OF OUR LORD AND SAVIOUR

JESUS CHRIST,

In the Original Greek:

WITH

NOTES AND INTRODUCTIONS,

BY

CHR. WORDSWORTH, D.D.

CANON OF WESTMINSTER.

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

A NEW EDITION.

LONDON:
RIVINGTONS, WATERLOO PLACE.

1860.

LONDON:
GILBERT AND RIVINGTON, PRINTERS,
ST. JOHN'S SQUARE.

The concluding portion of this Edition of the Greek Testament, containing the Epistles of St. James, St. Peter, St. John, and St. Jude, and the Book of Revelation, will, it is hoped, with the Divine Blessing, be published in the autumn of this year.

CLOISTERS, WESTMINSTER ABBEY,
August 13, 1860.

CONTENTS

	PAGE
INTRODUCTION TO THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES	1
CHRONOLOGICAL SYNOPSIS OF THE EVENTS RELATED IN THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES	22
ANCIENT GREEK MSS. CONTAINING THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES	30
CRITICAL EDITIONS	31
ABBREVIATIONS, AUTHORS, AND EDITIONS CITED	32
THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES	35

INTRODUCTION

TO THE

ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

No portion of Holy Writ has been made the occasion of more controversy as to its design than the ACTS of the APOSTLES.

Some have said that it is composed without any specific plan¹, and that it is merely a collection, imperfect and fragmentary, of such materials concerning the primitive Church, as happened to be accessible to the writer. It has been argued from its inscription to Theophilus², that it was designed only for the use of a private Christian. It has been observed, that it records only some actions of two of the Apostles, St. Peter and St. Paul; and that it says nothing of their Epistles, or of the martyrdom of either, and that it terminates unexpectedly with St. Paul's first visit to Rome. And it is alleged, that its title, "the ACTS of the APOSTLES," disappoints the reader, and can hardly have been assigned to it by the writer himself.

Others³, in recent times, profess to have discovered in this book a design to vindicate St. Paul, the Apostle of the Gentiles, from the charges of those who contrasted his teaching with that of St. Peter, the Apostle of the Circumcision; as if the one were contradictory to the other. And others⁴, accepting this hypothesis concerning the Acts, have proceeded so far as to affirm, that the view presented to us there, of St. Paul's teaching, is inconsistent with the tenour of St. Paul's Epistles.

The tendency of these theories is evidently to invalidate its Authority, and to undermine the foundations of its Genuineness and Inspiration.

Happily, however, for the Christian Church, there is no book whose Authenticity, Genuineness⁵, ¹ e. g. See Dr. Davidson, Introduction to N. T., ii. p. 62, and ibid. p. 24.

² Kuinoel, Zeigler, Heinrichs, Meyer, and others.

³ Schneckenburger über d. Zweck d. Apostelgeschichte. Bern. 1841.

⁴ Bauer, Schwegler, and Zeller. See Meyer's Einleitung, p. 9.

⁵ On the subject of the Authorship, the following ingenious argument from internal evidence deserves to be cited;

"Acts xvi. 10: 'After he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavoured to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the Gospel unto them.'

"Here the writer of the history, by the change of persons, first indicates his own presence as a companion of the Apostle. It is well known that this book of Acts, as well as the third Gospel, are ascribed to St. Luke by the universal tradition of the Church; but it seems never to have been shown that the same conclusion may be reached, simply and rigidly, by the internal evidence alone.

"The writer then, so far as we can learn from his history, was present with the Apostle from Troas to Philippi, in his first visit to Europe; was absent from him or not distinctly present, after his departure from Philippi, during his double stay at Corinth and Ephesus; and having joined him at Philippi again, continued his companion during his voyage from Greece to Palestine, his imprisonment at Cæsarea, his second voyage, and, at least, the earlier part of his imprisonment at Rome.

"None of St. Paul's letters were written until his arrival at Corinth, when the first separation had taken place. Six of them, the first and second to Thessalonica, the Epistle to the Galatians, the first and second to Corinth, and the Epistle to the Romans, were written during the interval of the writer's apparent absence.

His name could not then be expected to occur in these letters among the friends who were present with St. Paul, and who joined in the salutations.

"Four other letters, to the Ephesians, Colossians, Philemon, and Philippians, were written during the first imprisonment at Rome. Now since the writer had been a companion of the Apostle for three whole years before that imprisonment, had attended him on the voyage with only one or two others, and had continued with him till his arrival at Rome, it is most improbable that he would leave him at once, and not cheer him by his presence and friendship, as in the previous long delay at Cæsarea. In these letters, therefore, if the helpers present with St. Paul are at all mentioned, his name will be likely to appear. And since he had been so intimate a companion, and attended him faithfully so long, it seems almost certain that the Apostle, if he specified his chief helpers and friends who were with him, could not omit one so conspicuous. The writer, we may thus infer, was either Tychicus, Timothy, Epaphroditus, Epaphras, Onesimus, Aristarchus, Marcus, Jesus Justus, Luke, or Demas, the only persons whose names appear in the salutations of these four letters.

"But this choice is soon reduced within narrower limits. Timothy, Tychicus, and Aristarchus could none of them be the writer, since they accompanied Paul and himself on the voyage from Greece (Acts xx. 4, 5). Onesimus is excluded, since he was converted by St. Paul during his imprisonment at Rome (Philem. 10). Mark is also excluded, since he is mentioned repeatedly in the history, and was rejected by St. Paul as a companion in that very journey in which the writer soon afterwards joined him. Epaphroditus clearly was not with the Apostle when the imprisonment began, but was sent to him from Philippi, when they heard tidings of his necessities. Epaphras appears to have and Inspiration, are more strongly corroborated by the consentient testimony of Ancient Christendom than the Acts of the Apostles.

The evidence of this is clear and open to all¹. And taking for granted that this book was dictated by the Holy Ghost, we may feel confident, that, whether we can discover its design or no, a design certainly it has, not unworthy of its Divine Author. He is the Spirit of Counsel and of Might, and what He wisely purposes, that He effectually performs.

But, is it difficult to discover its plan? Let us consider this question.

St. Luke has written one work, consisting of two parts; the former his Gospel, the latter the Acts of the Apostles.

The connexion of these two parts is marked by the commencement of the latter, with a reference to the former, and by the inscription of both to one person.

The latter opens thus; "The former Treatise," i. e. his Gospel, "I made, O Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to do and to teach, until the day in which He was taken up."

Let us remark also, that in his latter treatise, the Acts, he resumes the subject at the point where, in the former, the Gospel, he had left it; namely, with a description of Christ's Ascension into Heaven.

Therefore, it appears from the Acts, that in his former treatise, the Gospel, St. Luke had professed to give an account only of what Jesus began to do and to teach, while He was in person upon earth.

But now, in his second treatise, the Acts of the Apostles, he has a higher and ampler subject before him.

In this book, the sequel of his Gospel, the blessed Evangelist, being inspired by the Holy Ghost, comes forward and unfolds, as it were, the doors of heaven, and reveals to the world, what the same Jesus, having ascended into heaven, and being exalted to the right hand of God, and there sitting in glory, continues "to do and to teach," not any longer within the narrow confines of Palestine, or during the few years of an earthly ministry, but from His royal throne in His imperial City, the heavenly Jerusalem; and what there sitting in glory He does and teaches, "in all Judæa and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth²," by the instrumentality of Apostles and Apostolic men, and Apostolic Churches, in all ages of the world; and what He will ever continue to do and to teach, from heaven, by the power of the HOLY GHOST sent down from heaven after His Ascension; even till He comes again in glory to judge both the quick and dead.

This is the view which the Author himself propounds of his own plan in composing this book.

Let us consider, whether this view is consistent,

I. With what may be gathered from other writers of Holy Scripture, concerning Christ's Office after His Ascension, and during His Session in Glory? and

II. Whether it be confirmed by internal evidence derivable from the Acts of the Apostles?

I. Our Blessed Lord Himself, when upon earth, had promised to be always with His Apostles³, and He had said to them, a little before His Ascension, "As My Father hath sent Me, even so send I you⁴." Thus He prepares us to regard their Acts as done by Himself. He had also said that the works which they would do after His Ascension would be even greater than those works which He had done when on earth, because He would go to the Father; that is, He Himself, after His been a local Pastor from Colossæ, who arrived also at Rome after the imprisonment there had begun. Thus Jesus Justus, Luke, and Demas are the only three names which are not absolutely excluded by these texts.

"That Jesus Justus was not the writer may be gathered from two presumptions of considerable weight. First, he was of the circumcision, or a Jew by birth; while several indications in the book of Acts lead us to suppose that the writer was a Greek, and only a Proselyte, rather than a native Jew. And next, Jesus Justus is named only once, while the two others are named three times in these Epistles. Now the companion of the Apostle for so many years, and through so many dangers, would not be likely to be left thus entirely in the background, compared with others.

"The choice will now be confined to Luke and Demas, each of whom is mentioned three times, and always near together. In the last instance, however, there occurs a remarkable contrast. In his second imprisonment, as we learn from 2 Tim. iv. 10, 11, Demas forsook the Apostle, through love of the world, and 'only Luke' continued with him, while every other helper was absent.

It would be a high degree of moral incongruity to suppose that this apostate, whether his apostasy was temporal or final, and not the companion who was faithful to the last, was the same with the faithful companion during shipwreck and imprisonment, and the honoured writer of two main books of the sacred canon. And thus, by internal evidence alone, we are led to the conclusion that Luke, and no other, was the real Author of the Gospel and the book of Acts. The circumstantial evidence limits our choice to three names, while the moral evidence, hardly less forcible, confines it among these to St. Luke only."—Birks' Horæ Apostolicæ, pp. 351—353.

¹ It may be seen in Lardner, iii. 207. Kirchofer, Quellen-sammlung zur Geschichte des N. T. Canons, pp. 161—168. Davidson's Introduction, pp. 2, 3; and Appendix A to the Editor's Lectures on the Canon of Scripture. See also below, p. 6, note.

² Acts i. 8.

³ Matt. xxviii. 20.

⁴ John xx. 21.

Ascension, and the Giving of the Holy Ghost, would do greater works by their instrumentality, than He had done when visible in His bodily presence upon earth ¹.

Accordingly St. Mark concludes His Gospel, by expressing in few but comprehensive words, what may be regarded as the argument of the Acts of the Apostles. "So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, He was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God; and they went forth and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the Word with signs following ²."

Thus the Holy Ghost, speaking by St. Mark, represents the Lord Jesus as continuing to do and to teach every where, after His Ascension, by the ministry of His Apostles, what He had begun to do and to teach while He was visible upon earth.

Similarly, the Apostle St. Paul, who, as Christian Antiquity testifies, was St. Luke's fellow-labourer in writing, as well as in preaching the Gospel ³, represents Christ in glory, as the Origin of all that is done or taught in the Church by the ministry of men. "He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens, that He might fill all things. And He gave some Apostles, and some Prophets, and some Evangelists, and some Pastors and Teachers, for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the Ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ ⁴."

In like manner the beloved Disciple St. John, to whom it was given to behold Christ in Glory, describes Him in the Apocalypse as walking in the midst of the seven Golden Candlesticks; which are the Churches of God ⁵.

Therefore the Church of England, in her Office for ordering of Priests, looks up from earth to heaven, and praises God for having given His dearly beloved Son, Who, "after He had made perfect our Redemption by His death, and was ascended into Heaven, sent abroad into the world His Apostles, Prophets, Evangelists, Doctors, and Pastors, by whose labour and ministry He gathered together a great flock in all parts of the world, to set forth the eternal praise of God's holy Name."

II. Let us now examine, whether this view of the design of the Acts of the Apostles, is authorized by the contents of the book itself.

1. Consider the first Act there recorded as done by the Apostles after the Ascension. They return from the Mount of Olives to Jerusalem, and resort to the Upper-room ⁶, probably the same where Jesus had instituted the Lord's Supper, and had shown Himself alive to the Apostles on the two successive Sundays after His Resurrection. There they nominate two persons, with the view of filling up the vacancy made by the death of Judas, and they address a prayer to Jesus, "Lord ⁷, show whether of these two Thou hast chosen ⁸." Thus they declare their persuasion that He Who is removed from their bodily sight is still present with them, as He Himself had promised to be ⁹; and that sitting on His throne in Heaven, He can and does choose an Apostle, as truly as when He was walking on earth, by the side of the Sea of Galilee. The lot was cast into the lap, but the disposing of it was of the Lord ¹⁰. The lot which fell upon Matthias was dropped from heaven by the hand of Christ.

2. Observe the next great event in this sacred History—the Descent of the Holy Ghost from heaven. Christ when on earth had breathed upon His Apostles and said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost ¹¹." Thus He showed that He Himself was the source whence that gift would come. And when the Holy Spirit was poured forth on the Apostles, Peter ascribed the effusion to Christ; "He, having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear ¹²." He, Who while on earth did and taught what the Messiah was to do and teach, now does and teaches in a more glorious manner by the Holy Ghost the Comforter, Whose Mission from heaven is like a royal largess, bestowed in honour of Christ's Coronation, a sign and fruit of His heavenly inauguration and glorious enthronization on the Right Hand of the Majesty on high.

Hence the Kingdom of Christ, which was commenced by His ministry upon earth, is now continued, extended, and amplified. The Four Gospels are the Beginnings ¹³ of its history: they reveal the Day-Spring from on high, and the orient gleams of the Sun of Righteousness. But in the Acts of the Apostles the Sun has risen in his strength, and shines in noonday splendour. After His exaltation in glory, and after the bestowal of the Holy Ghost, the number of the names of the

¹ See on John xiv. 12.

² Mark xvi. 19, 20.

³ See the authorities in the Introductions to the Four Gospels, and to St. Luke's Gospel.

⁴ Eph. iv. 10—12.

⁵ Rev. i. 13. 20; ii. 1.

⁶ Acts i. 13.

⁷ That Κύριος is here Christ, see notes on Acts i. 6. 21. 24.

⁸ Acts i. 24.

⁹ Matt. xxviii. 20.

¹⁰ Prov. xvi. 33.

¹¹ John xx. 22.

¹² Acts ii. 33.

¹³ See note on Acts x. 11.

Disciples at Jerusalem, which had been before a mere handful, a hundred and twenty¹, is now counted by thousands². The Christian Church extends herself from the upper room on Mount Sion, in a gradually growing circle, till she embraces within her range "devout men from every nation under heaven³." She enfolds Samaria by the agency of Philip the Deacon, and of Peter and of John. Christ preaches by Philip in the wilderness of Gaza, and "the Morians' Land stretches out her hands unto God⁴." He passes toward Ashdod, and "Philistia is glad of Him⁵." "Behold the Philistines, and they of Tyre with the Morians, lo! there is He born⁶,"—born by the new Birth of the Word and Sacraments. By the preaching of Peter He gathers in the Gentiles at Cæsarea; by the ministry of Paul He plants the Gospel at Antioch; He encounters the Evil One in various forms; of obstinate obduracy in Jewish Synagogues; of Pagan Idolatry at Lystra and Ephesus; of Sorcery, Witchcraft and Divination at Samaria, Paphos, and Philippi; of sceptical Philosophy, and intellectual pride at Athens and Corinth; and at length in His triumphant march, as a crowning consummation of His conquests, and an earnest of universal victory, He plants the Cross in the imperial city of the Cæsars, the heathen capital of the world, by the hands of him,—who had formerly been the fiercest persecutor of the Church, but afterwards was its most zealous champion, and courageous confessor and martyr—St. Paul.

These noble feats of Christian prowess were performed by means of men, but the Doer of them all was Christ. And what St. Luke says concerning one great harvest of souls, gathered into Christ's garner, may be said equally of all; "The Lord added to the Church daily such as should be saved⁷."

3. Thus we see in the Acts the continuance and extension of Christ's working, and we also recognize in it a greater manifestation of glory in the manner of His operations. He Himself had said, when on earth, "He that believeth on Me, the works that I do shall he do also, and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto my Father⁸." That is, when I am ascended into heaven, and am seated in glory there, then will I do, by the agency of others—My faithful servants—works more marvellous than are done by Me now, in person on earth.

For example, our Lord when on earth had healed the woman who touched with faith the hem of His garment⁹. But when He had ascended into heaven, He worked miracles on the sick by means of the shadow of St. Peter at Jerusalem¹⁰, and by the handkerchiefs of St. Paul at Ephesus¹¹; and thus He showed that the sphere of His working was enlarged; and He creates in our hearts a blessed assurance, that now, when as Man united for ever to God, He, Who by virtue of His obedience to death, has received "the Name which is above every name¹²," He is ever acting by those visible channels of Invisible Grace, His Word and Sacraments, which derive their efficacy from His Godhead, Incarnation and Passion, and are the means by which the benefits of His Death are bestowed for our everlasting life, and are like the skirts of His garments, by which, when touched by Faith, He heals the diseases of our souls.

4. The ACTS of the APOSTLES is a portraiture of the Church; it is an Historical Picture delineated by the Holy Ghost guiding the hand of the Evangelical Painter St. Luke. It has, as its central Figure, Jesus Christ, perfect God and perfect Man, Who died for us on the cross, and raised Himself from the Dead, and ascended into heaven, and sent the Comforter, and reigns in glory, the Head of the Church, and Sovereign of the world, King of Kings and Lord of Lords. He is the source of all the life and beauty displayed in this heavenly landscape; and therefore, it will be remembered, the Apostles are careful to disclaim for themselves all independent power. "Ye men of Israel, why look ye on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk? The God of our fathers hath glorified His Son Jesus¹³." Thus they raise the eyes of the people from themselves—Christ's members and ministers on earth—to Christ their Head and King acting by them from heaven.

5. Accordingly, we find that in this History there are certain words continually recurring, which remind the reader of this concentration of power in Christ, and derivation of power from Him.

One of these is Κύριος, the LORD. This word is equivalent to the JEHOVAH of the Old Testament, and corresponds to it in the Septuagint Version¹⁴; and it is observable that in the twenty-fourth Psalm—which prophetically describes the event, with which this Book opens, the Ascension

¹ Acts i. 15.

² Ib. ii. 41; iv. 4.

³ Ib. ii. 5.

⁴ Ps. lxxviii. 31.

⁵ Ib. lx. 8.

⁶ Ps. lxxxvii. 4.

⁷ Acts ii. 47.

⁸ John xiv. 12.

⁹ Matt. ix. 20.

¹⁰ Acts v. 15.

¹¹ Acts xix. 12.

¹² Phil. ii. 9.

¹³ Acts iii. 13.

¹⁴ See note below on i. 6. 21, and on xxv. 26.

of Jesus, and appeals to the Gates of heaven to receive Him, "Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors, and the King of Glory shall come in¹," the Psalmist twice asks, "Who is this King of Glory?" and twice it is answered, "The Lord, He is the King of Glory¹." And the word in the original for Lord is Jehovah, showing that our Jesus is Jehovah. And this word is constantly applied to CHRIST in the Acts, where it is found nearly a hundred times, and is like a sacred keynote of the whole, ever sounding forth His Divine Lordship in the ear of the world. The Lord's working in the Church, the Lord's household,—this is what the Acts reveals. 'Ο Κύριος ἐν τῇ Κυριακῇ,—that is its subject. It is "the LORD JESUS," Who is said by St. Peter to have come in and gone out among them². It is He Who chooses Matthias³; He Who sends the Holy Ghost⁴; He who adds Believers daily to the Church⁵; He Who works miracles by the hands of His Apostles⁶. To the Lord Jesus, St. Stephen, the first Martyr, looks up and prays at the hour of death⁷. He calls to the persecuting Saul with a voice from heaven⁸. He sends Ananias to baptize him⁹. He sends Peter to Cornelius¹⁰. He (says St. Peter) is Lord of all¹¹. His Angel delivers Peter from prison, and smites Herod on his throne¹². He calls Paul to Macedonia¹³, and comforts him at Jerusalem¹⁴; and finally the book closes with the triumphant declaration, that Paul preaches, in the great heathen capital, Rome, "the things concerning the Lord Jesus, with all confidence, no man forbidding him¹⁵."

Thus the mind is elevated from earth to heaven, and from the acts of the envoys and ambassadors, to the majesty and glory of their Lord and King, sitting on His heavenly throne.

6. This process of exaltation is also performed by another word, recurring in this history and drawing the heart upward to Christ.

That word is οὐρανός, HEAVEN. The inner scene of the book is Heaven. It begins with Christ's Ascension into heaven. The Apostles gaze upward to heaven, and a heavenly messenger comes and announces to them that Jesus is received into heaven; and will come again in like manner in glory from heaven¹⁶. On the day of Pentecost there comes a sound from heaven, as of a rushing mighty wind, and declares the source whence the Holy Spirit proceeds¹⁷. St. Stephen, in the hour of death, being full of the Holy Ghost, "looks stedfastly up to heaven, and sees the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God," and says, "Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God¹⁸." As Saul journeys and comes near to Damascus, "suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven; and he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me? And he said, Who art Thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus Whom thou persecutest¹⁹." Peter, when in a trance at Joppa, saw heaven opened, and the vessel descending, representing the Church Universal, extending to all corners of the earth, into which all nations were to be received; and this vessel let down from heaven, is drawn up again into heaven²⁰. Thus it was declared, that the hand by which the Church Universal is ordered, maintained, and extended, is the hand of Christ in heaven. "In His hand are all the corners of the earth²¹;" and whatever is effected by the ministry of men for the advancement of His kingdom on earth, is done by the power of Him, Who sitteth on the throne of heaven.

III. This view of the design of St. Luke in writing the Acts of the Apostles, supplies a solution of the difficulties which, as has been noticed at the commencement of this Introduction, have been raised with respect to it;

1. It accounts for its Title.

In all probability that Title was given by the Author himself. Certainly it is very ancient²²; and the book was never known by any other name.

¹ Ps. xxiv. 7, 8, 10.

² Acts i. 21.

³ Ib. i. 24.

⁴ Ib. ii. 33—35.

⁵ Ib. ii. 47.

⁶ Ib. iii. 6; iv. 10.

⁷ Ib. vii. 59, 60.

⁸ Ib. ix. 5.

⁹ Ib. ix. 10.

¹⁰ Ib. x. 4, 14.

¹¹ Ib. x. 36.

¹² Acts xii. 7, 23.

¹³ Ib. xvi. 10.

¹⁴ Ib. xxiii. 11.

¹⁵ Ib. xxviii. 31.

¹⁶ Ib. i. 9—11.

¹⁷ Ib. ii. 2.

¹⁸ Ib. vii. 55, 56.

¹⁹ Ib. ix. 3—5.

²⁰ Ib. x. 11—16, and xi. 5—10.

²¹ Ps. xciv. 4.

operatus est Deus plurima Evangelii ostendi per Lucam, quibus necesse habuerint omnes uti, ut sequenti testificatione ejus quam habet de Actibus et Doctrinâ Apostolorum omnes sequentes et regulam veritatis inadulteratam habentes salvari possint." And Clemens Alexandrin. Adumbrat. in 1 Pet. Epist.: "Sicut Lucas quoque et Actus Apostolorum stylo executus." And Tertullian (passim, e.g. de præscr. hæret. 22, adv. Marcion. v. 2, and de Baptismo, 10) refers to this book, under the title Acta Apostolorum, and calls it Commentarium Lucæ, De jejun. 10. And Origen (ad Cels. vi. 12): ὡς ὁ Λουκᾶς ἐν ταῖς πράξεσιν τῶν ἀποστόλων ἔγραψεν, and Epist. ad African. § 9. So Eusebius, ii. 17; iii. 4. Cyril. Hierosol., Cat. iv. Epiphan., Hæres. 1, p. 941, enumerates τὰς πράξεις τῶν ἀποστόλων in the Canon of the N. T.

It is observable that S. Hilary (in Matt. xiv.) refers to this book thus, "sicut libro Præceos (qu. Præxon?) continetur."

²² Thus the ancient Canon Muratorianus says, "Acta omnium Apostolorum sub uno libro scripta, sunt (qu. sanctus) Lucas optime Theophilo comprehendit; quia sub præsentia ejus singula gerebantur." And Irenæus, iii. 15: "Fortassis et propter hoc

But we must understand what that Title means; and its meaning is to be sought in the sense of the words πράττω and πράξις, as distinguished from the words ποιῶ and ποίησις.

Christ is said ποιεῖν, e. g. in the first words of this book¹, Jesus began *to do*², and in numerous other places of Scripture; but He is never said πράττειν; and His agency is never described by the word πράξις. This book therefore describes what Christ, the Invisible Head of the Church, ποιεῖ, i. e. does, or makes, by the visible instrumentality and operations, the πράξεις, or actings, of Apostles, who are His chief Ministers; and in whose apostolic office is contained and summed up the subordinate agency of the Priesthood and Diaconate.

The title of the book is³ πράξεις Ἀποστόλων, “Actings of Apostles;” and two of the Apostles, Peter and Paul, are selected as specimens of the rest; and certain acts of theirs are chosen as specimens of their operations. The one, Peter, was called by Christ on earth; the other, Paul, was called by Christ from heaven. The one, Peter, had denied Christ; the other, Paul, had persecuted Christ. The one was an unlettered fisherman of Galilee; the other a learned Pharisee, brought up at Jerusalem. Therefore, in the choice of Peter and Paul, as special instruments of Christ in propagating the Gospel, His power is signally glorified. The acts of those two Apostles are like patterns of what Christ wrought by all the Apostles, whether on earth or from heaven. And what this book records of some of Christ’s works, wrought by these two Apostles, enables us to infer what else He did by their instrumentality, and by that of the other Apostles whose acts are not described.

2. Hence also we perceive the reason why some of the main incidents in the history of Peter and Paul,—for example, their last sufferings and glorious martyrdom, are not recorded in this book. Some excellent persons, indeed, have deplored this⁴: some have therefore complained of omissions, or defects in the history. But no; St. Luke remained with St. Paul in his last days, as St. Paul himself has testified in his last written Epistle, “only Luke is with me⁵,” but he has not said any thing of them. And with good reason. An uninspired writer would have dealt differently with his subject. Whatever else he left untold in the history of the Apostles, he would certainly have described their deaths. But St. Luke was guided by the Holy Ghost, not merely in writing what an uninspired man could not write, but also in not writing what an uninspired person would have been eager to write. There is inspiration in his silence. His silence, with regard to the Apostles, is full of eloquence with regard to Christ. Neither Paul nor Peter are the heroes of the Acts; but Christ is all in all. And by the subordination of the human instruments, the Divine Agent is glorified; by the “omissions and defects,” as they are called, in the history of the Acts of the Apostles, he reminds us, that even the greatest of men are nothing; that even a Paul is nothing, and a Peter is nothing, but only “ministers of Christ⁶.”

3. Here then we see a divine protest against that morbid curiosity of modern times, which craves to gratify the appetite by graphic sketches and vivid pictures of minute personal details in the history of the Apostles; and in order to provide food for that unwholesome craving, strains its inventive ingenuity, and bedizens the venerable forms of the Apostles with legendary shreds and tinsel embellishments. The Holy Spirit in this divine book condemns such meddling inquisitiveness, and busy familiarity and irreverence. He subordinates every thing in the private history of the Holy Apostles to the public dignity of the Apostolic office. He does not sink the Apostle in the man, but transfigures the man into the Apostle⁷. He tells us nothing of their personal appearance, nothing of the day or year of their birth, or of their death; nothing of their parents or children. He has not informed us whether St. Paul was ever married, or no. Thus he takes them out of the category of common men, and encircles their heads with a halo of sanctity; they are Christ’s chosen vessels and instruments, consecrated as such; that is their history. He raises our eyes from them to Him: they by whom He wrought were men, but He who worked by them is God; and the sparkles of their light are drowned in the abyss of His Glory.

But he may have used a MS. like Codex D with the title πράξις, in the singular.

The composition of Apocryphal “Acts” of Apostles and apostolic men (of which an Edition has been published by Tischendorf), proves the prior existence of a genuine “Acts,” and the Christian Church knows of no other than the work of St. Luke bearing that inscription.

¹ Acts i. 1.

² Cp. John ii. 11. 23; iv. 29. 46; v. 11. 36; vi. 14; vii. 31; ix. 16; x. 25. 37; xi. 45, 46, and passim xx. 30; xxi. 25.

³ Without the definite article αἱ before πράξεις, and perhaps, also, without τῶν before ἀποστόλων. The MSS. A, E, G, H have πράξεις τῶν ἁγίων ἀποστόλων as the title; D has πράξις ἀποστόλων; B has πράξεις ἀποστόλων; and Lachmann, Tisch., Bornemann, and Alford have adopted πράξεις ἀποστόλων in their editions.

⁴ As Dr. Burton, who says, p. 262, “It is much to be lamented that St. Luke did not continue the Acts of the Apostles beyond the arrival of St. Paul at Rome.”

⁵ 2 Tim. iv. 11.

⁶ 1 Cor. iii. 5.

⁷ Cp. further note below, on 2 Cor. xii. 7, on St. Paul’s thorn in the flesh.

IV. The plan then of this divine book, is to reveal to us Christ sitting in heaven ; not like one of the deities of the heathen world, indifferent to human affairs, or controlled by a fatal destiny ; or sharing His power with rival deities ; but enthroned King of Kings and Lord of Lords, and ever ruling all things by His word, for the advancement of His Gospel, and the establishment of His kingdom, till at length He will put all things under His feet, and God will be all in all.

Here is a magnificent subject, not unworthy the pen of the Holy Ghost.

The Acts of the Apostles, thus viewed, is a divine Epinicion, or Song of Victory, on the triumphant exaltation of Christ. It is an Evangelical fulfilment of those prophetic Psalms which celebrate His Victory ; “Thou art gone up on high, Thou hast led captivity captive¹.” “Gird Thee with Thy sword upon Thy thigh, O Thou most mighty.” “Ride on, because of the word of truth, of meekness, and righteousness. Thy seat, O God, endureth for ever².”

In regard also to Christ’s tender love for the Church, His Bride, it may be called a sacred Epithalamium, a holy nuptial hymn, in which is celebrated His tenderness for her, whom He has “purchased with His own blood³,” and has delivered from heathen bondage, and has brought near to Himself, and advanced to His own right hand, and made her partner of His Glory. Here, in this divine book, which describes the espousals of the Gentile Church to Christ, we may behold the prophetic picture displayed to the eye of the world in the fulness of historical truth : “Upon Thy right hand did stand the Queen in a vesture of gold wrought about with divers colours. Hearken, O daughter, and consider ; incline thine ear : forget also thine own people and thy father’s house. So shall the King have pleasure in thy beauty, for He is thy Lord God, and worship thou Him⁴.”

Hence we may derive the assurance that “no weapon formed against her shall prosper⁵.” The Powers of this world may persecute and oppress her, the Spirits of Darkness may be leagued against her, but He who ascended into heaven, and reigns in Majesty on high, works in her, and by her. “He is in the midst of her, therefore shall she not be removed ; He shall help her, and that right early. He is her hope and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will we not fear, though the earth be moved, and the hills be carried into the midst of the sea ; though the waters thereof rage and swell, and the mountains shake at the tempest of the same ; the rivers of the flood thereof shall make glad the city of God. The Lord of Hosts is with us ; the God of Jacob is our refuge⁶.”

V. This then is the proposition, submitted to the reader’s consideration ;—

That the design of the writer of the Acts of the Apostles is, to reveal Jesus Christ in Glory, ordering and disposing all things, by the agency and teaching of men, particularly His Apostles, for the advancement of His Kingdom upon Earth, and for the full and final triumph of His holy Name and Word.

We may now proceed to test the soundness of this proposition, by reference to evidences derived from the state of the World when the Book was written, and also from the Book itself.

Jesus Christ is Lord of all⁷. His enthronement in glory is the culminating point to which His earthly ministry tends. His session there, by its very name implies permanence. There He reigns and will continue to reign, even to the end, as King. There He teaches, and will continue to teach, as our Prophet. There He, who as our Priest offered Himself on the Cross, and lifted up His hands on His Apostles, and blessed them, and was parted from them⁸, and ascended into Heaven, and entered into the true Holy of Holies, on that great Day of Atonement ; there He abideth still, a Priest for ever⁹ ; there He ever liveth, to make intercession for us¹⁰.

Such, then, being the majesty of Christ, and such His offices to mankind, it may reasonably be anticipated

1. That the circumstances of the world would be adjusted à priori, by providential preparations and pre-arrangements for the display of such a glorious consummation. And, that à posteriori Christ would manifest His divine Power, by applying actually, what He had contrived provisionally, for the extension of His kingdom on Earth. And,

2. That He would also display His sovereignty by over-ruling adverse Powers, and by making them subservient to the promotion of His own glory. And that, if the Acts of the Apostles was written, as we have affirmed it was, with the view of revealing Christ’s working and teaching, by

¹ Ps. lxxviii. 18.

² Ib. xlv. 4—7. Cp. Ps. ii. 6—9 ; cx. 1—5.

³ Acts xx. 28.

⁴ Ps. xlv. 10—12.

⁵ Isa. liv. 17.

⁶ Ps. xlv.

⁷ Acts x. 36.

⁸ Luke xxiv. 51.

⁹ Ps. cx. 4.

¹⁰ Heb. vii. 25.

the agency of His Apostles, for the advancement of His Kingdom upon Earth, it would exhibit evidence of such antecedent arrangements, and of such subsequent application, and of such over-ruling control. In a word, many things would be seen in it to have been made à priori to converge to Christ's Session in Glory, and à posteriori to radiate from it.

1. First, then, as to the evidence, displayed in the Acts, of previous providential arrangements for the furtherance of Christianity; and of Christ's power in applying those arrangements, and in over-ruling obstacles, for the extension of His Kingdom;

In contemplating the social and religious phenomena of the world at the time of Christ's Ascension, we see the Jews dispersed for their sins; and, though, for the sake of commerce, dwelling in all the great cities of the earth, yet not intermingled and blended with the population of any. We see them distinguished every where by certain characteristics; by the sanctification of a certain day, the Sabbath; by weekly religious assemblies on that day, in certain public buildings, their Synagogues; by regular reading there of certain Books;—the Law and the Prophets. We see those Books, not like the mystic volumes of other Religions, concealed from public view, but diffused by copies of the Original, and by Translations from it, in every country under heaven.

We see this People, although thus scattered, "like chaff of the summer threshing-floor¹," in all parts of the world, yet knit together by a strong and secret tie. We see them bound to a common centre, Jerusalem, by the triple cord of their Annual Festivals. We see them attracted to it year after year, by a silent centripetal force, and joined together in the City and Temple there. We see that City and Temple surviving after many national revolutions. It had been razed to the ground by Nebuchadnezzar; it had been profaned and made desolate by Antiochus Epiphanes; it had been dismantled by Ptolemy the First, it had been captured by Pompey, and plundered by Crassus; and ransacked by Cassius². But still, as if it had been a living thing endued with perpetual youth, the Temple of Jerusalem, at the time of the Ascension, shone in magnificence and splendour, unparalleled since the age of Solomon. And yet, forty years after the Ascension, this bond of national union was severed. All that complex machinery of national organization, which had been so providentially contrived, and so wonderfully protected, was dissolved; the Temple was levelled to the dust, and has never risen more.

Surely we may say, that the Temple of Jerusalem, with its sacred Ritual, had been preserved by Almighty God for some great purpose; and that that great purpose had been answered, and that the uses of the Temple and its ceremonial were exhausted, when it was destroyed.

What was the final cause of this providential arrangement, and of this divine dispensation?

The answer is found in the Acts of the Apostles. We see it there, and in there alone. The Day of Pentecost explains it. There Christ is revealed, sitting on His heavenly throne, sending the Gift of the Holy Ghost, which He had received in virtue of His obedience and for the manifestation of His Glory³. "The Lord gave the Word, great was the company of the Preachers⁴." We see Him preaching by His Apostles, to crowds of devout men, who had thronged to that Festival from every nation under heaven. He it is, Who has brought by His providential power the multitudinous waters of these confluent nations to Jerusalem. He it is, Who by the preaching of His Apostles, inspired by the Holy Ghost, spiritualizes those national streams, by the infusion of the living waters of the Gospel, outpoured from the wellspring of His love, and sends them back on their homeward-ebbing course, to irrigate and fertilize the world.

Proceeding further in the history we may observe, that the first miracle of healing which Christ wrought by the hands of His Apostles, was done in a public place, at a public time; it was done in the city of Jerusalem, at "the Beautiful Gate of the Temple," and "at the hour of prayer⁵;" and the people flocked to the Apostles, who preached Christ, as the sole author of the miracle, "in Solomon's Porch⁶." Thus the Temple, its Gates, its Porches, its Hours of Prayer, as well as its Annual Festivals, were preparatory and ministerial to the manifestation of Christ's Glory after His Ascension, and were used by Him for that end.

If we follow the Apostles from Jerusalem, and trace them in their Missionary Journeys, we see indications of similar preparations in all parts of the world. "Other men had laboured, and they enter into their labours⁷." Many centuries before, Christ had sent Moses and the Prophets, to be

¹ Dan. ii. 35.

² Cp. Dean Jackson on the Creed, i. pp. 128. 136. 138.

³ Acts ii. 33. 36.

⁴ Ps. lxxviii. 11.

⁵ Acts iii. 1—6.

⁶ Acts iii. 11, 12. 16. Cp. iv. 10.

⁷ John iv. 38.

the Precursors of His Apostles. Go wherever they might, they heard the "voices of Moses and the Prophets read in the Synagogues every Sabbath Day¹." The fallow ground of the world had been broken up by that preparatory tillage, and had been ploughed into deep furrows for the reception of the seed of the Gospel.

The doctrine of Levitical Sacrifices, rightly understood, prepared the way for Evangelical Sacraments. The Jewish Sabbath died, and arose to life in new glory and beauty in the Lord's Day. The Synagogue was the Vestibule of the Church. The Pentateuch and the Prophets were matured into ripeness in the Gospel.

Again; even heathenism itself had been silently leavened by the diffusion of the Hebrew Scriptures. Their venerable antiquity, their noble simplicity, their pure morality, had won for them the affections of many wise and noble minds, which were wearied and disgusted with the jarring contradictions and the licentious profligacy of Paganism, and recognized in the religion of the Old Testament, a divine echo responsive to the voices of Nature, Reason, and Conscience, speaking in their own hearts.

The Acts of the Apostles presents us with examples of this class in the Roman centurion Cornelius at Cæsarea, and in Sergius Paulus, the proconsul of Cyprus.

Besides, under the Providence of God the military successes of the Third Monarchy—the Macedonian—and after it those of the Fourth Monarchy—the Roman—had broken down the foundations of local reverence for national deities², and had cleared the ground for the planting of a purer faith. The deities which presided as patrons over special cities and districts, had been made to pass under the yoke of Rome; they had not been able to defend their own cities against the arms of the conquerors, and so their credit was weakened, especially among the enlightened classes, who were thus prepared to receive Christianity. We may observe a remarkable instance of this in the friendship and protection proffered by the Asiarchs themselves, the Presidents of the Games of "the Great Goddess Diana," to St. Paul the Apostle, at Ephesus³.

These two causes,—namely, the diffusion of the Hebrew Scriptures, and the decomposition of Paganism,—had tended to produce a class of persons in all parts of the world, who may be called the Seminary of the Gentile Church. These were the Proselytes—not the Proselytes of righteousness, but of the Gate—who are designated in the Acts of the Apostles as οἱ σεβόμενοι, οἱ φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεόν⁴. Tired of Polytheism, and yet unwilling to bend their necks under the yoke of the Ceremonial Law, they received with joy the tidings of the Gospel; they recognized in Christianity a religion which satisfied the wants of their nature, the requirements of their reason, and the yearnings of their hearts, without impairing any of the reverence with which they had learnt to regard the God of the Old Testament; but rather, and much more, enlarging and spiritualizing the ideas they had already conceived of His merciful purposes and glorious attributes. Here, therefore, in the Gospel, they found a treasure of unspeakable price; here they might well exclaim, εὕρηκα—μεν, συγχαίρωμεν, "We have found it, let us rejoice together."

The Apostles, as the history of the Acts shows, met with this class of Proselytes in their missionary journeys every where. And in it they found, as it were, a bridge already laid down for the victorious passage and entrance of the Gospel into every city of the world.

The conquests of the Third Empire—that of the Greek dynasty of Alexander the Great—had extended a common language, the Greek, over the greater part of Europe and Asia. And by the royal command of one of the Princes of that empire⁵, the Hebrew Scriptures, in part, had been translated into that language. That translation, the Septuagint, had been executed by Jews, and had been received in their Synagogues. It was their Authorized Version; and therefore the Jews could not fairly make any exception to it⁶; and thus a preparation had been made for the preaching and writing of the Gospel in that common tongue.

The Third Empire had given great impulse and encouragement to commerce and navigation; it had built gallant fleets, and constructed noble docks, emporiums, arsenals, and seaports in various parts of the world. Thus it facilitated the intercommunion of nations, and prepared the way for the diffusion of the Gospel which would unite them all in Christ.

If the dynasties founded by the successors of Alexander the Great, and branching off from his Monarchy, had taken deep root in the world, as independent and separate kingdoms, then the pro-

¹ Acts xv. 21 and xiii. 27.

² Cp. Bp. Pearson's lately recovered Concio iii., in his Minor Works, edited by Churton, ii. 35.

³ Acts xix. 30, 31.

VOL. I.—PART II.

⁴ Acts xiii. 43. 50; xvi. 14; xvii. 4. 17; xviii. 7.

⁵ Ptolemy Philadelphus, king of Egypt, about B.C. 280.

⁶ Tertullian, Apolog. 18, "Judæi palam lectitant."

gress of Christianity would have been impeded by many hindrances; but providentially they were made to coalesce under the Roman or Fourth Empire.

The Third or Greek Monarchy had prepared the way for the Gospel by sea, the Fourth Monarchy accelerated its course by land. The warlike power of Rome constructed Roads, which linked all parts of the vast empire to the capital. These military Roads of her Legions became highways for the Gospel. The martial Mistress of the world was a Pioneer of the Prince of Peace. Rome stratified Europe, and the Apostles evangelized it by her aid.

The Acts of the Apostles supplies evidence here. We may trace the Apostle St. Paul on his first entrance into Europe along the Egnatian Way—from Philippi to Amphipolis, Apollonia, and Thessalonica¹. And it is worthy of remark, that the glorious event, which crowns the history of the Acts, and which is the pledge of the future conquests of Christianity,—namely, the arrival of the great Apostle of the Gentiles in the heathen Metropolis of the world, Rome, in order to preach the Gospel there, and to bear witness to Christ before the throne of the Cæsars, was brought about by the agency of Ships of the Third Empire, and by Roads of the Fourth. St. Paul sailed towards Rome in two vessels of Alexandria², and arrived at Rome by the Queen of roads, the Appian Way. And perhaps the Sacred Historian has noted the heathen name of one of those ships³, and has specified two itinerary stations on that great military road⁴,—things trivial it might seem, if any thing in Scripture can be so called,—with a view of suggesting to the reader a thankful acknowledgment, that the commercial and maritime activity and skill, and warlike prowess of heathenism, its engineering labours and locomotive powers, had been made subservient to Christ, and had been consecrated by Him, to the furtherance of His Gospel.

Such then are some of the intimations, which the Acts of the Apostles affords, of the previous preparations of the world for the advancement of Christ's Kingdom, and of the actual application of those preparations for that end.

2. But further. This History displays Christ in Glory, exercising His power, not only in using the machinery which He Himself had contrived for that purpose, but also in controlling and overruling all adverse powers, and manifesting His glory by the conversion of those powers into instruments for the propagation of the Gospel.

Here in a signal manner it displays the divine supremacy and universal sovereignty of Christ. A few examples may suffice.

At the commencement of the Acts, we see the Gospel assailed by the Chief Priests at Jerusalem, especially by the Sect of the Sadducees⁵. They imprison Peter and John, and bring them before the Council. Thus the Apostles are brought forward to preach before the Sanhedrim the doctrine of the Resurrection, by the agency of the Sadducees who denied it. The Sadducees imprison the Apostles again⁶, but the Angel of the Lord by night opens the prison doors. Thus Christ overrules the designs of the Sadducees, who denied the existence of Angels, and makes the Sadducees themselves to be the means of showing to the world, that His Angels are ministering Spirits encamping about His Church.

The seven Deacons are appointed, and the fury of Jewish persecution rages against Stephen, and evokes from his mouth that noble speech, spoken before the Jewish Sanhedrim, and containing the very pith and marrow of all true interpretation of Jewish History, and declaring that its sum and substance is Jesus Christ. It elicits from his lips an appeal to Jesus, standing at the right hand of God, and a prayer to Him as God, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit;" and to pardon those who stoned him, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge⁷." Thus, under the power of Christ, the malice of the Jews became the means of proving, that He, Whom they had crucified, Who is the faithful Witness, the First-begotten of the Dead⁸, the divine Proto-Martyr, the true Abel, Jesus Christ, now reigning in heaven, is the source of all the courage which animates the hearts of martyrs in their dying hour; that He is the fountain of all the Faith which illumines their inward eye, and of all the Hope which gives them a foretaste of bliss; and of all the Charity which makes them love and bless their persecutors, and enables them to be more than conquerors in death, over it, and by it, and makes death itself to be their birth to everlasting life.

The "persecution which arose about Stephen" scattered the disciples; but the disciples, being scattered by persecution, went every where "scattering the seed of the word⁹." Thus Persecution promoted Preaching: the spirit of St. Stephen revived in St. Philip, and carried the Gospel to

¹ Acts xvii. 1.

² Ib. xxvii. 6; xxviii. 11.

³ Ib. xxviii. 11.

⁴ Acts xxviii. 15.

⁵ Ib. iv. 1; v. 17.

⁶ Ib. v. 17, 18.

⁷ Acts vii. 56—60.

⁸ Rev. i. 5.

⁹ Acts viii. 1. 4.

Samaria, to Azotus, to Cæsarea. The more Persecution raged, the more Preaching prevailed. Saul is hastening from Damascus with a commission from the Chief Priests, to bind the Disciples there; he draws near to the gate of the City, and is eager to seize on his prey; but Jesus on His heavenly throne beholds him and checks him in his course, and dashes him to the ground, and blinds him with a light from heaven, and speaks to him with a voice of power, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me?" Saul the Persecutor became Paul the Preacher. The same Jesus, who when on earth had called simple fishermen from their nets at the Sea of Galilee, and made them to be His Apostles, manifested His power from heaven, by calling the learned Pharisee, breathing rage and slaughter, and making havoc of the Church, and bearing letters from the Jewish Sanhedrim empowering him to imprison the Christians of Damascus; and He sends him as His Apostle to the Gentiles, and enables him by the Holy Ghost to indite divine Epistles, for the comfort and edification of His Church in all ages of the world.

Saul, who had been the instrument of the Sanhedrim in persecuting Christ, is now persecuted by the Sanhedrim for Christ's sake. But the same divine power of Jesus, which had overruled his rage against the Church, and had converted it into an instrument for advancing His kingdom, now overrules the rage of the Jews against Paul, for the same end. They arrest him in the Temple at Jerusalem¹, but that arrest is made an occasion for the spread of the Gospel. It leads to the preaching of that Gospel at Jerusalem by the mouth of St. Paul—the former Pharisee, the pupil of Gamaliel, the once zealous persecutor—first to the people in the Area of the Temple², and then, on the following day, to the assembled Sanhedrim³. The Jews, in their fury against him, lie in wait to destroy him⁴; but the more fiercely they rage, the more gloriously Christ triumphs. He uses their conspiracy against Paul as the occasion for bringing him to Cæsarea, the Roman capital of Palestine, in order that he may preach the Gospel there, first to Felix the Roman Governor, and his wife Drusilla, and next to Porcius Festus, his successor, and to Agrippa, the Jewish King, and Bernice his sister, and to the Chief Captains and principal men of the city⁵. And, finally, it is made to conduce to that glorious consummation, which Christ had promised⁶, and Paul ardently desired⁷, namely, the mission of St. Paul to Rome, and the preaching of the Gospel by his mouth in the heathen Metropolis of the world. "I would therefore that ye should understand, brethren"—he himself declares,—"that the things which happened unto me," although they were contrived by the malice of the Tempter, "fell out for the furtherance of the Gospel⁸."

One more example of this kind. "Herod the king stretched forth his hands to vex certain of the Church⁹," he kills one Apostle, St. James, and imprisons another, St. Peter. In the eye of the world, he seems to be triumphing over Christ. But what has he done? He has sounded an alarm which has called the Church to her proper arms, prayer, unceasing prayer¹⁰. Thus Herod has taught Christendom where her strength lies. The prayer of the faithful brings down Angels from heaven, who deliver Peter from his chains, and smite Herod on his throne; and "the Word of the Lord grows and is multiplied." And the Church, like another Miriam, takes up her timbrel and says, "Sing ye to the Lord, for He hath triumphed gloriously: the horse and his rider hath He thrown into the sea¹¹."

Let us consider also the internal affairs of the Church. Temporary evils nascent therein are overruled into means of endless good. A murmuring arose of the Grecians against the Hebrews in the primitive Church¹². It is made an occasion for the growth of the Word¹³, and for the extension of the Church, by the completion of the Christian ministry in the institution of the Diaconate. Thus a local and transitory evil was changed into a source of universal and perpetual good.

Again, a question is agitated concerning the necessity of circumcision for the Gentile Christians, and no small dissension and disputation prevails¹⁴. Therefore it was resolved that Paul and Barnabas should go up to Jerusalem unto the Apostles and Elders about this question¹⁵. The Apostles and Elders meet in Council at Jerusalem, they frame and promulgate a decree, and the question is settled¹⁶. Thus the dispute was made to be a source of peace by which disputes are ended. It was made to supply a precedent and rule for the practice of the Church in all ages, and to establish a principle of universal application,—that for the settlement of controversies, whether concerning doctrine or discipline, and for the quieting of men's minds, and the appeasing of strife, resort should be had, not to any one man in the Church, not to Peter, not to the Bishop of Rome, but to the Holy Ghost Himself, speaking in Councils and Convocations of the Church, praying for His guidance, and building their decrees upon His Word¹.

¹ Acts xxi. 27. 30.² Ib. xxii. 1—21.³ Ib. xxiii. 1—9⁴ Ib. xxiii. 12—21.⁵ Acts xxv. xxvi.⁶ Ib. xxiii. 11.⁷ Rom. i. 13.⁸ Phil. i. 12.⁹ Acts xii. 1.¹⁰ Ib. xii. 5.¹¹ Exod. xv. 1.¹² Acts vi. 1.¹³ Acts vi. 7.¹⁴ Ib. xv. 1, 2.¹⁵ Ib. xv. 2.¹⁶ Ib. xv. 6—31.

Let us observe further how this history shows, that the direct agency of the Evil Spirit is made subservient to the cause of Christ. Satan filled the heart of Ananias to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the money that had been vowed to God. He who was the instrument of Satan is smitten in his sin; and is made to preach to the world a perpetual warning against the sin of Sacrilege².

Satan met Peter at Samaria, and offered him money for spiritual gifts by the hand of Simon Magus. "Thy money perish with thee," was the Apostle's reply³. Thus the bribe of the Tempter supplied occasion also for a perpetual warning against the sin of Simony.

Satan encountered Paul at Paphos, and endeavoured to turn away the Deputy from the faith by the sorceries of Elymas. But, "O full of all subtlety, thou child of the devil," exclaims the Apostle, and Elymas is smitten with blindness, and Satan is defeated, and Christ is glorified⁴. Satan met the Apostle in the streets of Philippi, and flattered him by the mouth of her whom he had possessed⁵. But his adulations are rejected, and he is cast out, and the Gentile world is taught that the Spirit with which they dealt so familiarly in Divination and Oracles, is the Spirit of Darkness. In the city of Ephesus, the stronghold of magic and witchcraft, Satan owns the power of Jesus working by those whom He calls and sends; "Jesus I know, and Paul I know, but who are ye⁶?" And by overcoming and routing those who took upon them to usurp the name of Jesus, without being duly called and sent, Satan is made to proclaim the sin of those who presume to preach the Word, and to minister the Sacraments of Christ, without a call and mission from Him.

The same may be said of physical evils: they were overruled by Christ for the good of the Church. Agabus stood up, and signified by the Spirit that there should be a great Dearth throughout all the world⁷. This pre-announcement awakens the love of the believers at Antioch, and they forestall the Famine by charitable supplies to the poor Saints of Jerusalem⁸. Thus Famines are made to be fruitful in Christian graces, flourishing unto life eternal.

Again; a storm raged for many days in the Mediterranean Sea against the ship in which St. Paul was; it was made the occasion for the manifestation of the quiet calm, and placid peace in the heart of St. Paul, who cheers the courage of Roman Soldiers, and Grecian Mariners, with comfort and hope derived from the Holy Ghost⁹. It suggests the cheering assurance that all the tempests which the Enemies of the Church are permitted to excite against her will be overruled by the power of Christ for her welfare; and that "the rivers of the flood thereof shall make glad the city of God¹⁰." St. Paul landed at Malta, a viper fixes on his hand, and shows him to be sent from God¹¹. No deadly thing will hurt the servants of God.

On the whole, then, we see that the Acts of the Apostles displays evidence of a well-organized system of preparations, extending like a complex net-work over a great part of the world, and continued through many centuries, for the manifestation of the Glory of Christ in the progress of His Gospel. This History shows, that when He had ascended into Heaven, and was seated in Glory at God's right hand, He used these previous adjustments, as means and appliances for the advancement of His kingdom. It shows also that He, enthroned in heavenly glory, overruled the workings of Satan against His Church, whether in external assault or internal discord, and made them subservient to His glory and her welfare. It traces her progress under His favour and protection, from the upper room at Jerusalem, till "the little one became a thousand, and a small one a strong nation¹²." "Her brook became a river, and her river became a sea¹³," and the waters replenished the earth.

This History reveals to us Christ, not intervening immediately to subdue His enemies, but giving them time for repentance; and, if they will not repent, casting them down to the ground, when they are full of confidence, as Saul was smitten at the gates of Damascus, and Herod when sitting on his throne; and delivering His Church from her foes, when she seems to be on the brink of destruction. Then He rescues "her soul as a bird out of the snare of the fowler¹⁴;" "when the enemy comes in like a flood, then the Spirit of the Lord lifts up a standard against him¹⁵."

Regarded in this light, this divine Book is a blessed possession for the Church in every time of her pilgrimage through this vale of tears. In it Christ sends the Holy Ghost the Comforter, to breathe hope and trust and peace and courage and joy into her heart. Jesus Christ is the same

¹ Cp. Hooker, Preface vi. and E. P. I. x. 4.

² Acts v. 3—5.

³ Ib. viii. 20.

⁴ Ib. xiii. 10—12.

⁵ Acts xvi. 16, 17.

⁶ Ib. xix. 15.

⁷ Ib. xi. 28.

⁸ Ib. xi. 29; xii. 25.

⁹ Acts xxvii. 14. 20. 25. 35, 36.

¹⁰ Ps. xlv. 4.

¹¹ Acts xxviii. 5, 6.

¹² Isa. lx. 22.

¹³ Eccles. xxiv. 31.

¹⁴ Ps. cxxiv. 7.

¹⁵ Isa. lix. 19.

yesterday, and to-day, and for ever¹. He, who eighteen centuries ago ascended on the clouds of heaven, and took His seat on the right hand of the Majesty on High, He ever sitteth there, Ruler and Lord of all. He continues, and ever will continue, to exercise the same power which this Book reveals, for the manifestation of His own glory, in the advancement of His Kingdom, even till the day of Judgment, when finally, and for ever, He will put all enemies under His feet.

Therefore this Book may be called an Epitome of History, especially of Church History. In it we see the Laws, by which Christ, who is the Sovereign Lord of the World and of the Church, and who is unchangeable, works: in it we see what He has done, and from it we may infer what He will continue to do, even to the end. Thus this Divine History, if we may so speak, is also a Divine Prophecy; it projects its shadow forward from the day of the Ascension even to the day of doom. It is a divine message of comfort to every true Christian, in times of private and public sorrow. Reading its sacred pages with such assurances as these, we may feel a holy confidence, that all persecutions from without, and all perils from within the Church, will be overruled by the power of Christ, and be made ministerial to the triumph of His Gospel; that the gates of Hell will never prevail against His Church; that the fierceness of man will turn to the praise of God²; and that all the weapons of the enemy will recoil against those who wield them, and be made instrumental for the promotion of Christ's Glory, and for the salvation of those who obey Him.

Thus the Acts of the Apostles is a precious gift from heaven; it is the Magna Charta of Kings who would reign well and prosperously, and be crowned hereafter by Christ; it is a Manual for Christian Statesmen in their glorious conflicts in public life for Christ and His Church. It is a pastoral for Christian Bishops feeding Christ's Flock, and teaching others to feed it; it is a guide of the Parish-Priest in the cure of Souls, and in dispensing God's Word and Sacraments; it is a Martyrology for the Christian Confessor; it is an Itinerary for the Christian Missionary, in his voyages and journeys to plant the Gospel in distant lands; it is a companion and comforter for every believer, in the troubles of life and in the hour of death.

With this divine Book in our hands, though our lot may be cast in days of doubt and darkness, and even of rebuke and blasphemy, we need not faint and falter. The nearer Satan is, the nearer Christ is; the more fiercely Satan rages, the more gloriously will Christ conquer. As an ancient Father said, ἐγγὺς μαχαίρας, ἐγγὺς Θεοῦ μεταξύ θηρίων, μεταξὺ Θεοῦ³, "When near the sword, we are near to God; when in the midst of wild beasts, we are in the hand of God."

We may apply these considerations to present circumstances.

In the world as it now is we see many resemblances to its condition when the Gospel was first preached. The Jews still remain scattered among all nations, and intermingling with none; witnesses and keepers of the Old Testament which their Fathers received; and a standing evidence, by the fulfilment of Christ's prophecies concerning them, of the truth of the New Testament, which they reject.

We may also say that what the Empire of Rome was, by the vast extent of her territory in the first century, that the Empire of England is in the nineteenth. One seventh part of the inhabitants of the globe are subjects of the British Crown. The voice of the English Bible and the English Liturgy is heard in almost all lands.

What the language of Greece was by its wide diffusion in the first century, that the language of England is now. And what the Septuagint Version of the Old Testament was then, that our AUTHORIZED VERSION of the Bible is now.

It is not, indeed, a faultless Version; nor was the Septuagint. It might be improved in some particulars by means of those critical aids which Almighty God has vouchsafed to us since its first publication, nearly two centuries and a half ago. But in all essential articles of saving Christian doctrine it is a sure guide to heaven. It is a holy oracle of Truth, and a sacred symbol of Unity, joining man to God, and connecting the present with the past, and knitting together the countless myriads in almost every land who speak the English tongue, in a sacred bond of love.

It is sometimes affirmed that this Authorized Version ought to be altered. Suppose that fifty persons could be found as wise, learned, holy, and catholic-minded, as Bishop Andrewes and his coadjutors were, who framed our Authorized Version; suppose also that they agreed in their alterations of that Version; yet it is certain, that the many millions who now agree in receiving the Authorized Version, would not agree in receiving their alterations of it. We should indeed have then an altered Version, we might have, in some respects, an improved Version; but we should then also see a great variety of different and rival Versions; and we should never more have one Authorized Version of Holy Writ. We should lose that,—lose it for ever. And in losing it, we should lose one of our best bonds of charity and most sacred symbols of unity.

¹ Heb. xiii. 8.

² Ps. lxxvi. 10.

³ Ignatius ad Smyrn., 4.

The example of the holy Apostles, or rather of the Holy Ghost Who inspired them, may guide us here. They knew that the Septuagint Version, to which we have before referred as the Authorized Version of the Jews, was not a faultless version. No Version is perfect. For all Versions are the works of men, and no man is free from error, and no work of man is free from blemish. The divine Original alone is that. But the Apostles, though they were inspired by the Holy Ghost and had special gifts for translating the Old Testament, did not sit down to make a New Version, but they used the Old,—the Authorized Version,—the Septuagint. True it is, they explained it, they commented upon it. And we may do the same with our Authorized Version, which is not inferior to the Septuagint, the Version used by the Apostles. We may do so by oral and written expositions, and by private Translations of particular books; and also by marginal Annotations, duly sifted and approved. But let us not shake the faith, and mar the unity, which bind thousands together, by endangering the permanence of the English Authorized Version of the Bible.

Some of the same considerations might be applied to that other bond of Christian unity among Englishmen, the Book of COMMON PRAYER. In the temper of the present times, it is too much to be feared, that attempts to alter the Book of Common Prayer would be attended with danger no less than attempts to alter our Bible; and if we should sever the bands of those two anchors of Truth and Peace, Faith and Charity, we may haply rue our infatuation, when we are drifted about in a storm of strife and unbelief.

Again, in the first century, Almighty God had prepared the way for the Gospel by giving new impulses to the powers of locomotion. The Third Empire, that of Greece, had smoothed the way by sea for the rapid course of the sacred vessel of the Church; the Fourth Empire, that of Rome, had made roads for the march of the Gospel. The military Mistress of the World was a Pioneer for the Prince of Peace.

A similar movement is going on now. By physical discoveries and by greater mechanical powers, the means of communication by sea and land have been multiplied with unexampled rapidity. Space has been almost annihilated, and words travel with the speed of thought.

Probably, many who have laboured in these great works, have thought mainly of temporal ends and secular advantages; but an unseen Hand regulates them all. The same Almighty Being Who directs the planets in their course, and sends forth the lightning from the dark cloud, He also creates the fervid vapour, panting in its metal prison-house, and wafts by its means the vessel across the broad sea, and impels the long train upon the iron road, and makes the electric fluid to shoot along the quivering wire. And doubtless He is making these mighty instruments to subserve His own purposes in Christianizing the world. These powers themselves are God's ministers, they have a holy function, an apostolic office, they are Missionaries and Evangelists of Christ.

The day is coming, indeed it is now come,—witness the facilities given by the construction of Railroads for the progress of the Gospel;—the day is coming, when the world will recognize the Lord's doing in all these mighty operations. And even now to the ear of faith they preach aloud, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord; Make straight in the desert a highway for our God¹."

Yet more—as we have seen, even hindrances themselves were overruled by Christ in Apostolic days for the furtherance of the Gospel.

So it is now, and so will it be always, even to the end of the world.

Christ rescued the great Apostle from his enemies, and made their malice conducive to the preaching of the Gospel at Rome; so He will make all things, however adverse, subservient to Himself. After that fierce tempest in the Mediterranean Sea, He brought St. Paul in peace along the Appian Way to the great Capital of the world; so after the tempest and the hurricane which in the latter days will rage against His Church, He will bring her in safety and victory to the haven where she would be.

Therefore, in reading this Book, we may raise our eyes to heaven, and look for that blessed time, when Christ, who ascended into heaven, and now sitteth there, will come again in His glorious Majesty, to judge the Quick and Dead. Then all the storms of this world will cease; then, willingly or unwillingly, all things will be made subject to Christ; then He will reign King of Kings, and Lord of Lords; and then they who have not failed in their duty here, but have stood firm in their allegiance to Him in the hour of trial, will mount with Him in triumph, to the City of the Living God.

VI. Let it, also, be remembered, that Christ is not only the King of the World, but He is also its Teacher : and that what His Apostles teach, as well as what they do, is by virtue of His Authority.

Accordingly, St. Luke says at the beginning of the Acts of the Apostles, "The former treatise have I made of all that Jesus began to do and to teach," before He was taken up into heaven. And now, in this his latter treatise, he relates what Jesus continues to do and to teach, after He has been taken up into heaven.

We have been considering what Christ continued to do ; let us now consider what He continues to teach.

When upon earth, at the commencement of His Ministry, He went up to the Mountain of Beatitudes, and "when He was set, He opened His mouth and taught¹." So at His Ascension, He went up on High, He ascended the heights of Heaven, and when He was set down at the Right Hand of God, He opened His Mouth and taught, and will ever continue to teach. He is ever preaching a Sermon on the Mount, from His seat in heaven.

What the Apostles taught, as well as what they did, is to be regarded as from Him. Their Miracles were the credentials of their Teaching ; they were like seals impressed with His royal signet, and were attached to the message of the teaching which they delivered from Him. The seals of the Miracles were displayed to the world, in order to avouch the message of the Doctrine ; and that it might be heard and read with that awful reverence which is due to a heavenly rescript from the King of Kings.

Therefore the Teaching of the Apostles, as displayed in this book—whether that Teaching was conveyed in words, or embodied in practice—demands the attention of mankind in every age, as being no other than the Teaching of Christ².

Let us consider then, what this Teaching is, and whether it is represented by the Apostles as coming from Christ Himself.

First in historical order is an example of Teaching by action. It is seen in the provision made by the Apostles for the continuance of their own office. There, the choice of Matthias to fill the place of Judas, is expressly ascribed to Jesus : "Lord, show whether of these two Thou hast chosen³." Thus the world was taught that the Apostolic office was not to terminate with Christ's Ministry on earth, but to be continued after it. "The lot fell upon Matthias, and he was numbered with the *eleven Apostles*⁴."

Doubtless our Lord had prepared the Apostles for their ministry, in the forty days during which He remained with them before His Ascension, "speaking of the things pertaining to the Kingdom of God⁵." But before His Ascension He never allowed them to preach to the Heathen, or even to the Samaritans. And He commanded them not to depart from Jerusalem, until they had been endued with power from on High⁶.

The descent of the Holy Ghost at Pentecost gave a wider range to Christ's office of Teaching. It was Christ who sent the Holy Ghost⁷. "Behold, I send the promise of My Father upon you⁸ ;" "He shall receive of mine. He shall glorify me⁹ ;" "He shall bring all things to your remembrance whatsoever I have said unto you¹⁰."

Therefore the Day of Pentecost reveals to us Christ receiving a new accession of glory, in the Mission of the Comforter. The Holy Spirit comes from Him, and is the Interpreter of His will. Thenceforth the teaching of Christ, which, while He was on earth, was confined within narrow limits, for a few years, became universal in place and time. It was also accompanied with new gifts and graces to those who received it, and communicated it to the world. It spake by their lips in all languages ; and their hearts were fired with new zeal and courage, to preach it to the world ; and they were endued with new powers of memory and understanding, to comprehend and expound the Scriptures, and to fly on eagles' wings as Missionaries of Christ to all parts of the world.

The Creed in which we profess our faith in Christ, is called the Creed of the Apostles ; and it

¹ Matt. v. 1.

² Therefore S. Augustine well says (De Civitate Dei, vi. 2), "Ipsa Veritas, Deus, Dei Filius, prius per Prophetas, deinde per se Ipsum, postea per Apostolos locutus."

³ Acts i. 24.

⁴ Ib. i. 26.

⁵ Acts i. 3.

⁶ Luke xxiv. 49.

⁷ Acts ii. 33.

⁸ Luke xxiv. 49. John xv. 26 ; xvi. 7.

⁹ John xvi. 14.

¹⁰ Ib. xiv. 26.

may well be so named; for every article of that Creed is to be found in the preaching of the Apostles as recorded in this book¹. But the Apostles, who taught others, refer us to Christ as their own Teacher². He commanded us to preach unto the people; He has poured out his Spirit upon us³. He made them His "witnesses in Jerusalem, and in all Judæa, and Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth⁴;" He had said unto them, "It is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost⁵;" and therefore one of them says, "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard Him, God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to His own will⁶?" Consequently, we must look upward; and regarding the Apostles as taught by Christ, we may trace all these Apostolic verities to the divine source and well-spring of all truth, Jesus Christ.

The foundation of Christianity is a belief in the Inspiration of Holy Scripture. The public reception and reading of the New Testament as true and inspired of God, is the strongest proof that can be desired of its Truth and Inspiration. The "Acts of the Apostles" was so read and received, in the age in which it was written; and since it is a true and inspired history, it is clear that the Old Testament is true and divinely inspired. For Christ, speaking by His Holy Apostles, every where appeals to the books of the Old Testament as the lively oracles of God. He, by their hands, sets His divine seal on the Old Testament, and delivers it to the Christian Church, as the Word of God.

Another method in which Christ teaches the world by the agency of the Apostles and apostolic men, in this book, is by interpreting the Old Testament. Speaking by the mouth of St. Peter in the second chapter of the Acts, He enables us to understand the prophecy of Joel, and to apply it to the effusion of the Holy Ghost on the Day of Pentecost, as the last message of God to the world before the second Coming of Christ⁷.

In various portions of the Acts He has given us a divine Commentary on the Psalms of David, and has authorized and commanded us to apply them to Himself. He bids us see in the second Psalm a prophecy of the rage of the heathen, and the vain imaginations of the people, the standing up of the kings of the earth, and the gathering together of the rulers against Himself⁸. He reveals to us in the sixteenth Psalm a vision of His own Death and Resurrection and Session in glory⁹; He teaches us that He Himself is that Prophet who was pre-announced by Moses¹⁰; and that God had showed "by the mouth of all His Prophets that Christ should suffer¹¹."

By the mouth of His martyr St. Stephen, who was full of the Holy Ghost¹², Christ Himself, our heavenly Teacher, propounds to us a pattern and model for the interpretation of the Old Testament. He establishes the typical relation of Joseph and of Moses to Himself¹³. By the mouth of another Deacon, St. Philip, He appropriates to Himself the prophecy of the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah¹⁴, and condemns all who would wrest it from Him. By the preaching of St. Paul, in the synagogue of Pisidia, He reveals Himself as foreseen by the Psalmist¹⁵, and shows by St. Paul's mouth, and by that of St. James in the Council of Jerusalem, that God had pre-announced in the Old Testament the extension of His covenant to all nations in Christ¹⁶.

Thus in this divine book, Christ, sitting in His chair of teaching in heaven, has performed by the agency of the Apostles, inspired by the Holy Ghost Whom He sent, a blessed work of Divine instruction, which has enabled us to see by its glorious light the true meaning of the Old Testament. He is our Expositor, He is our Commentator; He has given us, by Apostolic agency, a clue to the right interpretation of its Types, and Histories, and Prophecies. He has given us in the New Testament a divine interpretation of His own words which are written in the Old. He has delivered to us a divine protest against that sceptical system of infidel interpretation, which is rife in the present age, and which, with almost Titanic presumption, would shake, if it could, the foundations of heaven; and undermine the groundwork of the Genuineness and Authenticity, and Inspiration of Holy Writ; and would take away from the Church the prophecies of the Psalms, and of Isaiah,—even of the Fifty-third chapter itself—and despoil her of that heavenly inheritance which she has received through the hands of the Apostles from Christ Himself.

Let us consider also that we owe our knowledge of the Gospel itself to Christ teaching from heaven. He Himself wrote nothing; and no part of the New Testament was written by His Dis-

¹ See the evidence in Humphry's Introduction to the Acts, p. xix.

² Acts x. 42.

³ Ib. ii. 17. 33. Cp. Matt. x. 20.

⁴ Ib. i. 8.

⁵ Matt. x. 20. Mark xiii. 11.

⁶ Heb. ii. 3, 4.

⁷ Acts ii. 17—21.

⁸ Ib. iv. 25—27.

⁹ Ib. ii. 30—35.

¹⁰ Ib. iii. 22.

¹¹ Ib. iii. 18.

¹² Acts vi. 5. 8.

¹³ Ib. vii. 9—44.

¹⁴ Ib. viii. 33.

¹⁵ Ib. xiii. 33.

¹⁶ Ib. xiii. 47; xv. 14.

ciples while He was upon earth. None of them were then capable of recording His words and actions. They often confess in the Gospels that they did not understand His sayings, and that they were hid from them¹. Christ's Words had lain like dark things in their hearts, but they were sunned forth into clearness by the light of the Holy Ghost, as the objects of creation are by the risen Sun.

If we were to be limited to Christ's teaching on earth, we should not have the New Testament. It was not till He had ascended into heaven, and had sent the Holy Ghost to teach His Apostles all things, and to bring to their remembrance whatsoever He had said², that they were qualified to write what they did. And therefore St. Peter says, that they preached the Gospel unto men "with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven³."

Thus, then, we receive the Gospel itself from the hand of Christ in heaven.

Another important respect in which Christ teaches the world by his Apostles in this book is in Church-Regimen and Polity. It is recorded as a fruit of the effusion of the Holy Ghost upon the primitive Church, that "all who believed were baptized⁴;" and "they continued stedfastly in the Apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread," that is, in the reception of the Holy Eucharist; "and in prayers;" or (as the original expresses it), in the prayers, or public Liturgy of the Church.

Here we see reflected, as in a mirror, a divine image of Church-Communion. By it, Christ Himself instructs us, that the Christian life in the soul is begun by Him in Baptism, and is continually nourished by Him in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper; and that they who have been engrafted into His mystical Body must take care to maintain its Unity, and to cherish their own spiritual life, by communicating with it in the profession of a true faith, and by the reception of the means of grace in the public offices of religion.

He teaches us also in this book, that He has set apart certain persons as His Ministers, for the dispensation of the Word and Sacraments; and that they who desire to receive a blessing from Him, must seek for its bestowal by the agency of those whom He has authorized and commissioned to convey it by that dispensation.

For example, we find in this book, that although He spoke to Cornelius by an Angel, He commanded him by the voice of the Angel to send for St. Peter, in order to hear the Word preached, and to be received into the Church by the Ministry of man⁵. Similarly, though He called Saul by His own voice from heaven, yet He commanded him to go into the city, "where it should be told him what he must do⁶." And he sent to him Ananias, who received him into the Church by baptism⁷, saying, "Now why tarriest thou? Arise, and be baptized and wash away thy sins, calling on the Name of the Lord⁸."

Here, then, and in other places, He has shown the necessity of a Christian Ministry; and He has also taught the world, what the due organization of that Ministry is. As we have seen, He declared the continuity of the Apostolic office by the election of Matthias; and He proclaimed the duty of extending it, by calling Barnabas and Paul to the Apostleship⁹. He constituted Elders in every Church by their hands¹⁰. He instituted by the agency of the Apostles the holy order of Deacons¹¹. Thus He has delivered a divine exhortation from heaven to all Churches, to take good heed to maintain the threefold Ministry of Bishops, Priests, and Deacons; and to seek for His favour by a right use of that Ministry in extending His Kingdom throughout the world.

All who desire to have the blessing of Christ on their Missions at home and abroad, are thus instructed to obtain it by the means which He has appointed for that end.

Again; by the practice of His Holy Apostles, as twice recorded in this book¹², He teaches from Heaven the use and necessity of the holy rite of Confirmation. It is Christ Himself sitting in glory, who sheds forth the full outpouring of the gift of the Holy Ghost, by the laying on of Apostolic hands on those who have been baptized.

It cannot rightly be alleged, that Confirmation is less obligatory on Christians, because it was not instituted by Christ Himself on earth. For, by reason of what Confirmation is, it could not have been instituted by Christ while on earth. Confirmation is the appointed means for the plenary effusion of the gift of the Holy Ghost on those who have been baptized. And that gift could not ¹ Mark ix. 32. Luke ii. 50; ix. 45; xviii. 34.

² John xiv. 26.

³ 1 Pet. i. 12.

⁴ Acts ii. 41.

⁵ Ib. x. 5. 48, and xi. 14.

⁶ Ib. ix. 6.

⁷ Acts ix. 18.

⁸ Ib. xxii. 16.

⁹ Ib. xiii. 2.

¹⁰ Ib. xiv. 23.

¹¹ Ib. vi. 6.

¹² Ib. viii. 14—17; xix. 5, 6.

be bestowed till after Christ's Ascension. While He was upon earth, "The Holy Ghost," we read, "was not yet given, because that Jesus was not yet glorified¹."

The fact, that Confirmation was not instituted by Christ when on earth, is a necessary consequence of the dignity of the gift bestowed in it; and is not therefore a reason for its disparagement, but for its reverent use. Let no one therefore despise what was administered by the holy Apostles, who were taught by Christ, and inspired by the Holy Ghost; and what was used by them for the conveyance of a gift, not of partial and temporary use, but of universal need for all men in all ages of the Church, the gift of the Holy Ghost. He who despises Confirmation despises not man, but God². He despises not the Apostles alone, but despises Him Who said to the Apostles, "He that receiveth you receiveth Me³, and He that despiseth you despiseth Me⁴;" and he cannot be said to love the Lord Jesus; but incurs the penalty pronounced by the Holy Ghost Himself; "If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema, Maranatha⁵."

The administration of Confirmation is restricted to the Apostolic Office of Bishops, who are successors of the Apostles in their ordinary ministrations. It is therefore the duty of every Church, and of every Christian, to endeavour earnestly, that the Episcopate may be so increased, that no christian soul, for which Christ shed His blood, may be defrauded of that portion of its spiritual birthright which Christ Himself designs for it in the rite of Confirmation; and, after it, in timely access to the Holy Communion. It is not to be expected that they who are not brought to Confirmation, will be duly catechized in their duty to God, their neighbour, and themselves. They will grow up to man's estate without becoming healthy members of the Body of Christ. They will not come to the Lord's Table. It is to be feared, that many of them, not receiving the means of grace which are necessary for their spiritual growth, will fall into schism, indifference, unbelief, and ungodliness; and that the Church of Christ may sit as a Rachel weeping for her children because they are not.

Again. Christ has taught us by the agency of His Apostles, what is the right mode of settling Controversies in the Church. By the Convention of the Apostles and Presbyters to the Council of Jerusalem, as recorded in the fifteenth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, and by the Mission of Paul and Barnabas to that Council, and by the part taken in it by St. Peter, St. James, and St. Paul, Christ, Who guided them by His Spirit, declares from Heaven, that for the appeasing of religious differences, men are not to resort to any one person, although he may call himself infallible, nor are they to follow the wayward devices of their own private imaginations; but that appeals are to be made to Synods of Bishops and Presbyters, invoking the aid of the Holy Ghost, and grounding their decrees on Holy Scripture; and that whatever has been settled and promulgated by them, regulating their proceedings by these principles, and is received by the consentient voice of Christendom, and takes root in the practice of the Universal Church, may be deemed to be a true exposition of Scripture, and conformable to the mind of Christ.

Other things there are in the Constitution and Regimen of the Christian Church, which are intimated in this book, and which may be ascribed to Christ teaching from Heaven by means of His Apostles upon earth.

One of these is the sanctification of the First Day of the week,—the Christian Sunday. Doubtless it is a part of positive Divine Law, dating from the Creation, as revealed in the Old Testament, that one day in seven should be hallowed; and by that Law, the day to be hallowed is the seventh day of the week. But that the seventh-day Sabbath is now abrogated, and that the first day of the week is to be hallowed in its stead, can hardly be proved by any, who do not take into consideration Christ's Teaching, as embodied in the practice of the Apostles, observing as holy the first day of the week, instead of the seventh.

The Acts of the Apostles supplies a necessary connecting link in this argument. There it is said⁶ that "upon the First Day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread," that is, to receive the Holy Communion, "Paul preached unto them." This passage is to be taken together with other intimations in Holy Scripture, particularly the relation of Christ's appearances to His Apostles on this day, the day of His Resurrection⁷, and the narrative of the sending of the Holy Ghost from Heaven on this day⁸, and the record of Christ's revelation of Himself to St. John in Patmos when in the Spirit on the Lord's Day⁹. And these intimations, combined with what we know from other quarters of the primitive practice of Christians, will suffice to convince an unprejudiced person, that while the sanctification of one day in seven still remains in full force, on

¹ John vii. 39.

² 1 Thess. iv. 8.

³ Matt. x. 40.

⁴ Luke x. 16.

⁵ 1 Cor. xvi. 22.

⁶ Acts xx. 7. See note there.

⁷ John xx. 19. 26.

⁸ Acts ii. 1.

⁹ Rev. i. 10.

its original foundation of positive Divine Law from the beginning, the Day to be sanctified by Christians is the First Day of the week.

It may indeed be objected, that some of those conclusions are collected rather by probable inferences, than deduced directly by demonstrative proof. But perhaps it may be replied, that our moral probation in this world consists in the trial, whether we will attend to such probabilities as these. They are the best tests of our obedience; they prove its sensibility; they show, whether we are actuated only by that servile fear, which does God's bidding, when it is commanded to do so under strong coercion and penal discipline; or whether we are animated by that clear-sighted and cheerful spirit of filial love, which divines, and almost anticipates, our heavenly Father's desires, and hastes with angelic alacrity, at the least signification of His will.

These intimations therefore of the Will of Christ as to Christian Doctrine, and Church Discipline, as displayed in the Acts of the Apostles, are of inestimable value; they are not mere isolated incidents, and historical facts, limited in their uses to any particular age or country; they are general types and divine precedents, of universal application.

The Acts of the Apostles is a concise book, and it is an inspired book. In its brief compass the Holy Ghost describes the operations of Christ, acting by His Holy Apostles. It omits many things in their history which the world would desire to know; and these omissions are eloquent proofs, that the actions of the Apostles, which the Holy Spirit has not omitted, but has specially selected for commemoration in this book, are of paramount importance. The omissions serve to bring out in bolder relief, and in more salient prominence, the significance and value of what is not omitted, but distinctly set down in writing by the dictation of the Holy Spirit. The actions of the Apostles—or rather, the actions of Christ operating by them—which are recorded in this book, are doubtless designed to be patterns and examples for the faith and practice of the Church, in every country and in every age. They are like beams of the Sun of Righteousness, drawn together and concentrated in a brilliant focus, so that they may illumine the mind of the Church in every age of her existence.

Therefore we need not hesitate to say, that in the Acts of the Apostles the Shepherd and Bishop of our souls¹, Jesus Christ, is revealed to us as sitting in His chair in His heavenly Cathedral, surrounded by His Angelic Hierarchy, and delivering to all Christian Bishops and Pastors a divine charge and directory, a symbol of Christian Doctrine, a code of Ecclesiastical Polity, a rule of Church-Discipline, a chart of Missionary enterprise, a system of Biblical Evidences and Interpretation, for the perpetual instruction and regimen of every age and clime, even till He comes again, to judge the Quick and Dead.

VII. We may therefore derive great benefits from this contemplation.

First, the inestimable blessing of Unity. Christendom is torn asunder by schisms. Our Country is distracted by strife. Surely the time is come, that we should lay to heart “the great dangers we are in by our unhappy divisions.” Surely the hour is arrived, that we should consider the grounds of our differences, and meditate on the sin of strife, and on the blessedness of peace.

Among the means available for the appeasing of strife and recovery of unity, none is more efficacious than this Divine Book, dictated by the Holy Spirit of Love; in which He reveals His own mission from Christ, and displays to us Christ acting and teaching by means of those who were sent by Him, and inspired by the Holy Ghost.

Therefore in referring to what the Apostles taught, we are referring to Christ Himself; and all who love Him may do well to remember His own words, “If ye love Me, keep My commandments² ;” and “Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things that I say³ ?” It cannot consist with love to Christ, to slight any, even the least, indication of His will, revealed in this book by the Holy Ghost.

Here is the true foundation of Apostolic Doctrine and Discipline; it is built upon a Rock, the Rock of Ages, which is Christ.

Let us then consider, whether in this Divine Book we may not find a path of unity, in which we may walk together as Brethren toward our heavenly home.

On the one hand, they who revere the doctrinal symbols and primitive organization of the Church, and desire to restore and reinvigorate them, wheresoever they are decayed, and to propagate them where they are wanting, may be invited to consider, whether, in endeavouring to attain this end, some among us may not have placed the Church in too prominent an attitude, and in too independent a position; and whether it be not our duty, to raise our eyes, and to direct the eyes of others upward, from the Church upon earth to Jesus Christ her Lord, acting and teaching in and by her from Heaven. The Holy Ghost has taught us in this Divine Book not to rivet our minds even on the Apostles themselves¹; but to concentrate all our thoughts and affections on Him Who sent them, and acts by them. Let us not regard the Church as separable from Christ; but ever think on her as dependent on Him, and as deriving all her grace and virtue, all her authority and power, from Him alone. Let us not forget the words of the Psalmist, speaking to her, the Queen at Christ's right hand, and saying "He is thy Lord God, and worship thou Him²."

¹ 1 Pet. ii. 25.

² John xiv. 15.

³ Luke vi. 46.

On the other hand, if we are tempted to think lightly of the Apostolic and Primitive Church, if we are disposed to treat with indifference any of the specific functions of the Christian Ministry, and its threefold orders, then let us pause and consider, whether we have rightly conceived the question at issue; and whether, by such a temper of mind, we may not be doing grievous wrong—not to men—but to Christ; to Christ our Lord and King, our Prophet and Priest, our Saviour and our Judge, seated in heavenly glory and majesty at God's right hand; to Christ, vouchsafing to send "His Holy Spirit from Heaven to teach His Apostles, and to guide them into all Truth³;" and whether we may not be guilty of disobeying Him, and of sinning against the Holy Ghost.

To think less of men, and to think more of God; to lift up our eyes from the Church Militant on earth, to her Lord and Head triumphant in heaven,—this is what the Holy Ghost teaches us in the Acts of the Apostles. Therefore it is, that He annexed it as a second volume to St. Luke's Gospel, and joined both together in one work; revealing in the former, Christ acting and teaching on earth, and in the latter, Christ acting and teaching in heaven. The Acts of the Apostles is the Gospel of Jesus Christ, now reigning in glory.

VIII. The Notes, which are contained in the present Volume, have been written with such persuasions as these.

They have also been dictated by a belief, that the design of this sacred Book has scarcely received the attention which it claims, and which, if duly bestowed upon it, would do much to settle the controversies of Christendom, and to advance the progress of the Gospel; and that the nearer the end of earthly things approaches, the greater its uses will be.

Accordingly, the Plan of the Book has been dwelt upon at large in the present Introduction.

The writer of these Notes cannot quit this subject, without an expression of thankfulness to Almighty God, that He has preserved in England a Church, which has not disqualified herself for interpreting the Acts of the Apostles.

One of the most painful feelings arising in the mind, from the perusal of interpretations of the Acts of the Apostles by learned members of those religious Communion, which have departed from the rule of primitive Christian Doctrine and Discipline, is caused by distortions or disparagements of the Apostolic precedents recorded in this Book, and received and followed by the ancient Church.

By a dereliction of those Apostolic precedents, those Communion have disabled themselves for expounding the Acts of the Apostles. They cannot interpret this Book aright, without, at the same time, pronouncing a sentence of condemnation on themselves; and, from the infirmity of human nature, it is hardly to be expected, that they should be willing to censure their own principles.

The student of Scripture may need to be cautioned against those interpretations; and still more should he be on his guard against those expositions, which are blemished by sceptical strictures on the History of the Acts, as well as by perversion of its teaching in matters of Christian Doctrine and Discipline, and by imputations of errors to those Saints and Martyrs, who were inspired by the Holy Ghost⁴. For this reason also, the English student of Holy Scripture, while he thankfully avails himself of all the aids—critical, philological, historical, and antiquarian—which the erudition of Germany has richly furnished,—may well be thankful to the Great Head of the Church, that the principles of the English Reformation were not innovating, but preservative, not revolutionary, but restorative; and that God has raised up Expositors in England, inferior to none in wisdom and learning, and has

¹ See above, p. 6.

² Ps. xlv. 12.

³ John xvi. 13.

⁴ For a specimen of this, the Reader may refer to the notes on the speech of St. Stephen, Acts vii.

placed them on a sacred vantage-ground of sound Exposition, by the principles and constitution of the Church, to which they have the happiness to belong.

IX. The details of the personal history of the Author of this Book will be found in the Introduction to his Gospel; and in the Chronological Table prefixed to this Book. The Acts of the Apostles, which brings the history of St. Paul down to the end of his first imprisonment at Rome, cannot have been completed before A.D. 63. It was probably published at Rome at that time.

X. For the reasons stated above, the Acts of the Apostles, which has sometimes been regarded merely as an appendage to the Four Gospels, but which holds an unique and independent place in the New Testament, forms a separate Part in the present edition.

In the Text of this Edition, more deviations from the Textus Receptus will be found, than, within the same compass, in the Edition of the Gospels. This is due to the fact, that there are many more discrepancies in the Manuscripts¹ of this Book, than of them, or of almost any other Book of the New Testament.

The reader, however, will feel satisfaction in observing, that scarcely any of these variations affect the sense, in any perceptible degree; and that none in any respect touches the substance of any Christian Doctrine². And he may thence derive an assurance, that while the collation of the vast variety of Manuscripts of the New Testament, which are derived from all parts of the world, serves to establish immoveably the integrity of the Text of the Inspired Volume, and to confirm the Truth of the Gospel; not one of that countless multitude has been found to invalidate in the least degree any historical fact, or any doctrinal article, on which the Christian Religion is founded, and our hope of salvation rests.

¹ Particularly MS. D, i.e. the Codex Bezae or Cambridge Manuscript, on which see Bp. Middleton's Remarks, Appendix to his Work on the Greek Article, pp. 649—669. Bornemann's edition of the Acts is based upon that MS. Some of its principal discrepancies may be seen in Eichhorn's Einleitung in d. N. T. ii. p. 87; Kuinoel, Prolegomena, § 2.

² Except, perhaps, Acts xx. 18, and the question there is rather one of language than of substance.

CHRONOLOGICAL SYNOPSIS

OF THE

EVENTS RELATED IN THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES¹.

In the examination of this subject the following propositions are presented to the reader's notice.

1. The common era—Anno Domini—begins about four years too late. (See above on Matt. ii. 20.)
2. Our Blessed Lord's ministry, which began when He was thirty years of age (see on Luke iii. 23), and which seems to have lasted three years and a half (see on John v. 1), and which terminated at a Passover, commenced probably in the Autumn of A.D. 26, and ended at the Passover in A.D. 30. (See on John i. 14, and vii. 2; and cp. Africanus, Chronogr. Routh, R. S. ii. 187—190. Clinton, Fasti Rom. p. 14.)

3. Our Blessed Lord and Saviour was crucified on the 15th of Nisan, A.D. 30; and His Resurrection was on the 17th of Nisan of that year; and the Ascension was forty days afterwards; and the Day of Pentecost on which the Holy Spirit descended, was on a Sunday, the Seventh Lord's Day after that on which He rose from the Dead. (See on Acts ii. 1.)

4. The only date in the history of the Acts of the Apostles which can be fixed with absolute certainty, is that of the death of Herod Agrippa at Cæsarea, described in Acts xii. 20—22; and the determination of other points in the Chronology of the earlier portion of the Acts depends mainly on the date of this event.

Herod Agrippa was made King of Judæa and Samaria by the Emperor Claudius on his accession (Josephus, Ant. xix. 8. 2), which took place early in the year A.D. 41 (his predecessor, Caligula, having been murdered on the 24th of January in that year), and Agrippa died soon after the completion of the third year of his reign (Bell. Jud. ii. 11. 6). His death therefore took place A.D. 44; and it appears from the Acts that it was after a Passover (xii. 3).

Besides, Josephus informs us (Ant. xxiii. 6. 10) that Herod Agrippa had been appointed by the predecessor of Claudius, Caligula, to the Tetrarchies of Philip and Lysanias, soon after his accession, which was in the month of March, A.D. 37 (Dio, lvi. 639. Basnage, Annales i. p. 458. Clinton, F. R. p. 28). And it is stated by Josephus (Ant. xix. 8. 2) that Herod Agrippa died in the seventh year of his government, dating from that appointment by Caligula, early in A.D. 37. And thus we are brought again to A.D. 44, as the year of Herod's death.

5. Thus we have two limits in the history of the Acts, an anterior limit, or terminus à quo, in our Lord's Ascension and the descent of the Holy Spirit in the Spring of A.D. 30; and a posterior limit, or terminus ad quem, in the Spring or Summer of A.D. 44, the date of Herod's death. And in this interval of fourteen years are to be arranged the events recorded in the first twelve chapters of the Acts of the Apostles.

6. Another note of time is furnished by notices in the history of St. Paul, as narrated by himself in the first and second chapters of his Epistle to the Galatians.

In order to show that his preaching was not derived from men, but by revelation from Christ Himself, he there relates (Gal. i. 17) that he had no intercourse with the other Apostles, which could have imparted to him the knowledge he possessed; and that it was not till three years after his Conversion that he went up to Jerusalem from Damascus to see Peter, and that he remained there only fifteen days, and thence went into Syria and Cilicia (Gal. i. 17—21).

He adds, that fourteen years afterwards he went again up to Jerusalem with Barnabas, and took Titus with him.

¹ The principal works on this subject are those of Josephus, Eusebius, Hist. Eccles. and Chronicon (Venet. 2 vols. 4to. 1818), Prosper Aquitanus, Chronicon (Bassani, 1782), Bishop Pearson, Tillemont, Basnage, Lardner, and Paley, specified in the List of Authors prefixed to this volume; and in more recent times, those of Anger, A. de temporum in Actis ratione, Lips. 1833; Birks, Greswell, Lewin, Conybeare, and Howson, Winer; B. W. B. Art. Paulus; Clinton's Fasti Romani, Oxford, 1845; and Wieseler, Chronologie des Apostolischen Zeitalters, Götting. 1848.

It has been doubted, whether these fourteen years are to be dated from his conversion, or from the expiration of the three years mentioned previously in Gal. i. 18.

It seems most probable that the fourteen years are to be dated from the short visit to Jerusalem, and the journey thence to Tarsus at the end of those three years. For it is observable that in Gal. i. 18, the Apostle says, ἔπειτα, μετὰ ἑτὴ τρία, i. e. then, after three years from my conversion. But in Gal. ii. 1, he says, ἔπειτα, διὰ δεκατεσσάρων ἐτῶν, πάλιν ἀνέβην, i. e. then, having passed through an interval of fourteen years, from the last-named date, I went up again to Jerusalem¹.

This visit was most probably the same as that described in Acts xv. 2—22, when St. Paul was sent from Antioch to the COUNCIL OF JERUSALEM. It is true that St. Paul had been at Jerusalem some little time before that visit; but he had only gone to the Elders with alms (xi. 30; xii. 25), and he had no occasion to refer to this visit, in his Epistle to the Galatians. Besides, he says that in the visit which he is mentioning in his Epistle to the Galatians, he had recounted to the Apostles what he had been preaching to the Gentiles (Gal. ii. 2). But such an assertion as that is wholly inapplicable to the short visit mentioned in Acts xi. 30; xii. 25, on which he went up with alms to Jerusalem, and when he had not as yet been even ordained to preach to the *Gentiles*². (See Note on Acts xiii. 1, 2; cp. Bede in Act. xv. Davidson, ii. 112—122. Howson, i. p. 539—547.)

But in writing to the Galatians, concerning his intercourse with the other Apostles, he could not omit to notice the visit, which he made soon afterwards to Jerusalem, namely, that described in Acts xv. 2—22, when he went up to the Apostles and Elders assembled in Council there, to discuss a question in which St. Paul had a personal and official concern. Hence it would seem, that the COUNCIL OF JERUSALEM was held about seventeen years after the Conversion of St. Paul.

This conclusion cannot be regarded as more than an approximation to the truth; because it depends on the two passages above cited, where St. Paul speaks of years, which may be either complete years, or only, according to the Jewish method of reckoning, current years.

7. Another chronological clue seems to be supplied by the mention of the circumstances of St. Paul's escape from Damascus after his Conversion (ix. 25). It appears from 2 Cor. xi. 32, 33, where St. Paul himself is describing that escape, that the city of Damascus had then fallen into the hands of Aretas, King of part of Arabia Petræa, who had appointed an Ethnarch there.

In looking for a season when such a remarkable incident was likely to have occurred, we find none more probable than that in which Aretas had defeated the forces of Herod Antipas, to whom he had long been hostile, on account of Herod's ill-treatment of his daughter, whom he had abandoned for Herodias. (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 5. 1. Matt. xiv. 1—13.) Herod Antipas being defeated (late in A.D. 36), appealed for succour to the Emperor Tiberius, who commanded Vitellius, then President of Syria, to declare war against Aretas. (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 5. 1.) But soon after, Tiberius died (March, A.D. 37); and Vitellius drew off his forces, and went to Rome. (See notes below on ix. 2 and 24.)

It seems probable, that Aretas availed himself of the favourable opportunity thus presented for occupying the city of Damascus. This occupation would be only of short duration. Caligula interfered in the affairs of Arabia, in the second year of his reign (Dio, lix. 9), and would hardly have allowed Aretas to retain what he had usurped. If these calculations are just, the date of St. Paul's Conversion would be A.D. 34.

It may be remarked, that the Jews do not seem to have had the same power of persecuting the Christians at Damascus when St. Paul escaped from that city, as they had when he came down from Jerusalem with a commission from the High Priest. (Acts ix. 1—14; xxvi. 11.) But now the Jews lie in wait for him, and endeavour to destroy him by the permission and agency of the Ethnarch of Aretas. (Acts ix. 23. 2 Cor. xi. 32.) The occupation of Damascus by Aretas seems therefore to have been after his Conversion.

8. Another note of time may be derived from Acts ix. 31, where it is related that "all the Churches in Judæa, and Galilee, and Samaria had rest, and walking in the fear of the Lord and the comfort of the Holy Ghost were multiplied." The Christians had nothing to fear at that time from the Romans. Their persecutions were from the Jews; and if the Churches had rest, it

¹ Bishop Pearson, indeed, infers, p. 379, that the ἔπειτα (in Gal. ii. 1) must be deduced from the conversion, and not from the end of the three years, because another ἔπειτα intervenes in i. 21. But perhaps this circumstance may be rather alleged as an argument in favour of what is said above. For it is evident that the second ἔπειτα in i. 21, which introduces the visit of fifteen days to Jerusalem, and the journey thence to Tarsus, is dated from the first ἔπειτα, which specifies the end of the three years; and so it seems the third ἔπειτα is to be dated from the second.

² Bede says in Act. xiii., "Videtur Paulus xiii^o post Domini passionem anno Apostolatam cum Barnabâ accepisse, xiv^{to} autem anno ad Gentium magisterium profectus est. Nec Historia Ecclesiastica repugnat, docens Apostolis esse præceptum ut duodecim annis prædicarent in Judæâ."

was not to be ascribed to any cessation of desire, but to a suspension of power or opportunity on the part of the Jews to persecute them.

It has been suggested by Basnage, ad A.D. 40, Lardner (i. 55; iii. 252), and others (see Note on Acts ix. 31), that this "rest of the Churches" was due to the alarm in which the Jews themselves were, on account of the command given by the Emperor Caligula, to the President of Syria, Petronius, in A.D. 39, to set up the Imperial Statue in the Temple at Jerusalem. (Joseph. Bell. Jud. ii. 10. 1. Ant. xviii. 8. 2. Philo, Legat. 31. Euseb. ii. 5.)

It was not till the death of Caligula and the accession of Claudius, 24th Jan. A.D. 41, that the Jews were relieved from this panic. And soon after that, Herod Agrippa, the person who had showed his zeal for the Jews by interceding with Caligula for a revocation of this command (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 8. 7. Philo, Leg. 35), "stretched forth his hands to vex certain of the Church, and killed James the brother of John with the sword; and because he saw it pleased the Jews, he proceeded to take Peter also." (Acts xii. 1.)

This Rest of the Churches cannot have commenced till after St. Paul's visit to Jerusalem, for then a persecution was going on, to which he was exposed. (Acts ix. 26—31.) Besides, when Paul came to Jerusalem, Peter was there; but during the rest, Peter was absent from Jerusalem on a Missionary Tour. (Acts ix. 31—43; cp. Lardner, iii. 253.)

9. Certain other notes of duration are set down in the Acts (viz.) :—

(1) After St. Paul's first visit of fifteen days to Jerusalem and his journey to Cilicia (Gal. i. 18—21. Acts ix. 30; xi. 25), and his intercourse with Barnabas, who brought him from Tarsus to Antioch, he remains with Barnabas a whole year at Antioch, where the Disciples are first called Christians (xi. 25—27).

(2) Paul and Barnabas, after their first Missionary Journey in Asia, returned to Antioch, and tarried no small time there (διέτριβον χρόνον οὐκ ὀλίγον) with the Disciples (xiv. 28).

(3) After their return from the Council of Jerusalem to Antioch they again tarried there (διέτριβον, xv. 35).

(4) St. Paul, in his second Missionary Journey, came through Asia Minor and Macedonia into Achaia (Acts xvi. xvii.), and remained at Corinth a year and six months (ἐκάθισε ἐνιαυτὸν καὶ μῆνας ἕξ, xviii. 11).

(5) From Cenchreæ, the eastern port of Corinth, he set sail for Ephesus, where he remained only a short time, being desirous of being at Jerusalem for the feast (xviii. 19—21), probably Pentecost.

(6) After a short visit to Jerusalem he returned to Ephesus, and spent there three years (xx. 31).

(7) After these three years he went again to Macedonia (xx. 1), and came into Hellas, and spent there three months (xx. 3).

He then went back through Macedonia, came to Philippi (xx. 6), where he spent Easter, and passed by Troas (xx. 6—12) and Miletus (xx. 15) to Cæsarea and to Jerusalem; where he had not been for several years (δὲ ἐτῶν πλείονων, xxiv. 17), and where he had desired to be at the feast of Pentecost.

(8) He was arrested in the Temple at Jerusalem by the Jews, and was sent by Claudius Lysias for safety to Cæsarea; and he was detained there in "custodia libera" two years by Felix, who (xxiv. 27) had been governor for many years (ἐκ πολλῶν ἐτῶν, xxiv. 10), and is succeeded in the procuratorship by Festus, who sends St. Paul by sea toward Rome.

(9) After his shipwreck in the Mediterranean, St. Paul remains during the winter at Malta; and after three months he sets sail again "in a ship which had wintered in the island" (xxviii. 11).

(10) He remained at Rome two whole years (διέτριβεν ὅλην, xxviii. 30).

(11) It is evident from St. Luke's narrative that St. Paul arrived at Rome in the Spring of the year after the succession of Festus to the Procuratorship in the Room of Felix;

What year was that?

(1) Felix was Procurator of Judæa in A.D. 52¹; and he had been many years (ἐκ πολλῶν ἐτῶν) Procurator, when Paul pleaded before him at Cæsarea. (Acts xxiv. 10.)

(2) Felix, when recalled, was saved from the punishment due to his misgovernment by the

¹ It is said by Wieseler, p. 67, and others, that Felix was appointed by Claudius in the thirteenth year of his reign, i. e. after Jan. 24, A.D. 53; and this is inferred by him from Josephus, Ant. xx. 7. 1, δωδέκατον ἔτος ἤδη ἐκκληρωκός. But Josephus applies these words to the appointment of Agrippa, and not of Felix. It appears from that passage, and from Bell. Jud. ii. 12. 8, that Felix was appointed Procurator before, though probably not long before, the appointment of Agrippa to the tetrarchy of Philip; which took place early in A.D. 53. The appointment of Felix is placed still earlier by Tacitus, Ann. xii. 54, "Pallas jampridem Judææ impositus." Eusebius (Chron. ii. p. 271) assigns it to the eleventh year of Claudius, i. e. A.D. 51. Clinton (Fasti Rom. pp. 34—36) is in favour of an earlier date than A.D. 52, for the appointment of Felix.

influence of his brother Pallas with the Emperor Nero. (Joseph. Ant. xx. 8, 9.) Pallas was put to death by Nero A.D. 62. (Tacit. Ann. xiv. 65.) Therefore Felix must have ceased to be Procurator, and Festus must have been appointed to succeed him, some time before that date.

(3) St. Paul, when brought a prisoner to Rome, was delivered into the charge of the prefect of the prætorian guard (τῷ στρατοπεδάρχῃ, Acts xxviii. 16). It seems then that there was only one prefect at that time. But after the death of Burrhus, who was prefect till February, A.D. 62, when he died (Tacit. Ann. xiv. 51. Clinton, F. R. p. 44. Wieseler, p. 83), there were two prefects. See Bp. Pearson, ii. 389, and Wieseler, p. 86. Therefore it is probable that St. Paul came to Rome before March A.D. 62.

(4) Josephus relates (Ant. xx. 8. 11), that a dispute arose between the Jews and Festus the Procurator, and that they sent a deputation to Rome, where their cause was favoured by Poppæa, the wife of Nero. This could not have been before A.D. 62, when Poppæa became his wife. (Tacit. Ann. xiv. 49. Sueton. Ner. 35.) But some time must have elapsed after the appointment of Festus, before the dispute could have arisen, and the deputation have proceeded to Rome and have gained the favourable notice of Poppæa.

(5) Josephus also states (Vit. 3) that he himself went to Rome to intercede for some Jewish Priests whom Felix had sent there before his removal from the procuratorship. Josephus arrived at Rome A.D. 63 (Vit. 1). From his narrative it appears that they had been some time in detention at Rome, and that he engaged the interest of Poppæa in their favour.

(6) Eusebius says (H. E. ii. 23) that James, the Bishop of Jerusalem, was martyred by the Jews at Jerusalem, because they were disappointed by the escape of St. Paul from their hands. The martyrdom of St. James took place at the Passover, A.D. 62. (Euseb. ii. 23. Joseph. Ant. xx. 9. 1.) It appears that Festus the Procurator had recently died, and that his successor had not arrived; and that Ananus the High Priest, who was a Sadducee, and of a cruel temper, and his adherents, took advantage of this interval to destroy St. James and others. (Euseb. ii. 22, and ii. 23, where see Vales. Joseph. Ant. xx. 9. 1.) St. Paul's arrival at Rome would therefore have been before—but not long before—that time.

(7) On the whole, therefore, it seems most probable that Festus succeeded Felix in the Spring or Summer of A.D. 60, and that St. Paul's arrival at Rome is to be placed in the Spring of A.D. 61, and that he remained at Rome till the Spring of A.D. 63. Lardner (iii. 279) says, "Paul came to Jerusalem at the Feast of Pentecost, A.D. 58, and was sent away to Rome at the end of A.D. 60," and he is followed by Wieseler, 66—80. Winer, R. W. B. i. p. 368. Birks, Horæ Apostolicæ, pp. 167—182. Howson, ii. 669—672. Hackett, p. 15; and see also Vales. in Euseb. ii. 23.

From the above premises we arrive at the results, which may be arranged as probable in the following CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

A.D.

30. The Crucifixion of Christ at the Passover.
His Ascension, forty days after His Resurrection.
The Descent of the Holy Spirit at the Feast of Pentecost, fifty days after the Passover.
- 31—32. The Events described in Chapters iii.—vi. of the Acts of the Apostles.
33. St. Stephen's Martyrdom (Acts vii.). Saul was then a young man, zealous (vii. 58).
St. Philip's Missionary Journey (Acts viii. 5—40).
St. Peter and St. John at Samaria. Simon Magus (Acts viii. 14—24).
34. Saul's Conversion (Acts ix. 1—25): cp. Euseb. H. E. ii. 1; and see note below on 1 Tim. i. 13.
Saul retires to Arabia (Gal. i. 17).
36. Pontius Pilate is recalled from his procuratorship in Judæa (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 4. 2).
Damascus occupied by Aretas, who appoints an Ethnarch there.
37. 'After many days' (ix. 23), Saul escapes from Damascus.
Goes up to Jerusalem; where he remains fifteen days, and sees Peter and John (Gal. i. 18, 19. Acts ix. 26, 27); and Disputes with the Grecians;
Saul is sent to Tarsus (ix. 30).
The Emperor Tiberius dies 16th March;
Caligula succeeds.
- 38—41. "Rest of the Churches" (Acts ix. 31).
St. Peter's Missionary Journey (ix. 32—43).
He tarries at Joppa many days (ix. 43).
Conversion of Cornelius (Acts x. 1—48).
41. The Emperor Caligula dies 24th January, and is succeeded by Claudius.
43. Euodius, first Bishop of Antioch (Euseb. Chron. ii. p. 269. Clinton, F. R. App. ii. p. 548).
The Disciples called CHRISTIANS at Antioch (Acts xi. 26).
44. The Apostle St. James, the brother of John, is killed with the sword (Acts xii. 2), and St. Peter is imprisoned, by Herod Agrippa, before Easter (xii. 4). Peter is delivered; and Herod is smitten by an Angel, and dies at Cæsarea (xii. 23).
St. Peter retires from Jerusalem (xii. 17).
Saul and Barnabas, having been deputed by the Christians at Antioch (xi. 27—30) to bring supplies to the Brethren in Judæa, on account of the anticipation of the famine foretold by Agabus, which "came to pass in the reign of Claudius Cæsar" (xi. 28), i. e. after January, A.D. 41, return from Jerusalem to Antioch, with John Mark, who was connected with Peter (xii. 12), and with Barnabas. (See on xv. 39.) 45. The Ordination of Saul and Barnabas, at Antioch, to the Apostleship of the Gentiles. (See on xiii. 1.)
Saul is henceforth called Paul. (See Acts xiii. 9.) St. Paul's "Visions and Revelations of the Lord" seem to have been vouchsafed to him about this time. (See on 2 Cor. xii.
2, 3.)
Their first Missionary Journey to Cyprus (Paphos), and Pisidia, and Perga in Pamphylia (xiii. 4—13), whence Mark returns to Jerusalem. They visit Antioch of Pisidia, Iconium, Lystra; come to Perga and Pamphylia, and thence return to the place of their ordination, Antioch; where they remain a considerable time with the disciples (Acts xiv. 26—28).
49. A controversy arises at Antioch concerning the obligation of the Ceremonial Law (xv. 1, 2).
Paul and Barnabas, and some others, are deputed to go from Antioch to Jerusalem, "to the Apostles and Elders," concerning this matter (xv. 2, 3).

A.D.

- 50, 51. Council of Jerusalem (xv. 6—29).
 Paul and Barnabas return to Antioch; where they remain some time (xv. 35, 36).
 St. Peter is rebuked by St. Paul (Gal. ii. 11—13).
 The παροξυσμός (Acts xv. 39), and separation of Paul and Barnabas.
 Paul takes Silas (xv. 40) on his second Missionary Journey, and afterwards Timothy also at Lystra (xvi. 1).
- 52—54. St. Paul passes through Phrygia and Galatia to Troas (xvi. 6. 8). Thence crosses over to Philippi (xvi. 12), and Thessalonica (xvii. 1), and Berea (xvii. 10); thence to Athens (xvii. 15).
 St. Paul comes to Corinth, where he spends a year and six months (xviii. 1. 11).
 Aquila and Priscilla come to Corinth.
The two Epistles to the Thessalonians. See below the Introduction to those Epistles, p. 1, 2, and p. 25.
Epistle to the Galatians written probably about this time from Corinth. See below the Introduction to that Epistle, pp. 36—41.
 St. Paul sets sail from Cenchreæ in the Spring for Ephesus, on his way to Jerusalem, for the feast, probably Pentecost (xviii. 18, 19).
 The Emperor Claudius dies (13th October A.D. 57), and Nero succeeds.
 After a short visit at Jerusalem (xviii. 21),
 St. Paul returns by way of Antioch, where he spends some time (xviii. 22), and through Galatia and Phrygia, where he confirms all the disciples (xviii. 23), and by the upper regions of Asia Minor (xix. 1) to Ephesus; where he spends three years (xx. 31)—three months in the Synagogue, and two years in the School of Tyrannus (xix. 8—10).
57. First Epistle to the Corinthians. See below Introduction to that Epistle, pp. 75—77.
 St. Paul, after three years' stay at Ephesus, quits it for Macedonia (xx. 1).
Second Epistle to the Corinthians. See Introduction to that Epistle, p. 143.
 Comes into Hellas; and spends three months there (xx. 3).
58. Epistle to the Romans, written at Corinth or Cenchreæ. See Introduction to it, p. 203.
 St. Paul returns to Macedonia in the Spring, and arrives at Philippi for Easter (xx. 6).
 Passes over to Troas (xx. 6). Touches at Miletus, where he bids farewell to the Presbyters of Ephesus, and gives them an Apostolic charge (xx. 17); and Tyre (xxi. 3), and lands at Cæsarea (xxi. 8).
 Comes to Jerusalem, after several years (xxiv. 17), for the Feast of Pentecost (xx. 16; xxi. 17).
 St. Paul is arrested at Jerusalem in the Temple (xxi. 28).
 Is conveyed to Cæsarea (xxiii. 23—33).
- 58—60. Remains two years in detention at Cæsarea (xxiv. 27).
 Is sent by Festus, in the Autumn of A.D. 60, by sea toward Rome (xxvii. 1).
 Winters at Malta (xxviii. 11).
61. Spring: arrives at Rome.
62. Martyrdom of St. James the Bishop of Jerusalem, at the Passover.
- 62, 63. St. Paul is at Rome, where he writes the Epistles to the Ephesians, Colossians (see Introduction to Ephesians, p. 269), and to Philemon, in which he calls himself "Paul the aged" (Philem. 9. See above on A.D. 33), and that to the Philippians, at the close of his imprisonment A.D. 63.
 Is detained at Rome for "two whole years," till the Spring of A.D. 63 (xxviii. 30); where the History of the "ACTS of the APOSTLES" concludes: cp. Euseb. ii. 22.
 For a continuation of the Apostolic History, see the Chronological Tables prefixed to St. Paul's Epistles, and the Introduction to the Epistles to Timothy, pp. 416—424, and the Chronological Table prefixed to the General Epistles.

A TABLE of the Contemporary Chronology of the Emperors of Rome, the Presidents of Syria, the Procurators of Judæa, and the High Priests of Jerusalem ¹.

A.D.	EMPEROR.	PRESIDENT OF SYRIA.	PROCURATOR OF JUDÆA.	HIGH PRIEST.
30.	Tiberius, since A.D. 14, Aug. 19.	Pontius Pilate from A.D. 26 or 27 (Jos. Ant. xviii. 4. 2).	Caiaphas, since A.D. 25.
34.	Vitellius (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 4. 4. Tacit. Ann. vi. 27).
36.	Pontius Pilate recalled (Jos. Ant. xviii. 4. 2).
37.	Caligula succeeds March 16.	Caiaphas removed by Vitellius.
39.	Petronius. (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 8. 2).	Jonathan, son of Ananus (Jos. Ant. xviii. 4. 3).
41.	Claudius succeeds Jan. 24.	HEROD AGRIPPA, King of Judæa.	Theophilus, son of Ananus (Jos. Ant. xviii. 5. 3).
42.	Vibius Marsus (Ant. xix. 6. 4).	Simon, son of Boëthus (Jos. Ant. xix. 6. 2).
43.	Matthias, son of Annas (Ant. xix. 6. 4).
44.	C. Cassius Longinus (Ant. xx. 1. 1).	Cuspius Fadus (Ant. xix. 11. 2; xx. 5. 1).	Elionæus, son of Cantheras (Ant. xix. 8. 1).
45.	Herod, King of Chalcis, obtains from Claudius the appointment of the High Priests, and the charge of the Temple (Ant. xx. 1. 3).	Joseph, son of Cami (Ant. xx. 1. 3).
46.	Tiberius Alexander (Ant. xx. 5. 2).
47.	Ventidius Cumanus (Ant. xx. 5. 2). Herod, King of Chalcis, dies, is succeeded by his nephew, Herod Agrippa II.	Ananias, son of Nebedæus, appointed by Herod, King of Chalcis (Ant. xx. 5. 1).
48.
49.	Titus Ummidius Quadratus (Ant. xx. 6. 2. B. J. ii. 12. 5).
53.	Felix (Ant. xx. 7. 1). HEROD AGRIPPA II., who had been King of Chalcis since A.D. 48, and had the charge of the Temple and the appointment of the High Priests, and was advanced, about the close of A.D. 52, to the Tetrarchies of Philip and Lysanias, with the title of King (Ant. x. 7. 1. B. J. ii. 12. 8; iii. 3. 5).
54.	Nero succeeds Oct. 13.
59.	Herod Agrippa appoints Ishmael, son of Phabi (Ant. xx. 8. 8).
60.	Domitius Corbulo.	Festus succeeds Felix (Ant. xx. 8. 9).
61.	Festus dies. The province without a procurator.	Agrippa appoints Joseph, surnamed Cabi, son of Simon (Ant. xx. 8. 11).
62.	Albinus (Ant. xx. 9. 1. B. J. ii. 14. 1).	Ananus (xx. 9. 1).
63.	Jesus, son of Damnæus (xx. 9. 1).
68.	Nero dies June 9.

¹ Cp. Zeittafeln in Winer, B. W. B. ii. p. 763. Wieseler, p. 594. Lewin, pp. 1022—1107, and Alford, Proleg. pp. 23—25.

Inferences deducible from the preceding CHRONOLOGICAL SYNOPSIS and TABLE.

The consideration of the results represented above may suggest the following reflections :—

1. The Times and Numbers which are recited in Holy Scripture, and which serve as landmarks of Sacred History, seem to be regulated by certain laws.

For example, the periods of Forty Days and Forty Years recur frequently in Holy Scripture as Times of Probation. See Numb. xiv. 33; xxxii. 13. Ps. xcv. 10. Heb. iii. 9, 17, and Notes on Acts i. 3; vii. 23.

2. If the dates assigned in the above Table are correct, it appears, that (as Eusebius has observed, H. E. iii. 7) the period of penitential probation, which was allowed to the city of Jerusalem after the crucifixion of Christ, was Forty Years; i. e. from A.D. 30 to A.D. 70, when it was taken by the Romans, and the Temple was destroyed. This result being consistent with the general dealings of Divine Providence with His people, confirms the conclusion stated in the Table.

3. St. Luke's work is divided into two parts, viz. : 1. his Gospel. 2. the Acts of the Apostles.

If the dates specified above are correct, then the Ascension of Christ, with which St. Luke's Gospel ends, and the Book of the Acts begins, stands at the middle point between both; and each portion of St. Luke's work records the events of about Thirty-three Years.

4. It is related in Holy Scripture of King David, the type of Christ, that he reigned forty years; seven, or seven and a half, in Hebron, and thirty-three years in Jerusalem over all Israel and Judah. (2 Sam. v. 4, 5. 1 Chron. xxix. 27.)

Perhaps these times may be typical of Christ's kingdom after His Ascension; at first limited to the literal Israel, and then, in the eighth year after the Ascension, extended, in the Conversion of Cornelius, to all nations.

David reigns forty years; and Solomon, the peaceful, also a type of Christ, succeeds; who builds the Temple, the figure of the Church.

In the fortieth year after the Ascension of Christ, the literal Temple was destroyed; but this destruction of the material fabric conduced to the construction of the spiritual; the demolition of the Temple was the building up of the Church. It weaned the hearts of the people of God from the earthly Jerusalem, and raised their eyes to the graces and glories of the heavenly, which is the Mother of us all. (Gal. iv. 26.) It promoted the union of Jew and Gentile in Christ and His Church;

Thus that period of forty years led to the peaceful settlement of the people of God under the divine Son of David, the true Solomon, the Prince of Peace.

5. The number seven generally introduces in Scripture a period of Rest after toil and affliction. See on Matt. i. 17; xxvii. 52. 62. Luke xxiii. 56.

In looking at the Chronological Table of the History of the Acts we find,

(1) The first seventh year, i. e. A.D. 37, marked by the "Rest of the Churches."

(2) The second, or fourteenth year (i. e. A.D. 44), distinguished by another rest, after the death of Herod Agrippa I. See Acts xii. 24.

(3) The Third septennium, A.D. 51, also distinguished by Rest after controversy, xv. 23—30; xvi. 4, 5.

All these periods of seven are marked in the history by what may be called sabbatical sentences, expressive of Rest after labour and suffering. See ix. 31; xii. 24; xv. 31; xvi. 5.

Such analogies as these will appear more or less worthy of notice to the reader, in proportion as he is disposed to attach more or less importance to a subject which has received little consideration in modern times, viz. the significance of periods of time in Sacred History. In the present state of our knowledge in this respect, it would be rash to build any thing upon them as a foundation; but the observation of them, if otherwise deducible by reasoning, may be confirmatory of the results to which that reasoning leads; and may perhaps induce others to pursue the inquiry further; which, while it demands patience of investigation, and soberness of deliberation, and diffidence in stating its results, has enough to commend it to the thoughtful student of Scripture, in the records of Inspiration and in the testimony of Christian Antiquity, and will not be lightly set aside by any who desire to understand the "whole counsel of God."

ANCIENT GREEK MANUSCRIPTS, IN UNCIAL LETTERS, CONTAINING

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

- A Alexandrine, of IVth or Vth century, in British Museum, London; a facsimile published by C. G. Woide, Lond. 1786. Folio.
- B Vatican, of IVth or Vth century; in the Vatican at Rome, No. 1209, published, with questionable accuracy, at Rome, 1857, and reprinted at London, 1859. Cp. Tischendorf, Proleg. p. cxlvi.
- C Codex Ephraem Syri rescriptus (Palimpsest), in Imperial Library at Paris. Num. 9. Published by Constantine Tischendorf, Lips. 1843.
- D Codex Bezae, Greek and Latin, of VIth or VIIth century (?); in the University Library at Cambridge. A facsimile published by Kipling, Cantabr. 1793. Folio.
- E Laudianus, Greek and Latin, of VIth or VIIth century; in the Bodleian Library at Oxford; originally from Sardinia. Published by Hearne, Oxon. 1715.
- F Coislinianus; VIIth century; published by Tischendorf, Monumenta Sacra, p. 404.
- G Angelicae Bibliothecae, at Rome, formerly belonged to Cardinal Passionei, IXth century.
- H Mutinensis, IXth century.

In the Acts of the Apostles

A is complete.

B is complete

C contains only some portions, viz.:

Chap. i. 2—iv. 3.
v. 35—x. 42.
xiii. 1—xvi. 36.
xx. 10—xxi. 30.
xxii. 21—xxiii. 18.
xxiv. 15—xxvi. 19.
xxvii. 16—xxviii. 4.

D is defective, as follows:

From viii. 29—x. 14.
xxi. 2—xxi. 10.
xxi. 15—xxi. 19.
xxii. 10—xxii. 20.
xxii. 29 to end.

E is defective, as follows:

From xxvi. 29—xxviii. 26.

F contains only some portions:

iv. 33, 34.
ix. 24, 25.
x. 13, 15.
xxii. 22.

G begins at viii. 10, and is thence complete to the end.

H contains only some portions:

v. 28—ix. 38.
x. 19—xiii. 36.
xiv. 3 to end; the portion after xxvii. 4 being supplied by a later hand.

PRINCIPAL CRITICAL EDITIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

Erasm. Basil, 1516, 1519, 1522, 1527, 1535.

Complutensis, in the fifth volume of the Complutensian Polyglot: printed in A.D. 1514, and published at Complutum, or Alcalá, in 1520.

Stephens. Paris, 1546, 1549, 1550, 1551.

Beza. Genev. 1565, 1576, 1589, 1598.

Elzevir, commonly called the "Textus Receptus." Lug. Bat. 1624.

Fell. Oxon. 1675.

Mill. Lond. 1707. Roterod. 1710, by Kuster.

Bentley. On his proposed edition, see Bentley's Correspondence passim, and Tregelles on the Printed Text of N. T. pp. 57—78.

Bengel. Tubing. 1734.

Wetstein. Amstelodami, 1751, 1752. 2 vols. folio.

Griesbach. 1st ed. 1774; 2nd ed. 1796—1806.

Matthæi. Riga, 1782—1788. 12 vols.

Alter. Viennæ, 1786, 1787.

Birch. 1788—1801.

Scholz. Lips. 1830—1836. 2 vols. 4to.

Lachmann. 1st ed. 1831; 2nd ed. Berlin, 1842—1850. See Tregelles, pp. 97—115, and Tischendorf, pp. xli—xlvii.

Tischendorf. Lips. 1841. Two at Paris, 1842.

His first critical edition appeared at Leipzig, 1849: with copious Prolegomena.

His seventh Edition (1857—1859) is intended to present a complete conspectus of all the critical subsidia, as yet available, for the revision of the Text of the New Testament.

The following extracts from the prospectus are of importance, as indicating the present views of the learned Editor:—

"Auf Grund dieser dokumentlichen Vorarbeiten, wie sie wohl noch nie für eine Neutest. Ausgabe unternommen worden sind, wird zum ersten Male ein solcher kritischer Apparat dargeboten, der für alle aufgenommenen Lesarten, ohne Ausnahme die Zeugnisse für und wider enthält, so wie auch die Angabe aller anderen Lesarten, die in den griechischen Unzialhandschriften gefunden werden oder sonst irgend beachtenswerthe Auctorität für sich haben.

"Der Textconstituierung ist die grösste Sorgfalt und Gewissenhaftigkeit gewidmet worden. Fortgesetzte und immer tiefer eingehende Beobachtungen haben den Herausgeber zu mancher Aenderung der frühern Entscheidungen geführt; namentlich hat er die Bevorzugung einiger unseren ältesten Zeugen aus triftigen Gründen beschränken zu müssen geglaubt.

"In diesem Betrachte gewährt die neueste Ausgabe eine gewiss willkommene Förderung kritischer Studien dadurch, dass sie sehr häufig eine Andeutung der Entscheidungsgründe über die einzelnen Lesarten enthält."

Alford. Lond. 1855-9. 4 vols.

Bloomfield. Lond. 1855. 2 vols.

For List of ANCIENT VERSIONS see the Edition of the Gospels, p. xxxvi.

For special Editions of the ACTS of the APOSTLES, see the following List:—

ABBREVIATIONS, AUTHORS, AND EDITIONS,

CITED IN THE FOLLOWING NOTES TO THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES¹.

- Akerman, John Yonge*, F.S.A., Numismatic Illustrations of the New Testament. London. 1846.
- A Lapide, Cornelius*. Lugd. 1732. Folio.
- Alford, Henry*, D.D., Greek Testament. 3 vols. 1855-6.
- Ambrose, S.*, Ambrosii Opera. 4 vols. Paris. 1836.
- Ammonius*. See Catena.
- Andrewes, Bp.*, Works. Oxford. 11 vols. 1841—1854.
- Arator*, Ecclesiæ Romanæ Diaconus; de Actibus Apostolorum ad Papam Vigilium Libri duo. A well-composed Latin Poem in Hexameter Verse, consisting of 2326 lines, written about the middle of the Sixth Century. It is contained in the Bibliotheca Patrum Maxima, Vol. x. Lugd. 1677; and in the Abbé Migne's Patrologia, Vol. lxxviii. Paris. 1847.
- Athanasius, S.*, Opera. Ed. Bened. 2 vols. folio. Patavii. 1777.
- Augustine, S.*, Augustini Opera. Ed. Benedict. 12 vols. 8vo. Paris. 1836.
- Barrow, Isaac*, D.D., Works. 6 vols. 8vo. Oxford. 1841.
- Basil, S.*, Basilii Cæsar. Opera. Ed. Paris. 1721. 3 vols. folio.
- Basnage, Sam.*, Annales Ecclesiastici à Cæsare ad Phocam. Roterodam. 3 vols. folio. 1706.
- Baumgarten, M.*, Apostelgeschichte. English Translation by Morrison and Meyer. Edinb. 1854.
- Bede, Venerabilis*, In Acta Apostolorum, et Retractationes. Tom. xii. Lond. 1844.
- Bengel, J. A.*, Gnomon N. T. 2 vols. Tübingæ. 1835.
- Beveridge, Bp.*, On the Thirty-nine Articles. Oxford. 1840. 2 vols.
- Bingham, Joseph*, Origines Ecclesiasticæ. Lond. 1834. 8 vols. 8vo.
- Birks, Rev. T. R.*, M.A., Horæ Evangelicæ. Lond. 1852. See also Paley.
- Biscoe, Richard*, M.A., Boyle Lectures on the Acts of the Apostles. 2 vols. Lond. 1742.
- Bloomfield, S. T.*, D.D., Greek Testament. 2 vols. 8vo. Ninth ed. 1855.
- Blunt, J. J.*, B.D., History of the Christian Church during the first Three Centuries. Lond. 1856.
- Bornemann, F. A.*, Acta Apostolorum ad Codicis Cantabrigiensis fidem recensita. Grossenhain. 1848.
- Browne, Professor E. H.*, On the Thirty-nine Articles. London. 1850. 2 vols.
- Bruder, C. H.*, Concordantia Novi Testamenti. Lips. 1842. 4to.
- Bull, Bp.*, Works. Ed. Burton. 7 vols. Oxford. 1827.
- Burton, Edward*, D.D., Lectures on the Ecclesiastical History of the First Century. Oxford. 1831.
- Buxtorf, Johannes*, Synagoga Judaica. Basil. 1680.
- Cassiodorii Senatoris Complexiones in Acta Apostolorum*. Roter. 1723.
- Catena in Acta SS. Apostolorum à Cod. Nov. Coll. edidit J. A. Cramer*, S.T.P. Oxon. 1838.
- Chrysostom, S.*, Homilies on the Acts, Tom. iv. Ed. Savil. 1612. Pp. 607—919.
- Clemens Alexandrinus, S.*, Opera. Ed. Potter. 2 vols. folio. Oxon. 1715.
- Clinton, H. F.*, M.A., Fasti Romani. 1845 and 1850.
- Conybeare, Rev. W. J.*, M.A., and Howson, Rev. J. S., M.A., The Life and Epistles of St. Paul. 2 vols. Lond. 2nd ed. 1856.
- Cook, Rev. F. C.*, M.A., The Acts of the Apostles, with a Commentary. Lond. 1850.
- Cosin, Bp.*, On the Canon of Holy Scripture. Lond. 1672.
- Cyril, S.*, Alexandrin., Opera. Lut. Paris. 1638.
- , Hierosolym., Opera. Ed. Venet. 1763.
- Davidson, Samuel*, LL. D., Introduction to New Test. Lond. 1848.
- De Wette, W. M. L.*, Handbuch zum N. T. Leipzig. 1845. 3te Auflage. 2 vols. 8vo.
- Didymus*. See Catena.

¹ See also the List prefixed to the Edition of the Gospels, p. xxxvii.

- Elz.*, Elzevir Edition of Nov. Test. Græc. Lug. Bat. 1624.
- Epiphani, S.*, Opera. Ed. Petavii. 2 vols. folio. Colon.
- Eusebii* Historia Ecclesiastica. Ed. Burton. Oxon. 1838.
- Ford, Rev. James, M.A.*, Prebendary of Exeter, Acts of the Apostles illustrated from Ancient and Modern Authors. Lond. 1856.
- Gieseler, C. L.*, Ecclesiastical History. Vol. i. English Translation. Edinb. 1846.
- Glassii, Salom.*, Philologia Sacra. Amst. 1711. 4to.
- Gregory, S.*, Gregorii Magni Opera. Ed. Paris. 1705. 4 vols. folio.
- Greg. Nazian.*, S., Gregorii Nazianzeni Opera. Ed. Bened. 1778—1840. 2 vols. folio.
- Grinfield, E. W.*, Editio Hellenistica N. T. et Scholia Hellenistica N. T. Lond. 1843-8. 4 vols. 8vo.
- Grotius* in "Poli Synopsis Criticorum."
- Guerike*, Einleitung in das N. T. Leipzig. 1843.
- Hackett, Professor*, Commentary on the Acts. Boston, U. S. 2nd ed. 1858.
- Hammond, H.*, D.D., Paraphrase of and Annotations on the New Testament. Lond. 1681.
- Hilary, S.*, Opera. Oberthür. 4 vols. Wiceberg. 1785.
- Hooker, Rd.*, Works. 3 vols. 8vo. Oxford. 1841.
- Hottinger, J. H.*, Thesaurus Philol. Tigur. 1659.
- Howson.* See Conybeare.
- Humphry, W. G.*, B.D., A Commentary on the Acts of the Apostles. 2nd ed. Lond. 1854.
- Irenæus, S.* Ed. Stieren. Lips. 1853. 2 vols. 8vo.
- Jackson, Thomas, D.D.*, Works. 12 vols. Oxford. 1844.
- Jahn, Archæologia Sacra.* Viennæ. 1814.
- Jerome, S.*, Hieronymi Opera. Ed. Bened. Paris. 1693—1706. 5 vols. folio.
- Josephus*, Opera. Richter. 6 vols. Lips. 1826.
- Justin Martyr, S.* Ed. Paris. 1742. Folio, and 2 vols. 8vo. Jenæ. 1842.
- Kirchofer, Joh.*, Quellensammlung zur Geschichte d. N. T. Canons. Zürich. 1844.
- Kitto, John, D.D.*, Daily Bible Illustrations, "The Apostles and Early Church." Edinb. 1854.
- Kuinoel, C. T.*, Novum Testamentum Græcum. Ed. Lond. 1834. 3 vols.
- Lachmann, C.*, Novum Testamentum. See above, p. 3.
- Lardner, Nathanael*, Works. 5 vols. 4to. Lond. 1815.
- Leo, M.*, Opera. Lugd. 1700.
- Lewin, Thomas, M.A.*, The Life and Epistles of St. Paul. Lond. 2 vols. 1851.
- Lightfoot, John, D.D.*, Commentary on the Acts of the Apostles. Works, Vol. i. p. 733. Lond. 1682.
- Hebrew and Talmudical Exercitations on the Acts of the Apostles. Vol. ii. p. 633.
- Lorinus, Johannes*, In Acta Apostolorum. Lugduni, 1609. Folio.
- Mede, Joseph*, Works. Lond. 1677. Folio.
- Meyer, H. A. W.*, Ueber die Apostelgeschichte. Second edition. Göttingen, 1854.
- Middleton, Bp.*, On the Greek Article in the N. T. Cambridge. 1828.
- Mintert, Petrus*, Lexicon N. T. Francofurti. 1728. 2 vols. 4to. A Lexicon illustrating the language of the N. T. from the LXX.
- Mishna*, sive Totius Hebræorum Juris Rituum, Antiquitatum ac Legum Oralium Systema, cum clarissimorum Rabbiorum Maimonidis et Bartinoæ Commentariis, ed. Surenhusii. 6 voll. folio. Amst. 1698.
- Œcumenius*, In Acta Apostolorum, Tom. i. Lut. Paris. 1830.
- Olshausen, Hermann*, Apostelgeschichte. English Translation. Edinb. 1850.
- Origenis* Opera. Ed. De la Rue, folio, and ed. Lommatzsch, Berlin. 1831—45.
- Paley, W.*, D.D., Horæ Paulinæ. Edited by Rev. T. R. Birks, with additions. Lond. 1850.
- Patres Apostolici* (S. Clemens Romanus, S. Ignatius, S. Polycarpus). Ed. Jacobson. Oxon. 1847. 2 vols.
- Pearson, Bp.*, On the Creed. Ed. Chevallier. Cambridge. 1849.
- Annales Paulini, in his Opera Posthuma, ed. Churton, i. pp. 371—396.
- Lectiones in Acta Apostolorum; on the first Nine Chapters, ibid. pp. 317—368.
- Poli, Matth.*, Synopsis Criticorum in Sacram Scripturam. Lond. 1699. 4 vols. folio.
- Rosenmüller, Jo. Georg.*, Scholia in N. T. Ed. 1815. 5 vols.
- Routh, Martin, S.T.P.*, Reliquiæ Sacræ. 5 vols. Oxon. 1846—1848.

Sanderson, Bp., Works. Ed. Jacobson. Oxford. 1854. 6 vols.

Schoettgen, Christian, Horæ Hebraicæ in N. T. Dresd. 1733.

Septuaginta, Interpretes Veteris Testamenti. Oxon. 1848. 3 vols.

Severian. See Catena.

Severus. See Catena.

Smith, James, Esq., of Jordanhill, F.R.S., &c., The Voyage and Shipwreck of St. Paul. Second edit. Lond. 1856.

Smith, Dr. William, Dictionaries, of Geography, and of Antiquities; and of the Bible. Lond. 1860.

Surenhusii, Gul., βιβλος καταλλαγῆς, on the Passages of the Old Testament quoted in the New. Amst. 1713.

Theophylactus, In Acta Apostolorum; two distinct Commentaries; one edited by Sifanus, 1557, the other from a MS. in the Vatican, first printed in 1758. Both are contained in Tom. iii. of his Works, ed. Venet. 1758.

Tillemont, Lenain De, Mémoires pour servir à l'Histoire Ecclésiastique. Tomes i. et ii. Bruxelles. 1732.

Tischendorf, Constantine. See above, p. 3.

Tregelles, S. P., LL.D., On the Greek Text of the Gospels. Lond. 1854.

Valckenaër, L. C., Scholæ in Actus Apostolorum. Ed. Amst. 1815.

——— Annotationes Criticæ in loca quædam N. T. In his Opuscula. Lips. 1808.

Vorstius, Johan., De Hebraïsmis N. T. Ed. Fischer. Lips. 1778.

Waterland, Daniel, D.D., Works. Ed. Van Mildert. Oxford. 1823. 11 vols. 8vo.

Webster, W., and Wilkinson, W. F., Greek Testament. Vol. i. Lond. 1855.

Wetstein, J. J., Novum Testamentum Græcum. Amst. 1752. 2 vols. folio.

Whitby, Daniel, D.D., Annotations on the Acts of the Apostles. Reprinted at Lond. 1842.

Wieseler, Karl, Chronologie des Apostolischen Zeitalters. Göttingen. 1848.

Williams, George, B.D., The Holy City. 2 vols. Lond. 1849. 2nd ed.

Winer, Biblisches Realwörterbuch. 3te Auflage. Leipzig. 1842.

——— Grammatik des N. T. Sprachidioms. 6te Auflage. Leipzig. 1855.

ΠΡΑΞΕΙΣ ΑΠΟΣΤΟΛΩΝ.

I. ¹ ΤΟΝ μὲν πρῶτον λόγον ἐποιήσαμην περὶ πάντων, ᾧ Θεόφιλε, ὧν ^a Luke 1. 3. ἤρξατο Ἰησοῦς ποιεῖν τε καὶ διδάσκειν ² ἄχρι ἧς ἡμέρας ἐντειλάμενος τοῖς ^b Luke 24. 51. ἀποστόλοις διὰ Πνεύματος ἁγίου, οὓς ἐξελέξατο, ἀνελήφθη ³ οἷς καὶ παρ- ^c ch. 13. 31. ἔστησεν ἑαυτὸν ζῶντα μετὰ τὸ παθεῖν αὐτὸν ἐν πολλοῖς τεκμηρίοις δι' ἡμερῶν τεσσαράκοντα ὀπτανόμενος αὐτοῖς, καὶ λέγων τὰ περὶ τῆς βασιλείας τοῦ Θεοῦ.

THE Title of this Book is Πράξεις Ἀποστόλων, literally ACTS OF APOSTLES, and not, "the Acts of the Apostles," for it only proposes to give an account of some acts of some Apostles, as specimens of the rest;—see the Introduction to this Volume, p. 5, note; and on the design of the Book, see the Introduction, pp. 2—20.

CH. I. 1. τὸν μὲν πρῶτον λόγον] τὸν πρῶτον λόγον, the former story or account,—λόγον, as Herod. vi. 19, a history; a modest name for his Gospel. (Chrys.) πρῶτον for πρότερον, as Luke ii. 2, see note.

On μὲν without δὲ expressed, see Acts iii. 21; iv. 16; xxvii. 21; xxviii. 22. Winer, Gr. Gr. § 63, p. 508.

This expression πρῶτον λόγον is important for determining the time of the publication of the Gospels.

The Acts are carried down to A.D. 63. If they were written then (as seems probable), the Gospel of St. Luke, his πρῶτος λόγος, was written before A.D. 63.

The Gospels of St. Matthew and St. Mark, which are prior to St. Luke's, were published before that time.

It is probable that the Gospel of St. Luke was published before A.D. 54. See Introduction to his Gospel, pp. 168—170.

—περὶ πάντων] concerning all things. Not that St. Luke narrated them all (cp. John xxi. 25); but πᾶς is used in Scripture in a relative sense, i. e. for all those things which are "apta et congrua et officio sufficientia" (Aug. de Consens. Evang. iv. 8), requisite, convenient, and sufficient for the purpose in view. Acts xxi. 27. Eph. vi. 21.

CP. πάντοτε προσέχεσθαι, Luke xviii. 1; ἦσαν διαπαντὸς ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, Luke xxiv. 53.

—ἤρξατο] began. By this word, as here used, and at v. 22, as well as by the word Θεόφιλε, St. Luke connects his δεύτερον λόγον, or Acts of the Apostles, with his πρῶτος λόγος (the Gospel); see on Luke iii. 23, where he had used the word ἀρχόμενος to describe the beginning of Christ's ministerial career.

Besides, the word ἤρξατο Ἰησοῦς, Jesus began, as here used has a deeper sense;

St. Luke intimates by it, that our Lord's Ministry on earth was the ἀρχή, or beginning of His Mediatorial Kingdom; and that this Kingdom, so begun, received a fresh accession of majesty at His Ascension into heaven, and at His Session at the Right Hand of God; and that its sway is now exercised in the protection of His Church, and in the Government of the World, and that it will be continued till He appears again in glory, when all His enemies will be put under His feet; and then the Kingdom, which was begun at His Baptism, will be consummated, by the complete subjugation of Satan and of Death, and by the full and final triumph of Christ; and "God will be all in all." 1 Cor. xv. 28.

In the Gospels, the Holy Spirit has described the beginnings of that Kingdom as inaugurated by Christ on earth.

In the Acts, He describes the continuance and extension of that Kingdom through the power of Christ exalted and glorified in heaven. Cp. Olshausen, p. 348, Alford, p. 1, Baumgarten, i. 11—15, and below, note on x. 11, on the word ἀρχαί as applied to the Gospels; and the Introduction to this book.

2. ἐντειλάμενος τ. ᾧ διὰ Πνεύματος ἁγίου] having given charge to His Apostles by the Holy Spirit (Chrys., Theophylact, Valck.), when He breathed on them and said, λάβετε Πνεῦμα ἅγιον, John xx. 22, and so gave them an earnest of the gift of Pentecost. Cp. Heb. ix. 14, διὰ Πνεύματος αἰωνίου ἑαυτὸν προσήνεγκεν ἡμῶν τῷ Θεῷ, and below, xi. 28, and xxi. 4, ἔλεγον διὰ τοῦ Πνεύματος, and Winer, § 61, p. 491.

—οὓς ἐξελέξατο] whom He chose out of the world for Himself (John xv. 16), obscure and humble though they were, and whom He advanced to the high dignity of seeing His miracles and hearing His Words, and finally to be witnesses of His Resurrection and Ascension. Such was His love and mercy to them.

3. ἐν πολλοῖς τεκμηρίοις] Matt. xxviii. 17. Mark xvi. 14. Luke xxiv. 13—50. John xx. 19. 1 Cor. xv. 5. 7.—τεκμήρια are called ἀναγκαῖα σημεῖα, irresistible proofs, by Aristotle, Rhet. i.; such as are incontrovertible (Quintil. v. 9); demonstrative evidences. See Wetst. and Hackett, p. 36.

—δι' ἡμερῶν τ.] through forty days. On the modern allegations against this statement, see note above on Luke xxiv. 50; and to the testimonies there cited may be added that of S. Ignatius, Frag. 8, ap. Mai, Script. Vett. vii. p. 22, εἰ γὰρ ᾗδεις ὅτι Θεοῦ υἱὸς ἦν, ἐγένεσθες ὅτι τεσσαράκοντα ἡμέρας ἀνευδὲς ποιήσας τὸ φθαρτὸν σῶμα.

St. Luke does not say that our Lord continued visibly present with His disciples during forty days, but showed Himself at intervals, in the period of forty days; for He appeared to them from time to time, and then disappeared (Chrys.), proving to them His humanity by eating and drinking with them; yet weaning them, by vanishing suddenly, from dwelling on His corporal presence; and instructing them in His Divine power, and perpetual, though unseen, presence, by unexpected appearances among them, and disappearances from them. See above on John xx. 19.

The period of "Forty Days" seems to be marked in Holy Scripture as significant of probation before some great Event. Examples may be seen in the History of the Flood, Gen. vii. 4. (See Aug. Sermon de Ascens. 264.) Moses in the Mount before the giving of the Law, Exod. xxiv. 18; xxxiv. 28. Deut. ix. 9; x. 10 (see Blunt, Lectures, p. 12); the time of the spies in searching the Land, Numb. xiii. 25; xiv. 34; the time of Elias before coming to Horeb, 1 Kings xix. 8; the time of probation for Nineveh, Jonah iii. 4.

Compare the same period of Forty Days before our Lord's Presentation in the Temple (Luke ii. 22), and of His Fasting before He entered on His Ministry (Matt. iv. 2, where see note).

As it was forty days after His Birth before He was presented in the Temple in the earthly Jerusalem, and again forty days after His Baptism, before He entered on His Ministry, so now He waits forty days after His Birth from the Grave, before d Luke 24. 49.

John 14. 26.
& 15. 26.
e Matt 3. 11.
Mark 1. 8.
Luke 3. 16.
John 1. 26.
ch. 2. 4. & 11. 16.
& 19. 4.
f Matt. 20. 21.
Luke 17. 20.
Isa. 1. 26.
Amos 9. 11.
g Matt. 24. 36.
h ch. 2. 2.
Luke 24. 48, 49.
John 15. 26, 27.

^{4 d} Καὶ συναλιζόμενος αὐτοῖς παρήγγειλεν ἀπὸ Ἱεροσολύμων μὴ χωρίζεσθαι, ἀλλὰ περιμένειν τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν τοῦ Πατρὸς, ἣν ἡκούσατέ μου ^{5 e} ὅτι Ἰωάννης μὲν ἐβάπτισεν ὕδατι, ὑμεῖς δὲ βαπτισθήσεσθε ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ οὐ μετὰ πολλὰς ταύτας ἡμέρας.

^{6 f} Οἱ μὲν οὖν συνελθόντες ἐπηρώτων αὐτὸν λέγοντες, Κύριε, εἰ ἐν τῷ χρόνῳ τούτῳ ἀποκαθιστάνεις τὴν βασιλείαν τῷ Ἰσραὴλ; ^{7 e} Εἶπε δὲ πρὸς αὐτούς, Οὐχ ὑμῶν ἐστι γινῶναι χρόνους ἢ καιροὺς, οὓς ὁ Πατὴρ ἔθετο ἐν τῇ ἰδίᾳ ἐξουσίᾳ· ^{8 h} ἀλλὰ λήψεσθε δύναμιν, ἐπελθόντος τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος ἐφ' ὑμᾶς· καὶ ἔσεσθε

He presents Himself in the Temple of the heavenly Jerusalem, and enters on His Priestly Ministry in the true Holy of Holies, where He "ever liveth to make intercession for us." Heb. vii. 25.

The Forty Days, a term of Probation, have also a preparatory reference to the Pentecost or Fiftieth, the Day of Jubilee.

Forty years after this (a year for a day, Numb. xiv. 34) Jerusalem was destroyed, because the people would not believe in Christ, who had so mightily declared Himself the Son of God by His Resurrection, which had been so plainly proved by so many proofs for Forty Days. (Lightfoot.)

On this text, see Barrow's Sermon 29, vol. v. pp. 39—63.

— ὄπτα-νόμενος] appearing, manifesting Himself. On the difference between ὄπταμι and θεωρῶ, see on John xvi. 16.—ὄπτα-νόμενος (a frequentative verb connected with ὄπταμαι) means appearing suddenly, from time to time. Hesychius well explains the word by ἐμφανίζόμενος.

— λέγων τὰ] speaking the things. Observe the article τὰ, the things that were requisite for them to know and do concerning the Kingdom of God.

— περὶ τῆς βασιλείας τ. Θ.] concerning the Kingdom of God, or Christian Church (Matt. xiii. 11. 19. 24. 31. 33. Luke iv. 43; vi. 20; vii. 28; viii. 10), her Doctrines, Government, Trials, Hopes, and future Consummation. See Professor Blunt's Lectures "on the History of the Church during the first three Centuries," pp. 12—16.

4. συναλιζόμενος] associated, and assembling together with, = συναχθεῖς συναθροισθεῖς (Hesych.), so used by Xenophon, Cyrop. i. 4. 14. Anab. vii. 3. 48. Joseph. Ant. viii. 4. 1; xix. 7. 4. Cp. Bp. Pearson in Ignat. ad Magnes. 10, and Valck. here.

— ἀπὸ Ἱεροσολύμων] The form Ἱεροσόλυνμα is used about twenty times in the Acts, but never except after a preposition; in all other cases we have Ἱερουσαλὴμ.

The same peculiarity is found in St. Luke's Gospel.

— μὴ χωρίζεσθαι] not to depart from Jerusalem: as they would otherwise have been disposed to do. But they were to remain there, in order to receive the Holy Ghost together in one and the same place; and in order that the miracle of the descent of the Holy Ghost upon them might be more striking and convincing as wrought in the capital of Judæa, and at the next great Festival after the Crucifixion, viz. at the Festival of Pentecost, when strangers from all parts of the world would be gathered to Jerusalem, and would carry back the tidings of that manifestation into all lands; and also that the Christian Law might go forth from Mount Sion (Isa. ii. 3. Micah iv. 2), and so show its harmony with the Levitical Dispensation.

It is recorded on ancient authority, that our blessed Lord enjoined His Apostles to remain at Jerusalem for twelve years after the Ascension. See the passages cited by Bp. Pearson, in Acta, § xi. Routh, Rel. S. i. pp. 471. 484. Blunt, Lectures, pp. 43. 44. Cp. below, vi. 2; viii. 1.

It is probable that the Apostles made circuits in Palestine during that time, and did not quit the Holy Land till about A.D. 42.

— τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν τοῦ Πατρὸς] the promise of the Father. Another expression connecting the Acts of the Apostles with the Gospel of St. Luke. See there, xxiv. 49, ἰδοὺ ἐγὼ ἀποστέλλω τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν τοῦ Πατρὸς μου ἐφ' ὑμᾶς.

— ἣν ἡκούσατέ μου] which ye heard of Me. For a similar change of the oratio obliqua to recta, cp. Luke v. 14, and below, xvii. 3, and xxiii. 22, and see Winer, G. G. § 60, p. 482, and § 63, 2, p. 511.

5. ὑμεῖς δὲ βαπτισθήσεσθε ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ] but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost. See below, xi. 16.

But were not the Disciples baptized before?

It would seem that they were, and with Christ's Baptism (John iii. 22; iv. 2), and that Baptism differed from the Baptism of John; for John baptized unto repentance and faith in Christ to come (Acts xix. 4), and they who were baptized by John, were baptized afterwards into Christ (Acts xix. 5). But we do not hear that any which were baptized into Christ before the Ascension and day of Pentecost, were baptized again after it. What the Disciples received by Baptism with water into Christ before the day of Pentecost, is a question on which various opinions have been offered (see Aquinas, 3, p. 9. 66, art. 2, and 73, art. 5, and A Lapide here).

But this is clear, that whatever it was, it was consummated as it were by a χρίσις τελειωτική, in the full effusion of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost.

See further on Acts x. 47.

— οὐ μετὰ πολλὰς ταύτας ἡμέρας] after not many days, and those days ταύτας, namely, dating from this present time. Cp. Winer, § 23, p. 146.

He says that the days are not many, that they may hope; but He does not say how few they are, in order that they may watch. (Chrys.)

6. Κύριε] O Lord. Jesus is often called in this book, written for Hellenists, by the name Κύριος. And (as Valck. well observes) the word Κύριος in the LXX Version, read by the Hellenists, is used for Jehovah: "ut adeo parum intersit (adds Valck.), utrum Jesus Κύριος dicatur an Θεός." See below, on v. 21, and on xxv. 26.

— ἀποκαθιστάνεις τ. β.] The ordinary meaning of ἀποκαθιστημι in the LXX and N. T. is to restore. In the LXX it is used for the Hebr. נָשַׁב reverti fecit, from root נָשַׁב reverti, reducere. See Gen. xxix. 3; xl. 13. 21. Ps. xxxv. 17, and passim.

So in the N. T. it often means restoration or return, Matt. xii. 13. Mark iii. 5; viii. 25. Luke vi. 10. Heb. xiii. 19. It seems to have this meaning here; but it signifies something more.

According to the Jewish expectation, the times of the Messiah would bring more than all the pristine glory to the City and Nation of the ancient people of God.

They looked for an amplification of the power and splendour of David and Solomon, in Christ. See the Hebrew authorities in Lightfoot here. Therefore it seems that the word ἀποκαθιστημι and ἀποκατάστασις, as used in this respect, imply something more than restitution; viz. a consummation of all that had, in their opinion, been promised by God to His people when redeemed and restored under the glorious reign of the Messiah. And this sense of the word appears clearly in iii. 21.

The question therefore addressed to our Lord is, Art Thou at this time intending fully to establish the Kingdom of the Messiah? καθιστάνω is stabilio, and the preposition ἀπὸ (as in ἀποδοῦναι, Matt. xxii. 21) intimates that what is established is, as it were, due, and to be paid as a debt. The temporal kingdom of the Messiah for which they looked, was, they supposed, promised in ancient Prophecy, and pledged to Israel by solemn stipulations of God.

Hence ἀποκαθιστάναι is used by the LXX for to pay, Gen. xiii. 16: cp. Job v. 18. See also Gloss. Hesych., ἀποκαταστήσαι = τελειῶσαι, and cp. Mark ix. 12, and note below, iii. 21.

The question of the Apostles appears to be mentioned here, in order to show how much they needed the grace of the Holy Ghost to enlighten their minds as to the true nature of Christ's Kingdom. They thought of temporal Sovereignty, but He spoke to them of the witness which they must give (v. 8), and by which the Kingdom was to be advanced. And that witness was a witness of suffering. Compare the similar conversation, Matt. xx. 21—23.

7. χρόνους ἢ καιροὺς] times or seasons. χρόνος = πολλῶν καιρῶν συνοχή, καιρὸς = μέρος χρόνου. (Thom. Mag.) Hence Sophocles, Elect. 1306, χρόνος καιρός. See below, I Thess. v. 1.

It is not for you to know the time which will elapse before My Kingdom will be established; nor the season in which it will be established.

— ἔθετο ἐν τ. ἑ. ἐ.] placed in His own authority: that is, constituted them so as to be in subjection to it.

— ὁ Πατὴρ] the Father. See on Mark xiii. 32.

μοῦ μάρτυρες ἔν τε Ἱερουσαλὴμ καὶ ἐν πάσῃ τῇ Ἰουδαίᾳ καὶ Σαμαρείᾳ, καὶ ἕως ἑσχάτου τῆς γῆς.

^{9 i} Καὶ ταῦτα εἰπὼν βλέπόντων αὐτῶν ἐπήρθη, καὶ νεφέλῃ ὑπέλαβεν αὐτὸν ^{i Mark 10. 19. Luke 24. 51.} ἀπὸ τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν αὐτῶν.

^{10 k} Καὶ ὡς ἀτειζόντες ἦσαν εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν πορευομένου αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἰδὼν ^{k Luke 24. 4. John 20. 12.} ἄνδρες δύο παρειστήκεισαν αὐτοῖς ἐν ἐσθῇτι λευκῇ, ^{11 l} οἱ καὶ εἶπον, Ἄνδρες ^{l Matt. 24. 30.} Γαλιλαῖοι, τί ἐστήκατε ἐμβλέποντες εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν; οὗτος ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ὁ ἀναληφθεὶς ἀφ' ὑμῶν εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν, οὕτως ἐλεύσεται, ὃν τρόπον ἐθεάσασθε αὐτὸν πορευόμενον εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν.

^{12 m} Τότε ὑπέστρεψαν εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ ἀπὸ ὄρους τοῦ καλουμένου Ἑλαιῶνος, ὃ ^{m Luke 24. 52.} ἔστιν ἐγγὺς Ἱερουσαλὴμ, σαββάτου ἔχον ὁδόν.

8. ἔσεσθε μοῦ] So A, B, C, D, and others. Elz., ἔσεσθέ μοι. Moῦ is emphatic, and the genitive is expressive of property in, and protection of. Ye shall be witnesses of Me, and I will defend you. Cp. ii. 32; iii. 15; v. 32; xiii. 31.

—ἕως ἑσχάτου τῆς γῆς] Here is the clue to the design of this Book—to trace the progress of the Church from its origin at Jerusalem to the ends of the earth. Observe the order of that progress, as here pre-arranged and foretold by Christ. First, Jerusalem, next all Judæa; next Samaria; lastly, the ends of the earth. A precept to the Christian Church to begin with missionary work at home, and thence to enlarge that work to foreign parts. Thus the mustard-seed of the Gospel, taking root in the soil, becomes a tree, and covers the earth.

9. ἐπήρθη] he was lifted up. Our Lord is said ἀναληθῆναι (Mark xvi. 19. Acts i. 2. 11. 22. 1 Tim. iii. 16) and ἐπαρῆναι here; and He is also said to go, as on a journey, πορεύεσθαι, v. 10; and so St. Peter says (1 Pet. iii. 22), πορευθεὶς εἰς οὐρανόν. As His Resurrection is said to be God's act (Acts ii. 24. 32; xiii. 33, 34; xvii. 31), and yet His own act (John ii. 19; x. 18); so His Ascension (as Chrysostom observes) is called in Scripture an ἀνάβασις, as well as an ἀνάληψις, showing at once His Humanity and also His Divine power and Unity with the Father.

By His Ascension into Heaven, our Great High Priest fulfilled the type of the Levitical Law (Levit. xvi. 2), and entered with His own Blood, once for all, into the Holy of Holies, even Heaven itself, where He ever liveth to make intercession for us. Heb. ix. 12; vii. 25. Bp. Pearson, On the Creed, Art. vi. p. 505.

—νεφέλῃ] a cloud. He did not vanish by degrees; but a cloud comes as a chariot to convey Him to Heaven. Ps. civ. 3. (Chrys.) And in like manner He will reappear at the last Day. Daniel vii. 10—13. Matt. xxiv. 30; xxvi. 64. Luke xxi. 27. Then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. Rev. i. 7, ἰδοὺ ἔρχεται μετὰ νεφελῶν, behold He cometh with clouds. Accordingly 'the cloud' is the γλῶσσομα of Christ in the Apocalypse. See Rev. x. 1 and xiv. 14—16.

—ὑπέλαβεν] a cloud received Him; as a horse receives its rider on its back. Cp. Psalm lxxviii. 4. Observe ὑπό, beneath. Cp. Herod. i. 24.

10. ἀτειζόντες] 'intentis oculis, rectis;' "tendere oculos," Lucret. i. 67: "tendens lumina," Virg. Æn. ii. 405, one of the words used only by St. Luke (iv. 20; xxii. 56. Acts iii. 4, and eight other times in the Acts, iii. 12; vi. 15; vii. 55; x. 4; xi. 6; xiii. 9; xiv. 9; xxiii. 1) and by St. Paul (2 Cor. iii. 7. 13).

One of the numerous evidences from diction, of identity of St. Luke with the Author of the Acts, and of his connexion with St. Paul.

On the origin of the word ἀτειζω, to gaze intently, see Valck. here, who says, "ἀτερεῖς significant valdè tendens, nervos tendens, valdè intentus. Euripides (in Alcæmon. ap. Hesych.), ἤκω δ' ἀτερεῖς ἀπ' οὐκων de homine qui cum summâ virum contentionē festinabat: hinc ἀτειζ(ειν) adhibetur de iis qui rectis atque intentis oculis intuentur: cp. Bentl. ad Horat. i. 3. 18."

—πορευόμενον αὐτοῦ] as He was going up, in the cloud; as in a chariot of triumph to His heavenly city. Cp. Psalm civ. 3.

—ἰδὼν ἄνδρες δύο παρειστήκεισαν] behold, two men were stand'ng near them, while the Apostles were gazing up to heaven. The ἰδὼν and the tense of the verb mark the suddenness of the appearance of the Angels.

He calls them ἄνδρες, men, as Luke xxiv. 4, ἄνδρες δύο, which he explains in v. 23 to be Angels (cp. also x. 3 with x. 30); so that there is no ground in this word for the allegation of some modern writers, that St. Luke does not mean to affirm that these two ἄνδρες were angels. And these two men announce Christ's reception into heaven, and declare that He will come again from heaven in like manner.

But why did not the Holy Spirit call them Angels? Because their message showed them so to be, and because they appeared as ἄνδρες. Observe also they address the Apostles as ἄνδρες,—ἄνδρες Γαλιλαῖοι,—and thus remind them and us, of the dignity to which our human nature is raised by the Ascension of the Man Christ Jesus, and of our own nearness to Angels, and of the glorious hope to which we men—even though we be obscure Galileans—are thus advanced, of being equal to the Angels (ἰσάγγελοι) in the world to come. (Luke xx. 36.) The name of the Angel Gabriel, who is specially employed on embassies concerning the Incarnation,—or union of the Manhood to God,—is equivalent to ἀνὴρ Θεοῦ, man of God. See on Luke i. 19.

Angels are always ministering to Christ as their Lord at His Birth, at the Temptation in the Garden, at the Resurrection, at the Ascension. (Theophyl.) Cp. our Lord's prophecy, John i. 51.

"Ascendit Judææ coeli; sonuit præco coeli; audierunt Apostoli angelicam vocem, 'sic veniet,' ad homines veniet; homo veniet, sed Deus, homo veniet, ut impleatur quod scriptum est, videbunt in quem pupugerunt" (Zech. xii. 10), Aug. Serm. 265, on the Ascension,—a festival observed in his time on the fortieth day after the Resurrection: see ibid. This Festival is reckoned by Augustine (Epist. ad Januar. 54) as one of universal observation; and as dating perhaps "ab ipsis Apostolis."

12. Ἑλαιῶνος] Olivet: beneath which He had suffered His agony, and had been taken prisoner: thence He now ascends in glory.

—σαββάτου ἔχον ὁδόν] having a sabbath-day's journey; two thousand cubits. The distance between the Tabernacle and the furthest point of the camp in the wilderness. (Origen. in caten. Lightfoot, i. p. 740, and ii. p. 637.) The distance is not very clearly determined, on account of the difference of the measure of the cubit. Lightfoot and De Dieu reckon it at about five stadia; Reland, Pal. i. 52, at six. See Williams, Holy City, p. 371.

Chrysostom's remark here, δοκεῖ μοι ἐν σαββάτῳ γεγονέναι πάντα, is only put forth as a private conjecture. But Bengel well says (p. 489), "Colligit hinc Chrysostomus die Sabbati eos reversos esse in urbem. Malim statuere proprium in toto Oliveti Monte Ascensionis locum hæc ab urbe distantia notari." See next note.

Note concerning the place of the ASCENSION.

St. Luke says that our Lord led out His disciples from Jerusalem, ἕως εἰς Βηθανίαν, as far as Bethany (xxiv. 50), and blessed them, and ascended into heaven.

The village of Bethany was about fifteen furlongs from Jerusalem (John xi. 18), or about twice a Sabbath-day's journey (see on v. 12).

The village of Bethany was also on the eastern slope of the Mount of Olives, which was reckoned as five or six furlongs from Jerusalem. (Joseph. Ant. xx. 8. 6. B. J. v. 2. 3.)

Hence it has been inferred by some persons, that our Lord did not ascend from the summit of the Mount of Olives, but from the eastern slope of it. See note on Luke xxiv. 50.

But this opinion, which has been strongly affirmed by Dr. Robinson (Palest. i. 375), may be questioned; and it is more probable that the Ascension took place either at the summit of Mount Olivet or near that point. See Williams, Holy City, pt. ii. chap. v. pp. 441—445.

The passage in the Acts (i. 12) being written by St. Luke after the passage in his Gospel (xxiv. 50), ought to be taken to n ch. 9. 39.

 & 20. 8.
 Matt. 10. 2-4.
 Luke 6. 15.

¹³ Καὶ ὅτε εἰσῆλθον, ἀνέβησαν εἰς τὸ ὑπερῶν, οὗ ἦσαν καταμένοντες ὁ τε Πέτρος καὶ Ἰωάννης καὶ Ἰάκωβος καὶ Ἀνδρέας, Φίλιππος καὶ Θωμᾶς, Βαρθοexplain and complete it; and not vice versa; i. e. the mention of the Mount of Olives is designed to be supplementary to the reference to Bethany, and to interpret it.

The term Bethany, as Lightfoot has shown (i. 252; ii. 485), is often used to describe the district of that village; which stretched toward Jerusalem, and touched the suburb called Bethphage, which extended eastward from Jerusalem to a distance of about 2000 cubits, or six furlongs, or a Sabbath-day's journey, on the Mount of Olives. (See Lightfoot, i. 252.)

When, therefore, St. Luke says that our Lord led His disciples out as far as Bethany, he means that He led them to its point of contact with Bethphage on the Mount of Olives.

This opinion, which has been well illustrated by Lightfoot, is confirmed by what Dr. Robinson himself calls (i. 375) one of the "earliest traditions of Palestine, and which points out the place of our Lord's Ascension on the summit of the Mount of Olives."

Lightfoot says (i. 252), "The Jews' Chorography will here help us. They tell us, two thousand cubits was the suburbs of a city (Maym in Schabb per. 27); and two thousand cubits were the bounds of a Sabbath, or a Sabbath-day's journey. (Talm. in Sotah, per. 5.)

"Bethphage was of this nature; it was not a town upon Mount Olivet, as it hath been very generally supposed, and accordingly placed in most maps; but it was that space of ground that lay from Jerusalem wall forward towards Mount Olivet, and up Mount Olivet to the extent of two thousand cubits from the wall, or thereabout; and hereupon it was reputed by the Jews of the same qualification with Jerusalem, as a part of it, in divers respects. Talm. Bab. Pesachin. fol. 63, fac. 2, 'He that slays a thanksgiving sacrifice within, while the bread belonging to it is without the wall, the bread is not holy. What means without the wall?' R. Tochanan saith, 'without the wall of Bethphage.' And the same gloss useth the very same words again upon the same Tract, fol. 91, fac. 1. And again in the same Treatise, fol. 95, fac. 2, the Mishna saith thus: 'The two loaves and the sheafbread are allowable in the Temple court, and they are allowable in Bethphage.' Nay, the Gloss in Sanhedr. fol. 14, fac. 1, saith, 'Bethphage was a place which was accounted as Jerusalem for all things.' So that the place called Bethphage began from Jerusalem, and went onwards to and upon Mount Olivet, for the space of a Sabbath-day's journey, or thereabout; and then began the coast that was called Bethany. And hence it is that Luke saith that Christ, when He ascended into heaven, led forth His disciples as far as Bethany (Luke xxiv. 50), which elsewhere he sheweth was the space of a Sabbath-day's journey (Acts i. 12), which cannot be understood of the town Bethany; for that was fifteen furlongs (John xi. 18), or very near two Sabbath-days' journey from Jerusalem; but that He led them over that space of ground which was called Bethphage, to that part of Olivet where it began to be called Bethany, and at that place it was where Christ began His triumphant riding into the city."

The tradition that Christ ascended from the summit of the hill Olivet, is mentioned by Eusebius, Bishop of Cæsarea in Palestine, in his Demon. Evang. vi. 18, written about A.D. 315. Referring to the prophecy (Zech. xiv. 4, "His feet shall stand upon the Mount of Olives"), he says, "The feet of our Lord and Saviour—the Logos, or Word, Himself—by means of the Tabernacle of Humanity which He hath exalted (i. e. in His human Flesh), stood on the Mount of Olives, near the grotto there shown at this day; after that He had prayed, and had delivered to His disciples the Mysteries concerning the consummation of all things, on the summit of the Mount of Olives; whence He made His ascent into heaven." It is also corroborated by S. Cyril writing at Jerusalem in the fourth century, and Bishop of that city. See on Luke xxiv. 50. So Cassiodor, p. 159.

In pictures of the Ascension, the prints of our Lord's feet are often represented, impressed on the soil of the Mount of Olives.

This tradition is sometimes traced to S. Jerome, and he is quoted as saying (de locis Hebraicis, in Acta, in v. Olivetum), "Ultima vestigia Domini humi impressa hodie cernuntur." This Treatise is not by S. Jerome (he himself is cited in it v. Smyrna); but it is not without its use, as representing the local opinion.

It has indeed been alleged as an objection, that on this supposition the Ascension would have been in sight of Jerusalem.

But this opinion seems to be grounded on a misconception of the nature of our Lord's personal appearances after His resurrection.

When He walked on the public road to Emmaus, He was not recognized even by the two disciples for some time (Luke xxiv. 16). And He Who appeared suddenly on several occasions to the disciples in the city of Jerusalem (John xx. 19. 26), and on the sea-shore in Galilee (xxi. 1), and to more than five hundred brethren at once (1 Cor. xv. 6), so ordered His disappearance at His Ascension, that He made it manifest, "not to all the people, but to witnesses chosen before of God, even to those who did eat and drink with Him after He rose from the dead." (Acts x. 41.)

This opinion that our Lord ascended from the Mount of Olives, at a distance of about six furlongs from Jerusalem, sheds light on other passages of Scripture, and is fraught with spiritual instruction.

David, the type of Christ, wept as he went up the Mount of Olives, when he was rejected and resisted by his own people and son. (2 Sam. xv. 30—32.)

On the Mount of Olives Christ, the Son of David, had wept over Jerusalem. (Luke xix. 41.)

When David came to the top of the Mount of Olives, he worshipped, and sent his friend, Hushai the Archite, back to the city of Jerusalem (2 Sam. xv. 32—37), and Hushai's counsel prevailed over that of Ahitophel, the type of Judas. (2 Sam. xvii. 1—23.)

May there not be here some typical reference to the parting of our Lord from His faithful Apostles in this place?

Dr. Lightfoot says (ii. p. 486), "That place of Mount Olivet, where Christ ascended (viz. that part of the mount where Bethphage ended and Bethany began), was perhaps the very same place mentioned 2 Sam. xv. 32, or certainly not far off, where David in his flight taking leave of the Ark and Sanctuary, looked back and worshipped God; where, if any one would be at the pains to inquire why the Greek interpreters retain the word 'Pōs, Ros, both here and in ch. xvi. 1, ἦν Δαβὶδ ἐρχόμενος ἔως τοῦ Πὼς, and David came unto Ros; and Δαβὶδ παρήλθεν βραχὺ τι ἀπὸ τοῦ Πὼς, and David passed on a little way from Ros, he will find a knot not easy to be untied."

So Lightfoot. But is not the word 'Pōs of the LXX in those passages, the same as the Hebrew word used in both these places, רוֹשׁ, rosh, the head, or summit of the Mount (of Olives)? And was not the summit so called in the popular language?

And if so, then this circumstance seems to increase the probability that our Lord ascended from the summit of that mount.

Again, on the Mount of Olives Christ had predicted the future destruction of Jerusalem (Matt. xxiv. 3), and His own second coming to Judgment (xxiv. 30).

What more suitable than that the scene of suffering should also be the scene of glory purchased by suffering?

What more proper, than that He should ascend in that place, where He had pre-announced His future descent in glory?

The Angels themselves seem to refer to this fitness of place in their address to the Apostles (Acts i. 11), "This same Jesus shall so come, as ye have seen Him go;" and it is worthy of remark, that the voice of Ancient Prophecy points to some future manifestation of the Messiah's glory on the Mount of Olives. (Zech. xiv. 4. Ezek. xi. 23.)

Again; it was from the border of Bethany, and its point of contact with Bethphage on the Mount of Olives (see on Mark xi. 1), that our Lord had begun to ride in triumph, as King and Saviour, into the City of Jerusalem. That triumphal entry seems to have been typical and prophetic. It is an appropriate and beautiful circumstance, that, at that point in the Mount of Olives where He began His triumphal entry into the earthly city, He also began His triumphal journey to the Jerusalem that is above, as King and Saviour of the World, riding on the clouds of heaven.

Hence also we may perhaps recognize the reason why the remarkable term "a Sabbath-day's journey" is used here to describe the distance which the Apostles walked, from what is here specified as the place of the Ascension.

This is the only passage in the New Testament where "a Sabbath-day's journey" is mentioned at all; and it seems surprising at first, that it should be mentioned by St. Luke writing for Gentiles, and should be specified in reference to an event posterior to the Resurrection, when the Jewish seventh-day Sabbath had ceased to be obligatory.

There surely must be therefore some inner meaning in this expression, "a Sabbath-day's journey," used in connexion with that glorious event, the consummation of Christ's earthly ministry, His Ascension into heaven. What can that be?

The Sabbath was a type of that rest, which, after their week λομαῖος καὶ Ματθαῖος, Ἰάκωβος Ἀλφαίου καὶ Σίμων ὁ Ζηλωτὴς, καὶ Ἰούδας Ἰακώβου. ¹⁴ ° Οὗτοι πάντες ἦσαν προσκαρτεροῦντες ὁμοθυμαδὸν τῇ προσευχῇ, ^{o ch. 2. 1. Luke 24. 10. & 23. 49.} σὺν γυναιξὶ καὶ Μαρίας τῇ μητρὶ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, καὶ τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς αὐτοῦ.

of this world's work, remaineth to the people of God, in that place of repose where they rest from their labours (Heb. iv. 9. Rev. xiv. 13), and whence they will pass, by a joyful Resurrection and Ascension, to the heavenly city of the great King.

The return of the Apostles with joy by a Sabbath-day's journey to the earthly Jerusalem from the place of Ascension, whence their Saviour mounted in glory to the heavenly Jerusalem, may be designed to suggest the cheering assurance, that they who contemplate on earth the Ascension of the Lord, and stand looking up steadfastly into heaven, and ascend in heart and mind with Him Who is the Prince of Peace, and continually dwell in spirit with Him there, will pass by a Sabbath-day's journey through the grave and gate of death into the Jerusalem—or City of Peace—that is above, and there enjoy the beatific vision of eternal peace. ["Qui gloriam Domini ad Patrem ascendentis intueri merebitur, hic Sabbati itinere urbem perpetuæ pacis ingreditur." (Bede.)]

13. τὸ ὑπερφῶν] sc. οἴκημα. ὑπερφῶν is properly an adjective (Valek.); not an upper room, but the upper room, τῷ (Vitranga, de Synag. p. 145, and Lightfoot here, p. 638). The definite article points to some place already used as the resort of the Apostles, οὗ ἦσαν καταμένοντες, as is said here. Ancient authorities assert that this was no other than the large ἀνώγειον or upper room (see on Mark xiv. 15), in which our Blessed Lord had celebrated the last Passover, and had instituted the first Eucharist, and where He had appeared on the two successive Sundays after His Resurrection from the dead.

Here it would seem the Apostles were afterwards assembled when the Holy Ghost descended upon them. S. Cyril, Bishop of Jerusalem, affirms (Catech. xvi.) that τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον καθῆλθεν ἐνταῦθα ἐν τῇ Ἱερουσαλὴμ, and that this Upper Room was afterwards called ἡ ἀνωτέρα τῶν ἀποστόλων ἐκκλησία. Cp. S. Jerome, Epist. 86, Ep. Paulæ, and Bede, De locis sanctis, c. 3. Cave, Primitive Christianity, i. 6. Hither the Apostles resorted for prayers, and for the Holy Communion. See note below on Acts ii. 2. 46; v. 42. And so says Bp. Pearson here, "Ibi Ecclesia videtur esse constituta. Nam, ut narrat Epiphanius, lib. de Pond. c. 14, cum Adrianus imperator Hierosolyma adiret, invenit urbem totam funditus eversam, et templum Dei dirutum, παρεκτός δὲ λίγων οἰκημάτων, καὶ τῆς τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐκκλησίας, μικρὰς οὐσίας, quam ibi collocatam asserit, ubi discipuli reversi, cum Salvatore ascendit à Monte Oliveti, ἀνέβησαν εἰς τὸ ὑπερφῶν. Ἐκεῖ γὰρ φιλοδόμητο, τούτῃ ἐστιν ἐν τῷ μέρει Σιών. Nicéphorus etiam tradit, Helenam Constantinii matrem amplissimum in Sione templum erexisse; in cuius postico domum circumcluserit, ubi facta est ἡ τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος καθοδος ἐν τῷ ὑπερφῶν, lib. viii. c. 30."

Therefore this "upper room" on Mount Sion at Jerusalem was the first Church in the world,—the primitive Church of Christendom.

There is one God, and in this one Godhead there is one Father, one Son, and one Holy Ghost; and there is one Church of God from the beginning to the end of the world. Perhaps the continuous unity of the Church was marked by the fact, that the same upper room which had seen the celebration of the last Passover, saw also the administration of the first Eucharist by Christ. And perhaps this unity was displayed further when this same upper room saw the first appearance of the Son of God to His assembled Apostles after His Resurrection on the First Lord's Day; and when this upper room, to which they resorted for prayer to God the Father (see Acts iv. 23, 24), saw also the descent of God the Holy Ghost upon them. See below, ii. 46.

—Ἰωάννης] John. So A, B, C, D. Elz. places James before John. In the three Lists of the Apostles (Matt. x. 2. Mark iii. 16. Luke vi. 14) before the Ascension, James comes before John, and in the two former of them, Andrew comes next to Peter. In the three Lists in the Gospels, Bartholomew comes before Thomas: in both of St. Luke's lists, Simon Zelotes comes before Jude. The only names which occupy the same places in all are,

1. Peter.

5. Philip.

9. James, the son of Alphæus, probably the same as the Lord's Brother. See next note.

—Ἰάκωβος Ἀλφαίου] James the son of Alphæus. It has been inferred by some, that this St. James, the Apostle, was not the 'Lord's brother,' because it is added here that the brethren of the Lord (v. 14) were also present. But James might well be distinguished from the other brethren of the Lord, as Mary is from the other γυναῖκες here, and as Joseph is from the other Patriarchs in vii. 9, and as Peter is from the other Apostles in 1 Cor. ix. 5. See below on xii. 17, and the Introduction to the Epistle of St. James; and the article on St. James in Dr. Wm. Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, 1860.

12. Judas, succeeded by Matthias.

—Σίμων ὁ Ζηλωτὴς] Simon Zelotes. See Matt. x. 4. He is called the Cananite by St. Matthew and St. Mark iii. 18, but Zelotes (the Greek synonym of Cananite) by St. Luke vi. 15, as here; a mark of connexion between the Author of St. Luke's Gospel and the Acts.

This mention of Simon, thus placed between James and Jude, the brother of James, confirms the opinion of some ancient writers, that Simon Zelotes, or the Cananite, was the same as the Simon who is mentioned as one of "the brethren of our Lord" ("James, Simon, and Jude") in Matt. xiii. 55. Mark vi. 3; and therefore that Simon Zelotes is no other than Symeon (which is the same name as Simon, see below, xv. 14. 2 Pet. i. 1), who succeeded his brother James, "the Lord's brother," in the Episcopal See of Jerusalem. See Euseb. (iii. 11, cp. iii. 22), who says that after the death of St. James, the survivors of the Apostles and disciples at Jerusalem met together, and unanimously chose Symeon, the son of Clopas, to be the successor of St. James; this Symeon being a cousin of the Lord (cp. Euseb. iv. 22); for Hegesippus testifies that Clopas, his father, was brother of Joseph. Cp. Euseb. iv. 22, where Clopas is called by Hegesippus θεῖος of Christ. In another place Eusebius (iii. 32) designates this Symeon as a son of the Mary described in the Gospel as wife of Clopas, and asserts that this Symeon, the second Bishop of Jerusalem, suffered martyrdom under Trajan, at the age of 120. Hegesippus also states that several persons of this family were chosen to preside over Churches, on the ground of their relationship to Christ. (Euseb. iii. 20.)

—Ἰούδας Ἰακώβου] Jude, brother of James: cp. Luke vi. 16. Jude 1. Examples of this ellipsis of ἀδελφός, or brother, from profane writers, may be seen in Valek, and Kuin. Cp. Winer, G. G. p. 171.

Doubtless the words Ἰούδας Ἰακώβου might mean Jude, son of James; but it is not probable that James would have had a son old enough to be an Apostle; and the context must determine how the ellipse is to be supplied; and probably when St. Luke published the Acts, most Christians knew what the relationship between James and Jude was. See below, the Introduction to St. Jude's Epistle.

14. προσκαρτεροῦντες] One of the words often repeated in the Acts in relation to Church communion, and declaring its duties and privileges. Here the duty prescribed is perseverance and steadfastness in Christian faith and worship. See ii. 42. 46; vi. 4. Cp. Rom. xii. 12.

—ὁμοθυμαδόν] With one heart and soul. The Holy Spirit writing by St. Luke, is constantly inculcating this word in this history of the Primitive Church. He applies it to the Apostles here; to the 120 (ii. 1), to the whole body of believers (ii. 46). Cp. iv. 24; v. 12; xv. 25, and Rom. xv. 6.

He thus reminds all future generations, that maintenance of Unity of Pastors among themselves, and of Pastors and People, is the duty of each and all, and is the characteristic of the Church. It was a fruit of Christ's doctrine (John xv. 12) and prayer (xvii. 21), and of His legacy (xiv. 27), and of His breathing upon them (xx. 22), and was matured by the descent of the Holy Ghost.

On ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ, see v. 15.

—τῇ προσευχῇ] Elz. adds, καὶ τῇ δεήσει, which is not in A, B, C, D, E, H, nor in the Vulgate, Syriac, and other Versions.

Another note of connexion with St. Luke's Gospel. See on Luke v. 16.

—σὺν γυναιξί] with the women. A remarkable notice; in the Jewish Temple, the Women were not admitted to worship God together with men, but were parted off into a separate court (Joseph. Ant. xv. 11. 5), "the Court of the Women;" and in the Synagogues also the women were separated from the men (Philo, ii. 476). But in Christ Jesus, Who is the Woman's Seed, "there is neither male nor female" (Gal. iii. 28), and the wall of separation is broken down. The women here assembled with the disciples, were probably Mary Magdalene, Salome, Joanna, and Susanna, and others mentioned in Luke viii. 2, 3; xxiii. 49. 55; xxiv. 10.

—Μαρία] Mary. "Propter excellentiam distinguitur à cæteris." (Valek.) In the Gospels the blessed Virgin Mary is not mentioned as accompanying Christ from place to place with His p Ps. 41. 10.

John 13. 18.
& 13. 3.

q Matt. 27. 5.
& 26. 15.

¹⁵ Καὶ ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ταύταις ἀναστὰς Πέτρος ἐν μέσῳ τῶν ἀδελφῶν εἶπεν, ἦν τε ὄχλος ὀνομάτων ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ ὡς ἑκατὸν ἑκοσίαν, ¹⁶ ἂνδρες ἀδελφοί, ἔδει πληρωθῆναι τὴν γραφὴν, ἣν προεῖπε τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον διὰ στόματος Δαυὶδ περὶ Ἰούδα τοῦ γενομένου ὁδηγοῦ τοῖς συλλαβοῦσι τὸν Ἰησοῦν ¹⁷ ὅτι κατηριθμημένος ἦν ἐν ἡμῖν, καὶ ἔλαχε τὸν κλῆρον τῆς διακονίας ταύτης.

¹⁸ Ὁὗτος μὲν οὖν ἐκτήσατο χωρίον ἐκ μισθοῦ τῆς ἀδικίας, καὶ πρηνὴς γενόμενος ἐλάκησε μέσος, καὶ ἐξεχύθη πάντα τὰ σπλάγχνα αὐτοῦ. ¹⁹ καὶ γνωστὸν Apostles; and this is the last place where her name occurs in Holy Scripture.

The Holy Spirit takes leave of her here, associated with the Apostolic company of worshippers in the Upper Room at Jerusalem. She is one of those who there continue steadfast in prayer. How unlike the spirit and language of the Holy Ghost is that will-worship, which takes her out of that holy fellowship of prayer, and makes her an object of adoration!

In recent times the blessed Virgin is often represented in Paintings as present at the Ascension; but Arator, writing at Rome in the sixth century, in his poetical Version of the Acts, addressed to Pope Vigilius, speaks of her as waiting at Jerusalem for the return of the Apostles from the Mount of Olives, v. 55:

"Moenia nota petunt, quā tunc statione sedebat Porta Maria Dei, Genetrix intacta Creantis
A Nato formata suo."

¹⁵ ἀδελφῶν] So A, B, C. Elz. μαθητῶν.
— ὀνομάτων] names. A Hebraism for persons. Vorst. de Hebr. p. 350. Cp. Rev. ii. 13; iii. 4, and West. here. But it may have a deeper Christian sense: see on iv. 36.

— ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό] together; at the same place and time. A favourite expression with the Author of the Acts, and like δμοθυμαδόν, a note of Church-unity (see v. 14), a watchword of the Church, and of every faithful member of it. See below, ii. 1, δμοθυμαδὸν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό. ii. 44, ἦσαν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό. Cp. on ii. 47. Hence Ignat. ad Magnes. 7, ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ μία προσευχή, μία δέησις, εἰς νοῦς, μία ἐλπίς, ἐν ἀγάπῃ. Clemens Romanus, i. 34, ἡμεῖς ἐν ὁμονοίᾳ ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ συναχθέντες.

¹⁶ ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί] On this speech, see S. Iren. iii. 12.

¹⁷ ὅτι] because He was their ὁδηγός, or leader; because being one of us "he knew the place" (John xviii. 2) where, and the time when, He might be taken; and because it had been prophesied that one of His familiar friends should betray Christ. Ps. xli. 9.

— ἐν ἡμῖν] Elz. has σὺν ἡμῖν. But ἐν is in A, B, C, D, E, H, and in Vulg., Syriac, and other Versions, and is more expressive. He was not only numbered with us, but in us, i. e. in our Apostolic body.

— ἔλαχε τὸν κλῆρον] He calls it a lot (see below, v. 26), because it was not by their own desert, but by God's grace that they were called to their office. (Chrys.) Hence the word Clerus, or Clergy. See Vales. in Euseb. vi. 43.

The Acts of the Apostles, if we may so speak, prepared a Christian Onomasticon, or Vocabulary for the Church, e. g. in its use of the words ἐπισκοπή, v. 20, πρεσβύτεροι, χριστιανοί, and others.

¹⁸ ἐκτήσατο] he was the moving cause of the purchase (see Gregor. Moral. i. c. 9). It has been alleged by some recent Expositors, that this statement is at variance with Matt. xxvii. 6—8, where it is said that the Chief Priests purchased the field with thirty pieces of silver; and that St. Luke could not have been acquainted with St. Matthew's Gospel, or he would not have inserted this statement. But the fact is, that St. Luke's assertion is in harmony with St. Matthew's, and is supplementary to it.

The Holy Spirit in Scripture is wont to trace human actions to their first causes; and to treat the principal agents as accountable for the whole transaction, though done, as Scripture itself records, by the instrumentality of others.

This is what might be expected in divine history; and there is a solemn moral lesson in it.

Thus in this book the Jews are four times said to have crucified Jesus (Acts ii. 23 and 36, and iv. 10 and v. 30), though they could not put any one to death (John xviii. 31); but they are said to have crucified Him, because they used the instrumentality of Pilate for that purpose. Thus Pilate is said to have scourged Jesus (John xix. 1), and Joseph to have hewn a tomb (Matt. xxvii. 60), and Christ to have baptized disciples (John iv. 1), though they only caused these things to be done. Thus also (vii. 9) the Patriarchs are said to have sold Joseph into Egypt, though they had no intention that he should go there. Thus the Jews are even said to have laid Christ in the tomb (xiii. 29), though this was only a consequence in which they took no part, of His death, which was not inflicted by them, but by a heathen power, at their instance.

If such modes of speech as these—and others that could be adduced—are considered, it will hardly be denied, that Judas, who received the thirty pieces of silver, and who returned them to the Chief Priests, and, as it were, forced them upon them by throwing them down in the Temple (Matt. xxvii. 5), was the cause and prime mover of the purchase of the field, which was bought with that sum; and that he may be said to have been its purchaser.

It cannot be rightly argued, that there is a discrepancy here between the two Evangelists, and that one of them is in error; and that St. Luke was not acquainted with St. Matthew's statement, because he does not repeat it. It might as well be inferred, that St. Luke, or the Apostles, or those whose speeches he is recording, were not acquainted with the facts of the Crucifixion itself, because we read in the Acts that the Jews crucified Jesus, and laid Him in a tomb; or that St. Luke in writing the Acts did not remember what he himself had said in his "former treatise," his Gospel, because he does not repeat his own words concerning the same events, but adds some new incidents to his narrative: e. g. with regard to the Ascension.

Rather, he thus shows the independence of his own testimony.

It may also be conjectured with probability, that Judas might in other respects be regarded as the purchaser of the field;

For, it is evident from St. Matthew's account (xxvii. 5), that as soon as he had cast down the thirty pieces in the Temple he went and hanged himself;

It appears also from St. Peter's speech here (Acts i. 19), that the field was the place of his death: see on v. 19;

And the Field was purchased after his death (Matt. xxvii. 6).

It is remarkable, that a field in the neighbourhood of a great City, which was to serve as a Public Cemetery, should have been purchaseable for so small a sum as thirty pieces of silver, or shekels, i. e. for less than five pounds;

How is this to be explained? Probably from the circumstance intimated by St. Peter, that it had been polluted by the horrible death of Judas; whence it was called Aeldama; and that it was regarded with a feeling of execration on that account. Hence also it was, that when purchased for this paltry sum, it was applied to an unclean use, i. e. to be a burial-place; a burial-place for ξένοι, strangers, heathens, unclean persons, whom the Jews would not admit into their cemeteries.

It might well be said then, that in this sense, by defiling it, Judas had been instrumental in the purchase of the field; he had made it unavailable for any other than an unclean use, and had rendered it purchaseable by the Chief Priests for the miserable sum of thirty pieces of silver, which he had received from them as the wages of iniquity, and had then thrown back in remorse into their hands.

See below, vii. 9; xiii. 29, and Whitby's note here; and above on Matt. viii. 5.

— ἐκ μισθοῦ] So A, B, C, D, E, H. Elz. τοῦ μισθοῦ.

— πρηνὴς γενόμενος] falling on his face, "pronus in faciem prolapsus. πρηνής, ἐπὶ πρόσωπον." (Hezych.) ἐπὶ στόματος. (Phavorin.)

Judas, the betrayer of Christ, was prefigured in the manner of his death, i. e. hanging, by Ahitophel the traitor, and Absalom the rebel against David. (Beke.)

— ἐλάκησε μέσος] he burst asunder in the midst; after he had hanged himself. St. Matthew says clearly (xxvii. 5), ἀπηγγέσατο, he hanged himself; the same word as is used by the Septuagint in 2 Sam. xvii. 23 to describe the death of Ahitophel. Ahitophel was a type of Judas in his nearness to David's person, in his treachery, and in his death. And the word used to describe Ahitophel's death by the LXX may serve to remove the supposed ambiguities with regard to the manner of the death of his antitype Judas. See on Matt. xxvii. 5, where Kuin. after Weststein (p. 459) and Valck. (p. 324), well says, "Locus Matthæi ἐγένετο πᾶσι τοῖς κατοικοῦσιν Ἱερουσαλήμ, ὥστε κληθῆναι τὸ χωρίον ἐκεῖνο τῇ ἰδίᾳ διαλέκτῳ αὐτῶν Ἀκελδαμά· τουτέστι χωρίον αἵματος· ²⁰ γέγραπται γὰρ ἐν βίβλῳ Ψαλμῶν, Γεννηθήτω ἡ ἔπαυλις αὐτοῦ ἔρημος, καὶ μὴ ἔστω ὁ κατοικῶν ἐν αὐτῇ· καὶ, Τὴν ἐπισκοπὴν αὐτοῦ λαβέτω ἔτερος. ²¹ Δεῖ οὖν τῶν συνελθόντων ἡμῖν ἀνδρῶν ἐν παντὶ χρόνῳ ἐν ᾧ εἰσῆλθε καὶ ἐξῆλθεν ἐφ' ἡμᾶς ὁ Κύριος Ἰησοῦς, ²² ἀρξάμενος ἀπὸ τοῦ βαπτίσματος Ἰωάννου ἕως τῆς ἡμέρας ἧς ἀνελήφθη ἀφ' ἡμῶν, μάρτυρα τῆς ἀναστάσεως αὐτοῦ σὺν ἡμῖν γενέσθαι ἕνα τούτων.

²³ Καὶ ἔστησαν δύο, Ἰωσήφ τὸν καλούμενον Βαρσαβάν, ὃς ἐπεκλήθη Ἰούστος, cum loco Lucæ facillimè potest componi, si statuitur, Matthæum exposuisse mortis genus, Lucam verò attigisse ejus eventum. Judas ægritudine animi commotus, laqueo sibi mortem conscivit (ἀπήγγαστο), laqueo autem, sive pendentis corporis Judæ gravitate, sive aliâ quâcunque de causâ disrupto, ex altiore loco, à rupe, præceps ac pronus delapsus est, ita, ut diffiso corpore, intestina diffusa sint. Apuleius Met. i. p. 12, ascenso grabatulo ad exitum sublimatus immisso capite laqueum induo; sed dum pede altero fulcimentum, quo sustinebar, repello, ut ponderis deductu restis ad ingluviem adstricta spiritus officia discluderet, repente putris aliqui et vetus funis rumpitur, atque ego de alto decedens in terram devolvor." Cp. Cholin, f. 56 (ap. Wetstein), "Aræmus quidam vidit hominem qui de tecto in plateam decidit, et ruptas est ejus venter, et viscera ejus effluerunt." Meyer says (p. 30) that St. Luke is at variance with St. Matthew, and "follows another tradition, according to which Judas did not destroy himself." Others (Strauss and Zeller), on the plea of this alleged discrepancy, deny the fact of his death altogether!

With this account in the speech of St. Peter compare the narrative of the death of Judas by Papias, the contemporary of the Apostles, and Bishop of Hierapolis, in the fragment preserved by Theophylact (pp. 16. 195. Æcumen. p. 11), and in Cramer's Catena, p. 12, where Apollinarius says, οὐκ ἐναπέθανεν τῇ ἀρχοντὶ Ἰούδας, ἀλλ' ἐπεβίω, καθαιρεθεὶς πρὸ τοῦ ἀποπνιγῆναι; and he then introduces the relation under the name of Papias (cp. Routh, R. S. i. p. 9), which explains St. Peter's words, πρηνὴς γενόμενος ἐλάκησε μέσος, by the πρηγὸς and ὄγκωσις of the body, and which states that Judas died in his own field, ἐν ἰδίῳ χωρίῳ.

Cp. also the lines of Arator :—

"Mercedem sceleris solvit sibi, tædia vitæ
Horruit ipse suæ, stringens in gutture vocem;
Aëris in medio, cœlo terræque perosus
Inter utrumque perit —
Viscera rupta cadunt nullis condenda sepulchris."

On the death of the hæresiarach Arius as compared with that of Judas, see Athanas, Ep. ad Serapion. vol. i. § 3, p. 270.

19. Ἱερουσαλήμ] See above, i. 4.

— Ἀκελδαμά] Akel-dama. Syr. [ܐܬܪܐ ܕܥܡܪܐ] Chald. ܐܬܪܐ ܕܥܡܪܐ ager cædis, ἀγρὸς αἵματος, Matt. xviii. 8. (Kuin.) A. B have ἀκελδαμάχ (D has ἀκελδαμάχ), and so Lach, Tisch, Alf.

It was called "field of blood" for a double reason,
As bought with the price of blood, Matt. xxvii. 8.
As sprinkled with the blood of him who took that price.

It was near Mount Sion, to the south side of it. (Jerome, de locis Hebr.) Cp. Routh, R. S. i. 24. Robinson, Palestine, i. 524. Winer, i. 188. It would therefore be near the valley of Hinnom. S. Chrys. (on v. 26) observes that this name was given by the Jews, by a providential dispensation from God: ὠνόμασαν αὐτὸν, οὐκ εἰδότες, καθάπερ Καϊάφας προεφῆτευσεν, οὐκ εἰδώς.

20. γέγραπται γάρ] for it is written. This citation is from two Psalms, lxi. 25, cix. 8, and almost verbatim from the LXX Version used by the Hellenistic Jews, for whom, as well as for Gentile converts, St. Luke specially wrote, and has been well harmonized with the original Hebrew by Surenhusius, p. 383.

The only notable variation is αὐτοῦ for αὐτῶν.

This substitution of αὐτοῦ for αὐτῶν may be explained from St. Peter's own words, that Judas was leader to those who took Jesus, v. 16. In a word, Ἰούδας, the false Apostle who betrayed his Master to death, stands forth as the representative of the faithless Ἰουδαῖοι. His end is a type of theirs. What the Messiah, the King and Judge of all men, pronouncing a divine sentence by the mouth of the Psalmist¹ (Ps. cxix. 5—7; lxix. 22—

29. Cp. lix. 11—15), imprecates on him, He imprecates on them; and the death of their leader is a warning to those who were led by him, what their destruction will be, unless they repent. In Judas the Holy Spirit sees the Jewish nation personified; and finally, Jerusalem herself, because she would not repent, became an Aceldama, or field of blood.

— ἔπαυλις] a sheep-cote. An allusion to the pastoral office of Judas. "ἔπαυλις respondet Hebraico nomini πῆρ which proprie domum pastorilium cum stabulo significat, deinde verò etiam de castello et domicilio quocunque adhiberi solet: v. Michælis Supplem. ad Lexx. Hebr. p. 1011 sqq. Hesych.: ἔπαυλις, μάνδρα βοῶν, ἡ οἴκημα, ἡ αὐλή, ἡ στρατοπέδία, καὶ ἡ ποιμενικὴ αὐλή." (Kuin.)

— ἐπισκοπὴν] bishop-ric, overseer-ship. πῆρ inspectionem, visitationem (Numb. iv. 16; xvi. 29. Isa. x. 3. Jer. x. 15); and so prepared by the use of the LXX Version to designate the Episcopal office (τὴν ἱερωσύνην, Chrys.), in which Matthias succeeded to Judas. Cp. 1 Tim. iii. 1. Clem. Rom. i. 42. 44.

The same may be said of the word κλῆρος, clerus, as used here, vv. 17. 25, 26 (see note there), as a preparation for its application to the Ministers or Clergy of the Church.

We may observe here the purpose of Almighty God in having prepared a Greek Version, i. e. the LXX, made by Jews themselves, of the Old Testament Scriptures, for the use of the Apostles and Evangelists in adopting names for the regimen and officers of the Church, and in disseminating the Gospel throughout the world.

— λαβέτω] So A, B, C, D. Elz. λάβοι.

21. ὁ Κύριος Ἰησοῦς] the Lord Jesus. This word Κύριος = Lord, Jehovah (see on v. 6 and ii. 36), applied to Christ, the Lord of the world, and Head of the Κυριακή, or Church, ever regulating her affairs by His Spirit, and maintaining her cause by His Power from His Throne in heaven,—may be regarded as the Key-note to the History of the Acts of the Apostles.

He it is who chooses Matthias in place of Judas (i. 24). He sends the Holy Ghost to His Church (ii. 33—35). He adds believers to her daily (ii. 47). He works Miracles by the hands of His Apostles (iii. 6; iv. 10). To Him St. Stephen prays at the hour of death (vii. 59, 60). He calls Saul with a voice from heaven (ix. 5). He sends Ananias to baptize him (ix. 10. 15). He sends Peter to Cornelius (x. 4. 14. 36). His Angel delivers Peter and destroys Herod (xii. 7. 23). He calls Paul to Macedonia (xvi. 9, 10). He comforts Paul at Jerusalem (xxiii. 11). And, finally, the book closes with the declaration, that Paul preaches at Rome, the heathen capital of the world, "the things concerning the LORD JESUS" (xxviii. 31).

22. ἀρξάμενος] having begun. See v. 1, and Luke xxiii. 5. Winer, p. 547.

— μάρτυρα τῆς ἀναστάσεως] a witness of His resurrection. Because this was the question at issue,—Is Christ risen from the dead? All other things in His history were manifest; this was more private, and known comparatively to a few, and it was to be believed and confessed by all. (Chrys.)

23. καὶ ἔστησαν δύο] And they set out two, apart from the rest. Our Lord did not supply the place of Judas, when He was on earth, but left that place vacant at His Ascension, and to be supplied after it; and He did supply it from heaven, in answer to their prayer to Him as God. See vv. 24—26: "Show whom Thou hast chosen." "The lot was cast into the lap, but the disposing thereof was of the Lord." (Prov. xvi. 33.)

Thus He educated them in the fundamental doctrine of Church polity, viz. that the Church is ruled and protected by Him,—not visibly present in body, but sitting on His Royal Throne, in power and glory, at the right hand of God.

¹ This, as S. Augustine has already shown (see his Serm. 22, where he refers to St. Peter's speech), is the true view of the maledictions in the Psalms. They are not curses pronounced by David or by any man, in his own person, but they are Prophetic Comminations, Judicial Sentences, uttered by the Great God and Judge of all—Christ; they are rehearsals of the Sentence of the Great Day; and as such they are evidences of the Inspiration of the Psalms.

† 1 Sam. 16. 7.

καὶ Ματθίαν. ²⁴ Καὶ προσευξάμενοι εἶπαν, Σὺ, Κύριε, καρδιογνώστα πάντων, ἀνάδειξον ὃν ἐξελέξω ἐκ τούτων τῶν δύο ἕνα, ²⁵ λαβεῖν τὸν κλῆρον τῆς διακονίας ταύτης καὶ ἀποστολῆς, ἀφ' ἧς παρέβη Ἰούδας, πορευθῆναι εἰς τὸν τόπον τὸν ἴδιον.

u 1 Chron. 24. 5.

²⁶ Καὶ ἔδωκαν κλήρους αὐτῶν, καὶ ἔπεσεν ὁ κλῆρος ἐπὶ Ματθίαν, καὶ συγκατεψηφίσθη μετὰ τῶν ἑνδεκα ἀποστόλων.

a Lev. 23. 15.
ch. 1. 14.

II. ¹ Καὶ ἐν τῷ συμπληροῦσθαι τὴν ἡμέραν τῆς Πεντηκοστῆς ἦσαν ἅπαντες ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό.

— Ἰουδῆος] Justus. Concerning whom see Euseb. iii. 39.
²⁴ Κύριε] O Lord. This prayer is addressed to Christ. Cp. ἐξελέξω here, and ἐξελέξατο, i. 2. The Apostles are sent by Him. See v. 21.

²⁵ ἀφ' ἧς] So A, B, C, D. Elz. has ἐξ ἧς, but it seems more fitting to say that he went aside from it than out of it.

— εἰς τὸν τόπον τὸν ἴδιον] to his own place. See S. Ignat. ad Magnes. c. 5, ἐπεὶ οὖν τέλος τὰ πράγματα ἔχει, καὶ ἐπικείται τὰ δύο ὁμοῦ, ὃ τε θάνατος καὶ ἡ ζωὴ, καὶ ἕκαστος εἰς τὸν ἴδιον τόπον μέλλει χωρεῖν. So in a good sense St. Peter is said by S. Clement of Rome (i. 5) to have gone, after his labours and martyrdom, εἰς τὸν ὀφειλόμενον τόπον τῆς δόξης. Cp. Polycarp ad Phil. 9, where he speaks of St. Paul and other Christian martyrs: ὅτι οὗτοι πάντες οὐκ εἰς κενὸν ἔδραμον, ἀλλ' ἐν πίστει καὶ δικαιοσύνῃ, καὶ ὅτι εἰς τὸν ὀφειλόμενον αὐτοῖς τόπον εἰσὶ παρὰ τῷ Κυρίῳ, ὃ καὶ συνέπαθον. The Rabbinical writers interpret Numb. xxiv. 25 in a cognate sense: "Balaam ivit in locum suum, i. e. in gehennam. Targum Eccles. vi. 6, Die mortis suae descendit anima ejus in gehennam, in locum unum, quo omnes peccatores abeunt." (Lightfoot, Hor. Hebr. et Talm. ad h. l., and Wetstein here.) And this, though it be perhaps an incorrect exposition, yet shows the meaning conveyed by the phrase to a Jewish ear.

The place of Judas was locus suus, a place of his own proper procurement; devils were not ordained of God for hell-fire, but hell-fire for them. Hooker, Appendix to bk. v. p. 571.

On this text see also Bp. Bull's two Sermons, proving that "the soul subsists after death in a place of abode prepared for it by God, till the Resurrection; and that this middle state of happiness or misery is allotted by God to every man immediately after death, according as he has done good or evil in this life." (Serm. ii. and iii. vol. i. pp. 23—32.)

Against the erroneous notions of a sleep of the soul, and of a purgatory, see above, on Luke xvi. 22.

²⁶ Καὶ ἔδωκαν κλήρους] And they gave lots. For the Holy Spirit was not yet given. While this was so, they committed the matter to lot; but never resorted to it after the day of Pentecost. (Chrys.) They had a precedent in the Scripture of the Old Testament for the use of lots. The Land of Promise was divided by lot (Josh. xiv. 2), and the first king of Israel was chosen by lot (1 Sam. x. 17).

The word Clerus, as applied to the Clergy, appears to have been suggested by the use made of the term in the LXX and in this passage. As Chrys. says on ἔλαχε: "Ἐλαχε τὸν κλῆρον τῆς διακονίας ταύτης" κλῆρον δὲ αὐτὸν καλεῖ δεικνύς τῆς τοῦ Θεοῦ χάριτος τὸ πᾶν ὅν, καὶ ἀναμνηθῆσαν αὐτοὺς τῶν παλαιῶν, ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς αὐτοὺς ἐκκληρώσατο καθέπερ τοὺς Λευῖτας.

Numb. xviii. 24, Vers. LXX: ἐγὼ ἡ μερίς σου καὶ ἡ κληρονομία σου.

"Propterea vocantur Clerici, vel quia de sorte sunt Domini, vel quia Dominus sors, id est pars, Clericorum est." S. Hieron. ad Nepotian. de vitā Clericorum.

κλῆρος, τὸ σύστημα τῶν διακόνων καὶ πρεσβυτέρων. Suidas.

— αὐτῶν] A, B, C have αὐτοῖς, which may be the right reading, and then the sense would be, 'they presented lots to them.' Perhaps they placed in an urn two papers, on one of which the word 'Apostle' was written, and he who drew that lot (τὸν κλῆρον) was numbered with the Eleven.

κλήρους αὐτῶν does not mean 'their lots' (which would have been τοὺς κλήρους), but lots on which their names were written; and if this is the right reading, then it is probable that the names of the two were put into an urn, and he whose name first fell out (ἔπεσε), was elected.

The precise mode, which was here used in the election of Matthias, seems to have been left in uncertainty, that it might not be used as an example for the future ordinations of the Christian Ministry.

— ἔπεσεν] fell, as from an urn. Cp. Levit. xvi. 8. Homer. Il. v. 316. Livy xxi. 42, "ut cuiusque sors exciderat." xxiii. 3, "nominibus in urnam conjectis quod primum forte nomen exciderat." Horat. Carm. iii. 1. 16, "Omne capax movet urna nomen."

— καὶ συγκατεψηφίσθη] and he (Matthias) was numbered with the eleven Apostles. An important text, as showing the equality of Matthias (chosen by Christ after the Ascension) to Peter, and to any other of the rest of the Apostles, chosen by Christ on earth; and showing also the equality of the several eleven Apostles among themselves. This principle of Apostolic equality was still further extended in the Second Apostolic Ordination mentioned in the Acts,—the Ordination of Barnabas and Saul. See note below on xiii. 1—3.

CH. II. 1. ἐν τῷ συμπληροῦσθαι τ. ἡ.] when the day of Pentecost, or the Fiftieth, was being filled up, as the complement to the forty-nine, which were counted from the morrow of the day of unleavened bread. Cp. Luke xi. 51, ἐν τῷ συμπληροῦσθαι τὰς ἡμέρας τῆς ἀναλήψεως αὐτοῦ. St. Luke is the only one of the writers of the New Test. who uses the word συμπληροῦν.

As to the day on which the Holy Ghost was given, it is to be observed,

(1) That after forty-nine days from the sixteenth day of Abib or Nisan had passed, the next day was the Feast of Pentecost, or Fiftieth. (Jahn, Archæol. § 354.)

(2) This is clear from the texts of Scripture (Levit. xxiii. 15, 16. Numb. xxviii. 26. Deut. xvi. 9), as explained by Jewish writers, especially Josephus, Antiq. iii. 10. 5: τῇ δευτέρᾳ τῶν Ἀζύμων ἡμέρᾳ, ἕκτη δ' ἐστὶν αὕτη (cp. Levit. xxiii. 6) καὶ δεκάτῃ τοῦ μηνὸς ὃς Νισὰν παρ' ἡμῶν καλεῖται, τῶν καρπῶν οὓς ἐθέρισαν μεταλαμβάνουσι . . . θύουσι δ' ἐπὶ ταῖς ἀπαρχαῖς τῶν καρπῶν ἄρνιον εἰς δλοκαύτωσιν τῷ Θεῷ· ἐβδόμῃς δὲ ἐβδομάδος διαγεννημένης μετὰ ταύτην τὴν θυσίαν, αὐταὶ δ' εἰσὶν αἱ τῶν ἐβδομάδων ἡμέραι τεσσαράκοντα καὶ ἑνέα, τῇ Πεντηκοστῇ προσάγουσι τῷ Θεῷ ἄρτον.

(3) The counting of the forty-nine days began from the end of the sixteenth of Nisan. See R. Solomon in Lightfoot, i. p. 746, and Maimonides quoted by Whitby (in loc.).

(4) Hence, therefore, in the year of our Lord's Passion, we have the following calendar of days (cp. Lightfoot, i. p. 748, and ii. p. 642):

Thursday, XIVth Day of the Month Nisan, Christ institutes the Holy Eucharist.

Friday, XVth Day of Nisan, He is crucified.

Saturday, XVIth Day of Nisan, He rests in the Grave.

Sunday, XVIIth Day of Nisan, He rises from the Dead.

From the end of Saturday, the XVth Day of Nisan, forty-nine days are counted; and the Fiftieth, or Feast of Pentecost, falls on a Sunday. And it was the universal belief of the ancient Christian Church, that the Holy Ghost came down from heaven on the same day of the week as that on which our Lord arose from the dead, viz. the First Day of the week.

These particulars are to be noted, because in modern times some have been found to deny that our Lord was crucified on a Friday, or that the day of His Crucifixion was the XVth of Nisan, or that the Holy Spirit descended on the Lord's Day.

It may be inquired,—

Why was the Holy Spirit given at the Feast of Pentecost? And why at this particular Feast of Pentecost?

(1) Because Pentecost was the Feast on which two loaves of common leavened bread were offered (Levit. xxiii. 17—20). The corn sown was ripened and made into bread. And now in Christ, who is the Bread of Life, the corn which had fallen into the ground and was risen, had reached its perfect maturity.

Also, the Feast of Pentecost was the ingathering of the Harvest; and now the Holy Spirit would enable the Apostles to gather from the Field, "which is the World," the spiritual harvest, of which the seed had been sown by Moses, the Prophets, and by Christ. Now the sickle was to be put to the corn of the spiritual harvest of souls by the Apostolic reapers, who were to gather them in sheaves, and consecrate them to God.

(2) Because the Law, graven in tables of stone, had been given at that time on Mount Sinai (Exod. xix. 1, 2), and it

² ^b Καὶ ἐγενετο ἄφνω ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἦχος, ὥσπερ φερομένης πνοῆς βιαίας, ^b ch. 4. 31.
καὶ ἐπλήρωσεν ὅλον τὸν οἶκον οὗ ἦσαν καθήμενοι. ³ ^c Καὶ ὤφθησαν αὐτοῖς ^c Matt. 3. 11.
διαμεριζόμενοι γλῶσσαι ὥσπερ πυρὸς, ἐκάθισέ τε ἐφ' ἓνα ἕκαστον αὐτῶν. ⁴ ^d Καὶ ^d ch. 1. 5.
^e 19. 6.
^f Mark 16. 17.
^g 1 Cor. 12. 10.

was fitting that the new Law should be written on the fleshy tables of the hearts of the Disciples (Jer. xxxi. 33. 2 Cor. iii. 3. Heb. viii. 10) at the same time on Mount Sion, from which it was to come forth; and that it might be understood that the Law and the Gospel are from the same Divine Author. (Severian, Theophyl.) See on i. 4.

"Supputemus numerum (says Jerome, de xlii. Mansion. Mans. xii. vol. ii. p. 593), et inveniemus quinquagesimā die egressionis ex Ægypto in vertice montis Sinai Legem datam. Unde et Pentecostes celebratur solemnitas, et postea Evangelii Sacramentum Spiritūs Sancti descensione completur—et divisio linguarum credentium totus Evangelicā prædicatione mundus impletur."

This calculation is authorized by the Jewish doctors of the Law: see the rabbinical authorities in Wetstein, p. 461. It is not indeed expressly said in Holy Scripture that the feast of Pentecost coincided with, and commemorated, the giving of the Law on Mount Sinai; but the calculations grounded on Scripture, and the testimonies of the most learned Jews, and the consent of the ancient Christian Church, authorize that opinion: and it is remarkable, that one of the noblest prophecies of Holy Scripture itself, predicting the Gift of Tongues at Pentecost, connects that Gift with the giving of the Law on Mount Sinai. Let the reader peruse that prophecy, the Sixty-eighth Psalm (one of the Proper Psalms appointed for Whitsunday), and he will see that those two gifts seem to be there joined together in the mind of the Holy Ghost. God so ordered events, that the principal seasons of dispensing Evangelical blessings (e. g. in the Death and Resurrection of Christ and Descent of the Holy Ghost) coincided with those times, in which the Legal benefits, most resembling and representing them, were bestowed and commemorated; and thus He made the Law to be preparatory to the Gospel; and showed the harmony of both. Cp. Dr. Barrow, Sermon on Acts ii. 38, vol. iii. p. 473.

(3) Because the Feast of Pentecost was the first great Feast following after the Passover; and because it was fitting, that the vast numbers of people who were at Jerusalem at the Passover (about two millions and a half; see Whiston's note on Josephus, vi. 9. 3), and saw or heard of the Crucifixion of Christ (Luke xxiv. 18), might also see the glorious and triumphant manifestation of His Exaltation and power, in the descent of the Holy Ghost. (Chrys., Severus ap. Theophyl.) And thus on their return to their several countries, the Pilgrim Tribes of the Law became Preachers of the Gospel.

(4) Because the Law had been given to the Israelites on Mount Sinai, at the season (afterwards called Pentecost) next following the first Passover, which commemorated their Deliverance from Egypt, and prefigured the universal Redemption by Christ. And it was fitting that the Christian Law, which was to be written, not on tables of stone, but on the fleshy tables of the heart, by the finger of the Holy Ghost (Severian), should be given at the Pentecost next following the completion of the work of Redemption by the Sacrifice of the True Passover, which is Christ.

(5) The name itself, πεντηκοστή, the Fiftieth, might suggest the name of Jubilee, which was significant of the preaching of "the acceptable year of the Lord." And on this Fiftieth Day the Holy Spirit anointed the Church, Christ's mystical Body, to preach that acceptable year to the world (see Aug. Epist. cxix. and Jerome, in Mens. xii.), "sicut priori populo,—quinquagesimo die, vero Jubileo et vero anno remissionis Lex data est, in Apostolos quoque descendit Spiritus Sanctus."

Cp. Bp. Andrewes, Sermons, iii. p. 111, on Acts ii. 1—4.

(6) Besides, this was the first great Festival after Christ's Ascension to Heaven, and it was fitting that, according to the sure word of Prophecy (Ps. lxxviii. 18), the great event of His triumphant Inauguration in glory, of His Coronation in His glorified Humanity, and of His Enthronization at God's right hand in Heavenly places, should be solemnized and celebrated by public manifestations on earth, of royal bounty, and spiritual largesses to His Church, proving His Ascension, and verifying His own word to His Apostles (John xvi. 7. Acts ii. 33).

Cp. Bp. Andrewes, pp. 226, 227, and Barrow's Whitsunday Sermon, iii. pp. 473—494.

(7) Because Seven is the number of perfection; and when Seven times seven days had been completed, then came the fulness of Christ's power in the Holy Ghost (Greg. Naz. Or. xli. pp. 732—734). He came personally in His first Advent, after seven times seventy years from the command to rebuild Jeru- salem (Dan. ix. 24—27). And now He comes in the power of the Spirit, after seven times seven Days from the day of restoration, by His own death and burial in the grave.

It is observable that in this year, the fifteenth of Nisan fell on a Friday, the day on which Man had been first created; and so man was created in the first Adam, and restored in the Second Adam, on the same day of the week. The Resurrection, which according to types and prophecies was to be the third day after the Passion, took place on the first day of the week; the day on which God said, "Let there be light" (Gen. i. 4, 5). And the Feast of Pentecost in this year fell also on the First Day of the week. And thus the First Day of the week has been consecrated to all the Three Persons of the Ever-blessed and Undivided Trinity (FATHER, SON, and HOLY GHOST); and the blessings of Creation, Redemption, and Sanctification are commemorated on the Christian Sunday.

On this text see Greg. Nazian. Orat. xl. Sermones, p. 733. Leo M., Sermones, lxxii.—lxxv. S. Aug., Sermones, pp. 266—270, and Appendix, pp. 182—187. Bp. Andrewes, Sermons, "On the Sending of the Holy Ghost," vol. iii. pp. 107. 130. 221. 301.

—ἅπαντες] stronger than πάντες.—ἅπαντες in his libris universos nemine excepto designat; πάντες sepè tantum plerosque." (Valck.)—πάντες ἀντὶ τοῦ πλείστοι. (Hesych.) —ὁμοθυμαδὸν] with one accord. They were prepared to receive the Spirit of unity, by unity of heart, unity of time, and unity of place.

—ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ] together; unto the same place at the same time. Perhaps because it was the Lord's Day. (Lightfoot.) The place is called οἶκος: a conclave, v. 2. In one οἶκος there are many οἶκοι. S. Cyril, Bp. of Jerusalem, states that the place in which the Holy Ghost descended on the Apostles, was the large apartment which afterwards was converted into a Church (Catech. xvi. 4), well known in his day, probably the ὑπερῶν mentioned i. 13, in which our Blessed Lord before His Crucifixion ate the Passover, and had instituted the Holy Eucharist; and in which, after His Resurrection, He had appeared on two successive Sundays to His Apostles. See note above on i. 13, and Greg. Nazian. in Caten.

If it had been, as some have supposed, a chamber in the Temple, St. Luke would hardly have failed to mention that circumstance; and it does not seem likely that the use of an οἶκος in the Temple would have been conceded to the Apostles by the Priests. Indeed, after the Sacrifice of Christ on the Cross, and the rending of the Veil, the Christian Church had become the Temple of God; and it is not probable that any spiritual dispensation, such as the outpouring of the Holy Ghost, would be connected with the material Temple at Jerusalem.

As Chrys. says, the οἶκος, in which they were assembled, may be regarded as typical of the universal Church, which is illumined by the Holy Spirit in the Gospel, and which was humble and private in its primitive state, but afterwards spread itself from the ὑπερῶν at Jerusalem throughout the world; and by its instrumentality the graces of the Holy Ghost, which are poured forth on the Apostles, flow down as it were from one heavenly source, by the streams of those different nations, which were assembled at the Day of Pentecost, and thence returned to their own homes; and so diffuse themselves in all parts of the earth, and irrigate and fertilize the world.

2. ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἦχος—πνοῆς] The sound was from heaven, the place whence the Spirit came. The wind showed His power and vehemence, and reminded them of the wonders of Sinai at the delivery of the Law. Cp. Bp. Andrewes, p. 118.

—τὸν οἶκον] the chamber. See on v. 1, and below on v. 46, κατ' οἶκον. It must have been a large apartment, as it seems to have held 120 persons (cp. i. 13. 15; ii. 1). They were all assembled there early (see v. 15), either by a previous direction from Christ, or by some special intimation, or because it was the First Day of the week, when they met for public worship. They there remained in an attitude of expectation, sitting.

3. διαμεριζόμεναι—ἐκάθισε] The Tongues of Fire parted themselves off like streams from one source; or like branches from one root (Chrys.), and distributed themselves among them.

See St. Luke's use of διαμερίζω, Acts ii. 45. Luke xxiii. 34, and St. Paul's words, 1 Cor. xii. 4—11, διαίρεσις χαρισμάτων, and πάντα ταῦτα ἐνεργεῖ τὸ ἐν καὶ τὸ αὐτὸ Πνεῦμα, διαίρου ἰδίᾳ ἐκάστω, and Heb. ii. 4, Πνεύματος ἁγίου μερισμοίς.

Also the Tongues rested on the head of each. Hence the singular number ἐκάθισε (cp. Valck. and Winer, § 58, p. 458), showing that these gifts were from one Spirit, and that they were ἐπλήσθησαν ἅπαντες Πνεύματος ἁγίου, καὶ ἤρξαντο λαλεῖν ἑτέροις γλώσσαις, καθὼς τὸ Πνεῦμα ἐδίδου ἀποφθέγγεσθαι αὐτοῖς.

not to be a mere transitory boon, but an abiding presence. Christ ascended up on high and gave gifts to men, that the Lord God might dwell among them. (Ps. lxxviii. 18.)

They had

(1) Tongues given them, that they might preach.

(2) Of Fire, that they might do it with power.

(3) The Tongues were distributed among them, that none might envy the other, and none exalt himself over the other, and that each of them might do his part in edifying the whole.

(4) The tongues sat on the head of each of them, that each might do that work constantly, especially by means of the Word of God.

Hence, when a Bishop is ordained, the Gospel, which is the Tongue of Fire of the Spirit, is laid on his head. Theophylact.

— ἕφ' ἑνα ἕ.] upon every one of them. " Cp. omnino ἐπὶ super Joh. i. 32, 33." (Bengel.) Thus the inauguration of the Apostles by the Holy Ghost resembled that of Christ. Matt. iii. 16.

On whom did the Holy Ghost come? S. Aug. (in Joann. xcii.) says, " Venit in die Pentecostes Sanctus Spiritus in centum viginti homines congregatos, in quibus et Apostoli omnes erant, qui illo impleti linguis omnium gentium loquebantur." So Chrys.: " Other believers besides the Apostles received the Holy Ghost, enabling them to speak with tongues. But the Apostles alone appear to have been endued with the power of conveying to others the gift of the Holy Ghost, enabling them to speak with tongues." See viii. 18.

4. ἤρξαντο λαλεῖν ἑτέροις γλώσσαις] they began to speak in languages not their own,—other than they had ever learned. (Bp. Andrewes, p. 138.) The phrase is from Isa. xxviii. 11, LXX, διὰ γλώσσης ἐτέρας (see 1 Cor. xiv. 21), and it announces the fulfilment of the prophecy of Ps. xix. 3, 4 (Ambrose); and is explained by v. 8, τῇ ἰδίᾳ διαλέκτῳ, and v. 11, ταῖς ἡμετέροις γλώσσαις.

Hence, ἑτάροις γλώσσαις καὶ οὐ πατρίοις, says Greg. Nazian. (p. 742, Orat. xli.), but ταῖς ἰδίαις τῶν ἀκούοντων. Some of them spake in the language of India, some of Scythia, some of Crete and Arabia,—nations hostile to the Jews. (Beccum.) " Prædicaturi multis gentibus accipiant genera linguarum." (Jerome, iv. 178, ad Hedib. 9, where are some excellent remarks on this text.) " Loquebantur linguis omnium gentium." (S. Aug., Sermon. 316. Cp. below, x. 46; xi. 15, 16.) " Quia futura Ecclesia in omnibus linguis prenuntiabatur." (Sermon. 266.) " Loquebatur unitas Ecclesiae in linguis omnium gentium." (Aug. Sermon. 267.)

The Apostles were gifted with the Tongues of all Nations, because Christ sent them to preach to all Nations,—ἐπειδὴ πανταχοῦ διέρχεσθαι ἔμελλον. (Chrys. here, and on 1 Cor. xiv. 3, and Theodoret in 1 Cor. xiv. 2, Augustine in Ps. xviii., Sermon. 175. Theophyl.)

All other interpretations of the words ἐτέροις γλώσσαις, with other tongues, are irreconcilable with grammatical rules and historical truth. The miracle was not (as some have thought) in the ears of the hearers, but in the tongues of the speakers. The appearance of tongues indicates this; of tongues sitting on the heads of the Apostles. As S. Cyril says (in Caten.), " they spake with languages they had never learnt;" and thus was fulfilled the prophecy, " there is neither speech nor language, but their voices are heard among them; their sound is gone out into all lands, and their words into the ends of the world." (Ps. xix. 3, 4. Rom. x. 18.) The Spirit was given in the form of Tongues in order to consecrate¹ the preaching of Apostolic doctrine (Severian); and thus they were ordained by the χειροτονία of the Spirit, laying as it were His own Hands on their heads, to the Apostleship of the world. (Severian, in Caten. Chrys. Aug. Tr. xciii. in Joan. Cyril, Cateches. 17. Nazian. Orat. xli. p. 743; xlv. Leo, Sermon. in Pentec., and Greg., Hom. 30 in Evang. cited by A. Lapide.) " Thus each of them became as it were a θρόνος of the Holy Ghost." (Severian.)

Besides, as the Fathers observe (see Chrys. here, and Aug. passim; cp. Bp. Andrewes, p. 130), the miracle of Pentecost at Sion was the ἀντίστοιχον, or antithesis of the Confusion of Tongues at Babel. " There," says Chrys., " the one language had been divided into many; here many languages are united in one man." So Gregory Nyssena, Homil. in S. Stephan. ii. p. 787. And it is truly and beautifully said by Leo M. (Sermon. lxxiii. p. 155), " O quàm velox est sermo sapientiae, et ubi Deus magister est, quàm citò discitur, quod docetur! Non est adhibita interpretatio ad audiendum, non consuetudo ad usum, non tempus ad studium, sed spirante ubi voluit Spiritu Veritatis, propriae Gentium voces factae sunt in Ecclesiae ore communes. Ab hoc igitur die tuba evangelicae praedicationis intonuit; ab hoc die imbres charismatum, flumina benedictionum, omne desertum et universam aridam irrigaverunt." Cp. ibid. Sermon. lxxiv. p. 159.

This is also well expressed by Arator, v. 122:

" — igne magistro

Imbuit ora calat, dictisque fluentibus exit
Linguarum populosa seges; non littera gessit
Officium, non ingenii stillavit ab ore
Vena, nec egregias signavit cera loquelas;
Sola fuit doctrina Fides."

And our own great poet says,

" — The SPIRIT,

Pour'd first on His Apostles, whom He sends
To evangelize the nations, then on all
Baptized, shall them with wondrous gifts endue
To speak all tongues; and do all miracles,
As did their Lord before them."

Milton, P. L. xii. 497.

The Building of the Church, by the Divine Spirit of Love at Sion, was designed to remove the evil of the Building of the Tower by the human spirit of pride at Babel. And though it did not please God to bring all Nations back to one lip (Gen. xi. 1), yet by enabling the one Apostolic company to speak the same Gospel of Peace in all languages, He showed how the sin and misery of Babel would find their remedy in Sion. The same member, the tongue, which had scattered mankind through all the world, was now, when attuned by the Spirit of peace, used to bring back the world to the fold of Unity. So the curse was taken away, and a blessing poured forth in its place.

Therefore, the CHURCH of ENGLAND well says in her Communion Office, in the Proper Preface for Whitsunday and Six days after, " It is very meet, right, and our bounden duty, that we should at all times and in all places give thanks unto Thee, O Lord, Holy Father, Almighty Everlasting God, through Jesus Christ our Lord, according to whose most true promise, the HOLY GHOST came down, as at this time, from Heaven, with a sudden great sound, as it had been a mighty wind, in the likeness of fiery tongues, lighting upon the Apostles, to teach them, and to lead them to all truth, giving them both the gift of divers languages, and also boldness with fervent zeal constantly to preach the Gospel unto all Nations, whereby we have been brought out of darkness and error into the clear light and true knowledge of Thee and of Thy Son Jesus Christ. Therefore with Angels and Archangels, and with all the company of heaven, we laud and magnify Thy glorious Name, evermore praising Thee and saying, Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God of hosts, heaven and earth are full of Thy glory, Glory be to Thee, O Lord most high."

On the Gift of Tongues—its Design and Use.

One of the most convincing proofs of the truth of the Ancient Interpretation of this text, as thus declared by the CHURCH of ENGLAND, is to be found in the almost countless discrepancies of the Expositors who have deserted that Interpretation.

There is a large and consistent body of Interpreters, dating from the second century, and continued for many hundred years in all parts of Christendom, in favour of the Ancient Exposition; whereas, on the contrary, the Expositions at variance with it, which have been propounded in modern times, have no ancient authority in their favour; and are as inconsistent with one another as they are irreconcilable with the teaching of Christian Antiquity.

It would be fruitless to enumerate all these conflicting speculations. They may be seen in De Wette's Einleitung, where they occupy ten pages (pp. 27 to 37), or in Meyer's Kommentar, p. 42; and Bunsen's Hippolytus, &c., ii. p. 12, 2nd ed.

It has been recently alleged, even by some English Expositors, who allow that the Apostles spoke with foreign tongues on the Day of Pentecost, that there is no evidence in the Acts of the Apostles, or in any other part of Holy Scripture, that the Apostles were supernaturally endued with power " to preach the Gospel in divers languages," which they had never learnt, or that they ever did preach it in such languages.

But on this allegation it may be observed,

1. That our Lord's promise to His Disciples was general,

¹ The words in the printed edition of the Catena (p. 20) are, ὑπὲρ τοῦ τοῦ κήρυγμα ἈΝΘ ΘΥΝ τῆς ἀποστολικῆς διδασκαλίας—read ἈΝΑΘΕΛΟΥΝ, to consecrate.

⁵ Ἦσαν δὲ ἐν Ἱερουσαλὴμ κατοικοῦντες Ἰουδαῖοι, ἄνδρες εὐλαβεῖς ἀπὸ παντὸς ἔθνους τῶν ὑπὸ τὸν οὐρανόν. ⁶ Γενομένης δὲ τῆς φωνῆς ταύτης συνήλθε τὸ πλῆθος, καὶ συνεχύθη, ὅτι ἤκουον εἰς ἕκαστος τῇ ἰδίᾳ διαλέκτῳ λαλοῦντων

Mark xvi. 17, 18, "These signs shall follow them that believe; In my Name they shall cast out devils; they shall speaking with new tongues; . . . they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."

The signs there mentioned by Christ were not for momentary display, but for continual profit and edification.

The power of speaking with new tongues is combined in Christ's promise with that of healing the sick, and casting out devils. The Apostles were led to expect to receive a supernatural ability to do all these things; and the need of the gift of new tongues was certainly not less than that of those other gifts which are joined with it. And it can hardly be said that the Divine Promise was fulfilled, if the power of speaking with new tongues was limited to one or two special occasions, and not applied to the noblest of all uses of speech, that of preaching the Gospel.

2. The miraculous power of preaching in new tongues may also be said to have been presupposed in our Lord's commission to His Apostles, Galilean Fishermen, "unlearned and unlettered men" (ἰδιώτας καὶ ἀγραμμάτους), "Go ye and teach all Nations." "Go ye, μαθητεύσατε, make ye disciples of the learned Greek and of the proud Roman; convert the many-tongued Nations of the Earth; 'Preach the Gospel to every creature.' 'Ye shall be My Witnesses to the ends of the Earth.'" (Acts i. 8.)

How were they to do this without the knowledge of foreign languages? It is not sufficient to reply that they knew Greek, and that with a knowledge of Greek they could preach to all the world.

For, first, it is not clear that they did know Greek, or at least, know it in such a way as to speak it with fluency, and in such a manner as not to expose their message to contempt.

And if Greek was all that was necessary, why were they gifted with the tongues of so many nations on the Day of Pentecost?

They did not go forth to preach till they had received the gift of Pentecost; but they complied with Christ's command, when they had been endued with power from on high. As Irenæus says, iii. 1, "Postea quàm induti sunt supervenientis Spiritus Sancti virtutem ex alto, exierunt in fines terræ—evangelizantes."

Their prompt obedience to Christ's command, and the immediate success which attended their Missionary labours in all parts of the world, seem to indicate that they had the power of communicating readily with all Nations in their vernacular languages. And how could this be but by a supernatural gift?

3. The evidence derivable from the Acts of the Apostles of the possession of this power, is also cogent,— 1st, Positively.

We see the Apostles in the first instance using their confessedly miraculous power, in order to preach the Gospel to the various tribes, speaking different languages, collected at Jerusalem on the Day of Pentecost. Here certainly is a proof that the power was employed for the propagation of the Gospel. And this specimen of its use for a permanent and necessary end, seems to suggest a belief that it was vouchsafed to, and used by the same persons, according to the need, on other occasions for the same purpose.

It is worthy of remark here, that the Apostle, who takes the lead in preaching on this occasion, is St. Peter. And he is also prominent in preaching to different congregations and persons in the earlier portion of this History. And his preaching is invariably attended with success. Yet of St. Peter it is noticed in the Gospel, that he could not, of himself, speak his own vernacular language with accuracy. (Matt. xxvi. 73. Mark xiv. 70.) How was the fisherman of Bethsaida, with his Galilean barbarisms, to work such effects as he did in preaching, without a supernatural gift of language? Cp. note on xxiv. 1.

Again; in the Acts of the Apostles we see St. Paul preaching to the various Tribes of Asia Minor, and to the barbarous (i. e. foreign) inhabitants of Malta (see notes on xiii. 15; xiv. 11, and xxviii. 2—4), doubtless in their own languages.

And St. Paul's case seems to afford a strong corroboration of what has been now asserted.

He was the most learned of the Apostles. Humanly speaking, he had more of ordinary qualifications for addressing foreign congregations, than any of the rest. And yet he was more gifted supernaturally than others with the power of speaking with γλῶσσαι, or foreign languages. (1 Cor. xiv. 18.) And why? Because his Missionary travels were more extensive than theirs.

He who, as "the Apostle of the Gentiles" (Rom. xi. 13), had a commission to preach to more nations, was more gifted with the power of speaking with tongues; and his case shows the need and reason of the gift.

2ndly, Negatively, also

The evidence from the Acts of the Apostles is strong.

In this divinely-inspired record of the Missionary labours of the Primitive Church, we never hear that any one of the Apostolic Missionaries of the Gospel ever sat down for a single hour to learn a foreign language; or ever was retarded or deterred for a single moment by ignorance, or defective knowledge, of any foreign language, from preaching the Gospel to any person or congregation in any part of the world. What is there similar to this in any annals of modern Missions? And how is this to be explained but by a supernatural ability to preach in foreign tongues? See further below, xiv. 11.

It has been recently objected in some Expositions of this passage, that there is no early patristic evidence of a spiritual gift of speaking in different Languages for the preaching of the Gospel.

On this it may be observed;

There is early Patristic evidence that the Apostles went forth to preach the Gospel in all lands; and that they did preach it. But there is no evidence that the Apostles ever learnt a foreign language, or could not speak the language of any country to which they went.

Besides; even if there existed no testimony such as is described from the few surviving works of the Fathers of the Second and Third Centuries, yet the concurrent Testimony of the Fathers of the Fourth and Fifth Centuries proves what the Tradition of the Church was on this point.

But there is early patristic testimony of the continuance of the gift of tongues for preaching the Gospel;

S. Irenæus, the disciple of Polycarp, the scholar of St. John, says (v. 6; cp. Euseb. v. 7), "We hear many brethren in the Church, having prophetic gifts, and speaking with all kinds of tongues by means of the Spirit, παντοδαπαῖς λαλοῦντων διὰ τοῦ Πνεύματος γλώσσαις, and bringing to light the hidden things of men's hearts for edification, and declaring the mysteries of God."

How Irenæus understood the passage before us, appears also from his words (iii. 17), "Luke relates that the Spirit descended on the disciples after the Ascension of the Lord, on the Day of Pentecost, in order that all Nations might be enabled to enter into life; wherefore they united in all languages in praising God the Holy Spirit, bringing distant Tribes into Unity, and offering the first-fruits of all Nations to God."

It is not indeed necessary to suppose, nor is it probable, that the power of speaking in foreign languages, without previous study, was long continued in the Church. Soon after the completion of the Canon of the New Testament, the Holy Scriptures were translated into various languages, and native Churches were formed in the principal countries of the world. As S. Gregory I. says (in Marc. xvi. 16), when the Tree of the Gospel was first planted, it was watered with extraordinary effusions of the Holy Ghost; but when it had taken root, then ordinary means sufficed for its growth.

— ἀποφθέγγεσθαι αὐτοῖς] So A, B, C, D. Elz. has αὐτοῖς ἀποφθέγγεσθαι. The alteration may have been made for greater ease of construction; but trajections of this kind (as Alford well observes) are usual with St. Luke. And there is something marked in the reservation of αὐτοῖς, i. e. them especially (according to Christ's promise), them, who were lately so weak and timid,—the last and emphatic word. Cf. αὐτοῖς and αὐτῶν in the preceding verse.

The word ἀποφθέγγεσθαι (used only in Acts ii. 14, and xxvi. 25) has a special force; it is not simply to speak, but "magnificè loqui" (Valek.), to pour forth short sentences (Chrys., Ecum., and Bloomfield here). This word seems to explain the mode in which those who received the gift of tongues on the day of Pentecost spoke, viz. by ejaculatory ascriptions, perhaps in orderly sequence, of glory to God, and by short and fervent exhortations to their several hearers.

5. κατοικοῦντες] residing there, in expectation of the appearance of the Messiah then looked for (see Lightfoot here); or having come up for the Feast to Jerusalem, and tarrying there for it.

6. συνεχύθη] was confounded, or was in confusion, from doubt and astonishment; and the confusion showed itself in the conflux of people, and in the passions by which they were agitated, αὐτῶν. ⁷ Ἐξίσταντο δὲ πάντες καὶ ἐθαύμαζον λέγοντες πρὸς ἀλλήλους, Οὐκ ἰδοὺ πάντες οὗτοί εἰσιν οἱ λαοῦντες Γαλιλαῖοι; ⁸ καὶ πῶς ἡμεῖς ἀκούομεν, ἕκαστος τῇ ἰδίᾳ διαλέκτῳ ἡμῶν ἐν ᾗ ἐγεννήθημεν, ⁹ Πάρθοι καὶ Μῆδοι καὶ Ἑλαμίται, καὶ οἱ κατοικοῦντες τὴν Μεσοποταμίαν, Ἰουδαίαν τε καὶ Καππαδοκίαν, Πόντον καὶ τὴν Ἀσίαν, ¹⁰ Φρυγίαν τε καὶ Παμφυλίαν, Αἴγυπτον καὶ τὰ μέρη τῆς Λιβύης τῆς κατὰ Κυρήνην, καὶ οἱ ἐπιδημοῦντες Ῥωμαῖοι Ἰουδαῖοι τε καὶ προσήλυτοι, ¹¹ Ἑκρήτες καὶ Ἀραβες, ἀκούομεν λαλούντων αὐτῶν ταῖς ἡμετέραις γλώσσαις τὰ μεγαλεῖα τοῦ Θεοῦ;

¹² Ἐξίσταντο δὲ πάντες καὶ διηπόρουν ἄλλος πρὸς ἄλλον λέγοντες, Τί ἂν θέλοι

e ch. 1. 22.
& ver. 21.

and in the variety of languages which they spoke; an image of Babel.

St. Luke here happily uses a word (συνέχθη) which reminds the reader of ἡ (Babel), which the LXX render by σύγχυσις, ὅτι ἐκεῖ συνέχεν ὁ κύριος τὰ χεῖλη πάσης τῆς γῆς, Gen. xi. 9. Babel, built by human pride, is on the one side; and the Church of Christ, animated by the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of Love, on the other. Here are two opposite Powers brought into contact on the Day of Pentecost. The din of the one rages against the peace of the other; and the eddying streams flow together. The confusion of Tongues is calmed by the effusion of the Holy Ghost; and by the diffusion of the Truth, under the gracious influence of the Holy Spirit, the Tongues of Babel are brought into harmony, and preach the One Gospel of Christ, and sing in a holy concert the Songs of Zion.

— ἤκουον] they were hearing; the imperfect tense marks the continuance of the miracle: hence what follows, ἐξίσταντο πάντες, καὶ ἐθαύμαζον, they were all in astonishment, and wondering. Cp. the imperfects in v. 12, ἐξίσταντο—διηπόρουν—ἐλεγον. Cp. what is said below, x. 45, of the miracle at Cæsarea.

— διαλέκτῳ] dialect. Something more than γλώσση, or language. See Valck. p. 327. The Apostles—illiterate Galileans, who, as Valck. observes, p. 349, knew only one dialect of one language—spoke in different languages and in different dialects of the same language (Bede, Retract. p. 104). For example, the Medes and Elamites (Persians) spoke the same tongue, but in different dialects. And so it was with many other races enumerated in vv. 9—11. Hence we may explain Ἰουδαίαν in v. 9.

The Christian Church speaks in all dialects of all languages. It shoots out its roots and fibres every where, and consecrates all nations and races of the world.

8. πῶς ἡμεῖς ἀκούομεν, ἕκαστος] how is it that we are hearing, —each of us in our own dialect, in which we were born? It is not said that each of the Apostles had the power of speaking all languages. But as at Babel the tongue, which a certain number of persons spoke, served as a guide to lead them away together to settle in a given place, and so the world was colonized: so, it would seem, at Pentecost, the foreign tongue, which each disciple was enabled to speak, collected about him a group of those strangers then at Jerusalem who spoke that particular tongue; and so all were evangelized.

It has been supposed by some (e.g. Severus in Caten. here), that the gift of a special language was like a spiritual intimation to each of the Apostles, signifying to what country he should direct his attention; δίδοται ἐκδότῳ γλῶσσαι καθάπερ κανὼν that is, it was as it were his appointment or χειροτονία to a particular charge; and S. Jerome says (ad Hedibian, iv. 178), “accipiunt genera linguarum, ut nosceretur qui Apostolorum quibus deberent gentibus nunciare.”

9—11. Πάρθοι καὶ Μῆδοι] Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, &c. &c. The arrangement of the names in these three verses is very remarkable. It follows the order of the three principal διασπορὰ or Dispersions of the Jews throughout the World, as follows:—

(1) The earliest διασπορὰ or dispersion, that of the Ten Tribes in Media and Assyria, and of the Two Tribes in the neighbourhood of Babylon, now subject to the Parthians, who are therefore placed first.

(2) The διασπορὰ or dispersion of Jews in Asia Minor, the dwellers in Cappadocia, &c., an offset from the Assyrian dispersion.

(3) The Egyptian dispersion, planted by Ptolemy Lagus. On these dispersions cp. Mede's excellent Essay, Works, book i. Disc. xx. pp. 74—77; Lightfoot, ii. p. 1144; and Howson, i. pp. 21, 22.

It is observable, that St. Peter, the Apostle of the Circumcision, provided instruction for all these dispersions;

(1) He went in person to the Parthians; for he wrote his first Epistle from Babylon. See on 1 Pet. v. 13.

(2) He wrote his two Epistles to the Asiatic διασπορὰ.

(3) Lastly, he sent “Marcus his son” to the Egyptian διασπορὰ. S. Jerome (Scr. Eccl. 8). See note below on 1 Pet. v. 13.

On the providential pre-arrangement for the spread of Christianity by means of these διασπορὰ, or Dispersions, throughout the world, see Bp. Pearson's admirable remarks in one of his excellent discourses recently recovered by Archdn. Churton, ii. pp. 30, 31. He there says: “On the day of Pentecost Jews were present from every nation under heaven. Sojourners also were there, the causes and witnesses of the miracle. And when they returned to their own land, what did they report with greater joy, than that their own mother-tongue had been ennobled at Jerusalem by the revelation of divine mysteries? Thus the preaching of the Gospel, at first communicated to the Jews of all nations at Jerusalem, followed them to their own homes.” He adds, p. 36: “In order that the kingdom of Satan might be overthrown by the Gospel, preached by the Apostles and Apostolic men, it was requisite that they should speak in tongues understood by all nations.”

The enumeration of these tribes (Parthians and Medes, &c.) as present at the day of Pentecost, and as then evangelized by the Apostles (v. 41), has a special interest as displaying the fulfilment of Ancient Prophecy. See the passage in Isa. xi. 11, appointed as a Proper Lesson for Whitsunday, “It shall come to pass in that day that the Lord shall set His hand again the second time to recover the remnant of His people that shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the Islands of the Sea.” καὶ τοὺς διεσπαρμένους Ἰούδα συναξει ἐκ τῶν τεσσάρων πτερίγων τῆς γῆς. (LXX.)

The regions mentioned by Isaiah correspond very nearly with those specified here by St. Luke; and in the reception of the first-fruits of these various Dispersions into the Christian Sion, the Church, it may be rightly said that they have been recovered, and brought back again to their true home in Christ, the spiritual Jerusalem.

Observe also as a remarkable circumstance, that the nation here placed first is the Parthian, viz. that which occupied Babylonia. They who dwell in that region, in which had been built the Tower of Babel, or Tower of Confusion, are mentioned first as brought into the Christian Sion, the city of Unity. So God overrules evil with good by His Spirit in His Church. See on 1 Pet. v. 13.

9. Ἑλαμίται] Elamites dwelling east of Tigris, north of Susiana, and south of Media. The prophets before the captivity give a wider sense to Elam, and make it almost co-extensive with Persia, and Daniel designates Susa as the capital of Elam (viii. 2). In later times Elymais is the name of a Persian province.

— Ἰουδαίαν] Judæa. Since they who spake were Galileans (v. 7), and the Galilean dialect differed from that spoken in Judæa (Mark xiv. 70), they who dwell in Judæa might well express surprise at what they heard; and therefore there is no reason for abandoning the reading of the MSS. here for Ἰδουμαίαν, Ἰνδιαν, or Βιθυνίαν, with some Commentators.

— Ἀσίαν] Asia. That district called Ionian and Lydia, of which Ephesus was the capital, and sometimes called Proconular Asia. Cp. Acts vi. 9; xvi. 6; xx. 16. Rev. i. 4. 11. The Asia of the New Testament may be said to bear the same relation to “Asia Minor” that Portugal does to Spain. Cicero (pro Flacco, 27) says, “Asia vestra constat ex Phrygiâ, Mysiâ, Cariâ, Lydiâ,” and comp. Solinus, c. xl.; but here Asia is distinguished from Phrygia. It seems to be regarded by St. Peter (i. 1) as the region west of Cappadocia and Bithynia: cp. Wetstein here, and Winer, R. W. B. p. 96.

10. ἐπιδημοῦντες Ῥωμαῖοι] There should be no stop after Ῥωμαῖοι, and the sentence should be rendered, “Jews of Rome,” whether by birth or conversion, and now sojourning at Jerusalem for the Feast. (Valck.) τοῦτο εἶναι; ¹³ ἕτεροι δὲ διαχλευάζοντες ἔλεγον, ὅτι γλεύκους μεμεστωμένοι εἰσὶ.

¹⁴ Σταθεὶς δὲ Πέτρος σὺν τοῖς ἑνδεκα ἐπῆρε τὴν φωνὴν αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἀπεφθέγγετο αὐτοῖς, Ἄνδρες Ἰουδαῖοι καὶ οἱ κατοικοῦντες Ἱερουσαλὴμ ἅπαντες, τοῦτο ὑμῖν γνωστὸν ἔστω, καὶ ἐνωτίσασθε τὰ ῥήματά μου. ¹⁵ Ὁ γὰρ, ὡς ^f 1 Thess. 5. 7. ὑμεῖς ὑπολαμβάνετε, οὗτοι μεθύνουσιν· ἔστι γὰρ ὥρα τρίτῃ τῆς ἡμέρας· ¹⁶ ἀλλὰ τοῦτό ἐστι τὸ εἰρημένον διὰ τοῦ προφήτου Ἰωήλ, ¹⁷ Καὶ ἔσται ^g Joel 2. 28—32. ^h Isa. 44. 3. ⁱ John 7. 38. ἐν ταῖς ἔσχαταις ἡμέραις, λέγει ὁ Θεὸς, ἐκχεῶ ἀπὸ τοῦ πνεύματός μου ἐπὶ πᾶσαν σάρκα· καὶ προφητεύσουσιν οἱ υἱοὶ ὑμῶν, καὶ αἱ θυγατέρες ὑμῶν· καὶ οἱ νεανίσκοι ὑμῶν ὁράσεις ὄψονται, καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι ὑμῶν ἐνυπνίοις ἐνυπνιασθήσονται. ¹⁸ Καί γε ἐπὶ τοῖς δούλοις μου καὶ ἐπὶ τὰς δούλας μου, ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ἐκείναις, ἐκχεῶ ἀπὸ τοῦ πνεύματός μου, καὶ προφητεύσουσι. ¹⁹ Καὶ δώσω ^h Joel 2. 30. τέρατα ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ ἄνω, καὶ σημεῖα ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς κάτω, αἷμα καὶ δια-χλευάζοντες, the compound verb, is a stronger word than the simple verb, and means vehemence and continuance in mocking. Cp. δια-γογγύζω, Luke xv. 2; xix. 7.

13. ἕτεροι δὲ διαχλευάζοντες] The native Jews were mocking, because they did not know the foreign languages spoken by the Apostles, and those foreign tongues seemed to them like a jargon of unmeaning sounds,—a proof that the miracle was not in the ears of the hearers (as some thought even in ancient times; see Bede, Retractat. in Act. ii. p. 103), but in the tongues of the Apostles, and a refutation of several modern theories on this subject.

— γλεύκους] Pentecost being a time of convivial rejoicing (Deut. xvi. 11). They say 'new wine,' though the Vintage was not come. (Chrys.) But no wonder that they who mock at the work of the Spirit, and call it a mere jargon, should be confuted not only by reference to the time of day (as St. Peter confutes them), but from the time of year. "Behold," says Severian, "their folly convicted by the season itself. How could there be new wine at Pentecost? But calumny is blind."

And yet, like Caiaphas, and Pilate, and other enemies of the truth, they were overruled unconsciously to declare what was true. For the new wine of the Spirit was now poured into new bottles. (See on Matt. ix. 17. Luke v. 38.) See Augustine on v. 15. "Jam enim," says Bede after him, and Cyril. Hieros. Cat. 17, "vinum novum in utres novos venerat, cum Apostoli, non in vetustate literæ sed in novitate Spiritus, Dei magnalia resonarent." This is happily versified by Arator, v. 150:—

"Hos etiam musto typicâ ratione moveri
Error verus ait, quos ebria fonte recenti
Complevit doctrina poli; nova vasa liquorem
Suscepere novum; nec corrumpuntur acerbis
Quo veteres maduere lacus, de Vite bibentes
Quæ, Christo cultore, dedit convivia verbis,
Unde rubent quare vertit aquas."

The word γλεύκος is rightly rendered 'mustum' in Vulg. and 'new wine' in the Auth. Vers. And the suggestions that have been made of another rendering would destroy the spiritual sense of the passage, as declared by ancient Expositors.

This saying of the multitude might have served as a warning against the abuse of the χάρισμα, or gift, of Tongues. See I Cor. xiv. 23. 25, and Chrys. there.

14. Σταθεὶς] having taken up his station,—a sign of boldness; see next note. So ἀπεφθέγγετο, he spake aloud.

In his reports of speeches, St. Luke is wont to begin with describing the attitude and gesture of the speaker (x. 34; xiii. 16; xvii. 22; xxiii. 1; xxvi. 1).

A proof of the gift of the Holy Spirit is here shown in the change wrought in the recipients. What a contrast between Peter in the hall of Caiaphas before the Crucifixion, and the same Peter now on the day of Pentecost after the descent of the Holy Ghost! He who had faltered at the voice of a woman and denied his Master, now confronts the multitude which had killed Him, and reproves them for the deed; ἐνθα γὰρ ἂν παραγένηται τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, χρυσοὺς ἀντὶ πηλίνων ποιεῖ. (Chrys. Severian.) See further below, iv. 8, and the admirable specimen of sacred eloquence in Greg. Nazian. Or. xli. pp. 741, 742, and the following comment of S. Augustine (Tract. in Joann. xcii.):

"When the Comforter is come, ye shall bear witness of Me" (John xv. 26, 27). So said Christ, for the Comforter will give you courage; which Peter had not, when being affrighted by a woman's voice, he would not bear witness to Christ, but through fear denied Him. After the Resurrection he thrice professed his love for his Master, but as yet his love was infirm, till it was strengthened by the Holy Ghost, which was poured into his heart in a copious stream of grace, and inspired him with such fervour and eloquence, that more eagerly than the rest he rushed forth to bear witness of Christ, and to confound His adversaries with the doctrine of the Resurrection. If any one is delighted with so joyful and holy a sight, let him read the Acts of the Apostles. There the same Peter, for whom we had wept when denying Christ, is seen and admired, preaching Him. There that Apostolic tongue is transfigured from fear to valour, from slavery to liberty; that tongue, which at the sound of one was driven to denial, now inspires many thousand enemies to confess Christ. "Quid plura? Tantis in illo fulgor gratiæ, tanta Spiritus Sancti plenitudo apparebat, tanta de ore prædicantis pretiosissimæ veritatis pondera procedebant, ut ingentis multitudinis adversarios, interfectores Christi Judæos, faceret pro Illo paratos mori, à quibus cum illo formidarat occidi. Hoc fecit SPIRITUS SANCTUS, tunc missus, ante promissus."

— σὺν τοῖς ἑνδεκα] with the eleven Apostles. It is probable that the Eleven spoke also to several companies of persons in various languages; and that St. Peter's speech is recorded as a specimen of what was spoken by the Apostles, and because it was addressed specially to the Jews of Jerusalem, and was probably spoken in their language. See Lightfoot here (i. p. 754, and note on v. 41).

15. Οὐ—μεθύνουσιν] they are not drunken. 'Homo ebrius non alienam discit linguam; sed suam perdit; sed facti sunt Apostoli novi utres pleni vino novo. Cf. Matt. ix. 17.' Aug. Serm. 266.

— ὥρα τρίτῃ] the third hour. The hour at which the Morning Sacrifice was offered in the Temple, and until which it was the custom to fast. On Sabbaths and Festivals the fast was continued to noon. See Lightfoot here.

16—21. ἀλλὰ τοῦτο—σωθήσεται] On the harmony of this citation with the original, see Surenhusius, καταλλαγή, pp. 388—391.

The ἔσχαται ἡμέραι, or last days, are the Days of the Messiah, or the Christian Dispensation. See Moses Stuart, on Heb. i. 2. St. Luke adopts here almost verbatim the words of the LXX.

On these verses (vv. 16—21) see Bp. Andrewes' Sermon, vol. iii. p. 301.

17. ἐπὶ πᾶσαν σάρκα] upon all flesh: Gentiles as well as Jews. — ἐνυπνίοις] So A, B, C, D, H, and some cursives. A Hebraism, as in Joel iii. 1. (Meyer.) Elz. ἐνύπνια, and so LXX.

18. ἐκχεῶ] I will pour out; future, a later form (Winer, § 13, p. 71), found in the LXX, Ezek. vii. 8; xxi. 31, and elsewhere.

19. δώσω τέρατα] I will give prodigies. The Fathers apply this—

(1) To the signs at the Crucifixion—the eclipse—the rending of the rocks—the earthquake at the Resurrection. (Cyril.)

(2) To the phenomena before the siege and fall of Jerusalem. (Chrys. and Theophyl. referring to Josephus, B. J. vi. 5.)

— τέρατα καὶ σημεῖα] The LXX thus render the single word ἄρρητα. Cp. Exod. xi. 9, 10. For the most part they use ῥῆμα for τέρας, as in Exodus iv. 21; vii. 3. 9; and Deut. iv. 34; vi. 22.

Differt téras à σημεῖον, hoc enim sumitur etiam pro quoi Matt. 24. 29. πῦρ καὶ ἀτμίδα καπνοῦ. ²⁰ ὁ ἥλιος μεταστραφήσεται εἰς σκοτός, καὶ ἡ σελήνη εἰς αἷμα, πρὶν ἢ ἔλθῃν τὴν ἡμέραν Κυρίου τὴν μεγάλην καὶ ἐπιφανή. ²¹ Καὶ ἔσται, πᾶς ὃς ἂν ἐπικαλέσῃται τὸ ὄνομα Κυρίου σωθήσεται. ²² Ἄνδρες Ἰσραηλῖται, ἀκούσατε τοὺς λόγους τούτους· Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον, ἄνδρα ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἀποδεδειγμένον εἰς ὑμᾶς δυνάμεσι καὶ τέρασι καὶ σημείοις, οἷς ἐποίησε δι' αὐτοῦ ὁ Θεὸς ἐν μέσῳ ὑμῶν, καθὼς καὶ αὐτοὶ οἶδατε, ²³ τοῦτον τῇ ὀρισμένῃ βουλῇ καὶ προγνώσει τοῦ Θεοῦ ἔκδοτον λαβόντες διὰ χειρῶν ἀνόμων προσπήξαντες ἀνείλατε· ²⁴ ὃν ὁ Θεὸς ἀνέστησε, λύσας τὰς ὠδύνας τοῦ θανάτου, καθότι οὐκ ἦν δυνατόν κρατεῖσθαι αὐτὸν ὑπ' αὐτοῦ. ²⁵ Δαυὶδ γὰρ λέγει εἰς αὐτόν, Προωρώμην τὸν Κύριον ἐνώπιόν μου διὰ παντός, ὅτι ἐκ δεξιῶν μου ἔστιν, ἵνα μὴ σαλευθῶ· ²⁶ διὰ τοῦτο ἠψφράνθη ἡ καρδία μου, καὶ ἠγαλλιάσατο libet signo extra miraculum; at τέρας semper sumitur pro portento vel prodigio. (Mintert.) A Miracle is a δύναμις as wrought by divine power; a τέρας as a supernatural prodigy; a σημεῖον as a sign or credential of a mission from God.

— αἷμα] blood. The Jews had said, "His blood be upon us and upon our children" (Matt. xxvii. 25), and that blood was upon them, when the blood of 1,100,000 persons was shed in the siege of Jerusalem: and then the πῦρ καὶ ἀτμὶς καπνοῦ consumed the Temple and the City. (Cyril, Severian.)

20. πρὶν ἢ ἔλθῃν τ. ἡμέραν—ἐπιφανή] before the great and glorious Day of the Lord come. St. Luke adopts ἐπιφανή from the LXX, from ἡγῆς terribilis, which they render elsewhere in the prophetic books (Hab. i. 7. Mal. i. 14; iv. 5) by ἐπιφανής, which is very proper to describe our Lord's Coming to judge Jerusalem, and to judge the world.

As at the Ascension, the Angels passed immediately from speaking of that event, to speak of Christ's Second Coming to Judgment (i. 11), so here on the Day of Pentecost, St. Peter proceeds to speak of that Second Advent, because (as Bp. Andrewes says, iii. 315), "from Christ's Departure till His Return again, from this Day of Pentecost, 'a great and notable Day,' till the last 'great and notable Day,' between these two Days no more such Day. Therefore he called them the last Days." No other Revelation or outpouring of the Spirit is to be expected.

21. πᾶς] every one—not Jew only, but Gentile also.

— ὃς ἂν ἐπικαλέσῃται τὸ ὄνομα] This expression both in the Greek and in Hebrew is much stronger than to invoke; the Hebrew is כִּלְיָהוּ, whosoever shall call on the Name of— and signifies, whosoever shall trust in, adore, and obey the Lord in all His glorious attributes. See below, ix. 14; xxii. 16. 1 Cor. i. 2. 2 Tim. ii. 22.

Hebraica phrasis ἐπικαλεῖσθαι τὸ ὄνομα Κυρίου significat Deum colere Gen. iv. 26; xii. 8. Rosenmüll., so Chrys., Didymus, and Theophyl.

Some of the ancient Fathers (e.g. Julius Africanus, in Routh, R. S. 238) understand this phrase to mean προσαγορεύεσθαι ὀνόματι Κυρίου. (Cp. Gen. iv. ult.) This part of the prophecy,—"Whosoever shall call on the Name of the Lord shall be saved"—had a literal fulfilment, in the first instance, in the escape of the Christians from Jerusalem and Judæa to Pella, before the destruction of Jerusalem. (See Matt. xxiv. 16.) It has a still more comprehensive and spiritual fulfilment in the escape of all, who believe in Christ, from the wrath to come.

22. Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον] Jesus the Nazarene. St. Peter begins by preaching Christ in His humanity and condescension,—Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον; so styled by Pilate in the Inscription on the Cross. He then raises his hearers gradually by appealing to His mighty works, known to them. (Athan. Chrys.) On this speech see also S. Iren. iii. 12.

It may be observed here that S. Irenæus (in iii. 12) cites a large portion of the Acts of the Apostles (i. 16; ii. 4. 22. 37; iii. 2; iv. 8. 22. 31; v. 30; vii. 2. 55; viii. 26. 32; ix. 4. 20; x. 1. 15. 34. 35. 37; xiv. 1; xv. 7. 23; xvii. 24) to show that the Apostles acknowledged and preached One and the same God as the Author of both Testaments and Dispensations, the Mosaic and Christian; and One and the same Christ, God and Man, the Creator of all things by His word, and the Redeemer of all men by His death.

— ἄνδρα ἀπὸ τ. Θεοῦ ἂν.] a man avouched, accredited, declared by and from God to you—ἀπὸ, by, used to signify the authority which originates, sanctions, and sends—Rom. xiii. 1. Gal. i. 1. Col. i. 2. Winer, § 47, p. 332.

23. ὀρισμένη βουλῇ] with the determined counsel and fore-knowledge of God. In order that they may not imagine that they have triumphed over God, and conquered Christ by the Crucifixion, he says that it was done with the Divine foreknowledge and counsel.

But, in order that they may not therefore think themselves innocent, he adds, διὰ χειρῶν ἀνόμων, by wicked hands. Cp. Matt. xvi. 21. Acts iii. 18; iv. 28.

There was no excuse to them; "but yet the act was done by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, Who most wisely and powerfully ordered those various and vicious motions of the creature, for the effectuating of His own most glorious and gracious purposes." Bp. Sanderson, Sermon. ix., 1 Tim. iii. 16, vol. i. p. 231; and see below, note on iv. 28.

The speeches of St. Peter recorded in the Acts are to be compared with and illustrated by the writings of the same Apostle in his two Epistles. On this verse see 1 Pet. i. 11. 20.

24. λύσας τ. ὠδύνας τ. θανάτου] having loosed the birth-pangs of death; as showing that Death and the Grave, instead of being the destruction of Christ, were by the Divine power made, as it were, the Womb from which He was to be born to new life. See above on John xvi. 21; below on Acts xiii. 33.

ὠδὺν is the word used by the LXX for ἡγῆ (Angl. cable, cord). See Ps. xviii. 5, and Theodoret there, and Ps. cxvi. 3.—ὠδύνας θανάτου are ἡγῆ ἡγῆ. Hence the combination of the word with λύσας, having loosed, here.

By that glorious Birth from Death, the whole World was delivered from darkness into light, through Him Who was the First-born from the dead (Col. i. 18. Rev. i. 5). Cp. the beautiful expressions of Ignatius (ad Rom. 6), looking forward to a Martyr's death as his own birth: ὁ τοκετός μοι ἐπικείται· μὴ ἐμποδισθῇ μοι (ῥῆσαι· μὴ θελήσῃτῃ με ἀποθανεῖν· ἐκεῖ παραγενόμενος ἄνθρωπος Θεοῦ ἔσομαι· ἐπιτρέψάτῃ μοι μνητὴν εἶναι τοῦ πάθους τοῦ Θεοῦ μου· ἄφετέ με καθαρὸν φῶς λαβεῖν. What Sophist could have written thus?

How appropriate therefore was the name given to the day of the Christian's martyrdom. It was called his Natalis or Birth-day. Cp. on Rom. viii. 22. Life is death; and death is birth to the Christian. To him the darkness of the tomb is the womb of Immortality.

In considering such expressions as this (ὠδύνας θανάτου), in the LXX Version—prepared for the Gospel—we can scarcely fail to notice the work of a superintending Providence.

25. εἰς αὐτόν] εἰς, with reference to Him. Eph. v. 32. Gal. iii. 24. So πρὸς, Heb. i. 7. Cp. Job xlii. 8. Glass. Phil. p. 486, and so Ignat. Phil. 9.

25—28. Προωρώμην—προσώπου σου] I was seeing the Lord always before me. The Holy Ghost, speaking by St. Peter, interprets here the prophecy which He had delivered by King David (Ps. xvi. 8—11). The words of the Psalm are given almost verbatim as they stand in the LXX Version, read in the Synagogues by the Hellenistic Jews. Particularly (v. 26) where the Hebrew original has יָדָי (my glory), the LXX, whom St. Luke follows, have γλῶσσά μου, my tongue. On the reason of this rendering, see Surenhusius, p. 393, and Bengel here. The Tongue may be called the glory of man, either because it is "the best member that he has" (Ps. lvi. 8; cviii. 1. Barrow, i. p. 301), or as the instrument by which he glorifies God (James iii. 9), and so procures true glory to himself. And this paraphrase of the word glory was very appropriate on the day of Pentecost, when in a special manner the Tongues of the Apostles were made instruments for declaring God's glory in the world, and of promoting their own glory in heaven.

25. ἔστιν] is, exists; to be accentuated thus,—not ἔστιν.

ἡ γλῶσσά μου ἔτι δὲ καὶ ἡ σὰρξ μου κατασκηνώσει ἐπ' ἐλπίδι ²⁷ ὅτι οὐκ ἐγκαταλείψεις τὴν ψυχὴν μου εἰς ᾄδην, οὐδὲ δώσεις τὸν Ὅσιόν σου ἰδεῖν διαφθοράν. ²⁸ Ἐγνώρισάς μοι ὁδοὺς ζωῆς· πληρώσεις με εὐφροσύνης μετὰ τοῦ προσώπου σου. ²⁹ Ὁ ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί, ^{o 1 Kings 2. 10.}
 ἐξὸν εἰπεῖν μετὰ παρρησίας πρὸς ὑμᾶς περὶ τοῦ πατριάρχου Δαυὶδ, ὅτι καὶ ἐτελεύτησε καὶ ἐτάφη, καὶ τὸ μνήμα αὐτοῦ ἐστὶν ἐν ἡμῖν ἄχρι τῆς ἡμέρας ταύτης. ³⁰ Ὁ Προφήτης οὖν ὑπάρχων, καὶ εἰδὼς ὅτι ὄρκῳ ὤμοσεν αὐτῷ ὁ Θεός, ^{p 2 Sam. 7. 11—} ἐκ καρποῦ τῆς ὁσφύος αὐτοῦ τὸ κατὰ σάρκα ἀναστήσειν τὸν Χριστὸν, καθίσει ^{16.}
 ἐπὶ τοῦ θρόνου αὐτοῦ, ³¹ ἡ προῖδων ἐλάλησε περὶ τῆς ἀναστάσεως τοῦ Χριστοῦ, ^{Ps. 132. 11.}
 ὅτι οὕτε κατελείφθη ἡ ψυχὴ αὐτοῦ εἰς ᾄδου, οὕτε ἡ σὰρξ αὐτοῦ εἶδε διαφθοράν. ^{Rom. 1. 13.}
³² Τοῦτον τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἀνέστησεν ὁ Θεός, οὐ πάντες ἡμεῖς ἐσμεν μάρτυρες. ^{1 Tim. 2. 8.}
³³ Τῇ δεξιᾷ οὖν τοῦ Θεοῦ ὑψωθείς, τὴν τε ἐπαγγελίαν τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος ^{q Ps. 16. 10.} λαβὼν παρὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς, ἐξέχεε τοῦτο ὃ νῦν ὑμεῖς βλέπετε καὶ ἀκούετε. ^{ch. 13. 35.}
³⁴ Οὐ γὰρ Δαυὶδ ἀνέβη εἰς τοὺς οὐρανοὺς, λέγει δὲ αὐτός, Εἶπεν ὁ Κύριος ^{1 Pet. 1. 11, 12.}
 τῷ κυρίῳ μου, Κάθου ἐκ δεξιῶν μου, ³⁵ ἕως ἂν θῶ τοὺς ἐχθρούς σου ^{r ver. 17.}
 ὑποπόδιον τῶν ποδῶν σου. ^{ch. 10. 45.} Ἀσφαλῶς οὖν γνωσκέτω πᾶς οἶκος Ἰσραὴλ, ὅτι καὶ ὁ Κύριος αὐτὸν καὶ Χριστὸν ὁ Θεός ἐποίησε τοῦτον τὸν Ἰησοῦν, ^{John 14. 26.}
 ὃν ὑμεῖς ἐσταυρώσατε. ^{& 15. 26.}
³⁷ Ἀκούσαντες δὲ κατενύγησαν τῇ καρδίᾳ, εἰπόν τε πρὸς τὸν Πέτρον καὶ ^{Phil. 2. 9—11.}
 τοὺς λοιποὺς ἀποστόλους, Τί ποιήσομεν, ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί; ^{s Ps. 110. 1.} ὁ Πέτρος δὲ ἔφη ^{Matt. 22. 44.}
^{t Ps. 2. 2, 6—8.}

26. κατασκηνώσει] will pitch its tabernacle, i. e. only for a time. Cp. St. Peter's application of the same figure to himself, 2 Pet. i. 13, 14.

27. οὐκ ἐγκαταλείψεις τὴν ψυχὴν μου εἰς ᾄδην] Thou wilt not leave my soul in Hades. Elz. Ἄδου. But A, B, C, D have Ἄιδην, which seems preferable, as showing that Hades is not (as the Gentiles thought) a Person; and this being understood, Ἄδου might afterwards be used without offence, v. 31.

Some interpret this as meaning that God did not leave His body in the grave; but that sense is weak and tautologous. The signification is, as St. Peter himself explains it, v. 31,—making a distinction between Christ's human σὰρξ and ψυχὴ, which were severed by death,—Thou didst not leave my soul in ἡκόη Sheol, i. e. in the place of departed Spirits. Cp. the use of ᾄδης, Luke xvi. 23, and note.

Next, "Thou didst not suffer my body to see corruption," which, strictly speaking, can be said of no one's body but Christ's. As S. Aug. explains it (on Ps. xvi.), "non sanctificatum corpus, per quod alii sanctificandi sunt, corrumpi patieris." Cp. Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. v. pp. 351. 377. The opinion of that great Expositor, that our Lord's human soul went to the place where the souls of men are kept that died in their sins, seems hardly compatible with our Lord's words, "To-day thou (i. e. as to thy human soul) shalt be with Me in Paradise." (Luke xxiii. 43.) See Barrow on the text, v. pp. 34—36. Sermon 28, and Bp. Bull, i. p. 33.

Compare St. Peter's own language in that remarkable passage where he speaks of the preaching of Christ to the spirits in prison, 1 Pet. iii. 19.

— τὸν Ὅσιόν σου] Thy Holy One, where some MSS. of the original have in the plural ἅγιοι, Thy Holy Ones; but the Masorites, and the best ancient Versions, read the singular. And so the LXX, τὸν ὅσιον. It is of little moment which reading is preferred. The deliverance of God's Saints and Holy Ones from the corruption of the grave is due to the Resurrection of The Holy One, their Head, "Who is the First-fruits of them that slept," and "in Whom all are made alive." (1 Cor. xv. 20—22.) See also next note, and cp. xiii. 36.

One of the blessed fruits of the Day of Pentecost was, that the Holy Spirit, Who had spoken of old by the Prophets, and in the Psalms (2 Pet. i. 20, 21), now interprets their words by the Apostles. On that Day He founded in the Church a School of Scriptural Hermeneutics. He declared on His own Divine authority, that certain Scriptures, which He expounded by the mouth of Apostles, who were inspired by the Divine Comforter, refer to Christ. Thus He has provided a safeguard against that scepticism of modern times, which would wrest them aside from their true sense (2 Pet. iii. 16). He teaches us how they apply to Christ, and has put into our hand a key for unlocking other prophecies of a like import. See above, Introduction, p. 16.

VOL. I.—PART II.

29. ἐξὸν (sc. ἔστω)—τὸ μνήμα αὐτοῦ] Let me speak freely to you concerning the Patriarch David, that he both died and his sepulchre is with us even to this day. See Joseph. Ant. xiii. 3. 4, on Δαυίδου τάφος, David's tomb, sacrilegiously opened by Herod. Joseph. Ant. xvi. 7. 1.

The fact that St. Peter does not say body but sepulchre has been used by some as the groundwork of an opinion, that David's body was one of those which rose a little before (Matt. xxvii. 53), and was carried by Christ with others into heaven. But not to say more, this opinion is contradicted by v. 34.

30. τὸ κατὰ σάρκα—Χριστόν] These words are omitted by some MSS. (e. g. A, B, C, D) and Versions. But there is a considerable amount of external evidence in their favour. And the sense appears to be incomplete without them, or something like them. See also Bornemann's note here.

31. ἡ ψυχὴ αὐτοῦ] omitted by A, B, C*, D, and some Versions.

33. τῇ δεξιᾷ τοῦ Θεοῦ] to the right hand of God; so the Æthiopic Version. See v. 34, ἐκ δεξιῶν, and, as to the dative, Matt. xxi. 2. Rev. ii. 5, and Winer, § 31, 5, p. 192. The other interpretation, "by the right hand of God," is authorized by the Vulgate, Syriac, Arabic, and English Versions, and by many learned Expositors. It is difficult to decide between them; on the whole the former seems preferable. Cp. ch. v. 31.

34. εἶπεν ὁ Κύριος] the Lord said. See on Matt. xxii. 44.

36. καὶ Κύριον αὐτὸν καὶ Χριστόν] So A, B, C, and other MSS. and Versions, more clearly explanatory of St. Peter's argument (which is that Jesus is both Lord Jehovah and Christ) than the reading of Elz., Κύριον καὶ Χριστὸν αὐτόν.

— ὃν ὑμεῖς ἐσταυρώσατε] whom ye crucified. On the purport of this speech, see Athanasius. Orat. 11, adv. Arian., pp. 379—383, who observes that it is to be interpreted by reference to the opinions of the Jews, viz.

(1) That Christ would not suffer (see John xii. 34); cp. Luke xxiv. 26, and

(2) That He would be man, like other kings and conquerors of the Earth; but in their zeal for the doctrine of the Divine Unity, as they conceived it, of Jehovah, they did not expect the Messiah to be God in the Flesh. Athanasius therefore compares the Jews to the Arians, and confutes both by the same Scriptures.

As has been observed by Professor Blunt, some of the passages of Scripture which the Fathers used against the Jews, and some of the arguments with which the Fathers confuted them, afford the strongest weapons against the Socinians. See above on Matt. xvi. 14. John x. 33.

37. κατενύγησαν] "compuncti, defixi sunt corde." See on Rom. xi. 8. They who pierced Christ with nails, and slew Him (v. 23), were now pierced by the stings of remorse and compunction.

v Joel 2. 28.
ch. 3. 25.
ε 10. 45.
w Eph. 2. 13, 17.

πρὸς αὐτοὺς, Μετανοήσατε, καὶ βαπτισθήτω ἕκαστος ὑμῶν ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ εἰς ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν, καὶ λήψετε τὴν δωρεὰν τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος. ³⁹ Ὑμῶν γὰρ ἐστὶν ἡ ἐπαγγελία καὶ τοῖς τέκνοις ὑμῶν, καὶ ^w πᾶσι τοῖς εἰς μακρὰν, ὅσους ἂν προσκαλέσθαι Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς ἡμῶν. ⁴⁰ Ἐτέροις τε λόγοις πλείοσι διεμαρτύρατο καὶ παρεκάλει αὐτοὺς λέγων, Σώθητε ἀπὸ τῆς γενεᾶς τῆς σκολιᾶς ταύτης.

⁴¹ Οἱ μὲν οὖν ἀσμένως ἀποδεξάμενοι τὸν λόγον αὐτοῦ ἐβαπτίσθησαν καὶ προσετέθησαν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ ψυχαὶ ὥσπερ τρισχίλια.

x ch. 1. 14.
John 9. 8.
Heb. 10. 23.

⁴² Ἦσαν δὲ προσκαρτεροῦντες τῇ διδαχῇ τῶν ἀποστόλων, καὶ τῇ κοινωνίᾳ, καὶ τῇ κλάσει τοῦ ἄρτου, καὶ ταῖς προσευχαῖς.

y Mark 16. 17.

z ch. 4. 32, 34.

⁴³ Ἐγένετο δὲ πάση ψυχῇ φόβος, πολλὰ τε τέρατα καὶ σημεῖα διὰ τῶν ἀποστόλων ἐγένετο. ⁴⁴ Πάντες δὲ οἱ πιστεύοντες ἦσαν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ, καὶ εἶχον ἅπαντα κοινά. ⁴⁵ καὶ τὰ κτήματα καὶ τὰς ὑπάρξεις ἐπίπρασκον, καὶ διεμέριζον

38. βαπτισθήτω ἕκαστος ὑμῶν ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ] let every one of you be baptized in the Name of Jesus Christ. Since Jesus commanded His Apostles to baptize in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, therefore the Baptism administered by them in Christ's Name was Baptism in the Name of the Holy Trinity, "according to the form which had been prescribed by Christ." Cp. Waterland, Serm. viii. vol. ii. p. 175, and Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. i. p. 58.

He that is baptized in the Name of Christ, is baptized in the Name of the Holy Trinity: for the Father and the Holy Spirit are inseparable from the Son. (Didym.) One Person of the Holy Trinity does not exclude another, but includes it. Therefore the Scripture sometimes mentions one Person, sometimes another Person, sometimes all the Persons, to show that all the Three Persons are of the same substance and power. S. Aug. c. Maximin. 17.

Hence also we may prove the Divinity of Christ. To be baptized in the Name of Jesus, is to be baptized in the Name of the Triune God, which could not be, unless Jesus Christ were God.

40. σώθητε] be ye saved by God, Who desires your salvation and that of all men. 1 Tim. ii. 4, πάντας ἀνθρώπους θέλει σωθῆναι. Do not, by obstinacy or carelessness, frustrate His gracious purposes for your everlasting good. (Luke vii. 30.)

41. ἀσμένως] Omitted by A, B, C, D, and some Versions; perhaps rightly.

—ἐβαπτίσθησαν] they were baptized, and on that day were added (to the Church) about three thousand souls. A strong text against those that would limit the sense of βαπτισμὸς to immersion. It is by no means probable, that 3000 persons were dipped by the Apostles and their assistant ministers, in one day, at Jerusalem.

For an explanation of the readiness with which they accepted the invitation to Baptism, see on John i. 25.

—τρισχίλια] The 3000 who were then converted, were not converted by St. Peter alone; but the rest of the Apostles, speaking in different tongues to people of different nations, were sharers in the work. Therefore it is said Peter stood up with the eleven (v. 14); and the hearers said to Peter and the rest of the Apostles, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" (v. 37.) Cp. Lightfoot.

42. προσκαρτεροῦντες τῇ διδαχῇ τ. ἀ.—τῇ κοινωνίᾳ—καὶ ταῖς προσευχαῖς] "Here," says Bp. Pearson (in Acta Ap. i. 33; ii. 41. 48), "is the image of the Primitive Church. They who received the Apostles' word were admitted into the Church by Baptism; nor could they be received or become Christians by any other way than that; being admitted, they resorted to the Assemblies of the Church, in which they gave diligent heed to the teaching of the Apostles, and partook of the Holy Eucharist, and joined in the Common Prayers. And thus they were a model to all Churches, even to the end of the world."

Bp. Andrewes, in his admirable Sermon on this text (vol. ii. p. 55, "On the worshipping of Imaginations"), has developed these principles, and has applied them to the history of the Church in every age; and has shown that they are a safeguard against all innovations in Doctrine and Discipline.

To examine particulars,

(1) These primitive believers communicated in the same Apostolic doctrine, τῇ διδαχῇ. Cp. Eph. iv. 5.

(2) They communicated in fellowship, τῇ κοινωνίᾳ, rendered by the Vulgate in communicatione fractionis panis, the words being combined with what follows, and being understood according to an ἓν διὰ δυοῖν. Cp. 1 Cor. x. 16. And so Blunt, Early Church, p. 32. But 'fellowship' seems to be the true rendering. They were all of one heart, and they made open profession of communion in the same faith by external acts of fellowship with the same Apostolic Ministry. Cp. Bp. Andrewes, ii. 62, who observes that the Ministry of the Church consisted at this time "of two degrees,—(1) the Twelve, (2) the Seventy; both which were over the people in things pertaining to God;" and the laids, or people, communicated in holy offices with them.

(3) τῇ κλάσει τοῦ ἄρτου] in the Breaking of Bread preparatory to the Holy Communion. Cp. 1 Cor. x. 16. "Eucharistia mentionem hic facit Syrus." (Rosenm.) See also Blunt, p. 32, and note below on v. 46.

Bp. Pearson says here, "Licet fractio panis possit victum communem tantum significare, tamen cum in cœnâ Domini panis signanter frangi dicatur; cum in vetustissimis ecclesiis quotidie Eucharistiam celebrare moris esset; cum ex oblationibus à populo factis sumi solerent panis et vinum ad eum usum sacrum; dubitari vix potest, quin hic ter mille homines in quotidianâ communionem et fractionem panis cœnam Domini celebraverint."

(4) ταῖς προσευχαῖς, in the Prayers; probably some stated common form of prayer or liturgy. Cp. Blunt, on the Early Church, p. 32.

Bp. Pearson remarks here, "Erant perseverantes in orationibus, publicis nempe atque communibus, in ipso cœtu ab Apostolis etiam factis. Sub lege Moysi nullum de precibus conceptum videtur mandatum: pii tamen sæpius in templo orabant; Baptista discipulos suos docuit orare. Unde unus ex discipulis Christo dixit, Domine, doce nos orare, sicut docuit et Joannes discipulos suos. (Luc. xi. 1.) Unde Christus Orationem eam protulit, quam Dominicam vocamus. Apostoli igitur, quibus Spiritus Sanctus omnia in memoriam revocavit, quæcunque antea Christus illis revelaverat, et eâ Oratione usi sunt, et etiam alias usurpabant, à quibus vetustissimæ precum formulæ in omnibus ecclesiis pene eadem derivatæ sunt."

43. ἐγένετο—ἐγένετο] Mark the difference of tense. Fear was inspired into the hearts of the multitude once for all, and remained there: signs and wonders were being wrought often by the Apostles.

—τέρατα καὶ σημεῖα] Cp. v. 19.

44. εἶχον ἅπαντα κοινά] they had all things common. See on iv. 32—35. "Liberum cuique fuit facere hoc, aut non facere, ut ostendit Ananiæ exemplum (v. 4) et Apostolorum tempore collectæ in usum pauperum frequentatæ sunt, ex Apostolorum præscripto. 1 Cor. xvi." (Rosenm.)

There was a special reason for this communion of goods at Jerusalem, where converts to Christianity would be regarded as renegades by the Jews, and be cut off from domestic intercourse, and from former means of subsistence.

Though this example does not bind now in the strictness of the letter, yet it always binds in spirit. See Rom. xii. 13. Gal. vi. 6. Heb. xiii. 16. Cp. Bp. Beveridge on Art. xxxviii. "Christian Men's goods not common."

45. ἐπίπρασκον] they were selling.—Observe the imperfects here and in the next verses, ἐπίπρασκον, διεμέριζον, μετελάμβανον, προσετίθει—giving a vivid picture of what was continually happening then, in the infancy of the Church, and has never been seen since that time in the same degree.

46. καθ' ἡμέραν π. ὁ. ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ] every day continuing with one accord in the Temple. A warning against the sin of schism. Although the Priests who officiated in the Temple at Jerusalem had slain the Prince of Life (v. 23. 36; iii. 15), yet His Disciples αὐτὰ πᾶσι, καθότι ἂν τις χρεῖαν εἶχε. ⁴⁶ ^a Καθ' ἡμέραν τε προσκαρτεροῦντες ^a ch. 20. 7.

 ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, κλῶντές τε κατ' οἶκον ἄρτον, μετελάμβανον τροφῆς ἐν ἀγαλλιάσει καὶ ἀφελότητι καρδίας, ⁴⁷ ^b αἰνοῦντες τὸν Θεὸν, καὶ ἔχοντες χάριν ^b Rom. 14. 18.
 πρὸς ὅλον τὸν λαόν. ^c ch. 5. 14.
 & 11. 24.

‘Ο δὲ Κύριος προσετίθει τοὺς σωζομένους καθ' ἡμέραν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ.

III. ¹ ^c Ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ δὲ Πέτρος καὶ Ἰωάννης ἀνέβαινον εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν ἐπὶ τὴν ^c ch. 2. 46.
 ὥραν τῆς προσευχῆς, τὴν ἐνάτην.

did not separate themselves from the public offices of Prayer and Praise in that Temple. At the same time they refused to submit to any sinful conditions imposed by the Rulers of Jerusalem, v. 29. See also next note.

— κλῶντες—ἄρτον] breaking bread. Hence S. Ignatius, Eph. 20, ἕνα ἄρτον κλῶντες, i. e. receiving the Holy Eucharist. See on v. 42. “Significatur (says Bengel) victus quotidianus, cum quo persæpe conjuncta erat Eucharistiae administratio: cf. xx. 7. 1 Cor. xi. 20.” Doubtless it describes the Christian ἀγάπαι. The words “daily bread,” in the Lord’s Prayer, were applied by Primitive Fathers to the reception of the Holy Eucharist as joined to the daily meal. See Clem. Alex. Pedag. ii. 10. Cyprian, Ep. 54. Blunt, p. 106, and note above on v. 42.

— κατ’ οἶκον] at home, or in the house, or room to which they habitually resorted for worship. At home. So our English margin and the Syriac, and so Bengel, Meyer, and Alford. For this use of κατ’ οἶκον, see Rom. xvi. 5. Philem. 2. 1 Cor. xvi. 19. Clem. Rom. i. 1. Mart. Ignat. 7. There is a contrast between the Public Worship of the Temple and the religious offices of Christian Assemblies at home.

The sense is, While they resorted daily to the public service of the Temple, they celebrated (what they could not have in the Temple) the Holy Communion in their own oratory at home, perhaps in the same οἶκος, or room, as that mentioned above, ii. 2 (see note there), where the Holy Ghost descended on the Church upon the Day of Pentecost. See also below, v. 42, ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, καὶ κατ’ οἶκον, where there is the same contrast.

The Apostles and primitive Disciples would not separate themselves from the Temple, but resorted habitually to it, in order that it might not be supposed that the Gospel, which they preached, was at variance with the Law of Moses; and in order that they might give a practical confirmation to their argument that Christ had been foretold by Moses and the Prophets, whose office it was to prepare the way for Him. At the same time they would not tempt any one to imagine that the Temple, with its ceremonial, “which was a shadow of good things to come” (Heb. x. 1), and whose body and substance was Christ (Col. ii. 17), could supply the spiritual needs of the faithful worshipper; they therefore assembled κατ’ οἶκον, for prayer and praise, and for the administration of the Sacraments; probably in their own upper room, which had now become the Church of God. Happily for her, the difficulties hence arising were solved a few years afterwards by the destruction of the Temple, and by the abolition of its services. The demolition of the Jewish Temple was the building up of the Christian Church. See above, p. 29.

— μετελάμβανον τροφῆς ἐν ἄ. κ. ἄ. κ.] they were partaking of food with one another, the rich being glad to distribute (1 Tim. vi. 18).—ἐν ἀγαλλιάσει, rejoicing in the privilege of giving; and not doing it in a scrupulous or ostentatious spirit, but in singleness of heart, ἐν ἀφελότητι, in simplicity (Rom. xii. 8. Col. iii. 22). On the sense of ἀφελής—properly applied to land exempt from stones and pebbles, rendering the land sterile; and to smooth roads,—see Ruhnken, Lex. Tim. v. φέλλια, and Valck. here. And the poor were thankful for what they received (James i. 9), and did not conceal their gratitude.

47. Κύριος] the Lord. Observe the word Κύριος as used here. The Apostles preached and baptized; but it was the Lord Who was doing those, who received the Word and Sacraments of Salvation, to the Church. Κύριος in the Old Testament is Jehovah, and in the New is Christ. Christ is one with Jehovah, and He adds believers to the Church, Κυριακῇ, the Lord’s House; cp. on Luke x. 1, and above on i. 6, and i. 21.

— προσετίθει] was adding.

— τοὺς σωζομένους] present participle in a middle sense; and it designates those who were escaping (as it were) from the Flood, and taking refuge in the Ark, the Church; those who were flying from the bondage of a spiritual Egypt, and were entering on the way of salvation, toward the land of Promise; those who were being delivered from the death of sin, by incorporation into the σωτήριον σώμα τοῦ Σωτῆρος, Eph. v. 23. Cf. v. 40, σώθητε ἀπὸ τῆς γενεᾶς τῆς σκολιᾶς ταύτης, and S. Ignat. Polyc. i. πάντα παρακαλεῖν ἵνα σώζωνται, to escape, save themselves. And see below on xiii. 48.

“Calvinism has made great use of this text, and important consequences have been deduced from it. But the phrase of the original is τοὺς σωζομένους, where the tense employed shows that the expression applies only to those who are in a state of salvation; as τοῖς ἀπολλυμένοις (1 Cor. i. 18) applies to the opposite; discouraging the Calvinistic interpretation.” Professor Blunt (Duties of the Parish Priest, Sect. ii. p. 51). “It is remarkable that the tense used (viz. the present) is the only tense which excludes the Calvinistic interpretation; both the Future (σωθησόμενος) and the Past (σεσωσμένος) would have favoured it.” (Bp. Middleton, p. 369.) See further below on the kindred text, xiii. 48.

— καθ’ ἡμέραν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ] daily to the Church. So E and the great majority of cursive MSS. D has ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ. The words τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ are not in A, B, C, and some ancient Versions, which read καθ’ ἡμέραν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό. Πέτρος δὲ καὶ Ἰωάννης ἀνέβαινον, as in the next chapter, v. 1. It is not improbable that τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ may be a gloss here. In v. 41, St. Luke says simply προσετέθησαν ψυχὰι ὡσεὶ τρισχίλια, but we have προσετίθεντο τῷ Κυρίῳ in v. 14. The use of ἐπὶ after προστίθημι is illustrated by Luke xii. 25, προσθεῖναι ἐπὶ τὴν ἡλικίαν αὐτοῦ πῆχυν ἓνα. And the junction of ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ with ἀνέβαινον is somewhat constrained and harsh.

Perhaps therefore with Bengel, Lachmann, and Alford we ought to read προστίθει τοὺς σωζομένους ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό, and to commence the next chapter, Πέτρος δὲ καὶ Ἰωάννης. The words ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό are very significant, as expressing the Unity of Faith in which all were knit together; see i. 15.

Other Editors (Tischendorf, Bloomf., Meyer) retain the words τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, with Elz.

In such a case as this it seems best to allow the words to remain undisturbed, and to leave the question to the judgment of the learned reader.

If the words τῇ Ἐκκλησίᾳ are genuine, then this is the first place where the term Ecclesia, or Church, occurs, in this the divinely inspired History of the Church, where the word Ecclesia is repeated about twenty times.

The Holy Ghost does not specify any time of the imposition of the name “Church” on the congregation of Christians; but He introduces the word at once with the definite article (see v. 11). He displays the Church as already in being, and known as the divinely instituted Society which Christ had redeemed and purchased by His own blood. See xx. 28.

On the word Ἐκκλησία, see Matt. xvi. 18, and cp. below, v. 11, the next place in the Acts where Ἐκκλησία occurs.

CH. III. 1. ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό] See on ii. 47.

— Πέτρος καὶ Ἰωάννης] Peter and John were going up. S. Chrys. remarks on the constant union of Peter and John in the later portions of the Gospel, and the earlier ones of the Acts. See John xviii. 16; xx. 3; xxi. 2—21. Acts iii. 3, 4, 11; iv. 19; viii. 14, and an excellent note by Mr. Humphry here, and on v. 6.

From the circumstance, that St. John is so often mentioned in combination with St. Peter, up to the time when Peter and John are sent to Samaria to confirm the baptized converts (viii. 14), and that St. John is never afterwards mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles; though St. Peter is mentioned nearly forty times after that occasion; it may perhaps be reasonably inferred, that St. John departed from Judæa, perhaps into Asia, not long after that time. St. John is mentioned as present at Jerusalem on the occasion of St. Paul’s visit, Gal. ii. 9. Cp. Acts. v. 2.

The connexion between St. John’s Epistles and St. Peter’s Epistles has been noticed in the Editor’s Lectures on the Canon of Scripture (Lect. xi. 288), and below, in the Introduction to St. John’s Second Epistle.

The Fathers regard St. Peter as a representative of the practical life, and St. John of the contemplative. The junction of both under the influence of the Holy Ghost is necessary for the building up of the Church. Both must be united; both must seek for grace from above; both must go up together to the Temple to pray.

Concerning St. John’s personal history, see above, Intro-

² Καὶ τὶς ἀνὴρ, χωλὸς ἐκ κοιλίας μητρὸς αὐτοῦ ὑπάρχων, ἐβαστάζετο· ὃν ἐτίθουν καθ' ἡμέραν πρὸς τὴν θύραν τοῦ ἱεροῦ τὴν λεγομένην ὡραίαν, τοῦ αἰτεῖν ἔλεημοσύνην παρὰ τῶν εἰσπορευομένων εἰς τὸ ἱερόν. ³ Ὃς ἰδὼν Πέτρον καὶ Ἰωάννην μέλλοντας εἰσιέναι εἰς τὸ ἱερόν ἡρώτα ἔλεημοσύνην λαβεῖν. ⁴ Ἀτενίσας δὲ Πέτρος εἰς αὐτὸν σὺν τῷ Ἰωάννῃ εἶπε, Βλέψον εἰς ἡμᾶς· ⁵ Ὁ δὲ ἐπέιχεν αὐτοῖς, προσδοκῶν τι παρ' αὐτῶν λαβεῖν. ⁶ Εἶπε δὲ Πέτρος, Ἀργύριον καὶ χρυσίον οὐχ ὑπάρχει μοι· ὁ δὲ ἔχω, τοῦτό σοι δίδωμι· ⁷ ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τοῦ Ναζωραίου ἔγειραι καὶ περιπάτει. ⁸ Καὶ πιάσας αὐτὸν τῆς δεξιᾶς χειρὸς ἤγειρε. Παραχρῆμα δὲ ἐστερεώθησαν αὐτοῦ αἱ βάσεις καὶ τὰ σφυρά, ⁹ καὶ ἐξαλλόμενος ἔστη, καὶ περιεπάτει καὶ εἰσῆλθε σὺν αὐτοῖς εἰς τὸ ἱερόν, περιπατῶν καὶ ἀλλόμενος καὶ αἰνῶν τὸν Θεόν. ¹⁰ Καὶ εἶδεν πᾶς ὁ λαὸς αὐτὸν περιπατοῦντα καὶ αἰνοῦντα τὸν Θεόν· ¹¹ ἐπεγίνωσκόν τε αὐτὸν ὅτι οὗτος ἦν ὁ πρὸς τὴν ἔλεημοσύνην καθήμενος ἐπὶ τῇ ὡραίᾳ πύλῃ τοῦ ἱεροῦ, καὶ ἐπλήσθησαν θάμβους καὶ ἐκστάσεως ἐπὶ τῷ συμβεβηκότι αὐτῷ.

¹² Κρατοῦντος δὲ αὐτοῦ τὸν Πέτρον καὶ Ἰωάννην, συνέδραμε πρὸς αὐτοὺς πᾶς ὁ λαὸς ἐπὶ τῇ στοᾷ τῇ καλουμένῃ Σολομῶνος ἑκθαμβοί.

¹³ Ἰδὼν δὲ Πέτρος ἀπεκρίνατο πρὸς τὸν λαόν, Ἄνδρες Ἰσραηλῖται, τί θαυμάζετε ἐπὶ τούτῳ, ἢ ἡμῖν τί ἀτενίζετε, ὡς ἰδίᾳ δυνάμει ἢ εὐσεβείᾳ πεποιηκόσι τοῦ περιπατεῖν αὐτόν; ¹⁴ Ὁ Θεὸς Ἀβραὰμ καὶ Ἰσαὰκ καὶ Ἰακώβ, ὁ Θεὸς τῶν πατέρων ἡμῶν, ἰδόξασε τὸν παῖδα αὐτοῦ Ἰησοῦν, ὃν ὑμεῖς μὲν παρεδώκατε,

d ch. 4. 10.

e Isa. 35. 6.

f ch. 5. 12.
John 10. 23.g 2 Cor 3. 5.
h ch. 5. 30, 31.
i Matt. 22. 32.
j John 17. 1.
Eph. 1. 20—22.
Phil. 2. 9—11.
Heb. 2. 9.

duction to his Gospel, and the Article in Tillemont, Lardner, Winer, and Dr. W. Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, 1860.

— ἀνέβαινον] were going up to the Temple, a public place, at a time of general resort.

The miracle was wrought in a spot much frequented, and at a time when it was most crowded.

— τὴν ἐνάτην] the ninth hour: when the evening sacrifice was offered. Joseph. Ant. xiv. 4. 3, below, x. 3, and see the Rabbinical authorities in Wetst. p. 471. The ὥρα τρίτη, third hour, the hour of the morning sacrifice, has been already mentioned, ii. 15.

2. ἐβαστά[ετο] was being carried—in order to be laid at the Gate.

— ὃν ἐτίθουν] whom they used to lay.

— θύραν—ὡραίαν] the door called Beautiful. Either at Nicanor, Joseph. B. J. v. 5. 3, or the Door named Susan, perhaps so called διὰ τὴν ὡραϊότητα, as the City Susa was the City of Lilies (see Kuin. and Winer, ii. 580). Both these were on the eastern side of the Temple.

Here we have the word θύρα, in v. 10, πύλη. The reason seems to be, that they used to bring the man to the θύρα, or door, before it was opened (see xiv. 27; xvi. 26, 27; xxi. 30), and when persons were passing through it he lay at the πύλη, or gate.

4. βλέψον εἰς ἡμᾶς] look to us. "This suffices (says Sever. in Caten., where the MS. has ἀπόσκεπε, read ἀρεῖ) for thy instruction and health. Look to us, the Apostles of Christ. In His Name, by His power, not ours, arise, and walk."

It appears that the Apostles had the power of discerning the spirit of this man whom they healed; for he showed his thankful piety by entering the Temple, and praising God (v. 9). And he clung to Peter and John (v. 11), and continued with them in their perils (iv. 14). Cp. Acts xiv. 9, and see below, where they speak of his faith (v. 16), which may supply a comment on this passage.

Compare the healing of those who were bitten by fiery serpents in the wilderness. The brazen serpent healed them by the power of Him Who is the Saviour of all (Wisd. xvi. 7). But in order to be healed, they must look at it. (Numb. xxi. 8.)

5. ἐπέιχεν αὐτοῖς] sc. τὸν νοῦν, Luke xiv. 7.

6. ἀργύριον καὶ χρυσίον οὐχ ὑπάρχει μοι] silver and gold there is not to me—to me, who am a poor Galilean. A proof of his compliance with Christ's command, Matt. x. 9, μὴ κτήσησθε χρυσὸν μηδὲ ἀργυρὸν εἰς τὰς ζωὰς ὑμῶν.

"Legi apud auctores graves (says A. Lapide here), S. Thom. Aquinatem, cum ad Innocentium IV. Pontificem venisset, coram quo forte magna vis auri signati numerabatur, et Pontifex ei dixisset, Videsne, Thoma, Ecclesiam non amplius, sicut olim, cum primum inceptorat, dicere posse Argentum et aurum non habeo? modestè respondisse, Fatendum est, sancte Pater; sed etiam Ecclesia non potest, sicut primitiva, ad claudum dicere, Surge, et ambula."

— ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι Ἰησοῦ] in the Name of Jesus: see below, on ix. 34.

7. βάσεις—σφυρά] The soles first were strengthened, then the ankles; then he leapt up.

8. ἐξαλλόμενος] springing up from the ground: ἀνασκιρτῶν, Suid. Cp. Isa. xxxv. 6.

— περιεπάτει] he was walking.

11. αὐτοῦ] So A, B, C, E. Elz. τοῦ λαθέντος χωλοῦ, which seems to be a gloss.

— στοᾷ τ. κ. Σολομῶνος] The porticus,—corridor, arcade, or cloister of Solomon—where Jesus had walked at the Feast of Dedication, John x. 23, where see note.

12. ἡμῖν τί ἀτενίζετε] why on us do ye fix your eyes? The Holy Spirit had bestowed on them the grace of humility, as well as the gift of Tongues. On the word ἀτενίζω see i. 10.—ἡμῖν is put here emphatically, On us why do ye gaze? Look not to us, but to Christ.

— πεποιηκόσι τοῦ π.] This use of ποιεῖν, followed by τοῦ, and an infinitive, and indicating the effect designed, is derived from the LXX. See Josh. xxii. 26, ποιῆσαι τοῦ οικοδομῆσαι. Cp. 1 Kings xvi. 19. A somewhat similar use occurs below, vii. 19, ἐκάκωσεν τοῦ ποιεῖν, and xxvii. 1. Cp. Winer, § 44, p. 292.

— ἐδόξαε] he glorified Jesus. Observe the aorists. Ye denied Him and killed Him; but God glorified Him—even by His death.

13. τὸν παῖδα αὐτοῦ Ἰησοῦν] His servant Jesus. The word παῖς is applied to Christ in Acts iii. 26; iv. 27. 30. It is observable, that it is followed by the word Ἰησοῦς, and is never used to describe the Eternal generation of the Divine Logos, but is employed to designate His generation in time as the Man Christ Jesus, and so marks the distinction of the two Natures in One Person.

It is probable that παῖς in these passages is not to be rendered child, but servant, being used by the LXX for the Hebr. עַבְדִּי servus, and in this sense applied to Christ; see Isa. xlii. 1; xlviii. 20; xlix. 3, 5, 6; lii. 13; liii. 11; liv. 17. Zech. iii. 8, where δοῦλος is used by LXX. Cp. Matt. xii. 18, and so Theophyl. p. 207, δοῦλον τὸν Ἰησοῦν καλεῖ διὰ τὸ ἀνθρώπινον; cp. iv. 25.

The expression παῖς Θεοῦ, as applied in this sense to Christ by His disciples, is peculiar to the Acts of the Apostles. But this is what might be expected; and is an evidence of its genuineness and truth. At the time described in these earlier Chapters of this book, the minds of the Apostles must have been deeply impressed with a sense of the condescension, humiliation, and obedience of Christ, as seen in the scenes they had lately witnessed of His Agony and Passion. And it was a doctrine, which they were most concerned in inculcating now on the minds of the καὶ ἡρνήσασθε αὐτὸν κατὰ πρόσωπον Πιλάτου, κρίναντος ἐκείνου ἀπολύειν.

¹⁴ * Ὑμεῖς δὲ τὸν Ἅγιον καὶ Δίκαιον ἡρνήσασθε, καὶ ἤτήσασθε ἄνδρα ¹ φονέα ^{k Matt. 27. 20.}
χαρισθῆναι ὑμῶν. ¹⁵ ^m τὸν δὲ ἀρχηγὸν τῆς ζωῆς ἀπεκτείνετε, ὃν ὁ Θεὸς ἡγείρεν ^{Mark 15. 11.}
ἐκ νεκρῶν, οὗ ἡμεῖς μάρτυρές ἐσμεν. ¹⁶ Καὶ ἐπὶ τῇ πίστει τοῦ ὀνόματος αὐτοῦ ^{Luke 23. 18.}
τοῦτον ὃν θεωρεῖτε καὶ οἴδατε ἐστερέωσε τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ· καὶ ἡ πίστις ἡ δι' ^{John 18. 40.}
αὐτοῦ ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ τὴν ὀλοκληρίαν ταύτην ἀπέναντι πάντων ὑμῶν. ¹⁷ ⁿ Καὶ νῦν, ^{n ch. 13. 27.}
ἀδελφοί, οἶδα ὅτι κατὰ ἄγνοιαν ἐπράξατε, ὥσπερ καὶ οἱ ἄρχοντες ὑμῶν. ¹⁸ ^o Ὁ ^{Luke 23. 34.}
δὲ Θεὸς ἃ προκατήγγειλε διὰ στόματος πάντων τῶν προφητῶν αὐτοῦ, παθεῖν ^{o Luke 24. 44.}
τὸν Χριστὸν αὐτοῦ, ἐπλήρωσεν οὕτω. ¹⁹ ^p Μετανοήσατε οὖν καὶ ἐπιστρέψατε, ^{ch. 26. 22, 23.}
^q εἰς τὸ ἐξαλειφθῆναι ὑμῶν τὰς ἁμαρτίας, ὅπως ἂν ἔλθωσι καιροὶ ἀναψύξεως ^{p ch. 2. 38.}
^r ἀπὸ προσώπου τοῦ Κυρίου, ²⁰ καὶ ἀποστείλῃ τὸν προκεχειρισμένον ὑμῖν Ἰη- ^{q Isa. i. 16—20.}
σοῦν Χριστόν. ²¹ ^s ὃν δεῖ οὐρανὸν μὲν δέξασθαι ἄχρι χρόνων ἀποκαταστάσεως ^{& 43. 25.}
^{Joel 2. 13.}
^{r Jer. 31. 23—25.}
^{Zeph. 3. 14—20.}
^{s ch. i. 11.}
^{1 Pet. 3. 22.}

Jews—that Christ must have suffered these things, and so enter into His glory. (Luke xxiv. 26, 46.) See Acts iii. 18; xvii. 3, and on xxvi. 23. Cp. St. Peter's words (1 Pet. i. 11), τὰ εἰς Χριστὸν παθήματα, καὶ τὰς μετὰ ταῦτα δόξας. His Obedience to Death (both as piacular and exemplary) was to be preached as the cause of His Exaltation. See on Matt. xxviii. 18.

In the next age, the term παῖς Θεοῦ was applied to Christ as a Son. See Polycarp. Mart. § 14, and S. Hippolyt. Philosoph. p. 336, and contra Noëtum, § 5 and § 7 and § 11, and the note of Fabricius, ii. p. 10.

— ὑμεῖς] A, B, C, E add the μὲν, which is not in Elz.

— Πιλάτου] of Pilate. Πιλάτος has always the Article in St. John, but never in the Acts. Cp. Winer, p. 103.

14, 15. ἄνδρα φονέα—ἀρχηγὸν τ. (ζωῆς) You craved as a favour from Pilate the life of one who killed others; and you extorted the death of Him Who is the life of the dead. Chrys.

15. ἀρχηγὸν] chief ruler, called also ἀρχιποιμὴν, chief shepherd by St. Peter, 1 Pet. v. 4.

16. πίστει τοῦ ὀνόματος αὐτοῦ] by faith in Him.—“ὄνομα Ἰησοῦ” est Jesus Ipse; ut in V. T. Nomen Jehovah est Jehovah Ipse.” (Rosenm.)

— ἡ πίστις ἡ δι' αὐτοῦ] the faith wrought through Him in us the Apostles, and in him who has been healed. “Fides quæ per Eum est” (Vulg.); i. e. “per Eum Apostolis data, ipsique sanato.” See Acts xiv. 9. So dià, John vi. 57. Rom. i. 5; v. 2; xi. 36. Gal. ii. 2. Heb. ii. 10. Glass. Phil. p. 491. δεῖ (says Ammon.) τὴν πίστιν συνδραμεῖν, καὶ τοῦ ὑγιαζομένου καὶ τοῦ ὑπερευχομένου.

17. κατὰ ἄγνοιαν] through ignorance. On the difference between sins of Presumption, or wilful sins, and sins of Ignorance, and how far, and in what cases, Ignorance excuses, see Bp. Sanderson (Serm. vi. ad Pop. on Gen. xx. 6, § 11—28; iii. pp. 223—240). Cp. Luke xxiii. 34. John xvi. 3. 1 Cor. ii. 8. 1 Tim. i. 13.

18. διὰ στόματος] by the mouth of all His prophets. All the Prophets are regarded as having one mouth, by which the One Spirit speaks (cp. Matt. xxvii. 9; 2 Pet. i. 21), and bears one and the same testimony to the Passion of Christ.

— αὐτοῦ] So B, C, D, E. His Christ (cp. iv. 26), though rejected by you. Elz. omits αὐτοῦ.

On this text see Dr. Barrow, Serm. lxxvi. vol. iii. p. 451, “The sufferings of Christ foretold in the Old Testament.”

19. ὅπως ἂν] in order that the seasons of refreshing may come; “ut veniant vobis,” says Iren. iii. 12, and Tertullian, de Resurr. c. 23, and Vulg. Cp. Winer, § 42, pp. 277. 410;

St. Peter's speech is addressed to the Jewish people, and is still applicable to them. In it the Holy Spirit declares a solemn truth, viz. that the Coming of the seasons of Refreshment from the presence of the Lord, and of the Second Advent of Christ, and the Restitution of all things, are so ordered by Divine Wisdom as to depend on the Repentance of the Jews, and on their reception of the Gospel. Cp. Rom. xi. 25—27. Zech. xii. 10, and xiii. xiv.

Their Conversion must precede those glorious manifestations.

Here is the true ground of appeal to the Jews. Repent ye, and believe, in order that the number of God's elect (which cannot be completed without you, cp. Heb. xi. 39, 40) may be accomplished, and His Coming and Kingdom may be hastened, and the happiness of the saints of old, who have departed in faith, may be consummated by the resurrection of their bodies, and you may be admitted in soul and body with them to the full fruition of heaven.

This remarkable truth is expressed by St. Peter himself in his Second Epistle (2 Pet. iii. 12), where he exhorts his Jewish-Christian readers to live in holiness, expecting and hastening the Coming of the Day of the Lord. This is one of the many internal evidences of the genuineness of that Epistle.

— καιροὶ ἀναψύξεως] seasons of refreshing: ἀνάψυξις is used by the LXX for πῆλξ, from root πῆλ, respiravit se, Exod. viii. 15, applied to Pharaoh when he had a respite, or breathing-time, from the plagues.

The re-appearing of Christ is compared to a season of deliverance from antecedent grievous calamities. Cp. Luke xxi. 28, and Rom. viii. 19—23, quoted here by Chrys. The Church must expect severe tribulation from the power of Antichrist, before the Second Advent of Christ. The one will be followed by the other.

Then the present material world will be dissolved; and the faithful will be translated to the new heavens and new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness, 2 Pet. iii. 13.

— ἀπὸ προσώπου] from the face. A Hebraism.—See Vorst. p. 337. Cp. 1 Thess. ii. 19.

20. καὶ] kal appears to have here the sense of the Hebrew Vau, and to be used to join clauses which we should combine by when. See Gen. xix. 23. 2 Sam. iv. 7. Schroeder, Synt. Hebr. § 109, p. 329.

— προκεχειρισμένον] So A, B, C, D, E, and many cursive MSS. and Versions, for προκεκρινμένον. προκεχειρισμένον = προβεβλημένον, ἡτοιμασμένον. (Hesych.) “præparatum” (Iren.). “destinatum” (Tertullian). Cp. Acts xxii. 14; xxvi. 16.

21. δέξασθαι] δέχομαι—connected with δεῖν—to contain, to hold, to keep, suscipere. (Vulg.) Cp. Acts vii. 38; xxi. 17. James i. 21. This sense is authorized by Justin Martyr (Apol. i. 60), who uses the word κατέχειν, and by Theophyl., (Æcumen.), and others. So accipio is used by Virg. (Æn. vii. 209), “Hinc illum Corythi Tyrrhenâ a sede profectum Aurea nunc solio stellantis regia cœli accipit, et numerum divorum ætatis augeat” (Wetst.). The heavens contain Christ as Man; but as God He is ἀκατάληπτος, incomprehensibile.

The Divines of Rome have endeavoured to reconcile this statement of St. Peter with the doctrine of Transubstantiation; but with what success may be seen by the following note of one of the most learned and ingenious among them, Corn. a Lapide: “Non docemus Christum cœlo evocandum ad Eucharistiam, quasi cœlum decedens locali motu descendat, hoc enim tantum fiet in die Judicii; sed quod manens in cœlo per Omnipotentiam Dei præsentem (i. e. carnaliter) se sistat in Eucharistiâ, sive id fiat per corporis Ejus replicationem, sive per acquisitionem novi loci (de quo disputant scholastici) idque invisibiliter et indivisibiliter, cum in cœlo sit visibiliter et divisibiliter respectu loci; alio enim loco (sc. cœli) sit Christi caput, in alio collum, in alio pectus, in alio pedes; cum in Eucharistiâ omnia Christi Membra sint in eodem loco, puta in eadem hostiâ eodemque hostiæ puncto.”

— ἄχρι χρόνων ἀποκαταστάσεως] not to the season, καιρὸς, as if transitory, but to the times (permanent) of the fulfilment and consummation of those things which God promised by the Prophets. See on Mark ix. 12, and on Acts i. 6. ἀποκατάστασις = τελεῖωσις (Hesych.): συμπλήρωσις (Schol. Mosq. ap. Grinfeld); “plena rerum exhibitio” (Valck. on Luke vii. 10). So Æcumen. and Didym., who says, “Christ, having been received into heaven, remains there till the end of the world, when He will come again with power, and all that the Prophets have foretold will be accomplished;” and then all Christ's enemies, Satan and the world, will be put under His feet, and His mediatorial kingdom be complete, and God will be all in all. See 1 Cor. xv. 25, 26. Heb. x. 12, 13; and Grotius and Rosenm. here, and note above on Matt. xxviii. 18.

The καιρὸς ἀναψύξεως is the season when Christ will re-appear. Cp. Luke xxi. 28, “Look up, for your redemption draweth nigh.” But the χρόνοι ἀποκαταστάσεως, or times of restitution, in t Deut. 18. 15—19.

ch. 7. 37.

u Gen. 12. 3.
& 22. 18. & 26. 4.
Rom. 15. 8.
Gal. 3. 8.

v Matt. 10. 5.
Luke 24. 47.
ch. 13. 46.

πάντων, ὃν ἐλάλησεν ὁ Θεὸς διὰ στόματος τῶν ἁγίων αὐτοῦ προφητῶν ἀπ' αἰῶνος. ²² Ὡς ἐμὲ πατέρας εἶπεν, Ὅτι προφήτην ὑμῖν ἀναστήσει Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς ὑμῶν ἐκ τῶν ἀδελφῶν ὑμῶν ὡς ἐμέ αὐτοῦ ἀκούσεσθε κατὰ πάντα ὅσα ἂν λαλήσῃ πρὸς ὑμᾶς. ²³ Ἔσται δὲ, πᾶσα ψυχὴ, ἣτις ἂν μὴ ἀκούσῃ τοῦ προφήτου ἐκείνου, ἐξολοθρευθήσεται ἐκ τοῦ λαοῦ. ²⁴ Καὶ πάντες δὲ οἱ προφῆται ἀπὸ Σαμουὴλ καὶ τῶν καθεξῆς ὅσοι ἐλάλησαν, καὶ κατήγγειλαν τὰς ἡμέρας ταύτας. ²⁵ Ὡς ἐστε οἱ υἱοὶ τῶν προφητῶν, καὶ τῆς διαθήκης, ἧς διέθετο ὁ Θεὸς πρὸς τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν, λέγων πρὸς Ἀβραάμ, Καὶ ἐν τῷ σπέρματί σου ἐνευλογηθήσονται πᾶσαι αἱ πατριαὶ τῆς γῆς. ²⁶ Ὡς ὑμῖν πρῶτον ὁ Θεὸς ἀναστήσας τὸν παῖδα αὐτοῦ Ἰησοῦν ἀπέστειλεν αὐτὸν εὐλογοῦντα ὑμᾶς, ἐν τῷ ἀποστρέφειν ἕκαστον ἀπὸ τῶν πονηριῶν ὑμῶν.

IV. ¹ Δαλούντων δὲ αὐτῶν πρὸς τὸν λαὸν, ἐπέστησαν αὐτοῖς οἱ ἱερεῖς, καὶ ὁ στρατηγὸς τοῦ ἱεροῦ, καὶ οἱ Σαδδουκαῖοι, ² διαπονούμενοι διὰ τὸ διδάσκειν αὐτοὺς τὸν λαόν, καὶ καταγγέλλειν ἐν τῷ Ἰησοῦ τὴν ἀνάστασιν τὴν ἐκ νεκρῶν ³ καὶ ἐπέβαλον αὐτοῖς τὰς χεῖρας, καὶ ἔθεντο αὐτοὺς εἰς τήρησιν εἰς τὴν αὔριον ἣν γὰρ ἑσπέρα ἦδη.

a ch. 28. 24.

⁴ Πολλοὶ δὲ τῶν ἀκουσάντων τὸν λόγον ἐπίστευσαν, καὶ ἐγενήθη ὁ ἀριθμὸς τῶν ἀνδρῶν ὥσπερ χιλιάδες πέντε.

b Luke 3. 2.

⁵ Ἐγένετο δὲ ἐπὶ τὴν αὔριον συναχθῆναι αὐτῶν τοὺς ἄρχοντας καὶ πρεσβυτέρους καὶ γραμματεῖς ἐν Ἱερουσαλὴμ, ⁶ καὶ Ἄνναν τὸν ἀρχιερέα καὶ Καϊάφαν, which Christ will be visible to the faithful, will never end. Cp. 2 Pet. ii. 13. On this distinction of καὶ and χρόνος see i. 7.

— ἀπ' αἰῶνος] ab antiquissimo tempore,—'as long as time was.' Cp. John ix. 32, ἐκ τοῦ αἰῶνος οὐκ, i. e. never. Isa. xl. 21; lxi. 4. 1 Cor. viii. 13. Vorst. de Hebr. p. 737. All the Prophets, i. e. Prophecy as a whole, of all time, has spoken of Christ and His kingdom.

22. Μωϋσῆς μὲν] Having said that the Prophets all speak of Christ, he next appeals to Moses, the giver of the Law; and proves, that Jesus Christ is not contrary to the Law and the Prophets, but was preached by them, i. e. by all the Scriptures of the Jews, whom he is addressing.

— ὡς ἐμέ] like unto me. Deut. xviii. 15; Moses said that God would raise up a Prophet like unto himself; viz. as a man persecuted in childhood, and saved in Egypt; resisted by those whom he came to save, and even by some of his own household; and as confronting and vanquishing the false prophets of Egypt, and a Mediator with God; speaking to God face to face,—speaking as "the meekest of men," yet zealous for God; a worker of miracles; dividing the sea (a type of Baptism); giving water from the rock, and bread from heaven (types of the Word and Sacraments); raising the serpent on the pole in the wilderness, as Christ was lifted up to die upon the cross.

Like unto me, and yet greater than I (cf. Heb. v. 3—6); for ye shall hear Him in whatever He shall say to you. He fulfilled the Levitical Law, and so took away that which was published by Moses, and therefore is greater than he. The likeness of Christ to Moses is beautifully, though silently, traced by St. Stephen in his speech to the Sanhedrim, Acts vii.; see the Preliminary note to that speech.

23. ἐξολοθρευθήσεται ἐκ τοῦ λαοῦ] The LXX have here (Deut. xviii. 19) ἐγὼ ἐκδικήσω ἐξ αὐτοῦ,—ἐκδικήσω in the original is ἐκδικήσω, from root קח, exquisivit, 'I will require it of him;' which is explained here by the Holy Spirit speaking by St. Peter to be tantamount to—He shall be punished with death, he shall be cut off, ἐξολοθρευθήσεται,—a word familiar to St. Luke's readers from the LXX, where ἐξολοθρεύω occurs frequently for קח, exscidit, Gen. xvii. 14. Exod. xii. 15. 19. Lev. xvii. 4. 9. 14, and passim. See Aben Ezra in Surenhus. p. 401.

St. Luke does not follow here the LXX exactly, nor the Hebrew, but he gives the sense. This is one example among many of the practice of the Holy Spirit in the New Testament giving an explanatory paraphrase of His own words in the Old. See on Matt. ii. 23.

24. ἀπὸ Σαμουὴλ] from Samuel. Cp. 2 Sam. vii. 12—15.

CH. IV. 1. στρατηγὸς τοῦ ἱεροῦ] the captain of the Temple.

The officer of the Priest and Levites who kept guard at the Temple,—not a Roman functionary. See on Luke xxii. 4. The Romans do not appear, in the Acts, as Persecutors of the Apostles.

— οἱ Σαδδουκαῖοι] the Sadducees, who say there is no resurrection (Matt. xxii. 23. Acts xxiii. 8); and therefore foresaw that their own influence with the people would be impaired, if the Apostles succeeded in convincing them of the truth of the Resurrection of Christ. Hence their activity against the Gospel after the Resurrection. The High Priest and many of his assessors and associates were Sadducees. See v. 17. Cp. Joseph. Antiq. xiii. 9; xviii. 2.

Referring to a son of Annas, Ananus, who was afterwards High Priest, and a Sadducee, Josephus observes, that the Sadducees were distinguished above all his fellow-countrymen for cruelty in judicial causes,—περὶ τὰς κρίσεις ὡμοὶ παρὰ πάντας τοὺς Ἰουδαίους. (Joseph. xx. 9. 1.) Such were the judges before whom the Apostles were arraigned (see v. 17). This circumstance, and the fact that the Sadducees rejected the belief in all spiritual and Angelic agency, and in the doctrine of a future Resurrection, may serve to account for what has been deemed incredible by some, viz. the obstinate infatuation of the Sanhedrim in continuing to persecute the Apostles after the miraculous interference of God in their behalf.

For another reason see below on v. 23.

Gamaliel the Pharisee is better disposed to receive that evidence in their behalf. See v. 17. 33, 34.

2. ἐν τῷ Ἰησοῦ] in Jesus. The truth of the Resurrection,

(1) in the case of Jesus Himself, and

(2) of all men through Him. 1 Cor. xv. 22.

3. ἑσπέρα] eventide. The miracle had been wrought about 3 P.M. See iii. 1.

4. ἐγενήθη] became.

— ὥσπερ χιλιάδες πέντε] about five thousand men. Here was a spiritual fulfilment of the prophecy contained in Christ's miracle on the mountain of Bethsaida, when He said to His Apostles, "Give ye them to eat." (Luke ix. 13. See Chrys.) Those who ate of the food provided by Him were about five thousand men;—ἄνδρες; cp. ἄνδρων here, and Matt. xiv. 21. Both miracles were wrought in the evening. Cp. Mark vi. 35. The Gospel is God's last revelation.

He Who fed the bodies of the 5000 on the mountain, by the hands of His Apostles, now feeds the souls by an Apostolic Ministry with the bread of life from heaven; and He will always continue to do so. Cp. John vi. 9. 13, and at end of the chapter.

5. ἐν] So A, B, D, E. Elz. εἰς.

6. καὶ Ἄνναν τὸν ἀρχιερέα καὶ Καϊάφαν] and Annas the High Priest and Caiaphas. Why is Annas here called the High Priest, and placed before Caiaphas—who was High Priest?

καὶ Ἰωάννην καὶ Ἀλέξανδρον, καὶ ὅσοι ἦσαν ἐκ γένους ἀρχιερατικοῦ. ⁷ Καὶ στήσαντες αὐτοὺς ἐν τῷ μέσῳ ἐπυνθάνοντο, ^c Ἐν ποίᾳ δυνάμει, ἢ ἐν ποίῳ ^c Matt. 21. 23.
ὀνόματι ἐποιήσατε τοῦτο ὑμεῖς; ⁸ Τότε Πέτρος ^d πλησθεὶς Πνεύματος ἁγίου ^d ch. 7. 55.
εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, Ἀρχοντες τοῦ λαοῦ, καὶ πρεσβύτεροι τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ, ⁹ εἰ ἡμεῖς σήμερον ἀνακρινόμεθα ἐπὶ εὐεργεσίᾳ ἀνθρώπου ἀσθενοῦς, ἐν τίνι οὗτος σέσωσται, ¹⁰ ^e γνωστὸν ἔστω πᾶσιν ὑμῖν, καὶ παντὶ τῷ λαῷ Ἰσραὴλ, ὅτι ἐν ^e ch. 2. 24.
τῷ ὀνόματι Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τοῦ Ναζωραίου, ὃν ὑμεῖς ἐσταυρώσατε, ὃν ὁ Θεὸς ^{& 3. 6, 16.}
ἤγειρεν ἐκ νεκρῶν, ἐν τούτῳ οὗτος παρέστηκεν ἐνώπιον ὑμῶν ὑγιής. ¹¹ ^f Οὗτός ^f Ps. 118. 22.
ἔστιν ὁ λίθος ὁ ἐξουθενηθεὶς ὑφ' ὑμῶν τῶν οἰκοδομούντων, ὁ γενόμενος εἰς κεφαλὴν γωνίας. ¹² Καὶ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐν ἄλλῳ οὐδενὶ ἢ σωτηρία. ^g οὐδὲ γὰρ ὄνομά ἐστιν ἕτερον ὑπὸ τὸν οὐρανὸν τὸ δεδομένον ἐν ἀνθρώποις, ἐν ᾧ δεῖ σωθῆναι ἡμᾶς.

The reason seems to be, that though Caiaphas was High Priest de facto, being intruded into the office by the civil power of Rome (see on Matt. xxvi. 3), yet Annas was High Priest de jure, and was regarded as such ecclesiastically (see on Luke iii. 2). Hence our Lord was taken to Annas first (John xviii. 13, where see note).

Hence also St. Luke designates Annas as the High Priest here and in his Gospel (iii. 2), at the same time that he mentions Caiaphas in both places with, and next after, Annas.

After the Crucifixion, and for many years, the Civil power of Rome seems to have done no overt act spontaneously against the Christian Church;

Pontius Pilate, though he was Procurator till A.D. 36, is never mentioned as a persecutor in the Acts.

Indeed, what Tertullian records concerning the "Acta Pilati"—almost in conscience a Christian, "conscientiā suā Christiani,"—and the consequent proposition of the Emperor Tiberius to the Roman Senate to divinize Christ (Tertullian, Apol. 21, and Apol. 5. Euseb. ii. 2), is too well grounded to be rejected (see Bp. Pearson, Opera Post. i. 342, and ii. 21); and it derives some confirmation from the remarkable fact, which appears from the silence of St. Luke, that for some years after the Ascension, Christianity had nothing to fear from the Roman power.

The persecutions of the Apostles and Christians at Jerusalem and in Palestine were set on foot, and carried on, by the spiritual power of the Jewish Hierarchy. Thus the bitterness of the Jewish Rulers against Christ and His Church is brought out more strongly by the contrast of the comparative mildness of the Heathen power of Rome. No wonder, that the agency of Rome was employed by God to destroy Jerusalem.

Annas was the Head of the Jewish Hierarchy. The nominee of Rome, Caiaphas, had, as such, a subordinate place. This seems to be the reason, why in the Evangelical narratives of the Crucifixion, which was the act of the Roman power, instigated by the Chief Priest and people,—and could not have been done without the fiat of the Roman Procurator (John xviii. 31),—Caiaphas, the Roman High Priest, holds the chief place. But, after that act, the Roman power was quiescent, and the responsibility and guilt of persecution lay with the Jewish Sanhedrim; and Annas, the spiritual Head of the Nation, is mentioned first, as here. See above on Luke iii. 2, and John xviii. 13.

It was probably on account of the position of Annas, as Spiritual Head of the Jewish Hierarchy, that five of his Sons were appointed to the High Priest's office by those who desired to conciliate the Jews, and paid some regard to the original law of hereditary succession in that office.

Yet we read such observations as the following, in one of the most celebrated modern commentaries on this passage: "Da damals nicht Hannas, sondern Kaiaphas regierender Oberpriester war, so muss hier wie Luke iii. 2. eine irrigte Angabe zugestanden werden." (Meyer, p. 87.) As if St. Luke, the friend and companion of St. Paul, the scholar of Gamaliel, and commissioner of the Sanhedrim, to say nothing of St. Luke's inspiration, did not know who the High Priest was, and is now to be set right by a modern Expositor!

— Ἰωάννην καὶ Ἀλέξανδρον] John and Alexander. John was probably the son of Annas; and Alexander was the brother of the famous Jewish Historian Philo (Josephus, Ant. xviii. 8. 1. S. Jerome, Cat. Scr. art. Philo), and a man of great wealth. Josephus, B. J. v. 5. 3. Bp. Pearson.

7. ἐν τῷ μέσῳ] in the midst. The Sanhedrim sat in a semi-circle. See on vi. 12.

— ἐπυνθάνοντο] they were inquiring. St. Luke in the Acts is very fond of the imperfect tense; as if he had a picture of what he is describing, present to his eyes. See ii. 12. 44. 47; iii. 1, 2; iv. 32—36.

— ἐποιήσατε τοῦτο] ye did this; they will not say this miracle; they insinuated that it was done by some evil power, or by magic, as they had said of Christ's miracles (Luke xi. 15. John viii. 48); and so some said even in the fourth century. See Aug. de Con. Evang. i. 8 (quoted by A. Lapide).

— ὑμεῖς] ye, spoken with contempt, and therefore reserved as the last word of the sentence—ye Galileans!

8. Πέτρος πλησθεὶς Πνεύματος ἁγίου] Peter being filled with the Holy Ghost. Compare Peter a few days since in the Palace of the High Priest, thrice denying his Master from fear of prison and death, and now brought forth from prison, and confessing Christ before the same High Priest and the Sanhedrim, which had delivered Christ up to Pilate for crucifixion, and charging them with His murder; and declaring that the stone rejected by you, the builders of God's house, is become the Head of the Corner; nor is the salvation, which is promised by God, to be found in any other than Him, Who was crucified by you. How is this change to be accounted for? By inspiration—by the gift of the Holy Ghost. This is the only solution of this and of a vast number of other phenomena in Holy Scripture. Faith in the Holy Ghost, and in His Divine agency on the soul, makes those phenomena clear; without it they are unintelligible. See above on ii. 12.

In the earlier Chapters of the Acts of the Apostles we see Peter and John on one side, and Caiaphas and Annas on the other: the former the Representatives of the Christian Church, the latter of the Jewish Hierarchy. There is a remarkable contrast between these two parties. May not Caiaphas and Cephas perhaps be from the same root קֶפֶס? At first Cephas had quailed before Caiaphas, but now that the Holy Ghost is given, Caiaphas cannot resist Cephas (v. 14); the one falls, the other rises. The reason is, because Caiaphas rejects the Corner Stone, and is bruised to pieces by it. (Matt. xxvi. 64. Luke xx. 18.) But Cephas is a lively stone, and is built upon it. (Matt. xvi. 18. 1 Pet. ii. 4.)

Annas and Jo-hannes are from the same root יָנַן (gratiosus fuit), but John is strong in the Grace of God, and conquers thereby.

9. εὐεργεσίᾳ ἀνθρώπου] good deed done to the man; ἀνθρώπου is the genitive of the object. See on Matt. x. 1, ἐξουσίαν πνευμάτων. Luke vi. 12, προσερχῆ τ. Θεοῦ.

10. Ἰησοῦ Χ. τοῦ Ναζωραίου, ὃν ὑμεῖς ἐσταυρώσατε] Jesus Christ the Nazarene, whom ye crucified. Think not that we desire to conceal His country, Nazareth, or His death, on the Cross. Ye crucified Him, but He was raised by God, and He now works miracles from heaven. (Chrys.) He quotes the title on the Cross.

11. ὑμῶν τῶν οἰκοδομούντων] of you the builders (τῶν οἰκοδῶν, A, B, E), the appointed Teachers of Israel. Cp. Matt. xxiii. 2, and John iii. 10, σὺ εἶ ὁ διδάσκαλος Ἰσραὴλ.

— εἰς κεφαλὴν γωνίας] to the head of the corner. Cp. St. Peter's declaration in his Epistle (1 Pet. ii. 6—8).

12. ἡ σωτηρία—τὸ δεδομένον] Observe the articles ἡ and τὸ, which find a proper place in a speech to the Rulers of the Jews, who confessed that man's salvation had been provided for by God, and that in His Name men might be saved. St. Peter teaches them that the means of that salvation are to be found in Christ, and in His Name alone, which is therefore declared to be Divine.

¹³ Θεωροῦντες δὲ τὴν τοῦ Πέτρου παρρησίαν καὶ Ἰωάννου, καὶ καταλαβόμενοι ὅτι ^h ἄνθρωποι ἀγράμματοί εἰσι καὶ ἰδιῶται, ἐθαύμαζον, ἐπεγίνωσκόν τε αὐτοὺς ὅτι σὺν τῷ Ἰησοῦ ἦσαν. ¹⁴ ⁱ τὸν δὲ ἄνθρωπον βλέποντες σὺν αὐτοῖς ἐστῶτα, τὸν τεθεραπευμένον, οὐδὲν εἶχον ἀντειπεῖν. ¹⁵ Κελεύσαντες δὲ αὐτοὺς ἔξω τοῦ συνεδρίου ἀπελθεῖν συνέβαλον πρὸς ἀλλήλους ¹⁶ λέγοντες, ^j Τί ποιήσομεν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις τούτοις; ὅτι μὲν γὰρ γνωστὸν σημεῖον γέγονε δι' αὐτῶν, πᾶσι τοῖς κατοικοῦσιν Ἱερουσαλὴμ φανερόν, καὶ οὐ δυνάμεθα ἀρνήσασθαι. ¹⁷ ἀλλ' ἵνα μὴ ἐπὶ πλείον διανεμηθῇ εἰς τὸν λαόν, ἀπειλῇ ἀπειλησώμεθα αὐτοῖς μηκέτι λαλεῖν ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι τούτῳ μηδενὶ ἀνθρώπων. ¹⁸ Καὶ καλέσαντες αὐτοὺς παρήγγειλαν αὐτοῖς τὸ καθόλου μὴ φθέγγεσθαι μηδὲ διδάσκειν ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Ἰησοῦ. ¹⁹ ^k Ὁ δὲ Πέτρος καὶ Ἰωάννης ἀποκριθέντες εἶπον πρὸς αὐτούς, Εἰ δίκαιόν ἐστιν ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ ὑμῶν ἀκούειν μᾶλλον ἢ τοῦ Θεοῦ κρίνατε. ²⁰ ¹ οὐ δυνάμεθα γὰρ ἡμεῖς ἅ εἰδομεν καὶ ἡκούσαμεν μὴ λαλεῖν. ²¹ Οἱ δὲ προσαπειλησάμενοι ἀπέλυσαν αὐτοὺς, μηδὲν εὐρίσκοντες τὸ πῶς κολάσωνται αὐτοὺς, ^m διὰ τὸν λαόν, ὅτι πάντες ἐδόξαζον τὸν Θεὸν ἐπὶ τῷ γεγονότι. ²² Ἐτῶν γὰρ ἦν πλείονων τεσσαράκοντα ὁ ἄνθρωπος, ἐφ' ὃν ἐγεγόνει τὸ σημεῖον τοῦτο τῆς ἰάσεως. ²³ ⁿ Ἀπολυθέντες δὲ ἦλθον πρὸς τοὺς ἰδίους, καὶ ἀπήγγειλαν ὅσα πρὸς αὐτοὺς οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι εἶπον. ²⁴ Οἱ δὲ ἀκούσαντες, ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἦραν φωνὴν πρὸς τὸν Θεόν, καὶ εἶπον, Δέσποτα, ^o σὺ ὁ Θεὸς ὁ ποιήσας τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ τὴν γῆν καὶ τὴν θάλασσαν, καὶ πάντα τὰ ἐν αὐτοῖς. ²⁵ ^p ὁ διὰ στόματος Δαυὶδ παιδὸς σου εἰπών, Ἵνα τί ἐφρύαξαν ἔθνη, καὶ λαοὶ ἐμελέτησαν κενά; ²⁶ παρέστησαν οἱ βασιλεῖς τῆς γῆς, καὶ οἱ ἄρχοντες συνήχθησαν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ κατὰ τοῦ Κυρίου καὶ κατὰ τοῦ Χριστοῦ αὐτοῦ. ²⁷ ^q Συνήχθησαν γὰρ ἐπ' ἀληθείας ἐν τῇ πόλει ταύτῃ ἐπὶ τὸν

13. καταλαβόμενοι] does not seem to mean, "having perceived by their speech," but having ascertained from inquiry, or previous knowledge. See xxv. 25.

— ἰδιῶται] ἰδιώτης, properly a private person, as opposed to a public magistrate, or minister or professor of art or science; hence illiterate. Cp. 2 Cor. xi. 6. 1 Cor. xiv. 16. 23, 24. See Bentley's excellent remarks on the passage in Victor's Chronicon, "Sancta Evangelia, tanquam ab idiotis Evangelistis composita, reprehenduntur et emendantur." Disc. on Free-thinking, pp. 112—120, 8th ed. 1743.

Here is a proof of Inspiration. The Apostles and Evangelists were ἀγράμματοι καὶ ἰδιῶται. They themselves confess it. And yet, who ever spoke, or has written as they did?

— ἐπεγίνωσκον] they were recognizing, one after the other.

14. τὸν δέ] τὸν τε, A, B, E.

17. ἀπειλῇ ἀπειλησώμεθα] Let us threaten with threatening; let us forbid them with menaces,—a Hebraism. See Isa. vi. 9. Exod. v. 12, and John iii. 29. Acts v. 28; xxiii. 14. 2 Pet. iii. 3. Vorst. de Hebr. pp. 624, 625. The Hebraisms show that St. Luke has been studious to preserve the very words of the speakers. Cp. on Luke xxii. 15.

12, 20.] On this text, as defining the limits of Obedience to human Authority, see Bp. Sanderson, iii. p. 287; iv. pp. 80. 98. (De Conscient. Prælect. iv. and v.) Cp. below, v. 29.

21. προσαπειλησάμενοι] having added threats to their former prohibition.

23. ἀρχιερεῖς] chief Priests. Under this name seem to be comprised,—

(1) All who had held the office of High Priest.

(2) Also the Sagans or Deputies, the Treasurers and Chief Wardens of the Temple. Lightfoot, i. pp. 911—918. Selden, de Synedr. iii. 8.

(3) The Heads of the Twenty-four courses of Priests, and all who were chosen into the Sanhedrim. Lightfoot, i. p. 439; ii. p. 109. And see on Matt. ii. 4.

24. ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἦραν φωνὴν πρὸς τ. Θεόν] with one accord they lifted up their voice to God. The circumstances here mentioned confirm the opinion that the primitive Church at Jerusalem had a common place of resort for united prayer. As soon as Peter and John are released, they come to their own people (πρὸς τοὺς ἰδίους), and immediately all join in prayer, and the place is shaken where they were assembled, and they are all filled with the Holy Ghost. See above, ii. 2.

The refuge of the Church in the time of Persecution is Common Prayer. Cp. xii. 5.

One of the many incidents recorded in the Acts of the Apostles, by which the Holy Ghost teaches the Church her duty in all emergencies that may arise. This Book may, therefore, be called the Chart and Compass of the Church, in her voyage over the sea of this world to the haven of Eternity. See Introduction, pp. 12—20.

— Δέσποτα] The Hebrew Adonai, Lord and Master of the Universe. The God of the physical world is here invoked by the Church as one with the God of Grace; a refutation of the false notion which afterwards grew into a Heresy, in the hands of Marcion and the Manichæans, who separated the One from the Other, and made an opposition between them. Cp. S. Polycarp's Prayer at his Martyrdom, p. 620, ed. Jacobson, and Clem. Rom. i. § 33, pp. 119, 120.

25. δ—εἰπών] A, B, E read ὁ τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν διὰ Πνεύματος ἁγίου στόματος Δαβὶδ παιδὸς σου εἰπών. D has ὁ διὰ Πνεύματος ἁγίου διὰ τοῦ στόματος λαλήσας Δαβὶδ παιδὸς σου, and Iren. "qui per Spiritum Sanctum ore David patris nostri pueri tui dixisti,"—which may suggest what appears to be the true reading, ὁ διὰ Πνεύματος ἁγίου διὰ στόματος Δαβὶδ, τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν, παιδὸς σου εἰπών.

25, 26. ἵνα τί—αὐτοῦ] verbatim from the LXX. Ps. ii. 1, 2. ἔθνη (the Gentiles), and λαοὶ (the Tribes of the Jews collected at the Passover and the Crucifixion), have no article here: they have none in the Hebrew.

25. ἐφρύαξαν] properly said of horses, and their fremitus or snorting. (Ammon., Suidas, Wetst., Valck.) The Gentile world was typified by the untamed colt ridden by Christ. Matt. xxi. 2.

The word φρύασσω is used by the LXX for the Hebrew שָׁרָר, strepuit cum furore, tumultuatus est, and φρύαγμα is used for שָׁרָר, superbia, elatio.—φρύασσεται = γαυριᾷ. (Hesych.) It expresses, therefore, rage and pride.

27. ἐπ' ἀληθείας] in very deed. See x. 34. Luke iv. 25.

— ἐν τῇ πόλει ταύτῃ] in this city. Omitted by Elz., but found in A, B, D, E. It adds force to the affirmation. In this Thine own favoured City, Jerusalem, they have conspired against Thee and have killed Thy Beloved One.

ἅγιον παῖδά σου Ἰησοῦν, ὃν ἔχρισας, Ἡρώδης τε καὶ Πόντιος Πιλάτος σὺν ἔθνεσι καὶ λαοῖς Ἰσραὴλ, ²⁸ ποιῆσαι ὅσα ἡ χεὶρ σου καὶ ἡ βουλή σου προ-ώρισε γενέσθαι. ²⁹ Καὶ τὰ νῦν, Κύριε, ἑπίδε ἐπὶ τὰς ἀπειλὰς αὐτῶν, καὶ δὸς τοῖς δούλοις σου μετὰ παρρησίας πάσης λαλεῖν τὸν λόγον σου, ³⁰ ἐν τῷ τῇ χερὶ σου ἐκτείνειν σε εἰς Ἰασιν, καὶ σημεῖα καὶ τέρατα γίνεσθαι διὰ τοῦ ὀνόματος τοῦ ἁγίου παιδός σου Ἰησοῦ.

³¹ Καὶ δεηθέντων αὐτῶν ἔσαλευθή ὁ τόπος ἐν ᾧ ἦσαν συνηγμένοι· καὶ ἐπλήσθησαν ἅπαντες τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος, καὶ ἐλάλουν τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ μετὰ παρρησίας.

³² Τοῦ δὲ πλήθους τῶν πιστευσάντων ἦν ἡ καρδιά καὶ ἡ ψυχὴ μία· καὶ οὐδὲ εἰς τὶ τῶν ὑπαρχόντων αὐτῷ ἔλεγεν ἴδιον εἶναι, ἄλλ' ἦν αὐτοῖς ἅπαντα κοινά.

³³ Καὶ μεγάλη δυνάμει ἀπεδίδουν τὸ μαρτύριον οἱ ἀποστόλοι τῆς ἀναστάσεως τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ· χάρις τε μεγάλη ἦν ἐπὶ πάντας αὐτούς. ³⁴ οὐδὲ γὰρ ἐνδεής τις ὑπῆρχεν ἐν αὐτοῖς· ὅσοι γὰρ κτήτορες χωρίων ἢ οἰκιῶν ὑπῆρχον, πωλοῦντες ἔφερον τὰς τιμὰς τῶν πιπρασκομένων, ³⁵ καὶ ἐτίθουν παρὰ τοὺς πόδας τῶν ἀποστόλων· διεδίδото δὲ ἐκάστῳ καθότι ἂν τις χρεῖαν εἶχεν.

— παῖδα] servant. See note on iii. 13. At the same time (see Matt. xii. 18), there seems to be a happy accommodation in the word παῖς to a secondary sense, that of Son; especially in this passage, with reference to Ps. ii. 7. 12, "Thou art My Son; — Kiss the Son."

²⁸ ποιῆσαι ὅσα—γενέσθαι] to do whatsoever things Thy hand and Thy counsel predetermined to take place; γενέσθαι, not ποιῆσθαι. God decreed the salvation of the World by Christ, but He did not command or approve the means by which that consummation was brought about. But He showed His infinite power and wisdom by eliciting the greatest good from the worst evil, and by making Satan himself, the Arch-Enemy of God and men, to be an instrument in advancing God's glory, and the Salvation of Mankind. Cp. S. Leo (Serm. xvi. de Passione Christi, p. 142), who says—Did the sin of those who killed Christ arise from the counsel of God? No—we must not so deem of divine Justice. Very different and altogether contrary was that which was foreknown in the malice of the Jews, and that which was fore-ordained in the Passion of Christ. "Impias furentium manus non immissit in se Dominus, sed admisit: nec præsciendo quid faciendum esset, coëgit ut fieret; nec egit ut hæc vellent, sed cessit ut possent; et sic usus est occæcatæ plebis insaniâ, quomodo et perfidiâ traditoris, quem ab immanitate concepti sceleris beneficiis est revocare dignatus," &c. Besides (as S. Leo observes), "Nec ipsis interfectoribus suis misericordiam denegavit; sed impiorum malum in bonum credentium commutavit."

Cp. Bp. Sanderson's Lectures on Conscience, Lect. ii. 7, "Deus utilis alieno malo in bonum, sed nunquam facit malum, ut inde proveniat bonum; et omnino cavendum est, ne ejusmodi locutiones intelligantur, ac si Deus malum aliquod antecederet vellet, approbaret, aut eligeret, velut medium ex sui naturâ conveniens ad alicujus boni finis consecutionem."

See also note above on ii. 23.

In all discussions on this and other similar texts we must not lose sight of certain great principles.

1. That God is the One Great First Cause.

2. That He wills that all should act according to the Law which He has given them.

3. That it is His Will that Man's will should be free.

As Aquinas says, 1^{ma} q. 83, Art. 1 ad 3. "Non hoc est de necessitate libertatis, quod sit prima causa sui ad quod liberum est; sicut nec ad hoc, quod aliquid sit causa alterius, requiritur, quod sit prima causa ejus. Deus igitur est prima causa movens et naturales causas et voluntarias; et sicut naturalibus causis movendo, eis non aufert quin actus earum sint naturales, ita movendo causas voluntarias, non aufert quin actiones earum sint voluntariæ. Sed potius hoc in eis facit; operatur enim in unoquoque secundum ejus proprietatem." See further on Predestination and Freewill, below, the Introduction to the Epistle to the Romans, pp. 194—198.

²⁹ ἑπίδε] Some Editors have received ἑφίδε here from A, D, E, and so Winer, p. 43. Cp. Phil. ii. 23.

³⁰ Ἰασιν—Ἰησοῦ] Seemingly a paronomasia. The Greek and Latin Fathers gladly availed themselves of the resemblance in sound between Ἰησοῦς and Ἰασις (e. g. Cyriil, Catech. x. Cp.

VOL. I.—PART II.

Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. ii. p. 130), as they did of that between πάσχα and πάσχω. See Matt. xxvi. 2. And indeed these allusions do not seem to be despised by Holy Scripture itself. Cp. Luke xxii. 15, and on the paronomasias in other parts of the N. T., see 2 Thess. iii. 11.

Below, in chap. ix. 34, we have the expression, Αἰνὰ, ἰατὰί σε Ἰησοῦς, perhaps the very words uttered by St. Peter, who may have had a special satisfaction in combining them together, as having felt the healing comfort of his Saviour's love after his own fall. Again, in x. 38 we read, Ἰησοῦς δὲ διήλθεν ἰάμενος πάντας. The writer of the Acts, 'the beloved Physician' (Col. iv. 14), may also have felt peculiar pleasure in connecting the name of Jesus with his own healing art, and in fixing on the memories of his Greek readers, by a happy play of words, the gracious assurance that Jesus is the true Physician both of body and soul.

³¹ τοῦ ἁγ. Πν.] So A, B, D.—Elz. Πνεύματος ἁγίου.

³²] See Bp. Sanderson's Sermon on Romans xv. 5, vol. i. p. 197, for an application of this text to the doctrine of Christian Unity.

— ἅπαντα κοινά] all things common. See on ii. 44. They regarded themselves as one family, with one heart and one soul, with common needs and common joys and common sufferings. This is the perfection of that Unity in His Church, for which Christ prayed (John xvii. 21), and it showed as in a pattern, what all should aim to realize in spirit; though in this world it be not possible to exemplify it in the letter, as the history of the primitive Church itself shows; for even John the Apostle of Love had a house to offer to the Blessed Mary, and the Apostolic Epistles abound with precepts of almsgiving. And this unity of the primitive Church at Jerusalem is like a vision and foretaste of that perfect Love which will be the Life of the Church glorified in the heavenly Sion.

³³ ἀπεδίδουν] were rendering (Matt. xxii. 21) their appointed testimony.

— χάρις] grace—from God.

³⁴ κτήτορες χωρίων ἢ οἰκιῶν] possessors of lands or houses. They gave the price of their lands and houses—not the lands and houses themselves. Perhaps there was a reason for this—partly in the commission of Christ to the Apostles to go forth "into all the world," and partly in the knowledge derived from the prophecies of Christ, that wars and public commotions were about to arise in Judæa; and from a feeling that it was their duty to wean their affections from the things of the earthly Canaan, and to fix them on those of their heavenly inheritance. The zeal of the primitive Church is happily described by Arator, v. 389:

"— turba perennem

Portatura crucem, Dominumque secuta fidelem,
Sprevit agros, habitura polos; hæc nempe facultas
Fortior est de parte magis conquerere totum, Et quæstum per damna sequi."

³⁵ π. τ. πόδας τῶν ἀποστόλων] at the feet of the Apostles. Cp. v. 2. Among the Jews, sitting was the attitude of teaching; and the Apostles are thus represented as sitting in the chair of ³⁶ Ἰωσήφ δὲ ὁ ἐπικληθεὶς Βαρνάβας ἀπὸ τῶν ἀποστόλων, ὃ ἐστὶ μεθερμηνεύμενον Τῖδος παρακλήσεως, Λευΐτης, Κύπριος τῷ γένει, ³⁷ ὑπάρχοντος αὐτῇ ἀγροῦ, πωλήσας ἡνεγκε τὸ χρῆμα, καὶ ἔθηκε παρὰ τοὺς πόδας τῶν ἀποστόλων.

V. ¹ Ἀνὴρ δέ τις Ἀνανίας ὀνόματι, σὺν Σαπφείρῃ τῇ γυναικὶ αὐτοῦ, ἐπώλησε κτῆμα, ² καὶ ἐνοσφίσατο ἀπὸ τῆς τιμῆς, συνειδυίας καὶ τῆς γυναικὸς αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐνέγκας μέρος τι παρὰ τοὺς πόδας τῶν ἀποστόλων ἔθηκεν.

³ Ἐἶπε δὲ Πέτρος, Ἀνανία, διατί ἐπλήρωσεν ὁ Σατανᾶς τὴν καρδίαν σου ψεύσασθαί σε τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, καὶ ἐνοσφίσασθαι ἀπὸ τῆς τιμῆς τοῦ χωρίου; ⁴ Οὐχὶ μένον σοὶ ἔμενε; καὶ πραθὲν ἐν τῇ σῇ ἐξουσίᾳ ὑπῆρχε; Τί ὅτι ἔθου ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ σου τὸ πᾶγμα τοῦτο; οὐκ ἐψεύσω ἀνθρώποις, ἀλλὰ τῷ Θεῷ.

⁵ Ἀκούων δὲ ὁ Ἀνανίας τοὺς λόγους τούτους πεσὼν ἐξέψυξε. ^d Καὶ ἐγένετο

a ch. 4. 31, 37.

b Luke 22. 3.
c ver. 4, 9.

c Num. 30. 2.
Deut. 23. 21.
Eccles. 5. 4.

d Ps. 64. 9.

teaching, as the instructors of the Church. Cp. xxii. 3, παρὰ τ. πόδας Γαμαλιήλ. Matt. xxiii. 2, ἐπὶ τῆς Μωσέως καθέδρας, κ.τ.λ., and Luke ii. 46.

In giving to the Apostles they gave to Christ; thus fulfilling the prophecy of Psalm cx. 3. (Mede.) A striking contrast to the case of Judas in Matt. xxvii. 3—10!

³⁶ Ἰωσήφ] So A, B, D, E.—Ἰωσῆς, Elz.

—Βαρνάβας—τῖδος παρακλήσεως] Barnabas. The sense in which παρακλήσις is here used is explained below, xi. 23, Βαρνάβας—παρεκάλει πάντας τ. π. τ. κ. προσμένειν τῷ Κυρίῳ. He was the Son of Exhortation (on this Hebrew use of τῖδος, see on Matt. ix. 15), and therefore his name is derived from בְּרַנְבָּא, filius prophetiae. Cp. xiii. 1.

It is also added there, where Barnabas is called a Prophet, that this name which is here rendered τῖδος παρακλήσεως was given him by the Apostles, probably at his baptism, soon after the descent of the Holy Ghost, when he was received into the Church of Christ. Perhaps also the word παρακλήσις was adopted to mark his mission from the Paraclete; for it is said that he was a good man full of the Holy Ghost (xi. 24).

This may suggest the question, whether new names, ὀνόματα καινὰ (cp. Rev. ii. 17; iii. 12), were not commonly given at Baptism to those who were received into the Church; and whether the word ὀνομάτων may not therefore be used (Acts i. 15) with special significance for members of the Church,—“Christian or baptismal Names.”

Bp. Pearson here says, At what time Joseph surnamed Barnabas became a Christian, we are not informed by Holy Scripture. The ancients say that he was one of the Seventy Disciples. So Clemens Alexand. Strom. ii. 20. Euseb. i. 12; ii. 1. The Epistle extant under the name of Barnabas, is often quoted by ancient writers, e. g. Clemens Alexandrinus, Origen, the Apostolic Constitutions.

“S. Hieron. in Catalogo: ‘Barnabas Cyprius, qui et Joseph Levites, cum Paulo gentium Apostolus constitutus, unam ad ædificationem Ecclesiæ pertinentem epistolam composuit, quæ inter Apocryphas Scripturas legitur,’ and in cap. xliii. Ezekiel: ‘Vitulum autem qui pro nobis immolatus est, et multa Scripturarum loca, et præcipuè Barnabæ Epistola, quæ habetur inter Scripturas Apocryphas, nominat.’ ‘Nemo certè fuit qui hanc epistolam Barnabæ non tribuerit, neque in eâ quidquam apparet quod eam ætatem non ferat.’ Bp. Pearson here and in Vind. Ignat. pp. 128, 186, 195, 585; Tillemont, Mémoires, i. p. 174 and p. 298; and Hefele, Patr. Apost. p. 1.

^{36, 37} Λευΐτης—ὑπάρχοντος αὐτῇ ἀγροῦ] a Levite, having land. Cp. Numb. xviii. 20 with Numb. xxxv. 1—8. Jerem. xxxii. 7. The case of Barnabas is mentioned here separately as a peculiar one: he was a Levite, and so connected with the Jewish Hierarchy, and entitled to receive tithe. The offerings therefore that he made, in contributing to the needs of his fellow-Christians, were more than ordinary, and gained for him justly the title which he bore. Besides, his deference to the Apostolic office was an intimation that the ministry of the Levitical Priesthood was now “ready to vanish away” (Heb. viii. 13), and that the Apostles and their successors in the Christian Church were henceforth to be regarded as the true Priests of the Israel of God. His submission was blessed by God, when he himself became an Apostle (xiii. 2). And thus the Levitical priesthood passed by a spiritual transition into the Christian Church.

See further on this subject with special reference to Barnabas the note on 1 Cor. ix. 6.

CH. V. 1. Ἀνανίας ὀνόματι, σὺν Σαπφείρῃ τῇ γυναικὶ] Ananias by name, with Sapphira his wife. As Adam with Eve his wife at the beginning.—“The woman is not without the man, nor the man without the woman” (1 Cor. xi. 11) in punishment for sin, or in blessing for obedience.

On the Ionic form Σαπφείρῃ see Winer, p. 59. Cp. στείρης from σπείρα, Acts x. 1; xxi. 31; xxvii. 1.

² ἐνοσφίσατο] Something more than ‘kept back part of,’—it signifies embezzled, purloined (see Tit. ii. 10), ἐκλεψεν (Gloss. Albert.), robbed another of what was his property; and here the Person defrauded is God. The offerings made were made to God, and He Who was despoiled was God. See v. 3.

It is observable, the same word had been used by the LXX to describe the sin of Achan, Josh. vii. 1, ἐνοσφίσατο ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀναθέματος; which was a sin of sacrilege.

Similarly, the sin of which Ananias was guilty, was sacrilege, and so Augustine considers it: “Detrahit de pecuniâ quam voverat Deo” (Serm. 148), and Ammonius (in Caten. p. 85) calls it ἱεροσυλία, and so Chrys. here (Hom. xii.), and S. Jerome (Ep. 8), and Ecumen. here, and others. And Hooker regards it as Sacrilege, VII. xxiv. 17, and cp. Mede’s learned and instructive Essay on this narrative (Works, Book i. Dis. xxvii. p. 115), and Lord Clarendon “On Sacrilege” (Tracts, pp. 211—217, in Christian Institutes, iii. p. 405).

The substance of the comments above cited may be commended, in connexion with the awful history recorded in this chapter, to the consideration of those persons, who have been, or may be, tempted to be guilty of a like sin by robbing God in “tithes and offerings” (Mal. iii. 8), or in the matter of Church Rates. See on Matt. xvii. 27.

³ ἔπεε δὲ Πέτρος, Ἀνανία—χωρίου] But Peter said, Ananias, why did Satan fill thine heart.—Thus Peter showed that he was enabled by the Holy Ghost to discern the spirits of men. See above, iii. 4.

—ψεύσασθαί σε τὸ Πνεῦμα] to defraud the Holy Ghost: ψεύσασθαί “cum accusativo (Deut. xxiii. 29. Ps. lxxvi. 3. Job vi. 10; viii. 18) aliquantò plus notat quàm cum dativo” (Bengel). Why hast thou permitted Satan to enter thy heart, and to tempt thee to endeavour to defraud the Holy Ghost, Who is in us the Apostles, and to Whom thou liest in lying to us; and to purloin a part of the purchase-money of the possession dedicated by thee to God?

⁴ οὐχὶ μένον] while it remained, did it not remain to thee? and not to us. “We did not covet thy money. ‘Si nolles vendere, quis te cogeret? Si velles offerre dimidium, quis exigeret totum?’” S. Aug. Serm. 148.

—τί ὅτι] What is the reason that? Cp. v. 9, and Luke ii. 49.

—οὐκ ἐψεύσω ἀνθρώποις] thou didst not lie to us men, but to God, Whom thou didst endeavour to defraud; thou didst not lie to us, but to the Holy Ghost in us; Θεὸς οὖν τὸ Πνεῦμα, Caten. p. 85. Cp. Greg. Nyss. Orat. de Filio et Spiritu Sancto. Jerom. in Isa. lxiii. Ambrose, de Spir. Sancto, iii. c. 10, cited by Lortinus and A Lapide here, and Athanas. (de Incarn. p. 704). Greg. Naz. (p. 576), and Bp. Pearson on the Creed (Art. viii. p. 480), who says, “As certainly as the Apostles were men, so certainly was the Holy Ghost, in the esteem of St. Peter, God.” Observe the aorist here, which makes this remark more cogent. In saying what thou didst say, οὐκ ἐψεύσω, thou didst not lie to men, but to God.

⁵ πεσὼν ἐξέψυξε] he fell down and gave up the ghost. It is not said, that St. Peter pronounced any sentence or imprecation upon Ananias, but that “he fell down and died.” Almighty God was pleased to execute judgment without any human intervention. As Aug. says, “Spiritus Sanctus mendacem sic punivit.” God thus punished robbery of Himself—sacrilege. See Anonym. in Caten. p. 86, and S. Jerome’s reply, Ep. 97, to the objections of Por-φόβος μέγας ἐπὶ πάντας τοὺς ἀκούοντας ταῦτα. ⁶ Ἀναστάντες δὲ οἱ νεώτεροι συνέστειλαν αὐτὸν, καὶ ἐξενέγκαντες ἔθαψαν.

⁷ Ἐγένετο δὲ ὡς ὥρων τριῶν διάστημα, καὶ ἡ γυνὴ αὐτοῦ μὴ εἰδυῖα τὸ γεγονός εἰσηλθεν. ⁸ Ἀπεκρίθη δὲ αὐτῇ ὁ Πέτρος, Εἰπέ μοι, εἰ τοσούτου τὸ χωρίον ἀπέδοσθε; ἡ δὲ εἶπε, Ναὶ τοσούτου. ⁹ Ὁ δὲ Πέτρος εἶπε πρὸς αὐτήν, Τί ὅτι ^{e ver. 2. Ps. 50. 18.} συνεφωνήθη ὑμῖν πειράσαι τὸ Πνεῦμα Κυρίου; ἰδοὺ, οἱ πόδες τῶν θαψάντων τὸν ἄνδρα σου ἐπὶ τῇ θύρᾳ, καὶ ἐξοίσουσίν σε. ¹⁰ Ἐπεσε δὲ παρὰ χρήμα παρὰ τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐξέψυξεν· εἰσελθόντες δὲ οἱ νεανίσκοι εὗρον αὐτὴν νεκράν, καὶ ἐξενέγκαντες ἔθαψαν πρὸς τὸν ἄνδρα αὐτῆς.

¹¹ Καὶ ἐγένετο φόβος μέγας ἐφ' ὅλην τὴν ἐκκλησίαν, καὶ ἐπὶ πάντας τοὺς ἀκούοντας ταῦτα. ^{f ch. 2. 43. & 19. 17.}

¹² Διὰ δὲ τῶν χειρῶν τῶν ἀποστόλων ἐγένετο σημεῖα καὶ τέρατα πολλὰ ἐν τῷ λαῷ· καὶ ἦσαν ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἅπαντες ἐν τῇ στοᾷ Σολομώνος· ¹³ τῶν δὲ λοιπῶν οὐδεὶς ἐτόλμα κολλᾶσθαι αὐτοῖς, ἀλλ' ἐμεγάλυνεν αὐτοὺς ὁ λαός· ^{g ch. 14. 3. & 3. 11.}

¹⁴ μᾶλλον δὲ προσετίθεντο πιστεύοντες τῷ Κυρίῳ, πλήθη ἀνδρῶν τε καὶ ^{h ch. 2. 41.}

Porphyry, who abused this Scripture as an occasion for charging the Apostle with cruelty. Porphyry's allegation, as Theophyl. observes, is an accusation against the Holy Ghost.

S. Jerome's words are, Ep. 97, p. 792, "Apostolus Petrus nequaquam imprecatur iis mortem, ut stultus Porphyrius calumniatur; sed Dei iudicium propheticum spiritu annunciat, ut poena duorum hominum sit doctrina multorum."

So S. Augustine (contra Parmenianum, lib. iii. c. 1). Cp. Cassian. et Isidor. Pelusiota, and Origen (Comment. in Matthæum, tom. xv. § 15), οὐ Πέτρον γε νομιστέον ἀνηρκεῖναι τὸν Ἀνανίαν, ἀλλ' ἐκεῖνος οὐκ ἤνεγκε τὸν ἐλεγχοῦν, καθικομένον τῶν λόγων Πέτρον τῆς ψυχῆς αὐτοῦ, βασανιζόμενος τοσοῦτον ὥστε καὶ ἐκψύξαι."

It is to be regretted, that some Romish Divines, in their desire to claim the temporal sword for St. Peter, and for the Roman See, have given credit and currency to the objection of Porphyry. See note on Luke ix. 54, and cp. below, xiii. 11, the case of Elymas.

A Lapide here is an honourable exception: "Fuit mors Ananias plaga à Deo inflictæ. Vox Petri fuit tantum occasio et causa instrumentalis occisionis, eaque non physica sed moralis."

Almighty God also showed by this signal visitation that the Holy Spirit was indeed in St. Peter and the Apostles, and had enabled them to read the heart of Ananias, and to reveal his secret deeds; and so He established their authority in the eyes of the Church.

If the artifice of Ananias and Sapphira had been successful, and had become known, then it would have been imagined that the Apostles had been guilty of falsehood and hypocrisy in claiming divine inspiration for themselves; and that our Lord's promise to them had failed (John xvi. 13).

It is observable, that at the first promulgation of God's laws, any breach of them has been generally punished in a signal and awful manner, for the sake of example and prevention of sin, and of punishment for sin. So it was now in the case of Ananias, on the first effusion of the Holy Spirit, and at the first preaching of the Gospel, "non crudelitate sententiæ, sed correctionis exemplo," says S. Jerome, Ep. 97. So it was in the case of Uzzah touching the ark when about to be placed on Mount Zion. (2 Sam. vi. 6—12.) So it was in the case of the man who gathered sticks on the Sabbath Day, at the first publication of the Decalogue. (Numb. xv. 32—36.) So, above all, it had been at the beginning, in the case of Adam and Eve.

Almighty God speaks audibly in His judgments upon sin once for all. He intervenes visibly in mercy, in order to prevent other transgressions, and so to save men's souls from sin and death. And having once spoken He holds His peace. He leaves these awful judgments—more awful because single—to be tests of men's faith, attention, and obedience; and for the most part He reserves subsequent transgressions for the Universal Judgment of the Great Day; of which these primary judgments have been a rehearsal, an earnest, and a warning. (See Chrys. here and Cassian.) Especially let the awful denunciations of Holy Scripture on the future punishment of liars be remembered here. Rev. xxi. 8. 27.

Whether Ananias and Sapphira repented in the hour of death, and whether they incurred death eternal as well as temporal by their sin (see Aug. l. c.), it would be presumptuous to inquire. The mysteries of Divine Judgment are inscrutable.

Here is an exercise of humility. This we know, that there will be degrees of punishment and happiness in another world, and that "every one will be equitably dealt with." "Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?" (Gen. xviii. 25.)

6. οἱ νεώτεροι] the young men, called οἱ νεανίσκοι in v. 10, perhaps having an office in the Church. Cp. Blunt, p. 47. The word νεανίσκος = νεανίσκοι, is used for the military attendants of Abraham, Gen. xiv. 24.

— ἔθαψαν] they buried. Cp. v. 10, where it is said that Sapphira was buried by the side of her husband.

Why is it mentioned that Ananias and Sapphira were buried?

(1) To show that they were really dead, and to anticipate an objection which scepticism might suggest, that they only fell down in a swoon.

(2) To show that there was no feeling of personal vindictiveness on the part of the Apostles or the Church. A persecuting spirit in later times has mangled the dead bodies of those whom it has charged with heresy. It has even exhumed their bones (e. g. Wickliffe's) sleeping in the grave, and scattered them to the winds. But Primitive Christianity warred not with the dead; it wound up the bodies even of Ananias and Sapphira in a funeral sheet, and committed them to a decent grave.

(3) To teach the Christian duty of burying the dead; see below, viii. 2.

Among the Jews, burial took place speedily after death, not only by reason of the heat of the climate, but on account of the legal defilement from contact with the dead. Numb. xix. 11.

9. οἱ πόδες] the feet: cp. Luke ix. 53, πρόσωπον πορευόμενον. The Spirit in Peter hears the sound of their feet. St. Peter had read the heart of Ananias: he now foretells the future concerning Sapphira. In neither case does he execute judgment; but in both cases he shows that he is inspired by the Holy Ghost, and that his authority is ratified by God. See on v. 5.

11. τὴν ἐκκλησίαν] the Church. Hebr. כְּהִנֵּה (whence Gr. καλέω, κλητοί, English call. See on Matt. xvi. 18). Here the Church of Christ is represented as already founded. Cp. above on ii. 47. Our Lord had spoken of His Church prophetically, and had used a word which St. Matthew represents by Ἐκκλησία to designate it (Matt. xvi. 18; xviii. 17). But it is not till after the day of Pentecost, and the events recorded in the first four chapters of the Acts, that the word Ecclesia, Church, appears to have been used to designate the Christian Society then founded and constituted. Before that time we hear of οἰκουμεναὶ and ἀδελφοί (i. 15), οἱ πιστεύοντες (ii. 44; iv. 4). Cp. notes below, vi. 3; xi. 26. But henceforth the word ἐκκλησία is of frequent occurrence, viii. 1. 3; ix. 31. αἱ ἐκκλησίαι, xi. 22; xii. 1, &c.

12. στοᾷ Σολομώνος] Solomon's porch. See above on iii. 2. The recollection of our Lord's Discourse delivered there, may have supplied a special motive for resort thither. Cp. John x. 23.

13. τῶν λοιπῶν] of the residue. Perhaps a temperate expression for the Rulers, contrasted with the λαὸς or people, as in v. 26, who were more courageous in professing Christianity (see the next verse) than their superiors, who had more to lose. So it had been with regard to Christ. See John vii. 48. Cp. I Cor. i. 20; ii. 8. A change for the better takes place vi. 7.

On the sense of κολλᾶσθαι, to attach oneself and to cleave to, see Luke xv. 15. Acts ix. 26; x. 28.

ch. 19. 12.

γυναικῶν^{15 i} ὥστε κατὰ τὰς πλατείας ἐκφέρειν τοὺς ἀσθενεῖς, καὶ τιθέναι ἐπὶ κλινῶν καὶ κραβάττων, ἵνα ἐρχομένου Πέτρου κἂν ἡ σκιά ἐπισκιάσῃ τινὲς αὐτῶν. ¹⁶ Συνήρχετο δὲ καὶ τὸ πλῆθος τῶν περίξ πόλεων εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ, φέροντες ἀσθενεῖς καὶ ὀχλουμένους ὑπὸ πνευμάτων ἀκαθάρτων οἷτινες ἐθεραπεύοντο ἅπαντες.

k ch. 4. 1. & 2. 6.

^{17 k} Ἀναστὰς δὲ ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς καὶ πάντες οἱ σὺν αὐτῷ, ἡ οὖσα αἵρεσις τῶν Σαδδουκαίων, ἐπλήσθησαν ζήλου, ¹⁸ καὶ ἐπέβαλον τὰς χεῖρας ἐπὶ τοὺς ἀποστόλους, καὶ ἔθεντο αὐτοὺς ἐν τηρήσει δημοσίᾳ. ^{19 1*} Ἀγγελος δὲ Κυρίου διὰ τῆς νυκτὸς ἤνοιξε τὰς θύρας τῆς φυλακῆς, ἐξαγαγὼν τε αὐτοὺς εἶπε, ^{20 m} Πορεύεσθε καὶ σταθέντες λαλεῖτε ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ τῷ λαῷ πάντα τὰ ῥήματα τῆς ζωῆς ταύτης. ^{21 n} Ἀκούσαντες δὲ εἰσῆλθον ὑπὸ τὸν ὄρθρον εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν, καὶ ἐδίδασκον.

l ch. 17. 7.

& 16. 26.

m John 6. 68.

n ch. 4. 5, 6.

Παραγενόμενος δὲ ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς καὶ οἱ σὺν αὐτῷ συνεκάλεσαν τὸ συνέδριον καὶ πᾶσαν τὴν γερουσίαν τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ, καὶ ἀπέστειλαν εἰς τὸ δεσμοτῆριον

14. γυναικῶν] of women. St. Luke is careful to mention the extension of the privileges of the Gospel to Women. See above, i. 14, and cp. Introduction to St. Luke, p. 161.

15. κατὰ τὰς πλ.] along the streets. Winer, § 49, p. 356. — κραβάττων] So A, B, D, and other MSS., which seems to be preferable to κραβάτων (Eltz.), for the first syllable in 'gratūm' is short. See Catull. x. 22.

— κἂν] at least. 2 Cor. xi. 16.

— Πέτρον ἢ σκιά] Peter's shadow. From what is said in the verse following it would appear that cures actually ensued. The act itself of bringing the sick and laying them in the streets showed faith; and it might please God to bless such an act in a special manner at that time, in order to give additional authority to the doctrine preached by St. Peter and the Apostles; and to show that they were in an extraordinary degree filled with the Holy Ghost recently poured out upon them on the Day of Pentecost.

There was no cause for fear lest the people should regard the Apostles as sources of divine power, and not as channels: for Peter and the rest took care to obviate any such supposition. See iii. 13; xiv. 15. They assumed nothing to themselves, and ascribed all their efficiency to Christ. Indeed, these signs of a special outpouring of divine effluence were proofs of Christ's Ascension, and were manifestations of His glory. They showed that He had received gifts to give to men; and that He had sent what He promised. These miracles therefore were confirmatory of the faith and courage of the Apostles. They showed that though absent from them in person, Christ was present in power (cp. Matt. xviii. 20). Christ, when on earth, had shed forth divine virtue on those who touched with faith the hem of His garment (Matt. ix. 20; xiv. 36. Mark vi. 56. Luke viii. 44). And now that He is glorified in heaven, He works by the shadow of Peter, and by the handkerchiefs of Paul (Acts xix. 12). So He fulfils His own prophecy, that they who should believe in Him when glorified should do greater works than He had done on earth (John xiv. 12), and He shows that they who touch Him by faith in His Word and Sacraments, duly ministered in His Church, may receive divine virtue from Him in their immortal souls.

Besides, the incident related in these two cases is a remarkable proof of the reality of the miracles wrought by the Apostles. The works done by them must have made a great impression to have produced such a result. They were not done in a corner. The sick were carried into the broad streets (πλατείας), and they were brought from the neighbouring cities, and were healed.

16. πνευμάτων ἀκαθάρτων] of unclean spirits. Another remarkable testimony against the Sadducees, now assailing the Apostles.

(1) The Sadducees said, that there is no Resurrection. (Matt. xxii. 23.) Peter preached it, and proved his doctrine by miracles.

(2) The Sadducees said, that there was no Angel. (Acts xxiii. 8.) Peter was delivered by one (v. 19).

(3) They said, that there was no Spirit. Peter was inspired by the Holy Spirit, defeated the lie of Ananias, whose heart was filled with the Evil Spirit (v. 3), and cast out unclean spirits.

So mercifully did the Holy Ghost confute error and teach the Truth.

The following summary of some recent comments on St. Luke's narrative of the liberation of the Apostles shows, that the same sceptical spirit, which animated the Sadducees in their persecution of the Apostles, is still at work in endeavouring to invalidate the truth of the narrative which the Holy Ghost has vouchsafed to the Church of their sufferings and deliverances. "Der historische Bestand der wunderbaren Art und Weise dieser Befreiung ist nicht zu ermitteln. Luk. berichtet das Factum in sagenhafter Ausschmückung; jeder Versuch aber, die Umstände dieses Befreiungsactes auf einen blos natürlichen Hergang zurückzuführen (ein Blitzschlag, oder ein Erdbeben habe die Thür geöffnet, oder, wie Thiess, Eck, Eichhorn, Eckerm. u. Heinrich wollen, ein befreundeter Mensch, etwa der Gefangenwärter selbst oder ein beherzogter Christ, habe den Kerker aufgethan) alterirt ganz die Tendenz und das Wesen des Textes. S. Storr Opusc. III. p. 186 f. Auffallend bleibt, dass in den nachherigen Verhandlungen, v. 27 ff. nichts über diese Befreiung und deren Thatbestand vorkommt. Daraus ergibt sich die Unvollständigkeit des Berichts, nicht aber die Ungeschichtlichkeit der Thatsache selbst (Baur, Zeller), welche, wenn sie eine tendenzmässige Erfindung wäre, gewiss auch im Verhöre mit angebracht worden wäre. Auch die scheinbare Nutzlosigkeit der Befreiung (denn die Apostel werden doch wieder festgenommen) zeugt nicht gegen ihre Wirklichkeit, da sie, zur Festigung und Erhebung des Glaubensmuthes der Apostel selbst reichend, schon hierin eine genügende ethische Bestimmung hat; dahingegen die Annahme, Christus habe durch seinen Engel dem Sanhedrin seine Machtlosigkeit darthun lassen wollen (Baumg. p. 108), nur dann hinreichenden Grund hätten, wenn der weitere Bericht dahin lautete, dass die Richter hier wirklich das Eingreifen himmlischer Macht in der Art der Befreiung erkannt hätten. Lange apost. Zeitalt. II. 2, p. 68, führt die Erscheinung auf einen visionären Zustand zurück; die Apostel seien befreit worden 'im Zustande des Genieslebens, des zweiten Bewusstseins.' Das ist eingelegt." (Meyer, p. 107.)

17. ἡ οὖσα αἵρεσις τῶν Σαδδουκαίων] they who were the sect of the Sadducees. On this use of ἡ οὖσα, see Kühner, G. G. 429. (Meyer). The words ἡ οὖσα αἵρεσις seem to intimate, that the Sadducean sect, as a body, rose up against the Apostles (Alf.). The Sadducees were attached to Annas, in persecuting the Apostles, by their prejudice against the doctrine of the Resurrection. Ananias, afterwards High Priest, Son of Annas, and brother-in-law of Caiaphas, was a Sadducee. Joseph. Antiq. xx. 8: cf. Acts iv. 1; xxiii. 6.

On the word αἵρεσις = secta (from sequor), see xv. 5; xxiv. 5; xxvi. 5; xxviii. 22. Constantine (in Euseb. x. 5) calls the Christian Church, τὴν καθολικὴν, τὴν ἡνωτάτην αἵρεσιν.

18. δημοσίᾳ] The public prison; and therefore the evidence of the miracle of their release was more notorious. So the malice of the Evil One was overruled for the glory of Christ.

19. ἄγγελος Κυρίου] an angel of the Lord. Lest it should be said that this was an earthquake, or other natural phenomenon, St. Luke adds the words which the Angel spake.

Lest also it should be thought by themselves or others, that they either might not communicate with the officers of the Temple, or were in antagonism to them, the Angel commands them to go and preach there.

On the frequency with which Angels appear in the History of the Acts of the Apostles, see below, xii. 15.

21. ὑπὸ τὸν ὄρθρον] at daybreak—so zealous were they. — συνέδριον—γερούσιαν] Concerning the συνέδριον, or Sanhedrim, see Acts iv. 5—7; xxii. 5; xxiii. 6, and on Matt. v. 22, and Winer, R. W. B. ii. pp. 551, 552.

The γερούσιαν included πρεσβύτεροι (see iv. 8; xxv. 15), ἀχθῆναι αὐτούς. ²² Οἱ δὲ ὑπηρέται παραγενόμενοι οὐχ εὗρον αὐτοὺς ἐν τῇ φυλακῇ· ἀναστρέψαντες δὲ ἀπήγγειλαν ²³ λέγοντες, Ὅτι τὸ δεσμωτήριον εὗρομεν κεκλεισμένον ἐν πάσῃ ἀσφαλείᾳ, καὶ τοὺς φύλακας ἐστῶτας πρὸ τῶν θυρῶν· ἀνοίξαντες δὲ ἔσω οὐδένα εὗρομεν. ²⁴ Ὁ δὲ ἤκουσαν τοὺς λόγους τούτους ^{o ch. 4. 1.} ὁ τε ἱερεὺς καὶ ὁ στρατηγὸς τοῦ ἱεροῦ καὶ οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς, διηπόρουν περὶ αὐτῶν, τί ἂν γένοιτο τοῦτο. ²⁵ Παραγενόμενος δὲ τις ἀπήγγειλεν αὐτοῖς, Ὅτι ἰδοὺ οἱ ἄνδρες, οὓς ἔθεσθε ἐν τῇ φυλακῇ, εἰσὶν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ ἐστῶτες καὶ διδάσκοντες τὸν λαόν.

²⁶ Τότε ἀπελθὼν ὁ στρατηγὸς σὺν τοῖς ὑπηρέταις ἤγαγεν αὐτοὺς, οὐ μετὰ βίας, ἐφοβοῦντο γὰρ τὸν λαὸν ἵνα μὴ λιθασθῶσιν. ²⁷ Ἀγαγόντες δὲ αὐτοὺς ἔστησαν ἐν τῷ συνεδρίῳ· καὶ ἐπρωτότησεν αὐτοὺς ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς ²⁸ λέγων, Οὐ ^{p ch. 4. 18.} παραγγελία παρηγγείλαμεν ὑμῖν μὴ διδάσκειν ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι τούτῳ; καὶ ἰδοὺ, πεπληρώκατε τὴν Ἱερουσαλὴμ τῆς διδαχῆς ὑμῶν, καὶ βούλεσθε ἐπαγαγεῖν ἐφ' ἡμᾶς τὸ αἷμα τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τούτου.

²⁹ Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ Πέτρος καὶ οἱ ἀπόστολοι εἶπον, Πειθαρχεῖν δεῖ Θεῷ ^{q ch. 4. 19.} μᾶλλον ἢ ἀνθρώποις. ³⁰ Ὁ Θεὸς τῶν πατέρων ἡμῶν ἤγειρεν Ἰησοῦν, ὃν ὑμεῖς ^{r ch. 2. 24. & 3. 15.}

διεχειρίσασθε κρεμάσαντες ἐπὶ ξύλου· ³¹ τοῦτον ὁ Θεὸς ἀρχηγὸν καὶ σωτῆρα ^{s Phil. 2. 9. Heb. 2. 10. Luke 24. 47.} ὕψωσε τῇ δεξιᾷ αὐτοῦ, δοῦναι μετάνοιαν τῷ Ἰσραὴλ καὶ ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν·

³² καὶ ἡμεῖς ἐσμεν αὐτοῦ μάρτυρες τῶν ῥημάτων τούτων, καὶ τὸ Πνεῦμα δὲ τὸ ἅγιον, ὃ ἔδωκεν ὁ Θεὸς τοῖς πειθαρχοῦσιν αὐτῷ. ^{t John 15. 26, 27. ch. 2. 4.}

³³ Οἱ δὲ ἀκούσαντες διεπρίοντο, καὶ ἐβουλεύοντο ἀνελεῖν αὐτούς. ^{u ch. 7. 54.}

³⁴ Ἀναστὰς δέ τις ἐν τῷ συνεδρίῳ Φαρισαῖος, ὀνόματι Γαμαλιήλ, νομοδι- ^{v ch. 22. 3.}

δάσκαλος, τίμιος παντὶ τῷ λαῷ, ἐκέλευσεν ἔξω βραχὺ τοὺς ἀποστόλους ποιῆσαι,

³⁵ εἰπέ τε πρὸς αὐτούς, Ἄνδρες Ἰσραηλῖται, προσέχετε ἑαυτοῖς, ἐπὶ τοῖς ἀνθρώποις τούτοις τί μέλλετε πράσσειν. ³⁶ Πρὸ γὰρ τούτων τῶν ἡμερῶν ἀνέστη who were elected from each tribe, and were associated with the seventy of the Sanhedrim. See Selden, Rosenm., and Kuinoel.

^{23.} φύλακας] Elz. adds ἔξω, not in A, B, D, E.

— πρὸ] A, B, D have ἐπὶ, which may be the true reading.

^{24.} ὁ τε ἱερεὺς] A, B, D, Vulg. and other Versions omit these words, perhaps rightly; ὁ ἱερεὺς occurs nowhere else in N. T. for ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς, except perhaps Heb. x. 21. Cp. Heb. x. 11, where the MSS. vary between ἱερεὺς and ἀρχιερεὺς.

— ὁ στρατηγὸς τοῦ ἱεροῦ] See Luke xxii. 52. Acts iv. 1.

^{28.} παραγγελία παρηγγείλαμεν] Cp. on iv. 17, ἀπειλὴ ἀπειληθήμεθα.

— τῷ ὀνόματι τ.—τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τ.] This name; this man. The priests falter and stammer, and do not venture to pronounce the Name of Christ. Peter utters it boldly v. 30.

It has been alleged (e.g. by Zeller, see above, v. 16) that it is incredible that, after the miracle wrought for the deliverance of the Apostles, the Sanhedrim should have continued to persecute them. And thence an exception has been taken against the veracity of St. Luke.

This objection would invalidate the History of the Old Testament as well as of the Gospel. After God's wonders wrought in Egypt, Pharaoh's heart is hardened; and even after their deliverance from Egypt, and the miracles which God worked for them in the wilderness, the Israelites rebelled against Him. See the note on Matt. xv. 33.

So it is in the Gospel. The Sanhedrim confessed, "this man doeth many miracles" (John xi. 47), and yet they who say this are conspiring to kill Him Who wrought them.

Consider also the stoning of St. Paul at Lystra (Acts xiv. 19), after the miracle he had wrought there.

The solution of the supposed difficulty is to be found in the power of Satan over the human mind,—a power sometimes exercised on the mind even of Expositors of the Scriptures,—when it resists the evidence of truth, and is abandoned by the Holy Spirit, and is left to itself.

Besides, from the dominion then exercised by Satan in the world, and showing itself in lying wonders, the evidence from miracles was not so potent as might be supposed. The miracles of Christ and His Apostles were ascribed to the same agency as that which showed itself in Magic and Sorcery, even among the Heathen, and were confounded with their phenomena. (Cp. Blunt, Lectures, p. 126.) So it will be hereafter; see the prophecies of Christ and the Apostles as to the Latter Days, Matt. xxiv. 24. 2 Thess. ii. 9.

Another reason has been suggested above, on iv. 1.

But why (it has been asked by Zeller) were the Apostles delivered from prison, if on the next day they were to be arrested and brought before the Sanhedrim? Was not the miracle in vain?

No; it was a part of the evidence that God was pleased to give to the Jews, and particularly to their Rulers, of the truth of the Doctrine preached by the Apostles. It was a probationary exercise of their faith. Doubtless, though some hardened their hearts, others were persuaded. And so the work of sifting of the Nation went on, till the wheat was made ready for the barn, and the chaff for the fire.

— καὶ βούλεσθε] and ye desire to bring this man's blood upon us! The language of alarm, as Chrys. says, "Dost thou scourge," and yet fear? Insult, and yet tremble? Judge, and yet quake? So cowardly is sin."

They had forgotten that all the people had said (Matt. xxvii. 26), "His blood be upon us, and upon our children." (Bede.)

^{30.} ξύλου] tree. Hebr. יָצַף. Cp. x. 39. Gal. iii. 13.

^{31.} ὕψωσε τῇ δεξιᾷ] You lifted Him up on the Cross (cp. John iii. 14), God raised Him to His own Right Hand. Cp. above, ii. 33.

^{33.} διεπρίοντο] they were being cut asunder in heart, as by a saw (πρίων), 'dissecabantur' (Vulg.), πικρὰς ἐχαλέπαινον (Gloss. Alb.).

^{34.} Γαμαλιήλ] Gamaliel. The Master of St. Paul (Acts xxii. 3). Gamaliel the elder, the grandson of the famous Hillel.

It is observable that three persons bearing this name, Gamaliel, are mentioned in the Talmud; and all bore the name of Rabban, a title given only to four other doctors in Jewish history, and all were Presidents of the Council. See Lightfoot and Rosenm. Biscoe, p. 77.

These circumstances strengthen what will be said concerning Theudas in the following note.

¹ In Caten. here, p. 93, where for Σὺ βατίζεις καὶ σὺ φοβῇ read Σὺ μαστίχεις (see v. 40); the confusion arose from the similarity of β and μ in the MS.

Θευδάς, λέγων εἶναι τινὰ ἑαυτὸν, ᾧ προσεκλήθη ἀνδρῶν ἀριθμὸς ὡς τετρακοσίων ὃς ἀνῆρέθη, καὶ πάντες ὅσοι ἐπείθοντο αὐτῷ διελύθησαν, καὶ ἐγένοντο εἰς οὐδέν. ³⁷ Μετὰ τοῦτον ἀνέστη Ἰούδας ὁ Γαλιλαῖος, ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις τῆς ἀπογραφῆς, καὶ ἀπέστησε λαὸν ἱκανὸν ὀπίσω αὐτοῦ· κακῆνός ἀπώλετο, καὶ πάντες ὅσοι ἐπείθοντο αὐτῷ διεσκορπίσθησαν. ³⁸ * Καὶ τὰ νῦν λέγω ὑμῖν, ἀπόστητε ἀπὸ τῶν ἀνθρώπων τούτων, καὶ εἰσάτε αὐτούς· ὅτι ἐὰν ᾗ ἐξ ἀνθρώπων ἡ βουλὴ αὐτῇ, ἡ τὸ ἔργον τοῦτο, καταλυθήσεται. ³⁹ * εἰ δὲ ἐκ Θεοῦ ἐστίν, οὐ δύνασθε καταλῦσαι αὐτό· μήποτε καὶ θεομάχοι εὗρεθῇτε.

w Prov. 21. 30.
Isa. 8. 10.
Matt. 15. 13.

x ch. 9. 5.
& 23. 9.

y ch. 4. 18.
z Matt. 10. 17.

a Matt. 5. 10—12.
Rom. 5. 3.
2 Cor. 12. 10.
Phil. 1. 29.
James 1. 2.
1 Pet. 4. 13—16.
b 2 Tim. 4. 2.

c ch. 9. 29.
& 11. 20.
d ch. 4. 35.

⁴⁰ * Ἐπείσθησαν δὲ αὐτῷ, καὶ προσκαλεσάμενοι τοὺς ἀποστόλους, ² δείραντες παρηγγείλαν μὴ λαλεῖν ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, καὶ ἀπέλυσαν αὐτούς.

⁴¹ * Οἱ μὲν οὖν ἐπορεύοντο χαίροντες ἀπὸ προσώπου τοῦ συνεδρίου, ὅτι ὑπὲρ τοῦ ὀνόματος κατηξιώθησαν ἀτιμασθῆναι. ⁴² πᾶσάν τε ἡμέραν, ^b ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ καὶ κατ' οἶκον, οὐκ ἐπαύοντο διδάσκοντες καὶ εὐαγγελιζόμενοι Ἰησοῦν τὸν Χριστόν.

VI. ¹ Ἐν δὲ ταῖς ἡμέραις ταύταις πληθυνόντων τῶν μαθητῶν, ἐγένετο γογγυσμὸς ^c τῶν Ἑλληνιστῶν πρὸς τοὺς Ἑβραίους, ὅτι παρεθεωροῦντο ^d ἐν τῇ διακονίᾳ τῇ καθημερινῇ αἱ χήραι αὐτῶν.

36. Θεῦδας] Theudas. St. Luke has been charged with an historical error here (by Eichhorn, Credner, De Wette, Meyer, and even Neander), because it is related by Josephus (Ant. xx. 5. 1) that an insurrection was headed by Theudas, in the reign of Claudius, and Procuratorship of Fadus, more than ten years after this speech of Gamaliel.

On the plea of this supposed error, others (Baur and Zeller) have proceeded to deny the historical veracity of the speech of Gamaliel altogether.

The inaccuracy would be more glaring, — if inaccuracy there were, — because it is asserted by Gamaliel that the revolt of the Theudas mentioned here by him was before “the days of the taxing;” which took place only about ten years after the Nativity of Christ. See on Luke ii. 2.

In fact, if the allegation of inaccuracy were true, St. Luke must have committed an anachronism of more than thirty years.

But there is no ground at all for such a surmise. The circumstances of the two cases were very different.

The Theudas here mentioned had only about 400 followers, who προσεκλήθησαν αὐτῷ — a very gentle expression, — but the Theudas in Josephus πείθει τὸν πλείστον ὄχλον. They were two different persons.

The name Theudas was a common Hebrew one (see Origen, c. Cels. i. 6, and Wetstein here), from תהו, confessio. Two persons bearing that name are mentioned by Lightfoot here (ii. p. 657). Indeed it is probably either the same name as Thaddeus and Judas (see Lightfoot and cp. Mintert in v.); or, if it is a Greek name, it is identical with Θεόδοτος — a very common appellation. There were two Apostles at the same time bearing the name of Judas; and two also bearing the name of John; and at least three persons of distinction, living nearly at the same time, bearing the name of the speaker himself, Gamaliel. Why then should any one be led, by the Critics above mentioned, to doubt the assertion, reported by St. Luke, that, in an age when such impostors were plentiful, there was more than one named Theudas within a space of forty years? If the Pharisee Josephus is to be believed when he writes of one Theudas, why should the Pharisee Gamaliel not be believed when he speaks of another?

Such doubts as these, however, have their use. They show, that there are many persons, of some reputation for critical acumen, who are in love with scepticism, and doubt for doubting's sake. Their doubts are, therefore, of less value, and will have less weight with reasonable men. Thus Infidelity often overleaps itself, and confirms the Truth.

— λέγων εἶναι τινὰ ἑαυτὸν] saying that he himself was somebody, for λέγων εἶναι τινὰ αὐτὸς μέγας. Some MSS. add μέγας (so also viii. 9). Very different was the language of Ignatius (ad Ephes. iii.), οὐ διατάσσομαι ὑμῖν, ὡς ὢν τις. On this use of τις = some one (aliquis), see Winer, p. 153, and below, note on Gal. i. 7.

— προσεκλήθη] consented to; literally, inclined to, being swayed by him. This reading is authorized — though not literally — by the best MSS., A, B, C, D, E, H, none of which have προσεκολληθή, the reading of Elz.

37. Ἰούδας ὁ Γαλιλαῖος, ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις τῆς ἀπογραφῆς] Judas is called here a Galilean, but Josephus (Ant. xviii. 1. 1) calls him ἄνδρα Γαυλανίτην. And if that had been the only passage of Josephus in which Judas was mentioned, St. Luke would, doubtless, have been charged with an inaccuracy here also by some sceptical expositors. But, fortunately, Judas is mentioned in another place by Josephus; and there he is called a Galilean (Joseph. Ant. xx. 5. 2. B. J. ii. 8. 1).

Similarly, if Josephus had written more fully on the times preceding Judas, doubtless he would have mentioned another Theudas. See v. 36. In the present case, Gamaliel and St. Luke are confirmed by Josephus (Ant. xviii. 1. 1; xx. 5. 2. B. J. ii. 9. 1), and St. Luke's words “in the days of the taxing,” are happily explained by the fact recorded by the Jewish Historian, that, in the presidency of Quirinius, A.D. 6, when the Taxing, which had been only an ἀπογραφὴ, or Enrolment of names, or Census, at the time of the Nativity (see on Luke ii. 2), was followed up by an ἀποτίμησις, or levying of imposts and rates in money on the persons and property registered, Judas of Galilee (as he is called here, and by Josephus, Ant. xviii. 1. 6, and xx. 5. 2), or Gaulanites (of Gamala, on s.e. of the sea of Galilee), arose in revolt, and said that “the ἀποτίμησις brought with it manifest slavery” to the people of God from a heathen power; and he excited the people to rise in defence of their freedom and religion.

The words of Josephus (Ant. xviii. 1. 1) are, παρῶν Κυρηνίος εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν, προσθήκη τῆς Συρίας γενομένην, ἀποτιμησόμενος αὐτὰν τὰς οὐσίας . . . οἱ δὲ, καίπερ τὸ κατ' ἀρχὰς ἐν δεινῷ φέροντες τὴν ἐπὶ ταῖς ἀπογραφαῖς ἀκρόασιν, ὑποκατέβησαν . . . καὶ ἀπετίμων χρήματα. Ἰούδας δὲ, Γαυλανίτης ἀνὴρ . . . ἠπέργετο ἐπ' ἀποστάσει, κ.τ.λ.

41. μὲν οὖν] however. A very frequent formula in the Acts of the Apostles, with which the Author sums up what he has to say on the topic in hand, and prepares his readers for a transition to something else. See viii. 4; ix. 31; xi. 19; xv. 3; xvi. 5.

— ὑπὲρ τοῦ ὀνόματος] in behalf of the NAME. So A, B, C, D, and other MSS. Elz. adds αὐτοῦ. A remarkable expression. Cp. v. 28, and 3 John 7. The NAME of JESUS in the Acts of the Apostles is what the NAME of JEHOVAH is in the Old Testament. See ii. 38; iii. 6. 26; iv. 10. 13. 30. Cp. ἡ ὁδός, the WAY, ix. 2; xix. 9.

42. κατ' οἶκον] at home, in their private oratory. See above, on ii. 46.

— Ἰησοῦν τὸν Χριστόν] ‘Jesus the Christ;’ i. e. they preached Him as such.

CH. VI. 1. γογγυσμός] a murmuring. An example of evil made an occasion of good. The Church, guided by the Holy Spirit, grows by danger and difficulty. See Introduction, p. 11. “Ecclesiæ proprium est, ut vincat, cum læditur.” (Hilary, de Trin. vii.)

A prelude of Church-History. “Persecutiones primūm passa est Ecclesia; deinde schismata.” (Lorin.)

— τῶν Ἑλληνιστῶν] of the Hellenists. Not Gentiles (Ecumen.), but Jews of the various dispersions mingled with the Gentiles in Asia and Egypt (see above, on ii. 9, and below, ix. 29, and John xii. 20), and who spoke the Greek tongue, Ἑλληνιστὶ φθεγγόμενοι (Chrys., who contrasts them with the βαθεῖς Ἑβραῖοι), and did not use the original Hebrew Bible, but the Septuagint Version of the Old Testament. See Grot. and Valck., and Glass., Phil. S. p. 149, and particularly Lightfoot's excellent note here (ii. pp. 658—662), and Wetstein (p. 490), in which

² Προσκαλεσάμενοι δὲ οἱ δώδεκα τὸ πλῆθος τῶν μαθητῶν εἶπον, Οὐκ ἄρεστόν ἐστιν ἡμᾶς καταλείψαντας τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ διακονεῖν τραπέζαις. ³ Ἐπισκέψασθε οὖν, ἀδελφοί, ἄνδρας ἐξ ὑμῶν ^e μαρτυρουμένους ἐπὶ τῇ πλήρει Πνεύματος ἁγίου καὶ σοφίας, οὓς καταστήσωμεν ἐπὶ τῇ χρείᾳ ταύτῃ· ⁴ ἡμεῖς δὲ τῇ προσευχῇ καὶ τῇ διακονίᾳ τοῦ λόγου προσκαρτερήσομεν.

⁵ Καὶ ἤρρεσεν ὁ λόγος ἐνώπιον παντὸς τοῦ πλήθους· καὶ ἐξελέξαντο Στέφανον, ἄνδρα ^h πλήρη πίστεως καὶ Πνεύματος ἁγίου, καὶ ⁱ Φίλιππον, καὶ Πρόχορον, καὶ numerous examples are adduced of rivalries and jealousies on the part of the Hebrews, disparaging the Hellenistic language, literature, and population. (Cp. John vii. 35, also Biscoe, pp. 85—91.)

On the other hand, some of the most learned Hellenistic Jews (e.g. Philo) did not know Hebrew. Cp. Hewson, i. pp. 47, 83.

— τοὺς Ἑβραίους] the Hebrews. Jews, specially of Palestine, who spoke the Syro-Chaldaic tongue, and read the Scriptures in Hebrew, or in Chaldaic paraphrases, and who claimed to themselves special privileges on account of their Hebrew extraction. Cp. 2 Cor. xi. 22, Ἑβραῖοι εἰσὶ καὶ γὰρ. Phil. iii. 5, Ἑβραῖος ἐξ Ἑβραίων.

— παρεθεωροῦντο αἱ χήραι αὐτῶν] their Widows were being neglected. See below, ix. 39—41.

On the status of the χήραι, or Widows, in the primitive Church, see notes on 1 Tim. v. 3—16.

2—6. προσκαλεσάμενοι οἱ δώδεκα τὸ πλῆθος] the Twelve having called together the People. A pattern of the true principles of Church Polity. The Twelve convene the πλῆθος, or People, and propose what is to be done; the People approve the proposal (v. 5), and elect seven persons, who are presented to the Apostles, and are ordained by them. Cp. Hooker, Eccl. Polity, VIII. vii.

— οἱ δώδεκα] The Twelve Apostles therefore were still at Jerusalem. Cp. viii. 1.

2. οὐκ ἄρεστόν] It does not please. ("Non placet" (Rosenm.); the Apostles omit ἡμῖν in modesty; and to make the assertion more general. Cf. v. 5, ἤρρεσεν, and xii. 3, and John viii. 29.

— τραπέζαις] tables. Not for money-changing (as Matt. xxi. 12, and Luke xix. 23), but public tables of the Church; for εἶχον ἅπαντα κοινὰ (ii. 44; iv. 32), at which the widows were fed. Cp. the use of τράπεζα, Acts xvi. 34. 1 Cor. x. 21. The daily ministry did not consist in distributing money, but food.

It is probable that the Holy Eucharist was administered at these daily repasts. See Bp. Pearson here, who observes that these τράπεζαι were partly common and also sacred: "hoc est, in communi convictu, sacramentum Eucharistiæ celebrabant."

3—6. ἐπισκέψασθε οὖν—τὰς χείρας] Look ye out, therefore, brethren, men of yourselves, well reputed, seven, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may set over this exigency (χρεία). The Apostles do not disparage this business of relieving the poor widows; it is a χρεία, an urgent need. But we will continue constantly in prayer and in the ministry of the Word—the special duty of Apostles, and Bishops of the Church. Up to this time there were two Orders of Ministers in the Church,—Apostles and Presbyters (see on Luke x. 1); now, under the direction of the Holy Ghost, the Apostles institute a third Order—that of Deacons.

The institution of this Order arose from an occasion of a secular kind, though not altogether so; for the Tables were in some respects sacred (see on v. 2); and, as Bp. Pearson here observes, the office to which these seven were appointed was not only oeconomical, but ecclesiastical. Men full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom were chosen (v. 3), and they were ordained with prayer and laying on of hands of the Apostles (v. 6); and having been so chosen and ordained, they performed the sacred functions of baptizing and preaching the Word (Acts viii. 36, 38); but they are distinguished from the Apostles, in that they could not administer Confirmation (viii. 14, 15).

On the necessity of the Order of Deacons, as well as of Bishops and Presbyters, to the due constitution of a Church, S. Ignatius says, ad Trallianos 3, πάντες ἐντρεπέσθωσαν τοὺς διακόνους . . . καὶ τὸν ἐπίσκοπον . . . τοὺς δὲ πρεσβυτέρους χωρὶς τούτων ἐκκλησίᾳ οὐ καλεῖται.

These Seven are not here called by the name which the Church in the time of the Apostles, and ever since, has assigned to the third Order of Ministers, viz. the name of Deacons.

But this is according to the ordinary manner of the writer of the Acts of the Apostles. We do not hear of the imposition of the word Ecclesia on the Society of believers (see above, ii. 47; v. 11; and see on the word χριστιανοί, xi. 26). But the Society is formed first, and then a name (not a new word, but one already in use in the Greek language) is used in speaking of it.

So it was with all the Three Orders in the Church. First the thing existed; there was no display made in giving it a name—but a word is used to describe the thing, already received and practised in the Church. A striking instance of this may be seen in the first mention of πρεσβύτεροι, xi. 30, where we find that they have been already installed, and were exercising authority in the Church, before we have ever heard of their name.

So it is here. Seven men are appointed, and it is said, not without some prophetic intimation of their future name, that their office is διακονεῖν (v. 2), διακονεῖν τραπέζαις. The manner of their election and ordination is carefully described; their functions and acts are recorded. And so the matter rests for a time. But when we come to read the Epistles of St. Paul, we find an order of the Church in well-defined existence, and with functions fully recognized—and that Order is there called, by a name then generally known, the Order of Deacons (Phil. i. 1. 1 Tim. iii. 8, 12), and that Order can be traced downward from those Epistles through the writings of the early Fathers, e.g. Ignat. Eph. 2, Mag. 2, Trall. 2, where he says that "Deacons are not merely ministers of food and drink, but servants of the Church of God;" Philad. init. and 10, 11; Polye. Phil. 5; Mart. Ignat. 3; Justin M. Apol. ii. p. 92; Origen in Matt. xxi., who says, "we learn from the Acts of the Apostles that Deacons preside over the Tables of the Church." Cp. Basil, ii. 306, περὶ διακόνων. Jerome, ad Evangel. Epist. 101, p. 803; Tertullian, de fugâ, c. 11; S. Cyprian, Ep. 65. See Bingham, Book ii. chap. xv., and the remarks of Hughes, Dissert. Proem. in Chrys. de Sacerdot. p. lxxi.

No other time has ever been assigned for the appointment of Deacons, than the occasion which is described in this Chapter, and which has been regarded from ancient times as the date of their institution. See for example, S. Iren. i. 27, who calls Nicolas one of the Seven "qui primi ad diaconium ab Apostolis ordinati sunt," and so Euseb. H. E. ii. 1. As Bp. Pearson says here, "ἀπὸ τοῦ διακονεῖν dicti sunt δῆκονοι, de quibus sæpe in Epistolis Apostolicis legimus; quorum officium nullibi quàm in hoc loco (Act. vi. 1) legitur institutum. Ut autem hi septem viri Apostolis adjuncti sunt in procurando ministerio quotidiano, ita in primitivâ Ecclesiâ Diaconi semper Episcopis, Apostolorum successoribus, adjuncti sunt."

Accordingly the CHURCH of ENGLAND, which declares that "it is evident unto all men, diligently reading the Holy Scripture, and ancient Authors, that from the Apostles' time there have been these Orders in Christ's Church,—Bishops, Priests, and Deacons" (Preface to the Ordinal), says, in the heading of this Chapter in the Authorized Version, that "the Apostles appoint to the office of deaconship seven chosen men, of whom Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, is one;" and in her office for the Ordering of Deacons she says, that "God did inspire the Apostles to choose into the Order of Deacons the first martyr St. Stephen with others;" and she appoints the beginning of this chapter of the Acts to be read as an Epistle at the Ordering of Deacons. Cp. Hooker, V. lxxviii. 5, and Bp. Andrewes, Serm. iii. p. 66, on Acts ii. 42, and Letter to De Moulin, p. 168.

3. ἐπτά] seven. Not that the number of Deacons was to be limited to seven (cf. Euseb. vi. 43), but probably as being a sacred number, and perhaps as indicating the completion of the Ecclesiastical Orders; and with reference also to the Sevenfold gifts of the Spirit (Isa. xi. 2).

5. Στέφανον, κ.τ.λ.] Stephen. The names here of the Seven are Hellenistic, and show a deference to the desires and needs of the Ἑλληνιστῆς (v. 1).

S. Irenæus (iii. 12) says that "Stephanus electus est ab Apostolis primus Diaconus," and S. Aug. (Serm. 300) observes that St. Stephen is named first among the Deacons, as Peter is among the Apostles,—a significant intimation of his view of the nature of St. Peter's Primacy.

— Φίλιππον] Philip; the Evangelist, Acts xxi. 8. Cp. viii. 5, 6. 12. 26—40. Tillemont, ii. p. 30. 226.

The Acts of the two first-mentioned Deacons, Stephen and Philip, are hereafter described in this Book (chaps. vi., vii., and viii.) as specimens of what was done by Deacons in primitive times, and as an example to Deacons of all times; in the same k ch. 8. 17.

& 13. 3.

l ch. 12. 24.
& 19. 20.
Joan 12. 42.

m Luke 21. 15.

n 1 Kings 21. 10, 11.
Matt. 26. 59, 60.

o ch. 25. 8.
Dan. 9. 26.

Νικόνορα, καὶ Τίμωνα, καὶ Παρμενᾶν, καὶ Νικόλαον προσήλυτον Ἀντιοχέα, 6^k οὗς ἔστησαν ἐνώπιον τῶν ἀποστόλων καὶ προσευξάμενοι ἐπέθηκαν αὐτοῖς τὰς χεῖρας.

7^l Καὶ ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ ἤϋξανε, καὶ ἐπληθύνετο ὁ ἀριθμὸς τῶν μαθητῶν ἐν Ἱερουσαλὴμ σφόδρα, πολὺς τε ὄχλος τῶν ἱερέων ὑπήκουον τῇ πίστει.

8 Στέφανος δὲ πλήρης χάριτος καὶ δυνάμεως ἐποίει τέρατα καὶ σημεῖα μεγάλα ἐν τῷ λαῷ.

9 Ἀνέστησαν δέ τινες τῶν ἐκ τῆς συναγωγῆς τῆς λεγομένης Λιβερτίνων, καὶ Κυρηναίων, καὶ Ἀλεξανδρέων, καὶ τῶν ἀπὸ Κιλικίας, καὶ Ἀσίας, συζητοῦντες τῷ Στεφάνῳ· 10^m καὶ οὐκ ἴσχουν ἀντιστῆναι τῇ σοφίᾳ καὶ τῷ πνεύματι ᾧ ἐλάλει. 11ⁿ Τότε ὑπέβαλον ἄνδρας λέγοντας, Ὅτι ἀκηκόαμεν αὐτοῦ λαλοῦντος ῥήματα βλάσφημα εἰς Μωϋσὴν καὶ τὸν Θεόν· 12 συνεκίνησάν τε τὸν λαὸν καὶ τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους καὶ τοὺς γραμματεῖς.

Καὶ ἐπιστάντες συνήρπασαν αὐτὸν, καὶ ἤγαγον εἰς τὸ συνέδριον, 13 ἔστησάν τε μάρτυρας ψευδεῖς λέγοντας, Ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος οὐ παύεται ῥήματα λαλῶν κατὰ τοῦ τόπου τοῦ ἁγίου καὶ τοῦ νόμου· 14^o ἀκηκόαμεν γὰρ αὐτοῦ λέγοντος, Ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος οὗτος καταλύσει τὸν τόπον τοῦτον, καὶ ἀλλάξει τὰ ἔθη ἃ παρέδωκεν ἡμῖν Μωϋσῆς.

way as the Acts of the two Apostles, Peter and Paul, are described in this Book as specimens of the Acts of all the Apostles, and as examples to Bishops and Priests in all times.

— Νικόλαος] Nicolas; holding the last place in the catalogue, and charged with heresy and licentiousness by S. Irenæus (i. 27), S. Hippol. (Philosophumena, p. 259), and by Tertullian, S. Hilary, S. Jerome, and others, and identified by them with the leader of the Nicolaitans. See Rev. ii. 6. 14, 15. Tillemont, Mémoires, ii. 20 and 223.

It has been supposed by some that the word Nicolaitan in the Apocalypse is only a Greek accommodation to the Hebrew Balaam, בלעם, from root בלע, dominatus est, or בלע, devoravit, and עץ, populus. The charges against Nicolas have been denied by Clem. Alex. Strom. iii. p. 436. Cp. Euseb. iii. 29.

If they are true, then the case of the last in the list of the Seven Deacons may convey similar instruction to that suggested by the last in the list of the Twelve Apostles. See on Matt. x. 4.

— προσήλυτον] a proselyte. Hence it is clear that Proselytes as well as born Jews were now admitted into the Church. It is probable that the Author of the Acts himself was also “a Proselyte of Antioch.” See above, Introduction to his Gospel.

On the providential dispensation traceable in the existence of the class of Proselytes of the Gate, as a preparatory provision for the extension of the Gospel, see the excellent remarks in Bp. Pearson's Concio, p. 32.

6. ἐπέθηκαν α. τ. χεῖρας] “Ordination” (says Ammon). “is accompanied with Prayer and Laying-on of hands, and so the dignity of the Diaconate was given at the beginning; and this custom is still observed.”

They were ordained with Prayer. Ordination consists in this. The hand of him who ordains is laid upon the head of him who is to be ordained; but the effect of the act is from God. Chrys.

Precebus impositio manuum accedebat, more Judæorum (Num. xxvii. 22), ut demonstrarent δεικτικῶς pro quo precarentur, et cui bona apprecarentur, et quem sisterent Deo. Hinc fluxit ille ritus, quem Græci χειροτονίαν, Latini Ordinationem vocant. Quod enim hic fecerunt Apostoli, idem Episcopi postea, tum in Presbyteris, tum in Diaconis, ordinandis. Rosenmüller.

7. ὁ λόγος ἤϋξανε] the Word was increasing. Remark the imperfect tense; even under persecution the word was growing. God elicited good from evil. There had been a murmuring (v. 1), but it was made the occasion of fresh growth in the Church. Such is the History of the Church, guided by the Holy Ghost. She derives strength from opposition. One of the most instructive characteristics of the Acts of the Apostles is its frequent record of the Victories achieved by her over evil and from it. See Introduction above, pp. 7—11.

— ὄχλος τῶν ἱερέων] a great multitude of the Priests were becoming obedient to the faith. The number of Priests who returned from Babylon was 4289 (Ezra ii. 36—39); it would probably be greater now. (Alford.)

8. χάριτος] grace. So A, B, D, and others. Elz. πίστεως.

9. Λιβερτίνων] of Libertines. The Talmudists reckon 480 different Synagogues at Jerusalem. Lightfoot, i. p. 362; ii. p. 664.

St. Luke distinguishes the name of this Synagogue from the following names, which are geographical, by prefixing the words τῆς λεγομένης. If the word Libertini had been designed, as some suppose, to describe the inhabitants of a country, he would hardly have described them as he does. The Λιβερτίνοι, libertini, were Jewish freedmen of Rome and Italy, Ῥωμαῖοι ἀπελευθερωθέντες (Chrys.), descendants of some who had been carried away captive to Rome by Pompey. See Philo (legat. ad Caium, ii. p. 568), who mentions many Jews inhabiting the Trans-tiberine region at Rome; and adds that Ῥωμαῖοι ἦσαν οἱ πλείους ἀπελευθερωθέντες. Tacitus (Annal. ii. 85) speaks of “quattuor Millia libertini generis, Judaicæ superstitione infecta.” Cp. below, xviii. 2; xxviii. 17.

— Κυρηναίων καὶ Ἀλεξανδρέων] of Cyrenians and Alexandrines. A fourth part of the population of Cyrene consisted of Jews (Joseph. Ant. xiv. 7. 2; xvi. 6. 1), and three of the five districts of Alexandria were occupied by them. Joseph. Ant. xiv. 7. 2; xiv. 10. 1; xix. 5. 2. (Meyer.)

Perhaps we may explain the presence of these Hellenists at Jerusalem at this time, by the supposition that it was now some great Festival,—probably the Passover, when they came up to Jerusalem; and when many of the Jews would be in a more excited state of zeal for the Law, and against the Gospel.

— ἀπὸ Κιλικίας] of Cilicia. Perhaps Saul of Tarsus in Cilicia (xxi. 39; xxii. 3) was among them. Cp. Wieseler, p. 63.

— Ἀσίας] Asia: namely, Proconsular Asia or Lydia, and its neighbourhood, of which Ephesus was the μητρόπολις. See ii. 9.

11. ὑπέβαλον ἄνδρας] they suborned men. The incidents of the arraignment, trial, and death of St. Stephen the Deacon, and First Martyr of Christ, present a striking resemblance to those of JESUS CHRIST Himself, “the faithful and true MARTYR” (Rev. i. 5; iii. 14). See below, v. 13, and on vii. 59, 60.

12. τὸ συνέδριον] the Sanhedrim; consisting of ἀρχιερεῖς, πρεσβύτεροι, and γραμματεῖς, and usually assembled under the presidency of the High Priest, sat in the conclave, or chamber called γαζιθ (Gazith), on the south side of the Temple. Whether it continued to sit there at this time is not certain. The members of the Council were arranged in a semicircle, the President occupying the seat in the middle point of the curve. See the authorities in Winer, R. W. B. ii. p. 552.

13, 14. ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος—Μωϋσῆς] This man ceaseth not speaking words against this holy place and the Law. A similar charge of blasphemy had been made against Christ, Mark xiv. 56. 58. Cp. Matt. xxvi. 61. John ii. 19. 21.

This accusation is the clue to the interpretation of St. Stephen's speech in the following chapter.—Elz. adds βλάσφημα ἀφ' ῥήματα, but it is not in A, B, C, D.

— Μωϋσῆς] Moses. Emphatic; and reserved as such for the last word in the sentence.

¹⁵ Καὶ ἀτενίσαντες εἰς αὐτὸν ἅπαντες οἱ καθεζόμενοι ἐν τῷ συνεδρίῳ ^P εἶδον τὸ ^p εἶδον τὸ ^p Exod. 34. 30, 35.
 πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ ὡσεὶ πρόσωπον ἀγγέλου.

15. πρόσωπον ἀγγέλου the face of an angel. O prima ovis, pugnans in medio luporum, sequens, non adhuc perveniens ad Dominum; et jam amicus est Angelorum! Quam manifestè familiaris Angelis erat amicus, qui in medio luporum ut Angelus parebat. Cœpit tanquam Sole illustratus Justitia ita splendere, ut humanam speciem non haberet ipsis inimicis. Serm. 214, in Append. Aug. v. p. 2900. For Sermons on his Martyrdom, cf. ibid. pp. 2892—2911, and Augustine, Opera, Serm. 314—319, and S. Iren. iii. 12. Gregor. Nyssen. de Stephano, iii. p. 357. Asterius, Orat. xii. p. 288. Tillemont, Mémoires, pp. 1—4, and see below, notes at the end of the next chapter.

CH. VII. 1, 2. 'Ο δὲ ἐφη] PRELIMINARY NOTE on the Seventh Chapter.

The SPEECH of ST. STEPHEN before the Jewish Sanhedrim at Jerusalem may be regarded as the first Christian "Apologia contra Judæos."

On this Oration it may be premised,

First, that it cannot be understood unless it be regarded as the language of the HOLY GHOST (see vi. 10; vii. 55), speaking by the mouth of St. Stephen, and replying, not only to the words, but also to the thoughts of his hearers. It is full of indirect and allusive refutations of Error, and of similar assertions of Truth, concerning Jesus Christ, Who is always present to the mind of the speaker, though—for fear of provoking some blasphemous expressions from his exasperated audience, and of being checked in his speech by an outbreak of their rage—he never mentions His Name, till at length it bursts forth in his dying ejaculation, "LORD JESUS, receive my spirit" (v. 59).

This speech is of inestimable value, as a divinely-inspired Summary of Old Testament History; and as a divinely-inspired Commentary upon it; and as teaching the world, on the authority of the Holy Ghost, how that History is to be read; especially with regard to Christ and Christianity.

St. Stephen, the Hellenist and Deacon of the Christian Church, is arraigned before the Jewish Sanhedrim, who would have restrained God's favours to particular persons (viz. themselves and their own nation) and to a particular place, viz. Jerusalem. They charged him with contempt of the Temple and Law, which were confessedly of Divine Institution; and with asserting that Jesus of Nazareth would destroy their Holy Place, and "change those customs" which Moses, the Lawgiver delegated by God, had delivered to them (vi. 14).

St. Luke distinctly says that these charges were false (see vi. 13); and St. Stephen retorts them on his accusers.

The following is a PARAPHRASE of the Speech:—

St. Stephen shows that the presence and grace of God is not limited to Judæa; that the "God of glory appeared to Abraham, our Father;" and thus St. Stephen affirms that he himself—a Christian, is a son of Abraham (see also vv. 11, 12)—God, he says, appeared to Abraham, not in Judæa, but when a stranger in a heathen land, Mesopotamia. Abraham, the Father of the Faithful, was, in fact, a foreigner. And in this land, Judæa, which they regarded as the special abode of God, Almighty God appeared to Abraham before any Temple existed, or any sacrifice was offered at Jerusalem, and He did not give to Abraham, "the friend of God," "the father of the faithful," even "so much land as to set his foot on." God said, also, that the promised seed would be foreigners in a strange land, and be in bondage there; and that afterwards they would come out and serve God in this place.

All these promises, he shows, were independent of, and prior to, the Levitical Law. They were made before Abraham received the seal of circumcision; by which Infants of eight days old were admitted into covenant with God under the Law (v. 8).

He then shows that the practice of particular persons, especially of their own ancestors and of themselves, is no safe measure and rule of what is right in the eyes of God; and thus he tacitly replies to their imaginations, that because Jesus of Nazareth, claiming to be the Messiah, had been rejected and put to death by themselves, the seed of Abraham, the favoured people, the ministers of God's Temple, therefore Jesus was justly condemned and punished. For, says St. Stephen, the Patriarchs themselves, being filled with envy, sold Joseph their brother into Egypt; as you for envy delivered Christ to Pilate (Matt. xxvii. 18). They rejected Joseph as you have rejected Jesus.

But God was with Joseph as He was with Jesus. He delivered Joseph from all his afflictions, as He delivered Jesus from the grave; He made Joseph ruler of Pharaoh's house, as He has exalted Jesus with His own right hand to be ruler of His Church and of the world. And when a great dearth and famine came on the land, then Joseph—the despised and rejected Joseph—sold by his brethren the Patriarchs, in whose name you glory so much, Joseph—not in Judæa, your favoured land—no, but in Egypt, heathen Egypt—he fed Jacob and the Patriarchs there. And in due time—not at first—he was made known to his brethren; as you in God's good time and by His grace may look on your brother Whom ye have pierced (Zech. xii. 10), and Who fed the bodies of five thousand with a word, and Who in His Word and Sacraments is providing for the immortal souls of all true Israelites, in what you regard as little better than a heathen Egypt, viz. the Christian Church, now open to you and to all nations, who hunger for the bread of life; and so all the world may be reconciled and meet together in a fraternal embrace in the true Joseph, Christ Jesus.

Jacob and the Patriarchs died—not in Canaan, but in Egypt—and the bones of the Patriarchs were taken from Egypt and were buried, not in Egypt it is true, but yet not in Machpelah at Hebron, the royal, priestly city in Judæa, where those of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob lie. And therefore, although it be very fitting that those of the same family should be buried together,—yet do not imagine that the sanctity and blessedness of a peaceful death and burial are limited to a particular spot. No; the bones of the Patriarchs themselves were taken to a place which you now abhor, and to which you now give an opprobrious name (see on John iv. 5)—Sychem—not a Jewish city—but one which belongs to those with whom you will have "no dealings" (John iv. 9)—the Samaritans.

That place itself, Sychem, was originally the property of heathens. It was not an inheritance of Abraham; he had no inheritance in Canaan, but it was purchased by him for money of those who were uncircumcised. (See v. 16.)

In course of time Moses, our great Lawgiver, was born, and was exceeding fair (v. 20), as Christ is fairer than the children of men (Ps. xlv. 3). Moses was not born in Canaan, but in Egypt, and he did not scorn to be a learner in all the wisdom of that country (v. 22); and so was an example to you, who despise all foreign learning, especially the Hellenistic literature.

The Holy Spirit, speaking by St. Stephen, now proceeds to answer their thoughts concerning Christ, by reference to the history of their own divinely appointed Lawgiver Moses. In speaking of Moses he tacitly refers to Christ (cp. Acts iii. 22); and while we hear what he says of Moses, we may understand him as speaking of Christ.

When forty years were fulfilled, Moses came to visit his people, as Christ after forty days was presented in the Temple, and is come in the fulness of time to visit you; and when Moses saw an Israelite in distress he delivered him, as Christ has delivered those who were afflicted and oppressed by the devil (Acts x. 38). But the brethren of Moses understood not his mission; as Christ came to His own and His own received Him not (John i. 11). And when Moses would have reconciled them they resisted, and said, "Who made thee a Ruler and a Judge over us?" And so you have dealt with Christ, Who desired to unite all God's children, Jews, Samaritans, and Gentiles, in one,—and you have said of Him, "We will not have this man to reign over us." (Luke xix. 14. John xix. 15.)

When forty years more were passed, Moses came forth from the wilderness, as Christ came forth from the forty days' fast in the desert, and began his ministry with a visible mission from God, Who sent him by the hand of the Angel of His presence (Christ Himself) in the fire of the Bush, the type of His Church, not always triumphant in this world, but often tried in the furnace of affliction, and yet never consumed. Therefore do not suppose that because Christ allowed Himself to be afflicted by you, and because His Church is now persecuted by you, therefore He is not God. Do not imagine that Jerusalem is the only place which is holy in God's sight. No; the Bush, the type of God's Church, was on holy ground, though it was not in Judæa, but in the wilderness of Mount Sina in Arabia (v. 33). The whole world is the field of Christ's Church. (Matt. xiii. 38.)

Your Fathers rejected Moses, and you have crucified Christ. Yet Moses was a deliverer appointed by God (v. 35). Moses was stopped by his hearers. But he spoke to Posterity and the World; and we by the light of the Gospel are able to understand his allusions, which were not clear to them.

¹ In this Paraphrase certain points of allusion are expressed which may be justly supposed to have been in St. Stephen's mind, and to have suggested the topics of his Speech, though they are not explicitly developed in it. If they had been expressed, he would have been

"mighty in words and deeds," and so was Christ; Moses wrought wonders in Egypt and in the Red Sea, and in the wilderness. Christ has wrought greater wonders in delivering you from a worse bondage, and drowning the enemies of your souls by Baptism in the Red Sea of His blood; and He is ever working wonders during the whole pilgrimage of His Church in the wilderness of this world. Moses foretold, that another Prophet should arise from among them like unto himself, that is, in human form; like him in acts, and like him in being resisted by those whom he came to save. "Him shall ye hear" (v. 37). See above, iii. 22, 23. That Prophet has risen among you. In rejecting Him ye have despised Moses, of whom you boast. Not I, but you, have spoken blasphemous words and have done blasphemous deeds "against Moses, and against this place and the Law." Moses was with the Church in the wilderness. So Christ is ever with His Church in her journey to the heavenly Canaan. He was with Moses then (v. 38. 1 Cor. x. 3-5). Your fathers resisted Moses, and in tempting him they tempted Christ (1 Cor. x. 9). Moses received the lively oracles of God's Holy Word to give to you. Christ has authorized that Word; He is the living Word of God.

Your fathers would have returned to heathen Egypt, the land of bondage; they made a calf even in Horeb, where God gave the Law. God has witnessed against them by the mouth of His Prophet (Amos v. 25. Cp. here, vv. 42, 43). Did you offer sacrifices to Me? No; but you preferred the Tabernacle of Moloch to My Tabernacle, and the Star of your God Remphan, to the Pillar of Fire and the Cloud. He therefore threatened to carry them into captivity beyond Babylon.

God vouchsafed all these revelations to Abraham, Joseph, and Moses, at a time before even the Tabernacle existed. That Tabernacle was made from a pattern in the heavens, anterior to all God's revelations; and God in His love and mercy vouchsafed to lead you into this land by Jesus the Son of Nun, the type of the true Jesus, the Saviour of the world.

God vouchsafed His favour to David while as yet no Temple stood. The Temple of which you boast, saying, "The Temple of the Lord, the Temple of the Lord" (Jer. vii. 4), was not built by David, "the man after God's own heart," but by Solomon, whose heart was turned away from God to worship idols. God was pleased to place His Name at Jerusalem, and to show His Glory in the Temple of Solomon; yet He declares by His prophet (Isa. lxvi. 1), that "Heaven is His Throne: what House will ye build Me? hath not my hand made all these things?" His Temple is the Universe.

Ye who boast of your Circumcision are uncircumcised in heart and ears. Ye who call yourselves the children of the Prophets, "Which of the Prophets have ye not killed?" (Matt. xxiii. 31.) Ye are always rebelling against the Holy Ghost, Who spake by them; and ye have betrayed and murdered the Just One, whose coming they foretold. Ye who make your boast of the Law, and accuse me of blaspheming it, me who acknowledge it to have been given by the ministry of Angels, and honour it as such, ye have received that Law, but have not kept it.

As to the language in which this speech was delivered, it may, perhaps, have been Greek (so Meyer and others). From Acts xxi. 40; xxii. 2, it appears that St. Paul's audience at Jerusalem were agreeably surprised when St. Paul addressed them in Hebrew. They expected that he would speak in Greek: St. Stephen was a Hellenist, and almost all his references to the Old Testament are to the LXX Version. And the use of the Greek tongue in proclaiming the Gospel to the Jewish Sanhedrim would seem to be in accordance with the purport of his speech, which was, to show that God's favour was not limited to the Hebrew Nation.

On the other hand, it may be observed, that St. Stephen would be desirous to conciliate his auditory and to consult their feelings, which were not favourable to Hellenism, and to show them that he revered the language in which the Ancient Scriptures, to which he refers, were written; and that standing, as he was, arraigned of despising the Law of Moses, he would comply with their reasonable prepossessions, and become, as St. Paul afterwards did—of whom he was the forerunner—"a Jew to the Jews." (1 Cor. ix. 20.)

The use of the Hebrew tongue by St. Paul at Jerusalem, in a speech beginning with the same words as St. Stephen's, i. e. addressed to the πατέρες as well as ἀδελφοί (xxii. 1), renders it probable that St. Stephen also spoke to the Sanhedrim in Hebrew; and perhaps this may have been one reason why they listened so long to his address.

There is an expression at its close which seems to confirm this opinion, θεωρῶ τοὺς οὐρανοὺς ἀνεγγμένους, v. 56, "I see the heavens opened." The word οὐρανός in the singular occurs about sixty times in St. Luke's Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles. But there are scarcely two or three passages where οὐρανός in the plural is used. The only one in the Acts is ii. 34, in a speech addressed by St. Peter to the men of Israel (v. 22), probably in Hebrew. The plural οἱ οὐρανοί is the Hebrew הַשָּׁמַיִם; and if Stephen had spoken in Greek, he would probably have used the singular, or St. Luke, according to his custom, would have used that number, and not the plural.

Dr. Lightfoot does not hesitate to say (ii. 662), that St. Stephen "would not plead before the Sanhedrim in any language but Hebrew."

Some cautionary words are requisite here, in reference to certain criticisms of several statements in this speech.

Our Lord promised to His Disciples to give them the Holy Ghost; and accordingly, as this book informs us, He sent the Holy Spirit from heaven upon them, on the Day of Pentecost. He foretold that they would "be brought before Councils (συνέδρια) for His Name's sake;" and that "the Holy Ghost would speak by their mouth" (Matt. x. 17. Mark xiii. 11. Luke xii. 11), and that "He would give them a mouth and wisdom, which all their adversaries should not be able to gainsay or resist" (Luke xxi. 15. Acts vi. 10). And all this should be for a Witness,—a Martyrdom. St. Luke here adopts the words of Christ and applies them to St. Stephen (Acts vi. 10), who is brought before the Council; and he calls him "a man full of the Holy Ghost," and says that his adversaries could not resist the wisdom with which he spake, and he dies the first Martyr for Christ.

Let us consider the words of Christ's promise in the Original, Mark xiii. 9, παραδώσωσιν ὑμᾶς εἰς συνέδρια ἕνεκεν ἐμοῦ εἰς μαρτύριον αὐτοῖς, ὅταν δὲ ἀγάγων ὑμᾶς, μὴ προμεριμνᾶτε τί λαλήσητε . . . οὐ γὰρ ἔστε ὑμεῖς οἱ λαλοῦντες, ἀλλὰ τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον. Luke xxi. 15, ἐγὼ δώσω ὑμῖν στόμα καὶ σοφίαν ᾧ οὐ δυνήσονται ἀντεπεῖν οὐδὲ ἀντιστῆναι πάντες οἱ ἀντικείμενοι ὑμῖν, and Luke xxi. 13, ἀποβήσεται ὑμῖν εἰς μαρτύριον.

Compare with these promises the narrative concerning Stephen, Acts vi. 5. 10, Στέφανος πλήρης πνεύματος ἁγίου. 8, Στέφανος πλήρης χάριτος (cp. vii. 55) . . . καὶ οὐκ ἔρχοντο ἀντιστῆναι τῇ σοφίᾳ καὶ τῷ πνεύματι ᾧ ἔλαλει.

It is true, that our Lord did not make this promise to St. Stephen personally. But surely there is no violence in applying His words to one, who is characterized, as St. Stephen is, by the Holy Ghost in Holy Scripture as the First Martyr (cp. Acts xxii. 20), and whose Martyrdom is so fully described by Him, and occupies so prominent a place in the history of the Christian Church, as the chosen specimen of all Christian Martyrdoms; and it could hardly have been said by St. Luke, that Stephen was full of the Holy Ghost, and that they could not resist his words, if (as some recent criticisms allege¹) there are misstatements in St. Stephen's speech concerning the very rudiments and alphabet of Jewish History, which any pupil of Gamaliel, and much more the learned Rabbis of the Sanhedrim, before whom he spoke, would have refuted and exploded, and which would have exposed him and his cause to derision.

The allegations in question, when reduced to their plain meaning, involve the assumption, that the Holy Ghost, speaking by St. Stephen (who was 'full of the Holy Spirit'), forgot what He Himself had written in the Book of Genesis; and that His memory is to be refreshed by biblical commentators of the nineteenth century!

This kind of Criticism is animated by a spirit very alien from that Christian temper of reverential modesty, gentleness, and humility, which are primary requisites for the discovery and reception of truth. Mysteries are revealed to the meek (Ecclus. iii. 19). Them that are meek shall He guide in judgment; and such as are gentle, them shall He learn His way (Ps. xxv. 8). But such a spirit of Criticism seems willing to accept any suppo-

¹ For instance, De Wette says (in the third edition of his Commentary on the Acts, Leipzig, 1848, p. 68), "Auffallend sind die vielen historischen Fehler, welche sich am leichtesten einem unvorbeurtheilten Sprechenden zuschreiben lassen." On v. 16, he says, "hier sind zwei Fehler."

Meyer concurs in the allegation of historical errors, but says that they are not surprising. "Die historischen Verirrungen bei dem in Drange des Augenblicks extemporirten Vortrage gar nichts Auffallendes haben." (Meyer, p. 131, 3rd ed. 1854.) And on v. 1, "Stephen hat irrthümlich u. s. w." And on v. 16, he says, "Mithin hat Steph. eine Verwechslung begangen."

No wonder, that other Expositors, proceeding on the same supposition, should advance a step further, and deny the genuineness and authenticity of the speech,—as has been done by Baur and Zeller. It is to be deplored, that similar allegations have found their way into some English Expositions of this Speech. It is therefore more necessary to examine them.

sition, however fanciful, except that of its own fallibility! It is ready to allege that St. Luke is in error in saying that St. Stephen was full of the Holy Ghost. It is ready to affirm that St. Stephen was forgetful of the elements of Jewish History. It is ready to concede, in short, any thing and every thing, except that itself can err; or that there are some things which the Evangelists and First Martyrs knew better than itself.

No wonder that it is given over by God to a reprobate mind. No wonder that it falls into strange errors, and what is worse, misleads others into fatal delusions; and yet professes to guide them into the truth. It pretends to explain Scripture, and yet would shake our belief in its Inspiration, and sap the foundations of the Faith.

We do not indeed say, that there is nothing hard to be understood in this Speech of St. Stephen—or rather in this Speech of the Holy Ghost speaking by him. But we may confidently affirm, that the greatest difficulties here are those which are not in St. Stephen's Speech, but have been created by mis-statements of some who have criticized it. These imaginary difficulties arise from a lack of appreciation and intelligence of the scope of the Speech itself, and of the design of the speaker. And as will be shown presently (see for instance on v. 16) the difficulties themselves, which some see, who have not duly considered that scope and design, will, when more closely examined, be seen to be fraught with divine power and beauty. Undoubtedly, after all, some difficulties there will be ever in God's Holy Word—not from itself, but on account of our ignorance in reading what is written. The Written Word—like the Incarnate Word—is “set for the fall and uprising of many in Israel” (Luke ii. 34). These difficulties of Scripture are appointed to be exercises of our faith, trials of our meekness, stimulants of our hope, and the discipline of our wisdom; and if we treat them as we ought to do, then the time will come when they will all be cleared away from our sight, and we shall see the Truth as it is, and know even as we are known.

Having said thus much on the general tenour of the Speech, we may now address ourselves to a consideration in detail of the Objections that have been raised against certain statements in it.

It will be most convenient to place these Objections together, and to consider them seriatim, in the order of the Speech.

OBJECTIONS.

3. εἶπε πρὸς αὐτόν] and He (God) said unto him, Get thee out of thy country.

Objection.—Nothing is said in Gen. xi. 31, of any call that Abraham received in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Haran.

Reply.—But it is said, Gen. xv. 7, “I am the Lord that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees to give thee this land;” and cp. Joshua xxiv. 3, “I took your father Abraham from the other side of the flood;” Neh. ix. 7, “Thou art the Lord the God who didst choose Abraham, and broughtest him forth out of Ur of the Chaldees.”

It is therefore acknowledged by the Rabbis that there were two calls of Abraham.

- (1) from his country and kindred (Ur);
- (2) from his father's house (in Haran).

See Philo de Abrahamo, t. ii. p. 11. 16, ed. Mang. ἀμα τῷ κελυσθῆναι μεταλίστατο—τὸ μὲν πρῶτον ἀπὸ τῆς Χαλδαίων γῆς εὐδαίμονος χώρας—εἰς τὴν Χαρβαίων γῆν· ἔπειτα οὐ μακρὰν ὕστερον, καὶ ἀπὸ ταύτης εἰς ἕτερον τόπον. P. 12, 8, ὅπως δ' οὖν βεβαιώσῃ τὴν φανείσαν ὕψιν ἐν διανοίᾳ παγιώτερον, φησὶν αὐτῷ δ' ἱερὸς λόγος—μεταλίσταθι—διὰ τοῦτο τὴν πρῶτην ἀποικίαν ἀπὸ τῆς Χαλδαίων γῆς εἰς τὴν Χαρβαίων λέγεται ποιεῖσθαι. Josephph. Ant. i. 7. 1, “Ἀβραὰμ καταλείπει τὴν Χαλδαίαν, ἐβδουμήκοντα καὶ πέντε ἔτη γεγονῶς, τοῦ Θεοῦ κελεύσαντος. Cp. Clem. Rom. i. 10.

S. Chrys. and Œcumenius have suggested as probable, that Terah was induced to emigrate from Ur by the vision in which God appeared to Abraham his son; and that his obedience to the exhortation of his son, is contrasted with the disobedience of the Jews to God their Father. (See Lightfoot, i. 780; ii. 665; and Wetstein here, p. 494, and cp. Schoettgen, p. 433, and Whitby, p. 442.)

4. μετὰ τὸ ἀποθανεῖν τὸν πατέρα αὐτοῦ] when his father was dead.

Objection.—This is inconsistent with the history in Genesis. Terah begat Abraham when he was seventy years old (Gen. xi. 26). Abraham came from Haran into Canaan when he was seventy-five years old (Gen. xii. 4).

If then Abraham left Haran after Terah's death (as St. Stephen here says), then Terah could not have lived more than 70 + 75 years = 145 years. But in Gen. xi. 32, it is said that the days of Terah were 205 years.

Therefore (it is alleged) either St. Stephen or St. Luke is mistaken here.

Reply.—It is not said in Gen. xi. 26, that Terah was not more than seventy years old when he begat Abraham. But it is said that he lived seventy years and begat Abram, Nahor, and Haran.

According to the objection above specified, Terah had three sons in one year. But it may be said, Abraham is mentioned first, and was therefore his first-born, and was born soon after his father attained his seventieth year. But this is inaccurate. Abraham is mentioned first, not because he was the first-born, but because he was the Father of the Chosen Seed; cp. Gen. v. 32, where Shem is mentioned first for a similar reason. It is acknowledged by several of the Rabbis, that Abraham was Terah's youngest son. See Theodoret ap. Lorinum. Lightfoot, ii. 666. Bp. Kidder on the Messiah, ii. 225. Cp. Lord A. Hervey on the Genealogies, pp. 83. 200.

It is observable, that Isaac, Abraham's son, married Rebecca, the granddaughter of Abraham's brother Nahor by the youngest of his eight sons, Bethuel (Gen. xxii. 22). And such a marriage would seem to intimate that Abraham was a younger brother of Nahor.

Isaac was born late, it is true, when his father was a hundred years old (Gen. xxi. 5), but this was only thirty years more than Terah was, when his eldest son was born. If, as many of the earliest Rabbinical and Christian Expositors suppose, Sarah was the same as Ischah (Gen. xi. 29), then, since Abraham was only ten years older than Sarah (Gen. xvii. 17), it would seem that Abraham was born many years after Haran.

On the whole, nothing has been adduced to show that Abraham was more than seventy-five years old at the time when Terah died, being 205 years of age, and that Abraham did not abide in Haran till the time of his father's death; which indeed, on many accounts, it is very likely that he would do, as otherwise it might be said that Canaan was given by promise to Abraham's father, rather than to Abraham, and that he inherited it from his earthly father, and not directly from God.

St. Stephen is therefore careful to distinguish Abraham's acts from those of his father; hence his mention of his father's death. Abraham stands independently and alone, as the father of the faithful. It is for this reason that his call from Ur of the Chaldees is specified by St. Stephen (see above on v. 3), and not Terah's.

6. ἔτη τετρακόσια] four hundred years.

Objection.—The Israelites were not in Egypt more than 215 years. Cp. Gal. iii. 17. Exod. xii. 40.

Reply.—It is not said by St. Stephen that they sojourned in Egypt 400 years, any more than it is in Gen. xv. 13. 16, that they would be in Egypt 400 years. But St. Stephen says that they were strangers for that time.

St. Stephen's argument is, that God's favour is not confined to a particular place or nation. And it was enough for him to show that Abraham and the chosen seed were sojourners,—without pausing to specify the several places in succession where they sojourned. For a considerable time the Land of Promise itself was to them a strange country. See Heb. xi. 9.

The chronology is as follows:—

Abraham in Haran	5 years
— in Canaan	11
From the birth of Ishmael to that of Isaac	14
—	30
From birth of Isaac to birth of Jacob	60 years
From birth of Jacob to birth of Joseph	90
To Joseph's death	110
To birth of Moses	60
To the Exodus	80
—	400

7. λατρεύσουσί μοι ἐν τῷ τόπῳ τούτῳ] they shall worship Me in this place, i. e. in Horeb,—not in Canaan.

Objection.—These words are not found with the previous ones in Gen. xv. 13, 14.

Reply.—No; but they are found in substance in Exod. iii. 12. 18; vii. 16, with which St. Stephen rightly supposes his hearers to be conversant.

Nothing was more common among the Hebrews than the combination of two prophecies of Holy Scripture, especially in rapid addresses by word of mouth. Our Lord Himself authorized the practice. See notes above on Luke iv. 17, and on Matt. ii. 23.

St. Stephen's statement is, that God had said, that the Israelites would be sojourners and bondsmen in a strange land, and that He would punish the Nation which oppressed them (Gen. xv. 13, 14), and that afterwards they should worship Him ἐν τῷ τόπῳ τούτῳ, where the second prophecy was delivered; i. e. not in the promised land, but in the wilderness of Sinai. And St. Stephen's argument is, that therefore the Jews are not to imagine that God can be worshipped only in Judæa and at Jerusalem. God Himself had appointed, that He should be worshipped by their forefathers in the wilderness of Arabia, at Mount Sinai, before any worship was offered to Him in the City of Jerusalem, on Mount Sion.

9. ἀπέδοντο εἰς Αἴγυπτον] they sold him into Egypt.

Objection.—Joseph's brethren sold him to the Midianites (Gen. xxxvii. 28), but they did not sell him into Egypt.

Reply.—This is a common use of the middle voice. Judas is said to have purchased a field, because he gave occasion to its purchase (Acts i. 18). They sold him to persons who, as they saw, were going into Egypt (Gen. xxxvii. 25). And therefore Joseph himself says, that they sold him into Egypt (Gen. xlv. 4). Let not St. Stephen be censured for adopting Joseph's words in relating Joseph's history.

St. Stephen, in speaking of Joseph, has his thoughts fixed upon Christ (see PARAPHRASE above, p. 65). And he intends here to say, that as Joseph's brethren were guilty of selling their brother into Egypt, because they sold him to some who carried him there, so the Jews themselves were guilty of crucifying Christ, because they delivered Him up to Pilate to be crucified. Cp. St. Peter's words, Acts ii. 23. 36; iv. 10; v. 30.

14. ψυχὰς ἑβδόμηκοντα πέντε] threescore and fifteen souls.

Objection.—This is inconsistent with Gen. xlv. 27. Exod. i. 5. Deut. x. 22, where it is said that the souls which went down with Jacob to Egypt were seventy.

Reply.—It is said by some that St. Stephen follows the LXX, in saying that seventy-five came down with Jacob. But this is doubtful. In Gen. xlv. 27, the Alexandrine MS. of the LXX has not the words μετὰ Ἰακώβ. And it is said by the LXX in Exod. i. 5, that all the souls from Jacob (i. e. including those of Joseph) were seventy-five; and it is also said in the LXX (Deut. x. 22), that they who came into Egypt were seventy.

The true answer seems to be;—

St. Stephen (as his argument led him to do) is reckoning up all the family of Jacob, inclusive of his own children and their children, and not only those who came down with Jacob into Egypt.

The Hebrew Original does not say that the souls which went down with Jacob were seventy, but

1. That all the souls that came with Jacob into Egypt, which came out of his loins, were sixty-six (Gen. xlv. 26).

It says also,

2. That all the souls of the house of Jacob which came into Egypt were seventy (Gen. xlv. 27).

In the former of these two statements the following are not enumerated—

Jacob himself,

Joseph, and Joseph's two sons, viz.

Manasseh,

Ephraim; which being added, make up seventy; the number specified in the latter statement.

But St. Stephen says that Joseph sent for his father Jacob, and all his own kindred, συγγένειαν αὐτοῦ, not ἐγγόνους Ἰακώβ: ἐν ψυχαῖς ἑβδόμηκοντα, i. e. so as to make up, or which in course of time made up, a number of seventy-five souls.

This use of ἐν with a dative for the Hebrew ב (see Winer, Gr. Gr. p. 349), and equivalent to εἰς with an accusative, is very common. See Glass. Phil. p. 485.

The number seventy-five, which St. Stephen specifies, consists of the seventy mentioned Gen. xlv. 27, together with the issue of the sons of Joseph's own sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, Machir (son of Manasseh), Galaad (son of Machir), Satalaim } (sons of Ephraim), Taam }

Edom (son of Satalaim), as stated in the LXX of Gen. xlv.

20. Cp. Numb. xxvi. 28—37. 1 Chron. vii. 14—20.

And thus the number 75 or threescore and fifteen is made up.

The addition of these five was not accidental. Indeed the reader may be sure, that in this and all the other seeming variations between this speech and the Hebrew Original, there is no inconsistency, but agreement, and something more, viz. there is the groundwork of an additional argument in the pleading of the Speaker. The addition in question was very relevant to St. Stephen's cause; for thus he affirmed, that those born of Jacob's line in Egypt, the strange land and house of bondage, were equally children of the promise with those born in Canaan, the promised land; according to what Jacob himself says of the Sons of Joseph born in Egypt, "as Reuben and Simeon, they (i. e. Ephraim and Manasseh) shall be mine" (Gen. xlviii. 5).

Thus,—in opposition to the prejudices of his hearers who would have restrained to themselves God's promises,—St. Stephen declares the antecedent probability of the extension of God's promises to all nations of the earth; which was in fact intimated in the preference given by Jacob to the younger son, Ephraim, before the elder, Manasseh (Gen. xlviii. 17—20).

16. μετετέθησαν εἰς Συχὲμ, καὶ ἐτέθησαν ἐν τῷ μνήματι ᾧ ὠνήσατο Ἀβραὰμ τιμῆς ἀργυρίου παρὰ τῶν υἱῶν Ἐμμὼρ τοῦ Συχέμ] they were carried over into Sychem and were laid in the Sepulchre that Abraham bought for a sum of money of the sons of Emmor (Hamor) the (son—not father) of Sychem.

Objection.—This assertion of St. Stephen (it is said) is wholly inconsistent with the history in the Book of Genesis. For,

1. Jacob was not buried in Sychem, but in Machpelah, before Mamre at Hebron, in the region which afterwards belonged to Judæa; about 20 miles South of Jerusalem, and where Abraham and Sarah, Rebecca and Isaac were buried; see Gen. xlvii. 30; xlix. 29; i. 13.

Reply.—It is not said by St. Stephen that Jacob was buried at Sychem—but that the Patriarchs were.

Joseph was buried in Shechem, or Sychem (see Joshua xiv. 32), near Mount Gerizim (see John iv. 5. 20, 21), in Samaria. And at this day there is at Sichem a tradition to this effect, "in which, by a singular coincidence, Jews and Samaritans, Christians and Mohammedans agree." Robinson, Palestine iii. 109.

The other Patriarchs were buried there also. See S. Jerome, Ep. 86, who says, concerning Paula, "Venit Sichem, quæ nunc Neapolis appellatur, atque inde divertens vidit duodecim Patriarcharum sepulchra." And in his treatise De optimo genere interpretandi: "Duodecim Patriarchæ non sunt sepulti in Arbes (Hebron), sed in Sychem." Cp. Syncellus, p. 150, and Bede in loc. p. 34, and Whitby here, pp. 443—4. See also the authorities from the Jewish Commentators quoted by Lightfoot here (vol. ii. p. 668), and Welstein, p. 496, and Robinson, Palestine iii. 119.

It is not affirmed by St. Stephen, that Jacob was buried at Sichem. He knew that well. But to mention the place of Jacob's burial, would have been wholly irrelevant to his argument. He knew that Jacob's bones were carried to Machpelah, or Hebron, where Abraham's were; and that was a royal and priestly city of Judæa, the seat of David's kingdom. And it might perhaps have been retorted on St. Stephen, that the fact of the transfer of Jacob's bones to that place, showed that there was a special sanctity restricted to the region of Judæa, which was so preferred. He therefore says nothing of Jacob's bones; but proceeds to speak of those of the Patriarchs, which, he says, were conveyed to Sichem.

To Sichem! here is the strength of St. Stephen's assertion. And Sichem is therefore repeated by him, and stands the last word in the sentence, to leave as it were a κέντρον ἐν τοῖς ἀκρωμένοις.

And why? Because, from jealousy of Sichem, in Samaria, some of the Jews had falsely affirmed that the Patriarchs were not buried there, but at Hebron (cp. Joseph. B. J. iv. 9. 7), and Stephen would refute this falsehood, even though he would thus be vindicating the honour of the Samaritans against the Jews. And even because Sichem was not in Judæa, the favoured land, nor was it in the hands of Jews, but of Samaritans their enemies, with whom they would have "no dealings," and whom they reviled as heretics, and unbelievers, and Cuthite dogs; and was a place whose inhabitants they despised and hated (Ecclus. i. 26), and which they called by an opprobrious name, Συχαρ. (See on John iv. 5.)

This was worth saying; in order to show (according to his great argument) that holiness and blessedness are not limited, in death and burial, any more than in life, to any particular spot. Nay, more: Almighty God manifested Himself first to our father Abraham in Mesopotamia (v. 2), a heathen land; and his first appearance to Abraham in Canaan was not at Hebron, but at Sichem, now in the hands of Samaritans. And there, at Sichem, the bones of Joseph and the Patriarchs lie. They were even brought from a long distance, and laid there as in a chosen spot. Sichem was preferred to Hebron, Samaria to Judæa! How instructive was this! And be it observed, that in the very next chapter to this, where the Jews stone St. Stephen at Jerusalem, the word of God takes root in Samaria (Acts viii. 5, 6). The Jews rush "with one accord" (ὁμοθυμαδὸν) and stone Stephen the Deacon (vii. 57). The Samaritans with one accord (ὁμοθυμαδὸν) receive Philip the Deacon (viii. 6), and are baptized into Christ.

Objection 2. The place at Sychem where the Patriarchs were buried was not purchased by Abraham, but by Jacob, who bought it of the Sons of Hamor (Emmor), the Father of Shechem, for a hundred pieces of silver (Gen. xxxiii. 19. Joshua xxiv. 32).

It is alleged that St. Stephen ("from forgetfulness or inattention") has confounded this purchase of the plot of ground at Sychem by Jacob with that which Abraham made of the burial-place of Machpelah from Ephron the Hittite (Gen. xxiii. 16; xlix. 29).

Reply.—It has never been shown, nor ever can be, that Abraham did not purchase a plot of ground at Sichem, where Joseph and the Patriarchs were buried.

Indeed (independently of St. Stephen's assertion) it is highly probable that he did;

For (1) Sichem was the first place in Canaan where Almighty God vouchsafed His presence to Abraham. (Gen. xii. 6, 7.)

It was thence called by the name Moreh (מֹרֶה), or Vision, and there Abraham built an altar to the Lord. Cp. Lightfoot, ii. p. 669.

He built an altar there. He must therefore have had some land there. Abraham was not the man to occupy land which belonged to others. And this is intimated by the words, "the Canaanite was then in the land" (Gen. xii. 6; xiii. 7); and he would not take from others, even "from a thread to a shoe-latchet" (Gen. xiv. 23). And he had no land of his own there, not so much as to set his foot on (Acts vii. 5). Therefore it is probable that Abraham purchased the site, on which he erected an altar, and where God first appeared to him. Cp. Lightfoot's judicious remarks here, ii. p. 670.

(2) The importance of this place (i. e. Sichem or Shechem) is further testified by the fact, that it was the first in Canaan to which Jacob repaired on his return from Padan-Aram. It is not indeed said that God appeared to him there. But he called it El-Elohe-Israel; and Jacob purchased a site there for the altar which he built (Gen. xxxiii. 18–20).

If, now, Jacob bought the place at Sichem where he built his altar, it is yet more probable that Abraham secured by purchase the place at Sichem where he built his altar, and where God first appeared to him in the land of Canaan.

(3) The sanctity of this place is still further attested by what is recorded in Gen. xxxv. 4, and particularly in Joshua xxiv. 1. 25–27. Hence Abimelech the usurper was so eager to gain possession of Sichem. See Judges viii. and ix. Sichem was in fact the national Sanctuary of Israel. And why? Probably from its connexion with Jacob and with Abraham; as the place which he, on his first entrance into the land of Canaan, had dedicated to God, Who had first manifested Himself to him there.

(4) The paternal portion or allotment of Joseph was at Sichem (John iv. 5, 6). Jacob, it is true, acquired land at Sichem by purchase; but something more than the site so purchased was conveyed by him in his blessing to Joseph (Gen. xlviii. 22). He gave him the plot he purchased at Sichem for 100 pieces of silver (the cave and field at Machpelah cost Abraham 400, Gen. xxiii. 15), and he also gave him the plot there which he had taken out of the hands of the Amorite with his sword and with his bow, i. e. by force. See Josh. xxiv. 12, and Gen. xlviii. 22, compared with Gen. xxxiii. 19. Josh. xxiv. 32. John iv. 5.

Jacob was a man of peace. What he tells us he took out of the hand of others by his sword and by his bow, we may be sure was not violently usurped by him, but justly recovered. And it may be, that the spot to which he refers was that which had been purchased originally by Abraham, and on which he had built an altar; and if that had been occupied by others (i. e. the Amorite), what more likely than that Jacob, from a feeling of piety and zeal, should feel it his duty to restore it, and secure it for ever to his posterity, as Isaac re-opened the wells which Abraham had digged, and the Philistines had stopped? (Gen. xxvi. 15, 18, 19.)

(5) This supposition that Sichem was originally acquired and dedicated by the Father of the Faithful, Abraham, and afterwards recovered by Jacob, suggests the reason why not only Joseph (whose inheritance it was), but why the other Patriarchs also were buried at Sichem rather than at Machpelah.

It was not perhaps without reference to these and other interesting circumstances in the early history of Sichem, that JESUS CHRIST, God manifest in the flesh, chose Sychar or Sichem for a special Revelation of Himself as the Messiah (see note on John iv. 5; cp. iv. 26), and discoursed there to the woman of Samaria concerning the future extension of God's Worship to every place in the world (John iv. 21).

Objection 3. Lastly, it is objected

That St. Stephen says, Abraham purchased the land at Sichem of the children of Emmor the son of Sichem;

And this, it is said, is a proof that he confounded a purchase supposed to be made by Abraham, with that made by Jacob of the sons of Sichem, the father of Shechem (Gen. xxxiii. 19. Josh. xxiv. 32).

Reply.—St. Stephen is speaking of an Emmor, or Hamor, who was a different person from the Emmor or Hamor with whom Jacob dealt. Jacob dealt with the sons of a Hamor who was father of Shechem (Gen. xxxiii. 19. Josh. xxiv. 32). But St.

Stephen says that Abraham bought the field from the sons of Hamor, the son of Shechem. So the words τοῦ Συχέμ ought to be translated.

Hamor was the name of the Prince of the Shechemites (Gen. xxxiv. 2). And it is no more surprising that there should be two princes of Shechem called Hamor, than that there should be many Candaces in succession in Meroe, and many Pharaohs in Egypt, and many Cæsars at Rome.

Hamor seems to have been the hereditary title of the king of the country. See Judges ix. 28, where the name occurs 500 years after Jacob's time.

43. ἐπέκεινα Βαβυλῶνος] beyond Babylon.

Objection.—This is inconsistent with Amos v. 27, who has Δαμασκού, Damascus.

Reply.—In order to enforce his argument, St. Stephen adds to the prophecy of Amos some other declarations of the same Spirit Who inspired Amos, and Who had pronounced by them that the Israelites would be carried for their sins still further than Damascus (Jer. xx. 4. 2 Chron. xxxvi. 20), even to Babylon and beyond it. There was something significant in the fact here mentioned, that God would carry them away for their sins from Canaan to beyond Babylon; i. e. that for their unbelief He would invert in their case the course He had followed with Abraham their father for his faith. God brought him from Chaldea to Canaan, He would carry them from Canaan to beyond Chaldea. And observe, St. Stephen uses the same word here (μετοικίζω) as he had done in v. 4, when speaking of Abraham.

There must have been a sharp sting in this word Βαβυλῶνος reserved for the end of the sentence, where they perhaps only expected to hear Δαμασκού.

On this practice, so reasonable in itself, of blending several prophecies into one, and also condensing their substance (which is imputed in St. Stephen's case to inaccuracy and forgetfulness!), see the excellent observations of Surenhusius, pp. 43. 45. 343, and the numerous examples cited by him of this practice. Cp. Acts iii. 22. 25, and see note above on Matt. ii. 23, Luke iv. 17, and above on vii. 3, below on Acts xiii. 22.

On the whole, on reviewing the Objections above recited, we may affirm, that there is nothing in them which can invalidate the claims of St. Stephen to Inspiration; or those of St. Luke, who has preserved his speech, and asserts that St. Stephen "was full of the Holy Ghost," and that they "could not resist the wisdom with which he spoke."

There is nothing in St. Stephen's statements to countenance the assertion of some recent Criticism, that he confounded Abraham with Jacob, and Sichem with Hebron, and one purchase with another. There is nothing there to give any encouragement to its vain-glorious notion, that it can penetrate with a keener glance into the records of early Jewish History, than he "who was full of the Holy Ghost," and whose eye, being enlightened by Him, pierced through the clouds, and saw "the heavens opened, and Jesus standing at the right hand of God." On the other hand, we are constrained to ask,—Can there be any reasonable expectation of "progress, or further illumination" in Biblical Criticism, or of any other results but of degeneracy, degradation, disbelief, and demoralization, from such allegations as these of a shallow and superficial sciolism, putting them forth with arrogant presumption, as if they were proved; and as even furnishing data to be accepted and arranged by a calm Inductive Philosophy as valuable acquisitions of Theological Science?

But they who read Holy Scripture with right dispositions will derive spiritual comfort and intellectual delight from those portions of Holy Writ which, like St. Stephen's speech, may appear at first sight to be beset with difficulties, and have been most frequently made occasions of sceptical cavils. They will feel persuaded that there are some good reasons for statements in Scripture, which at first may seem perplexing. They will be sure that valuable truths—like precious pearls in rough and hard shells—lurk concealed there. They will endeavour by God's grace, with devout prayer, and with earnest labour, to extract them. And their labour will often be rewarded. As in the instances above noticed in St. Stephen's speech, they will see gleams of divine light where they once saw obscurity. Objections against Scripture will resolve themselves into Arguments for it. Difficulties will be changed into Evidences. And from this process of critical transformation they will derive a persuasion, that when the mists of human infirmity, which hang over us in this world, are dispersed, and our eyes are illumined by the same Spirit Who shed His bright beams of light on St. Stephen, all the other difficulties of Scripture will disappear; we shall acquire new faculties of spiritual vision, and where before we saw mists and clouds, we shall see the heavens opened, and the glory of Jesus Christ standing at the right hand of God.

VII. ¹ Εἶπε δὲ ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς, εἰ ἄρα ταῦτα οὕτως ;

Ἦ δὲ ἔφη, Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοὶ καὶ πατέρες, ἀκούσατε. ² Ὁ Θεὸς τῆς δόξης ὤφθη τῷ πατρὶ ἡμῶν Ἀβραὰμ, ὄντι ἐν τῇ Μεσοποταμίᾳ, πρὶν ἢ κατοικῆσαι αὐτὸν ἐν Χαρρὰν, ³ καὶ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτόν, Ἐξέλθε ἐκ τῆς γῆς σου καὶ ἐκ τῆς συγγενείας σου, καὶ δεῦρο εἰς τὴν γῆν ἣν ἄν σοι δείξω. ⁴ Τότε ἐξελθὼν ἐκ γῆς Χαλδαίων κατώκησεν ἐν Χαρρὰν· κακεῖθεν, μετὰ τὸ ἀποθανεῖν τὸν πατέρα αὐτοῦ, μετόκισεν αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν γῆν ταύτην, εἰς ἣν ὑμεῖς νῦν κατοικεῖτε. ⁵ Καὶ οὐκ ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ κληρονομίαν ἐν αὐτῇ, οὐδὲ βῆμα ποδός· καὶ ἐπηγγείλατο· δοῦναι αὐτὴν εἰς κατάσχεσιν αὐτῷ, καὶ τῷ σπέρματι αὐτοῦ μετ' αὐτόν, οὐκ ὄντος αὐτῷ τέκνου. ⁶ Ἐλάλησε δὲ οὕτως ὁ Θεός, ὅτι ἔσται τὸ σπέρμα αὐτοῦ πάροιικον ἐν γῇ ἁλλοτρίᾳ, καὶ δουλώσουσιν αὐτὸ καὶ κακώσουσιν· ἔτη τετρακόσια· ⁷ καὶ τὸ ἔθνος, ᾧ ἔὰν δουλεύσωσι κρινῶ Ἐγώ, ὁ Θεὸς εἶπεν· καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα ἐξελεύσονται καὶ λατρεύσουσιν μοι· ἐν τῷ τόπῳ τούτῳ. ⁸ Καὶ ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ διαθήκην περιτομῆς· καὶ οὕτως ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἰσαὰκ, καὶ περιέτεμεν αὐτὸν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ ὀγδόῃ· καὶ ὁ Ἰσαὰκ τὸν Ἰακώβ, καὶ ὁ Ἰακώβ τοὺς δώδεκα πατριάρχας. ⁹ Καὶ οἱ πατριάρχαι ζηλώσαντες τὸν Ἰωσήφ ἀπέδοντο εἰς Αἴγυπτον. ¹⁰ Καὶ ἦν ὁ Θεὸς μετ' αὐτοῦ· ¹¹ καὶ ἐξείλατο αὐτὸν ἐκ πασῶν τῶν θλίψεων αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ χάριν καὶ σοφίαν ἐναντίον Φαραὼ βασιλέως Αἰγύπτου, καὶ κατέστησεν αὐτὸν ἡγούμενον ἐπ' Αἴγυπτον καὶ ὅλον τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ. ¹² ἤλθε δὲ ἡμις ἐφ' ὅλην τὴν γῆν Αἰγύπτου καὶ Χαναὰν καὶ θλίψις μεγάλη· καὶ οὐχ εὗρισκον χορτάσματα οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν. ¹³ Ακούσας δὲ Ἰακώβ ὄντα σίτια εἰς Αἴγυπτον ἐξαπέστειλε τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν πρῶτον· ¹⁴ καὶ ἐν τῷ δευτέρῳ ἀνεγνωρίσθη Ἰωσήφ τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς αὐτοῦ, καὶ φανερόν ἐγένετο τῷ Φαραὼ τὸ γένος τοῦ Ἰωσήφ. ¹⁵ Ἀποστείλας δὲ Ἰωσήφ μετεκαλέσατο Ἰακώβ τὸν πατέρα αὐτοῦ καὶ πᾶσαν τὴν συγγένειαν αὐτοῦ ἐν ψυχαῖς ἐβδομήκοντα πέντε. ¹⁶ Καὶ κατέβη Ἰακώβ εἰς Αἴγυπτον, καὶ ἐτελεύτησεν αὐτὸς καὶ οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν. ¹⁷ Καὶ μετετέθησαν εἰς Συχέμ, καὶ ἐτέθησαν ἐν τῷ μνήματι ᾧ ὠνήσατο Ἀβραὰμ τιμῆς ἀργυρίου παρὰ τῶν υἱῶν Ἑμμὼρ τοῦ Συχέμ. ¹⁸ Καθὼς δὲ ἤγγιζεν ὁ χρόνος τῆς ἐπαγγελίας, ἧς ὡμολόγησεν ὁ Θεὸς τῷ Ἀβραὰμ, ἠῤῥησεν ὁ λαὸς καὶ ἐπληθύνθη ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ, ¹⁹ ἄχρις οὗ ἀνέστη βασιλεὺς ἕτερος, ὃς οὐκ ᾔδει τὸν Ἰωσήφ. ²⁰ Οὗτος κατασοφισάμενος τὸ γένος ἡμῶν ἐκάκωσε τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν, τοῦ ποιεῖν ἔκθετα τὰ βρέφη αὐτῶν, εἰς τὸ μὴ ζωογονεῖσθαι. ²¹ Ἐν ᾧ καιρῷ ἐγεννήθη Μωϋσῆς, καὶ ἦν ἁστέιος τῷ Θεῷ· ὃς ἀνετράφη μῆνας τρεῖς ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ τοῦ πατρὸς. ²² Ἐκτεθέντα δὲ αὐτὸν ἀνείλατο αὐτὸν ἡ θυγάτηρ Φαραὼ, καὶ

2. Θεὸς τῆς δόξης] the God of glory. The fountain of glory. (Chrys.) On this Hebraism (Ps. xxviii. 3), see on Matt. xxii. 11, and cp. Eph. i. 17. Col. i. 11. Heb. ix. 5. Phil. iii. 21.

— Χαρρὰν] Haran; Kārrai, Carrae. (Lucan i. 104.)

3.] On the supposed discrepancy in this verse, see above under "Objections," p. 67.

4.] On this verse, see above under "Objections," p. 67. — μετόκισεν] God removed him. Cp. Valck. here, p. 417, on the difference between κατοικῆσαι καὶ κατοικῆσαι, and the present Editor's note on Theocritus, p. 242.

5. βῆμα ποδός] Deut. ii. 5, LXX.

6.] See above, under "Objections," p. 67.

7.] See above, under "Objections," p. 67.

8. πατριάρχας] Patriarchs; the heads of the twelve πατρίαί, or tribes.

9.] See above, under "Objections," p. 68.

For an excellent summary of certain points in which Joseph was typical of Christ, cp. Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. vi. p. 414, and Mather on the Types, p. 86, ed. 1705.

10. ἐξείλατο] On this form, see Winer, p. 68. Cp. v. 21; xii. 11.

12. σίτια] So A, B, C, D, E. Elz. σῖτα.

— εἰς Αἴγυπτον] So A, B, D, E. Elz. ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ. Cp. viii. 40, εὗρεθ' εἰς Ἀζωτον.

The accusative is more expressive here, as indicating that provisions were stored up, and, as it were, brought together into Egypt; as distinct from other countries.

14.] See above, under "Objections," p. 68.

16.] See above, under "Objections," p. 68.

17. ὡμολόγησεν] So A, B, C.—Elz. ὡμοσε.

19. ἐκάκωσε—τοῦ ποιεῖν] On the construction, see above, iii. 12; xv. 20. Luke ii. 21. Winer, § 44, p. 292. It seems to be derived from the Hebrew use of h with the Infinitive.

20. ἁστέιος τῷ Θεῷ] fair to God, i. e. in God's sight. The LXX apply the word ἁστέιος to Moses (Exod. ii. 2), for the Hebr. niv, goodly, fair. Comp. Heb. xi. 23. χαρίεις. (Hesych.) The addition of τῷ Θεῷ is a Hebraism, denoting what is really and eminently such. Cp. Vorst. de Hebr. cap. xvi., and Valck. here, p. 425. See Jonah iii. 3, πόλις μεγάλη τῷ Θεῷ. Ruth iii. 10. Moses was goodly, not only in men's sight, who look only on the countenance, but in the eyes of God, Who reads the heart. See above, on Luke i. 6; below, 2 Cor. ix. 4, δυνατὰ τῷ Θεῷ, and Wets. here, and Winer, § 36, p. 221.

21, 22. ἐκτεθέντα αὐτὸν—αὐτόν] So A, B, C, D. Elz. has ἐκτεθέντος αὐτοῦ.

On the repetition of the pronoun αὐτόν, see Matt. viii. 1; xxvi. 71. Mark ix. 28.

ἀνεθρέψατο αὐτὸν ἐαυτῇ εἰς υἱόν. ²² u Καὶ ἐπαιδεύθη Μωϋσῆς ἐν πάσῃ σοφίᾳ u Luke 24. 19. Αἰγυπτίων ἦν δὲ δυνατὸς ἐν λόγοις καὶ ἐν ἔργοις αὐτοῦ. ²³ Ως δὲ ἐπληροῦτο αὐτῷ τεσσαρακονταετῆς χρόνος, ἀνέβη ἐπὶ τὴν καρδίαν αὐτοῦ ἐπισκέφασθαι v Exod. 2. 11, &c. τοὺς ἀδελφούς αὐτοῦ, τοὺς υἱοὺς Ἰσραὴλ. ²⁴ Καὶ ἰδὼν τινα ἀδικούμενον ἡμύναντο, καὶ ἐποίησεν ἐκδίκησιν τῷ καταπονουμένῳ πατάξας τὸν Αἰγύπτιον. ²⁵ Ἐνόμιζε δὲ συνιέναι τοὺς ἀδελφούς αὐτοῦ, ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς διὰ χειρὸς αὐτοῦ δίδωσι σωτηρίαν αὐτοῖς· οἱ δὲ οὐ συνήκαν. ²⁶ w Τῇ δὲ ἐπιούσῃ ἡμέρᾳ ὤφθη w Exod. 2. 13. αὐτοῖς μαχομένοις, καὶ συνήλλασσεν αὐτοὺς εἰς εἰρήνην εἰπών, Ἄνδρες, ἀδελφοί ἐστε, ἵνατί ἀδικεῖτε ἀλλήλους; ²⁷ Ὁ δὲ ἀδικῶν τὸν πλησίον ἀπόσωτο αὐτὸν εἰπών, Τίς σέ κατέστησεν ἄρχοντα καὶ δικαστὴν ἐφ' ἡμῶν; ²⁸ μὴ ἀνελεῖν με σὺ θέλεις, ὃν τρόπον ἀνείλες χθὲς τὸν Αἰγύπτιον; ²⁹ Ἐφυγε δὲ Μωϋσῆς ἐν τῷ λόγῳ τούτῳ, καὶ ἐγένετο πάροικος ἐν γῇ Μαδιὰμ, οὗ ἐγέννησεν υἱοὺς δύο. ³⁰ x Καὶ πληρωθέντων ἐτῶν τεσσαράκοντα, ὤφθη αὐτῷ x Exod. 3. 2, &c. ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ τοῦ ὅρους Σινᾶ ἄγγελος Κυρίου ἐν φλογὶ πυρὸς βάτου. ³¹ Ὁ δὲ Μωϋσῆς ἰδὼν ἐθαύμαζε τὸ ὄραμα· προσερχομένου δὲ αὐτοῦ κατανοῆσαι, ἐγένετο φωνὴ Κυρίου πρὸς αὐτόν, ³² y Ἐγὼ ὁ Θεὸς τῶν πατέρων σου, ὁ y Matt. 22. 32. Θεὸς Ἀβραάμ, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς Ἰσαάκ, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς Ἰακώβ. Ἐντρομος Heb. 11. 16. δὲ γενόμενος Μωϋσῆς οὐκ ἐτόλμα κατανοῆσαι. ³³ Εἶπε δὲ αὐτῷ ὁ Κύριος, Λύσον τὸ ὑπόδημα τῶν ποδῶν σου· ὁ γὰρ τόπος ἐν ᾧ ἔστηκας γῇ ἁγία ἐστίν. ³⁴ Ἰδὼν εἶδον τὴν κάκωσιν τοῦ λαοῦ μου τοῦ ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ, καὶ τοῦ στεναγμοῦ αὐτῶν ἤκουσα· καὶ κατέβην ἐξελεῖσθαι αὐτούς· καὶ νῦν δεῦρο ἀποστείλω σε εἰς Αἴγυπτον. ³⁵ Τοῦτον τὸν Μωϋσῆν ὃν ἠρνήσαντο εἰπόντες, Τίς σέ κατέστησεν ἄρχοντα καὶ δικαστὴν; τοῦτον ὁ Θεὸς ἄρχοντα καὶ λυτρωτὴν ἀπέσταλκεν σὺν χειρὶ ἀγγέλου z Exod. 7. & 8. & 9. & 10. & 11. & 14. & 16. 1, a Deut. 18. 15, 18 ch. 3. 22. τοῦ ὀφθέντος αὐτῷ ἐν τῇ βάτῳ. ³⁶ z Οὗτος ἐξήγαγεν αὐτοὺς ποιήσας τέρατα καὶ σημεῖα ἐν γῇ Αἰγύπτου, καὶ ἐν Ἐρυθρᾷ θαλάσῃ, καὶ ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ ἔτη τεσσαράκοντα. ³⁷ a Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Μωϋσῆς ὁ εἰπὼν τοῖς υἱοῖς Ἰσραὴλ, Προφήτην ὑμῖν ἀναστήσει Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς ὑμῶν ἐκ τῶν ἀδελφῶν ὑμῶν ὡς ἐμέ· b αὐτοῦ ἀκούσεσθε. ³⁸ c Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ γενόμενος ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ Gal. 3. 19.

22. ἐν πάσῃ σοφίᾳ Αἰγυπτίων] in all the wisdom of the Egyptians. Egypt was celebrated in the ancient world as the mother of arts and sciences, and as the teacher of the wisest among the Greeks (see Homer, Odys. iv. 229. Herod. ii. 160); and was therefore visited by Pythagoras and Plato. Valer. Mar. viii. 7. Ammian. Marcellin. xxii. 6. Macrobi. Somn. Scip. i. 21; Saturnal. i. 14. Philo, Vit. Mosis, i. p. 84. (Wetstein.)

Here is an argument for the consecration of heathen Literature to the service of Christianity. See the eloquent passage of Origen, Epist. ad Greg. Thaumaturg. S. Jerome, ad Magnum, Epist. 84, and ad Damas. 146, and Augustin. de doctr. Christ. (ii. 40), and c. Faust. (xxii. 91), who argues for this consecration from the example of the ancient people of God applying the gold of Egypt to the beautifying of the Tabernacle, and cites the examples of Christian Fathers. "Nonne aspicimus quanto auro et argento et veste suffarcinatus exierit de Ægypto Cyprianus, Doctor suavissimus et Martyr beatissimus? quanto Lactantius, quanto Victorinus, Optatus, Hilarius, ut de vivis taceam, quanto innumerabiles Græci? Quod prior ipse fidelissimus Dei famulus Moyses fecerat, de quo scriptum est, 'quod eruditus fuerat omni sapientiâ Ægyptiorum.'" Cp. Hooker, quoted above, Luke v. 39, and below, xxvi. 14.

— δυνατὸς ἐν λόγοις] mighty in words. Though by nature "slow of speech" (Exod. iv. 10); but God gave him eloquence (Exod. iv. 10), and he is called ὀμιλεῖν πινανώτατος by Josephus, Ant. iii. 1. 4.

— ἐργοῖς] deeds. See Josephus, Ant. ii. 10. 1.

23. τεσσαρακονταετῆς χρόνος] Moses was forty years old when he visited his brethren; he was twice forty years old when he stood before Pharaoh (Exod. vii. 7); and thrice forty years old when he died. (Deut. xxxiv. 7.) See the remarks of the Jewish Doctors on these periods in Wetstein, p. 498. The repeated mention of forty years in the history of Moses (here and in v. 30, and vv. 36. 42), is surely not without some meaning in reference to Christ. See above, i. 3.

24. ἐκδίκησιν] See Luke xviii. 3. 7. 8.

26. συνήλλασσεν] he was reconciling; so B, C, D; a much preferable reading to that of Elz., συνήλασεν. They rejected Moses, when he was engaged in the work of Reconciliation, as the Jews rejected Christ, the Mediator between God and Man.

27. σέ] thee, emphatic; thee, so feeble and obscure a person.

28. μέ] me, emphatic; me, as well as the Egyptian.

30. ἄγγελος Κυρίου] the angel of the Lord. Generally supposed by the Fathers to be the Second Person of the Blessed Trinity. See Hilary, de Trin. v. Augustin. de Trin. ii. 13; iii. 10. Hieronym. in Galat. c. 3. Ambrose, de Fide, cap. 5. (Lorin.)

33. λύσον τὸ ὑπόδημα] loose thy shoe (cp. Josh. v. 15), lest something unclean should be cleaving to the shoe in the course of the journey: and therefore the Priests did not wear shoes when ministering in the Temple. Schemoth, ii. 937. Pirke Eliezer, 40. Cp. Juvenal, vi. 158. And this rule extended itself among heathen nations (Solinus, xvii.), and the Turks. (Wetstein.)

34, 35. ἰδὼν εἶδον] seeing, I saw: "plenissime agnovi;" another Hebraism. Exod. iii. 7. See Gen. ii. 17. Deut. xv. 10. Matt. xiii. 14. Heb. vi. 14. Valck. and Vorst. p. 610, cap. xxxiv. 34. ἀποστείλω] let me send thee. So A, B, C, D. Cp. Numb. xxiii. 27, δεῦρο παραλάβω σε. (Bornemann.) Elz. has ἀποστελῶ.

35. τοῦτον] him. Mark the emphatic repetition of οὗτος. Cp. John vi. 42. Winer, p. 144.

— ἀπέσταλκεν] hath sent, although they little supposed it. The reading of A, B, D, E, and others. Elz. has ἀπέστειλεν.

— σὺν χειρὶ] A, B, C, D, E. Elz. ἐν χ.

36. γῇ Αἰγύπτου] land of Egypt; a common Hebraism, Matt. x. 15; xi. 24, supplanted in some MSS. by γῇ Αἰγύπτῳ; as other Hebraisms have been by Hellenic forms.

d Exod. 19. 3, 17. ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ μετὰ τοῦ ἀγγέλου τοῦ λαλοῦντος αὐτῷ^d ἐν τῷ ὄρει Σινᾶ, καὶ τῶν
e Deut. 5. 27, 31. πατέρων ἡμῶν, ° ὃς ἐδέξατο^e λόγια ζῶντα δοῦναι ἡμῖν. ³⁹ Ωὖ οὐκ ἠθέλησαν f Rom. 3. 2. ὑπήκοοι γενέσθαι οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν, ἀλλ' ἀπώσαντο, καὶ ἐστράφησαν ταῖς καρ-g Exod. 32. 1. δαίαις αὐτῶν εἰς Αἴγυπτον, ⁴⁰ εἰπόντες τῷ Ἀαρὼν, Ποίησον ἡμῖν θεοὺς οἱ προπορεύουσιν ἡμῶν· ὁ γὰρ Μωϋσῆς οὗτος, ὃς ἐξήγαγεν ἡμᾶς ἐκ h Deut. 9. 16. γῆς Αἰγύπτου—, οὐκ οἶδαμεν τί γέγονεν αὐτῷ. ⁴¹ Καὶ ἐμοσχοποιήi Ps. 106. 19, 20. ησαν ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ἐκείναις, καὶ ἀνήγαγον θυσίαν τῷ εἰδῶλῳ, καὶ εὐφραίνοντο j Jer. 19. 13. ἐν τοῖς ἔργοις τῶν χειρῶν αὐτῶν. ⁴² Ἐστρεψε δὲ ὁ Θεὸς, ^k καὶ παρέδωκεν k Ps. 81. 12. αὐτοὺς ^l λατρεύειν τῇ στρατιᾷ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, καθὼς γέγραπται ἐν βίβλῳ τῶν l Deut. 4. 19. προφητῶν, Μὴ σφάγια καὶ θυσίας προσηνέγκατε μοι ἔτη τεσσαρά-m Exod. 25. 40. κοντα ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, οἶκος Ἰσραὴλ; ⁴³ Καὶ ἀνελάβετε τὴν σκηνὴν n Josh. 8. 14. τοῦ Μολόχ, καὶ τὸ ἄστρον τοῦ Θεοῦ ὑμῶν Ῥεφάν, τοὺς τύπους οὓς o 1 Sam. 16. 12, 13. ἐποίησατε προσκυνεῖν αὐτοῖς· καὶ μετοικιῶ ὑμᾶς ἐπέκεινα Βαβυ-p 2 Sam. 7. 1, &c. λῶνος. ⁴⁴ Ἡ σκηνὴ τοῦ μαρτυρίου ἦν ἐν τοῖς πατράσιν ἡμῶν ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, q 1 Chron. 17. 12. καθὼς διετάξατο ὁ λαλῶν τῷ Μωϋσῇ, ποιῆσαι αὐτὴν κατὰ τὸν τύπον ὃν ἐωράκει r Ps. 132. 5. ⁴⁵ ἦν καὶ εἰσήγαγον διαδεξάμενοι οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν μετὰ Ἰησοῦ, ἐν τῇ καταs 1 Kings 6. 1, & 8. 27. σχέσει τῶν ἐθνῶν, ὃν ἔξωσεν ὁ Θεὸς ἀπὸ προσώπου τῶν πατέρων ἡμῶν ἕως τῶν
t ch. 17. 24. ἡμερῶν Δαυὶδ. ⁴⁶ ὃς εὗρε χάριν ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ ἡτήσατο εὐρεῖν σκηνώμα u Isa. 66. 1, 2. τῷ Θεῷ Ἰακώβ. ⁴⁷ Σολομὼν δὲ ὠκοδόμησεν αὐτῷ οἶκον. ⁴⁸ Ἀλλ' οὐχ ὁ υἱμίστος ἐν χειροποιήτοις κατοικεῖ, καθὼς ὁ προφήτης λέγει, ⁴⁹ Ὁ οὐρανός μοι θρόνος, ἢ δὲ γῆ ὑποπόδιον τῶν ποδῶν μου· ποῖον οἶκον οἰκοδο-

38. ἐκκλησία ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ] Church in the wilderness. A remarkable confirmation of his argument. God's Church is not limited to Judaea. It was in the Wilderness, and there Moses, your great Lawgiver, was with it; and, remember, he died there in the Wilderness; and was never permitted to enter the promised Land, to which you would restrain the favours of God.

The Church in the Wilderness. This sentence is not without its prophetic significance for Christian times. The Church of God is represented in the Apocalypse as persecuted by the Great City; She is the Woman in the Wilderness (Rev. xii. 1—6), and there she is nourished by God forty-two months (v. 6), the number of the 'Mansions,' or stations, of the Ancient Church of God in the Wilderness of Sinai. See below, notes on Rev. xii. 1—6.

40. ὁ γὰρ Μωϋσῆς] On the construction, see xix. 34; xx. 3. Winer, § 63, p. 501.

41. ἐμοσχοποίησαν] they made a Calf—in imitation of the Apis of Memphis in Egypt, which they had left (cp. Winer, R. W. B. i. p. 644); and so in heart returned to Egypt (v. 39).

Thus ye have dealt with Christ. He came to deliver you from worse than Egyptian bondage, and ye have fallen back into worse slavery than before.

—ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ἐκείναις] in those days. Even when the Law was being delivered to him by God, they were guilty of rebellion against Him.

42. ἐν βίβλῳ τῶν προφητῶν] in the book of the Prophets; i. e. of the Twelve lesser Prophets, who were reckoned as forming one βίβλος, or volume, by the Jews. See Bp. Cosin on the Canon, p. 12, and below, xiii. 40.

—μοί] to Me, emphatic. Did ye offer to Me? No—but to Moloch!

43. ἀνελάβετε] ye lifted up. The word used by Amos (v. 26), נָשָׂא, sustulit. Ye who were My holy People, appointed to lift up and carry My Tabernacle, the Tabernacle of My Presence, with you, in your journeyings through the Wilderness,—ye were not ashamed of your idol, but ye raised him aloft in the air, and carried him and his tabernacle on high, as a sacred banner, standard, or trophy, when you ought to have fixed your hearts on Me and Mine!

Moloch is opposed to Jehovah, and Moloch's idolatrous σκηνὴ to the σκηνὴ or Tabernacle of God.

The Alexandrine MS. has Ῥαφάν here. C, E have Ῥεφάν, D has Ῥεμφάν. The LXX have Ῥανφάν for Hebr. רָפָן. It seems probable that Kium, Kivun, and Rephan or Remphan, signify the Kronos or Saturnus of the Egyptians. And ἄστρον would be the Planet of Saturn. See the authorities in Lightfoot, ii. p. 673.

Glass, Phil. p. 645, 646. Surenhus, p. 413. Rosenm. here, and Winer, p. 386, in v. Saturn.

S. Cyril's note (in Catenâ, p. 123, cp. Theophyl. p. 68, and Æcum. p. 71) deserves attention, particularly from his connexion with Alexandria in Egypt. He affirms after Aquila and Theodotion that Ῥεφάν signifies blindness: the idol was that of a star, but it was εἰς τύφλωσιν ἐσκοπίσθησαν γὰρ (read ἐσκοτίσθησαν γὰρ) αἱ καρδίαι αὐτῶν. They worshipped the idol as their εἰσφόρος or day-star (ἄστρον), but it became to them a Ῥεφάν or σκότισμα, or darkness.

Perhaps therefore this name Rephan was given by the more devout Jews to this idol in contempt and abhorrence; for the same reason as they called the god of the Ekronites, Beelzeboul. And St. Stephen adopts this name Rephan from the LXX instead of Chim, as much as to say: Ye set up the star of a blind god in opposition to the God of heaven, and Father of lights.

—Μολόχ] Moloch, from מָלַךְ regnums: perhaps the Milcom (i. e. their King) of the Ammonites (1 Kings xi. 5. 33). The worship of Moloch accompanied with human sacrifices (see on Matt. v. 22) is specially forbidden in Leviticus xviii. 21 and xx. 2, and it may thence be inferred to have been practised by the Israelites.

—Βαβυλῶνος] See above, under "Objections," p. 69.

45. Ἰησοῦ] Jesus: Joshua the son of Nun. Cp. Heb. iv. 8. On the meaning of the name, see on Matt. i. 1.

It is observable that the name of Jesus, though ever in the thoughts of St. Stephen, and, as it were, hovering on his lips in almost every sentence, is never expressed in his Speech but here, where it does not mean Jesus of Nazareth, but Jesus (or Joshua) the son of Nun.

How much wisdom was there in this! If he had openly spoken as he felt concerning Jesus of Nazareth, he would have been stopped at once by the rage of his hearers (see v. 53, 54), and the Christian Church would never have had the speech of St. Stephen. There was divine eloquence in his silence. And all his words were, and ever will be—φωνᾶντα συνετοῖσι—vocal to the wise. And this word Jesus—not used for Christ, but for Joshua, the type of Christ, is full of meaning. It is significant of the fact already insisted on—that the whole speech is allusive to Christ.

—ἐν τῇ κατασχέσει] in the portion or possession of the Gentiles—κατάσχεσις = קְטִינָה Num. xxvii. 4. 7, and passim in LXX. See also above, v. 5.

κατάσχεσις ἐθνῶν can hardly mean occupation of the land of the Nations.

48.] After χειροποιήτοις Elz. adds ναοῖς, which is not in A, B, C, D, E, H. Cp. Acts xvii. 24.

μήσετέ μοι, λέγει Κύριος, ἢ τίς τόπος τῆς καταπαύσεώς μου; ⁵⁰ οὐχὶ ἡ χεὶρ μου ἐποίησε ταῦτα πάντα; ⁵¹ Ὑκκληροτράχηλοι, καὶ ἀπερίτμητοι ^{r Jer. 4. 4. & 6. 10. & 9. 25, 20. Ezek. 44. 7.} ταῖς καρδίαις καὶ τοῖς ὠσίν, ὑμεῖς αἰεὶ τῷ Πνεύματι τῷ ἁγίῳ ἀντιπίπτετε ὡς οἱ πατέρες ὑμῶν, καὶ ὑμεῖς. ⁵² Τίνα τῶν προφητῶν οὐκ ἐδίωξαν οἱ πατέρες ὑμῶν; καὶ ἀπέκτειναν τοὺς προκαταγγέλαντας περὶ τῆς ἐλεύσεως τοῦ Δικαίου, οὗ νῦν ὑμεῖς προδότες καὶ φονεῖς ἐγένεσθε. ⁵³ οὔτινες ἐλάβετε τὸν νόμον εἰς διαταγὰς ^{s Exod. 19. 3, et seqq. Gal. 3. 19. 2 Esd. 14. 30.} ἀγγέλων, καὶ οὐκ ἐφύλαξατε ⁵⁴ Ἀκούοντες δὲ ταῦτα διεπρίοντο ταῖς καρδίαις αὐτῶν, καὶ ἔβρυχον τοὺς ^{t ch. 5. 33.} ὀδόντας ἐπ' αὐτόν.

⁵⁵ Ὑπάρχων δὲ πλήρης Πνεύματος ἁγίου ἀτενίσας εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν εἶδε δόξαν Θεοῦ, καὶ Ἰησοῦν ἐστῶτα ἐκ δεξιῶν τοῦ Θεοῦ, ⁵⁶ καὶ εἶπεν, Ἰδοὺ, θεωρῶ τοὺς οὐρανοὺς διηνοιγμένους, καὶ τὸν Τῖδον τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐκ δεξιῶν ἐστῶτα τοῦ Θεοῦ.

⁵⁷ Κράζαντες δὲ φωνῇ μεγάλῃ συνέσχον τὰ ὦτα αὐτῶν, καὶ ὤρμησαν ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἐπ' αὐτόν, καὶ ἐκβαλόντες ἔξω τῆς πόλεως ἐλιθοβόλουν. ⁵⁸ Καὶ ^{u ch. 22. 20. 1 Kings 21. 13.} οἱ μάρτυρες ἀπέθεντο τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτῶν παρὰ τοὺς πόδας νεανίου καλουμένου Σαύλου. ⁵⁹ καὶ ἐλιθοβόλουν τὸν Στέφανον ἐπικαλούμενον καὶ λέγοντα, Κύριε ^{v Luke 23. 46.}

52. τοῦ Δικαίου] of the Just One, of whom ye now became the betrayers and murderers. This sentence seems to have been in the mind of the Second Apostolic Martyr at Jerusalem, St. James, when he wrote his Epistle a little before his own martyrdom. James v. 6.

53. εἰς διαταγὰς] at the disposition or ordinance of angels, i. e. ordained by God through them. διαταγέντα δι' ἀγγέλων, Schol. Mosq. Cp. διεδάξατο, v. 44.

On this use of εἰς, see Matt. xii. 41. Eph. i. 10. Glass. Phil. p. 484. 5. And as to the fact, viz. the Ministry of Angels at Mount Sinai, see Deut. xxxiii. 2, where God is said to appear on Sinai, σὺν μυριάδι . . . ἐκ δεξιῶν αὐτοῦ ἄγγελοι μετ' αὐτοῦ. Gal. iii. 19, νόμος διαταγῆς δι' ἀγγέλων. Heb. ii. 2, λαληθεὶς δι' ἀγγέλων. Joseph. Ant. xv. 5. 3, ἡμῶν τὰ δεινὰ ἐν τοῖς νόμοις δι' ἀγγέλων μαρτυρῶν. Surenhus. p. 420, who, after many of the Fathers, says, "tota res eò redire videtur postquam Act. vii. 36 (where there is mention of the Angel at the Bush), cum hoc loco (Gal. iii. 19) contulerimus, ut dicamus Christum stipantibus Ipsum myriadibus Angelorum tradidisse Legem."

The reason of the expression seems to be, that Christ Himself was the Angel of the Covenant (see vv. 30. 35. 38); He, when He promulgated the Law, was attended by Angels (Deut. xxxiii. 2), and therefore, in a rapid mode of expression, the Law given by the Angel, accompanied with Angels, might be said to have been given by the disposition of Angels; and so Josephus says (Ant. xv. 5. 3) that the Jews had received their Law from God by Angels, δι' ἀγγέλων παρὰ Θεοῦ. That διαταγή is to be understood in this sense, may be inferred from St. Stephen's use of διαδόσσομαι just before, v. 44.

55. ὑπάρχων] Not γενόμενος, and something more also than ὤν. It shows his antecedent spiritual state; and is an assertion of the inspiration with which this Speech was delivered. See the use of ὑπάρχων, iii. 2; xvii. 24; xxii. 3.

56. διηνοιγμένους] So A, B, C: parted asunder, and opened. Elz. ἀνεφνομένους.

— ἐστῶτα] standing. "Sedere judicantis est; stare pugnantis vel adjuvantis." (Greg. M. hom. xix. in S. Stephan.)

57. συνέσχον τὰ ὦτα] they stopped their ears, with their hands; an action of abhorrence. See Irenæus ap. Euseb. v. 20, and Wetstein's note here.

— ὤρμησαν ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἐπ' αὐτόν] They, filled with the Evil Spirit, rushed with one accord against him, who was full of the Holy Spirit. But what evil could Satan and the Jews do to St. Stephen? As S. Aug. says (Serm. 215), they procured punishment to themselves and a crown of glory to him. What benefits do we reap even from the agency of the Devil, through the overruling power of Christ! "Diabolus quanta prestitit! Omnes Martyres ipse nobis fecit!" (Aug.)

— ἐλιθοβόλουν] they were stoning him: repeated v. 59 to show the continuance of the act of stoning—while he was engaged in prayer.

58. ἀπέθεντο τὰ ἱμάτια] they laid down their upper garments, ἱμάτια, so as to be more ready for stoning. The witnesses cast the first stone (Deut. xvii. 7).

— νεανίου] of a young man, probably not less than 30 years of age. See xxvi. 10 and on Philem. 9. David was thirty years of age when he fought with Goliath, and is called νεανίσκος by Josephus.

How different was Saul the young man, from "Paul the aged!" Philem. 9.

— Σαύλου] Saul. Magis saviens omnes adjuvando, quam suis manibus lapidando. Aug. Serm. 279.

This is the first mention of St. Paul in Holy Scripture. His agency in the martyrdom of St. Stephen is mentioned with peculiar emphasis here, and again viii. 1, with the design probably of showing the power of Divine Grace in the change wrought thereby from Saul, the Persecutor of the Church, to Paul, the Preacher of the Gospel.

"Iste Saulus, et postea Paulus, persecutor Saulus, et prædicator Paulus. Magna et divina spectacula. Qui erat in cæde Stephani Persecutor, factus est regni cælorum Prædicator." Aug. Serm. 315.

Here also, it seems, we may be permitted to recognize one main reason why the History of the Acts is principally occupied in narrating the actions and sufferings of the two Apostles, St. Peter and St. Paul,—the one having shown his weakness in denying Christ, the other his fury in persecuting Him.

Those two names are noble trophies of the victories of the Holy Ghost.

The name of Saul mentioned here may also suggest the conjecture, that we are indebted, under the divine influence of the Holy Ghost, to the recital of St. Paul, for this report of St. Stephen's speech before the Jewish Sanhedrim.

St. Paul would doubtless have been anxious to make public reparation, as far as he was able, for the wrong done by himself to the blessed Martyr. This desire manifested itself afterwards in his public declaration at Jerusalem, recorded Acts xxii. 20. "When the blood of Thy Martyr, Stephen, was being shed, I myself also was standing there, and consenting to the deed, and holding the raiment of those who were killing him." He could not make better amends, than by confessing his own share in the martyrdom, as is done here (vii. 58; viii. 1), and in giving universal and perpetual publicity to the words of St. Stephen in the pages of Canonical Scripture, so that it might ever be said of St. Stephen, the Proto-martyr of the Church, as of the first Martyr of the world, Abel, "though dead, he speaketh." Heb. xi. 4.

This supposition is in some degree confirmed by the resemblance which (as is well shown by Mr. Humphry) may be traced between passages in St. Stephen's speech and St. Paul's speeches and Epistles; e. g.

St. Stephen says, v. 20, Μωϋσῆς ἀστειός. St. Paul, Heb. xi. 23.

St. Stephen says, v. 48, οὐχ ὁ ὕψιστος ἐν χειροποιήτοις κατοικεῖ. St. Paul, Acts xvii. 24, ὁ Θεὸς οὐκ ἐν χειροποιήτοις ναοῖς κατοικεῖ.

St. Stephen, vii. 53, ἐλάβετε νόμον εἰς διαταγὰς ἀγγέλων. St. Paul, Gal. iii. 19, ὁ νόμος διαταγῆς δι' ἀγγέλων. Heb. ii. 2, λαληθεὶς δι' ἀγγέλων.

St. Stephen, vii. 51, ἀπερίτμητοι τῇ καρδίᾳ. St. Paul, Rom. ii. 29, περιτομή καρδίας ἐν πνεύματι.

It is observable also, that St. Paul's first recorded speech in the Acts (xiii. 16) bears a striking resemblance to St. Stephen's.

w Luke 6. 28.
& 23. 34.

Ἰησοῦ, δέξαι τὸ πνεῦμά μου. ⁶⁰ Θεὶς δὲ τὰ γόνατα ἔκραξε φωνῇ μεγάλῃ, Κύριε, μὴ στήσης αὐτοῖς ταύτην τὴν ἁμαρτίαν. Καὶ τοῦτο εἰπὼν ἐκοιμήθη.

It is very probable, that St. Paul reported St. Stephen's speech to St. Luke, and that St. Luke wrote it under St. Paul's eye, and he published it with the sanction of St. Paul, an inspired Apostle, deeply versed in the History and Antiquities of his own nation. This consideration may serve to confirm us in our conclusion that there are no "errors or inaccuracies" in it.

59. ἐλιοβόλουν] they were stoning. The punishment for blasphemy. (Levit. xxiv. 16. Deut. xvii. 35.)

It has been inferred by some from the infliction of this punishment on St. Stephen, that the Sanhedrim had the power of life and death in matters of religion, without reference to the Roman Governor. But this is not clear. He generally resided at Cæsarea, not at Jerusalem; and in his absence they often proceeded in a summary and irregular way in questions of religion. See on xxvi. 10.

In the case of St. Stephen, there is no mention of any judicial sentence being pronounced. The assault upon him is represented as a tumultuary act of fury. (See vv. 57, 58.)

Popular outbreaks, followed by stoning, were not uncommon at this time at Jerusalem; as may be inferred from what is said above, even of the captain of the temple and the officers of the Chief Priests themselves in ch. v. 26, ἐφοβοῦντο τὸν λαὸν μὴ λιθοσθῶσιν, and from what is recorded in the history of our Lord, John viii. 59; x. 31—33. Cp. Matt. xxiii. 37.

The question whether the Jewish Sanhedrim had the power of life and death in such cases as this is best illustrated by a passage of Origen (ad African. § 14), who says, "Though the Jews are under tribute to the Romans, the Ethnarch, by the permission of Cæsar, is allowed to have considerable power among them; inasmuch that their trials are conducted according to their own laws, though clandestinely; and even capital punishment is inflicted, not as an absolute right, but with the imperial connivance." See Professor Blunt, Lectures, p. 141.

"Thus it would seem that St. Stephen suffered capital punishment," adds Professor Blunt, "at the hands of the Jews, even in spite of its not being exactly lawful for them to put any one to death; the majesty of the Roman law being contented to lie in abeyance, though ready at any time to assert itself and resume its functions."

— ἐνικαλούμενον] invoking. Bentley (on Freethinking, xxxvi. p. 138) conjectures that ΘΝ (Θεὸν) "was absorbed by the preceding syllable ON." Perhaps, however, there is a design in the omission. St. Stephen called upon Him Whom he beheld in heaven, and said to Him, "Lord Jesus, receive My Spirit." Thus St. Stephen teaches with his dying breath that the Name of Jesus is to be called upon and worshipped; i. e. that He is God. Hence in ix. 14. 21. 1 Cor. i. 2, and 2 Tim. ii. 22, "all that call on the Name of the Lord," is a periphrasis for Christians. See also xxii. 16.

— Κύριε Ἰησοῦ] Lord Jesus. This is the only place where the Name Jesus is uttered by St. Stephen, see on v. 45. St. Stephen at his death prays to Jesus, and addresses the same prayers to Jesus, as Jesus, dying on the cross, had addressed to His Father, Luke xxiii. 34. 46, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," and "Father, into Thy hands I commend My Spirit." Jesus, as man, taught us to pray; St. Stephen, inspired by the Holy Ghost, teaches us to pray to Jesus; and to pray to Him as He as Man prayed to His Father,—that is, as God.

— δέξαι τὸ πνεῦμά μου] receive my spirit. A proof that the spirit of man survives, and does not sleep, when separated from the body by death. See on Luke xvi. 22, 23, and above on i. 25.

60. μὴ στήσης—ἁμαρτίαν] lay not to their charge this sin. So A, B, C, D. Elz. τὴν ἁμαρτίαν ταύτην,—but ἁμαρτίαν, the emphatic word, has its proper place at the close. He warns them of their danger in committing the sin, and shows his love to them by prayer for the sinning.

The word στήσης involves the idea of weighing. See Matt. xxvi. 15, When Thou, the Judge of all, weighest their actions in Thy balance, do not place this sin in the scale against them.

By this prayer St. Stephen proved that all he had said in his speech, however bitter to them, was the language of charity. It came from the Spirit of Truth and Love, and it had its first-fruits in the conversion of Saul, and in that of thousands by him. "Sævire videbatur Stephanus; lingua ferox, cor lene: clamabat, et amabat; sæviebat, et salvos fieri volebat." S. Aug. (Serm. 315.)

The influence of this prayer of St. Stephen on other succeeding Martyrs may be seen in Euseb. v. 2.

— ἐκοιμήθη] he fell asleep; that is, in body,—though it had been stoned,—for his spirit had been commended to Jesus, v. 59, and that neither slumbers nor sleeps. See on Luke xvi. 22; xxiii.

43, and 1 Cor. xv. 6: even a heathen said, ἱερὸν ὄπνον κοιμᾶται· θνήσκειν μὴ λέγει τοὺς ἀγαθοὺς. (Callimachus, Epig. 10.)

On the rhythmical cadence of this sentence in the word ἐκοιμήθη ("---"), see note at the end of the Book, xxviii. 31.

The following comments on this Divine History are from S. Augustine's Sermons in Natali, the birthday, i. e. the Martyrdom (see on Acts ii. 24) Stephani Martyris (Serm. 314—320, vol. v. pp. 1856—1878).

"Cum aliorum martyrum vix gesta inveniamus quod in solemnitatibus earum recitare possimus (a remarkable declaration) Lujus passio in canonico libro est; Actus Apostolorum de Canone Scriptura est: ipse liber incipit legi à Dominico Paschæ, sicut se consuetudo habet Ecclesiæ (from Easter to Whitsuntide, Aug., Tract vi. in Joan.; cp. Chrys. in Acta, Hom. 63 and 48). In hoc ergo libro audistis quomodo sint electi et ab Apostolis ordinati septem Diaconi, in quibus Sanctus Stephanus erat; prior Martyr de Diaconis quàm de Apostolis: prior victima de Agnis, quàm de Arietibus." S. Aug. (p. 1859.)

He draws a parallel between

(1) The charges against our Lord, and those against Stephen. Compare John ii. 19—21. Matt. xxvii. 40, with Acts vi. 14.

(2) Our Lord's prayer for His enemies, and commendation of His soul to the Father; and St. Stephen's prayer and commendation of His soul to the Lord Jesus.

He traces St. Stephen's graces at his death to the influence of Christ's example. "Sedebat in cathedrâ crucis Christus, et docebat Stephanum regulam pietatis. Ecce discipulus Tuus orat pro inimicis suis, orat pro lapidatoribus suis." He refers his hearers to the Divine Source from which all St. Stephen's graces flowed. "Ecce hoc Stephanus fecit. De se? De suo fecit? Non ita; de dono Dei fecit. Si autem de dono Dei fecit, numquid intravit, et contra te clausit? Numquid pontem transivit et præcidit? Pete et tu; Fons manat, non siccavit.

"Non mortem timebat Stephanus, quia Christum, quem pro se occisum sciebat, viventem videbat; ac per hoc festinabat etiam ipse mori pro Illo, ut viveret cum Illo. Eja, fratres, sequamur eum; si enim sequamur Stephanum, coronabimur (alluding to his name Στέφανος, the Fathers love to dwell on the circumstance, that he who bore the name of Στέφανος was the first to win the crown of Martyrdom for Christ); maxime autem imitandus est nobis in dilectione inimicorum: persistens beatissimus Martyr in testimonio Veritatis, et Charitatis ardens Spiritu, pervenit ad gloriosissimum finem."

S. Aug. (p. 1878) applies to St. Stephen the promise of Christ (John xii. 26), "where I am, there shall My servant be," observing that in the Greek original the word is δῆκονος, and in some Latin Versions Diaconus, and that St. Stephen was indeed a deacon to Christ, that he did follow Christ, and that in him Christ's promise was made good, "ubi sum Ego, illic erit diaconus Meus." To this remark it might be added, that the verb also is used twice there, ἐὰν ἐμοὶ διακονῇ τις ἐμὸν ἀκολουθεῖτω, καὶ ὅπου εἰμὶ ἐγὼ, ἐκεῖ καὶ ὁ δῆκονος ὁ ἐμὸς ἔσται, καὶ ἐὰν τις ἐμὸν διακονῇ, τιμήσει αὐτὸν ὁ Πάτερ.

S. Jerome (in Ezek. xliii.) seems to assert that St. Stephen was martyred at the Passover, on the second day of unleavened bread. If this was the case, and it is rendered probable by the presence of many Hellenists (vi. 9), here was another point of resemblance to Christ. Cp. below, on xii. 3.

Lastly, on St. Stephen's death, Augustine says (p. 1873), "Cum tanta esset in docendo constantia, videte qualis fuerit in morte patientia. Hi ictibus corpus ipsius quatiebant; ille pro inimicis orabat; contundebatur homo exterior, et supplicabat interior. Sed Dominus qui cinxerat, qui probaverat, spectabat desuper militem Suum, juvaturus certantem, coronaturus vincentem. Denique Se ostendit illi. Ecce enim, inquit, video celos apertos, et Filium hominis stantem ad dexteram Dei. Et quid ait pro se? Domine Jesu, accipe spiritum meum; et pro illis genuflectit, et ait, Domine, ne statuas illis hoc peccatum. Et hoc dicto, obdormiit." O sweet slumber! He who fell asleep among the stones of his enemies, how triumphantly will his ashes awake from the stones of the tomb! He fell asleep in confidence and peace, for he commended his spirit to the Lord.

The position of St. Stephen's Day, the morrow after Christmas Day, in the Calendar of the Christian Church, has a beautiful significance. See the excellent remarks of Gregory Nyssen, in S. Stephan. (ii. p. 786.) It intimates that all the graces of all the Martyrs are due to the Incarnation of CHRIST, Who is the Great PROTO-MARTYR, "the true and faithful Martyr or Witness" (Rev. i. 5; iii. 14), of Whose "fulness all have received, and grace for grace." (John i. 16.) And this idea is strengthened by the sequence, in that Calendar, of the Martyrdom of Long

VIII. ¹ α Σαῦλος δὲ ἦν συννευδοκῶν τῇ ἀναιρέσει αὐτοῦ. Ἐγένετο δὲ ἐν α ch. 22. 20. & 7. 58.
ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ διωγμὸς μέγας ἐπὶ τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τὴν ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις· πάντες τε διεσπάρησαν κατὰ τὰς χώρας τῆς Ἰουδαίας καὶ Σαμαρείας, πλὴν τῶν ἀποστόλων.

² Συνεκόμισαν δὲ τὸν Στέφανον ἄνδρες εὐλαβεῖς, καὶ ἐποίησαν κοπετὸν μέγαν ἐπ' αὐτῷ. ³ β Σαῦλος δὲ ἐλυμαίνεται τὴν ἐκκλησίαν, κατὰ τοὺς οἴκους εἰσπο- b ch. 22. 4 ρευόμενος, σύρων τε ἄνδρας καὶ γυναῖκας παρεδίδου εἰς φυλακὴν. ⁴ Οἱ μὲν & 26. 10, 11.
οὖν διασπαρέντες διήλθον, εὐαγγελιζόμενοι τὸν λόγον.

⁵ γ Φίλιππος δὲ κατελθὼν εἰς πόλιν τῆς Σαμαρείας ἐκήρυσεν αὐτοῖς τὸν e ch. 6. 5.

Life in St. John the Evangelist, and of Infancy in the Holy Innocents. The Incarnation of Christ may be compared to the Mountain of continental Greece, from which all its principal rivers flow, and fertilize the land. He is the One Well-spring of Living Water—"the True Light that lighteth every one that cometh into the world." (John i. 9.)

Besides, the death-day of Martyrs is called rightly their ἡμέρα γενέθλιος, dies Natalis, their birth-day (Euseb. iv. 15). It is their nativity into everlasting Life. Well therefore may it be associated with the Nativity of CHRIST.

CH. VIII. 1—3. Σαῦλος ἦν συννευδοκῶν] Saul was consenting to his murder: cp. St. Paul's own words, xxii. 20. Saul (says Aug., Sermon 316, p. 1868) heard St. Stephen's speech; and then perhaps he scoffed at it; but he was concerned in St. Stephen's prayer. St. Stephen prayed for him. And mark the effects of that prayer. "Saulus, cui non sufficit occisus Stephanus, accepit Epistolas à Sacerdotibus, ut ubicunque inveniret Christianos alligatos adduceret ad supplicia sumenda, qualia sumpserat Stephanus. Iratus ibat Saulus, ibat lupo ad gregem Domini. Et Dominus de sursum, Saule, Saule, quid Me persequeris? Lupo, quid Agnum persequeris? Ego, quando sum occisus, Leonem occidi. Exue te lupo; esto de lupo, ovīs; de ove, Pastor. Stratus est Persecutor, erectus est Prædicator. Stephanus tunc agnus, Paulus tunc lupo erat; modò autem ambo agni."—May we all with them follow the LAMB in heaven!

1—4. πάντες διεσπάρησαν—εὐαγγελιζόμενοι τὸν λόγον] being scattered abroad by persecution they scattered abroad the seed of the Word. First, in Samaria, where Christ's prophetic eye had seen "the fields white unto harvest" (John iv. 35), and then in the whole world.

It is one of the purposes of this divine History, to show that "the fierceness of man turns to the praise of God." Ps. lxxvi. 10.

As it was in the Apostolic age, so it ever has been and ever will be with the Church, governed and guided by the Spirit of God;

As Tertullian says to the Roman Persecutors of the Church (Apolog. ad fin.), "Crudelitas vestra illecebra est magis sectæ. Plures efficiunt, quoties metimur à vobis; semen est sanguis Christianorum," and ad Scapulam, "Hanc sectam magis edificari videas, cum cædi videtur." Compare the language of S. Nilus (hom. 2 de Ascens.), "Succidebantur Ecclesiæ palmites, et Fidei fructus augescebat. E radice enim illa nati sunt Qui dixerat 'Ego vici Mundum; Ego sum Vitis, Vos Palmites.'" And Chrysostom says, the blood of Martyrs waters the garden of the Church, and makes it fruitful; and S. Leo (Serm. i. in Natal. Petri), "Non minuitur persecutionibus Ecclesia, sed augetur (cp. Exod. i. 12) et Dominicus ager segete altiore vestitur, dum grana quæ singula cadunt multiplicata nascuntur."

Besides, by their dispersions they destroyed the power of the Enemy. "Occiso Stephano, persecutionem gravissimam Ecclesia Hierosolymis passa est. Fugati sunt fratres qui ibi erant; soli Apostoli remanserunt. Cæteri fugabantur, sed, tanquam ardentes faces, accendebant. Stulti Judæi, quando illos de Hierosolymis fugabant, carbonem ignis in silvam mittebant." Aug. (Serm. 316.)

Thus, by the controlling power of Christ, the devices of the Arch-enemy of the Church were overruled into instruments against himself.

— πλὴν τῶν ἀποστόλων] except the Apostles. It would seem that a special charge had been laid on the Apostles to remain at Jerusalem; see above, on i. 4, and below, viii. 14; ix. 27; xi. 1; xv. 2.

2. συνεκόμισαν] devout men took up Stephen and made great lamentation over him. There was a peculiar reason for the mention of this circumstance in the case of St. Stephen, because (as Lightfoot shows, ii. p. 677) it was not lawful among the Jews to make outward demonstrations of grief for persons condemned by the Sanhedrim.

It is said by some interpreters, that these "devout" men must have been Jews (see Kuin., Meyer), because the word εὐλαβεῖς is connected with Ἰουδαῖοι in ii. 5; and because Christians would not have ventured to bury Stephen. But εὐλάβεια is characterized as a Christian grace (Heb. v. 7; xii. 28); and though their κοπετὸς was a remnant of Judaism (see Chrys. here, and below, on ix. 37), yet probably it is specially mentioned that these men buried Stephen, because it was an act of Christian courage, and exposed them to danger. However, it is not determined by the historian whether they were Jews, Proselytes, or Christians. Perhaps there were some among them from all these three classes: they are contrasted as ἄνδρες εὐλαβεῖς with the savage character of his murderers.

The Burial of the dead is here commended as an act of Christian piety, and thus is inculcated the duty of reverence for the bodies of Christians,

(1) as being temples of the Holy Ghost;

(2) and, as committed to the keeping of the grave, in order to rise again in glory, and to be "made like unto Christ's glorious Body." (Phil. iii. 21.)

See the treatise of S. Aug. (vi. p. 866), De curâ pro mortuis gerendâ, and cp. what Bp. Pearson says, on the Creed, Art. iv. p. 339, "When Ananias died, though after his sin, yet they wound him up and carried him out and buried him (Acts v. 6); when Stephen was stoned, devout men carried him to his burial; and when Dorcas died, they washed her and laid her in an upper chamber (Acts ix. 37). So careful were the primitive Christians of the rites of burial." And that pious and learned Expositor observes on the effect which Christianity had on national usages of Sepulture. In the Roman Empire, before the reception of the Gospel, the bodies of the dead were burnt, and their ashes only reserved in funeral urns. But after a few Emperors had received Baptism, there was not a body burnt in the Roman Empire.

So great a social change was wrought by Christianity. The religious sanctity of the Churchyards and Cemeteries of Europe is due to its influence. "And the decent custom of the primitive Christians (says Bp. Pearson) was so acceptable unto God, that under His Providence it proved most effectual in the conversion of the Heathen, and in the propagation of the Gospel."

But when Funeral Rites are neglected and violated, Christianity will decline. This is a warning not unnecessary in our own age and country, where, on account of the inadequate provision and insufficient care of Churchyards, there is danger of heartlessness and irreverence in the interment of the dead,—especially of the poor.

— κοπετὸν μέγαν] great lamentation,— "planctum magnum;" with wringing of hands and beating of breasts. See Luke xxiii. 48. Cp. below, ix. 39.

3. ἐλυμαίνεται] Saul was making havoc of the Church, while some were burying Stephen; and others were preaching the word. A striking contrast.

5. Φίλιππος] Philip. Not Philip the Apostle; for the Apostles remained at Jerusalem (v. 1). And if Philip had been an Apostle, it would not have been necessary for Peter and John to leave Jerusalem for Samaria, to lay their hands on those whom Philip had baptized there (vv. 12, 13). But this Philip was the Deacon, also called Philip the Evangelist (Acts xxi. 8). So Chrys. and Epiphanius, who says (Caten. p. 135), that Philip being a Deacon had not authority to give the Holy Spirit by laying on of hands. And Aug. (Serm. 266, 4) says, that he was called Philip the Evangelist, "propter promptum prædicationis eloquium."

— Σαμαρείας] Samaria. Not a city of Samaria, but the city of Samaria,— "in urbem ipsam Samariæ" (Bp. Pearson), the ancient residence of the Kings of Israel, the Metropolis, Σεβαστή—now Sebastieh. See Robinson, iii. 144, and "Later Researches," p. 126.

On this use of the genitive, see Glass. p. 250, and Meyer here. The article is often omitted after prepositions. See Mid-d Mark 16. 17.

e ch. 5. 36.

f ch. 2. 38.

Χριστόν. ⁶ Προσεῖχον δὲ οἱ ὄχλοι τοῖς λεγομένοις ὑπὸ τοῦ Φιλίππου ὁμοθυμαδὸν, ἐν τῷ ἀκούειν αὐτοὺς καὶ βλέπειν τὰ σημεῖα ἃ ἐποίει. ⁷ ^d πολλῶν γὰρ τῶν ἐχόντων πνεύματα ἀκάθαρτα, βοῶντα φωνῇ μεγάλῃ ἐξήρχοντο, πολλοὶ δὲ παραλελυμένοι καὶ χωλοὶ ἐθεραπεύθησαν. ⁸ καὶ ἐγένετο χαρὰ μεγάλη ἐν τῇ πόλει ἐκείνῃ.

⁹ ^e Ἀνὴρ δὲ τις ὀνόματι Σίμων προῦπῆρχεν ἐν τῇ πόλει μαγεύων καὶ ἐξιστῶν τὸ ἔθνος τῆς Σαμαρείας, λέγων εἶναί τινα ἑαυτὸν μέγαν. ¹⁰ ^f ὃ προσεῖχον πάντες ἀπὸ μικροῦ ἕως μεγάλου λέγοντες, Οὗτός ἐστιν ἡ δύναμις τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡ καλουμένη μεγάλη. ¹¹ Προσεῖχον δὲ αὐτῷ, διὰ τὸ ἱκανῶ χρόνῳ ταῖς μαγείαις ἐξεστακέσαι αὐτούς.

¹² ^g Ὅτε δὲ ἐπίστευσαν τῷ Φιλίππῳ εὐαγγελιζομένῳ περὶ τῆς βασιλείας τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ τοῦ ὀνόματος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ἐβαπτίζοντο ἄνδρες τε καὶ γυναῖκες. ¹³ Ὁ δὲ Σίμων καὶ αὐτὸς ἐπίστευσε· καὶ βαπτισθεὶς ἦν προσκαρτερῶν τῷ Φιλίππῳ· θεωρῶν τε δυνάμεις καὶ σημεῖα μεγάλα γινόμενα ἐξίστατο.

¹⁴ Ἀκούσαντες δὲ οἱ ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις ἀπόστολοι, ὅτι δέδεκται ἡ Σαμάρεια τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἀπέστειλαν πρὸς αὐτοὺς Πέτρον καὶ Ἰωάννην. ¹⁵ ^f οἷτινες

dleton here, p. 381. And A, B have the Article, which is received by Lachmann and Tischendorf.

If St. Luke had meant Sychar, or any other city than the capital, he would probably have specified its name (see John iv. 5): πόλις, used by itself, frequently stands for μητρόπολις. And from v. 14 it may also be inferred that πόλις τῆς Σαμαρείας here signifies the Capital. It is true that the Capital was now commonly called Σεβαστή. But this name is never used in the New Testament; and St. Luke, writing for Hellenistic readers, would be disposed to preserve the name by which the City was known from the LXX, and which is also used by Josephus, Ant. xx. 6. 2.

No reason can be assigned, why St. Luke should not have specified the name Sychar, or Sychem, if that had been the City of which he is here speaking; whereas there are many causes why he should not have mentioned Sebasté, the name of the Capital of Samaria. They may have visited Sichem also. For the city of Samaria stood at a short distance to the north of Sichem, Νεάπολις, now Nablous, on which see above, vii. 16.

7. ἐξήρχοντο] So A, B, C, D, E, and other MSS. Elz. ἐξήρχετο. But the plural number seems to be studiously used in these cases in order to show the personal plurality of the Evil Spirits. Cp. on Mark ix. 20. 26.

— παραλελυμένοι] This word is never used for paralytic by St. Matthew or St. Mark, who use the word παραλυτικός ten times (Matt. iv. 24; viii. 6; ix. 2. 6. Mark ii. 3, 4, 5, 9, 10).

But it is used in St. Luke's Gospel (v. 18. 24), where the word παραλυτικός does not occur; and it is used twice in the Acts (here, and ix. 33), where the word παραλυτικός does not occur. And thus we have a double coincidence between the Acts of the Apostles and the Gospel of St. Luke.

9. Σίμων] Simon Magus, characterized by ancient Christian writers, as the first heresiarch. - See Justin M. Apol. i. 26. Iren. i. 23, and his scholar S. Hippolytus in Pref. hæ. lib. vi., who refers to this history in the Acts, p. 161 and p. 176. Tertullian, Præscr. c. 46. S. Cyril. Hierosol. p. 95, 96, πάσης αἰρέσεως εὐρετής. Cp. Euseb. ii. 1; ii. 13. Ambrose, Hexaëm. v. 8. Eriphan. xxi. 1. Tillemont, Mémoires Eccl. ii. p. 16. Burton, Lectures, pp. 74—82. 294. Evans, Biog. Early Church, p. 140; and below on 2 Pet. i. 16.

— ἐξιστῶν] On this form of the Verb, see Winer, § 14, p. 72. — λέγων εἶναί, κ.τ.λ.] Iren. ii. 2, "Simone mago primo dicente semetipsum esse super omnia Deum." While Philip preached Christ, Simon vaunted himself as God.

This is not the place for discussing the question concerning Justin Martyr's (Apol. i. 26 and i. 56) account of the Statue, "Simoni Deo Sancto," at Rome. Cp. Iren. i. 23. 1. Tertullian, Apol. 13. Clem. Recog. ii. c. 9. Cyril, Catech. vi. It has generally been supposed in modern times that Justin was deceived by the inscription of a stone in honour of the Sabine deity Semo Sancus. See Otto's note, p. 192. Winer, R. W. B. ii. p. 238. On the other side, Thirlby, Braun, Maran, and Foggin, and more lately, Windischmann (Vind. Petr. p. 78), have endeavoured to vindicate Justin's statement. See also Dr. Burton's Lectures, p. 232, Professor Norton's Essay on the subject, and Dr. Kitto's Illustrations of the Acts, pp. 84—7.

It has been thought by some, that Simon Magus is the person mentioned by Josephus (Ant. xx. 7. 2) as Σίμωνας, Ἰουδαῖον, Κύριον δὲ γένος, μάγον εἶναί σκηπτόμενον, who was employed by Felix to decoy Drusilla from her husband Azizus that she might marry him. Neander (Gesch. u. Pflanz. i. 87) deems it probable.

10. ἡ καλουμένη μεγάλη] So A, B, C, D, E, and other MSS. Elz. omits καλουμένη, which however has a special force. This man is that mighty power of God which is so called in the Word of God. Cp. Aug. in Hæres. 1, who says that Simon called himself the Messiah; and Theodoret, de fabulis hæretic. c. i. Indeed he seems to have claimed to himself the names of the three persons of the Trinity. See Iren. i. 23, who says, "Hic à multis quasi Deus glorificatus est, et docuit semetipsum esse qui inter Judæos quasi Filius apparuerit, in Samariâ autem quasi Pater descenderit, in reliquis verò Gentibus quasi Spiritus Sanctus adventaverit. Esse autem se sublimissimam virtutem (τὴν μεγάλην δύναμιν), hoc est eum qui sit super omnia Pater; et sustinere vocari se quodcunque eum vocant homines" (δύναμιν—καλουμένην). The original Greek of Irenæus may be partly restored in this passage from the newly discovered work of his scholar S. Hippolytus, Refutat. Hær. p. 175, ed. Miller.

Thus we see that even the father of Heresy bears witness to the doctrine of the Trinity.

The impious assertions of Simon Magus, the Father of the Gnostic heretics, appear to have been in St. Peter's mind when he wrote his Second Epistle. See 2 Pet. i. 16—18.

11. διὰ τὸ—ἐξεστακέσαι] because they had been bewitched. "Intransitive" (Brüder). The Vulgate has an active sense, "quia dementasset eos," which is followed in the English Version.

13. ἐπίστευσε] he made a public profession of faith, and became one of the members of the visible Church, who were called πιστοί. On this sense of πιστεύω, see Acts ii. 44; iv. 32; and on Rom. xiv. 2. ὅτε ἐπιστεύσαμεν: οἱ ἅγιοι designate the members of the Church generally, Acts ix. 32. 41, and cp. οἱ σωζόμενοι, ii. 47.

— ἐξίστατο] he who had himself been ἐξιστῶν τὸ ἔθνος, v. 9.

14. πρὸς αὐτούς] to them at Samaria, the city.

— Πέτρον καὶ Ἰωάννην] Peter and John. On the continuance of the Apostles at Jerusalem after the Ascension, see above on i. 4; viii. 1. As to St. John particularly, see Blunt, Lectures, p. 86, who observes, that though Asia Minor was his ultimate destination, there is no evidence of his having been there during the life (qu. visits) of St. Paul; and wherever he is mentioned in the Acts it is in connexion with Palestine.

15—18. οἷτινες] who went down and prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Ghost. For as yet He had fallen upon none of them; but only they had been baptized into the Name of the Lord Jesus. Then they were laying their hands upon them, and they were receiving the Holy Ghost. The imperfect tense here used ("were laying on," "were receiving") shows the repetition of the act in the several cases of the believers who had been baptized. The Apostles sent Peter and John from Jerusalem to Samaria, in order to do what Philip the Deacon, who was there, could not do, and what Paul the Apostle afterwards did (see xix. 6), i. e. to give to those who had been baptized, the full outpouring of the Holy Ghost by laying on of Apostolic hands.

καταβάντες προσηύξαντο περὶ αὐτῶν ὅπως λάβωσι Πνεῦμα ἅγιον 16 ἢ οὐδέπω g ch. 10. 2.
γὰρ ἦν ἐπ' οὐδενὶ αὐτῶν ἐπιπεπτωκὸς, μόνον δὲ βεβαπτισμένοι ὑπῆρχον εἰς

The going down of Peter and John to the city of Samaria, in order to receive its inhabitants who had been baptized, into full communion with the spiritual Israel of God's Church in Christ, is an event full of interest when considered with reference to the history of the Old Testament concerning that region.

As was observed above (vii. 16), Sychem or Shechem, in Samaria, was the first place in Canaan where God appeared to Abraham when he came from Haran, and there he built his first altar to the Lord. It was also the first place to which Jacob went, on his coming from Padan Aram, with his children the Patriarchs; and there also he built the altar El-Elohe-Israel. (Gen. xxxiii. 20.) There it was, that two of the twelve Patriarchs, Simeon and Levi, in cruelty and subtlety, constrained the inhabitants to communion with the literal Israel by Circumcision. (Gen. xxxiv. 15—30.)

But now, after that the Holy Ghost has been poured out from heaven upon the Church,—two of the Twelve Apostolic Patriarchs of the spiritual Israel,—Peter and John,—go down to the same region,—perhaps also to the same city,—and receive its inhabitants into full communion with the true children of Abraham, or Israel of God, the Christian Church, by the spiritual Circumcision of the heart, i.e. by the Gift of the Holy Ghost.

The names of the two Apostles so employed deserve notice. Simeon and Levi had been the Ministers of Wrath; Peter and John are the Ministers of Grace. Peter's name was Simeon (Acts xv. 14); and John, as joined (Gen. xxix. 34) constantly to him (see on John xviii. 15, 16. Acts iii. 1), was well typified by Levi, the brother, by both parents, of Simeon (Gen. xxix. 33, 34; xlix. 5).

We may observe also, that the gracious work of the Spirit on the hearts of the Apostles themselves, and through them on the Church, is made more significant by the contrast of the former conduct of two of the Apostles in this region. Before they had been baptized with "the Holy Ghost and with fire," the two brethren, James and John, even when in the company of Christ upon earth, had been eager to call down fire from heaven and destroy the village of the Samaritans, which would not receive them. (Luke ix. 54.) They had been ready to do the vindictive work of Simeon and Levi. But now that they have been baptized with fire, the two Apostolic brethren, Peter and John, call down from heaven on the Samaritans the pure and holy flame of zeal and love. Such was the change wrought by the Holy Ghost, poured down from heaven by Christ, now ascended into heaven, and there sitting in glory.

To the authorities cited above concerning this administration of the Rite of Confirmation (on v. 5), may be added what is said by S. Jerome, a Presbyter, and one not over eager to exalt the rights of the Episcopate: "Are you ignorant that this is the custom of our Churches, that hands are laid on those who are baptized, and the Holy Spirit invoked over them? Do you inquire where this is written? It is in the Acts of the Apostles" (ad Lucifer. c. 4, p. 294). "This is the usage of our Churches. The Bishop goes forth (excurrit) and makes a tour in order to lay his hands and to invoke the Holy Spirit on those who in smaller towns have been baptized by our Priests and Deacons" (ibid.). And S. Cyprian (Epist. 73), "They who are baptized are brought to the Chief Pastors of the Church, that by our prayer (Cyprian being a bishop) and the laying on of hands they may receive the Holy Ghost, and be completed by the seal of Christ;" and before him, Tertullian, a presbyter, de Bapt. c. 8, and Augustine (de Trin. xv. 26), "Ecclesia in Præpositis suis nunc servat morem, quem habebant Apostoli, oratione et manuum impositione tribuendi Spiritum Sanctum;" and Theophyl. says, "After Baptism the Holy Spirit is given by laying on of hands; and this order is observed to our day;" this was written in the eleventh century.

Here is the answer to the question sometimes put now, as indeed it was of old, "What profit is there to me from the Ministry of Confirmation, after the Sacrament of Baptism?" The Holy Spirit (says Eusebius Emisenus, or perhaps Salvian, see Hammond, iv. 895) which descends on the waters of Baptism with healing on His Wings (salutifero illapsu) gives, at the baptismal font, complete remission of sins. And in Confirmation He supplies grace, for growth in holiness. In Baptism we are regenerated unto life; in Confirmation we are invigorated for life's warfare. Baptism suffices for those who are called away by God in tender years; Confirmation arms and equips the young soldier (who has been enlisted in Baptism under Christ's banner) to fight a good fight in the conflicts of this world.

It appears from v. 16 that the Holy Ghost had not visibly fallen upon any of the converts before the Apostles had laid their hands upon them. That is, the full effusion of the Holy Ghost, with its then visible manifestations of tongues and other signs, had not been vouchsafed to them. As S. Aug. says (in Joann. Tract. vi.), "Nondum acceperant Spiritum Sanctum, sicut tunc descendebat ad ostendendam significationem gentium crediturum, ut linguis loquerentur."

The reasons of this seem to be, to show the need of union with the Apostles, and to secure due respect to their persons and office; and to assure the Church, in all ages, of the reality of the inward grace ministered to all worthy recipients of Confirmation.

Hence Confirmation was called the Consummating Unction, χρῖσμις τελειωτική, as completing Baptism. See Bp. Taylor's Dissertation with that title, Works, xi. 215. As S. Ambrose teaches (de Sacram. iii. 2): "Post fontem (baptismi) superest ut perfectio fiat, quando ad invocationem sacerdotis Spiritus Sanctus infunditur." And as Hooker says (V. lxi.), "It confirms and perfects that which the grace of the Spirit has already begun in Baptism;" and cp. Hammond's Treatise "de Confirmatione," Works, iv. 851. Bp. Pearson, Lectures in Acta, v. 6; and Dr. Comber, Companion to the Temple, iii. p. 451. Bingham, Antiq., bk. xii. here. Blunt, Lectures, p. 40; and see also Calvin here, "in whose opinion," says R. Nelson, "this passage in the Acts shows that Confirmation was instituted by the Apostles;" and see the valuable Manual entitled "CATECHESIS," by the Bishop of St. Andrew's, Lond. 1857, and the remarks made and authorities quoted in an excellent Essay by the late Rev. John Frere, M.A., Rector of Cottenham. Lond. 1845.

In another important respect Confirmation is the consummation of Baptism,—not from any defect in Baptism itself, but from the circumstances of persons who have been baptized;

In primitive times, from the nature of the case, the majority of those who were baptized were Adults. But now that Christianity has been long preached in the world, they who are baptized are, for the most part, Infants. "The astipulation of a good conscience is an essential part of Baptism" (1 Pet. iii. 21). And "for all such as have been baptized in their Infancy the personal resumption or ratification of that vow which they made by their sponsors at the sacred laver is to be exacted in the public congregation." And this is done at Confirmation. (Dr. Jackson on the Creed, bk. x. ch. i. vol. ix. p. 548.) And they who boldly confess Christ with their lips and lives on earth, will be confessed by Him at the Great Day. Matt. x. 32. Luke xii. 8.

The Church of England has declared her mind in this matter in her Office for BAPTISM. "Ye are to take care, that this child be brought to the Bishop to be confirmed by him," &c.

And in her Office for CONFIRMATION—

"Then the Bishop shall say:

... Almighty and everlasting God . . . we make our humble supplication unto Thee for these thy servants, upon whom after the example of thy Holy Apostles we have now laid our hands . . ."

Also, in her sixtieth Canon of 1603, the Church of England says, that "it hath been a solemn, ancient, and laudable custom in the Church of God, continued from the Apostles' times, that all Bishops should lay their hands upon children baptized and instructed in the Catechism of Christian Religion, praying over them and blessing them,—which we commonly call Confirmation."

It has indeed been alleged by some, that the Church of England says only that Confirmation is administered after the example of the Apostles, and not by reason of any direct precept of the Apostles, or any institution of any perpetual ordinance by them.

But on this it is to be observed, that in such cases as these example is equivalent to precept.

What was done by the Apostles in this matter, and what the Holy Ghost himself here records in Holy Scripture as having been done by them, was not done by them of their own mind, but by the will of God. It was done by Him, through them. And He showed that it was His act, by visible outpourings of the Holy Ghost on those persons for whom the Apostles prayed, and on whom they laid their hands. Simon Magus saw, that through the laying on of the Apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given. (Acts viii. 18.) The persons on whom the Apostle St. Paul laid his hands, spoke with tongues and prophesied. (Acts xix. 6.)

By these outward manifestations in the first age of the Church, Almighty God set His own seal on this practice of the Apostles; who, being taught of God, exercised this ministry as the proper means for the conveyance of an inward gift, called in Holy Scripture the Gift of the Holy Ghost, to the souls of bap-τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ. ¹⁷ Τότε ἐπετίθουν τὰς χεῖρας ἐπ' αὐτοὺς, καὶ ἐλάμβανον Πνεῦμα ἅγιον.

¹⁸ Ἰδὼν δὲ ὁ Σίμων, ὅτι διὰ τῆς ἐπιθέσεως τῶν χειρῶν τῶν ἀποστόλων δίδεται τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, προσήνεγκεν αὐτοῖς χρήματα, ¹⁹ λέγων, Δότε καὶ μοι τὴν ἐξουσίαν ταύτην, ἵνα ὡς ἐὰν ἐπιθῶ τὰς χεῖρας, λαμβάνῃ Πνεῦμα ἅγιον. ²⁰ Ἡ Πέτρος δὲ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτόν, Τὸ ἀργυρίον σου σὺν σοὶ εἶναι εἰς ἀπώλειαν, ὅτι τὴν

h 2 Kings 5. 16.
Matt. 10. 8.
i ch. 10. 45.
& 19. 5, 6.
1 Cor. 1. 13.

tized persons. Thus Almighty God commended this practice to the permanent use of all future generations, and made it obligatory on Christians to receive and maintain it.

God's gifts are without repentance. (Rom. xi. 29.) That is, whatever means He has once bestowed for the attainment of necessary ends, are never withdrawn by Him. He never revokes what He has once given for our growth in spiritual grace here, and for our attainment of heavenly glory hereafter. And whatsoever is offered by Him for such ends is to be thankfully used by us. See note on John xiii. 14.

The gift of the Holy Ghost is a gift of this kind. It is as much required now, as it was in the age of the Holy Apostles. Man's ghostly enemies are still the same as they were then. His needs of ghostly helps against them, are, therefore, as great now as they were then. Man is the same. Heaven is the same. Hell is the same. The Holy Ghost is the same. His love is the same, and His gifts remain the same; and they have the same purpose and power, to enable men to escape Hell, and to reach Heaven.

Accordingly, we find that our Lord Himself describes the promised gift of the Holy Ghost as a gift in perpetuity. I will pray the Father, He says, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you for ever. (John xiv. 16.)

The Apostles, being taught by God, and being guided by Him into all Truth, used certain means for the conveyance of spiritual grace to those who had been baptized; and that God sanctioned that Apostolic practice by visible marks of His own approval and favour.

These means were Prayer and Laying-on of Hands. These means are reckoned by the Holy Spirit, speaking in the Epistle to the Hebrews, as among the first principles of the Doctrine of Christ (Heb. vi. 2), where the doctrine of Laying-on of Hands is joined with the doctrine of Baptism.

We know, from the testimony of ancient Christian writers, that the chief Pastors, or Bishops of the Church, who had been appointed by the Apostles as their successors, and who best knew the mind of the Apostles, used these same means, and prayed and laid their hands on those who had been baptized, as the Holy Apostles had done before them; and that the primitive Christian Bishops did this for the same purpose as the Apostles had done, namely, for the conveyance of the gift of the Holy Ghost to those who had been baptized, and on whom they laid their hands with prayer. We find that the earliest Christian Churches, planted by the Apostles, used these means; and that this Apostolic practice was called by them CONFIRMATION, because in it they who have been baptized are confirmed and strengthened by the Holy Ghost the Comforter. These means have been ever used by the Church of Christ Universal, to which He has promised His perpetual presence (Matt. xxviii. 20), and the continual guidance of His Spirit, and which is the Church of the Living God, the Pillar and Ground of the Truth (1 Tim. iii. 15). We find also that these means have been mercifully preserved to us, by God's goodness, in our own Church, which, at every Baptism administered by her to Infants, commands that the child then baptized shall "be brought to the Bishop, to be confirmed by him," so soon as it has been duly catechised; and she declares, in her office for Confirmation, that the Laying-on of Hands of the Bishop on those who have been baptized, is an act done by him "after the example of the Holy Apostles."

We may therefore conclude; that Almighty God, Who is the Author and Giver of all Grace, and without Whom we can do nothing that is pleasing in His sight, vouchsafes to bestow on those who have been baptized the gift of the Holy Ghost, by the appointed means of Prayer, and of the Laying-on of Hands of the successors of the Holy Apostles, who were inspired by the Holy Ghost, and who employed these means, and delivered them to be used by those who came after them, even to the end. What was thus done by the Holy Apostles under the guidance and inspiration of the Holy Ghost, was done by the Holy Ghost, Who guided and inspired them. And whosoever the Holy Ghost vouchsafes to appoint and employ certain means for bestowing His own gifts, we have no right to expect to receive those gifts from Him, unless we conform ourselves to His will, and use those means, which He has been pleased to institute for their bestowal. To neglect those means, is to grieve the Holy Spirit, who works by them. It is to despise and disobey Christ, who sent the Holy Ghost to teach His Apostles all things, and to guide them into all truth, and to abide with them for ever; and who said to His Apostles, He that receiveth you receiveth Me, and he that receiveth Me receiveth Him that sent Me (Matt. x. 40), and whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when you depart out of that house or city shake off the dust of your feet. Verily, I say unto you, it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah in the Day of Judgment than for that city (Matt. x. 14, 15). On the other hand, if we receive those means thankfully and reverently, we receive Christ, who promised to be ever with His Apostles even unto the end of the world. We receive the Holy Ghost the Comforter, who guided the Apostles to use those means for the bestowal of His own blessed gift to the Christian soul, for its growth in grace here, and for its everlasting glory hereafter.

Richard Hooker's lamentations for the insufficient administration of Confirmation in his own day (see Eccl. Pol. V. lxvi. 8) might be reiterated with a hundred-fold force in the present times, when, from the inadequate number of Bishops, an immense majority of the population grow up without ever receiving the completion of their baptismal privileges, by the reception of Confirmation, and the subsequent graces of the Holy Spirit given in the Lord's Supper, and, consequently, are never brought into full communion with the Church; and though they may have been baptized by her, yet, being never made fully partakers of her privileges, they fall away into indifference or unbelief, or are arrayed in hostility against her.

It seems as if Confirmation, being restricted in its administration to those who are successors of the Apostles, were designed by Divine Providence to serve the important purpose of maintaining a vital principle of Church Unity, by bringing all the children of God in a Diocese, as members of one spiritual household, to receive the benediction of their Spiritual Father in God; thus reminding them of their filial adoption in Christ the Son of God into the family of One heavenly Father; and of the gracious overshadowing of the One Spirit of Unity—the Divine Dove—whose invisible wings are spread over them, and shed grace from heaven upon them.

It also seems as if this restriction of Confirmation to the Episcopal office were divinely ordered, in order to show more clearly the necessity of elasticity and expansion of Episcopacy, in proportion to the growth of the population of a country, and so to ensure (short of absolute compulsion) those other blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit on the Church through the ministrations of a pious, learned, zealous, and faithful Episcopate.

15. λαβόντι Πνεῦμα ἅγιον] Cp. v. 17, ἐλάμβανον Πν. ἅγ., and our Lord's own words, John xx. 22, λαβετε Πνεῦμα ἅγιον.

18. ἰδὼν ὁ Σίμων, ὅτι—δίδεται] ἰδὼν, A, B, C, D, E. Elz. θεοαδμεύς. But when Simon saw that the Holy Ghost is being given; it is observable, that, whereas miraculous powers were exercised by the Deacons, and other disciples, yet it does not appear that they had the power "to derive or communicate them to other men," as Hooker remarks, V. lxvi.

"Simon Magus," says Hooker (V. lxvi. 2), "perceiving that power to be in none but the Apostles, and presuming that they which had it could sell it, sought to purchase it of them with money." Thus even Simon himself, the arch-heretic, supplies a strong argument for the reality of the Divine Grace dispensed by prayer and laying on of Apostolic hands. He would never have offered to give money for what did not exist.

On the sin of Simon hence deriving its name, see the authorities in Bingham, Antiq. xvi., and Dupin on the Study of Theology, p. 469.

It has been supposed by some that Simon himself had been confirmed by the Apostles, but this is not probable.

On the covetousness of the Gnostic Teachers, the followers of Simon, see St. Peter's own testimony, 2 Pet. ii.

20. Πέτρος δὲ εἶπε—κράθαι] But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee because thou thoughtest to purchase the gift of God by money. A remarkable proof of St. Peter's honesty, courage, and disinterestedness.

Simon Peter would not receive any thing from Simon Magus δωρεάν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐνόμισας διὰ χρημάτων κτᾶσθαι· ²¹ οὐκ ἔστι σοι μερίς οὐδὲ κλήρος ἐν τῷ λόγῳ τούτῳ· ^j ἡ γὰρ καρδιά σου οὐκ ἔστιν εὐθεία ἔναντι τοῦ Θεοῦ. ^j Ps. 78. 36, 37. Ezek. 14. 3. ²² ^k Μετανόησον οὖν ἀπὸ τῆς κακίας σου ταύτης, καὶ δεήθητι τοῦ Κυρίου εἰ ἄρα ἀφεθήσεται σοι ἡ ἐπινοία τῆς καρδίας σου· ²³ εἰς γὰρ χολὴν πικρίας καὶ σύνδεσμον ἀδικίας ὀρώ σε ὄντα. ²⁴ ¹ Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ Σίμων εἶπε, Δεήθητε ὑμεῖς ¹ Numb. 21. 7. ὑπὲρ ἐμοῦ πρὸς τὸν Κύριον, ὅπως μηδὲν ἐπέλθῃ ἐπ' ἐμέ ὡν εἰρήκατε. ²⁵ Οἱ μὲν οὖν διαμαρτυράμενοι καὶ λαλήσαντες τὸν λόγον τοῦ Κυρίου ὑπέστρεφον εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ, πολλὰς τε κώμας τῶν Σαμαρειτῶν εὐηγγελίζοντο. ²⁶ Ἄγγελος δὲ Κυρίου ἐλάλησε πρὸς Φίλιππον λέγων, Ἀνάστηθι καὶ πορεύου κατὰ μεσημβρίαν, ἐπὶ τὴν ὁδὸν τὴν καταβαίνουσαν ἀπὸ Ἱερουσαλὴμ εἰς Γάζαν· αὕτη ἐστὶν ἔρημος. ²⁷ Καὶ ἀναστὰς ἐπορεύθη· καὶ ἰδὼν, ἀνὴρ Αἰθίοψ, εὐνοῦχος, for the dispensation of a spiritual gift—although at that time the Church subsisted on alms (see iv. 35). He claimed no merit to himself for the power which he was enabled to use. It was the gift of God. He boldly rebuked Simon, who was adored by the people of Samaria. And Simon Magus, who had bewitched the people, feels Simon Peter's power, and submits to it, acknowledges his prophetic gifts, and craves his prayers (v. 24).

²² μετανόησον—καὶ δεήθητι—εἰ ἄρα ἀφεθήσεται] Repent therefore from this thine iniquity, and pray to the Lord, if haply the thought of thine heart shall be forgiven thee. A strong passage

(1) Against all Donatistic iteration of Baptism.

(2) Against all Novatian denials of Pardon for deadly sin after Baptism. See the Expositors of Article XVI. of the Church of England.

(3) For the reality of Divine Grace in Baptism, which though dormant in a Simon Magus, in a death-like sleep of sin, may be awakened, and be made available by Repentance and Prayer, for salvation not to be repented of;

(4) And consequently for the possibility and duty of Prayer and Repentance, on the part of baptized persons after falling into deadly sin. See XXXIX Articles, Art. xvi.

S. Augustine has some excellent remarks on the case of Simon (in Joann. Tract. vi.), "Cui dicit hæc Petrus? Utique baptizato. Jam baptismam habebat; sed Columba visceribus non hærebat. Baptisma illi quid proderat? Noli ergo de Baptismo gloriari, quasi ex ipso salus tibi sufficiat. Noli irasci; depone fel, veni ad Columbam . . . habeto humilitatem, charitatem, pacem; habeto bonum quod nondum habes, ut prosit tibi bonum quod habes—veni ad Columbam (i. e. ad Ecclesie unitatem), hic tibi proderit quod foris non solum non proderat, sed etiam oberat."

—τοῦ Κυρίου] So A, B, C, D, E, and others. Elz. τοῦ Θεοῦ. Cf. v. 24.

²³ εἰς χολήν] Something more than ἐν χολῇ. Thou who hast been baptized into Christ (εἰς Χριστόν), hast plunged thyself into the gall of bitterness. Cp. v. 40.

²⁵ ὑπέστρεφον] they were returning. So A, B, D. Elz. ἐπέστρεψαν.

—Σαμαρειτῶν] of the Samaritans. A fulfilment of our Lord's prophecy, who had seen there in His divine prescience "many fields white unto harvest" (John iv. 35). Cp. Acts i. 8.

—κώμας] villages. See on Matt. ix. 35. On this word is an interesting Homily of S. Chrysostom here, exhorting Landowners to build and endow Churches and Chapels on their estates—a counsel very seasonable for these and all times.

—εὐηγγελίζοντο] they were evangelizing in their way. As to the accusative, see xiv. 21; xvi. 10. So A, B, C, D, E.—Elz. εὐηγγελίσαντο.

They (Peter and John) were evangelizing many villages of the Samaritans; perhaps, among these, was that village on which John had once desired to call down fire from heaven. (Luke ix. 52.) But the Holy Ghost, sent down from heaven with a baptism of fire, had changed his heart, and warmed it with love.

²⁶ Γάζαν] Gaza, Hebr. גִּזְיָ, a fortress, the Hebrew ג being changed into the Greek γ. Gen. x. 19. Josh. xiii. 3. 1 Sam. vi. 17. An old Canaanitish fortified town of Philistia, celebrated in the history of Samson; situated on a hill twenty stadia from the sea, stormed and plundered by Alexander the Great (Plutarch, Alex. 25. Q. Curt. iv. 6), and dismantled by the Jewish Prince Alexander Jannæus, B.C. 96 (see Joseph. Ant. xiii. 13. 3), but not long afterwards restored by Gabinius (Joseph. xiv. 5. 3). For a description, see Robinson, ii. 375—384.

In the sending forth of the Gospel toward Gaza, celebrated in Philistian History, and in the conversion of the chamberlain of Ethiopia, we may recognize an intimation and earnest of the fulfilment of the Prophecy concerning Christ (Ps. lxxvii. 4), "Behold Philistia, with Tyre and Ethiopia, there shall He be born," and Ps. lx. 8, "Philistia, be thou glad of Me," and cviii. 9, "Over Philistia will I triumph," and lxviii. 31, "Ethiopia shall stretch out her hands unto God."

The incidents in the Acts of the Apostles are, for the most part, prophetic as well as historical; they show what has been, and is; and in the past and present they give a pledge of the future progress and triumphs of Christianity.

—ἀὴρ ἐστὶν ἔρημος] this is desert. These words are regarded by many as a parenthesis of St. Luke, distinguishing it as the old City, ruined by Alexander, from the other Gaza. See A Lapide, Weststein, Rosenm., and others;

But this does not seem to be a correct view.

The site of the new City was near that of the old one. The same roads led to them both; and what did Philip do there? Nothing. He did not meet the Eunuch at Gaza,—new or old,—but in the wilderness. See also on v. 36 and v. 40, whence it appears that Philip did not ever arrive at Gaza.

The meaning seems to be this;

Philip had been very successful in preaching in a populous metropolitan City to vast multitudes (see v. 6). God would now try his faith, and show His own Divine power, and present an example in him to other Preachers of the Gospel. He would also reward the devout Ethiopian, who could little expect to meet a preacher in the wilderness;

The address of the Angel to St. Philip may be therefore paraphrased thus;—Quit the City of Samaria, but do not go to the north, to populous Galilee, where thou mightest make many converts; nor yet to Jerusalem, but beyond it, to the very extremity of Palestine. Go along the road which leads to Gaza,—which is desert; Almighty God has something for thee to do there. He can enable thee to do the work of an Evangelist, not only in the city of Samaria, but in the wilderness of Philistia.

This was a speech something like our Lord's question to the Apostle Philip in the wilderness (ἐν τῇ ἐρημίᾳ), "Whence shall we buy bread for these that they may eat?" (Matt. xiv. 15. John vi. 5.)

It may also be compared to His command to the Apostles, to cast in their net for a draught, in a place in the sea where they had toiled all night, and caught nothing. (Luke v. 5. John xxi. 6.)

But still the command of the Lord to Philip was,—“Go along the road to Gaza, to the southern extremity of Palestine, the wilderness.” And he arose and went. And there, in the wilderness, he saw a chariot, and was commanded by the Spirit to join himself to it; he ran and overtook it, he fed the soul of the Ethiopian Courtier with the bread of life; he caught, if we may venture so to speak (see John xxi. 11), this ‘great Fish’ in the Net of the Gospel, even in the wilderness. He baptized him; and perhaps by means of the example and influence of this great Courtier, the Morians’ land soon stretched forth her hands unto God (Ps. lxxviii. 31. Cf. Zeph. iii. 10). And thus even in Philip the Evangelist was the prophecy fulfilled, “The voice of him that crieth in the Wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God.” Isa. xl. 3.

As to the word ἔρημος, it is generally considered as an adjective here; and if so, it is to be connected with ὁδός. And so the Arabic and Syriac Versions, and Lightfoot here, and Winer (Gr. Gr. pp. 108. 142), and Robinson (ii. p. 380), who says that it indicates the southern road, leading from Eleutheropolis to Gaza, δυναστίης Κανδάκης βασιλίσης Αιθιοπών, ὅς ἦν ἐπὶ πάσης τῆς γάζης αὐτῆς, ὅς ἐληλύθει προσκυνήσων ^m εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ, ²⁸ ἦν τε ὑποστρέφων, καὶ καθήμενος ἐπὶ τοῦ ἄρματος αὐτοῦ ἀνεγίνωσκεν Ἡσαΐαν τὸν προφήτην.

^m 2 Chron. 6. 32, 33. ⁿ Isa. 65. 24. Hos. 6. 3. ²⁹ Εἶπε δὲ τὸ Πνεῦμα τῷ Φιλίππῳ, Πρόσελθε καὶ κολλήθητι τῷ ἄρματι τούτῳ. ³⁰ Προσδραμὼν δὲ ὁ Φίλιππος ἤκουσεν αὐτοῦ ἀναγινώσκοντος τὸν προφήτην Ἡσαΐαν, καὶ εἶπεν, ὦ Ἀρά γε γινώσκεις ἃ ἀναγινώσκεις; ³¹ Ὁ δὲ εἶπε, Πῶς γὰρ ἂν δυναίμην, ἐὰν μὴ τις ὁδηγήσῃ με; παρεκάλεσέ τε τὸν Φίλιππον ἀναβάντα καθίσαι σὺν αὐτῷ.

^p Isa. 53. 7, 8. ³² Ἡ δὲ περιοχὴ τῆς γραφῆς ἦν ἀνεγίνωσκεν ἦν αὕτη, Ὡς πρόβατον ἐπὶ σφαγὴν ἤχθη, καὶ ὡς ἄμνός ἐναντίον τοῦ κείροντος αὐτὸν ἄφωνος, οὕτως οὐκ ἀνοίγει τὸ στόμα αὐτοῦ. ³³ ἐν τῇ ταπεινώσει αὐτοῦ ἡ κρίσις αὐτοῦ ἤρθη, τὴν δὲ γενεὰν αὐτοῦ τίς διηγήσεται; ὅτι αἵρεται ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς ἡ ζωὴ αὐτοῦ.

through the desert, or region without villages; as is the case at the present day.

The sense then would be: Go along that road which is deserted, and where therefore you may not expect to meet any one. But still, Go.

Or, αὕτη ἐστὶν ἐρημος may mean, 'that region is uninhabited,' an ἐρημος: where you may expect to find no one; but here is the force of the command, here is the trial of your faith. Go and see. And it may be observed that the word ἐρημος occurs eight other times in the Acts of the Apostles, and in seven of these (vii. 30. 36. 38. 42. 44; xiii. 18; xxi. 38) it is a substantive. In one only (i. 20, a quotation from the LXX) it is an adjective.

It does not seem therefore that the words αὕτη ἐστὶν ἐρημος are a parenthesis inserted by St. Luke; but they are words of the Angel to St. Philip; and their meaning is either, "this road is desert," or, "this is a wilderness."

On this sending of St. Philip, see below, ix. 6.

27. ἐνδοῦχος] rendered by some here a Chamberlain or Courtier. See on Matt. xix. 12.

It must however be observed, that a strong reason in favour of the literal translation of the word (as adopted in the English Version) may be derived from the promise in Isaiah lvi. 3—8. And it may have been a part of St. Luke's design, in this narrative, to show that that promise was fulfilled in the Christian Church, as described by St. Paul, Gal. iii. 28.

Besides; the case of this ἐνδοῦχος may be compared with that of the faithful and merciful Ebed-melech, also an Ethiopian and an Eunuch, who is contrasted with the rebel King and Courtiers of Judah—as the faithful Ethiopian here is contrasted with the obdurate Rulers of Jerusalem—who received a special promise and blessing from God (Jeremiah xxxviii. 7—13; xxxix. 16—18. Cp. Baumgarten, i. p. 205).

Indeed this history of the Ethiopian, and that which soon follows, of Cornelius the first-fruits of the Gentile world, derive additional interest from the consideration that in them may be recognized a fulfilment of ancient Prophecies, particularly in that chapter of Isaiah (lvi. 3) which speaks of the extension of the blessings of God's Covenant in Christ—

(1) to the "Eunuchs that keep His Sabbaths and choose the things that please Him," and in them to all who are alone and childless in this world, and yet are made members of the household of God in Christ, and so receive "a place and a name better than of sons and daughters;" and

(2) to the "Sons of the Stranger" (such as Cornelius), who were once afar off and aliens from God, but are now made near in Christ, and are brought to His Holy Mountain, and "made joyful in His House of Prayer, which shall be for 'all people.'" See Isaiah lvi. 4—7.

It may be here suggested for the reader's consideration whether these Chapters (viii—x.) of the Acts of the Apostles do not also display the fulfilment of another Prophecy concerning the Evangelical Conquests of Christ (viz. Psalm cviii. 7). Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens (v. 5), i. e. by the Ascension. God hath spoken in His Holiness, I will rejoice and divide Shechem, or Sychem—fulfilled in the Evangelization of Samaria—perhaps Sychem itself. The triumphs of the Gospel in that region and in Galilee, mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles (ix. 31), seem to be predicted by the words of that Psalm (v. 8), "Manasseh is mine, Ephraim also is the strength of my head;" and Christ triumphed over Philistia by the preaching of Philip in the road to Gaza and at Azotus, and of Peter at Joppa.

Perhaps also the promise of the conquest over Edom (which was a name for the enemies of God's Church, and is especially applied by the Rabbis to Rome) may have been begun to be fulfilled by the reception of the Roman soldier Cornelius, the representative of the heathen and Roman world, into the Christian Church. Doubtless also it had a literal fulfilment in the Victories of the Gospel in Idumæa.

The gracious consequences of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, in the propagation of the Gospel, are prophetically declared in Psalm lxviii. 7—31. In v. 7 the description of the giving of the Law on Sinai is immediately followed by that of the promulgation of the Gospel at Sion, and its fruits are foreshown. See particularly v. 27 of that Psalm, perhaps in reference to the Conversion of St. Paul, and v. 31, to the baptism of the Ethiopian.

Indeed the History of the Acts of the Apostles is an Inspired Comment on the language of the Psalms and of the Prophets.

—Κανδάκης] Candace. The common title of Queens of Meroë. Cp. Strabo, xvii. p. 820. Plin. N. H. vi. 35. Wetst. p. 507. Biscoe, p. 69.

—γάζης] He who was over all the earthly γάζα of a Queen finds heavenly treasure in the desert road from Jerusalem to Gaza. And why? Because he had left his earthly Treasury to go up to the Temple to worship, and was seeking for goodly treasure in the field of the written Word. Cp. Matt. xiii. 44. Is this an unmeaning paronomasia? See v. 30.

—προσκυνήσων] to worship. He was therefore a proselyte, not a Gentile. The first-fruits of the Heathen world was Cornelius. See x. 1.

28. ἀνεγίνωσκεν] he was reading, and reading aloud; Statesman and Courtier as he was. A celebrated passage, often cited by the Fathers, as showing the blessed fruits of reading the Scriptures. See S. Chrys. here, and hom. 35 in Gen. S. Jerome, Epist. 103, ad Paulin. A lesson to travellers. "Legendum, audiendum, percontandum, etiam in itinere, etiamsi parum intelligis (vide v. 34) Habenti datur." (Bengel.)

30. γινώσκεις ἃ ἀναγινώσκεις] On similar paronomasias, see Luke xxi. 11, and 2 Cor. iii. 2, γινωσκομένη καὶ ἀναγινωσκομένη, 2 Thess. iii. 11.

It seems probable from this verbal parallelism, that Philip spoke in Greek; and that the Eunuch was reading Isaiah in the Septuagint version made in Egypt.

Valck. compares the celebrated paronomasia of Julian the Apostate,—ἀνέγνω, ἔγνω, κατέγνω, and the courageous reply of the Christian Bishop to him, ἀνέγνω, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἔγνω: εἰ γὰρ ἔγνω, οὐκ ἂν κατέγνω, and Wetstein cites Cato's saying, "Legere et non intelligere nec legere (negligere) est."

32. ἡ περιοχὴ] the passage,—χωρίον or τόπος. See Wetst. and Valck. Cp. 1 Pet. ii. 6, περιέχει ἐν τῇ γραφῇ.

—ὡς πρόβατον—αὐτόν] Isa. liii. 7, 8. From the LXX Version.

Here ἐν τῇ ταπεινώσει ἡ κρίσις αὐτοῦ ἤρθη represents the Hebrew מִן הַשְׁמָוָה הָרָבָה, i. e. He was taken from oppression and judgment; and it seems the LXX means to say that by his humiliation his condemnation was taken away, i. e. He was justified: and thus the words are a paraphrase of the original, and mean that "He was made perfect through (as well as from) sufferings," and was exalted not only from his humiliation, but because "He humbled Himself and became obedient to death" (Phil. ii. 8. Heb. ii. 10).

33. τὴν δὲ γενεὰν αὐτοῦ, κ. τ. λ.] γενεὰ is γέν, dor (whence Latin durus, duratio). Who shall declare His duration? i. e.

³⁴ Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ εὐνοῦχος τῷ Φιλίππῳ εἶπε, Δέομαί σου, περὶ τίνος ὁ προφήτης λέγει τοῦτο ; περὶ ἑαυτοῦ, ἢ περὶ ἑτέρου τινός ; ³⁵ ἢ Ἀνοίξας δὲ ὁ Φίλιππος τὸ στόμα αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἀρξάμενος ἀπὸ τῆς γραφῆς ταύτης, ἔνυγγελίσατο αὐτῷ τὸν Ἰησοῦν. q Luke 24. 27. r ch. 18. 28.

³⁶ Ὡς δὲ ἐπορεύοντο κατὰ τὴν ὁδὸν ἦλθον ἐπὶ τι ὕδωρ· καὶ φησιν ὁ εὐνοῦχος, Ἰδοὺ, ὕδωρ· τί κωλύει με βαπτισθῆναι ; ³⁷ εἶπε δὲ ὁ Φίλιππος, Εἰ πιστεύεις ἐξ ὅλης τῆς καρδίας, ἔξεστιν ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ εἶπε, Πιστεύω τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ εἶναι τὸν Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν. ³⁸ Καὶ ἐκέλευσε στήναι τὸ ἄρμα· καὶ κατέβησαν ἀμφότεροι εἰς τὸ ὕδωρ, ὃ τε Φίλιππος καὶ ὁ εὐνοῦχος· καὶ ἐβάπτισεν αὐτόν.

³⁹ Ὅτε δὲ ἀνέβησαν ἐκ τοῦ ὕδατος, Πνεῦμα Κυρίου ἤρπασε τὸν Φίλιππον· καὶ οὐκ εἶδεν αὐτὸν οὐκέτι ὁ εὐνοῦχος, ἐπορεύετο γὰρ τὴν ὁδὸν αὐτοῦ χαίρων. t 1 Kings 18. 12. Ezek. 3. 12, 14. u Ps. 119. 14, 111.

⁴⁰ Φίλιππος δὲ εὐρέθη εἰς Ἀζωτον· καὶ διερχόμενος ἐνγγελίζετο τὰς πόλεις πάσας, ἕως τοῦ ἑλθεῖν αὐτὸν εἰς Καισάρειαν. a ch. 26. 10. Gal. 1. 13. 1 Tim. 1. 13. b ch. 8. 3. Gal. 1. 13.

IX. ¹ Ὁ δὲ Σαῦλος ἔτι ἐμπνέων ἀπειλῆς καὶ φόβου εἰς τοὺς μαθητὰς τοῦ although He is cut off as man, yet He is the Eternal God. He is ἀνευαλόγητος ὡς Θεός. (Ecum.)

— ὅτι ἀρείται because His life is cut off from earth (see Daniel ix. 26), therefore He endures for ever in heaven ; that is, He as God-Man is exalted for ever by His temporary Humiliation on earth. See Phil. ii. 8.

³⁵ τὸν Ἰησοῦν Jesus. The Holy Spirit here records that the holy Evangelist St. Philip applied the Fifty-third Chapter of Isaiah to Jesus Christ.

Hence it is clear (whatever may be alleged by some modern Critics to the contrary) that the Fifty-third Chapter of Isaiah has rightly been deemed by the Church to be a prophecy concerning Christ ; and that the Criticism which propounds allegations inconsistent with such an exposition is entitled to little regard from those who believe in the Inspiration of the New Testament, and desire to be faithful members of Christ and of His Church.

Compare the remarks of the Apostolic Father and Bishop Clemens Romanus, cap. 16, who applies this prophecy to Christ dying on the cross.

³⁶ ὕδωρ water. At Bethsor (say the Scholia on S. Jerome, loc. Hebr. p. 277) or Bethsoron, twenty miles S. of Jerusalem, and only two miles from Hebron. "Ibi," says Bede, p. 41, "mutavit Æthiops pellem suam, id est sorde peccatorum abluta de lavacro Jesu dealbatus ascendit." If so, Philip overtook the Ethiopian long before he came to Gaza ; and this seems to be another reason why ἔρημος cannot be connected with Γάζα in v. 26.

— βαπτισθῆναι to be baptized. A proof that Philip, in preaching Jesus, had preached the necessity of Baptism. How else would the Eunuch have asked to be baptized ? Cp. Augustine, de Fide et Operibus, c. 9, who considers this case of the Ethiopian, and says, that by the compendious expression (v. 35), "Philip preached to him Jesus," St. Luke implies that Philip preached "not only what is to be believed concerning Christ, but what is to be done by those who are joined to the unity of the body of Christ ; and preached to him the main points of Christian Faith and Duty."

³⁷ εἶπε—Χριστόν This verse is not found in A, B, C, G, H, and in some ancient Versions, and has been omitted by most recent editors. Perhaps rightly ; and it may be observed also that the words τὸν Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν (as they stand in Elz.) are nowhere thus used by St. Luke in the Acts of the Apostles or the Gospel.

But, on the other hand, the verse is found in substance in E, and in the Syriac, Vulg., Armenian, and Arabic versions, and in numerous cursive Manuscripts. And it appears to be at least as ancient as the age of Irenæus, who says, iii. 12, "Hunc esse Jesum, et impletum in Eo esse Scripturam, quemadmodum ipse Eunuchus credens et statim postulans baptizari dicebat Credo Filium Dei esse Jesum,"—omitting Χριστόν, and it is cited by Cyprian. I have not therefore ventured to expunge the verse ; which is retained, in brackets, by Bornemann.

³⁸ ἐβάπτισεν αὐτόν he baptized him. Philip was a married man, and only a Deacon, and was sent by the Angel to baptize the Ethiopian. "Let me be a Philip ; be thou a minister of Candace. Say, 'Here is water, what hindereth me to be baptized ?' Seize the opportunity. Though an Ethiop in body, be thou pure in heart. And do not say, 'Let a Bishop baptize me ;' or, if a Presbyter, let him be unmarried. Man looketh on the face, but God on the heart. Any Minister can cleanse you by Baptism, if he is not alien from the Church. One Minister may be of gold, another of iron, but they are both like rings which have the seal of Christ ; let them stamp on thee, who art the wax, the image of the Great King. There may be a difference in the metal, but there is none in the seal." S. Greg. Naz. ii. p. 711, an Oration to those who delay their Baptism.

³⁹ ἤρπασε caught up Philip. Cp. the case of Elijah, 1 Kings xviii. 12. 2 Kings ii. 16. Ezekiel iii. 12, and of St. Paul, 2 Cor. xii. 2. 4. See Didymus and Chrys. here, who observe, that by this sudden disappearance of Philip, the Ethiopian was assured that the message he had received was from heaven : and that, if the Ethiopian had asked Philip to remain with him, and he had refused to do so, he would not then have gone on his way rejoicing. Cp. Robinson's Palestine, i. 320 ; iii. 14.

⁴⁰ εὐρέθη εἰς Ἀζωτον he was found at Azotus. This showed that the object of his mission was attained ; and he is spared the weariness of a journey in the desert, as a reward for his ready obedience in going to preach in a desert, see v. 26. Ἀζωτος, Ashdod, now Esdud (Robinson, ii. p. 368),—being on the coast, half-way between Gaza on the south, and Joppa on the north, and in the same latitude with Jerusalem. It was 260 stadia from the ancient Gaza. See Welst. On eis see v. 23 ; vii. 4. Winer, p. 369.

— ἐνγγελίζετο—Καισάρειαν Going northward along the sea-coast from Azotus to Cæsarea, he passed through Joppa, and did the work of an Evangelist (ἐνγγελίζετο), and prepared the way for St. Peter's visit to that place (ix. 36—43), and for the conversion of Cornelius at Cæsarea (x. 1—24), where we find Philip again (Acts xxi. 8).

On Cæsarea itself see x. 1.

The house of Philip the Evangelist was still standing at Cæsarea in S. Jerome's age, and was even shown in Bede's time. Jerome, Epist. Paul. p. 150. Bede, in Acta, p. 43.

— τὰς πόλεις πάσας the cities, all of them, probably Ekron, Jamnia, Joppa, Apollonia, and perhaps Lydda.

CH. IX. 1. Σαῦλος Saul, God's σκεῦος ἐκλογῆς for the conversion of the Gentiles, was of the tribe of Benjamin (Acts xiii. 21) ; and the Fathers (Tertullian adv. Marcion. v. 1. Chrys. Ambrose, de Ben. Patr. ad fin. Aug., Sermon. 279) apply to him, in a spiritual sense, Jacob's prophecy, Gen. xlix. 27, "Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf. In the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil." That is to say, in a spiritual sense, at the beginning of his career he shall be a Persecutor of Christ's flock, as a Wolf ; but in the end, he shall feed them as a Shepherd. "Escas dividet" (Aug. Sermon. 279, and Append. Sermon. 189) ; and "escas divisit," says Ambrose (de Bened. Patriarch. 12), "evangelizans gentibus verbum."

Benjamin's birth was the occasion of his mother's death ; so "Sauli natiuitas in Evangelium matri ejus Synagogæ mortem attulit." At first he might be called Benoni (a child of sorrow), but by God's grace he became Benjamin (Gen. xxxv. 18), the son of a right hand. Benjamin was the last among the twelve Patriarchs ; so Paul among the Apostles (1 Cor. xv. 8, 9). Benjamin was preferred above the rest by Joseph (Gen. xliii. 34) ; so Paul by Christ (1 Cor. xv. 10).

Benjamin is called "little" (רַעַי, Ps. lxxviii. 27), and yet "a Ruler," and so Saul is "Paul," or "little" (see on xiii. 9), and calls himself "the least of the Apostles" (1 Cor. xv. 9), and yet "not"

Κυρίου, προσελθὼν τῷ ἀρχιερεὶ ² ἡγήσατο παρ' αὐτοῦ ἐπιστολὰς εἰς Δαμασκὸν πρὸς τὰς συναγωγὰς, ὅπως ἐάν τινας εὕρῃ τῆς ὁδοῦ ὄντας, ἀνδρας τε καὶ γυναῖκας, δεδεμένους ἀγάγῃ εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ.

³ Ἐν δὲ τῷ πορεύεσθαι ἐγένετο αὐτὸν ἐγγιζέω τῇ Δαμασκῷ, ἐξαίφνης τε αὐτὸν περιήστραψεν φῶς ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ⁴ καὶ πεσὼν ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν ἤκουσε φωνὴν λέγουσαν αὐτῷ Σαοὺλ, Σαοὺλ, τί ^d μὲ διώκεις ; ⁵ Εἶπε δέ, Τίς εἰ, κύριε ;

c ch. 22. 6.

& 26. 12.

1 Cor. 15. 8.

2 Cor. 12. 2.

d Matt. 25. 40, 45.

e ch. 5. 39.

a whit behind the very chiefest Apostles" (2 Cor. xi. 5 ; xii. 11). Even the Romish Expositor, Cornelius à Lapide, here says, "Ita Paulus à Christo dotatus fuit præ aliis Apostolis."

— ἐμπνέων ἀπειλῆς] Something more than πνέων ἀπειλῆς, inwardly breathing of slaughter; his very breath was impregnated with threats and slaughter. (Meyer, who compares Josh. x. 40, ἐμπνέον (ωής).) On the genitive of the material after πνέω, cp. Winer, G. G. § 30, p. 183, who quotes Aristoph. Equit. 437, οἶτος ἤδη κίκλιν καὶ συκοφαντίας πλεῖ.

— προσελθὼν τῷ ἀρχιερεὶ] coming to the High Priest. See xxii. 5. Saul even outran the High Priest in furious zeal against the Church; he was not sent, but craved a commission against it.

2. εἰς Δαμασκόν] "Damascus, civitas olim celeberrima, in plantie amoenissimâ et fertilissimâ inter Libanum et Antilibanum sita, in eâ Syriæ parte, quæ in literis sacris Syria Damascena 2 Sam. viii. 5. Ies. vii. 8, à Strabone (xvi. p. 755), Cæle-Syria vocatur. Quanta Judæorum frequentia ibi fuerit, ex eo colligi potest, quod Josephus (B. J. ii. 25) narret, sub Nerone Damascenes in suâ urbe decem Judæorum millia, quos in publicis thermis collectos fortè habebant, inermes oppressisse et trucidasse." (Kuin.) Cp. Howson, i. 106. Lewin, pp. 45—63.

It may at first seem surprising, that the power of the High Priest and the Sanhedrim of Jerusalem should have extended beyond the limits of Palestine so far as Damascus, and that they should have been allowed to send Saul on a commission to bind in that city, and to bring bound to Jerusalem men and women, without any reference to the power of Rome.

The solution of this question appears to be supplied,—not by the Acts of the Apostles, but by the circumstance which appears incidentally from the statement of St. Paul in one of his Epistles, viz. "that in Damascus the Governor, or Ethnarch, under Aretas, the king (i. e. of Arabia Petræa), was guarding (ἐφρούρει) the city of the Damascenes, desirous to seize him, and that he was let down in a basket by a window in the wall, and so escaped his hands," (2 Cor. xi. 32, 33.)

Hence it appears that Damascus was now garrisoned by a military force of king Aretas—a remarkable circumstance—and not, as heretofore, by the Romans, and by the forces of the President of Syria. (Cp. Joseph. xiv. 4, 5.)

By what means Damascus had come into the hands of Aretas is not clear. Probably Aretas, after his victory over Herod Antipas (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 5. 1. Cp. Euseb. H. E. i. 11), had been induced by his successes to make inroads into Syria; and a favourable opportunity seems to have been presented by the departure of Vitellius, the President of Syria, to Rome, on hearing the news of the death of the Emperor Tiberius (in the spring of A.D. 37), for the occupation of Damascus by Aretas.

The Roman power lay as it were in abeyance; and Aretas, whose victory was welcome to the Jews detesting Herod Antipas, was desirous to conciliate them, and seconded the endeavours of the officials of the Sanhedrim to arrest Saul, whom they had sent as a commissioner to bind the Christians at Damascus, and who was now, in their eyes, a renegade and apostate, and who "confounded the Jews at Damascus" by preaching the doctrine which he had been sent by them to destroy.

If these suppositions are correct, then we see in them an additional proof of St. Paul's sincerity and courage, in his conversion to Christianity.

— τῆς ὁδοῦ] ἡγῆ, often used for saving doctrine and practice; the way that leads to heaven (Chrys.); "Via, in quâ ambulandum, non oliandum" (Bengel). "Iter hoc facientibus patria cælum est" (Valck.). As τὸ ὄνομα—the Name—was, to the primitive Church, the holy and saving Name of Jesus (see v. 40), so ἡ ὁδὸς—the Way—was the holy and saving Way of the Gospel. See below, xix. 9. 23; xxii. 4; xxiv. 14. 22; xxvi. 13.

3. ἐν τῷ—ἐγγιζέω τῇ Δαμασκῷ] as he was drawing near to Damascus. The distance from Jerusalem to Damascus was about 140 miles. Saul was permitted by God to go on his journey, and was not checked, till he approached its end, and was about to enter the city, and to seize upon his prey. (See Acts xxii. 6; xxvi. 12. 1 Cor. xv. 8.)

Thus the reason of this divine interposition was more clearly evinced. It showed God's watchful Providence, and fatherly mercy to His Church, in the critical hour of her need. Then Saul was arrested; and then, in the crisis of her peril, the Church was delivered. This is in exact accordance with the general operations of Almighty God, as seen in Holy Scripture. See Dr. Barrow's excellent remarks in Sermon xi. vol. i. p. 232, where he says,—

"God beholdeth violent men setting out in their unjust attempts. He letteth them proceed on in a full career, until they reach the edge of their design; then instantly He checketh, He stoppeth, He tumbleth them down, or turneth them backward. Thus was Haman's plot dashed (Esther iii.), when he had procured a royal decree, when he had fixed a time, when he had issued forth letters to destroy God's people. Thus was Pharaoh overwhelmed (Exod. xiv.), when he had just overtaken the children of Israel. Thus were the designs of Abimelech, of Abalom, of Adonijah, of Sanballat nipped. Thus when Sennacherib with an unmatchable host had encamped against Jerusalem, and had to appearance swallowed it, God did put a hook into his nose, and turned him back into his own land (2 Kings xix. 28). Thus when Antiochus Epiphanes was marching on furiously to accomplish his threat of turning Jerusalem into a charnel, a noisome disease did intercept his progress (2 Macc. ix. 5). Thus when the profane Caligula did mean to discharge his bloody rage on the Jews for refusing to worship him (Joseph. xviii. 12), a domestic sword did presently give vent to his revengeful breath. Thus also, when Julian had by his policy and authority projected to overthrow our religion, his plot soon was quashed, and his life snapped away by an unknown hand (Chrysost. in Babyl. Orat. 2. Naz. Orat. 4). Thus whenever the enemy doth come in like a flood (threatening immediately to overflow and overturn all things), the Spirit of the Lord doth lift up a standard against him (Isa. lix. 19); that is, God's secret efficacy doth suddenly restrain and repress his outrage. This usually is the method of Divine providence. God could prevent the beginnings of wicked designs; He could supplant them in their first onsets; He could any where suffumigate and subvert them; but he rather winketh for a time, and suffereth the designers to go on till they are mounted to the top of confidence, and good people are cast on the brink of ruin; then ἀπὸ μηχανῆς, surprisingly, unexpectedly He striketh in with effectual succour; so declaring how vain the presumption is of impious undertakers; how needful and sure His protection is over innocent people; how much reason the one hath to dread Him, and the other to confide in Him. Then is God seen, then his care and power will be acknowledged, when He snatcheth us from the jaws of danger, when our soul doth escape as a bird out of the snare of the fowler." (Ps. cxxiv. 7.) Cp. Barrow, vol. iv. p. 218, Sermon. ix. See also below, xii. 6. 23, and note on 1 Peter iv. 17.

This, and something more than this was done by God in the case of Saul. He was not checked before he was near Damascus; if he had been stopped near Jerusalem, or midway, he would perhaps never have entered Damascus. But it was so ordered, that Saul might preach the Gospel in the same city whither he had come to persecute; and thus under the controlling power of God, the very instrument which had been chosen by Satan to destroy the Church at Damascus, was used by God to build it up.

So will it be at the end—when the power of Satan and of Antichrist seems nearly to have achieved a Victory over the Church, then will Christ appear from heaven to destroy them with "the brightness of His coming," and to deliver His faithful people from their hands.

4. πεσὼν ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν] having fallen on the earth. In pictures of his conversion Saul is generally represented on horseback, which is not very probable. S. Augustine says, "eum ambulasse;" and Pharisees rarely used horses. See Salmeron and Lapide here, and ad Deuteron. xvii. 17.

— φωνήν] a voice in the Hebrew Tongue. See Acts xxii. 9; xxvi. 14.

— Σαοὺλ, Σαούλ] Saul, Saul: the Hebrew form of the Apostle's name, which is never used in the New Testament, except by Christ (ix. 4. 11; xxii. 7; xxvi. 14) and by Ananias (ix. 17; xxii. 13). In all other cases he is called Σαῦλος and Παῦλος.

This repetition of the name, and the fact that he alone was permitted to see Jesus (see v. 7), and to hear His words, while ὁ δὲ, Ἐγὼ εἰμι Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος ὃν σὺ διώκεις. ⁶ Ἀλλὰ ἀνάστηθι καὶ εἴσελθε εἰς τὴν πόλιν, καὶ λαληθήσεται σοι τί σε δεῖ ποιεῖν. ⁷ Οἱ δὲ ἄνδρες [†] οἱ συνοδεύοντες αὐτῷ εἰστήκεισαν ἐνεοί, ἀκούοντες μὲν τῆς φωνῆς, [‡] μηδένα δὲ [§]

† ch. 22. 9.
‡ 26. 13.

§ Dan. 10. 7.

others only saw the light, and heard the sound, showed that the vision was addressed to him.

— τί με διώκεις] μέ is emphatic, and is so placed (see Matt. xvi. 18, and on John xxi. 22). Cur Me persequeris? "Persecutorem suum vocavit persecutorem membrorum suorum (says Aug. in Joann. tract. x., and Serm. 279). Membris adhuc in terrā positis, Caput in cœlo clamabat, et non dicebat, Quid persequeris servos meos, sed, Quid Me persequeris?" And S. Bernard (Serm. de Convers. Paul. ap. A Lapide), "Persequatur Eum qui adversus Corpus Ejus, quod est Ecclesia, odio furebat iniquo." Hence we may see Christ's love to His Members (Isa. lxiii. 9. Matt. xxv. 40), and the sinfulness of injuries done to the Church.

See also above, on viii. 1, and on Col. i. 24.

5. ἐγὼ Ἰησοῦς] I am Jesus. He does not say, I am the Son of God, but I am Jesus of Nazareth (ὁ Ναζωραῖος is in A, C, E, not Elz.), He who was crucified; He to whom St. Stephen prayed, in thy hearing, when thou wast consenting to his death.

It is distinctly said that Saul saw Jesus in heaven; see vv. 17. 27. Acts xxii. 14, and St. Paul says (1 Cor. xi. 1), "have I not seen Jesus Christ?" And (1 Cor. xv. 8) last of all He was seen by me. Hence it has been argued by some Romanist Divines (e. g. A Lapide here), that Christ's human body, which is in heaven, was also near to St. Paul. "Fuit ergo Christi corpus tunc in duobus locis, puta in cœlo et in aëre; quod nota, contra eos qui negant Christi corpus posse esse in cœlo et in Eucharistiā simul." But see on Acts iii. 21, and vii. 56, where St. Stephen sees the heavens opened, and the Son of Man standing at the right hand of God. That vision of St. Stephen explains the vision of St. Paul. And that vision of St. Stephen, and his prayer to Jesus in heaven, may have been instrumental in procuring this vision of St. Paul and his conversion.

— ὃν σὺ διώκεις] whom thou art persecuting. After this word Elz. adds σκληρόν σοι πρὸς κέντρα λακτίζειν τρέμων τε καὶ θαμβῶν εἶπε, Κύριε, τί με θέλεις ποιῆσαι; καὶ ὁ Κύριος πρὸς αὐτόν. But these words are not in any MS., and seem to be borrowed from xxvi. 14, and xxii. 10.

6. εἰσελθε εἰς τὴν πόλιν, καὶ λαληθήσεται σ. τ. σ. δ. π.] go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do. Observe that Saul, the future Apostle of the Gentiles, though arrested in his course by Jesus Christ Himself, was sent by Him into the City to be taught and baptized by one of the inferior ministers of the Church. (Chrys., Aug. quest. Evang. ii. 47.)

Even therefore, in Saul's case, whose conversion was extraordinary, the ordinary means of reception into the Church were not dispensed with. He was sent by Christ Himself to Ananias.

Thus in a remarkable manner did the Great Head of the Church show the necessity of conformity to His own appointments and ordinances; and enjoins a thankful acceptance and devout use of the means of Grace which He dispenses by the agency of His Ministers, in His Holy Word and Sacraments.

S. Augustine's words on this subject are deserving of the especial attention of those who are tempted by the Evil One to despise that agency;—

"Let the devout soul learn without pride what is to be learnt through the ministry of man; and let us not tempt Him in Whom we believe; lest, being deluded by the wiles of the Enemy, we refuse to go to Church to hear the Gospel read and preached by man, or even to read the Bible itself; and expect to be caught up into the third heaven, and to behold Christ, and to hear the Gospel from His mouth rather than from that of men.

"Let us be on our guard against these proud and perilous imaginations; and let us reflect that even the Apostle Paul himself, though dashed prostrate on the earth by a divine voice from heaven, was nevertheless sent by it to a man, in order to receive the Sacraments, and to be incorporated into the Church.

"Let us remember also, that although the Centurion Cornelius was assured by an Angel that his prayers were heard, and his alms had in remembrance before God, yet he was referred to Peter for baptism, in order to receive the Sacrament from him, and also to learn what he should believe, hope, and love." Aug. Prolog. ad de Doctr. Christ. i., and iv. c. 33. Cp. also Hooker, V. lxxvi. 9.

So Philip was sent by the Angel to instruct and baptize the Ethiopian. Acts viii. 26—29. Cp. Rom. x. 15.

7. εἰστήκεισαν] were standing. It is said (by Meyer, p. 184, and others) that this assertion is at variance with what St. Paul himself says, xxvi. 14, πάντων καταπεσόντων ἡμῶν εἰς τὴν γῆν. Here, it is alleged, his companions are represented as standing; there, as having fallen to the earth. But this is not the case. The word εἰστήκεισαν here is joined with συνοδεύοντες (travelling together), and is contrasted with it; and it means, that they, who had till then been in motion, were suddenly arrested in their course. The opposition here is not between standing and falling, but between halting and going on. Cp. viii. 38, ἐκέλευσε στήναι τὸ ἄρμα. Luke v. 2, πλοῖα ἐστῶτα, ships not sailing, but at anchor; vii. 14, οἱ βαστάζοντες ἔστησαν: viii. 44, ἔστη ἡ ῥύσις τοῦ αἵματος. Therefore the two accounts are quite consistent. St. Luke describes here the suddenness with which the cavalcade was checked in its course; St. Paul, their prostration to the ground.

— ἐνεοί] Elz. ἐννεοί: but the other form is preferable as connected with ἄνεος, silent, dumb, speechless,—ἰσώφους, Valck. Cp. Winer, § 5, p. 43. It is used by LXX, Prov. xvii. 28. Isa. lvi. 10, and elsewhere, and often means stunned by fear, ἐμβρονηταῖς (Hesych.), as here.

— ἀκούοντες μὲν τῆς φωνῆς] hearing the voice. It is said in v. 4 that St. Paul ἤκουσε φωνὴν λέγουσαν, and so xxvi. 14, ἤκουσα φωνὴν λαλοῦσαν. Observe the accusative in both places, i. e. he heard and understood its articulate utterance. But they who were with him, ἤκουον τῆς φωνῆς (genitive), were hearing only the sound, not the words of the speaker.

There is therefore no discrepancy, as is alleged by some foreign and English Expositors, between the assertion here and that in Acts xxii. 9, where it is said that they τὴν φωνὴν οὐκ ἤκουσαν τοῦ λαλοῦντος. Here we have the genitive of the thing, there the accusative. The reason is, that Saul's companions ἀκούοντες τῆς φωνῆς οὐκ ἤκουσαν τὴν φωνὴν τοῦ λαλοῦντος,—i. e. they heard, but did not understand what they heard. Our Lord made a distinction between Saul and his fellow-travellers in regard to both senses,—i. e. of eye and of ear. Saul saw Jesus; they only saw the light of His appearance; he heard and understood the words of His voice; they only heard its sound. As is well said in Catenâ, p. 361, by Ammonius, who understood and wrote Greek well, his native tongue, σημειώτεον, ὅτι καὶ εἶδε τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ ἤκουεν αὐτοῦ ὁ Παῦλος· οἱ δὲ συνόντες τὴν λαμπρῶν μόνον τοῦ φωτὸς αὐτοῦ εἶδον, οὐ μὴν αὐτόν· καὶ τὸν ἤχον ἤκουον τῆς φωνῆς, οὐ μὴν συνῆκαν τὰ λεγόμενα: one who ἀκούει φωνὴν (xxii. 14) also ἀκούει φωνῆς, but one who ἀκούει φωνῆς does not necessarily ἀκούει φωνῆν. Examples of the genitive of the person, ἀκούει λέγοντος (which is an elliptical expression), are irrelevant. As Grotius well says: "φωνὴν οὐκ ἤκουσαν est vocem non intellexerunt." And another scholar, inferior to none of the present age, Valckenae, says, p. 450, "Dici possunt ἀκούειν τῆς φωνῆς, τὴν φωνὴν οὐκ ἀκούειν, ut prius significet sonum audire, alterum loquentis verba non intelligere." See also Schoetgen, p. 445. Hammond, p. 374. Bengel, p. 551. Hengstenberg, History of Balaam, p. 378, and Baumgarten here, pp. 217—219.

This is not a question (as sometimes represented) of "verbal variety," but of substantive truth. To imagine (as some have done) that St. Luke, having given an account of St. Paul's conversion in the Ninth chapter, puts into St. Paul's mouth in the Twenty-second chapter a speech which, in an important point, contradicts that account, is to suppose—not only that St. Luke was not inspired—but that he was destitute of common sense! To imagine that St. Luke really contradicts St. Paul, or makes St. Paul contradict himself, is indeed to imitate the spirit of a notorious unbeliever, and to degrade the Writer of the Acts from "Luke the beloved Physician, whose praise is in the Gospel," to "an idiot Evangelist!" (Cp. Bentley on Free-thinking, p. 112.)

If such suppositions as these are once accepted, then a door is opened to an inundation from the whole flood and torrent of unbelief, which commences its course with assumptions of what are called "verbal discrepancies" between St. Paul's account and St. Luke's, and then proceeds to deny the veracity of the one or the other, or both, and then goes on to doubt the reality of St. Paul's miraculous Conversion, and even of the Death of Christ, and the Atonement itself.

It would be endless and fruitless to recount the speculations of some Expositors (such as Eichhorn, Ammon, Wittig, Schulze, Greiling, Boehme, Hezel, Heinrichs, &c.), who have endeavoured to account for St. Paul's Conversion from ordinary physical phenomena, and to explain away all that is supernatural in St. Luke's and St. Paul's own narratives of it; or such as Lange, who regarded it as a visionary reverie; or who, with Breitschneider and Emmertling, confound it with his rapture into the third heaven (2 Cor. xii. 1—7), or with Bahrdt, Venturini, and Brennecke, venture to θεωροῦντες. ⁸ Ἦγέρθη δὲ Σαῦλος ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς· ἀνεωγμένων δὲ τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν αὐτοῦ οὐδὲν ἔβλεπε· χειραγωγοῦντες δὲ αὐτὸν εἰσήγαγον εἰς Δαμασκόν.

⁹ Καὶ ἦν ἡμέρας τρεῖς μὴ βλέπων, καὶ οὐκ ἔφαγεν οὐδὲ ἔπιεν.

h ch. 22. 12.

¹⁰ Ἦν δὲ τις μαθητὴς ἐν Δαμασκῷ ὀνόματι Ἀνανίας· καὶ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐν ὁράματι ὁ Κύριος, Ἀνανία· ὁ δὲ εἶπεν, Ἰδοὺ ἐγὼ, Κύριε. ¹¹ Ὁ δὲ Κύριος πρὸς αὐτόν, Ἀναστὰς πορεύθητι ἐπὶ τὴν ῥύμην τὴν καλουμένην Εὐθείαν, καὶ ζήτησον ἐν οἰκίᾳ Ἰούδα Σαῦλον ὀνόματι, Ταρσέα· ἰδοὺ γὰρ προσεύχεται·

i 1 Tim. 1. 13.

k ver. 21.

1 1 Cor. 1. 2.

2 Tim. 2. 22.

Rom. 1. 1.

m ch. 13. 2.

1 Cor. 15. 10.

Gal. 1. 15.

Eph. 3. 7, 8.

n Rom. 11. 13.

Gal. 2. 7, 8.

o ch. 25. 23, &c.

p ch. 28. 17, &c.

q ch. 20. 23.

& 21. 11.

2 Cor. 11. 23—27.

2 Tim. 1. 11, 12.

¹² καὶ εἶδεν ἐν ὁράματι ἄνδρα ὀνόματι Ἀνανίαν εἰσελθόντα καὶ ἐπιθέντα αὐτῷ χεῖρα, ὅπως ἀναβλέψῃ. ¹³ Ἀπεκρίθη δὲ Ἀνανίας, Κύριε, ἀκήκοα ἀπὸ πολλῶν περὶ τοῦ ἀνδρὸς τούτου, ὅσα κακὰ ἐποίησε τοῖς ἀγίοις σου ἐν Ἱερουσαλὴμ·

¹⁴ καὶ ὠδε ^k ἔχει ἔξουσίαν παρὰ τῶν ἀρχιερέων δῆσαι πάντας τοὺς ἐπικαλουμένους τὸ ὄνομά σου. ¹⁵ Εἶπε δὲ πρὸς αὐτὸν ὁ Κύριος, Πορεύου, ὅτι ^m σκευὸς ἐκλογῆς ἐστὶ μοι οὗτος, τοῦ βασιτάσαι τὸ ὄνομά μου ⁿ ἐνώπιον ἐθνῶν τε καὶ

^o βασιλέων, ^p υἱῶν τε Ἰσραὴλ. ¹⁶ ^q Εγὼ γὰρ ὑποδείξω αὐτῷ ὅσα δεῖ αὐτὸν affirm that Jesus merely died in appearance, and so presented Himself to Saul on his way; or of the Tubingen school of Critics, who deny the fact altogether.

² ὑπὲρ τοῦ ὀνόματός μου παθεῖν.

These notions are the natural results of the Criticism, which in a vainglorious spirit of spurious liberality, invents inaccuracies and discrepancies in the Word of God; but they are not without their use, as showing, in undisguised features, the necessary consequences of that Criticism.

⁸ οὐδὲν ἔβλεπε] he was seeing nothing. He was committed by God like a prisoner to the chains of a three days' blindness, as it were to a soldier to guard, lest from previous prejudice he or others should say that it was a mere phantom of the brain that he had seen in the way. Euseb. in Caten. p. 154.

Compare the case of Zacharias in the Temple, whose dumbness after the Vision of the angel was a proof of its reality (Luke i. 20—22), and also an appropriate punishment for unbelief, like St. Paul's blindness, inflicted on him to show how blind he had been in his zeal and rage against the Church. And as the loosing of the tongue of Zacharias, when he wrote "his name is John" (Luke i. 63), showed why his tongue had been bound, so the visible sign of the scales falling from the eyes of St. Paul (v. 18), when Ananias laid his hands on him, served further to show not only the reality of the blindness, but also the reason of it. And as the voice of Zacharias was taken away, that he might afterwards prophecy, so St. Paul's bodily sight was eclipsed for a time, that he might afterwards shine as a glorious light in the world.

Cæcus factus est Saulus; ut interiore luce fulgeret cor ejus, exterior ad tempus erepta est; subtracta est persecutori, ut redderet prædicatori. Et eo tempore, quo cætera non videbat, Jesus videbat: ita et in ipsâ cæcitate mysterium informatur credentium; quoniam qui credit in Jesum, Ipsum intueri debet, cætera nec nata computare; ut creatura vilescat, Creator in corde dulcescat. Augustine (Serm. 279).

—χειραγωγοῦντες] leading by the hand. Like a spoil rescued from the strong man (Chrys.), whose house had been spoiled by the Stronger than he. Matt. xii. 29.

⁹ μὴ βλέπων] On the force of μὴ here, see Winer, G. G. § 55, p. 431. It is more expressive than οὐ, being applied to one who had once seen, and seemed as if he might see again.

—οὐκ ἔφαγεν οὐδὲ ἔπιεν] he neither ate nor drank. An example of repentance. See his sorrow for persecuting the Church. (Theoph.)

¹⁰ Ἀνανίας] Ananias. See above on v. 6, and compare S. Aug. Serm. 279, who says, "Adductus est ad Ananiam; et Ananias interpretatur Ovis; ecce lupus adducitur ad ovem; Ipse Pastor de coelo nuntiavit lupum venturum ovi, sed non seviturum." As to this etymology of Ananias, A Lapide says, "Nescio quâ linguâ interpretatur Ovis." Perhaps they who so interpreted it connected it with ἀνός, ἀνών, and Agnus.

If (with Mintert and Kuin.) we derive it from אָן, gratiosus fuit, and נָא, Dominus, it happily illustrates St. Paul's assertion—"by the Grace of God I am what I am" (1 Cor. xv. 10).

¹¹ ῥύμην] a lane. Not πλατεία, platea, a broad way, but ῥύμη, a narrow one (see Luke xiv. 21); and it was εὐθεῖα, recta, or straight;

Seemingly a trivial incident; if any thing in Scripture and in the lives of the Apostles, and especially in the history of the "Vas electionis," and of so marvellous an event as St. Paul's Conversion, can rightly be so called. With reverence be it said, even this slight circumstance, which the Holy Spirit has thought fit to record, may perhaps seem to have its moral. Saul the persecutor had now passed from the broad way of worldly power and honour, on which he was lately hurrying to Damascus, and which was leading him to destruction (Matt. vii. 13), and he had now been brought to the right or straight way (cp. Acts xiii. 10), and narrow way (Matt. vii. 14), called κατ' ἐξοχὴν the Way (Acts ix. 2), in which he would now be led to everlasting life.

—Ταρσέα] of Tarsus: a principal city of Cilicia, see xi. 25; xxii. 3. "Cilicia matrem urbium habet Tarson," Solinus xli. Hirtius, de Bell. Al. lvi.; on the river Cydnus, Strabo xiv. p. 990. Val. Max. iii. 4, an "urbs libera," Plin. v. 22. It was celebrated also for its Schools of Literature, Arts, and Sciences. Wetst. Winer, ii. 567.

—προσεύχεται] he is praying—the attitude most proper for the reception of the moral, intellectual, and spiritual light, which was now illuminating him; and though his eyes were dark, yet he had a vision from above, and saw more clearly than before. See v. 12.

¹² εἶδεν ἐν ὁράματι] he saw in a vision. This pair of visions, one vouchsafed to Saul and the other to Ananias, and the one tallying with the other, takes away all suspicion of self-deception. The same providential arrangement is to be observed in the next chapter, with regard to the two corresponding visions of Cornelius and St. Peter; and the narrative of the one pair confirms that of the other pair.

¹⁵ σκευὸς ἐκλογῆς] a vessel of choice. A double Hebraism.

(1) σκευός, Hebr. יָד, any instrument, ὄργανον, utensil, vessel. As applied to men, see Rom. ix. 21. 23, σκευὴ ἐλέους. 2 Tim. ii. 20.

(2) ἐκλογῆς, of choice, the genitive characteristic of the quality. See above on Matt. xxii. 11. Acts vii. 2. James i. 25, ἀκροατὴς ἐπιλογομένης. 1 Cor. x. 16, τὸ ποτήριον τῆς εὐλογίας. Heb. i. 8, ῥάβδος εὐθιγῆτος. 2 Pet. ii. 1, αἰρέσεις ἀπωλείας. Cp. Vorst. de Hebr. pp. 33. 246.

On the meaning of the term, see further, xxii. 14, and St. Paul's own comment, Gal. i. 15. 1 Cor. xv. 10. "Saulus singulare exemplum gratiæ gratuita amplissimæ." (Bengel.)

Paul in himself was a σκευὸς ὀστράκινον, an earthen vessel (2 Cor. iv. 7); but as the Apostle of the Lord he was σκευὸς ἐκλογῆς, a chosen vessel. And the earthen vessel was a chosen vessel, in order that by the frailty of the human material, and by the divine treasure contained in it, and bestowed by it, men might see that the excellency of the power of the Gospel thus bestowed was not of man, but of God.

—βασιτάσαι] to bear. "Vas electionis Paulus, quia vas legis, et Scripturarum armarium." (Jerome, in Oseam viii.) He was also a vessel, as bearing, like a living vehicle, what he contained; or like the chariot seen by Ezekiel, in the wheels of which the Spirit was (Ezek. i. 21). So the Spirit was in this Apostolic "Vas electionis," St. Paul, and gave him life and motion, though in his own esteem he held the spiritual treasure in an earthen vessel (2 Cor. iv. 7); and so, by humility as well as zeal, he was a vessel fitted for the Master's use (2 Tim. ii. 21).

¹⁶ παθεῖν] to suffer. The word παθεῖν is happily reserved for the close of the sentence, so that the mind may dwell on that.

17 ^r Ἀπῆλθε δὲ Ἀνανίας καὶ εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν, καὶ ^s ἐπιθεὶς ἐπ' αὐτὸν ^{r ch. 22. 13.}
τὰς χεῖρας εἶπε, Σαοὺλ ἀδελφε, ὁ Κύριος ἀπέσταλκέ με, Ἰησοῦς ὁ ὀφθαλμοὶ σοὶ ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ ἢ ἤρχου, ὅπως ἀναβλέψῃς, καὶ ^{t ch. 2. 4.} ¹⁸ Καὶ εὐθέως ἀπέπεσον ἀπὸ τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν αὐτοῦ ὥστε λεπίδες, ἀνέβλεψέ τε παρα-χρῆμα, καὶ ἀναστὰς ἐβαπτίσθη. ¹⁹ καὶ λαβὼν τροφήν ἐνίσχυσεν.
²⁰ Ἐγένετο δὲ μετὰ τῶν ἐν ^{u ch. 26. 20.} Δαμασκῷ μαθητῶν ἡμέρας τινάς. Καὶ εὐθέως ^{Gal. 1. 17.}
ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς ἐκήρυσσε τὸν Ἰησοῦν ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ.
²¹ ^v Ἐξίσταντο δὲ πάντες οἱ ἀκούοντες, καὶ ἔλεγον, Οὐχ οὗτός ἐστιν ^{v Gal. 1. 13, 23.} ὁ πορθήσας ἐν Ἱερουσαλὴμ τοὺς ἐπικαλουμένους τὸ ὄνομα τοῦτο· καὶ ᾧδε εἰς τοῦτο ἐληλύθει ἵνα δεδεμένους αὐτοὺς ἀγάγῃ ἐπὶ τοὺς ἀρχιερεῖς; ^{x ch. 8. 3.} ²² Σαῦλος δὲ μᾶλλον ^{y Ps. 84. 7.} ἐνεδυναμούτο, καὶ ^{z ch. 18. 28.} συνέχυνε τοὺς Ἰουδαίους τοὺς κατοικοῦντας ἐν Δαμασκῷ, συμβιβάζων ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Χριστός.
²³ Ὡς δὲ ἐπληροῦντο ἡμέραι ἱκαναί, συνεβουλεύσαντο οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι ^{a ch. 23. 12.} ἀνελεῖν αὐτόν. ^{b 25. 3.} ²⁴ ^b ἐγνώσθη δὲ τῷ Σαύλῳ ἡ ἐπιβουλὴ αὐτῶν. ^{c 2 Cor. 11. 32.} ^c παρετηροῦντό τε τὰς πύλας ἡμέρας τε καὶ νυκτὸς, ὅπως αὐτὸν ἀνέλωσι. ^{d Josh. 2. 15.} ²⁵ ^d λαβόντες δὲ αὐτὸν οἱ ^{1 Sam. 19. 12.} μαθηταὶ νυκτὸς καθήκαν διὰ τοῦ τείχους χαλάσαντες ἐν σφυρίδι.

He who came to inflict suffering on others must now be taught to suffer, and be perfected by suffering; a proof of the reality of his Conversion. He was not drawn to Christ by promises of earthly good; he left all, lost all, for Christ. But note how he rejoices in his sufferings; see what he says, Gal. vi. 17. 2 Cor. i. 5. Rom. v. 3; viii. 18. Cp. Aug. Sermon 279. 4. A Lapide adds, "Fortia agere Romanum est: fortia pati Christianum."

17. ἤρχου] thou wert coming, i. e. when thou wast suddenly stopped by the Divine Voice. There is something more observable in this tense, because (as Valck. observes) the form ἤρχομαι from ἔρχομαι is very rare. It is found in Mark i. 45; ii. 13.

18. λεπίδες] scales, that his blindness might not be supposed to be imaginary. (Chrys.) See above, on v. 8.

—ἐβαπτίσθη] he was baptized. See below, xxii. 16. Even Saul himself, though called from heaven by Jesus Christ, was admitted into the Church by Baptism, by which his sins were washed away. Who can suppose, therefore, that any one may safely neglect that Sacrament? See above, v. 6.

20. Ἰησοῦν] So A, B, C, E, and others. Elz. Χριστόν.
21. οὐχ οὗτός ἐστιν] is not this he? Is Saul also among the Prophets? 1 Sam. x. 11, 12; xix. 24. The case of St. Paul's conversion being extraordinary, and not to be drawn into an example of God's dealings with men, and not to be made by them a ground of hope for such interpositions (cp. 1 Tim. i. 15), it is not surprising that the Christian Fathers should have seen types and prophecies concerning him in the history of the Ancient People of God. See above concerning Benjamin (ix. 1).

There appears also to be a connexion, both by way of resemblance and also of contrast, between Saul the first King of Israel, and Saul the last of the Apostles;

Both were of the tribe of Benjamin; both were once Persecutors; the one the persecutor of David, the other of the Son of David (cp. Aug. Sermon 279). Saul the persecuting King is among the Prophets (1 Sam. x. 12; xix. 24); and Saul the persecuting Pharisee is among the Apostles. Who would have expected either of these events? But Saul the King resisted the grace of God, and gave himself up to the Evil Spirit. Saul the Pharisee "was not disobedient to the heavenly vision." (Acts xxvi. 19.) Both the one and the other afford remarkable examples of the freedom and power of Divine Grace. But extraordinary as these examples are, they show also that Divine Grace, free and powerful as it is, is not irresistible. Saul the King might have been like Paul the Apostle, if he had cherished the Spirit within him; and Paul the Apostle would have been like Saul the King, if he had grieved and resisted the Grace of God.

22. συμβιβάζων] proving by a collation of passages cited and compared. See Valck.

23. ἡμέραι ἱκαναί] many days. He had now been for some time in Arabia, i. e. "that part of Arabia which bordered on Syria; and there received a full revelation of the Gospel from God." (Bp. Pearson in Acta, p. 368, and Annal. Paulin. ad A.D. xxxvi.) Bp. Pearson dates St. Paul's three years (Gal. i. 18) from his conversion, to his return to Jerusalem.

The term "Arabia," as used by St. Paul, does not necessarily mean the wilderness of Arabia, commonly so called. Early Christian writers (Justin and Tertullian) assign Damascus itself to Arabia; and the region of Auranitis, on the south of Damascus, is reckoned by Roman writers as belonging to Arabia. (Killo, p. 143.)

Arabia was St. Paul's school for the Apostleship. Afterwards he returned to Damascus, where the events here recorded occurred. St. Luke passes over an interval of three years (see Gal. i. 17, and Rosenm.). And it is observable that many days are equivalent to three years in 1 Kings ii. 38. Cp. Houson, i. 122.

This is more carefully to be noted, because from this expression some have taken occasion to say (Baur, p. 106, and Meyer, p. 188), that St. Luke did not know that St. Paul was three years in Arabia.

But the fact is, this mode of speaking is a proof that St. Luke does not profess to give a full history of St. Paul or any one Apostle. He does not mention how and when St. Paul was fully instructed in the doctrines of Christianity. And he does not mention when and where St. Paul wrote his Epistles. Indeed he does not even mention that St. Paul ever wrote a single Epistle. But he could have told all these things. Cp. note on 2 Cor. xi. 5.

No argument, therefore, can be drawn from what perhaps some may call omissions in this history. Least of all may we venture to say, that they are proofs of ignorance, inadvertence, or forgetfulness, on the part of the Sacred Historian, as some Expositors have done; e. g. one writing on this passage, "Hoc iter in Arabiam Lucas silentio præterit, quoniam, ut videtur, ignorabat à Saulo iter in Arabiam susceptum fuisse, aut hujus rei oblitus erat." St. Paul himself omits it Acts xxii. 16, 17, and yet mentions it Gal. i. 17.

How much sounder is the criticism of S. Chrysostom here! "The historian (St. Luke) passes by, designedly and modestly, St. Paul's visions in Arabia." And the criticism of S. Jerome (in Galat. i.), "Lucas idcirco de Arabiâ præterit, quia forsitan nihil dignum Apostolatu in Arabiâ Saulus perpetravit,—et quod aliqua dispensatio et Dei præceptum fuerit, ut taceret."

As Bede observes here, St. Paul himself appears to intimate that he did not preach in Arabia; for the Apostle says (Acts xxvi. 20) that he preached to them at Damascus first, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coast of Judæa, and then to the Gentiles.

Perhaps this retirement of St. Paul after his Conversion was designed to be exemplary and instructive, as intimating that new converts ought not to be admitted to exercise the functions of the ministerial office, without some probationary term of silence, after their conversion.

24. παρετηροῦντο] they were guarding. So A, B, C, E, F, G. Elz. παρητήρουν.

The Jews were assisted in their stratagem against Saul by the Ethnarch, or Governor of Damascus, then in the hands of Aretas, "the King" of Arabia Petraea (2 Cor. xi. 32, 33), the father-in-law of Herod Antipas, whose territory Aretas invaded on account of his abandonment of his daughter for Herodias (Matt. xiv. 3. Joseph. Ant. xviii. 5. 1). Antipas appealed for protection to Rome, and Vitellius, then at the head of the Roman forces in Syria, of which he was President, was commanded by Tiberius to assist him. As to the circumstances under which the city came under the influence of Aretas, see above on v. 2.

25. διὰ τοῦ τείχους] by the wall. As the spies were let down e Gal. i. 18.

f ch. 4. 36.
& 13. 2.

g Gal. i. 18.

h ch. 6. 1.
& 11. 20.
i ver. 23.k ch. 8. 1.
Zech. 9. 1.
l Col. 1. 10.
John 14. 16, 17.
Zech. 8. 20—22.m ch. 3. 6, 16.
& 4. 10.

²⁶ ^e Παραγενόμενος δὲ εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ ἐπειράτο κολλᾶσθαι τοῖς μαθηταῖς· καὶ πάντες ἐφοβοῦντο αὐτὸν, μὴ πιστεύοντες ὅτι ἔστιν μαθητής. ²⁷ ^f Βαρνάβας δὲ ἐπιλαβόμενος αὐτὸν ἤγαγε πρὸς τοὺς ἀποστόλους· καὶ διηγέσατο αὐτοῖς πῶς ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ εἶδε τὸν Κύριον, καὶ ὅτι ἐλάλησεν αὐτῷ, καὶ πῶς ἐν Δαμασκῷ ἐπαρρήσιασατο ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Ἰησοῦ. ²⁸ ^g Καὶ ἦν μετ' αὐτῶν εἰσπορευόμενος καὶ ἐκπορευόμενος εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ, καὶ παρρῆσιαζόμενος ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Κυρίου. ²⁹ ^h ἐλάλει τε καὶ συνεζήτει πρὸς τοὺς Ἑλληνιστάς· ⁱ οἱ δὲ ἐπεχείρουν ἀνελεῖν αὐτόν.

³⁰ ^h Ἐπιγνόντες δὲ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ κατήγαγον αὐτὸν εἰς Καισάρειαν, καὶ ἐξ-ἀπέστειλαν αὐτὸν εἰς Ταρσόν.

³¹ ^k Ἡ μὲν οὖν ἐκκλησία καθ' ὅλης τῆς Ἰουδαίας καὶ Γαλιλαίας καὶ Σαμαρείας εἶχεν εἰρήνην, ^l οἰκοδομουμένη, καὶ πορευομένη τῷ φόβῳ τοῦ Κυρίου, καὶ τῇ παρακλήσει τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος ἐπληθύνετο.

³² ^m Ἐγένετο δὲ Πέτρον διερχόμενον διὰ πάντων κατελθεῖν καὶ πρὸς τοὺς ἁγίους τοὺς κατοικοῦντας Λύδαν. ³³ ⁿ Εὗρε δὲ ἐκεῖ ἄνθρωπὸν τινα ὀνόματι Αἰνέα, ἐξ ἐτῶν ὀκτὼ κατακείμενον ἐπὶ κρεβάττου, ὃς ἦν παραλελυμένος.

³⁴ Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Πέτρος, Αἰνέα, ^o ἰάταί σε Ἰησοῦς Χριστός· ἀνάστηθι καὶ by Rahab from Jericho (Josh. ii. 15), and David by Michal (1 Sam. xix. 12), where the words are διὰ τῆς θυρίδος, by the window; and see 2 Cor. xi. 33, where he says, ἐχαλάσθη ἐν σαργάνῃ, and where the expression of St. Luke, διὰ τοῦ τείχους, is explained by διὰ θυρίδος—διὰ τείχους, I was let down in a basket through a window, through the wall.

On the circumstances of this incident, and on the reasons of its commemoration by St. Paul in 2 Cor. xi. 33, see below notes there, and on 2 Cor. xii. 1, pp. 175, 176.

On the bearing of this incident on the question of the lawfulness of flight in the time of persecution, see the excellent letter of S. Augustine, written in the time of the Vandal invasion of Africa, ad Honoratum, Ep. 228, and note above on Matt. ii. 13; x. 23.

—ἐν σπυρίδι] in a basket; a corn-basket (Hesych.). See Matt. xvi. 9.

²⁶. εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ] to Jerusalem. See Gal. i. 17.

—πάντες ἐφοβοῦντο] all were afraid. How was this, it may be said, after the miraculous intervention of God at his Conversion? This question may be answered by reference to a fact not stated in the Acts, but by St. Paul himself. Immediately after his Conversion he did not confer with “flesh and blood,” nor go up to the Apostles; doubtless lest it should be imagined that he had received his Gospel from man. But he went forth-into Arabia (see Gal. i. 17),—a circumstance not mentioned by St. Luke,—and there he received his revelations from Jesus Christ Himself, and he then returned to Damascus (Gal. i. 12). It might therefore be supposed by the Disciples at Jerusalem, that he had shunned the Apostles from fear or antipathy; and thence suspicions might arise concerning his sincerity.

²⁷. Βαρνάβας—ἤγαγε] Barnabas took him and brought him to the Apostles. Barnabas of Cyprus might well have had previous acquaintance with Saul of Tarsus in Cilicia. It has been said by some that he was St. Paul's fellow-disciple under Gamaliel: it is not improbable; but there is no sufficient evidence of this. It was however a fitting act for the vids παρακλήσεως to commend him to the Apostles. Cp. his similar act, xi. 25.

—πρὸς τοὺς ἀποστόλους] to the Apostles, namely, Peter and James (Gal. i. 18), Rosenm., who well adds, concerning the honourable testimony of St. Barnabas to the circumstances of St. Paul's conversion, and to St. Paul's own courage, “Conveniebat id potiùs narrari ab aliis qui id scient, quàm ab ipso Saulo predicari.”

—πῶς—ἐπαρρήσιασατο] how he spake boldly. “Quantà cum fiducià doctrinam Jesu sit professus.” (Rosenm.)

²⁸. εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ] to Jerusalem, where he had a trance in the Temple, xxii. 17.

²⁹. συνεζήτει πρὸς τοὺς Ἑλληνιστάς] he was disputing with the Hellenists. He now confuted some of the same persons with whom he had formerly co-operated, and who had been most eager and furious in their zeal against Stephen, and had been the originators of the accusation which led to his death (vi. 9—14).

Thus St. Paul endeavoured to make amends at Jerusalem, and at the peril of his life, for former sins committed there against Christ and the Church.

In both cases St. Luke uses the same word, συζητεῖν.

³⁰. Ταρσόν] Tarsus, to his own country and friends—to which he specially owed the duty of communicating the blessings of Christianity. Cp. John i. 42.

³¹. ἡ μὲν οὖν ἐκκλησία—ἐπληθύνετο] So A, B, C, and many Cursive MSS. and Versions. Elz. has the plural, αἱ μὲν ἐκκλησίαι. Cp. Gal. i. 22. The singular number rests on the best authority, and seems most fitted to describe the unity and harmony of the Church in that period of peace.

—εἶχεν εἰρήνην] had peace. Because the Jews were so much occupied in endeavouring to frustrate the order which the Emperor Caligula, who claimed divine worship (Lightfoot, i. p. 834. 857. Burton, Lectures, p. 132. Howson, i. 136), had given to Petronius to set up his statue in the Temple (Joseph, xviii. 8), that they had not leisure to persecute the Church—a remarkable instance of the manner in which the evil passions of men are made subservient by God to the edification of the Church.

This order was afterwards rescinded, at the intervention of Herod Agrippa, then at Rome; and with the death of Caligula the persecution recommenced under Herod Agrippa (Acts xii. 1—19).

It is observable, that, in the primitive ages, the Church had less to fear from some of the worst Emperors, such as Tiberius and Caligula, than from those Princes of Judæa, such as Agrippa, who were most honoured by the Jews.

—πορευομένη] πορεύεσθαι, the Heb. יָרַח.

³². διὰ πάντων] through all. Kuin. supplies τόπων, places. Cp. Luke xi. 24. Meyer, ἁγίων. Both, places and persons, may be meant. Cp. v. 38.

The foundation of the See of Antioch in Syria has been assigned to St. Peter at this period by some, e.g. Baronius and A. Lapide. But, however this may be, it does not appear that he resided there at this time as Bishop, for he is said here διέρχεσθαι; his visit to Antioch, if he did visit it now, was only of short duration.

—Λύδαν] Lydda: 18 miles S.W. of Jerusalem on the road from that city to Cæsarea; called Lod in 1 Chron. viii. 12; Ezra ii. 33, afterwards called Diospolis. A, B have Λύδα, C and E have Λύδαν here and v. 35. Josephus uses both Λύδα (B. J. iv. 8. 1) and Λύδαν (Ant. xx. 6. 2) in the accusative. Almost all the MSS. and Editions have Λύδης in v. 38. Λύδα may be a neuter plural. See Winer, G. G. 58. R. W. B. ii. 30.

³⁴. ἰάταί σε Ἰησοῦς] Jesus in heaven healeth thee by me on earth. (Didym.) Contrast this language of Peter with our Lord's expressions of sovereign will and divine power: θέλω, καθαρῶς θητι (Matt. viii. 3), ἄρον τὸν κρεβάττόν σου (Mark ii. 11), Ταλιθὰ κοῦμι (Mark v. 41), Δάδαρε, δεῦρο ἔξω (John xi. 43). Chrys.

Christ heals αἰθεντικῶς καὶ αὐτοκρατικῶς, Peter ὑποσυγκρικῶς καὶ ὑπερηφανικῶς. See also above, iii. 6, and below, v. 40, οὗτοι τὰ γόνατα προσήξατο.

On the paronomasia ἰάταί σε Ἰησοῦς, see on iv. 30.

στρώσον σεαυτῷ. Καὶ εὐθέως ἀνέστη· ³⁵ καὶ εἶδον αὐτὸν πάντες οἱ κατοικοῦντες Λύδδαν καὶ τὸν Σάρωνα, οὔτινες ἠέπεστρεψαν ἐπὶ τὸν Κύριον.

n ch. 11. 21.
2 Cor. 3. 16.

³⁶ Ἐν Ἰόππῃ δέ τις ἦν μαθήτρια ὀνόματι Ταβιθὰ, ἣ διερμηνευομένη λέγεται Δορκάς· αὕτη ἦν ὁ πλήρης ἔργων ἀγαθῶν καὶ ἐλεημοσυνῶν ὧν ἐποίει. ³⁷ Ἐγένετο δὲ ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ἐκείναις ἀσθενήσασαν αὐτὴν ἀποθανεῖν. Λούσαντες δὲ αὐτὴν ἔθηκαν ἐν ὑπερῷ. ³⁸ Ἐγγὺς δὲ οὔσης Λύδδης τῇ Ἰόππῃ, οἱ μαθηταὶ ἀκούσαντες ὅτι Πέτρος ἐστὶν ἐν αὐτῇ, ἀπέστειλαν δύο ἄνδρας πρὸς αὐτὸν, παρακαλοῦντες, μὴ ὀκνήσῃς διελθεῖν ἕως ἡμῶν. ³⁹ Ἀναστὰς δὲ Πέτρος συνῆλθεν αὐτοῖς· ὃν παραγενόμενον ἀνήγαγον εἰς τὸ ὑπερῶν, καὶ παρέστησαν αὐτῷ πᾶσαι αἱ χῆραι κλαίονσαι καὶ ἐπιδεικνύμεναι χιτῶνας καὶ ἱμάτια, ὅσα ἐποίει μετ' αὐτῶν οὔσα ἡ Δορκάς. ⁴⁰ Ἐκβαλὼν δὲ ἔξω πάντας ὁ Πέτρος, καὶ θεὶς τὰ γόνατα, προσηύξατο, καὶ ἐπιστρέψας πρὸς τὸ σῶμα εἶπε, Ταβιθὰ, ἀνάστηθι. Ἡ δὲ ἤνοιξε τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς αὐτῆς, καὶ ἰδοῦσα τὸν Πέτρον ἀνεκάθισε. ⁴¹ Λοὺς δὲ αὐτῇ χεῖρα ἀνέστησεν αὐτήν· φωνήσας δὲ τοὺς ἁγίους καὶ τὰς χήρας παρέστησεν αὐτὴν ζῶσαν. ⁴² Γνωστὸν δὲ ἐγένετο καθ' ὅλης τῆς Ἰόππης· καὶ ἠέπιστευσαν πολλοὶ ἐπὶ τὸν Κύριον.

o 1 Tim. 2. 10.
Tit. 2. 7, 14.

p John 12. 11.
& 11. 45.

⁴³ Ἐγένετο δὲ ἡμέρας ἱκανὰς μείναι αὐτὸν ἐν Ἰόππῃ παρά τινι Σίμωνι βυρσεῖ.

X. ¹ Ἀνὴρ δέ τις ἐν Καισαρείᾳ ὀνόματι Κορνήλιος, ἑκατοντάρχης ἐκ σπείρης τῆς καλουμένης Ἰταλικῆς, ² εὐσεβὴς καὶ φοβούμενος τὸν Θεὸν σὺν παντὶ τῷ

a ch. 8. 2.
& 22. 12.
Ecc. 7. 18.

— στρώσον σεαυτῷ] make thy bed for thyself; do forthwith for thyself what others have hitherto done for thee.

³⁵ Σάρωνα] Saron. A fulfilment of the prophecy in Isa. xxxv. 2, "The excellency of Carmel and Sharon shall see the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God." Cp. on viii. 40. Saron is not the name of a town; but of the fertile pastoral region between Lydda and Joppa. See Jerome on Isa. xxxiii. 9. Reland, Pal. p. 370. Wetst. p. 514.

³⁶ Ἰόππῃ] Joppa; the seaport, celebrated in the history of Jonah (i. 3). Now Jaffa. See Robinson, iii. 31, and below, on x. 5.

— Ταβιθὰ] Tabitha, probably so called from her beauty. Ταβιθὰ est nomen Syriacum תרבות formatum ex תרבות 1) decus 2) capra gazella, mutato z in v. Gaudebant, scribit Buxtorfius in Lex. Talm. olim mulieres nominibus ab amabilibus et placidis animalibus petitis. Nomen Tabitha Judæis, ut Δορκὰς Græcis, usitatum erat. Vaikra Rabba Sect. 19. Tabitha, ancilla Ga malielis. Lightfoot. in Chorogr. Matthæo præmissa c. cxviii.; cp. Wetst. p. 515. Capra Gazella Orientalibus erat imago pulchritudinis, v. Cant. ii. 9. iv. 5. Hinc Rosenmüllerus et Hezeleus conjecterent ob formæ venustatem à parentibus hanc mulierem Tabitham appellatam esse. (Kuin.)

³⁷ Λούσαντες—ὑπερῷ] they washed and laid her in an upper chamber. The third instance in this book of reference to the decencies of Christian Burial. See above, viii. 2. S. Chrys. p. 753, contrasts the quietness of this laying out of Dorcas with the κοπερὶς over St. Stephen (p. 712), which he attributes to a residue of Jewish habits in the earlier Christians. Perhaps they had now learnt to regard death with greater calmness and joy. Cp. St. Paul's reproof on immoderate grief for the dead, in one of his earliest Epistles (1 Thess. iv. 13—18).

³⁸ ὀκνήσῃς—ἕως ἡμῶν] So A, B, C, E.—Elz. ὀκνήσαι—αὐτῶν. ³⁹ αἱ χῆραι] the widows of the Church. See vi. 1, and note on 1 Tim. v. 3.

— ὅσα] how many. More than δ, which. See John xxi. 25.

⁴⁰ Ταβιθὰ, ἀνάστηθι] Tabitha, arise. Words not very different from our Lord's, Ταλθα κοῦμι (Mark v. 41), but very different in the circumstances and manner with which they were uttered. See on v. 34.

⁴³ βυρσεῖ] a tanner. A proof of his humility, and a trial of the faith of the Roman Centurion Cornelius, see x. 6. The shepherds were sent by the Angel to the King, who was lying in a stable (Luke ii. 7. 12); the Roman Centurion was commanded by the Angel to send for instruction in divine things, from the royal city Cæsarea, to one Simon surnamed Peter, who lodges παρά τινι Σίμωνι βυρσεῖ. Therefore "mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate" (Rom. xii. 16). "Some have entertained Angels unawares" (Heb. xiii. 2).

CH. X. 1. Καισαρεία] Cæsarea: not to be confounded with Cæsarea Philippi (Matt. xvi. 13. Mark viii. 27).

This city is Καισάρεια Σεβαστή, ἡ παράλιος,—celebrated for its Harbour,—ἡ πρότερον Στράτωνος πύργος ἑκαλεῖτο, but called Cæsarea by Herod the Great, who beautified it, in honour of Augustus Cæsar: μεγίστη τῆς Ἰουδαίας πόλις, Joseph. Ant. xix. 8. 2, then garrisoned by the Romans; it was the capital city of the Roman Province of Judæa (Tacit. Hist. ii. 79) and the residence of the Roman Procurator. In a word, it was a miniature of Rome, in Palestine. Cp. Acts xxiii. 23. 33. Howson, ii. 344. It was afterwards celebrated as the Episcopal See of Eusebius, the Historian of the Church.

We may observe, therefore, that the Gospel made its first Conquest over Heathenism in a large City, Cæsarea, named from the Roman Cæsar, the military stronghold and naval arsenal of the Roman Power. And it made that conquest over a soldier, called Cornelius, one of the noblest Roman names borne by the Scipios and Sylla—and the mother of the Gracchi was Cornelia—and associated with the greatest victories of the Roman arms; and an officer of the Italic band, not of a Cohort raised in Syria, but of native Roman blood. This Roman soldier was "the antesignanus, or standard-bearer to us, who were heathens." See Bp. Andrewes, Sermon on Acts x. 34.

Here, as S. Chrys. says, "the Door was first opened to the Gentile world;" and concerning Cornelius, he adds (p. 738), "he was uncircumcised, and had nothing in common with the Jews." This is to be noted, because it has been said by some that Cornelius was a proselyte and not a gentile (see on v. 2).

— ἑκατοντάρχης] a centurion. The Roman supremacy of the world being one of arms.

"Tu regere imperio populos, Romane, memento, Hæ tibi erunt artes, pacisque imponere morem,
Parcere subjectis, et debellare superbos,"

(Virg. Æn. vi. 852.)

—therefore the first-fruits of the Gentile world, now under the sway of Rome, are gathered from the Roman Camp, in the seat of government of the Roman Procurator; and so the victorious power of the Gospel is made more visible, and the triumph of Christ more glorious.

This was a prelude of the future triumphs of Christianity at Rome, and in the Roman world. In the conversion of Cornelius at Cæsarea, we may see a prophetic intimation of the submission of the Great Fourth Monarchy, the Mistress of the Gentile world, and of the subjection of the military Empire of Rome to the mild yoke of the Gospel.

— σπείρης—Ἰταλικῆς] of the Italian band. Cohors Italica, levied in Italy, and distinguished from the Syrian cohorts of Cæsarea. This Cohort is probably referred to in the ancient Inscription in Gruter, 434, "COHORS MIL. ITALIC. VOLUNT. QUÆ EST IN SYRIA." See Akermann, pp. 33, 34.

2. εὐσεβὴς καὶ φοβούμενος τὸν Θεόν] i. e. a worshipper of One God, in contradistinction to polytheists and idolaters; not however a proselyte, but a Gentile, one of the ἐθνῶν. See Acts x. 45; xi. 3; xv. 7. 14, and Lightfoot, i. pp. 842—846.

οἶκῳ αὐτοῦ, ποιῶν ἐλεημοσύνας πολλὰς τῷ λαῷ, καὶ δεόμενος τοῦ Θεοῦ διαπαντός, ³ εἶδεν ἐν ὁράματι φανερώς, ὥσει περὶ ὥραν ἐνάτην τῆς ἡμέρας, ἄγγελον τοῦ Θεοῦ εἰσελθόντα πρὸς αὐτὸν, καὶ εἰπόντα αὐτῷ, Κορνήλιε. ⁴ Ὁ δὲ ἀτενίσας αὐτῷ καὶ ἔμβοσος γενόμενος εἶπε, Τί ἐστὶ, κύριε; εἶπε δὲ αὐτῷ, Αἰ προσευχαί-σου καὶ αἱ ἐλεημοσύναι σου ἀνέβησαν εἰς μνημόσυνον ⁵ ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ.
⁶ Καὶ νῦν πέμψον ἄνδρας εἰς Ἰόππην, καὶ μεταπέμψαι Σίμωνα ὃς ἐπικαλεῖται Πέτρος· ⁷ οὗτος ξενίζεται παρὰ τινι Σίμωνι βυρσεῖ, ὃ ἐστὶν οἰκία παρὰ θάλασσαν.

⁷ Ὡς δὲ ἀπῆλθεν ὁ ἄγγελος ὁ λαλῶν αὐτῷ, φωνήσας δύο τῶν οἰκετῶν, καὶ στρατιώτην εὐσεβῇ τῶν προσκαρτερούντων αὐτῷ, ⁸ καὶ ἐξηγησάμενος αὐτοῖς ἅπαντα, ἀπέστειλεν αὐτοὺς εἰς τὴν Ἰόππην.

⁹ Τῇ δὲ ἐπαύριον, ὁδοιπορούντων ἐκείνων καὶ τῇ πόλει ἐγγιζόντων, ἀνέβη Πέτρος ἐπὶ τὸ δῶμα προσεύξασθαι περὶ ὥραν ἑκτην. ¹⁰ Ἐγένετο δὲ πρόσ-— διαπαντός] continually. See Luke xxiv. 53.

³ ἐν ὁράματι] in a vision: with his eyes open. What is seen in an ὄραμα may, or may not, have an objective reality. Thus the Angel, who had such an existence, is here seen by Cornelius, ἐν ὁράματι: cp. xviii. 9; but the sheet seen by St. Peter in his ecstasy (v. 10; cp. xi. 5) is also called an ὄραμα here, vv. 17. 19.

— ὥραν ἐνάτην] the ninth hour. St. Luke in the Acts notes several important events as taking place at the ninth hour (see iii. 1; x. 30: cf. Luke xxiii. 44), the hour of our Lord's death; prefigured by the daily sacrifice,—“the evening sacrifice,”—offered at that hour. Cp. Dan. ix. 21, “Whiles I was speaking in prayer, the man Gabriel touched me about the time of the evening oblation.”

In the case of Cornelius, it may have been intimated providentially by this and other incidents, that though it was not now necessary for him to conform to the ceremonial of the Levitical Law—which was figurative and prophetic of Christ—yet he must not therefore suppose that the Levitical Law was not of Divine Institution, as well as the Gospel.

⁵ καὶ νῦν πέμψον] and now send men to Joppa; and send for Simon who is surnamed Peter. See above on ix. 6 and 43, for the argument there to be derived for the necessary uses of an appointed Ministry of the Word and Sacraments.

Hence also the Fathers infer the insufficiency of what are called moral virtues, alms, and prayers, and even a theoretical knowledge of religious evidence, such as Cornelius had (see vv. 37—43), without profession of faith in Christ, and reception into His Church; wherever these things may be had. See Severian here, and the Expositors of the XXXIX Articles, Art. xii. xviii.

But to those who, like Cornelius, use aright what they have by natural light, more is offered by God. See Anthonius here. Cornelius is represented as a person who profited, as far as he could, by the light of Reason and natural Theology. His case, therefore, is an evidence that God did not “leave Himself without a witness” in the Gentile world (Acts xiv. 17), corrupt as it was, especially at that time—the age of Tiberius and Caligula—and sunk almost to the lowest degree of demoralization, particularly in the city, the camp, and the court.

Still, Reason, Conscience, and Natural Light, were not extinct. The Moral Law was still in force; the Gentile world was responsible to God for the use it made of those gifts (see Rom. ii. 14, and Barrow, Sermon lxxi. vol. iii. p. 367); and to those who used them aright, greater degrees of light and grace were vouchsafed by God.

Thus it would appear that a difference will be made hereafter between those heathens who have, and those who have not, lived up to the law under which they were placed by God.

The following paragraphs from one of Dr. Barrow's excellent Sermons on Universal Redemption (Sermon lxxiii.) are pertinent to this and other like operations of God, as related in the Acts of the Apostles.

“Christ enjoined His Disciples, in their travels for the promulgation and propagation of the Gospel, to inquire concerning the worthiness or fitness of persons, and accordingly to make more close applications to them: Into what city or village ye enter, inquire who therein is worthy (Matt. x. 11), and entering in abide there.

“Of this proceeding we have a notable instance in Cornelius, who for his honest piety (correspondent to the proportion of knowledge vouchsafed him) was so acceptable to God, that in regard thereto he obtained from Him the revelation of truth in a peculiar and extraordinary manner. And St. Paul was another most remarkable example thereof; who for the like reason was so wonderfully called, as himself intimates, describing himself to have been ζηλωτὴς Θεοῦ, zealously affected toward God, according to the righteousness in the law blameless (Acts xxii. 3; xxiii. 1); one that had continually behaved himself with all good conscience toward God (Phil. iii. 6. Acts xxvi. 9. Gal. i. 14); who even in the persecution of God's truth did proceed with an honest meaning, and according to his conscience; for which cause he saith that God had mercy on him, foreseeing how willingly he would embrace the truth, and how earnestly promote it. We may also observe how, in the Acts of the Apostles, the Holy Spirit commonly directed the Apostles to such places where a competent number of people were well disposed to receive the truth (Acts xxvi. 1. 1 Tim. i. 3), who were εὐθετοὶ εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ (Luke ix. 62), well disposed to the kingdom of heaven; such people as the Bereans, men ingenious and tractable, who consequently entertained the word with all promptitude and alacrity. (Acts xvii. 11; xxviii. 22.)

“To such persons God sometimes, by extraordinary revelation, directed the Apostles to preach; as to the Corinthians, in respect of whom the Lord spake to St. Paul in a vision, saying, Fear not, but speak, and be not silent; for I am with thee, because πολὺς ἐστὶ μοι λαός, there is for Me much people in this city (Acts xviii. 9, 10); much people whom I see disposed to comply with My truth. So in behalf of the Macedonians, a certain man of Macedonia was in a vision seen by St. Paul, exhorting him and saying, Passing into Macedonia, help us. (Acts xvi. 9.)

“Thus, on one hand, doth God take special care that His truth be manifested to such as are fitly qualified to embrace it and use it well; thus is God ready to make good that answer of Pothinus (Bishop of Lyons, and immediate successor to St. Irenæus) to the Prefect, who asking him, who was the Christians' God, was answered, ἢν ᾧς ἄξιος, γνῶσθι, If thou be worthy, thou shalt know (Euseb. v. 1); thus, as the Wise Man divinely saith, the Divine Wisdom goeth about seeking such as are worthy of her; showeth herself favourable unto them in their ways, and meeteth them in every thought. (Wisd. vi. 16.)

“On the other hand, that God withholds the special discoveries of His truth, upon account of men's indispositions and demerits, may likewise very plainly appear. We may suppose our Lord to have observed Himself, what He ordered to His Disciples, Not to give that which is holy to dogs, nor to cast pearls before swine. (Matt. vii. 6.)” See below, xvi. 6, 7.

— Ἰόππην] Joppa. The ancient Philistine city, where Jonah had embarked in his endeavour to escape from the presence of God, and from the task of executing the divine commission against Nineveh (Jonah i. 3), is now to be made the scene of a divine vision, revealing God's gracious dispensations to the Gentile world. Contrast Jonas and Bar-Jonas here.

⁶ βυρσεῖ] a tanner: a trade in low esteem among the Jews, and regarded as little better than unclean. See the authorities in Welst. Observe, therefore, Peter's humility.

— θάλασσαν] Elz. adds οὗτος λαλήσει σοι τί σε δεῖ ποιεῖν, which is not found in A, B, C, E, G, H, and other MSS., nor in Vulg. and other Versions; and was probably introduced from ch. xi. 14. Cp. ix. 6; xxii. 10.

⁹ ὁδοιπορούντων] as they were journeying. The distance from Cæsarea to Joppa was thirty Roman miles.

— τὸ δῶμα] the house-top. See on Matt. xxiv. 17. Luke v. 19; xvii. 31, and Valck. here.

πεινος, καὶ ἤθελε γεύσασθαι παρασκευαζόντων δὲ αὐτῶν, ἐγένετο ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἔκστασις. ¹¹ Καὶ θεωρεῖ τὸν οὐρανὸν ἀνεωγμένον, καὶ καταβαῖνον σκεῦός τι, ὡς ὁθόνην μεγάλην τέσσαρσιν ἀρχαῖς δεδεμένον, καὶ καθιέμενον ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς. ¹² ἐν ᾧ ὑπῆρχε πάντα τὰ τετράποδα καὶ τὰ ἑρπετὰ τῆς γῆς καὶ τὰ πετεινὰ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ. ¹³ Καὶ ἐγένετο φωνὴ πρὸς αὐτόν, Ἀναστὰς, Πέτρε, θύσον καὶ φάγε. ¹⁴ Ὁ δὲ Πέτρος εἶπε, Μηδαμῶς, Κύριε· ὅτι οὐδέποτε ἔφαγον πᾶν

e ch. 7. 56.
& 11. 5, &c.

f Lev. 11. 4.
& 20. 25.
Deut. 14. 3, 7.
Ezek. 4. 14.

— ὥραν ἕκτην] the sixth hour. The stated hour of prayer. See note i. 1.

10. γεύσασθαι to taste (food). Hence in the modern language of Greece, γεῦμα and πρόγευμα mean dinner and breakfast. "Respondet Hebræorum verbo צַדְדִּי cui modò addunt nomen צַדְדִּי ut 1 Sam. xiv. 25, ubi Alexandrini, ἐγγέυσαστο πᾶς ὁ λαὸς ἄρτον modò צַדְדִּי nudè ponunt, quod saltem ita posuerunt Judæi recentiores, v. Buxtorffii Lex. Chald. sub h. v. Etiam verbo הִנֵּחַ apud Hebræos modò jungitur צַדְדִּי modò simpliciter ponitur, v. Gen. xliii. 25. 1 Regg. xix. 5. 7. Sic etiam legitur ap. Appian. bell. civ. lib. ii. p. 799, de Catone: περὶ ἐσπέραν ἀμφὶ λουτρὰ καὶ δείπνον ἦν καθέδμενός τε ἐγένετο, circa vesperam lotus cenabat, et sedens cibum capiebat. (Joseph. Ant. vii. 15.) Saulum regem συνηγάκασεν ἡ γυνὴ γεύσασθαι." (Kuīn.)

— παρασκευαζόντων αὐτῶν] Peter was hungering for bodily food, and the servants were making it ready for him. But at this time God was preparing for him spiritual food. Peter was to be the instrument for receiving the Gentiles into the body of the Church (see on v. 13); and therefore at this instant God invites him to partake of the animals in the sheet let down from heaven, and the messengers of Cornelius arrive. As Aug. says (Serm. 266), "Non Petro carnalis cibus affertur, sed mundatus Cornelius nutritur."

— ἐγένετο] So A, B, C, E, and others. Elz. ἐπέπεσεν.

— ἔκστασις] ecstasy. The highest kind of spiritual revelation.

There are seven extraordinary modes and degrees in which God revealed Himself in ancient times;

1. Dreams.
2. Apparitions to the person when awake.
3. Visions to him when asleep.
4. Voices from heaven.
5. Urin.
6. Inspiration, or revealing to the ear.
7. Rapture, or ecstasy, when the person was in the Spirit

(Rev. i. 10. Acts xxii. 17), and this was the highest degree of all. See Lightfoot here, i. p. 844.

11, 12. θεωρεῖ τὸν οὐρανὸν ἀνεωγμένον, καὶ καταβαῖνον σκεῦός τι — τοῦ οὐρανοῦ] he beholds the heaven opened, and a certain vessel coming down, as a great sheet. See below, xi. 5—10, where St. Peter says, εἶδον καταβαῖνον σκεῦός τι, ὡς ὁθόνην μεγάλην τέσσαρσιν ἀρχαῖς καθιέμενην ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, καὶ ἦλθεν ἄχρις ἐμοῦ.

The words δεδεμένον, καὶ are not found in A, B, E, and some Versions.

— σκεῦός] A word of wide signification for any vessel. Heb. זֶבַע. See above, ix. 15.

— ὁθόνην] linen sheet. συνδύνα (Hesych.), a linteum; ὁδύνα (cp. δοῦνα, John xix. 40) are explained in Hesych. by περιβόλαια. Cp. Luke xxiv. 12. John xv. 5—7. Linen is generally seen in Scripture as connected with what is sacred, holy, and pure; and it is not liable to be moth-eaten; "hence," says Aug., "this linen sheet is a fit emblem of the Church."

— ἀρχαῖς] beginnings: applied to the letting down of ropes or cords, as Wetst. and Valck. have shown; and after them Kuīn., who says "ἀρχὴ dicitur omne quod extremum est in aliquò re, sic de funis extremitate legitur ap. Diod. Sic. t. i. p. 109, ἀρχὴ σχοινίου. Lucian. t. iii. p. 83, δεσμῶν ἀρχάς. Eurip. Hippol. 772, πλεκτὰς πεισμάτων ἀρχάς, ubi v. Markland. Herodot. iv. 60, σπασὰς τὴν ἀρχὴν τοῦ στρόβου" ubi v. Valck."

The vessel or linen sheet here represent the Church Universal throughout the world. Its demission from heaven bespeaks its being from God the Father of all. Its four beginnings (ἀρχαί)—a word happily chosen—let down from heaven, show that its origin is from heaven; and that it hangs suspended on the divine Power and Love; and they represent its comprehensiveness and extension to the four winds of heaven. See Matt. xxiv. 31, and cp. the τέσσαρες γωνίαι τῆς γῆς, Rev. vii. 1; xx. 8.

Quatuor lineæ, discum continentes, et quibus dependebat, sunt quatuor orbis cardines, vel quatuor partes orbis terrarum, per quas tenditur Ecclesia Catholica, quæ ubique diffusa est. Augustine (Serm 149 and 266).

Some ancient Expositors (e. g. Æcumen.) speak of the four ἀρχαί (properly beginnings; "initia," Vulg.) that support the Vessel—which symbolizes the Church Universal—as a prophetic emblem of the Four Gospels, proclaiming the knowledge of Christ to the Four Corners of the world, and bringing many from the East and from the West, from the North and from the South, to sit down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob in the kingdom of God (Luke xiii. 29. Matt. viii. 11).

This suggestion deserves consideration. And it is not unworthy of remark, that each of the Four Gospels commences with a reference to their initiatory character as describing the beginning of the new Creation in Christ, which is eternal; as the Old Testament, which is the record of the Old Creation, opens in Genesis with—"In the beginning God created Heaven and Earth," i. e. the visible heavens and the earth, which have an end;

This initial character of the Gospels is declared by the word ἀρχὴ or ἀρχομαι at the beginning of each of the Four, thus,— Matt. iv. 17, ἤρξατο ὁ Ἰησοῦς κηρῶσαι.

Mark i. 1, ἀρχὴ εὐαγγελίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

Luke i. 2, οἱ ἀπ' ἀρχῆς αὐτόπται.

iii. 23, ἦν ὥσελ ἐτῶν τριάκοντα ἀρχόμενος, i. e. at the beginning of his Ministry.

John i. 1, ἐν ἀρχῇ ἦν ὁ Λόγος.

Hence in the opening of the Acts of the Apostles, as if to mark that the Gospel is the Beginning of the new life which never ends, St. Luke says (i. 1), ὃν ἤρξατο ὁ Ἰησοῦς ποιεῖν τε καὶ διδάσκειν, in reference to its History. See the note there.

Lastly, the sacred Canon of both Testaments closes with the words, Ἐγὼ εἰμι τὸ Α καὶ τὸ Ω, Ἀρχὴ καὶ τέλος (Rev. xxi. 13).

The Gospel, as thus viewed, both supports and elevates the Church; it is that by which the invisible Hand of God maintains and keeps it together, and by which He raises it to heaven.

It may indeed be objected, that the Four Gospels had not then all been written. No; nor had the Vessel of the Church been extended to all the world: nor, as yet, had it enclosed any unclean animals. The vision was not a History of the Past; but it was a Prophecy of the Future extending forward to all time.

This symbol is not unlike to that of the Four Evangelical Cherubim in Ezekiel and the Apocalypse, on which the Spirit of God rides, as on a chariot-like throns, into all lands. See above, Introduction to the Gospels, p. xli.

The "four-footed beasts," &c., are representatives of all Nations. Observe the definite Article τὰ. And in this respect S. Augustine (c. Faust. xii. 15) compares it to the Ark, another figure of the Church, because commensurate with the world: "Cuncta genera animalium in Arca clauduntur, sicut omnes Gentes; quas etiam Petro demonstratus ille discus significat; omnes Gentes, quæ pertinent ad quatuor partes orbis terræ quâ disseminatur Ecclesia, quam significant quatuor lineæ, quibus Vas illud connectebatur."

The sheet, which was let down from heaven to earth, was drawn up again (ἀνελήφθη, v. 16; ἀνεσπάσθη, xi. 10) into heaven, showing that all are designed by God to be inheritors of heaven, all are δεκτοὶ Θεῷ in Christ (x. 34, 35).

This act of drawing up also shows, that after the pilgrimage of the Church Militant on earth, it will be received up and glorified in heaven. "Post hujus sæculi conversationem, quâ per Fidem et Baptismum mundata peregrinatur Ecclesia, cœlestis habitatio felix et æterna sequitur." (Bede).

Compare Rev. xxi. 2, where the Holy City, the new Jerusalem, the Church glorified, is seen coming down from heaven.

13. θύσον καὶ φάγε] slay and eat. The act of eating is here represented as figurative of receiving into communion or incorporation;

The prophet Ezekiel (iii. 1) and St. John (Rev. x. 9) are commanded to eat a roll or book, in order to receive its spirit and its words into themselves. So Peter is commanded to eat these animals, in order that he may know that the Gentiles are to be incorporated through his ministry into the Church, or body of Christ;

"Occide et manduca, ut interficiatur in iis vita præterita et transeant in corpus tuum, tanquam in novam vitam societatis Ecclesiæ; ut tanquam mundus cibus incorporentur Ecclesiæ," S. Aug. Serm. 149. "Occide in gentibus quod erant, et fac quod es," Bede.

Here then "Petrus figuram gestat Ecclesiæ," and according to Christ's promise (Matt. xvi. 19) he is to be Christ's agent in g Matt. 15. 11.

Rom. 14. 14.
h ver. 28.
Matt. 15. 11.
1 Cor. 10. 25.
1 Tim. 4. 4.

κοινὸν ἢ ἀκαθάρτον. ¹⁵ Ἔ Καὶ φωνὴ πάλιν ἐκ δευτέρου πρὸς αὐτόν, Ὁ Θεὸς ἐκαθάρισε, ^h σὺ μὴ κοῖνον. ¹⁶ Τοῦτο δὲ ἐγένετο ἐπὶ τρίς· καὶ εὐθὺς ἀνελήφθη τὸ σκεῦος εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν.

¹⁷ Ὡς δὲ ἐν ἑαυτῷ διηπόρει ὁ Πέτρος, τί ἂν εἴη τὸ ὄραμα ὃ εἶδε, καὶ ἰδόν, οἱ ἄνδρες οἱ ἀπεσταλμένοι ἀπὸ τοῦ Κορνηλίου, διερωτήσαντες τὴν οἰκίαν τοῦ Σίμωνος, ἐπέστησαν ἐπὶ τὸν πυλῶνα. ¹⁸ καὶ φωνήσαντες ἐπυνθάνοντο, εἰ Σίμων ὁ ἐπικαλούμενος Πέτρος ἐνθάδε ξενίζεται. ¹⁹ Τοῦ δὲ Πέτρου διενθυμουμένου περὶ τοῦ ὁράματος, εἶπεν αὐτῷ τὸ Πνεῦμα, Ἴδου, ἄνδρες τρεῖς ζητοῦσί σε ²⁰ ἄλλὰ ἀναστὰς κατάβηθι, καὶ πορεύου σὺν αὐτοῖς, μηδὲν διακρινόμενος, ὅτι ἐγὼ ἀπέσταλκα αὐτούς. ²¹ Καταβὰς δὲ Πέτρος πρὸς τοὺς ἄνδρας εἶπεν, Ἴδου, ἐγὼ εἰμι ὃν ζητεῖτε· τίς ἡ αἰτία δι' ἣν πάρεστε; ²² Οἱ δὲ εἶπον, Κορνήλιος ἑκατοντάρχης, ἀνὴρ δίκαιος καὶ φοβούμενος τὸν Θεόν, μαρτυρούμενός τε ὑπὸ ὅλου τοῦ ἔθνους τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἐχρηματίσθη ὑπὸ ἀγγέλου ἁγίου μεταπέμψασθαί σε εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἀκοῦσαι ῥήματα παρὰ σοῦ. ²³ Εἰσκαλεσάμενος οὖν αὐτοὺς ἐξένισε.

i ch. 15. 7.

Τῇ δὲ ἐπαύριον ἀναστὰς ἐξῆλθε σὺν αὐτοῖς, καὶ τινες τῶν ἀδελφῶν τῶν ἀπὸ Ἰόππης συνῆλθον αὐτῷ. ²⁴ τῇ δὲ ἐπαύριον εἰσῆλθον εἰς τὴν Καισάρειαν· ὁ δὲ Κορνήλιος ἦν προσδοκῶν αὐτοὺς, συγκαλεσάμενος τοὺς συγγενεῖς αὐτοῦ καὶ τοὺς ἀναγκαίους φίλους.

²⁵ Ὡς δὲ ἐγένετο τοῦ εἰσελθεῖν τὸν Πέτρον, συναντήσας αὐτῷ ὁ Κορνήλιος, opening the door of the Church, or Kingdom of Heaven, to all Nations by the Keys of the Word and Sacraments. He is to be Christ's instrument for incorporating the Gentiles in the Church by communion with them.

14. οὐδέποτε—πάν κοινόν] On the Hebraism οὐ πᾶς = none, see Matt. xiv. 22.

On the Levitical distinction between clean and unclean animals, and on the moral purposes of it, see Aug. Sermon. 149. 4, and Rev. Wm. Jones (of Nayland), "Zoologia Ethica," Works, ii. 107.

The Jewish Rabbis allowed that in the time of the Messiah no animals would be unclean. See R. Moyses and R. Salomon on Gen. ix. 8.

15, 16. φωνὴ πάλιν ἐκ δευτέρου—ἐπὶ τρίς] It was done three times, for greater assurance, and for more solemn admonition. Repetition is usual in divine Visions and Prophecies, Gen. xli. 23—32; xxxvii. 6—10. So in Daniel's Visions (Dan. ii. and vii.) the same thing is represented twice.

See above, Introduction to the Gospels, p. xlv, on Repetition as a characteristic of Inspiration; and below, the Introduction to the Book of Revelation.

S. Chrys. and S. Aug. (Serm. 149) suggest another reason why it is mentioned that this linen sheet, held by its four corners, was let down three times. The whole world as a Church is purified and cleansed by God; and this cleansing is effected by immersion in the waters of Baptism in the Name of the Holy Trinity. "In Nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti, credentes innovantur, ut pertineant ad communionem sanctorum." So also Æcumen.

The four corners intimate the extension of the Church to the Four Winds of heaven; and the multiplication of the number Four into the other number here specified, Three, produces the number Twelve, which is specially characteristic of the Church of Christ, extended to the Four Quarters of the Globe, and baptized in the Name of the Trinity by the ministry of the Twelve Apostles and their successors, and militant here on earth, and glorified hereafter in heaven. See above on Matt. x. 2, and Augustine, quoted there, and cp. Rev. vii. 5—8; xii. 1; xxi. 12. 14. 16. 21; xxii. 2.

15. ὃ ὁ Θεὸς ἐκαθάρισε] what God did cleanse. Observe the aorist ἐκαθάρισε. God cleansed all Nations by one single act. He cleansed the Gentiles who were unclean according to the Law, by the Blood of His dear Son, shed once for all on the cross. S. Irenæus in Caten. Cp. Eph. ii. 13. 16. Acts xv. 9.

—μὴ κοῖνον] do not call common, do not deem unclean,—μὴ ἀκαθάρτον νόμιζε. (Hesych.)

On κοινός, common, profane, unclean, see Mark vii. 21. This usage of language, when a person is said to make what he treats as made, is very common, especially in prophecy—"ubi res dicitur fieri, quando facienda prænuntiatur." Isa. vi. 10. Jer. i. 10.

Ezek. xliii. 3. Zech. xi. 13. See Glass. Phil. p. 364—6, and Valck. here, who refers to Thom. Mag., γεννᾷ ὁ Πλάτων τὸν οὐρανόν, i. e. γεννῶν τὸν λέγει. So in Levit. xiii. 3. 13. 17, the Priest, who declares the Leper unclean or the contrary, is said μαλινεῖν and καθαρίζειν.

19. εἶπε τὸ Πνεῦμα] the Spirit said, a proof of the personality of the Holy Ghost. Cp. xiii. 2. 4, for another proof of the Divinity and Personality of the Holy Ghost, and see Æcumen.

20. ἐγὼ ἀπέσταλκα αὐτούς] I have sent them. What God does, that the Spirit is said to do. (Chrys.) The Spirit is God.

21. τοὺς ἄνδρας] Elz. adds τοὺς ἀπεσταλμένους ἀπὸ τοῦ Κορνηλίου πρὸς αὐτόν. But this is not in A, B, C, D, and other MSS., nor in Vulg. and other Versions.

22. ἐχρηματίσθη] was commanded as by an oracle (χρηστήριον). See Matt. ii. 12. Cornelius had therefore related the Vision to others, before he knew of any result from it. An answer to the objections of those who suppose that the Vision was a delusion, or contrived after the event; a remark which will not be deemed unnecessary by those, who are, in any degree, familiar with the cavils of scepticism against the historic veracity of the supernatural agency revealed in this divine book.

23. τῇ ἐπαύριον] on the morrow. He waits from soon after noon (v. 9) till the next day. There are no marks of a heated imagination here. St. Peter had seen a Vision; and he hears of another Vision of an Angel desiring that he should be sent for to Cæsarea. But he waits till the morrow. Though by natural temperament he was eager and forward, the Holy Spirit in him was a Spirit of caution and circumspection, prudence and wisdom; not of rashness and haste.

25. ὡς ἐγένετο τοῦ εἰσελθεῖν] Elz. omits τοῦ, but it is found in A, B, C, E, and other MSS., and has been received by recent Editors.

It has been alleged by some (e. g. Meyer, p. 203) that such an use of τοῦ before an infinitive is unauthorized, and is a grammatical error, incapable of analysis, and is to be ascribed to an oversight of the writer, either in composition or transcription. But it is not without example. See Luke xvii. 1, ἀνένδεκτόν ἐστι τοῦ μὴ ἐλθεῖν σκάνδαλα.

And these two remarkable instances of this construction connect the Author of the third Gospel with the Writer of the Acts. And thus the rarity of the combination has its use in supplying evidence to the student of Scripture.

One or two other instances of the use may be seen in Winer, § 44, p. 293. The analysis of the expression does not seem difficult. The phrase means, "When the hour arrived, so long expected, of Peter's arrival." In like manner, the other kindred expression in St. Luke's Gospel may be explained (xvii. 1), ἀνένδεκτόν ἐστι τοῦ μὴ ἐλθεῖν τὰ σκάνδαλα, i. e. the time of the non-existence of offences is not admissible in this world, it is to be looked for only in the world to come.

πεσὼν ἐπὶ τοὺς πόδας προσεκύνησεν. ²⁶ ^k Ὁ δὲ Πέτρος ἤγειρεν αὐτὸν λέγων, ^k ch. 14. 14, 15.
 Ἀνάστηθι· κἀγὼ αὐτὸς ἄνθρωπός εἰμι. ²⁷ Καὶ συνομιλῶν αὐτῷ εἰσῆλθε, καὶ ^{Rev.} 19. 10.
 εὐρίσκει συνελθλυθότας πολλοὺς, ²⁸ ^l ἔφη τε πρὸς αὐτούς, Ὑμεῖς ἐπίστασθε ¹ John 4. 9.
 ὡς ἀθέμιτόν ἐστιν ἀνδρὶ Ἰουδαίῳ κολλᾶσθαι ἢ προσέρχεσθαι ἄλλοφύλῳ· καὶ ^{& 18. 28.}
 ἐμοὶ ὁ Θεὸς ἔδειξε μηδένα κοινὸν ἢ ἀκάθαρτον λέγειν ἄνθρωπον. ²⁹ Διὸ καὶ ἀναντιρρήτως ἦλθον μεταπεμφθεῖς· πυνθάνομαι οἶν, τίνι λόγῳ μετεπέμψασθέ με; ³⁰ ^m Καὶ ὁ Κορνήλιος ἔφη, Ἀπὸ τετάρτης ἡμέρας μέχρι ταύτης τῆς ὥρας ^m ch. 1. 10.
 ἡμῖν νηστεύων, καὶ τὴν ἐννάτην ὥραν προσευχόμενος ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ μου· καὶ ^{Matt.} 28. 3.
 ἰδοὺ, ἀνὴρ ἔστη ἐνώπιόν μου ἐν ἐσθῇτι λαμπρᾷ, ³¹ καὶ φησι, Κορνήλιε, ⁿ εἰς- ⁿ ver. 4, &c. ηκούσθη σοῦ ἡ προσευχή, καὶ αἱ ἐλεημοσύναι σου ἐμνήσθησαν ἐνώπιον τοῦ ^{Dan.} 10. 12.
 Θεοῦ. ³² Πέμψον οὖν εἰς Ἰόππην, καὶ μετακάλεσαι Σίμωνα ὃς ἐπικαλεῖται ^{Heb.} 6. 10.
 Πέτρος· οὗτος ξενίζεται ἐν οἰκίᾳ Σίμωνος βυρσέως παρὰ θάλασσαν· ὃς παραγενόμενος λαλήσει σοι. ³³ Ἐξαυτῆς οὖν ἔπεμψα πρὸς σε· σύ τε καλῶς ἐποίησας παραγενόμενος. Νῦν οὖν πάντες ἡμεῖς ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ πάρεσμεν ἀκοῦσαι πάντα τὰ προστεταγμένα σοι ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ.
³⁴ Ὁ Ἀνοίξας δὲ Πέτρος τὸ στόμα εἶπεν, Ἐπ' ἀληθείας καταλαμβάνομαι, ὅτι ^o Deut. 10. 17.
 οὐκ ἔστι προσωπολήπτης ὁ Θεός· ³⁵ ἀλλ' ἐν παντὶ ἔθνη ὁ φοβούμενος αὐτὸν ² Chron. 19. 7.
 καὶ ἐργαζόμενος δικαιοσύνην δεκτὸς αὐτῷ ἔστι. ³⁶ ^p Τὸν λόγον, ὃν ἀπέστειλε ^{Rom.} 2. 11.
 τοῖς υἱοῖς Ἰσραὴλ, εὐαγγελιζόμενος εἰρήνην διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, οὗτός ἐστι ^{Eph.} 6. 9. πάντων Κύριος, ³⁷ ^q ὑμεῖς οἴδατε, τὸ γενόμενον ῥῆμα καθ' ὅλης τῆς Ἰουδαίας, ^{Col.} 3. 25.
¹ Pet. 1. 17.
^p Isa. 57. 19.
^{Eph.} 2. 14, 16, 17.
^{Rom.} 10. 12.
^q Luke 4. 14.

— προσεκύνησεν] he worshipped. Such homage, not uncommon among *Oriental*s, was unknown to the countrymen of Cornelius, Romans, except in divine worship, and was therefore forbidden by St. Peter in the words "Stand up; I also am a man," not a superior spirit.

St. Peter, great as he was, would not permit any one, even a heathen, to do this. What then shall we say of other men who allow it? asks Ammonius here. And what shall we say of him who calls himself St. Peter's successor, and yet seats himself on the high Altar of St. Peter's Church, in order that his feet may be kissed by Bishops and others, bowing and kneeling before him? See the Ceremoniale Romanum, iii. 1. 1, and other Roman authorities quoted in the Editor's Lectures on the Apocalypse, pp. 339. 340, 2nd ed. Appendix, pp. 163, 164, and below, notes on the Apocalypse, chap. xiii.

27. καὶ συνομιλῶν] Peter not only declined the προσεκύνησις, or adoration, but entered in with Cornelius, and conversed with him side by side, thus showing his humility, and also his compliance with the divine revelation, that he should consider no man common or unclean. On ὁμιλεῖν, to talk, see only by St. Luke in this sense, see Luke xxiv. 14, 15. Acts xx. 11; xxiv. 26.

30. ἀπὸ τετάρτης ἡμέρας] four days ago. So 2 Cor. viii. 10; ix. 2, ἀπὸ πέντε, a year ago. Cp. John xi. 18; xxi. 8.

— μέχρι ταύτης τῆς ὥρας] i. e. to three o'clock. See chap. x. 3.

— ὥραν] Omitted by A, B, C, D. And it is probable that (as Bornemann observes) ἐννάτην is a gloss upon ταύτης; and that the true reading is νηστεύων καὶ προσευχόμενος.

— ἀνὴρ] a man. So modest is Cornelius, he does not call him an angel who had praised him so highly, and yet by the purport of his words he represents him as coming from ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ. (Chrys.) Cp. i. 10.

31. ἡ προσευχή] See the power of Prayer. (Chrys.)

33. καλῶς ἐποίησας] An observable phrase. It is not the language of approval, on the Centurion's part, of St. Peter's conduct. This would ill have accorded with his humility. But it is an idiomatic and elegant expression of courtesy and gratitude—a "welcome," "Benè est quod venisti—multum amo te," As Casaubon on Cicero, ad Att. i. 1, observes, it has been often rendered erroneously. Cp. St. Paul's words, Phil. iv. 14. 2 Pet. i. 19. 3 John 6. See Valck. here.

35. δεκτός] = נָשָׂא, from נָשָׂא voluntas (cp. ἀρέσκω, ἀρεστός), to be translated acceptable, capable of being accepted, rather than actually accepted. (Severian, Caten. p. 173.) No one is accepted, except ἐν τῷ ἡγαπημένῳ, Eph. i. 6. (See Chrys. and others here.) Cp. Luke iv. 24. Phil. iv. 18. 2 Cor. vi. 2.

In Him, and Him alone, all Nations are blessed. As Bengel says well, "Non indifferentismus Religionum, sed indifferentia Nationum, hic asseritur." Cp. Art. XVIII. of the Church of England.

36. τὸν λόγον κ.τ.λ.] As Meyer and Winer observe, the three clauses, τὸν λόγον v. 36, τὸ γενόμενον ῥῆμα v. 37, Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον, seem to be put in apposition, and to depend on ὑμεῖς οἴδατε, and οὗτός ἐστι πάντων Κύριος is introduced parenthetically. So the Authorized Version. ῥῆμα means more than λόγος. λόγος is the Word; but ῥῆμα is the Matter or thing declared by the Word (see Luke i. 37; ii. 15); and τὸ ῥῆμα γενόμενον κ. δ. τ. ἴ. is the matter published which came or was proclaimed throughout all Jewry.

Valck. compares the similar structure in another speech of the same Apostle, Acts ii. 22—36.

We may also compare a similar remarkable transition from λόγος to ῥῆμα in an Epistle of this same Apostle, St. Peter, speaking of Christ preached. See 1 Peter i. 23—25.

It has indeed been said by some, that Cornelius could not have known the facts here mentioned. But let it be remembered, that he was quartered at Cæsarea,—a centurion of the Italian band,—and probably had often attended the Roman Procurator, who resided at Cæsarea, in the periodical visits which he made to Jerusalem, to be present at the annual Jewish festivals for the purpose of maintaining order there.

He might have conversed with other soldiers who had been there on those occasions. He might have conversed with the faithful Centurion of Capernaum (Luke vii. 2—9), perhaps with the Centurion who stood at the Cross (Matt. xxvii. 54. Luke xxiii. 47), perhaps with the soldiers who had watched the sepulchre, and had been affrighted by the earthquake, and thus have heard of the Resurrection.

Besides (as Chrys. suggests), this speech was not only intended for Cornelius and his friends, but also for the Jews who were with Peter, and to whom he appeals as witnesses of what he says, and it was designed to justify his own communion with the Gentiles.

Accordingly, it is observable that St. Peter is careful to represent the Jews as receiving, by virtue of their prerogative, the first offer of the Gospel from Christ. The word, he says, was sent to the children of Israel; τηρεῖ τὴν εὐγένειαν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις.

"In this speech (says Bede) St. Peter briefly sums up all the articles of the Creed, viz. that Jesus is the Christ, the Lord of all; sent to reconcile the world to God; preached by the Baptist; anointed by the Spirit; manifested in miracles by God dwelling in Him; crucified; raised from the dead; seen alive after His Resurrection; and the Future Judge of all at the end of the world; and that He will extend His Church by Faith throughout the World." See also p. 114 of the Rev. F. C. Cook's edition of the Acts; containing many excellent practical and devotional suggestions.

r Luke 4. 18.

s ch. 2. 32.

t ch. 2. 24.

u ch. 13. 31.
Luke 24. 30, 43.v ch. 17. 31.
Rom. 14. 10.
2 Cor. 5. 10.w Jer. 31. 34.
Micah 7. 18.
ch. 15. 9.

x ch. 15. 8.

ἀρξάμενον ἀπὸ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, μετὰ τὸ βάπτισμα ὃ ἐκήρυξεν Ἰωάννης, ³⁸ ἰη-σούν τον ἀπὸ Ναζαρετ, ὡς ἔχρισεν αὐτὸν ὁ Θεὸς Πνεύματι ἀγίῳ καὶ δυνάμει, ὃς διήλθεν εὐεργετῶν καὶ ἰώμενος πάντας τοὺς καταδυναστευομένους ὑπὸ τοῦ Διαβόλου, ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς ἦν μετ' αὐτοῦ. ³⁹ Καὶ ἡμεῖς μάρτυρες πάντων ὧν ἐποίησεν ἔν τε τῇ χώρᾳ τῶν Ἰουδαίων καὶ ἐν Ἱερουσαλὴμ· ὃν καὶ ἀνείλον κρεμάσαντες ἐπὶ ξύλου. ⁴⁰ Τοῦτον ὁ Θεὸς ἤγειρε τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, καὶ ἔδωκεν αὐτὸν ἐμφανῇ γενέσθαι, ⁴¹ οὐ παντὶ τῷ λαῷ, ἀλλὰ μάρτυσι τοῖς προκεχειροτουημένοις ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῖν, οἵτινες συνεφάγομεν καὶ συνεπίομεν αὐτῷ μετὰ τὸ ἀναστῆναι αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν. ⁴² Καὶ παρήγγειλεν ἡμῖν κηρῦξαι τῷ λαῷ, καὶ διαμαρτύρασθαι, ὅτι αὐτός ἐστιν ὁ ὠρισμένος ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ κριτὴς ζώντων καὶ νεκρῶν. ⁴³ Τούτῳ πάντες οἱ προφῆται μαρτυροῦσιν, ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν λαβεῖν διὰ τοῦ ὀνόματος αὐτοῦ πάντα τὸν πιστεύοντα εἰς αὐτόν.

⁴⁴ Ἐτι λαλοῦντος τοῦ Πέτρου τὰ ῥήματα ταῦτα, ἐπέπεσε τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον ἐπὶ πάντας τοὺς ἀκούοντας τὸν λόγον· ⁴⁵ καὶ ἐξέστησαν οἱ ἐκ περιτομῆς πιστοὶ, ὅσοι συνήλθον τῷ Πέτρῳ, ὅτι καὶ ἐπὶ τὰ ἔθνη ἡ δωρεὰ τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος ἐκ-κέχυται· ⁴⁶ ἤκουον γὰρ αὐτῶν λαλοῦντων γλώσσαις, καὶ μεγαλυνόντων τὸν Θεόν.

Τότε ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Πέτρος· ⁴⁷ Μήτι τὸ ὕδωρ κωλύσαι δύναται τις τοῦ μὴ

37. ἀρξάμενον] A, C, D, E; H have ἀρξάμενος, but compare Luke xxiv. 47.

38. ἔχρισεν] a preparation for the word Χριστιανοί, xi. 26.

41. οἵτινες συνεφάγομεν] us who ate with them. See S. Ignatius ad Smyrn. 3 (who seems to refer to these words of St. Peter)—μετὰ τὴν ἀνάστασιν συνεφάγεον αὐτοῖς καὶ σύνέπιεν.

See also the note of Severus, Archbishop of Antioch, here (in Catená, p. 188), who calls this eating of our Lord, after His Resurrection, καινὴν βρώσιν, because οὐ κατὰ χρεῖαν ἔφαγε καὶ ἔπιεν, ἀλλὰ πιστούμενος καὶ ἐπιδεικνύων τοῖς οἰκείοις μαθηταῖς, καὶ τοῖς μετὰ ταῦτα δεῖ κείνων (read διὰ κείνων) πιστεύειν μέλλουσι τὴν ἀληθῆ φύσιν τοῦ σώματος, ὃ καὶ πέπονθεν ἐκὼν, καὶ ἀνέστη θεο-πρεπῶς, πανταχόθεν ἀπελαύνων τὴν τῆς ἐπαράτου δοκῆσεως (the heresy of the Docetæ) καὶ φαντασίας ὑπόνοιαν.

42. κριτὴς] Judge. On the certainty of a Future Judgment, see Barrow's Sermon on this text, vol. v. 129—160.

44. ἔτι λαλοῦντος] while he was yet speaking. See the dispensation of God. He did not allow Peter to finish his speech, and to command them to be baptized. But God anticipated him, and showed that He knew their hearts; and the Holy Spirit came, and so provided an answer and defence for St. Peter against those who would charge him with surrendering the privileges of the Jews, and with a breach of the Law of God by communion with the Gentiles. (Chrys.)

44—46. ἐπέπεσε τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον—λαλοῦντων γλώσσαις] the Holy Spirit fell on them, as the Holy Spirit fell at the day of Pentecost on the Apostles. See xi. 15, 16. He fell on them while Peter was preaching the Word; and thus the Word was confirmed; and He fell on them while hearing the Word. And they who were present heard them speak with tongues—

“ Spiritus almus

Indulgens varias opulento munere linguas
Implevit sine more domum,” (Arator,) —showing by the same sign that the same gift was bestowed on them who were Gentiles at Cæsarea, as had been vouchsafed to the first believers at Jerusalem; and that therefore the Holy Spirit is not limited to place, time, or person, but is offered to all persons, in all places, at all times.

It is, indeed, affirmed by some (e. g. Meyer, p. 210), that this manifestation at Cæsarea was altogether different from that at Jerusalem, on the day of Pentecost: and that the expression γλώσσαις λαλεῖν, as used here and in xix. 6, and I Cor. xiv. 18, does not mean “to speak in foreign languages,” as it does in Acts ii. 4, but it means only to speak with tongues not guided or controlled by the νοῦς, or reason of the speakers, but moved by the Holy Ghost.

But this theory destroys the force of St. Peter's subsequent argument and comment on this manifestation. See Acts xi. 15, 17, where he states that as he began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them (i. e. on the Gentile Cornelius and on his companions) as on us at the beginning. Then remembered I the Word of the Lord, how that He said, “John indeed baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost.” Here St. Peter comprehends Cornelius in the same promise with the Apostles; and he adds, “Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as He did unto us, what was I that I could withstand God?”

Since, then, the disciples at Jerusalem, at Pentecost, had the power of speaking in foreign tongues, Cornelius and the Gentiles with him at Cæsarea had the same power also.

It is indeed probable, that this power of speaking foreign languages was not long continued to those who had not, like the Apostles, occasion to use them in preaching to foreign nations.

But if Cornelius and his Gentile companions had not received the same spiritual gift as the Apostles received at first, it never would have been inferred by St. Peter, or have been acknowledged by the Jewish Christians, as it was, that the Gentiles were to be admitted to the same spiritual privileges as those of the Circumcision, who believed in Christ. See xi. 18.

Besides, as Aug. observes (Serm. 99), there was another reason for this gift to the Gentiles, as well as to the Jews and Proselytes, in the first age of the Church: “Tunc (i. e. in the first age of the Church) sic dabatur Spiritus Sanctus, ut etiam appareret datus. Qui enim Eum accipiebant linguas omnium gentium loquebantur, ut significarent Ecclesiam, in gentibus, linguas omnium locuturam.”

46. ἤκουον] they were hearing them speak with tongues; the imperfect tense marks continuance. Cp. what is said of the miracle at Pentecost itself, ii. 6.

47. μήτι τὸ ὕδωρ κωλύσαι δ. τ.] Now that they have received the Spirit, can any man forbid the water of Baptism (τὸ ὕδωρ), which is necessary for their reception into the Church; according to Christ's saying, “Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God?” (John iii. 5.) A reply, by anticipation, to those Jewish Christians who would have forbidden baptism to the Gentiles. (Chrys.)

“Non dicit, habent Spiritum, ergo aquâ carere possunt” (Bengel): but he commands them to be baptized; a warning to Quakers and others, who profess that they have the Spirit, and do not therefore need the outward means of grace. St. Peter teaches them to invert the argument. If men have the Spirit, they ought also to have the water; and if men refuse the water, it may be presumed that they have not the Spirit.

Two important questions arise here:—

(1) Why were these converts not baptized first, before the Holy Spirit was given?

(2) If the Holy Spirit was given, as we have seen it was, before Baptism,—is Baptism necessary,—and is Confirmation necessary,—for the reception of the Holy Ghost?

These questions have been considered and answered by the Ancient Fathers as follows:—

(1) Probably St. Peter would not have readily admitted them to Baptism, unless he had heard them prophesying, and had seen the Holy Ghost resting upon them. Therefore he asked, “Can any one forbid them the water, now that they have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?” thus persuading the Jews, who were with him, and intimating that unless the Holy Spirit had rested upon them, there would have been some who βαπτισθῆναι τούτους, οἵτινες τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον ἔλαβον, καθὼς καὶ ἡμεῖς ; ⁴⁸ ^y προσέταξε τε αὐτοὺς βαπτισθῆναι ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Κυρίου.

y 1 Cor. 1. 17.
 ch. 8. 16.

Τότε ἠρώτησαν αὐτὸν ἐπιμεῖναι ἡμέρας τινάς.

XI. ¹ Ἦκουσαν δὲ οἱ ἀπόστολοι καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ οἱ ὄντες κατὰ τὴν Ἰουδαίαν, ὅτι καὶ τὰ ἔθνη ἐδέξαντο τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ.

² ^a Καὶ ὅτε ἀνέβη Πέτρος εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, διεκρίνοντο πρὸς αὐτὸν οἱ ἐκ περι-τομῆς ³ ^b λέγοντες, Ὅτι εἰσῆλθες πρὸς ἄνδρας ἀκροβυστίαν ἔχοντας, καὶ συν-ἔφαγες αὐτοῖς.

a ch. 10. 45.
 Gal. 2. 12.
 b ch. 10. 28.

⁴ Ἀρξάμενος δὲ Πέτρος ἐξετίθετο αὐτοῖς καθεξῆς λέγων, ⁵ ^c Ἐγὼ ἤμην ἐν πόλει Ἰόππῃ προσευχόμενος, καὶ εἶδον ἐν ἐκστάσει ὄραμα, καταβαίνον σκευὸς τι, ὡς ὁθόνην μεγάλην τέσσαρσιν ἀρχαῖς καθιεμένην ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, καὶ ἦλθεν would have forbidden them Baptism. S. Irenæus (Caten. p. 183, c. Hæres. iii. 12.)

c ch. 10. 9.

If any one inquires, How it was that Cornelius, and they that were with him, were allowed to receive the Holy Ghost before Baptism, let him know that this was with a view to the debate that afterwards arose, between St. Peter and those of the Circumcision. S. Cyril (in Caten. p. 190.)

This is evident from what follows in ch. xi. 2, where St. Peter shows that καλῶσαι τὸ ὕδωρ would have been καλῶσαι τὸν Θεόν (see xi. 17).

It appears from xi. 18, that the debate was appeased by reference to the fact here stated; and it is clear, that there would have been a schism in the Church, unless such a divine manifestation as the descent of the Holy Spirit, enabling them to speak with tongues, had been made, to authorize the act of St. Peter in admitting Cornelius, and other Gentiles with him, into the Church by Baptism.

Hence S. Augustine says (Serm. 99), "Cum dubitarent qui erant cum Petro, utrum incircumcisi baptizandi essent, . . . ut hanc Deus tolleret questionem, cum loquitur Petrus, venit Spiritus Sanctus; implevit Cornelium, implevit illos qui cum illo erant; et ipsa attestazione rei magnæ quasi clamatum est (à Spiritu ad Petrum) Quid de aquâ dubitas? jam Ego hic sum."

So again (Serm. 266), "Ante Baptismum venit Spiritus Sanctus; de potestate, non de necessitate. Venit ante Baptismum ablutionis, ut auferret controversiam circumcisionis." See also Aug. in Ps. xcvi.

(2) Another reason why the Holy Ghost was given before Baptism, was, that it might be understood by all, that though men are tied to the use of the means which God has been pleased to appoint for the reception of divine grace, yet God's power is not tied to means. As Hugo says (de Sacram. i. 5), "In potestate Dei est præter Sacramenta hominem salvare: sed in potestate hominis non est sine istis ad salutem pervenire."

Hence it is evident, that the grace which He has given us by means—such as the Sacraments, and by Confirmation,—does not reside in, or proceed from the means, but from Him who has appointed the means; and that the means are only channels, and He is the sole source of Grace and Salvation to man. The minister is one thing, the Ministry is another; the Author and Giver of all is God.

As Chrys. says (p. 191), "No one can forbid the Holy Spirit from descending, even before Baptism." And Aug. (Serm. 276), "Behold now the fulfilment of what our Lord says, 'the wind bloweth where it listeth' (John iii. 8). And to use the words of Hooker (V. liii. 4), 'It is not ordinarily God's will to bestow the grace of Sacraments on any but by the Sacraments, which grace they that receive by Sacraments receive from Him, and not from them' (see also VII. vi. 10). And therefore we may add with him (V. lx. 4), 'If Christ Himself, who gives us salvation, do require Baptism, it is not for us that look for salvation, to examine Him whether unbaptized men may be saved; but seriously to do what is required, and religiously to fear the danger which may grow from the want thereof.'"

(3) Indeed, it may be added, "Exceptio probat regulam; and 'Privilegium probat Legem.'"

We have seen the reason of the extraordinary effusion of the Holy Ghost, in this special case of the first Gentile converts before Baptism. We find that it is a solitary case. We find also, that to the Jewish Converts the full effusion had not been vouchsafed before Baptism, nor till they were confirmed by the laying on of the Apostles' hands (see above on viii. 14—17). And we find that other succeeding converts were baptized; and that they received the imposition of hands before they received the full effusion, visibly and audibly, of the Holy Ghost (Acts xix. 5, 6). And it is evident, that the Apostle St. Peter judged Baptism to be the Sacrament of admission into Christ's Church; for otherwise he would not have commanded these to be baptized, who had received visibly and audibly the gift of the Holy Ghost. See this point well argued by S. Cyril. Hierosolym., Cateches. iii. p. 41, Κορνήλιος ἦν ἀνὴρ δίκαιος κ.τ.λ. We do not indeed read, that Peter laid his hands on Cornelius and the other Gentile Converts; with reverence therefore it may be said, that the full gift of the Spirit—the Baptism of the Holy Ghost Himself—is specially represented by the laying on of hands, or Confirmation. This χρίσις τελειωτική had been administered in this case directly and immediately by the Holy Ghost, as at Pentecost; see Euseb. Emisen., quoted on viii. 14. But the Sacrament of Baptism which Christ had instituted, in the name of the Holy Trinity, had not been administered, and therefore they were baptized.

(4) Lastly, it may be added that the reason of visible signs and audible sounds on hearing the Gospel and on reception of the Holy Ghost, in the first ages of Christianity, is to be seen in the need of a proof, that God gives grace, and gives it by the Word and Sacraments in His Church. That proof was given visibly and audibly in the earliest ages; and it is the duty of those who live now, to build on the faith and practice of the past, and to believe steadfastly, and receive thankfully, the grace given by the same Holy Spirit, in the ordinary means of grace, without the evidence of the same visible signs and audible sounds. For "blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed." (John xx. 29.)

48. προσέταξε—αὐτοὺς βαπτισθῆναι] he commanded them to be baptized. Christ preached; but He administered Baptism by His Apostles. For the reason of which see John iv. 2. And after the Ascension the Apostles preached; but they administered Baptism, for the most part, by the hands of inferior ministers; see 1 Cor. i. 17; a passage which suggests one reason of their conduct in this respect,—i. e. lest they should be supposed to be desirous of forming sects of those whom they baptized, and lest they who had been baptized by them respectively should say, "I am of Paul, I am of Cephas." (1 Cor. i. 12—15.)

Again; if the Apostles, who had special gifts of working miracles, and of giving the Holy Ghost, had baptized with their own hands, it might have been thought by some that the grace of Baptism came from them, who administered it, and not from Him Whose Baptism it is, and so an error with regard to Baptism be propagated.

Besides; after their death it might have been imagined, that Baptism had lost some of its efficacy, being no longer administered by those who were called by Christ, and had received extraordinary graces of the Holy Ghost; and so the Sacrament of Baptism, which God has instituted for the remission of sins, and for reception into the Church in all ages and countries of the world, might fall into discredit and disuse.

Therefore the Apostles did not usually baptize with their own hands; but it would be a great mistake thence to infer, with some persons, that Baptism is of minor account. On the contrary, these considerations show the importance of that Sacrament.

CH. XI. 2. διεκρίνοντο] they were disputing. See on x. 47. 4—12. ἀρξάμενος—διακρινόμενον] See the same narrative, almost in the same words, above, x. 9—16.

A remarkable instance of Repetition; showing the importance of the subject; and that the Holy Spirit does not disdain to use the same or similar words in relating the same events. Compare the Repetitions of the account of St. Paul's conversion in this book, ix. 1; xxii. 6; xxvi. 12.

These Repetitions occur in one and the same Book. There is therefore no reason for surprise that the Holy Spirit should repeat in one Gospel what He had said in another. See Introduction to the Gospels, pp. xlv, xlvii.

ἄχρις ἐμοῦ· ⁶ εἰς ἣν ἀτενίσας κατενόουν, καὶ εἶδον τὰ τετράποδα τῆς γῆς, καὶ τὰ θηρία καὶ τὰ ἔρπετα, καὶ τὰ πετεινὰ τοῦ οὐράνου· ⁷ ἤκουσα δὲ φωνῆς λεγούσης μοι, Ἀναστάς, Πέτρε, θύσον καὶ φάγε. ⁸ Εἶπον δέ, Μηδαμῶς, Κύριε· ὅτι κοινὸν ἢ ἀκάθαρτον οὐδέποτε εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸ στόμα μου. ⁹ Ἀπεκρίθη δέ μοι φωνὴ ἐκ δευτέρου ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, Ἄ ὁ Θεὸς ἐκαθάρισε, σὺ μὴ κοίνου. ¹⁰ Τοῦτο δὲ ἐγένετο ἐπὶ τρεῖς, καὶ πάλιν ἀνеспάσθη ἅπαντα εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν. ¹¹ Καὶ ἰδού, ἐξαυτῆς τρεῖς ἄνδρες ἐπέστησαν ἐπὶ τὴν οἰκίαν ἐν ᾗ ἡμεν, ἀπεσταλμένοι ἀπὸ Καισαρείας πρὸς με. ¹² ^a Εἶπε δέ μοι τὸ Πνεῦμα συνελθεῖν αὐτοῖς μηδὲν διακρινόμενον· ἦλθον δὲ σὺν ἐμοὶ καὶ οἱ ἑξ ἀδελφοὶ οὗτοι, καὶ εἰσῆλθομεν εἰς τὸν οἶκον τοῦ ἀνδρός· ¹³ ἀπήγγειλέ τε ἡμῖν πῶς εἶδε τὸν ἄγγελον ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ αὐτοῦ σταθέντα καὶ εἰπόντα αὐτῷ, Ἀπόστειλον εἰς Ἰόππην, καὶ μετάπεμψαι Σίμωνα τὸν ἐπικαλούμενον Πέτρον, ¹⁴ ὃς λαλήσει ῥήματα πρὸς σε, ^e ἐν οἷς σωθήσῃ, σὺ καὶ πᾶς ὁ οἶκός σου. ¹⁵ ^f Ἐν δὲ τῷ ἄρξασθαί με λαλεῖν, ἐπέπεσε τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον ἐπ' αὐτοὺς, ὥσπερ καὶ ἐφ' ἡμᾶς ἐν ἀρχῇ. ¹⁶ ^g Ἐμνήσθη δὲ τοῦ ῥήματος τοῦ Κυρίου ὡς ἔλεγεν, Ἰωάννης μὲν ἐβάπτισεν ὕδατι, ὑμεῖς δὲ βαπτισθήσεσθε ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ. ¹⁷ ^h Εἰ οὖν τὴν ἰσὴν δωρεὰν ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Θεὸς ὡς καὶ ἡμῖν, πιστεύσασιν ἐπὶ τὸν Κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, ἐγὼ δὲ τίς ἡμεν, δυνατὸς κωλύσαι τὸν Θεόν;

¹⁸ Ἀκούσαντες δὲ ταῦτα ἡσύχασαν, καὶ ἐδόξαζον τὸν Θεὸν λέγοντες, Ἀραγε καὶ τοῖς ἔθνεσιν ὁ Θεὸς τὴν μετάνοιαν εἰς ζωὴν ἔδωκεν.

¹⁹ ⁱ Οἱ μὲν οὖν διασπαρέντες ἀπὸ τῆς θλίψεως τῆς γενομένης ἐπὶ Στεφάνῳ διῆλθον ἕως Φοινίκης καὶ Κύπρου καὶ Ἀντιοχείας, μηδεὶν λαλοῦντες τὸν λόγον, εἰ μὴ μόνον Ἰουδαίους.

²⁰ ^k Ἦσαν δὲ τινες ἐξ αὐτῶν, ἄνδρες Κύπριοι καὶ Κυρηναῖοι, οἵτινες ἐλθόντες εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν ἐλάλουν πρὸς τοὺς Ἑλληνιστὰς, εὐαγγελιζόμενοι τὸν Κύριον

d John 16. 13.
ch. 10. 19.

e Ps. 19. 7—11.
John 6. 63, 68.
& 17. 20.
f ch. 2. 4.
g ch. 1. 5.
& 19. 4.
Matt. 3. 11.
Luke 3. 16.
h ch. 10. 47.

i ch. 8. 1.

k ch. 6. 1.

13. τὸν ἄγγελον] The Angel, of which you have already heard from others. The circumstances of the vision of Cornelius, which were recounted by him in the presence of many (x. 24. 30. 45), must have been notorious at Jerusalem.

16. ῥήματος τοῦ Κυρίου—βαπτισθήσεσθε ἐν Πν. ᾧ.] See on i. 5.

17. ἐγὼ δὲ τίς ἡμεν, δυνατός] Two questions in one. Cp. Luke xix. 15, τίς τί ἐπραγματεύσατο; xvi. 2, τί τοῦτο ἀκούω; Winer, G. G. § 566, p. 553. The δὲ after ἐγὼ is omitted by A, D. But it was not likely to be interpolated, and it gives force to the question,—"You may doubt, and debate, and censure me; but who was I, to resist God?"

—κωλύσαι τὸν Θεόν] See on x. 47.

19. οἱ μὲν οὖν διασπαρέντες] A recapitulation. See viii. 1. —ἐπὶ Στεφάνῳ] upon Stephen. So G, H, and probably B, and the great majority of cursive MSS. A, E have ἐπὶ Στεφάνου, 'in the time of Stephen,' and Vulg. 'sub Stephano.' Cp. ἐπὶ Κλαυδίου, v. 28. But ἐπὶ Στεφάνῳ appears to be the true reading. ἐπὶ = super, upon Stephen, i. e. the persecution against him while living, and over him when dead; that persecution to which he gave occasion by his boldness (vi. 11), and in which he was killed, and which was stimulated by his preaching and death. His persecutors and murderers were not convinced by his miracles and teaching, or satisfied with his death; but having once tasted blood, they thirsted for other victims (see ix. 1); and yet by Persecution the cause of the Gospel which they persecuted was advanced. See viii. 1.

—Ἀντιοχείας] Antioch. On the Orontes, 120 stadia from its port Seleucia; founded by Seleucus Nicator, who called it from his father Antiochus; the residence of the Seleucid Dynasty of Syria; and afterwards, when under Roman rule, the residence of the Præses of Syria. "Syriæ metropolis, tertium inter omnes Romani orbis locum obtinens, hoc est post Romam et Alexandriam." S. Jerome ad Amos. vi. quoted by A Lap.; cp. Winer, R. W. B. i. 60. Howson, i. 150. Lewin, p. 107.

20. ἐλάλουν] they were speaking: i. e. preaching.

—Ἑλληνιστὰς] Hellenists. The determination of the true reading here concerns an important point in the history of the Church.

B, D*, E, G, H, and the Cursive MSS. almost without exception, have Ἑλληνιστὰς, the reading of the received text. And so the text of Chrys., Æcum., and Theophylact, and both the commentaries of Theophyl. p. 98 and p. 251, διὰ τὸ μὴ εἰδέναι Ἑβραϊστὶ, Ἑλληνιστὰς ἐκάλον.

But A has Ἑλληνας.

This authority however is of less weight, because A has Ἑλληνας also in ix. 29, where Ἑλληνιστὰς is confessedly the true reading.

D* has Ἑλληνας, but its reading was afterwards altered to Ἑλληνιστὰς.

The authority of several Versions (e. g. Vulg., Syriac, Coptic, Arabic) in this question, is not of any value; because (as Whitby observes, p. 463) they use the same word for Ἑλληνας and Ἑλληνιστὰς.

Eusebius (ii. 3) is in favour of Ἑλλήνων, and so is Chrys. in his exposition, ὅρα Ἑλλησιν εὐαγγελίζονται, but he supposes the events here mentioned to be posterior to the reception of Cornelius into the Church. And so Lyranus, Caietanus, Lorinus, and others.

Many recent editors, Griesbach, Lachmann, Scholz, Tischendorf, Bornemann, Alford, have introduced Ἑλληνας into the text. But they (with the exception of Alford) give no interpretation of the meaning which they would affix to the word. They may have supposed it to comprise Jewish proselytes, as Meyer does (p. 215 and p. 259, on chap. xiv. 1); and he observes that the ἔθνη, Gentiles, are distinguished from the Ἑλληνας. Cp. xiii. 42; xviii. 4. 6.

Dean Alford, in his note here, understands it as not signifying Hellenists, but "Gentiles uncircumcised," and them only; and he says that "the advocacy of the reading Ἑλληνιστὰς has mainly arisen from a mistaken view that the baptism of Cornelius must necessarily have preceded the conversion of all other Gentiles."

Two questions arise here—

1. Which is the true reading, Ἑλληνιστὰς or Ἑλληνας?

2. In what sense is the true reading to be understood?

1. The authority of the MSS. is in favour of Ἑλληνιστὰς, and it is mainly on supposed internal evidence that preference has recently been given to Ἑλληνας.

2. It is said that the word here used, whether Ἑλληνας or Ἑλληνιστὰς, is opposed to the word Ἰουδαίους, Jews, in v. 19, and Ἰησοῦν²¹ καὶ ἦν χεὶρ Κυρίου μετ' αὐτῶν· πολὺς τε ἀριθμὸς πιστεύσας ἐπ-¹ ἔστρεψεν ἐπὶ τὸν Κύριον. 1 Luke 1. 66.

ch. 2. 47.

²² Ἠκούσθη δὲ ὁ λόγος εἰς τὰ ὄντα τῆς ἐκκλησίας τῆς ἐν Ἱερουσαλὴμ περὶ αὐτῶν, καὶ ἐξαπέστειλαν Βαρνάβαν διελθεῖν ἕως Ἀντιοχείας· ²³ ὃς παραγενόμενος καὶ ἰδὼν τὴν χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐχάρη, καὶ παρεκάλει πάντας τῇ προθέσει τῆς καρδίας προσμένειν τῷ Κυρίῳ ²⁴ ὅτι ἦν ἀνὴρ ἀγαθός, καὶ πλήρης Πνεύ-^m ματος ἁγίου καὶ πίστεως· καὶ προσετέθη ὄχλος ἱκανὸς τῷ Κυρίῳ. ch. 5. 14.
& 6. 5.

²⁵ Ἐξήλθε δὲ εἰς Ταρσὸν ὁ Βαρνάβας ἀναζητῆσαι Σαῦλον, καὶ εὗρων αὐτὸν ⁿ ἡγάγεν αὐτὸν εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν. ch. 9. 30.

that therefore the only word that the passage admits is "Ἕλληνας, and that this word must be understood to mean Gentiles.

But this is not certain;

It is true that some MSS. (A, B, and some Cursives) insert καὶ after ἐλάλουν, but they are more than counterbalanced by the great preponderance of MSS.; and καὶ is not admitted by Griesbach or Tischendorf.

If "Ἑλληνιστὰς is the true reading, then the word 'Ιουδαίους in v. 19 includes 'Ἑλληνιστὰς in v. 20; and the men of Cyprus, probably Hellenistic Jews, who had embraced the Gospel, spoke the Word to other Hellenistic Jews, in order that they also might embrace it.

Nor would the reading "Ἕλληνας exclude this meaning.

The word "Ἕλληνας does not always mean unbelieving heathens. See particularly John xii. 20, where "Ἕλληνες came up to worship at Jerusalem, and Acts xiv. 1, where "Ἕλληνες are among the attendants at the Jewish Synagogue. Cp. xviii. 4, and Howson, i. 144. 218. 252. 312. See also on xvii. 4, σεβομένων "Ἑλλήνων, where A, D introduce καὶ before "Ἑλλήνων, showing that copyists did not always rightly understand the word, which is there used for proselytes. And yet Vulg. there renders it Gentiles, the word which Cassiodorus has here (p. 175).

Still further:

Even if "Ἕλληνας were the true reading, it does not seem probable, from internal evidence, that it can here mean the heathens.

The events here described, as Alford supposes (and see his note on x. 1, p. 99), may have been prior to the baptism of Cornelius. See v. 19. Cp. viii. 1.

If so, the words τοὺς "Ἕλληνας cannot mean the Gentiles. For St. Peter, as Christ had prophesied (Matt. xvi. 18), and as St. Peter himself affirms, was chosen by God to be the first to open the door to the Gentiles (cp. Acts xv. 7). And Cornelius was the first-fruits of the Gentile world (xi. 1. 19). And if these "Ἕλληνας had been Gentiles, and if they had been the first Gentiles who were admitted into the Church, it is probable that their reception into the Church would have been authorized and signalized by Visions from heaven, and by other miraculous interventions, similar to those of which we read in the history of Cornelius; and those visions and interventions would not have been necessary in the case of Cornelius (x. 11). And the gravamen of the charge of receiving uncircumcised Gentiles into the Church would have been directed against these men of Cyprus, and not, as it was, against St. Peter (xi. 2).

If then we receive the word "Ἕλληνας, and translate it Gentiles, we must place this incident after the baptism of Cornelius.

And this seems to have been Bp. Pearson's opinion; see his Ann. Paulin. ad A.D. xli.

But suppose now that this reception into the Church at Antioch was after that of Cornelius;

Still it would not be certain that the word "Ἕλληνας means Gentiles here. For we read afterwards, in xiv. 27, that Paul and Barnabas announced in this same city, Antioch, that God had opened the door of faith to the Gentiles;

But this would not have been news to them, if they, who had been converted in large numbers at Antioch (v. 24), had been Gentiles.

Nor does it seem that Barnabas had as yet received a mission to the Gentiles (see on xiii. 2).

And if the reception of a single Gentile, Cornelius, and of a few with him at Cæsarea, made such a commotion as it did in the Church, it is probable that the reception of such large multitudes as are here mentioned at Antioch, would have made more noise, if they had been Gentiles.

On the whole it seems,

1. That there is not sufficient evidence to justify the insertion of "Ἕλληνας in the text.

2. That 'Ἑλληνιστὰς is probably the true reading.

3. That even if "Ἕλληνας was written by St. Luke, it would not be certain that he meant by that term Gentiles only.

4. That, if he had meant Gentiles only, he would probably have written τὰ ἔθνη (as x. 45; xi. 18; xiii. 46. 48; xiv. 2. 5. 27; xv. 3. 7. 14), and not τοὺς "Ἕλληνας. Indeed it is doubtful whether "Ἕλληνες, with the definitive article, is ever used in the N. T. for the Heathen—as opposed to the Jews.

When then (it may be asked) was the advance here made in the progress of the Church?

It was the conversion of a large body of Hellenists or Greek-speaking Jews and Proselytes; i. e. of that same class which had been most hostile to St. Stephen, and caused his death (see vi. 9—14, and on ix. 29).

Hence we may see why St. Luke mentions, that they who converted them had been dispersed by the persecution upon Stephen (xi. 19).

St. Stephen had been killed at Jerusalem by Hellenists; and Hellenists had attempted to kill Paul, Stephen's persecutor, when, soon after his conversion, he preached Christ there (ix. 29). But now Hellenists are rescued from the death of sin, and brought to the saving knowledge of the gospel of eternal life, by some of those very persons who had been driven from Jerusalem by the persecution which Hellenists had excited, and who had come from Jerusalem to seek and to save them in their own homes.

Hence also we see why Barnabas now goes to Tarsus to seek Saul (v. 25); how happy must have been the reconciliation effected between the Hellenists and him whom they had attempted to destroy when he preached Christ! (ix. 29.)

So God overruled evil for good. Here then was a great step forward. A victory achieved over a large number of the bitterest enemies of the Church; a conquest gained beyond the region of Palestine, and therefore in this respect also different from the successes at Jerusalem and Cæsarea; achieved in the third great City of the world, Antioch; and introductory to the triumphs of which we are about to read in the sequel, and which were mainly won by the agency of the great Apostle to the Gentiles, who is now presented to us at Antioch, St. Paul, and who is soon to be ordained an Apostle at Antioch, and will thenceforth proceed on his triumphal march till he arrives at the Capital of the world—Rome.

In examining the important question considered in this note, some use has been made of an able paper by the learned Principal of Bishop's College, Calcutta, the Rev. W. Kay, D.D. Calcutta, 1856. There is also an excellent note here of Valckenaer (in his Scholæ, p. 481), and see Whitby here, and on vi. 1.

²² Βαρνάβαν] Barnabas of Cyprus, iv. 36, and therefore sent to confer with the Cypriots mentioned in v. 20.

²³ παρεκάλει] For he was υἱὸς παρακλήσεως. See on iv. 36, and ix. 27.

— πάντας—προσμένειν] and he was exhorting all to cleave to the Lord with the (requisite) purpose of the heart. A strong evidence of the necessity of the concurrence of the human will with divine grace, for the salvation of men. Cp. below, xiii. 43, and xiv. 22. Phil. ii. 12, 13. 2 Pet. i. 10; iii. 14.

²⁴ ἀνὴρ ἀγαθός] a good man. Something more than δίκαιος. See St. Paul's distinction, Rom. v. 7. (Ford.)

This praise of Barnabas is remarkable. It is not usual for Evangelists and Apostles to praise one another. There must be some special reason for this exception; as for that in xv. 26, and 2 Pet. iii. 15.

The reason probably was this,—St. Luke, the author of the Acts, was the friend and companion of St. Paul; and he has related the circumstances of the παροξυσμὸς and consequent separation of Paul and Barnabas: see below, xv. 37—40. It might perhaps be supposed that St. Luke,—the friend of St. Paul,—was prepossessed in his favour; and was prejudiced against Barnabas. There is something, therefore, very appropriate and interesting in this graceful tribute to Barnabas from St. Luke, "He was a good man and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith."

²⁵ Ταρσόν] Tarsus. His native city (xxii. 3), where he had

²⁶ Ἐγένετο δὲ αὐτοὺς ἐνιαυτὸν ὅλον συναχθῆναι ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, καὶ διδάξαι ὅχλον ἱκανόν, χρηματίζειν τε πρῶτον ἐν Ἀντιοχείᾳ τοὺς μαθητὰς Χριστιανούς.

²⁷ Ἐν ταύταις δὲ ταῖς ἡμέραις κατήλθον ἀπὸ Ἱεροσολύμων προφῆται εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν ²⁸ ὁ ἀναστὰς δὲ εἰς ἐξ αὐτῶν, ὀνόματι Ἀγαβος, ἐσήμανε διὰ τοῦ Πνεύματος λιμὸν μεγάλην μέλλειν ἔσσεσθαι ἐφ' ὅλην τὴν οἰκουμένην· ἥτις καὶ ἐγένετο ἐπὶ Κλαυδίου. ²⁹ Ὁ τῶν δὲ μαθητῶν, καθὼς ἠὺπορεῖτό τις, ὥρισαν ἕκαστος αὐτῶν εἰς διακονίαν πέμψαι τοῖς κατοικοῦσιν ἐν τῇ Ἰουδαίᾳ ἀδελφοῖς·

o ch. 21. 10.
p Rom. 15. 25, 26.
1 Cor. 16. 1.
2 Cor. 9. 1.
Gal. 2. 10.

been sent by the Apostles (ix. 30),—another proof of the sincerity of St. Paul's conversion, and of his courage and affection for his own countrymen.

— ἀναζητῆσαι Σαῦλον] to seek out Saul. A similar act of kindness to that rendered by him to St. Paul at Jerusalem, ix. 27. Why Saul was now specially sought for, see on v. 20.

²⁶ χρηματίζειν] “(1) negotiari. (2) ita ut nomen inde adipiscaris. (3) denominari. Vide Rom. vii. 3, μοιχαλὶς χρηματίζει.” — Χριστιανούς] Christians. This name was not given till about twelve years after the Ascension of Christ; in the reign of Claudius. Cp. Suidas, v. Χριστιανοί. Joh. Malel., who says that ἐπὶ Εὐδοίου Χριστιανοὶ ὠνομάσθησαν, p. 318, ed. Mill.

Another remarkable instance of the priority of facts to names, in the history of the Church. See above, on the word Ἐκκλησία v. 11, δῆκονοι vi. 3, and πρεσβύτεροι xi. 30.

The disciples did not make haste to adopt a name which might repel the Jews. But when time had been given to the Jews to examine the evidence of the case, they proclaimed the doctrine that “Jesus is the Christ” as the very essence of their religious profession, in their name.

The word ‘Christian’ occurs only three times in the New Testament,—here, Acts xxvi. 28, and 1 Pet. iv. 16. It is used frequently by S. Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch and Martyr, ad Ephes. ii. 14, ad Magnes. 4. Trall. 6. Rom. 3. Polyc. 7. Cp. Mart. Polycarp 3, Χριστιανὸς εἰμι.

Eusebius appears to ascribe its imposition to the Church herself, and not, as some have done, to her enemies. And this opinion seems most probable;

The Jews would never have conceded such a title to the Nazarene,—a title which involved the acknowledgment that Jesus of Nazareth is the Messiah or Christ.

The termination -anus is no proof of a Roman extraction. We have Ἡρώδιαν in the Gospels (Matt. xxii. 16. Mark iii. 6; xii. 13). Many Roman names and modes of expression had found their way with the Roman arms into Palestine, as may be readily seen by an inspection of Buxtorf's Lexicon Talmudicum. Besides, many other names with the same termination were given by Greeks and other Orientals; viz. Ἀρειανὸν, Νεστοριανὸν. See Ammonius, in Catena, p. 339.

The Romans did not understand the name when imposed. “Perperam Chrestianus appellatur à vobis.” (Tertullian.) “Ignarus rerum nostrarum Christum Chrestum, et Christianos Chrestianos vocant.” (Lactantius.)

The word is not from Hebrew, but of Greek origin; although, happily, by its termination it accommodated itself alike to Greek and Roman use, and was well fitted to circulate throughout the world; and being first given in a Gentile city, it was an earnest of the future extension of the Church.

Derived from the threefold office of Christ, the Anointed One of God, to be the Prophet, Priest, and King of the world, the name intimates the obligation of those who bear it, to faith in Him, to worship through Him, and to obedience to Him, as the Christ; and it also declares their participation in His Union. (S. Aug. Ps. xxvi.) As Ignatius says, Magn. 10, “Whoever is called by any other name than this of Christian is not of God, and (ad Rom. 3) it is our duty not only to be so called, but to be.” Since also Christ is the Son of the living God (Matt. xvi. 16), these duties are elevated proportionably to His Divine Majesty. S. Ignatius, who wrote what has just been cited, was immediate successor to Eudodius, Bishop of Antioch (Euseb. iii. 22), in which city, and, perhaps, in whose time, this name was given.

The name Christian was not given at Jerusalem, the capital of the Jewish world, where 3000 had been converted at once, but at Antioch, a Gentile city, the residence of the President of Syria, who had the supreme command of Judæa. An intimation of the future diffusion of Christianity throughout the Heathen world.

Antioch thenceforth became a centre of Gentile Christianity. See on xiii. 4.

It is worthy of remark, that the name Christian was given, for all time, to the followers of Christ in that great Syrian capital Antioch, in which the Persecutor of God's people, Antiochus Epiphanes, had reigned, whose own name was connected by origin with that city, and who was a type of Antichrist.

Bp. Pearson has expressed an opinion, that, as the word Χριστιανὸς was first used at Antioch, so also the word Χριστιανισμός, as opposed to Ἰουδαϊσμός, was first used by S. Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch. See on Ignat. ad Philad. 6.

“A title so honourable and of such concernment,” says Bp. Pearson on the Creed (Art. ii. p. 194), “that St. Luke has thought fit to mention the city in which that name was first heard, and given by Eudodius, the Bishop of that place, as Ecclesiastical History informs us (Suidas, v. Χριστιανοί. Johann. Antioch. p. 318: cp. Bingham, ii. 1. 4); in which the primitive Christians so much delighted, that before the face of their enemies they would acknowledge no other than that, though hated, reviled, tormented, martyred for it.” See Euseb. v. 1, and cp. Bingham i. chapp. 1 and 2, where the learned author enumerates the various names given to the Christians.

The name Christian is also a protest against all religious titles derived from human leaders: εἰς γὰρ ὑμῶν καθηγητῆς ὁ Χριστός (Matt. xxiii. 8. 10). “Christianus est cui Christus semper in corde, ore, et opere.” (A Lap.)

Hence Greg. Nazian. says (p. 656), “I honour Peter, but am not called Petrianus; I honour Paul, but am not called Paulianus; I will not consent to be named of men, having been born of God. If I worshipped a Creature I should not be a Christian. For why is the name of Christian precious? Because Christ is God.” Similar language is used by S. Augustine. What would they have said of the names Arminian, Wesleyan, &c.?

The writer of the Acts of the Apostles, probably a native of Antioch (Euseb. iii. 4), might well rejoice in the appellation; as S. Chrysostom, the Homilist on the Acts, did, from his own connexion with that city.

²⁷ προφῆται] prophets. Another proof of the gift of the Holy Ghost to the Church, and of the truth of Christ. See John xvi. 13. Cp. Acts xx. 23; xxi. 11. Eph. iv. 11. 1 Tim. iv. 1. For Prophecy had ceased with Malachi,—thence called by the Jews themselves “the seal of the Prophets.” See Hottinger, Thes. Phil. p. 483.

²⁸ λιμὸν μεγάλην—ἥτις] So the best MSS. On λιμὸν, feminine, see Valek., who observes that the feminine is the Doric form, and that many forms passed from that dialect into Hellenistic Greek. See also Lobek, Phryn. p. 188, and Bornemann and Meyer here.

In order that it might not be alleged (as it was by Heathens) that Famines and Troubles were due to Christianity, the Holy Spirit predicts them, and prepares the Christians for them, and makes them to be occasions of Christian Benevolence. So all things work for good to those who love God. See Chrys. here.

— ὅλην τὴν οἰκουμένην] all the world. The Roman Empire. See Luke ii. 1. On this famine, see Euseb. ii. 8. 11.

— ἥτις καὶ ἐγένετο] which also came to pass; therefore there is an interval of some time to be supplied here. Cp. the similar use of ἐγένετο in the important passage Luke ii. 2.

It is to be understood from the context that St. Luke is speaking of its coming to pass in Judæa.

— ἐπὶ Κλαυδίου] in the time of Claudius. It was not prophesied that it would prevail in all parts of the Empire at once, and this seems to be the reason why St. Luke says in the time of Claudius, without specifying the year; and hence it is easily intelligible that the Christians of Antioch, a great commercial city, having traffic with all countries, might be comparatively at ease, while their brethren in the heart of Judæa might be in distress.

The introduction of the words ἐπὶ Κλαυδίου seems to intimate that the prophecy itself was delivered before he was Emperor.

There were numerous famines in the reign of Claudius. See Dio Cass. lx. Sueton. Claud. 28. Tacit. Ann. xii. 43. Joseph. Ant. xx. 5, A.D. 45, under Cuspius Padus, appointed Procurator of Judæa by Claudius after the death of King Herod Agrippa. “Quam famem respexisse Agabum testatur Euseb. ii. 8.” Pearson, p. 376. See also Biscoe, pp. 60. 66. Lardner, Credib. i. 11. 2.

After Κλαυδίου Elz. adds Καίσαρος, which is not in the best MSS.

²⁹ ὥρισαν—πέμψαι] they determined to send. They did not wait for the Dearth, but anticipated it in faith and love. They 30 ὁ καὶ ἐποίησαν, ἀποστείλαντες πρὸς τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους διὰ χειρὸς Βαρνάβα q ch. 12. 25.

καὶ Σαύλου.

XII. ¹ Κατ' ἐκείνον δὲ τὸν καιρὸν ἐπέβαλεν Ἡρώδης ὁ βασιλεὺς τὰς χεῖρας κακῶσαι τινὰς τῶν ἀπὸ τῆς ἐκκλησίας. ² Ἄνειλε δὲ Ἰάκωβον τὸν ἀδελφὸν ^a Matt. 4. 21.
Ἰωάννου μαχαίρα. ³ Καὶ ἰδὼν ὅτι ἀρεστόν ἐστι τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, προσέθετο συλλαβεῖν καὶ Πέτρον· ἦσαν δὲ αἱ ἡμέραι τῶν ἀζύμων ⁴ ὃν καὶ πιάσας ἔθετο εἰς φυλακὴν, παραδούς τέσσαρσι τετραδίοις στρατιωτῶν φυλάσσειν αὐτὸν, βουλόμενος μετὰ τὸ πάσχα ἀναγαγεῖν αὐτὸν τῷ λαῷ.

no sooner believe but they bear fruit. Such was the good effect of the Famine (Chrys.); it is an occasion of spiritual plenty—another example of good elicited from evil.

30. ὁ καὶ ἐποίησαν—Σαύλου] It appears from xii. 25, that Barnabas and Saul arrived at Jerusalem and fulfilled their mission of relief to the brethren there, and returned to Antioch soon after the death of Herod, which took place after Easter, in A.D. 44. Cp. Euseb. ii. 3.

—πρὸς τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους] to the Presbyters; already well known, but now first mentioned as such. See above on vi. 3. Luke x. 1.

Hitherto St. Luke had applied the word πρεσβύτεροι to the elders of the Jews (iv. 5. 8. 23; vi. 12); henceforth the πρεσβύτεροι are officers recognized in the Church, xiv. 23; xv. 2. 4. 6. 22; xxi. 18.

Thus the Church almost insensibly succeeds to the Synagogue, and occupies its place.

The contributors did not send the money to the Deacons, though it is probable that the alms were to be dispensed by their instrumentality (vi. 5).

While the Apostles were at Jerusalem, the sums of money arising from the sale of the lands were laid at their feet (iv. 35. 37; v. 2).

It would seem therefore from the circumstance here mentioned, that the Apostles were not now at Jerusalem. St. James, the Bishop of that See, was probably there; and in the word presbyters his presidency may be supposed (see xii. 17), as St. Paul's is in 1 Tim. iv. 14 compared with 2 Tim. i. 6.

CH. XII. 1. κατ' ἐκείνον τὸν καιρὸν] At that season. St. Luke here returns to an earlier date than the famine in xi. 28, which took place soon after the death of Herod Agrippa I., which is described xii. 21—24, and occurred soon after the Passover of A.D. 44.

—Ἡρώδης ὁ βασιλεὺς] Herod the King. The word βασιλεὺς, King here, is a proof of St. Luke's accuracy. This Herod is Agrippa, son of Aristobulus and Bernice, and grandson of Herod called the Great, by whom, after his father's death, he was sent to the court of Tiberius, at Rome, who, after the death of Drusus, put him in custody, in which he remained till the death of Tiberius. Caligula gave him the tetrarchy of Philip (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 6. 10; xix. 8. 2) and the tetrarchy of Herod his brother, who was banished to Lyons, and the title of King. The Emperor Claudius added to his kingdom whatever else had belonged to his grandfather, Herod the King (Joseph. Ant. xix. 5. 1; 8. 2).

Coins of Herod Agrippa have been preserved with the inscriptions ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥΣ ΜΕΓΑΣ ΑΓΡΙΠΠΑΣ ΦΙΛΟΚΑΙΣΑΡ, and on the reverse, ΚΑΙΣΑΡΙΑ (sic) Ἡ ΠΡΟΣ Τῷ ΣΕΒΑΣΤῷ ΛΙΜΕΝΙ (Akermann, p. 38), and ΗΡΩΔΗΣ ΦΙΛΟΚΛΑΥΔΙΟΣ (Welst. p. 525; see below on vv. 21—23),—remarkable mementos of his attachment to Rome, and of his connexion with this Cæsarea, where he was smitten by the Angel when doing homage to Claudius Cæsar.

2. ἀνείλε Ἰάκωβον τ. ἀδελφὸν Ἰωάννου] he killed James the brother of John; and so fulfilled the prophecy of Christ (Matt. xx. 23). James tasted the first draught of Christ's cup of suffering, and his brother John had the longest draught of it. See also on v. 3, and on John xxi. 23.

The Lord sometimes surrenders the life of His most faithful servants; and so the measure of guilt of those who persecute them is filled up, and their punishment hastened, and the victory of Christ consummated.

It is related by Clemens Alex. in Euseb. ii. 9, "that the person who accused James, having been present at his testimony to Christ, was so moved by it as to profess himself a Christian; and that he and the Apostle were led together to execution, and on the way thither he craved pardon of James for the wrong he had done him; and that the Apostle, having looked at him for a short time, said, 'Peace be with you,' and kissed him. And so both were beheaded together." As to the time of his martyrdom, see on v. 3.

Surprise has been expressed by some (see Meyer, p. 221) that the writer of the Acts does not dilate on the circumstances of the Martyrdom of the First of the Apostles who shed his blood for Christ.

But it was no part of St. Luke's plan to write a Martyrology. His work is the book of their "Acts" in life, and not of their sufferings by death. He does not describe death-beds. The Martyrdom of life is what he teaches. He fixes the reader's attention on that; and thus leads us to conclude that they who live as Martyrs will die as Martyrs, and that the true way to die well is to live well.

He thus guards us against the common error of dwelling too much on the circumstances of death-beds; and draws us off from them, to the practical duties of daily life.

Having described one Martyrdom in such a manner as none but an inspired writer could have done—the Martyrdom of St. Stephen the Deacon (vi. vii.)—he leaves his readers to infer that the same Spirit Who encouraged and animated the Protomartyr in his death, was with the whole of the Noble Army of Martyrs who followed him on the road of suffering to glory; and he therefore will not describe the martyrdom of the first Apostle, St. James, nor even of him whose friend and historian he is, the Apostle St. Paul.

Another reason may perhaps have weighed with him here. He and his brother Evangelists are very full and circumstantial in their history of the first and greatest of Martyrdoms—that blessed Martyrdom which is the source of all the Grace and of all the Glory of all Martyrdoms, both in life and death, even to the end of time, the Martyrdom of "the true and faithful MARTYR or WITNESS," JESUS CHRIST. (Rev. i. 5; iii. 14.)

Perhaps he was unwilling to disturb the unapproachable dignity and holiness of that astonishing act of love, and of that unique source of life; or to draw off the attention of his readers by details of the subordinate and derivative martyrdoms of his followers, even of a St. James, and a St. Paul, from contemplating with unwavering faith and undivided love the Martyrdom of Christ.

—μαχαίρα] with the sword, not by the sentence of the Sanhedrim, according to which he would have been stoned, but by the civil sword. On μάχαιρα, as the ensign of civil power, see Rom. xiii. 4. Rev. vi. 4.

James suffered by one Herod the same kind of death as the Baptist had suffered from another Herod. The Herods were imitators of Rome even in their executions of punishment. Death by decapitation was abominable in the eyes of the Jews. (Lightfoot.)

3. ἀρεστὸν—Ἰουδαίοις] pleasing to the Jews. It was a ruling principle of the Herodian policy, to please the people. "Herodis posteris, Herodis Magni exemplo, id tantum satagebant, ut Cæsarius partim, partim Judæis placerent." (Grotius.)

—προσέθετο συλλαβεῖν] he added to apprehend; a Hebraism. See Luke xx. 12, προσέθετο πένναι. Cp. Gen. iv. 2; viii. 10; xxxviii. 26. 1 Sam. xix. 21. See Vorst. de Hebr. p. 592.

—τῶν ἀζύμων] of the unleavened bread. S. Jerome (in Ezek. xliii.) appears to say (though cp. Tillemont, p. 270) that St. James was martyred on the Second day of the Passover, i. e. on the XVth Nisan, the same day as the Crucifixion of Christ; if so, there was in this coincidence also an appropriateness in the prophecy of his participation in Christ's cup of suffering. See v. 2.

4. τέσσαρσι τετραδίοις] four quaternions; a quaternion for each of the four watches of the night, he being chained (v. 6) to two of each of the quaternions in succession; and the other two being posted at the door.

Agrippa, who had been himself kept a prisoner at Rome by Tiberius, had not learnt mercy by adversity. He who had been bound, binds Peter; but Peter is loosed from his chains by an Angel of life, and Agrippa is smitten by an Angel of death.

—μετὰ τὸ πάσχα] after the Passover. As if in reverence for the sanctity of the season ("non judicant die festo," says the Talmud, Moed Katon)—when he was intent on murder! Com-

⁵ Ὁ μὲν οὖν Πέτρος ἐτηρεῖτο ἐν τῇ φυλακῇ¹ προσευχὴ δὲ ἦν ἐκτενὴς γινομένη ὑπὸ τῆς ἐκκλησίας πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ. ⁶ Ὅτε δὲ ἐμελλεν αὐτὸν προἄγειν ὁ Ἡρώδης, τῇ νυκτὶ ἐκείνῃ ἦν ὁ Πέτρος κοιμώμενος μεταξύ δύο στρατιωτῶν δεδεμένος ἀλύσει διπλῇ, φύλακές τε πρὸ τῆς θύρας ἐτήρουν τὴν φυλακὴν.
⁷ Καὶ ἰδοὺ, ἄγγελος Κυρίου ἐπέστη, καὶ φῶς ἔλαμψεν ἐν τῷ οἰκήματι πατάξας δὲ τὴν πλευρὰν τοῦ Πέτρου ἤγειρεν αὐτὸν λέγων, Ἀνάστα ἐν τάχει. Καὶ ⁸ ἐξέπεσον αὐτοῦ αἱ ἀλύσεις ἐκ τῶν χειρῶν² εἶπέ τε ὁ ἄγγελος πρὸς αὐτόν, Περιζῶσαι, καὶ ὑπόδησαι τὰ σανδάλια σου· ἐποίησε δὲ οὕτω. Καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, Περιβαλοῦ τὸ ἱμάτιόν σου, καὶ ἀκολούθει μοι. ⁹ Καὶ ἐξελθὼν ἠκολούθει αὐτῷ καὶ οὐκ ᾔδει ὅτι ἀληθὲς ἐστὶ τὸ γινόμενον διὰ τοῦ ἀγγέλου, ἐδόκει δὲ ὄραμα βλέπειν. ¹⁰ Διελθόντες δὲ πρώτην φυλακὴν καὶ δευτέραν ἦλθον ἐπὶ τὴν πύλην τὴν σιδηρᾶν τὴν φέρουσιν εἰς τὴν πόλιν, ἥτις αὐτομάτῃ ἠνοίχθη αὐτοῖς· καὶ ἐξελθόντες προῆλθον ῥύμην μίαν· καὶ εὐθὺς ἀπέστη ὁ ἄγγελος ἀπ' αὐτοῦ.
¹¹ Καὶ ὁ Πέτρος ἐν ἑαυτῷ γενόμενος εἶπε, Νῦν οἶδα ἀληθῶς, ὅτι ἐξαπέστειλε Κύριος τὸν ἄγγελον αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐξείλατό με ἐκ χειρὸς Ἡρώδου, καὶ πάσης τῆς προσδοκίας τοῦ λαοῦ τῶν Ἰουδαίων. ¹² Συνιδὼν τε ἦλθεν ἐπὶ τὴν οἰκίαν τῆς pare the hypocrisy of the Jews, when thirsting for the blood of Christ, John xviii. 28.

5. ἐκτενής] continuous. See 1 Pet. iv. 8.

6. ὅτε δὲ ἐμελλεν προάγειν] but when he was about to bring him forth. On the remarkable timeliness of divine interferences, see above, ix. 3, and below, v. 23.

— κοιμώμενος] sleeping. Peter sleeps calmly in body, because he watches in his heart to God; Who "neither slumbers nor sleeps." Chrys. (Hom. 8, ad Ephes.)

He casts all his care on God. He who is bound sleeps; they who are at large pray. (Chrys.) Compare Paul in prison, xvi. 25.

7. ἄγγελος Κυρίου] an Angel of the Lord. See also v. 23.

This Chapter presents a Prophetic Epitome of the History of the Persecutions of the Church.

Herod, the Edomite, favoured by the Roman Empire, admired and applauded by the world, acting with a view to popularity (xii. 3), and administering his kingdom on principles of political expediency, with an eye mainly to material and mercantile interests (v. 20), and by the arts of diplomacy, and with the pomp and display of human eloquence and glory (v. 21), is a striking personification of the Power of the World as arrayed against the Church.

He stretches forth his hands to vex certain of the Church. He is at first successful. The Apostle St. James is killed by the Sword; as the Baptist was by Herod's uncle. This act pleases the people. Herod is elated by success. He proceeds to seize another Apostle, St. Peter, the foremost of the Twelve, and thus he is hurried on to his own destruction.

The Church resorts to her proper weapon of defence—Prayer (v. 5, 12), united and unremitting Prayer. In answer to her supplications, one Angel of the Lord is sent to deliver Peter from prison; and another Angel is sent from God to smite Herod, in the height of his pride and glory. The princely Persecutor is summoned from the βῆμα, on which he sat in royal state (v. 21), to the βῆμα of Christ, the King of kings. He dies miserably. But the word of the Lord grows, and is multiplied.

This narrative forms a striking sequel to another divine History of Persecution in the Annals of the Ancient Church of God—in the Old Testament. There, another king, the victorious King of Assyria, Sennacherib, rages against Jerusalem and blasphemes God. The Church of God, in the person of her king Hezekiah, resorts to her armour against Persecution and Impiety—Prayer in God's House (see 2 Kings xix. 1. 14. Isa. xxxvii. 1).

The word of God, delivered by the prophet Isaiah, comforts Hezekiah. An Angel of the Lord is sent to smite the army of Sennacherib, in the hour of his impious exultation and triumph. Hezekiah, who had gone up to the Lord's house to pray, is miraculously rescued by God. And he who had blasphemed God, falls basely by the hands of his own children, while worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god (2 Kings xix. 37. Isa. xxxvii. 38).

These two Chapters (Acts xii. and Isa. xxxvii.) beautifully illustrate each other, by displaying the rage of the World and its furious passions against God and His Church, and the impotent futility and shameful discomfiture of all its pride and power when warring against Him; and the duty of the Church to trust in God and to pray, in the hour of her trial. They are dictated by the Holy Spirit for the encouragement of the Church in every age, and in order to cheer her with the prophetic assurance, that although all help of man should fail, the rage of the Kingdom of Darkness against her will not prevail, but be made conducive in the end to the more glorious Victory of the Word of God.

It is not unworthy of remark, as a happy coincidence, that these two Chapters are appointed to be read on the same day in the Calendar of Daily Lessons in the English Church (viz.) on December 12.

May the same Divine Power which watched over the Church of Zion under both dispensations, watch over our Jerusalem; may she have grace to imitate that Church in faith and trust and prayer; and may she be ever blessed with Princes and Pastors, mindful of the example and animated with the spirit of Hezekiah the King, Isaiah the Prophet, and Peter the Apostle!

— φῶς κ.τ.λ.] light; that he might not suppose it to be a dream. (Chrys.)

— οἰκήματι] an euphemism for prison (δεσμοτηρίῳ). Cp. ἀπαγχθῆναι, v. 19, an expression for φονεῖσθαι, also said of Herod, the enemy and persecutor of the Church. Cp. εἰς τὸν τόπον τὸν τοῦτον, said of Judas, i. 25.

These examples of λιτότης, or charitable extenuation, are deserving of notice, as showing that the inspired Writers and Speakers, in the Apostolic age, were not actuated by passion, when relating the worst actions of their Enemies, but were enabled to cherish a spirit of gentleness and moderation, even under circumstances of severe provocation.—A genuine fruit of the Spirit of Grace.

8. σανδάλια] sandals. See on Matt. x. 10, and Mark vi. 9, whence it appears that the Apostles did not wear the heavier ὑποδήματα, but the lighter σανδάλια, more suitable for missionary activity. Σανδάλια are the Latin soleæ, and are interpreted βλαστία by Hesych.

The words Arise quickly, are not designed to show that there was any need of haste, but to prove the celerity with which the deliverance of Peter from his chains was executed.

Indeed (as has been observed by Valck.), all these commands of the Angel concerning St. Peter's attire, are recited to show that there was no hurry in the transaction. "Do not stay to bind on your sandals," was a common phrase among the Greeks, when they would excite a person to make haste. See Theocrit. xxiv. 35. Ἀνστα, μηδὲ πόδεςσι τοῖς ὑπὸ σάνδαλα θείης.

And so Hesiod, to contrast speed with delay, uses a metaphor from the girding of the tunic, γέροντες ἄζωστοι ἐκιν, ζώσαντο δὲ πρὸι. Cp. Juvenal, v. 20, "rumpere somnum Debeat et ligulas demittere," and Ruperti's note.

— περιβαλοῦ τὸ ἱμάτιόν σου] cast thy pallium about thee; he had already girded his tunic.

10. διελθόντες—τὴν πόλιν] See Lightfoot, who shows reason for believing that this prison was without the City's inner wall, and between its two walls.

— ἀπέστη] he departed. The Angel's actions show that God's extraordinary grace is not wanting in what is needful, nor exerted where not necessary; but where human care and labour can act, there divine grace does not supersede, but quicken them. (Chrys.)

Μαρίας τῆς μητρὸς Ἰωάννου τοῦ ἐπικαλουμένου Μάρκου, οὗ ἦσαν ἱκανοὶ συν-ηθροισμένοι καὶ προσευχόμενοι. ¹³ Κρούσαντος δὲ αὐτοῦ τὴν θύραν τοῦ πυλῶνος, προσῆλθε παιδίσκη ὑπακοῦσαι, ὀνόματι Ῥόδη ¹⁴ καὶ ἐπιγνοῦσα τὴν φωνὴν τοῦ Πέτρου ἀπὸ τῆς χαρᾶς οὐκ ἤνοιξε τὸν πυλῶνα, εἰσδραμοῦσα δὲ ἀπήγγειλεν ἐστάναι τὸν Πέτρον πρὸ τοῦ πυλῶνος. ¹⁵ Οἱ δὲ πρὸς αὐτὴν εἶπον, Μαίνη· ἡ δὲ διῆσχυρίζετο οὕτως ἔχειν. Οἱ δὲ ἔλεγον, Ὁ ἄγγελος αὐτοῦ ἐστίν.
¹⁶ Ὁ δὲ Πέτρος ἐπέμενε κρούων· ἀνοίξαντες δὲ εἶδον αὐτὸν, καὶ ἐξέστησαν.
¹⁷ Κατασείσας δὲ αὐτοῖς τῇ χειρὶ σιγᾶν διηγῆσατο αὐτοῖς πῶς ὁ Κύριος αὐτὸν ἐξήγαγεν ἐκ τῆς φυλακῆς. Εἶπε δέ, Ἀπαγγέilate Ἰακώβῳ καὶ τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς ταῦτα. Καὶ ἐξελθὼν ἐπορεύθη εἰς ἕτερον τόπον.

12. Μάρκον] See xii. 25; xv. 37. 39. Probably Mark the Evangelist (Ammonius, Origen, Euthym., Œcumen.), whom St. Peter calls his son (1 Pet. v. 13). This opinion, though controverted by some, seems to be correct, for the following reasons:—

(1) We find St. Peter here connected with John, whose surname, or additional name, was Mark.

(2) This John Mark was the companion and ἀνεψιὸς of Barnabas (Acts xii. 25; xv. 37. 39. Col. iv. 10).

(3) Barnabas was under the influence of Peter. “Barnabas, Petro familiarissimus” (Bp. Pearson), was led away by Peter’s example at Antioch (Gal. ii. 13).

(4) This swerving of Barnabas under St. Peter’s influence, appears to have prepared the way for the παρενσυσμός between Paul and Barnabas (Acts xv. 36—39). See Bp. Pearson, A. P. ad A. D. 50.

(5) St. Mark was mixed up with this dispute, and after it went away with Barnabas.

(6) St. Peter calls Mark his son (1 Pet. v. 13).

(7) This Mark is identified with the Evangelist by the Early Church, which records that the Gospel of St. Mark was written under the eye of St. Peter (Euseb. ii. 15; iii. 39). See also above, Introduction to the Gospel of St. Mark, p. 111.

— προσευχόμενοι] praying by night. Cp. v. 5. Angelus orationis (see Malachi ii. 7, and cp. Bp. Andrewes, Serm. v. 355) ascendebat in Ecclesiā, ad invocandum Deum; Angelus Potestatis descendebat à Deo ad liberandum Petrum.

Herod’s soldiers were watching under arms at the door of the prison. Christ’s soldiers were watching unto prayer in the house of Mary. Christ’s soldiers are more powerful with their arms, than Herod’s soldiers with theirs. They unlock the prison door, and bring Peter to the door of Mary’s house. See the beautiful Homily of Chrysostom, on this history, pp. 761—764.

13. τὴν θύραν τοῦ πυλῶνος] The door or wicket of the gate. Cp. iii. 2; xiv. 13.

— παιδίσκη] a damsel. We hear of a damsel as a porter in the High Priest’s house John xviii. 16, 17.

— ὑπακοῦσαι] to hearken, to answer and announce. Xenophon, Sympos. i. 11.

14. ἀπὸ τῆς χαρᾶς] from joy. A touching incident, full of truth and beauty,—showing the love with which the Apostle was regarded by a servant, perhaps a slave. S. Chrys. here observes, σκόπει πῶς αἱ παιδίσκαι αὐτῶν ὁμότιμοι αὐταῖς ἦσαν. A lesson for modern times. Remark also that St. Luke’s knowledge of facts extends even to the name of the servant-maid at Mary’s door.

15. ὁ ἄγγελος αὐτοῦ ἐστίν] it is his Angel. This was said by holy persons who had been engaged in earnest prayer, and at a time when the graces of the Holy Spirit in the knowledge of divine things were bestowed in extraordinary abundance on the Church. And the Holy Spirit has vouchsafed to place this speech here upon record in Scripture. There is doubtless therefore something significant in it. Some of the Fathers did not hesitate to say, that it appears from this and other passages of Holy Writ, especially Matt. xviii. 10, that every believer has a guardian Angel, ὅτι ἕκαστος ἡμῶν ἄγγελον ἔχει (Chrys.), and παντὶ πεπιστευκῷ εἰς Κύριον ἄγγελος παρέδρυνε (Basil, in Ps. xxxiii.), ἕκαστος ἔχει ὁδηγόν (Ammon.), “unless we drive him from us by our sins” (Basil, in Caten. Theophyl. S. Hieron. in Esai. c. 66), and see the passages in Petavius Dogm. Theol. iii. de Angelis, ii. 6, and Bp. Bull’s two Sermons, xi. and xii. “On the existence of Angels,” and “the Office of the Holy Angels towards the Faithful,” vol. i. pp. 261—325.

It was also a received opinion among the devout Jews of our Lord’s age, that every one of the faithful has a tutelary Angel, and that the Angel sometimes appeared in the likeness of the person whose Angel he was. See Lightfoot here, ii. p. 683.

It may be observed also, that this speech had a singular fitness on the present occasion. For St. Peter had just said (v. 11), “Now I know that God hath sent His Angel and hath delivered me;” and the very fact that he was now at Mary’s door was due to God’s interposition by an Angel.

It was God’s power exerted by the ministry of an Angel which had brought Peter out of the prison and enabled him to stand there. The speech therefore seems to have been uttered not without some intimation from above.

Thus far at least we may venture to say concerning it,—

(1) That it affords a remarkable illustration of the truth of the assertion, that the Angels of God “are sent forth to minister for them that shall be heirs of salvation” (Heb. i. 14), especially when labouring in the cause of Christ and His Church, and in peril of death, as Peter was. Cp. Ps. xxxiv. 7; xci. 9—12.

(2) That this speech, coming forth so naturally as it did from the mouth of this Christian assembly in the house of Mary, affords a cogent proof of the reality of the angelic appearances described in the New Testament, which some rationalizing Expositors would endeavour to explain away into figures of speech. Here is a person described, knocking at a door, speaking with a human voice. It cannot, they think, be Peter; for he is in prison; who, then, is it? It is his Angel.

(3) The frequency with which Angels appear, or are mentioned in the History of the Acts of the Apostles (in which the word Angel occurs twenty times), is remarkable. See v. 19; viii. 26; x. 3; xii. 7. 23; xxvii. 23. And in this same book the Sadducees appear prominently as persecutors of the Church; and they believed “neither Angel nor Spirit,” xxiii. 8;

Thus Almighty God affords the most appropriate and seasonable corrections of error, in perilous times, to His Church. The angelic appearances in the Apostolic age comforted the hearts of persecuted Churches, and refuted the errors of persecuting Sadducees.

On the Angelic Appearances in the Acts, see further below, note, vv. 21, 22.

17. κατασείσας—τῇ χειρὶ] having beckoned to them to be silent, with a downward motion of his hand. See on xxi. 40.

This description of the motions of the hand and other bodily gestures, which are frequently noticed in the Acts, bespeak the accuracy of an eye-witness. See iii. 7; ix. 41; xiii. 16; xix. 33; xxi. 40; xxiii. 19; xxvi. 1; xxviii. 8.

— Ἰακώβῳ] to James, “the brother of our Lord,” and first Bishop of Jerusalem (Euseb. ii. 1). See on Matt. x. 3. He was martyred, A. D. 62, by the Jews, who, being disappointed by the escape of St. Paul, wreaked their vengeance on him. Euseb. ii. 23.

This message to St. James appears to intimate that he held a special position in the Church at Jerusalem. And this is confirmed by other passages in the Acts, particularly xxi. 18, where St. Paul makes a special report to James; and by Gal. ii. 12, where persons coming from Jerusalem are said to come “from James.”

This office is affirmed by ancient Church History to have been that of Bishop of Jerusalem. See Euseb. ii. 1, where he says that James, “the Lord’s brother, commonly called James the Just,” was ordained the first Bishop of Jerusalem.”

It has been questioned by some whether “James the Lord’s brother” was one of the twelve Apostles. (Vales. Euseb. i. 12. Burton, p. 105. Baumgarten, i. p. 326. Gieseler, § 25, 26, and others.) But this question seems to be decided by St. Paul, who says (Gal. i. 19), “Other of the Apostles saw I none, save James the Lord’s brother.” Compare this with Acts. ix. 27, “Barnabas brought him (Paul) to the Apostles,” i. e. Peter and James.

There are only two Apostles named James; and if James the Lord’s brother had been the same as James the son of Zebedee, then St. John the Evangelist would have been the Lord’s brother, which is never said by any writer of Scripture.

Among the women at the crucifixion, according to St. Mark
O 2

¹⁸ Γενομένης δὲ ἡμέρας, ἦν τάραχος οὐκ ὀλίγος ἐν τοῖς στρατιώταις, τί ἄρα ὁ Πέτρος ἐγένετο.

¹⁹ Ἡρώδης δὲ ἐπιζητήσας αὐτὸν καὶ μὴ εὗρων, ἀνακρίνας τοὺς φύλακας ἐκέλευσεν ἀπαχθῆναι.

Καὶ κατελθὼν ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰουδαίας εἰς Καισάρειαν διέτριβεν.

e 1 Kings 5. 9, 11.
Ezek. 27. 17.

²⁰ Ἦν δὲ θυμομαχῶν Τυρίοις καὶ Σιδωνίοις· ὁμοθυμαδὸν δὲ παρήσαν πρὸς αὐτὸν, καὶ πείσαντες Βλάστον, τὸν ἐπὶ τοῦ κοιτῶνος τοῦ βασιλέως, ἤτουντο εἰρήνην, διὰ τὸ τρέφεσθαι αὐτῶν τὴν χώραν ἀπὸ τῆς βασιλικῆς.

²¹ Τακτῇ δὲ ἡμέρᾳ ὁ Ἡρώδης, ἐνδυσάμενος ἐσθῆτα βασιλικήν, καὶ καθίσας ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος, ἐδημηγόρει πρὸς αὐτούς. ²² Ὁ δὲ δῆμος ἐπεφώνει, Θεοῦ φωνὴ καὶ οὐκ ἀνθρώπου. ²³ Παραχρῆμα δὲ ἐπάταξεν αὐτὸν ἄγγελος Κυf 1 Sam. 25. 38.

(xv. 40), were Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James the Less; according to St. John (xix. 25), Mary Magdalene and Mary ἡ τοῦ Κλωπᾶ, probably, wife of Cleopas or Clopas. Therefore James the Less was, it would seem, son of Cleopas. And this is confirmed by Epiphanius, Chrysostom, Lardner, iii. 331, and others, particularly (as it seems) by Papias, the scholar of St. John. See on Matt. xii. 46. And according to St. Matthew (x. 2), one of the two Apostles who was called James, was the son of Alphaeus, which is probably the same name as Cleopas. See on Matt. x. 3; xii. 46. Therefore James the Lord's brother was the same as James the Apostle.

Probably his relationship to our Lord conduced to his appointment as first Bishop of Jerusalem; and several of that family are said to have been chosen to preside over Churches on this ground. Hegesippus, in Euseb. iii. 20. Cp. the article on St. James the Less in Tillemont, Mémoires, i. pp. 163-281, where he discusses the question; and Lardner, iii. 384, and particularly Dr. Mill's Essays, ii. p. 239, and Blunt on the Early Church, p. 71; and below, Introduction to the Epistle of St. James, p. 6.

— ἕτερον τόπον] another place, of a different kind. Some Roman Divines say Rome (Baronius), but this is uncertain, as Lorinus acknowledges; and see Pearson, Ann. Paul. a.d. xlv. Others (Lightfoot, Heinrichs, Kuinoel) say Antioch. We find Peter again at Jerusalem at the Council, Acts xv. 7, the last time he is mentioned in this book;

The fact of his departure is perhaps mentioned to show that he would not expose himself needlessly to danger, or tempt Herod to the sin of persecution: οὐ γὰρ ἐπέλαξε τὸν Θεόν, says Chrys.

More than twelve years had now elapsed from the Ascension (see on i. 4), and he had discharged his duty of witnessing Christ's Resurrection to the Jews at Jerusalem. He would now go and preach elsewhere, in some other place, where the Gospel which he preached would be received more favourably than it had been by the Rulers of Jerusalem.

Perhaps in the word here used,—not ἄλλος, but ἕτερος, other of two, contrasted with each other—there is reference to our Lord's own command (Matt. x. 23). If they persecute you in one city, fly ἐς τὴν ἑτέραν—and to His own practice when rejected by the Samaritan Village (Luke ix. 56), ἐπορεύθη εἰς ἐτέραν κώμην.

The time of the probation of Jerusalem and her Rulers was now nearly over, as far as the preaching of the Twelve was concerned. Her cup of iniquity had been almost filled to the brim by the murder of James the Apostle, and by the attempt made by her King to murder St. Peter—because that other murder had pleased the Jews;

Now, therefore, the Witness of Apostolical Preaching withdraws from Jerusalem, and migrates to another place;

Probably it is for this reason that the place to which Peter went is not specified. The non-specification of its name brings out more clearly its contrast as another place than Jerusalem. If its name had been mentioned, it might have been supposed that he went from Jerusalem, merely because he was attracted to that other, different, place by some recommendations of its own.

On St. Peter's subsequent history, until his martyrdom at Rome, see below, Introduction to his First Epistle, pp. 36—40.

¹⁹ ἀπαχθῆναι] to be led away, i. e. to execution. ἀπαχθῆναι is an euphemism for “to be put to death,” εἰς θάνατον ἐλκεσθαι. (Hesych.) An instance of St. Luke's lenity of language—especially concerning Kings. See on v. 7.

²⁰ θυμομαχῶν] properly fighting in his θυμὸς, the seat of passion, against—enraged with—not actually at war. So Polybius, Plutarch, and Dion. Halic. use θυμομαχεῖν (see Valck. and Kuin.).

— Τυρίοις καὶ Σιδωνίοις] Tyrians and Sidonians. Tyre and Sidon were now subject to Rome, “cum umbrâ quâdam libertatis.” (Grot.) — διὰ τὸ τρέφεσθαι] Cp. 1 Kings v. 11. Ezek. xxvii. 17.

²¹—²³. τακτῇ ἡμέρᾳ] on a set day. With the simple narrative of these three verses compare the ornate description in Josephus, Ant. xix. 8. 2;

The events here described took place in the Theatre at Caesarea, when Herod was celebrating festive and votive games in honour of his Imperial patron Claudius; perhaps on the occasion of his return from Britain (Joseph. xix. 8. 2). Weststein (p. 525) refers to coins of Herod Agrippa inscribed ΚΑΛΑΤΔΙΑ ΚΑΙΣΑΡΕΙΑ, and ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥΣ ΗΡΩΔΗΣ, ΦΙΛΟΚΛΑΤΔΙΟΣ ΑΓΡΙΠΠΑ ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥΤ, and ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥΣ ΗΡΩΔΟΤ ΚΑΛΑΤΔΙΩ ΚΑΙΣΑΡΙ ΣΕΒΑΣΤΩ ΕΤ. Γ. See above on v. 1.

The passage of Josephus deserves to be transcribed, as illustrating and confirming the narrative of St. Luke, and in order that it may be seen from the comparison of it with St. Luke's relation, how little the Sacred Writers are disposed to overstate things, or to adopt what is legendary and apocryphal. Ἡρώδης δευτέρα τῶν θεωριῶν ἡμέρα στολὴν ἐνδυσάμενος, ἐξ ἀργύρου πεποιημένην πᾶσαν, ὡς θαυμάσιον ὄψην εἶναι, παρήλθεν εἰς τὸ θέατρον, ἀρχομένης ἡμέρας. Ἐνθα ταῖς πρώταις τῶν ἡλιακῶν ἀκτίνων ἐπιβολαῖς ὁ ἀργυρὸς κατανασθῆις θαυμασίως ἀπέστλιβε, μαρμαίρων τὴν φοβερὸν καὶ τοῖς εἰς αὐτὸν ἀνελίσσουσι φρικάδες· εὐθὺς δὲ οἱ κόλακες τὰς οὐδὲ ἐκείνῳ πρὸς ἀγαθὸν ἄλλας ἄλλοθεν φωνὰς ἀνεβόων, Θεὸν προσαγορεύοντες, Εὐμενὴς τε εἴη, ἐπιλέγοντες. . . . Οὐκ ἐπέπληξε τοῦτοιο ὁ βασιλεὺς, οὐδὲ τὴν κολακίαν ἀσβεύσας ἀπετρίψατο. Ἀνακίψας δὲ οὖν μετ' ὀλίγον τὸν βουβῶνα τῆς ἑαυτοῦ κεφαλῆς ὑπερκαθεζόμενον (cf. Joseph. Ant. xviii. 8) εἶδεν ἐπὶ σχοινοῦ τινός, ἀγγελὸν τε τοῦτον εὐθὺς ἐνόησεν κακῶν εἶναι, τὸν καὶ ποτε τῶν ἀγαθῶν γενόμενον, καὶ διακρίβιον ἔσχευ ὀδύνην· ἔθροον δὲ αὐτῷ τῆς κοιλίας προσέφυσεν ἀλγῆμα μετὰ σφοδρότητος ἀρξάμενον. . . . συνεχῶς δὲ ἐφ' ἡμέρας πέντε τῷ τῆς γαστρὸς ἀλγῆματι διεργασθεὶς τὸν βίον κατέστρεψεν.

²⁴ Ἀγρίππας μὲν οὖν ὁ βασιλεὺς τῷ τῷ κατ' ἐστὶν τὸν βίον.

If such a narrative as this had been found in the pages of the New Testament, how much censure would it have elicited! Many will allow Josephus to have his owl, who deny St. Luke his angel. See also above on v. 15.

On the citation of this passage of Josephus by Eusebius (ii. 10), compare Whiston's note on Josephus with Heinichen's Excursus ii. p. 293, ed. Oxon. 1842.

The ἄγγελος in Eusebius is to be explained from Josephus xviii. 8, compared with xix. 6.

The comparison of St. Luke's narrative in this chapter with that of the historian Josephus, presents for thankful consideration the benefits derived from the study of Sacred History. It removes the veil which hangs between us and the past, and discloses to us the secret springs and invisible agency by which its great events were produced. This is a work which no uninspired writer could perform. It could only be done by the Spirit of God. And a writer who (as St. Luke does in this chapter) professes to reveal the unseen ministry of Angels in the working out of the facts which he describes, lays claim to Inspiration. He asserts his own superiority to all ordinary Historians; and he gives cheering assurance of God's mercy to His people, and encourages them to rely on His superintending Providence and retributive Justice in the Government of the World.

Yet some would reject these claims as presumptuous, and would refuse all the benefits thus proffered to their use by God;

For example, one recent Expositor of note thus comments on v. 23—“ἐπάταξεν αὐτὸν ἄγγελος Κυρίου] Schlag ihn ein Engel des Herrn ist nichts als subjective an alttest. Sagen (2 König.

ρίου, ἀνθ' ὧν οὐκ ἔδωκε τὴν δόξαν τῷ Θεῷ· καὶ γενόμενος σκωληκόβρωτος ἐξέψυξεν.

²⁴ ε' Ὁ δὲ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ ἤξανε καὶ ἐπληθύνετο.

²⁵ h Βαρνάβας δὲ καὶ Σαῦλος ὑπέστρεψαν ἐξ Ἱερουσαλὴμ, πληρώσαντες τὴν διακονίαν, συμπαραλαβόντες καὶ Ἰωάννην τὸν ἐπικληθέντα Μάρκον.

XIII. ¹ a* Ἦσαν δέ τινες ἐν Ἀντιοχείᾳ κατὰ τὴν οὔσαν ἐκκλησίαν προφήται καὶ διδάσκαλοι, ὃ τε Βαρνάβας καὶ Συμεὼν ὁ καλούμενος Νίγερ, καὶ Λούκιος ὁ Κυρηναῖος, Μαναὴν τε Ἡρώδου τοῦ τετράρχου σύντροφος, καὶ Σαῦλος.

² b Λειτουργούντων δὲ αὐτῶν τῷ Κυρίῳ καὶ νηστευόντων, εἶπε τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ g Isa. 55. 11.

ch. 6. 7.
& 19. 20.
Col. 1. 6.
h ch. 11. 29.
a ch. 14. 26.
Rom. 16. 21.
b ch. 9. 15.
& 22. 21.
Rom. 1. 1.
Gal. 1. 15.
& 2. 9.
Eph. 3. 8.
1 Tim. 2. 7.
2 Tim. 1. 11.
Matt. 9. 38.
Rom. 10. 15.

xix. 35) erinnerte Bezeichnung der höhern Ursache der den König schnell befallenden Krankheit, und ändert an Factum nichts." De Wette, Apostelgeschichte, p. 106, 3rd ed. 1848, and again, p. 107, "Die Krankheit (of Herod) bei Luk nach christlicher Ansicht modificirt ist."

It is refreshing to pass from this to Bengel's note on ἄγγελος Κυρίου. "De gravi hac circumstantiâ nil habet Josephus, qui multa minora persequitur. Adeo differt Historia divina et humana. Angelus Domini eduxit Petrum. Angelus Domini percussit Herodem. Utrumque ab Angelis factum esse non viderunt mortales; sanctis duntaxat innotuit."

It has been sometimes said that persons conversant with material causes, and physical phenomena, and animal organization, are slow to recognize the workings of supernatural agents. But St. Luke, the beloved Physician (Col. iv. 14), whose praise is in the Gospel (2 Cor. viii. 18), furnishes a happy exception to this assertion. By the discipline of his medical training, he was required and qualified to scrutinize natural causes. And perhaps we may see a divine dispensation in the fact, that he among the Evangelists who was least likely to be carried away by a superstitious belief in supernatural agency, has been employed more than any other Sacred Writer to reveal the operations of Invisible Beings in the History of the Church.

²³. οὐκ ἔδωκε τὴν δόξαν τ. Θ.] he did not give the glory to God. As Peter did, x. 26, and Paul, xiv. 14, 15.

— σκωληκόβρωτος ἐξέψυξεν] being eaten up of worms he expired. On the acts and miserable deaths of Persecutors, see 2 Macc. ix. 12 (Antiochus); Joseph. Ant. xvii. 8. Bell. Jud. i. 33 (Herod the Great); Euseb. viii. 16 (Maximian); ix. 10, 11 (Maximinus); Lactant. de moribus Persecutorum, c. 16, and Tertullian ad Scapulam, 3, and Wetstein here. And on the signal interferences of God's providence in behalf of His Church in times of peril, see above, ix. 3.

Herod Agrippa died August 6, A.D. 44, in the fifty-third year of his age, and in the seventh of his reign; having reigned four years under Caligula, and nearly three under Claudius Cæsar, who added Judæa and Samaria to his dominions (Joseph. xix. 8. 2). See above on v. 1.

The following historical recapitulation from Kuin. may be added here: "Herodes, qui apud auctores Agrippa et quidem major dicitur, fuit nepos Herodis magni, filius Aristobuli, cujus gulam pater laqueo fregerat, v. Joseph. Ant. xviii. 5.

"Herodes Magnus tres reliquerat filios, Archelaum, Philippum et Antipam, in quos regnum paternum divisit Augustus, ita, ut Philippo et Antipæ, unicuique quartam, Archelao autem dimidiam regni partem assignaret. Philippus accepit Batanæam, Auranitidem, quam utramque regionem Luc. iii. 1. Ituræ nomine complexus est, et Trachonitidem; Archelaus Judæam, Idumæam et Samariam ethnarchæ nomine obtinuit; Antipas Galilæam et Peræam, ita, ut non minùs quàm Philippus diceretur τετράρχης.

"Archelaus, crudelitatis nomine apud Augustum accusatus, postquam novem annos regnarat, de suâ dignitate dejectus, et Viennam, Galliæ urbem, in exilium ab imperatore ejectus, atque Judæa in provinciæ formam redacta, Syriæque adjuncta est, ita, ut sub Syriæ præsidibus à procuratoribus Romanis administraretur. Philippo mortuo, tetrarchia ejus Syriæ ab imperatore Tiberio adjudicata est; sed C. Caligula hanc tetrarchiam, adjectâ quoque Lysaniæ tetrarchiâ, (vid. Joseph. Ant. xviii. 6. 10.) concessit Herodi Agrippæ, de quo nobis hic sermo est; et Antipa in Galliam primò, deinde in Hispaniam exule atque, hujus quoque tetrarchiæ eum donavit (vid. Joseph. Ant. xviii. 7).

"Neque minùs Agrippam auxit Claudius, Caligulæ successor. Romæ degebat Agrippa, cùm Caligula trucidaretur, et Claudii gratiam atque favorem sibi ita conciliabat, ut eum Judææ quoque et Samarizæ præesse juberet.

"Sic totum regnum, quod avus habuerat, restitutum, ipseque ab imperatore Rex Judææ salutatus est (Joseph. Ant. xix. 5. 1). Agrippa cùm vix triennio Judæorum rex fuisset, mortuus est

A.C. 44, et Judæa iterum in provinciæ formam redacta, Syriæque annexa est, misso, qui eam administraret, Cuspicio Fadjo, procuratore (Joseph. Ant. xix. 8. 2), in cujus postea locum Tiberius Alexander (Joseph. xx. 5. 2), Ventidius Cumanus (ib.), Claudius Felix (Tacit. Ann. xii. 54. Joseph. Ant. xx. 7. B. J. ii. 12), Porcius Festus (Joseph. xx. 8), Albinus (Id. xx. 9) et Gessius Florus (Id. xx. 9. 5) successerunt." See the Chronological Tables prefixed to this Volume, p. 28.

²⁴. ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ ἤξανε] the word of God was growing. The Church's Episcopium. See above, viii. 1; xi. 19, on the good educated by God from Persecution.

²⁵. Σαῦλος—ἐξ Ἱερουσαλὴμ] It is probable that St. Paul then saw the trance in the Temple (Acts xxii. 17—21) at Jerusalem, when he had a mission from God to the Gentiles, to which he is now about to be ordained (see xiii. 2).

His rapture into the third heaven—qualifying him for the sufferings he was to endure in his missionary career by a view of the future glory—was perhaps about the same time. See 2 Cor. xii. 2. Cp. Lightfoot, i. 878, and so Bp. Pearson, p. 376.

— τὴν διακονίαν] their ministering to the saints at Jerusalem, xi. 28, 29.

— Μάρκον] Mark. See on v. 12. Mark's connexion with Barnabas and Peter may have suggested this choice.

CH. XIII. 1. προφῆται] prophets. Saul, the Persecutor of the Church, is now a Preacher of the Gospel. Was there some prophetic and divinely-inspired anticipation of this marvellous change, in the saying of the Ancient Church, applied to another Persecutor, bearing the same name, "Is Saul among the Prophets?" (1 Sam. x. 12; xix. 24.) See on ix. 21.

These words, Prophets and Teachers, have here a special signification and propriety as applied to Barnabas and Saul. They had been already endued with special χάρισμα or gifts and graces, qualifying them to be Prophets and Teachers, but had not yet been ordained to the Apostolic Office. They had not as yet received the power of dispensing those peculiar gifts which were bestowed by God through the agency of the Apostles. See further on v. 3, and on 1 Cor. xii. 28.

— Μαναὴν] Manaën: "aule tentatione liberatus." (Bengel.)

Manasæn was σύντροφος, collactaneus, i. e. nourished by the same milk as Herod Antipas. The one is a prophet; the other killed one of the greatest of prophets. It is not on our circumstances, but on our heart that our eternal happiness depends. In all states of life, "one is taken, the other left." Matt. xxiv. 40. (Cp. Chrys. and Theophyl. here.)

Antipas and Archelaus were now in banishment in Gaul: Antipas at Lugdunum or Lyons, Archelaus at Vienne, in Gaul.

— Ἡρώδου] of Herod. Antipas, brought up privately at Rome, with his brother Archelaus. Joseph. B. J. i. 28. 4.

— Σαῦλος] Saul is here placed last of the prophets, but at and after v. 46 he generally stands before Barnabas, though not always (see ix. 14), and was "not a whit behind the chiefest Apostles" (2 Cor. xi. 5).

². λειτουργούντων] ministering. λειτουργία (from λήϊτον and ἔργον), a public service (cp. the Athenian λειτουργία), applied in N. T. to the public ministry—

(1) Of the Temple (Luke i. 23. Heb. viii. 6; ix. 21), as in LXX, passim.

(2) Of the Christian Church.

Thus St. Paul calls himself λειτουργὸν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ εἰς τὰ ἔθνη (Rom. xv. 16), λειτουργούντα τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἵνα γένηται ἡ προσφορὰ τῶν ἐθνῶν εὐπρόσδεκτος, ἡγιασμένη ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ.

Cp. Clemens Roman. § 43, as to the Jewish ministry; and as to the Christian, see cap. 44, where he uses both the words λειτουργεῖν and λειτουργία, and speaks of the λειτουργία of the Apostles, and of the πρεσβύτεροι, to the ποιμνίον τοῦ Χριστοῦ.

Hence it appears that in the records of primitive Christian Antiquity, the Apostles and Presbyters are said λειτουργεῖν Θεῷ, ἄγιον, Ἀφορίσατε δὴ μοι τὸν Βαρνάβαν καὶ Σαῦλον εἰς τὸ ἔργον ὃ προσ-κέκλημαι αὐτούς.

to minister to God; and also λειτουργεῖν τῷ ποιμνίῳ, i. e. to minister to the people. Cp. Dean Trench, Syn. xxxv.

In opposition to the assertions of some Romish Divines who would limit the word λειτουργία to the sacrifice of the Mass, it may be observed that Chrys. here interprets the word by κηρυττόντων, preaching; and it has been shown by Isaac Casaubon (Exercit. Baron. xvi. n. 41) that it extends to Divine Worship generally, i. e. to Prayers, Reading of Scripture, Preaching, and Administration of the Sacraments. Sometimes the word μυστικὴ was added to it, and then it generally signified the Holy Eucharist. See Bingham, xiii. 1.

— ἀφορίσατε δὴ μοι] separate ye them to Me now. The conjunction δὴ is thus used with an imperative and conjunctive to indicate a command to be executed without delay. See Valck., and comp. Luke ii. 15. Acts xv. 36. 1 Cor. vi. 20. Separate them from yourselves, and from the order of Prophets and Teachers (to which they have hitherto belonged), and ordain ye them now to that work to which I have called them, viz., as the sequel shows, to the Apostleship of the Gentiles. See on 1 Cor. ix. 6. Gal. ii. 9.

Indeed St. Paul in the beginning of his Epistle to the greatest Gentile Church seems specially to refer to these very words of the Holy Ghost, Παῦλος κλητὸς ἀπόστολος ἀφωρισμένος εἰς εὐαγγέλιον Θεοῦ. See Rom. i. 1.

Ὁν ἔργον, work, used in this sense, see 1 Tim. iii. 1, εἴ τις ἐπισκοπῆς ὀρέγεται, καλοῦ ἔργου ἐπιθυμεῖ. So Chrys. Cp. S. Leo, Ep. ad Dioscor. 79, and below, v. 9.

Up to this time they are called Prophets, or preachers. See xiii. 1. But, after their Ordination at Antioch, they appear in the next Chapter with the Apostolic title (v. 4), σὺν τοῖς ἀποστόλοις, with the Apostles; i. e. Barnabas and Paul; and again, v. 14, οἱ ἀπόστολοι Βαρνάβας καὶ Παῦλος, the Apostles, Barnabas and Paul. Although St. Paul had received Visions and Revelations of the Lord, yet Ordination and Mission by the public authority of the Church, to qualify him for the Apostolic Office, was not dispensed with in his case; but was specially enjoined by the Holy Spirit Himself, who did not say, "I have separated them," but "Do ye separate them for Me."

Here (says Chrys.) we may see a proof of the Divinity of the Holy Ghost. The Prophets were ministering to the Lord. He does not say, Separate Paul and Barnabas to the Lord, but to Me, for the Ministry to which I have called them: showing that He is coequal with God.

"When was St. Paul ordained to be an Apostle?"

This is an important question, and much has been written upon it (see Lardner, iii. p. 259).

But it does not seem that sufficient attention has been paid to the important difference between his call, and mission to the Apostleship.

He had received an immediate call from Christ at his Conversion, and was even then sent to the Gentiles (Acts xxvi. 16—18), πρὸς οὓς ἐγὼ ἀποστέλλω, to whom I send thee as an Apostle.

It is therefore true that he was then divinely called and sent to be an Apostle to the Gentiles.

But he was not then ordained to be an Apostle. He had not as yet received the inward spiritual gifts of the Holy Ghost, and the external visible mission, which were requisite to authorize, qualify, and enable him to execute Apostolic acts. See note below on Acts xxvi. 17.

He had also supernatural Revelations in Arabia from Christ (Gal. i. 11—17); and these Visions and Revelations were arguments and motives to himself, for entering on the Apostolic office. But they would not carry conviction to others, and persuade them to receive him as an Apostle.

And he does not appear, as yet, to have exercised Apostolic functions. Nor is he, as yet, called an Apostle by the Holy Spirit writing by St. Luke; but he is only a Prophet, or Teacher (xiii. 1).

In order to execute the office of an Apostle, it was provided that he should not only have an inward call from God, but also have an external mission and ordination from Him, by the instrumentalities of persons in the Church who were qualified to ordain him.

This is what he received, when the Holy Ghost said, Separate to Me now Barnabas and Paul for the work to which I have called them (Acts xiii. 2).

A distinction must therefore be made between the call, and the separation, to the work of the Ministry. And nothing more clearly shows the necessity of a regular external mission (see Article XXIII.), as well as an inward spiritual call, than the example of St. Paul, who was converted in an extraordinary manner, and eminently privileged by an "abundance of Revelations and Visions of the Lord" (2 Cor. xii. 7), and who was directly nominated and appointed by the Holy Ghost Himself speaking from heaven to the Church (v. 2); and yet even he did not venture to enter on Apostolic functions, and did not receive the name of an Apostle, till he had been ordained by the laying on of hands.

It is the special function of God the Holy Ghost to qualify men by the divine unction at Ordination to discharge the duties to which they are called. See Acts xx. 28, and Bp. Pearson, Art. viii. p. 616.

This is the second instance, recorded in the Acts, of Ordination to the Apostolic Office. It leads us to consider the agency by which, and the purposes for which, the Ordination of Apostles was effected; and its bearing on the Regimen and Polity of the Church, as regards the Christian Ministry.

Christ, the Son of God, manifest in the Flesh, was sent by God. He was God's Apostle (Heb. iii. 1) to Men: He is the Bishop of their souls (1 Pet. ii. 25).

He, when personally present upon Earth, chose the Twelve Apostles.

While He was upon Earth, one of the Twelve died.

Yet, although Christ was forty days upon earth "speaking of the things concerning the kingdom of God" (Acts i. 3), after this vacancy had occurred, He did not fill it up then.

But the first Act which the Apostles performed after Christ's Ascension into heaven, was to pray to Him to show "which of the two," whom they had nominated, "He had chosen, to take part in the ministry and Apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell" (Acts i. 24).

The words of the Original are remarkable there,—Κόριε, ἀνάδειξον ὃν ἐξελέξω ἐκ τούτων τῶν δύο ἑνα. The word ἐξελέξω connects the choice of the one with the choice of the original Twelve (see note, and cp. Acts i. 2). And the word ἑνα, one, reserved for the end of the sentence, is emphatic, and is contrasted with δύο, two. If more than one had been chosen to succeed to the vacancy, it might have been supposed, that the persons so chosen were not severally and singly equal in dignity to the one, whose place they together occupied. But by the choice of one out of two to succeed one, it was shown that the one so chosen was equal to him whom he was chosen to succeed. Hence the Holy Spirit adds, "The lot fell on Matthias, and he was numbered with the eleven Apostles."

Hence we derive certain important inferences,—

(1) That Christ, though no longer seen on earth, is as much present with His Church as when He was personally visible; and that He can as well choose an Apostle, when he is sitting on His throne in heaven, as when He is walking by the Sea of Galilee.

(2) That the Apostolic office was to be continued in the Church. The first act done by Him after His Ascension was to provide for its continuance.

(3) That the Episcopal form of Church Government, which alone exhibits that continuance, is the regimen of the Church that is most in accordance with the will of Christ.

(4) That all the Apostles were equal in dignity. They are called "the Eleven" (Acts i. 26). If one of the Apostles, e. g. St. Peter, had been superior in degree to the other Ten, he would not have been classed with them.

(5) That their successors are equal to them in all ordinary Apostolic functions. Matthias is equal to Judas, into whose place he succeeds, and he is "numbered with the Eleven Apostles."

(6) Even therefore if the Bishop of Rome is the successor of St. Peter, he has no claim on that ground to domineer over his brethren, the other Bishops of the Church.

The Descent of the Holy Ghost made no change in these principles of Church Polity; it confirmed them; at the same time, it extended their application. Before that descent, the Apostles prayed to Christ to show His Will by the medium of Lots, in the election of a successor to the vacant place among the Apostles. The Holy Ghost had not then been given. But after the Day of Pentecost, all reference to Lots ceased. The Father sent the Holy Ghost, in the Name of the Son (John xiv. 26), to be the Interpreter of the Will of the Ever-Blessed Trinity in the Regimen of the Church.

Hence, therefore, in the passage now before us (Acts xiii. 2), which describes the first Ordination to the Apostolic office after the Day of Pentecost, we hear the Voice of the Holy Spirit Himself. "The Holy Ghost said, Separate Me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them." Barnabas and Saul are ordained to the Apostleship. Henceforth they are called "Apostles," and perform Apostolic Acts. They are equal in

³ ^c Τότε νηστεύσαντες καὶ προσευξάμενοι καὶ ἐπιθέντες τὰς χεῖρας αὐτοῖς ^{c ch. 6. 6.}
ἀπέλυσαν. ^{& 8. 15.}
^{& 14. 28.}

⁴ Οὗτοι μὲν οὖν ἐκπεμφθέντες ὑπὸ τοῦ Πνεύματος τοῦ ἁγίου κατῆλθον εἰς τὴν Σελεύκειαν, ἐκεῖθεν τε ἀπέπλευσαν εἰς τὴν Κύπρον. ⁵ ^d Καὶ γενόμενοι ἐν ^{d ch. 12. 25.}
Σαλαμῖνι κατήγγελλον τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς τῶν Ἰουδαίων εἶχον δὲ καὶ Ἰωάννην ὑπηρέτην.

⁶ ^e Διελθόντες δὲ ὅλην τὴν νῆσον ἄχρι Πάφου εἶδον ἄνδρα τινὰ μάγον, ψευδο- ^{e ch. 8. 9.}
προφήτην, Ἰουδαῖον, ᾧ ὄνομα Βαρῖησοῦς, ⁷ ὃς ἦν σὺν τῷ ἀνθυπάτῳ Σεργίῳ Παύλῳ, ἀνδρὶ συνετῷ. Οὗτος προσκαλεσάμενος Βαρνάβαν καὶ Σαῦλον, ἐπέζητησεν dignity to the original Twelve, who had been chosen by Christ upon earth. Paul says of himself, that he is not "a whit behind the very chiefest Apostles" (2 Cor. xi. 5).

Judas had fallen away from his place: two persons were named; but only one was chosen to succeed him. Thus the equality of the successor to him whom he succeeded had been declared.

This point being established, we now find a provision made not only for the permanent continuance, but also for the ampler extension of the Apostolic office.

The next Apostle who died after Judas was St. James (Acts xii. 2). Here also two persons are named (Barnabas and Saul), and both are ordained to the Apostleship. They are ordained by the instrumentality of men, acting by command of the Holy Ghost:

Accordingly, the Church of England, in her Office for the consecration of Bishops, recognizes this act at Antioch, as the Ordination of St. Paul and Barnabas.

Thus, then, in these several Scriptures, we may recognize a divine dispensation for the continuation and multiplication of the Apostolate.

After this time, special utterances of the Holy Ghost, singling out particular persons for this office, are no longer distinctly heard. They cease, as Lots ceased. But the Holy Spirit is ever speaking and acting in and by the Apostles and the Church, which is His Temple; He ordains a Timothy at Ephesus, and a Titus in Crete, and Angels in the Churches of Asia, and others after them in succession to this day, to perform the ordinary functions of Apostles, and to be their successors, not indeed in the working of miracles,—which were but for a season,—but in all that is requisite for edifying the Body of Christ in every age and country, and for communicating to the immortal soul those ordinary gifts and graces which are necessary for its spiritual health here, and for its everlasting glory hereafter.

These conclusions are confirmed by the consentient voice and concurrent practice of the Church Universal, which is the Body of Christ, and is guided by the Holy Spirit, and which has authorized one form of Ecclesiastical Regimen, that by Bishops, whom she regards as successors of the Apostles in all ordinary Apostolic Offices and Acts (see on Acts xx. 28).

Here is a strong testimony for Episcopacy, as distinguished from the theory of the Papal Supremacy on the one side, and from Presbyterian parity and Lay Ordinations on the other.

In fine, this subject derives a solemn importance from the considerations,—

(1) That the Son of God was sent by the FATHER to be the Apostle and Bishop of our souls. 1 Pet. ii. 25.

(2) That when on Earth He chose the Twelve. Matt. x. 1.

(3) That when He had ascended into heaven, He appointed Matthias to succeed to the place in the Apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell. Acts i. 24—26.

(4) That after the Day of Pentecost the HOLY GHOST ordained Paul and Barnabas to the same office. Acts xiii. 1—3.

(5) That the Bishops of the Church are the successors of the Holy Apostles; and that their office includes within itself the two inferior orders of Priests and Deacons. See further on this subject note prefixed to 1 Tim. iii. p. 433.

(6) Thus then we see the Three Persons of the Ever-Blessed Trinity, God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, all co-operating in the Institution and Continuance of that Office which is the Foundation of the Threefold Ministry; and thus Episcopacy is grounded on the same sanction as that of Christianity itself, which is instituted and propagated by Baptism in the NAME of the TRIUNE GOD.

⁴ ἐκπεμφθέντες] This is St. Paul's first Missionary Tour.

It begins at Antioch, and ends there. See xiv. 26. The reason of this appears from the peculiar character of that City (xi. 26).

Observe, that the range of St. Paul's missionary labours always expands in his successive Tours. This first tour is a short one, the next is larger; and so on till he comes to Greece, Illyricum, Italy, Spain, and perhaps Britain. See Rom. xv. 24. Introd. to Hebrews, p. 366.

An example to the Christian. See Phil. iii. 14.

— Σελεύκειαν] Seleucia, the harbour of Antioch, on the Orontes; and about sixteen miles from that city. (Howson, i. 166.) — Κύπρον] Cyprus, the country of Barnabas, iv. 36. He showed his love for his native land by traversing the whole, v. 6, ὅλην τὴν νῆσον—as the true reading is,—restored from A, B, C, D, E.

5. ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς] in the Synagogues. St. Paul, though sent to the Gentiles, begins always by offering the Gospel to the Jews. Cp. v. 42. Such was his patience, wisdom, and charity toward God's ancient people, although they, for the most part, treated him with cruelty. He did not go at first to Sergius Paulus,—a Gentile,—but the Proconsul sent for him, v. 7.

"In the Synagogues." We may observe here the prospective adaptations of the World for the reception of the Gospel, by God's providential dispensation, in the dispersion of the Jews, and in the erection of Synagogues throughout the world, which served as temporary Churches to the Apostles for preaching the Gospel, from the words of the Law and the Prophets, which were "read there every Sabbath Day" (see v. 27, and xv. 21), and which furnished texts for their Sermons.

Thus the soil of the World was already ploughed into furrows to receive the seed of the Gospel; or, to use another figure, the Synagogue was the vestibule of the Church. See the references made to Synagogues in this history, Acts ix. 20; xiii. 5. 14. 42, 43; xiv. 1; xv. 21; xvii. 1, 2, where it is said, κατὰ τὸ εἶθος τῷ Παύλῳ εἰσῆλθε κ.τ.λ., and cp. Introduction above, p. 8.

— Ἰωάννην] John. St. Mark. See xii. 12. 25; xiii. 5.

6. ὅλην] See on v. 4.

— Πάφον] Paphus. On the western coast of Cyprus.

— μάγον] magician. On the influence of μάγοι and γόητες at that time, and the obstacles thence presented to the Gospel, see Howson's remarks, i. p. 178, and above, viii. 9—12.

7. ἀνθυπάτῳ] Proconsul. Another instance of St. Luke's accuracy. Cyprus had been subject to a "Proprietor," being an Imperial Province under Augustus; but that Emperor, in B.C. 27, converted it into a Senatorial Province, under a Proconsul (Dio Cass. liii. 12, p. 504, and liv. 4, p. 532); and such it was under Claudius, as is proved by a coin of that reign bearing the inscription Claudius Caesar, and on the reverse ΕΠΙ ΚΟΜΙΝΙΟΥ ΠΡΟΚΑΟΥ ΑΝΘΥΠΑΤΟΥ ΚΥΠΡΙΩΝ. See Akermann, Numismatic Illustrations of N. T., pp. 39—42, who gives the names of four Ἀνθυπάτοι of Cyprus.

This text thus explained suggests a salutary caution of general application in the study of the N. T.

It was thought by many, that Cyprus must have been under a Proprietor (and not a Proconsul), because Strabo (xiv. ad fin.) calls it an ἐπαρχία στρατηγική μέχρι νῦν. Hence even Beza would have altered the text here from Proconsul into Proprietor; and did so change it in his Translation.

But it appears from Dio Cassius, p. 504, c, that all the Governors of the Senatorial Provinces were called Proconsuls, though they had been only Prætors; and the coins of Cyprus, and ancient Inscriptions of the age of Caligula and Claudius, give the title of Proconsul to the Governor of Cyprus. This has been pointed out by Cardinal Noris (Cenotaph. Pisan. p. 219), Engel (Kypros, 1843); and in England by Lardner (i. p. 19), Conybeare and Howson (chap. 5), and others; and thus St. Luke's accuracy has been vindicated.

There is little doubt, that in other cases, where some difficulties may still exist in the records of Holy Writ, a similar result would be attained, if all their circumstances were known.

— ἀνδρὶ συνετῷ] an intelligent and wise man. A remarkable description. Two Proconsuls are placed in striking contrast with each other in this history; Sergius Paulus, Proconsul of Cyprus, and Gallio, Proconsul of Achaia (xviii. 12—17). The one is eager f Exod. 7. 11.

2 Tim. 3. 8.

g Matt. 13. 38.
John 8. 44.
1 John 3. 8.

h Exod. 9. 3.

ἀκοῦσαι τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ. ^{8 f} Ἀνθίστατο δὲ αὐτοῖς Ἑλύμας ὁ μάγος, οὕτως γὰρ μεθερμηνεύεται τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ, ζητῶν διαστρέψαι τὸν ἀνθύπατον ἀπὸ τῆς πίστεως. ⁹ Σαῦλος δὲ, ὁ καὶ Παῦλος, πλησθεὶς Πνεύματος ἁγίου, ἀτενίσας εἰς αὐτὸν ^{10 g} εἶπεν, Ὁ πλήρης παντὸς δόλου καὶ πάσης ῥαδιουργίας, υἱὲ Διαβόλου, ἐχθρὲ πάσης δικαιοσύνης, οὐ παύσῃ διαστρέφων τὰς ὁδοὺς Κυρίου τὰς εὐθείας; ^{11 h} καὶ νῦν ἰδοὺ, χεῖρ Κυρίου ἐπὶ σε, καὶ ἔσῃ τυφλὸς, μὴ βλέπων τὸν ἥλιον ἄχρι καιροῦ. Παραχρῆμα δὲ ἐπέπεσεν ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἀχλὺς καὶ σκότος· καὶ περιάγων ἐζήτει χειραγωγούς.

¹² Τότε ἰδὼν ὁ ἀνθύπατος τὸ γεγονός ἐπίστευσεν, ἐκπλησσομένου ἐπὶ τῇ διδαχῇ τοῦ Κυρίου.

i ch. 15. 38. ^{13 i} Ἀναχθέντες δὲ ἀπὸ τῆς Πάφου οἱ περὶ Παῦλον, ἦλθον εἰς Πέργην τῆς Παμφυλίας.

Ἰωάννης δὲ ἀποχωρήσας ἀπ' αὐτῶν ὑπέστρεψεν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα.

¹⁴ Αὐτοὶ δὲ διελθόντες ἀπὸ τῆς Πέργης παρεγένοντο εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν τῆς Πισι-to hear, and sends for the Apostles; the other cares for none of these things; the one is unknown to the world, but is called here by the Holy Spirit ἄνθρωπος συνετός, a man of understanding; the other, Gallio, was caressed by the World, but has no such praise from God.

8. Ἑλύμας] Elymas, the professional name of Bar Jesus, the Jew, and equivalent to μάγος, from μαγῆς, "in lingua Arabicâ et Persicâ magus." (Rosenm.)

9. Σαῦλος, ὁ καὶ Παῦλος] Saul, who is also Paul. His name was changed at his Ordination to the Apostleship, as Simon was named Peter when called by Christ (Chrys.), and the sons of Zebedee were surnamed Boanerges, Mark iii. 17. But in Paul's case there was not an addition to the former name, but a change in it; and yet so as to leave much of the original name;

Some Expositors have said that this change was merely allusive and alliterative,—as Jason from Jesus, Pollio from Hillel, &c., for readier acceptance among the Romans;

But surely there was something more than this in the case of the Apostle to the Gentiles;

The change seems to have been made,

(1) Because Σαῦλος was a purely Jewish name, שׁוּלַם, and

(2) Because among the Greeks it might expose him to contempt, as having the same sound as σαῦλος (not σαυλός, see Passow in v.), wanton. See Homer, Hymn. Mercur. 28, and Ruhnken there.

(3) To indicate his change and call to a new life; from a Jew to a Christian; from a Persecutor to a Preacher of the Gospel. "Patitur Paulus," says an ancient author in Aug. Append. Serm. 204, "quod fecerat Saulus. Saulus lapidavit, Paulus lapidatus est; Saulus Christianos virgis affecit, Paulus quinque quadragies unâ minus accepit. Saulus persecutus est Ecclesiam Dei, Paulus submissus est in sportâ; Saulus vinxit, Paulus victus est."

(4) But in the change of Σαῦλος to Παῦλος much of the original word was left, and commemorated what he had been, and bespoke God's mercies to him in his new condition. Compare the slight verbal changes in Abram, Sara, Hoshea the son of Nun, and others. (Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. ii. p. 132.) The fire of zeal of Σαῦλος still glowed in the heart of Παῦλος, but its flame was purified by the Holy Ghost.

(5) His "new name" denoted also his mission to the Gentiles, of whom the Romans were the principal nation, to whom the name Paulus was familiar.

(6) Some add that it was a token of humility, "Paulus, parvulus, quia se iudice ἐλάττωστος τῶν ἀποστόλων" (1 Cor. ix. 9, where see note); as S. Augustine says in Ps. lxxii. (in an observation undeservedly ridiculed by some in recent times), "ex Saulo factus est Paulus, ex superbo modicus; Paulum enim modicum est," and De Spir. et Litera, c. 7. On St. Paul's relation to Benjamin "the little," see on ix. 1, and on 1 Cor. xv. 8.

(7) The first convert whom he is recorded to have made was a noble Roman, the Proconsul of Cyprus, then a Senatorian Province (Dio Cass. iv. p. 523), whose cognomen (not prænomen) was Paulus; and thus his name Paulus was a name of good augury, as presaging St. Paul's future success in the Roman and Gentile world.

As S. Jerome says (in Epist. ad Philem.), "As Scipio, after the conquest of Africa, took the name of Africanus; and Metellus, having subdued Crete, gained the title of Creticus for his family; and Roman Generals are called from the nations over which they have triumphed, by the names Adiabeniici, Parthici, Sarmatici; so Saul, being sent to preach to the Gentiles, brought back a trophy of his victory from the first spoil won by the Church, the Proconsul Sergius Paulus; and erected his banner therewith, and instead of Saul was called Paul." It is not said by Jerome that he gave himself this name on this account, which might indeed have been scarcely consistent with humility.

St. Paul, the Apostle of the Greeks, was the Æmilius Paulus of the Gospel. He was indeed Macedonicus. He obeyed the heavenly vision of the man of Macedonia (xvi. 9), and brought Macedonia to Christ.

(8) Names imposed upon holy men, at the beginning of their career, were prophetic and significant of their office. And if the Western World is to have a Head, certainly Paul, with his Roman name and mission to the West (Clem. Rom. i. 5), might seem to challenge that title for himself, rather than he who bore the Aramaic name Cephas, and the Greek one Peter.

—ἀτενίσας] intently fixing his eyes. It has been argued by some from this expression here and in ch. xxiii. 1, that Paul never recovered his sight as before his Conversion, when he was blinded for a time by the "glory of that light." But it would seem rather, that the reverse might be inferred from the use of the word ἀτενίζω, which indicates a vigorous exercise and tension of the optic nerves, by which the spectator penetrates with a keen and piercing glance to the extreme point of his field of view. See the passages in i. 10, where it is used of the Apostles, and iii. 4, of St. Peter, vii. 55, of St. Stephen,—when their visual faculties were most strongly stimulated, and most powerfully exercised. It appears to be employed also here and elsewhere to indicate that faculty which the Apostles possessed, of discerning the spirits and scrutinizing the inward affections.

10. υἱὲ Διαβόλου] By his name he was 'son of Jesus,' but by opposing Jesus he became son of the Devil.

11. ἔσῃ τυφλὸς—χειραγωγούης] thou shalt be blind, not seeing the sun for a season. Saul himself, in his blind rage against the Church, had been stricken with blindness by God. Elymas, in his blind perversion of the truth, is now stricken with blindness by God at Paul's word. Paul was stricken in mercy, till he prayed, and was restored by God through the agency of Ananias (ix. 11. 17, 18), in order that he might see the light of the Gospel. So Elymas was threatened with blindness for a season (cp. Luke iv. 13), that he might repent and see the light in body and soul. Saul had χειραγωγούνας, who led him to Damascus, where he received his sight (ix. 8), and Elymas had his χειραγωγούς. The scales had fallen from the eyes of Saul (ix. 18). A mist falls on the eyes of Elymas, and that mist was "for a season,"—a season of repentance, and might be dispelled, if he would resort to the same restoratives as St. Paul.

Thus the temporary blindness of the eye might be ministerial to the eternal light of the soul. Let these circumstances be considered by those who would charge St. Paul with cruelty. See above, on chap. v. 5.

—μὴ βλέπων] See above, ix. 9.

12. διδαχῇ] See Mark i. 27.

13. οἱ περὶ Παῦλον] Paul and his company. Cp. John xi. 19.

—Πέργην] Perga, the metropolis of Pamphylia, celebrated for its Temple of Artemis; on the river Cestrus,—seven miles from its mouth. Strabo, xiv. 4. Wetst. p. 535. Houson, p. 194.

—Ἰωάννης] John. See xii. 12. 25; xiii. 5; xv. 37.

14. Ἀντιόχειαν] Antioch of Pisidia; on Mount Taurus, east δίας, καὶ εἰσελθόντες εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῶν σαββάτων ἐκάθισαν.

¹⁵ * Μετὰ δὲ τὴν ἀνάγνωσιν τοῦ νόμου καὶ τῶν προφητῶν, ἀπέστειλαν οἱ ^{k Luke 4. 16. ver. 27.} ἀρχισυνάγωγοι πρὸς αὐτοὺς λέγοντες, Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί, εἴ τίς ἐστὶν ἐν ὑμῖν λόγος παρακλήσεως πρὸς τὸν λαὸν, λέγετε.

¹⁶ ¹ Ἀναστὰς δὲ Παῦλος, καὶ κατασείσας τῇ χειρὶ, εἶπεν, Ἄνδρες Ἰσραηλῖται, ^{1 ch. 12. 17. & 19. 33. & 21. 40. m Exod. 1. 1. & 13. 6. & 12. 31. & 13. 14. n Exod. 16. 2, 35. Num. 14. 34. Deut. 1. 31. (Sept.). Ps. 95. 8—11. o Josh. 14. 1, 2. p Judg. 2. 16. & 3. 9. q 1 Sam. 8. 5. & 9. 15. & 10. 1. Hos. 13. 11.} καὶ οἱ φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεὸν, ἀκούσατε. ¹⁷ ^m Ὁ Θεὸς τοῦ λαοῦ τούτου Ἰσραὴλ ἐξελέξατο τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν καὶ τὸν λαὸν ὕψωσεν ἐν τῇ παροικίᾳ ἐν γῇ Αἰγύπτῳ, καὶ μετὰ βραχίονος ὑψηλοῦ ἐξήγαγεν αὐτοὺς ἐξ αὐτῆς. ¹⁸ ⁿ καὶ ὡς τεσσαρακονταετὴ χρόνον ἐτροφοφόρησεν αὐτοὺς ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ. ¹⁹ ^o καὶ καθελὼν ἔθνη ἑπτὰ ἐν γῇ Χαναὰν, κατεκληρονόμησεν αὐτοῖς τὴν γῆν αὐτῶν, ²⁰ ὡς ἔτεσι τετρακοσίοις καὶ πεντήκοντα. ^p καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα ἔδωκε κριτὰς ἕως Σαμουὴλ τοῦ προφήτου. ²¹ ^q κακέειπεν ἡγήσαντο βασιλεῖα· καὶ ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Θεὸς τὸν Σαοὺλ of Apollonia; built by Seleucus Nicator; it obtained the 'jus Italicum' under Augustus. Plin. v. 24.

¹⁵ μ. δ. τ. ἀνάγνωσιν τοῦ νόμου καὶ τῶν προφητῶν] after the reading of the Law and the Prophets. Cp. xv. 21. After the reading of the proper lesson for the day from the Pentateuch (Paraschah), of which there were fifty-three or fifty-four, and of the Haphtarah, or proper lesson from the Prophets, corresponding in number, and in some degree in purport, to the respective Paraschah. The weekly Calendar of the Lessons read in the Synagogues may be seen in Bartoloc. Bibl. Rabb. ii. pp. 593—8; 655—664. Allen's Modern Judaism, pp. 9—12. Cp. Hottinger, Thesaur. Philol. pp. 215—220. Buxtorf, Synag. cap. xvi.

The XLIVth of the Parashioth and Hapthoroth is now Deut. i.—iii. 22. Isa. i. 1—27. And from their internal connexion with St. Paul's speech, vv. 18, 19, it has been conjectured by some (e. g. Bengel) that those were the lessons of the day.

In what language did St. Paul preach in Pisidia?

Strabo (xiii. ad fin.) distinguishes the Pisidian tongue from the Greek and the Lydian; and if St. Paul spoke to the people in their vernacular tongue, his address was in some other language than Greek. We do not find that he had any difficulty in making himself understood by any of the various populations of Asia Minor, who spoke many different languages (see Strabo xii. in Lightfoot, ii. 693); and this is a confirmation of what was stated above concerning the gift of Tongues (ii. 4). See below, on xiv. 11.

¹⁶ κατασείσας τῇ χειρὶ] See above, xii. 17, and below, xxi. 40.

— οἱ φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεόν] they who feared God. Sometimes called οἱ σεβόμενοι, worshippers. Proselytes of the Gate, not circumcised, and thus distinguished from ἄνδρες Ἰσραηλῖται, Israelites. Cp. v. 43. 50; xvi. 14; xvii. 4. 17; xviii. 7. See Mede's Essay, Book i. Disc. 3, p. 21, and above, Introduction, p. 9.

¹⁸ ἐτροφοφόρησεν] bare them, as a nursing father bears his children. So A, C, E, and seven cursives MSS., and many versions, e. g. Syr., Copt., Æthiop., Sahid., and some early writers. So Bornemann, Bloomf., Tisch. (ed. 7), and Alford. The word is from Deut. i. 31, LXX, τροφοφορήσει, where Codex Vat. has τροποφορήσει σε Κύριος ὁ Θεός σου ὡς εἴτις τροποφορήσαι ἄνθρωπος τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ.

The word also occurs in 2 Macc. vii. 27, ἐλέησόν με τὴν ἐν γαστρὶ περιεγέκακάν σε μήνας ἑννέα, καὶ θηλάσασάν σε ἑτὶ τρία, καὶ ἐκθρέψασάν σε, καὶ ἀγαγούσαν εἰς τὴν ἡλικίαν ταύτην, καὶ τροποφορήσασαν, and in Macarius, Homil. 46, ἀναλαμβάνει, καὶ περιθάλπει καὶ τροποφορεῖ ἐν πολλῇ στοργῇ (Eustath. Odys. β. 131).

And it is explained by Cyril, Gloss., ὡς τροφὸς ἐβάστασε, bare them as it were on his back, as a nursing father does his child. Cp. Exod. xix. 4. Numb. xi. 12. Isa. xlv. 3; and cp. Deut. v. 15; vii. 2. Isa. lxiii. 9. Hos. xi. 3. Amos ii. 10.

This is a better reading than that of Elz., ἐτροποφόρησεν (bare their manners), which was indeed true, but not likely to be said, especially by St. Paul, who sought, as far as was consistent with truth, to offend none, and conciliate all (1 Cor. ix. 20);

St. Paul might well begin his address by reminding the Jews of their privileges in being nursed by the tender care of God; but it is not probable that so consummate an orator would have commenced his address with what would exasperate and repel them, viz. with a commemoration of their ingratitude to Him.

¹⁹ ἔθνη ἑπτὰ] seven nations. Deut. vii. 1.

VOL. I.—PART II.

— κατεκληρονόμησεν] He assigned as an inheritance. So A, B, C, D, E, G, and many Cursives, and this is received by Lachm., Tisch., Born., Alf.—Elz. has κατεκληροδότησε, which is probably a gloss on the other word, used in an uncommon sense. Cp. Numb. xxvi. 54. 56. Josh. xiv. 2. Ps. lxxviii. 55.

²⁰ ὡς ἔτεσι τετρακοσίοις καὶ πεντήκοντα καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα] for about four hundred and fifty years: and after these— Elz. has καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα ὡς ἔτεσι τετρακοσίοις καὶ πεντήκοντα.

The true reading has been happily restored by Lachmann from the oldest MSS., A, B, C, supported by the Latin, Coptic, Armenian, and Sahidic Versions, and by Chrys., and by D, which has not μετὰ ταῦτα.

This solves the question which has been the subject of much discussion in the comments upon this verse. The Latin Version explains it well thus, "quasi post quadringentos et quinquaginta annos," i. e. from the great epoch to which St. Paul had referred at the commencement of his speech, their reception into covenant with God, in Isaac, which was about (ὡς) 450 years before their entering into their inheritance in the promised land, i. e. from A.M. 2046, the birth of Isaac, to A.M. 2493, when the land began to be cultivated by the Israelites.

As Bengel well says, "Distributio terræ (Canaan) non est initium periodi quasi annorum ccccl, sed meta;" and he refers to John ii. 20 for the use of the dative, "quo innuitur, quantum annorum ab initio rei intercesserit, dum res ipsa eveniret."

It is therefore unreasonable to allege, that this calculation is irreconcilable with that in 1 Kings vi. 1. That chronological period begins with the Exodus, this ends with the entrance into Canaan.

But it is worthy of remark, that the interval between the birth of Isaac and the entrance into Canaan was equal in duration to the interval between the deliverance of Exodus and the building of the Temple; and nearly corresponded to the time from the rebuilding of Jerusalem, after the Captivity, to the Death of Christ.

The entrance into the Promised Land, and the building of the Temple, were earnest and figures of the entrance opened into Heaven, and of the building up of the Christian Church, by the Sacrifice of Christ on the Cross; and each of these three Events was preceded by some great national Mercy at a distance of about 450 years.

A few more words on the reading of this passage;

One of the characteristics of a modern school of Biblical Criticism, is its inordinate love of discovering discrepancies in Holy Scripture;

This is remarkably exemplified in some recent expositions of this passage;

The reading of the three principal Uncial MSS. removes the discrepancy which is found in the received text between this verse and 1 Kings vi. 1.

Yet, some Critics, who, on other occasions, disparage the received Text, and profess great respect for the authority of the Uncial MSS., here treat the Uncial MSS. with contempt, and affirm that they have been "corrupted, in order to solve the chronological difficulty."

Such an example as this is, however, instructive. It serves to neutralize the evil arising from the supposed "discovery of discrepancies" in Scripture. It suggests the reflection, that those allegations are not made on solid grounds, but proceed from the impulses of an arbitrary caprice, which disparages History and Criticism, and loves to gratify a morbid appetite of scepticism by contradictions invented by itself, and imputed to Holy Writ.

r 1 Sam. 13. 14.
& 15. 28.
& 16. 13.
Ps. 89. 20.
ch. 7. 45.
s 2 Sam. 7. 12.
Isa. 11. 1.
Zech. 3. 9.
t Mal. 3. 1.
Matt. 3. 1.
Mark 1. 2.
Luke 3. 3.
John 3. 23.
u John 1. 20, 26,
27. Matt. 3. 11.
Mark 1. 7.
Luke 3. 16.
x Matt. 10. 6.
ch. 3. 26, 46.
y John 16. 3.
ch. 3. 17.
& 15. 21.
1 Cor. 2. 8.
1 Tim. 1. 13.
z Matt. 27. 20—22.
Mark 15. 11—13.
Luke 23. 18, 21—
23. John 19. 6.
a Matt. 27. 59.
Mark 15. 46.
Luke 23. 53.
John 19. 38.
b ch. 2. 24.
c Matt. 23. 16.
ch. 1. 3.
1 Cor. 15. 5, 6. d Gen. 3. 15.
& 22. 18.
& 49. 10.
Deut. 18. 15.
Jer. 23. 5.
Dan. 9. 24, 25.
Gal. 3. 16.
e Ps. 2. 7.
Heb. 1. 5. & 5. 5.
f Isa. 55. 3.
g Ps. 16. 10.
ch. 2. 27, &c.
h 1 Kings 2. 10.
ch. 2. 29.

υἱὸν Κῖς, ἄνδρα ἐκ φυλῆς Βενιαμὴν, ἔτη τεσσαράκοντα. ²² καὶ μεταστήσας αὐτὸν ἡγείρεν αὐτοῖς τὸν Δαυὶδ εἰς βασιλείαν, ᾧ καὶ εἶπε μαρτυρήσας, Εὗρον Δαυὶδ τὸν τοῦ Ἰεσσαὶ, ἄνδρα κατὰ τὴν καρδίαν μου, ὃς ποιήσει πάντα τὰ θελήματά μου. ²³ Τούτου ὁ Θεὸς ἀπὸ τοῦ σπέρματος κατ' ἐπαγγελίαν ἡγάγε τῷ Ἰσραὴλ σωτῆρα Ἰησοῦν, ²⁴ προκηρύξαντος Ἰωάννου πρὸ προσώπου τῆς εἰσόδου αὐτοῦ βάπτισμα μετανοίας παντὶ τῷ λαῷ Ἰσραὴλ. ²⁵ Ὡς δὲ ἐπλήρου ὁ Ἰωάννης τὸν δρόμον ἔλεγε, τίνα με ὑπονοεῖτε εἶναι; οὐκ εἰμὶ ἐγὼ ἀλλ' ἰδοὺ, ἔρχεται μετ' ἐμέ, οὗ οὐκ εἰμὶ ἄξιος τὸ ὑπόδημα τῶν ποδῶν λῦσαι. ²⁶ Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί, υἱοὶ γένους Ἀβραάμ, καὶ οἱ ἐν ὑμῖν φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεόν, ὑμῖν ὁ λόγος τῆς σωτηρίας ταύτης ἔξαπεστάλη. ²⁷ Οἱ γὰρ κατοικοῦντες ἐν Ἱερουσαλὴμ, καὶ οἱ ἄρχοντες αὐτῶν, τοῦτον ἀγνοήσαντες, καὶ τὰς φωνὰς τῶν προφητῶν τὰς κατὰ πᾶν σάββατον ἀναγινωσκομένας, κρίναντες ἐπλήρωσαν. ²⁸ Καὶ μηδεμίαν αἰτίαν θανάτου εὐρόντες ᾗτήσαντο Πιλάτον ἀναιρεθῆναι αὐτόν. ²⁹ Ὡς δὲ ἐτέλεσαν πάντα τὰ περὶ αὐτοῦ γεγραμμένα, καθελόντες ἀπὸ τοῦ ξύλου ἔθηκαν εἰς μνημεῖον. ³⁰ Ὁ δὲ Θεὸς ἡγείρεν αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν. ³¹ ὃς ὥφθη ἐπὶ ἡμέρας πλείους τοῖς συναναβᾶσιν αὐτῷ ἀπὸ τῆς Γαλιλαίας εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ· οἵτινες νῦν εἰσι μάρτυρες αὐτοῦ πρὸς τὸν λαόν. ³² Καὶ ἡμεῖς νῦν ὑμᾶς εὐαγγελιζόμεθα τὴν πρὸς τοὺς πατέρας ἐπαγγελίαν γενομένην, ὅτι ταύτην ὁ Θεὸς ἐκπεπλήρωκε τοῖς τέκνοις αὐτῶν ἡμῶν ἀναστήσας Ἰησοῦν. ³³ ὥς καὶ ἐν τῷ ψαλμῷ γέγραπται τῷ δευτέρῳ, Υἱὸς μου εἶ σὺ, ἐγὼ σήμερον γεγέννηκά σε. ³⁴ Ὅτι δὲ ἀνέστησεν αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν, μηκέτι μέλλοντα ὑποστρέφειν εἰς διαφθοράν, οὕτως εἴρηκεν, Ὅτι δώσω ὑμῖν τὰ ὅσια Δαυὶδ τὰ πιστά. ³⁵ Διὸ καὶ ἐν ἐτέρῳ λέγει, Οὐ δώσεις τὸν Ὅσιόν σου ἰδεῖν διαφθοράν. ³⁶ Δαυὶδ μὲν γὰρ

21. Σαουλ—ἔτη τεσσαράκοντα] Saul—forty years. The Old Testament does not record the duration of Saul's reign. St. Paul's statement agrees with Josephus (Ant. vi. 14. 9), who says that Saul reigned eighteen years before Samuel's death, and twenty after it. As Biscoe observes (p. 616), "Saul's youngest son Ishbosheth was forty years old at the time of his father's death, and yet his father is said to be but a young man when he was first inaugurated by Samuel."

22. ᾧ καὶ εἶπε μ., Εὗρον—μου] to whom He bare witness and said, I found David the son of Jesse, &c. A passage not found totidem verbis in any one place of the Old Testament; but composed in substance and mainly in letter of two or three texts,—Ps. lxxix. 21. 1 Sam. xiii. 14; xv. 28; xvi. 13. Chrys.

"The Jewish writers and speakers were accustomed to recite a passage not found in so many words literatim in Scripture, but made up of several passages." (Rosenmüller.)

An excellent observation, which, if duly attended to, might have preserved the Sacred Text from many unjust aspersions of some later Critics, and have saved them and others from the unhappy consequences of such allegations. See above on Matt. ii. 23. Acts vii. 43.

23. ἡγάγε] brought. So A, B, E, G, H, and many Cursives, for ἡγείρε. Cp. Zech. iii. 8, ἔγω τὸν δούλόν μου Ἀνατολῆν. So Isa. xlviii. 15, ἐγὼ ἐκάλῃσα, ἐγὼ ἡγάγον αὐτόν. Heb. i. 6, ὅταν εἰσαγγῇ τὸν πρωτότοκον.

— Ἰησοῦν] Jesus = the name twice uttered by St. Paul in this speech, see v. 33,—the Jews at Antioch in Pisidia were more tolerant than those at Jerusalem. See on vii. 45.

25. ἐπλήρου] was fulfilling; in the execution of his mission, as the πρόδρομος or forerunner of Christ.

29. ἔθηκαν εἰς μνημεῖον] they laid Him in a tomb. Because the Jews delivered Christ to Pilate, they are represented as the Authors of His Death and Burial, although they did not transact either the one or the other with their own hands.

As far as His Death and Burial were acts of enmity towards Him, they are accounted the agents, as Judas, who only gave occasion to the purchase of the Field of Blood, is called the purchaser of it. Acts i. 18. See note there.

The reason of this seems to be, that Almighty God, Whose Word Holy Scripture is, traces human actions back through the indirect processes of intermediate agency, and lays the responsibility of them at the door of the original promoters.

On the other hand, as far as Christ's Death was a work of Love, it is ascribed to God and Christ (Matt. xx. 28. Rom. viii. 32. Gal. i. 4. 1 Tim. ii. 6); and God and Christ are blessed for that work which caused the rejection of the Jews; just as Joseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus are mentioned honourably in Scripture (John xix. 38) for performing the work of His Burial, which is here ascribed, not without censure, to the Jews.

Thus even the worst actions of man are overruled for good, and the enmity of Satan is made an occasion for the triumph of the love of God.

32. ἡμῶν] of us; Elz. ἡμῖν, which appears to have little MS. authority: ἡμῶν is in A, B, C*, D, and is supported by Vulg. and other versions. The sense is,—He has fulfilled them to the children of ourselves; and much more to us; to us and our posterity. Cp. ii. 39. St. Paul loves to identify himself with his hearers.

33. ψαλμῷ τῷ δευτέρῳ] in the Second Psalm. Psalm ii. 7. Some, with Cod. D, Origen, and Hilary, read τῷ πρώτῳ. What is now the Second Psalm, originally formed one with the First, or rather the First Psalm was the Prooemium to the Psalter. See Michaelis and Rosenmüller here.

— υἱὸς μου εἶ—σήμερον γεγέννηκά σε] This contains two distinct sayings—

(1) Thou art My Son from Eternity (Chrys., Cyril). And (2) To-day, i. e. now (in time) I have begotten Thee. "Eternitas nunquam vocabulo hodie significatur." (Bengel.)

I have begotten Thee to-day, in a double respect, (1) At thy Incarnation (see S. Cyril, in an excellent Scholium, Caten. p. 224).

(2) At thy Resurrection from the dead; on which St. Paul here specially dwells, as in Heb. i. 5; and to which the Psalmist specially refers, as appears from the fact that the Mediatorial Kingdom of Christ, which he is there describing, is consequent on, and due to, Christ's obedience and sufferings, and Resurrection from the dead (see above on Matt. xxviii. 18). And it was true, in an emphatic sense, that, at the Resurrection, God said σήμερον γεγέννηκά Σε, for Christ is πρωτότοκος τῶν νεκρῶν, the first-begotten of the dead (Col. i. 18. Rev. i. 5). See above, Acts ii. 24. "The Resurrection of Jesus," says Lightfoot, "was the Dawn of the new world, the Morning of the New Creation." See above on John xvi. 21 and Acts ii. 24.

34. τὰ ὅσια Δαυὶδ] τῇ ἡγῃ, the mercies conferred on David, which were πιστά, surely pledged to him by God.

35. οὐ δώσεις—διαφθοράν] Thou wilt not suffer Thy Holy One to see corruption. It would seem that St. Paul had heard, or received an account of, St. Peter's Speech on the Day of Pentecost. See above on ii. 25—31.

ιδία γενεᾷ ὑπηρετήσας, τῇ τοῦ Θεοῦ βουλῇ ἐκοιμήθη, καὶ προστετέθη πρὸς τοὺς πατέρας αὐτοῦ, καὶ εἶδε διαφθοράν· ³⁷ ὃν δὲ ὁ Θεὸς ἡγείρεν, οὐκ εἶδε διαφθοράν.

³⁸ Ἰ γνωστὸν οὖν ἔστω ὑμῖν, ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί, ὅτι διὰ τούτου ὑμῖν ἄφεσις ἁμαρτιῶν καταγγέλλεται· ³⁹ καὶ ἀπὸ πάντων, ὧν οὐκ ἠδυνήθητε ἐν τῷ νόμῳ Μωϋσέως δικαιοθῆναι, ἐν τούτῳ πᾶς ὁ πιστεύων δικαιούται. ⁴⁰ Βλέπετε οὖν, μὴ ἐπέλθῃ ἐφ' ὑμᾶς τὸ εἰρημένον ἐν τοῖς προφήταις, ⁴¹ Ἰδετε, οἱ καταφρονηταί, καὶ θαυμάσατε, καὶ ἀφανίσθητε· ὅτι ἔργον ἐργάζομαι ἐγὼ ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ὑμῶν, ἔργον ὃ οὐ μὴ πιστεύσητε, ἐάν τις ἐκδιηγῇται ὑμῖν.

⁴² Ἐξόντων δὲ αὐτῶν παρεκάλουν εἰς τὸ μεταξὺ σάββατον λαληθῆναι αὐτοῖς τὰ ῥήματα ταῦτα.

⁴³ Ἀνθείσης δὲ τῆς συναγωγῆς, ἠκολούθησαν πολλοὶ τῶν Ἰουδαίων καὶ τῶν σεβομένων προσηλύτων τῷ Παύλῳ καὶ τῷ Βαρνάβᾳ· οὔτινες προσλαλοῦντες αὐτοῖς ἔπειθον αὐτοὺς προσμένειν τῇ χάριτι τοῦ Θεοῦ.

⁴⁴ Τῷ δὲ ἐχομένῳ σαββάτῳ σχεδὸν πᾶσα ἡ πόλις συνήχθη ἀκοῦσαι τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ.

⁴⁵ Ἰδόντες δὲ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι τοὺς ὄχλους ἐπλήσθησαν ζήλου, καὶ ἀντέλεγον τοῖς ὑπὸ τοῦ Παύλου λεγομένοις, ἀντιλέγοντες καὶ βλασφημοῦντες. ⁴⁶ Παρῥησιασάμενοι δὲ ὁ Παῦλος καὶ ὁ Βαρνάβας εἶπον, Ὑμῖν ἦν ἀναγκαῖον πρῶτον λαληθῆναι τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ· ἐπειδὴ δὲ ἀπωθεῖσθε αὐτὸν, καὶ οὐκ ἀξίους κρίνετε ἑαυτοὺς τῆς αἰωνίου ζωῆς, ἰδοὺ στρεφόμεθα εἰς τὰ ἔθνη· ⁴⁷ οὕτως γὰρ ἐντέταλται ἡμῖν ὁ Κύριος, Τέθεικά σε εἰς φῶς ἐθνῶν, τοῦ εἶναί σε εἰς σωτηρίαν ἕως ἐσχάτου τῆς γῆς· ⁴⁸ ἀκούοντα δὲ τὰ ἔθνη ἔχαιρον, καὶ ἐδόξαζον τὸν λόγον τοῦ Κυρίου· καὶ ἐπίστευσαν ὅσοι ἦσαν τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον.

36. ιδία γενεᾷ ὑπηρετήσας] David ministered on earth to his own Generation, and died; but Christ ministers to all generations. He died and rose again, and liveth for evermore, in order that all generations may live for ever; and He ministers in heaven, being "a Priest for ever" (Psalm cx. 4), seeing "He ever liveth to make intercession for us" (Heb. vii. 25).

38, 39. γνωστὸν οὖν ἔστω] Be it therefore known unto you, brethren, that through this Man remission of sins is being declared; and that every one who believeth is being justified from all things from which ye could not be justified by the Law of Moses.

— δικαιούται] is being justified; δικαιοῦν is the word used by the LXX for the Hebrew רָצַח, 'justificavit, crimine absolvit; poenis immunem pronuntiavit; adeoque רָצַח justum in foro divinæ aequitatis et judicio declaravit.' See on Luke vii. 29; xvii. 14. Rom. i. 17. Cp. Gen. xxxviii. 26; xlv. 16. Exod. xxiii. 7. Deut. xxv. 1. Ps. lxxii. 3; cxliii. 2. Isa. v. 23. Jer. iii. 11. Ezek. xvi. 51, 52. Cp. Bp. Bull., Harmon. Apostol. cap. i., and Introduction to Romans below, p. 198.

Here, in this first Sermon, which St. Paul is recorded to have preached in a Jewish Synagogue, we have the germ of his two Epistles to the Galatians and Romans, concerning the great doctrine of Justification; an internal evidence of genuineness and veracity. These two verses contain the sum of the Gospel, as distinguished from the Law. Hammond in Rom. iii., note B. Bp. Bull., l. c.

It is observable also that St. Paul's address appears to be formed on the same model as St. Stephen's—another proof of its influence on him, and of the truth of the history. See above, chap. vii. 58.

40. προφῆταις] Prophets. Habak. i. 5. On this use of the plural, see vii. 42, and Glass. Phil. pp. 286. 886.

41. ἴδετε, οἱ καταφρονηταί] behold, ye despisers. Hab. i. 5, where the Hebrew original is רְבִּיזִים, which is usually rendered look and see in the nations.

But it is probable that רְבִּיזִים is a radical word (see Pococke, in Not. Miscell. in Porta Mosi, p. 29), signifying unjust or insolent. Hence the Version of the LXX, καταφρονηταί, which is confirmed by the Syriac (see Rosenmüller). It is not very likely, and ought not to be taken for granted, that so common a word as רְבִּיזִים has been mistaken by the transcriber.

— ὃ οὐ μὴ π.] So A, B, C, D, E, G. Elz. has φ. The sense is not that they would not believe in the work (τῷ ἔργῳ), but they would not believe in Him Who wrought it.

42. αὐτῶν] Elz. adds ἐκ τῆς συναγωγῆς τῶν Ἰουδαίων, which is not found in the best MSS.—A, B, C, D, E,—and is a gloss.

— παρεκάλουν] Elz. adds τὰ ἔθνη, which is also a gloss; and is not found in A, B, C, D, E.

This is important. The ἔθνη, Heathens, were not attendants at the synagogue, and it is not till v. 46, after two offers of the Gospel to the Jews, that the Apostle turns to the Gentiles.

— τὸ μεταξὺ σ.] the following Sabbath—τὸ ἐσόμενον—(Theophyl.), not, as some say, the intervening week. Paul showed his wisdom and charity toward the Jews by preaching on their Sabbath. Ammonius also here interprets τὸ μεταξὺ by τὸ ἐσόμενον. Cp. v. 44, and μεταξὺ is thus used for the "following" by Josephus, B. J. v. 4. 2; c. Apion. i. 21.

43. ἔπειθον προσμένειν] they were persuading them to cleave to the grace of God. See above on xi. 23; xiv. 22. Elz. has ἐπιμένειν, but A, B, C, D, E have προσμένειν.

44. ἐχομένῳ] next. So A, C*, E*. Cp. Mark i. 38, τὰς ἐχομένας κομπούλεις. Luke xiii. 33, τῇ ἐχομένῃ. Elz. has ἐρχομένῳ, but ἐρχόμενος seems to be more applicable to what is still future, or is expected to come, and not past. See xviii. 21, τὴν ἐορτὴν τὴν ἐρχομένην. Josephus has τῇ ἐρχομένῃ, for the next day, Ant. vi. 11. 9. (Grinfield.)

48. καὶ ἐπίστευσαν ὅσοι ἦσαν τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον] and as many as were ordered, i. e. were set in order (by God's grace, and by His Word preached by St. Paul, and by their own will concurring therewith, see v. 43), to eternal life, believed, made profession of their faith, in the Gospel.

These words are rendered in the Authorized Version, "as many as were ordained to eternal life believed;"

The words τεταγμένοι ἦσαν are happily chosen, because they have a passive and also a middle sense; and represent the twofold operation of divine grace on the heart, and also the concurrence of the human will; both of which are requisite to Faith, and Salvation.

The Jews had rejected the offers of the Gospel made by St. Paul, see vv. 45, 46; they were thrusting the word away from themselves, ἀπωθόντο τὸν λόγον. They, on their side, were unruly and obstinate; they were ἀποτεταγμένοι τῇ ζωῇ. Cp. Luke xiv. 18;

But, on the other hand, the Gentiles rejoiced, and glorified p 2 Tim. 3. 11.
P 2

q Matt. 10. 14.
Mark 6. 11.
Luke 9. 5.
ch. 14. 6, 11.
& 18. 6.a Mark 16. 20.
ch. 19. 11.
Heb. 2. 4.

b 2 Tim. 3. 11.

c Matt. 10. 23.
ch. 8. 1.

d ch. 3. 2.

e Isa. 35. 6.

⁴⁹ Διεφέρετο δὲ ὁ λόγος τοῦ Κυρίου δι' ὅλης τῆς χώρας· ⁵⁰ οἱ δὲ Ἰουδαῖοι παρώτρυναν τὰς σεβομένας γυναῖκας τὰς εὐσχήμονας, καὶ τοὺς πρώτους τῆς πόλεως, καὶ ἐπήγειραν διωγμὸν ἐπὶ τὸν Παῦλον καὶ τὸν Βαρνάβαν, καὶ ἐξέβαλον αὐτοὺς ἀπὸ τῶν ὁρίων αὐτῶν. ⁵¹ οἱ δὲ ἐκτιναξάμενοι τὸν κονιορτὸν τῶν ποδῶν αὐτῶν ἐπ' αὐτοὺς ἤλθον εἰς Ἰκόνιον.

⁵² Οἱ δὲ μαθηταὶ ἐπληροῦντο χαρᾶς καὶ Πνεύματος ἁγίου.

XIV. ¹ Ἐγένετο δὲ ἐν Ἰκονίῳ, κατὰ τὸ αὐτὸ εἰσελθεῖν αὐτοὺς εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν τῶν Ἰουδαίων, καὶ λαλήσαι οὕτως ὥστε πιστεῦσαι Ἰουδαίων τε καὶ Ἑλλήνων πολὺ πλῆθος. ² Οἱ δὲ ἀπειθοῦντες Ἰουδαῖοι ἐπήγειραν καὶ ἐκάκωσαν τὰς ψυχὰς τῶν ἐθνῶν κατὰ τῶν ἀδελφῶν· ³ ἱκανὸν μὲν οὖν χρόνον διέτριψαν παρρησιαζόμενοι ἐπὶ τῷ Κυρίῳ τῷ μαρτυροῦντι τῷ λόγῳ τῆς χάριτος αὐτοῦ, διδόντι σημεῖα καὶ τέρατα γίνεσθαι διὰ τῶν χειρῶν αὐτῶν. ⁴ Ἐσχίσθη δὲ τὸ πλῆθος τῆς πόλεως· καὶ οἱ μὲν ἦσαν σὺν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, οἱ δὲ σὺν τοῖς ἀποστόλοις. ⁵ Ὡς δὲ ἐγένετο ὁρμὴ τῶν ἐθνῶν τε καὶ Ἰουδαίων, σὺν τοῖς ἄρχουσιν αὐτῶν, ὑβρίσαι καὶ λιθοβολῆσαι αὐτοὺς, ⁶ συνιδόντες κατέφυγον εἰς τὰς πόλεις τῆς Λυκαονίας, Λύστραν καὶ Δέρβην, καὶ τὴν περίχωρον, ⁷ κακεῖ ἦσαν εὐαγγελιζόμενοι.

⁸ Καί τις ἀνὴρ ἐν Λύστροις ἀδύνατος τοῖς ποσὶν ἐκάθητο, χωλὸς ἐκ κοιλίας μητρὸς αὐτοῦ, ὃς οὐδέποτε περιπεπατήκει. ⁹ Οὗτος ἤκουε τοῦ Παύλου λαλῶντος· ὃς ἀτενίσας αὐτῷ, καὶ ἰδὼν ὅτι πίστιν ἔχει τοῦ σωθῆναι, ¹⁰ εἶπε

the word of the Lord; they had been τεταγμένοι, set in order, to life eternal by God, working by the preaching of St. Paul, and disposing them to receive the Word preached; and they readily complied with the divine will, word, and work; they obeyed St. Paul's preaching, and, like good soldiers of God, being mustered by Him, set themselves also in order to march onward, in the way that leadeth to eternal life, ἦσαν τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον (see Mede's Works, p. 21, Book i. Disc. 3). Cp. 1 Cor. xvi. 15, εἰς διακονίαν τοῖς ἁγίοις ἔταξαν ἑαυτούς. The perfect passive is used in this sense by St. Luke, Acts xx. 13, οὕτω γὰρ ἦν διατεταγμένος, he had so ordered himself. Cp. the use of τεταγμένος in many passages of Philo, as quoted by Whitby here, p. 169. So συνετίθειντο John ix. 22, προσκέκλημαι Acts xiii. 2, ἐντέταλται xiii. 47, ἐπικέκληται xxv. 12, ἐπήγγελται Rom. iv. 21, and δεδαρμένης 2 Pet. i. 3. Cp. Winer, Gr. Gr. § 39, p. 234.

As many as had done this, ἐπίστευσαν; that is, they boldly and nobly, and in spite of the rage and blasphemy of the Jews (v. 45), and the persecution which they stirred up against Paul and Barnabas, whom they expelled out of their coasts (v. 50), made public profession of their faith, and were received by baptism into the Church.

This Exposition is confirmed by the authority of ancient Greek writers. See Caten, p. 230, where τεταγμένοι is explained by εἰς τοῦτο τὸ τάγμα ἐλθόντες.

This word ἐπίστευσαν, as in numerous other places of the Acts, and the other books of the N. T., means, they made a public profession of faith; they joined the number of the πιστοὶ or πιστεύοντες, that is, "nomina dederunt Christo, et aggregati sunt Ecclesiae." See what follows immediately here, ch. xiv. 1, ἐγένετο αὐτοὺς λαλήσαι ὥστε πιστεῦσαι πολὺ πλῆθος, who are there distinguished from οἱ ἀπειθοῦντες Ἰουδαῖοι. Cp. ii. 44; iv. 4, and specially viii. 13; xi. 21, πολλὸς ἀριθμὸς πιστεύσας; xv. 7, πιστεύσας; xvii. 12; xviii. 8; xxi. 20. 25, τῶν πεπιστευκότων ἐθνῶν, and Rom. xiii. 11, ὅτε ἐπιστεύσαμεν, when we made a public profession of our faith, and were engrafted into the Church. See also Titus iii. 8, where οἱ πεπιστευκότες τῷ Θεῷ means those who have made public profession of Christianity;

The word ἐπίστευσαν brings out clearly the doctrine that it is requisite for all—who have been called by God, and would set themselves in the way to eternal life—not only to believe, but also to profess openly, the true faith, in the public communion of the Visible Church; and that this is the only way to life eternal. See Matt. x. 32. Rom. x. 10.

The Vulgate has "quotquot erant præordinati" here, whence the English Version, "as many as were ordained." In like manner in the cognate text, ii. 47, τοὺς σωζόμενους, the Vulgate has "qui salvi fierent," whence the English Version, "such as should be saved;"

It would be interesting to inquire, What influence these renderings in the Vulgate Version had on the minds of some, like St. Augustine and his followers in the Western Church, in treating the great questions of Free-Will, Election, Reprobation, and Final Perseverance?

What, also, was the result of that influence on the minds of some writers of the Reformed Churches, who rejected the authority of Rome, which almost canonized that Version; and yet in these two important texts (Acts ii. 47; xiii. 48) were swayed away by it from the sense of the Original?

The tendency of the Eastern Fathers, who read the original Greek, was in a different direction from that of the Western School; and Calvinism can receive no support from these two texts as they stand in the original words of Inspiration, and as they were expounded by the primitive Church.

On the proofs from Holy Scripture that God willeth all men to be saved; and that He willeth man's will to be free to choose life or death, see below, Introduction to Romans, pp. 194—198, and on Rom. viii. 33 and 1 Tim. ii. 4.

50. τὰς σεβομένας] the Proselytes; see above, on v. 16.

— γ. τὰς εὐσχήμονας] those of rank. The Proselytes (αἱ σεβόμεναι), as recent converts, might be expected to be more zealous for their religion, and those of rank (αἱ εὐσχήμονες) would exercise their influence, perhaps with heathen husbands, and others who were οἱ πρῶτοι τῆς πόλεως, against the Apostles. Cp. Meyer.

51. Ἰκόνιον] Iconium, about ninety miles s.e. of Antioch, in Pisidia; and forty n.w. of Derbe. Cp. Howson, i. 220.

52. οἱ δὲ μαθηταὶ] the disciples were being filled with joy. Another joyful peroration; like a calm after a storm. See viii. 4; ix. 31; xii. 24.

CH. XIV. 1. Ἑλλήνων] Greeks. Proselytes of the gate. (Meyer). See above, on xi. 20.

4. τοῖς ἀποστόλοις] the Apostles. See above, on xiii. 2.

5. λιθοβολῆσαι] to stone them. As blasphemers of the Law. See v. 19.

6. Λύστραν καὶ Δέρβην] Lystra and Derbe, in Lycaonia.

The word Lystra, like Lydda and Thyatira, is sometimes used as a feminine, sometimes as a neuter plural. It seems to have been the birthplace of Timothy, see xvi. 1. Derbe, south of Iconium; south-east of Lystra. Gaius, one of St. Paul's companions, was of Derbe, xx. 4.

8. αὐτοῦ] Elz. adds ὑπάρχων, which is not in the best MSS.

— περιπεπατήκει] On this form, for περιπεπατήκει, see Valck. here, who cites v. 23, πεπιστεύσαμεν, and Mark xv. 7. 10. See also Winer, § 12, p. 67, who refers to Luke vi. 48, τεθεμελιώτο.

9. ἤκουε] was listening. St. Paul, on his part, discerns his spirit, and rewards his faith.

μεγάλη τῇ φωνῇ, Ἀνάστηθι ἐπὶ τοὺς πόδας σου ὀρθός· καὶ ἤλατο καὶ περι-επάτει. ¹¹ Οἱ δὲ ὄχλοι ἰδόντες ὃ ἐποίησε Παῦλος ἐπήραν τὴν φωνὴν αὐτῶν ^{f ch. 23. 6.}
Λυκαονιστὶ λέγοντες, Οἱ θεοὶ ὁμοιωθέντες ἀνθρώποις κατέβησαν πρὸς ἡμᾶς·
¹² ἐκάλουν τε τὸν μὲν Βαρνάβαν Δία, τὸν δὲ Παῦλον Ἑρμῆν, ἐπειδὴ αὐτὸς

10. ἤλατο] So A, B, C (for Elz. ἤλατο), he sprang up, and περιεπάτει, he was walking. Mark the difference between the aorist and imperfect.

11. Λυκαονιστὶ] in the Lycaonian tongue. An Assyrian dialect. (Jablonsky, "de lingua Lycaoniā.")

It has been argued by some, that St. Paul could not have understood this language, or he would have made his remonstrance to the people on hearing these words, and before, the priest brought out the victims to sacrifice. And thence it has been inferred, that St. Paul did not possess the power of speaking in the tongues of foreign nations, to whom he was sent. The words of Chrysostom on this passage have been cited in support of this assertion. S. Chrys. is answering the question why the Apostles did not interfere before, to check the adoration of the Lycaonians; and he says, οὐκ ἦν οὐδέπω δῆλον· τῇ γὰρ οἰκείᾳ φωνῇ ἐφθέγγοντο· διὰ τοῦτο οὐδὲν αὐτοῖς ἔλεγον, ἐπειδὴ δὲ εἶδον τὰ στέμματα, τότε ἐξεληθόντες κ.τ.λ., i. e. the design of the populace was not yet manifest, for they were speaking in their own tongue, and therefore the Apostles said nothing to them (for such—notwithstanding the objections of some learned persons—seems to be S. Chrysostom's meaning); but when they saw the garlands, then they went forth and expostulated with them. It may be, that the gift of understanding and speaking foreign languages was not always present with the Apostles; it may have been, and probably was, modified according to various circumstances of time and place. But it is certain, that in Chrysostom's opinion St. Paul was able to understand and speak in various foreign languages, which he had never learnt; as may be seen in that Father's Thirty-fifth Homily on the First Epistle to the Corinthians, ch. xiv. (Chrys., Opera, tom. x. pp. 320—327), where he speaks of the gift as bestowed for the preaching of the Gospel to foreign nations, τίνας ἔνεκεν ἔλαβον αὐτὸ (τὸ τῶν γλωσσῶν χάρισμα) οἱ ἀπόστολοι; ἐπειδὴ πανταχοῦ διέρχεσθαι ἐμελλον. See also his words above, Acts ii. 4. And it is observable, that in that Homily (p. 327) Chrysostom refers to St. Paul's conduct here at Lystra, without any intimation that it suggested any qualification of his statement, and of that of the Apostle himself in that chapter, v. 18, "I speak with tongues (i. e. as Chrys. interprets it, in foreign languages) more than they all."

It seems most probable that St. Paul understood what the Lycaonians said;

St. Luke understood the speech of these Lycaonians; for he tells us what the words were, and their meaning. And if St. Luke understood it, why not also St. Paul? Beside, in v. 14 it is not said ἰδόντες, but ἀκούσαντες. The multitude spoke in their own Lycaonian tongue, and it is not probable that they knew any other. And St. Paul addressed the multitude (see v. 14); he therefore understood the Lycaonian tongue. The same Divine Power which gave effect to his words, "Stand upright on thy feet" (v. 10), enabled him to speak them in the tongue understood by him to whom he spoke, and who "listened to his words" (v. 9); and if understood by him, they were understood by the crowd also, who therefore were ready to deify the speaker.

St. Paul had good reason to wait till the Priest brought forth his victims, and would have done sacrifice; because he had thus a more visible and palpable argument for his subsequent appeal in v. 15, where he says, "We preach to you to turn from these vanities to the living God." Every one must feel how much the presence of the oxen and the garlands, and the priest and his apparatus for sacrifice on the altar in front of the Temple, add to the beauty of Raffaëlle's Cartoon, and to the force of the Apostle's eloquence.

It has indeed been said by many in recent times, that the power of speaking in various foreign languages was not possessed by the Apostles, and therefore could not have been exercised by them in preaching the Gospel; and that there is no trace of such exercise of it in the Acts of the Apostles.

Surely there is such a trace in the narrative before us, and another similar trace in ch. xxviii. 4. But perhaps the most striking evidence of their power of speaking foreign languages is to be found in the silence of St. Luke as to any thing like previous study or preparation on the part of St. Paul or any of the Apostles, before they set out on their missionary journeys, or as to any difficulty or hindrance experienced by St. Paul or any of the Apostles, from inability to speak the language of foreign countries, in their execution of the commission they had received from Christ to "go and teach all Nations."

In the history of modern Missions, we see learned and accomplished men sent forth to preach the Gospel in foreign parts, and spending years in acquiring the languages of the countries to which they are sent. For example, a Bishop of New Zealand employs his six months' voyage to his diocese, in learning the dialects of the Pacific.

But what do we hear like this in the Acts of the Apostles? We never see or hear of any of the Apostles sitting down to learn a foreign language; and yet they have a Divine commission to go and preach to all nations. We see unlearned and ignorant Galileans standing up at once and addressing vast crowds in large cities with Divine eloquence, and great multitudes are converted by them.

We see St. Paul sent forth from Antioch as an Apostle to the Gentiles, and soon we hear him speak to the native tribes of Pisidia, Lycaonia, and Malta, and find him travelling to Illyricum and meditating a journey to Spain. We hear him say that he is a "debtor to Greeks and Barbarians,"—that is, to all (Rom. i. 14),—to preach to all; but we never see him pause for a moment in his course, to learn any foreign language, or ever impeded by the want of it.

On this subject see further above, ii. 4, and xiii. 15, and below, xxviii. 2—4.

St. Luke did not state that they possessed and exercised the gift, because the fact is clear from his narrative. S. Jerome well says (ad Hedib. vol. iv. p. 178), "Acceperunt Apostoli donationum genera, et quod magis necessarium erat, diversitatem linguarum omnium gentium, ut annuntiaturi Christum nullo indigerent interprete." He then refers to the speaking of St. Paul in the Lycaonian tongue, as described in this chapter, and says, "in Lycaoniā quum audissent Paulum et Barnabam loqui linguis suis, deos in homines conversos esse credebant."

The teaching of the Church of England on this subject is clear from her Proper Preface for Whitsunday. See above on ii. 4.—οἱ θεοὶ ὁμοιωθέντες] the gods in the likeness of men came down to us; and (v. 12) they were calling Barnabas Zeus, and Paul Hermes; for he was the chief speaker. See Homer, Odys. xvii. 484. Hesiod, Opp. et D. 247. Catull. lxx. 384.

Zeus or Jupiter is often associated with Hermes or Mercurius in mythological accounts of divine apparitions. See Plautus, Amphitr. i. 1. 1:

"In faciem versus Amphitryonis Jupiter,
Dum bellum gereret cum Telebois hostibus,
Alcmenam uxorem cepit usurariam;
Mercurius formam Sosie servi gerit Absentis."

Ovid, Met. viii. 626:

"Jupiter huc, specie mortali, cumque Parente Venit Atlantiades positus caducifer alis."

Fast. v. 495:

"Jupiter et lato qui regnat in æquore frater Carpebant socias Mercuriusque vias."

The scene of the tale in which Jupiter is represented as coming down with Mercurius to visit the abodes of men, and as entertained by Baucis and Philemon, and which is so well told by Ovid, Metamorphoses viii. 625—724, and so happily versified by Dryden, Works, iii. pp. 396—399, is laid in a country of which Lycaonia was a district:

"Here Jove with Hermes came, but in disguise
Of mortal men concealed their deities."

Barnabas was compared to Jupiter from the grave dignity of his appearance (Chrys.), particularly as compared with St. Paul, who, perhaps, was younger than Barnabas, and his stature and bodily presence less majestic (see 2 Cor. x. 1; xii. 3—9. 1 Cor. ii. 3. Nicephor. H. E. ii. 37); though, as Meyer well observes, the comparison of St. Paul to Mercury, who is always represented as "florens agilisque juventâ," would seem to contradict the apocryphal portraiture of the Apostle derived from the Acts of Paul and Thecla, according to which he was μικρὸς τῷ μεγέθει, ψιλὸς τὴν κεφαλὴν, ἀγκύλος ταῖς κνήμας.

Hermes, or Mercurius, was the messenger of Olympus; the patron of eloquence, &c. See Misterlitch and others on Horat. Od. i. 10. 1, "Mercuri facunde," &c.—"te Deorum Nuntium." On the word Ἑρμῆς, Hermes, connected with sermo and ἑρμηνεύω, see S. Aug. Civ. D. vii. 14, "De Mercurii officio."

ἦν ὁ ἡγούμενος τοῦ λόγου. ¹³ Ὁ δὲ ἱερεὺς τοῦ Διὸς, τοῦ ὄντος πρὸ τῆς πόλεως, ταύρους καὶ στέμματα ἐπὶ τοὺς πυλῶνας ἐνέγκας, σὺν τοῖς ὄχλοις ἤθελε θύειν. ¹⁴ Ἀκούσαντες δὲ οἱ ἀπόστολοι Βαρνάβας καὶ Παῦλος, διαῤῥήξαντες τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτῶν ἐξεπήδησαν εἰς τὸν ὄχλον κρίζοντες ¹⁵ καὶ λέγοντες, Ἄνδρες, τί ταῦτα ποιεῖτε; καὶ ἡμεῖς ὁμοιοπαθεῖς ἐσμεν ὑμῖν ἄνθρωποι, εὐαγγελιζόμενοι ὑμᾶς ἀπὸ τούτων τῶν ματαίων ἐπιστρέφειν ἐπὶ Θεὸν ζῶντα, ὃς ἐποίησε τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ τὴν γῆν καὶ τὴν θάλασσαν, καὶ πάντα τὰ ἐν αὐτοῖς. ¹⁶ ὃς ἐν ταῖς παρωχημέναις γενεαῖς εἴασε πάντα τὰ ἔθνη πορεύεσθαι ταῖς ὁδοῖς αὐτῶν. ¹⁷ καίτοιγε οὐκ ἀμάρτυρον ἑαυτὸν ἀφήκεν ἀγαθουργῶν, οὐρανόθεν ἡμῖν ὑετοὺς διδοὺς καὶ καιροὺς καρποφόρους, ἐμπιπλῶν τροφῆς καὶ εὐφροσύνης τὰς καρδίας ἡμῶν.

¹⁸ Καὶ ταῦτα λέγοντες μόλις κατέπαυσαν τοὺς ὄχλους τοῦ μὴ θύειν αὐτοῖς.

¹⁹ Ἐπῆλθον δὲ ἀπὸ Ἀντιοχείας καὶ Ἰκονίου Ἰουδαῖοι, καὶ πείσαντες τοὺς ὄχλους, καὶ λιθάσαντες τὸν Παῦλον, ἔσυρον ἔξω τῆς πόλεως, νομίσαντες αὐτὸν τεθνάναι. ²⁰ Κυκλωσάντων δὲ αὐτὸν τῶν μαθητῶν, ἀναστὰς εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὴν πόλιν· καὶ τῇ ἐπαύριον ἐξῆλθε σὺν τῷ Βαρνάβᾳ εἰς Δέρβην.

²¹ Εὐαγγελισάμενοί τε τὴν πόλιν ἐκείνην, καὶ μαθητεύσαντες ἱκανοὺς, ὑπέστρεψαν εἰς τὴν Λύστραν καὶ Ἰκόνιον καὶ Ἀντιόχειαν, ²² ἐπιστηρίζοντες τὰς ψυχὰς τῶν μαθητῶν, παρακαλοῦντες ἐμμένειν τῇ πίστει, καὶ ὅτι διὰ πολλῶν θλίψεων δεῖ ἡμᾶς εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ.

²³ Χειροτονήσαντες δὲ αὐτοῖς κατ' ἐκκλησίαν πρεσβυτέρους, προσευξάμενοι μετὰ νηστειῶν, παρέθεντο αὐτοὺς τῷ Κυρίῳ εἰς ὃν πεπιστεύκεισαν.

13. στέμματα] garlands, for the horns of the ταῦροι to be sacrificed, and for the Altars and Ministers. Virg. Georg. iii. 487,— “Sæpe in honore deū medio stans hostia ad aram, Lanea dum niveā circumdatur infula vittā,” &c.

See also Statius, Thebaid. iv. 114—7,—

“Tum fera cæruleis intexit cornua sertis.”

Ovid, Met. xv. 130,—

“Victima labe carens, vittis præsignis et auro Sistitur ante aras.”

Tertullian says, de Coronâ Mil. 10, “Ipsæ hostiæ, et aræ, ipsi ministri et sacerdotes coronantur.”

— τοὺς πυλῶνας] the large gates,—probably valvæ, folding-doors,—of the court-yard (atrium) of the house in which Paul and Barnabas were.

It seems, that after Paul had wrought the miracle on the lame man, he retired from the public admiration of the crowd into a house, as our Lord often did when He had wrought miracles. Hence the words ἀκούσαντες (not ἰδόντες) and ἐξεπήδησαν in v. 14.

14. ἀκούσαντες] when they heard. See Athanas. ad Gentes 35, p. 27. This is the first point of contact of Christianity with Idolatry, in Holy Scripture. And St. Paul's speech is the first Christian “Apologia ad Gentes,” and is the groundwork and model of all succeeding ones in the writings of Justin, Theophilus, Tertullian, Minucius, Arnobius, Clemens Alexandrinus, and other Christian Apologists.

— οἱ ἀπόστολοι Βαρνάβας καὶ Παῦλος] the Apostles, Barnabas and Paul. Observe the accuracy of the historian's language. They are never called Apostles till now, after their ordination at Antioch. See above on xiii. 2.

16. παρωχημέναις] This form, as well as παρωχηκότα, is used by S. Hippolytus, Philosophumen. p. 337, and de Antichristo, § 2.

17. καίτοιγε] and yet. See xvii. 27. Ἀγαθουργῶν, conferring benefits. So A, B, C.—Elz. has ἀγαθοποιῶν. The former reading seems preferable, as bringing out more clearly the truth, that God was not only Maker of what is good, but was also their εὐεργέτης or Benefactor.

— ἡμῖν—ἡμῶν] to us—of us. Some Editors read ὑμῖν, to you, and ὑμῶν, of you, from D, E, G, and a few cursives. But it seems to be more in St. Paul's manner to conciliate his hearers by identifying himself with them. The blessings of Providence extend to all mankind; and the Apostle, as one of the universal family, was a partaker in them, and is thankful for them. In his comprehensive largeness of heart he owns every one as a brother. His feeling is,

“Homo sum, humani nihil a me alienum puto.”

— δετοὺς—καιροὺς] showers—seasons. Therefore the elements and Seasons are like God's Apostles and Evangelists in the natural world, always preaching His love, wisdom, and power. And so οὐκ ἀμάρτυρον ἑαυτὸν ἀφήκεν. Cp. Acts xxvii. 27. Therefore they who fell away to Idolatry, or to Atheism, are without excuse. Rom. i. 20.

19. λιθάσαντες τὸν Παῦλον] having stoned Paul; a punishment for the part he took in the stoning of Stephen, vii. 58; viii. 1. (Woltzog.)

20. ἀναστὰς] having risen up, after being stoned. 2 Cor. xi. 25, ἀπαξ ἐλθόντων, and cp. 2 Tim. iii. 11, one of the most marvellous of all his deliverances; after being stoned by his enemies, and dragged by them out of the city, and left for dead, he arises, and on the morrow goes forth to Derbe—perhaps on foot—a journey of some hours.

There must have been something strange and perplexing to his converts, that a person endued with such marvellous powers in action, as St. Paul had just shown at Lystra, should be subject to such severe suffering. His afflictions, combined with his miracles, might disappoint and stagger them. How natural and needful therefore was it, that soon after these wonderful events he should preach on the topic mentioned in v. 22, that “through much tribulation we must enter into the kingdom of God!”

23. χειροτονήσαντες—πρεσβυτέρους] Cp. 2 Tim. i. 6. Paul and Barnabas had the episcopal dignity, and therefore ordained not only deacons, but priests. Ammonius, in Caten. p. 240.

But it has been questioned, whether the word χειροτονία (as well as χειροθεσία) signified Ordination in the Apostolic age.

Its primary signification is election (properly by show of hands), and in this sense the verb χειροτονέω seems to be used in 2 Cor. viii. 19; and it is not used in any other passages except that and the present, in the N. T.

But the word προχειροτονεῖν is used in Acts x. 41, and is applied to God Himself, and (as Valck. observes, p. 474) means to pre-ordain, or appoint by choice.

The substantive χειροτονία never occurs in the New Test. The passages where χειροτονεῖν occurs in the Apostolic Fathers, do not throw much light on the question. See Ignat. Phil. 10, χειροτονῆσαι θεοπροσβύτην, Polyc. 7. They appear to suppose election on the part of the people; whether they do not also suppose ordination by laying on of hands is not certain. To quote the words of Bingham, IV. vi. § 11, “The Greeks call the impo-

g Matt. 26. 65.

h ch. 10. 26.
Gen. 1. 1.
Ps. 33. 6.
A 124. 8.
& 146. 6.
Rev. 14. 7.

i Ps. 81. 12.
ch. 17. 30.

k Rom. 1. 20.

l 2 Cor. 11. 25.
2 Tim. 3. 11.

m ch. 11. 23.
& 13. 43.
Matt. 10. 38.
& 16. 24.
Luke 22. 28, 29.
& 24. 26.
2 Tim. 3. 12.
Rom. 8. 17.
n ch. 1. 26.
& 11. 30.
Tit. 1. 5.

²⁴ Καὶ διελθόντες τὴν Πισιδίαν ἤλθον εἰς Παμφυλίαν· ²⁵ καὶ λαλήσαντες ἐν Πέργῃ τὸν λόγον κατέβησαν εἰς Ἀττάλειαν· ²⁶ καὶ κἀκεῖθεν ἀπέπλευσαν εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν, ὅθεν ἦσαν παραδεδομένοι τῇ χάριτι τοῦ Θεοῦ εἰς τὸ ἔργον ὃ ἐπλήρωσαν. o ch. 13. 1, 3.

²⁷ Παραγενόμενοι δὲ καὶ συναγαγόντες τὴν ἐκκλησίαν ἀνήγγειλαν ὅσα ἐποίησεν ὁ Θεὸς μετ' αὐτῶν, καὶ ὅτι ἤνοιξε τοῖς ἔθνεσι θύραν πίστεως· ²⁸ διέτριστον δὲ χρόνον οὐκ ὀλίγον σὺν τοῖς μαθηταῖς. p ch. 15. 4.
1 Cor. 16. 9.
2 Cor. 2. 12.
Rev. 3. 8.

XV. ¹ Καὶ τινες κατελθόντες ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰουδαίας ἐδίδασκον τοὺς ἀδελφούς, ὅτι ἐὰν μὴ περιτέμνησθε τῷ ἔθει Μωϋσέως, οὐ δύνασθε σωθῆναι. a Gen. 17. 10.
Lev. 12. 3.
Gal. 5. 1, 2.
Phil. 3. 2.
Col. 2. 8, 11, 16.
b Gal. 2. 1.
ch. 11. 30.
& 13. 1. & 16. 4.

² Γενομένης οὖν στάσεως καὶ ζητήσεως οὐκ ὀλίγης τῷ Παύλῳ καὶ τῷ Βαρνάβᾳ πρὸς αὐτοὺς, ἔταξαν ἀναβαίνειν Παῦλον καὶ Βαρνάβαν καὶ τινὰς ἄλλους ἐξ αὐτῶν πρὸς τοὺς ἀποστόλους καὶ πρεσβυτέρους εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ, περὶ τοῦ ζητήματος τούτου.

³ Οἱ μὲν οὖν προπεμφθέντες ὑπὸ τῆς ἐκκλησίας διήρχοντο τὴν Φοινίκην καὶ Σαμάρειαν ἐκδιηγούμενοι τὴν ἐπιστροφὴν τῶν ἐθνῶν· καὶ ἐποίουν χαρὰν μεγάλην πᾶσι τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς. ⁴ Παραγενόμενοι δὲ εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ παρέδεδέχθησαν ὑπὸ τῆς ἐκκλησίας καὶ τῶν ἀποστόλων καὶ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων, ἀνήγγειλάν τε ὅσα ὁ Θεὸς ἐποίησε μετ' αὐτῶν. c Luke 15. 7, 10.
d ch. 14. 27.

⁵ Ἐξανέστησαν δὲ τινες τῶν ἀπὸ τῆς αἰρέσεως τῶν Φαρισαίων πεπιστευκότες, λέγοντες ὅτι δεῖ περιτέμνειν αὐτοὺς, παραγγέλλειν τε τηρεῖν τὸν νόμον Μωϋσέως. e ver. 1.

sition of hands both χειροτονία and χειροθεσία, as may be seen in the Canons of the Council of Nice (c. 19) and Chalcedon (c. 15).

"Yet sometimes these words are distinguished, as by the author of the Constitutions, where he says, πρεσβύτερος χειροθετεῖ, οὐ χειροτονεῖ, a presbyter gives imposition of hands, but does not ordain. . . . Neither does χειροτονία always signify Ordination in ancient writers, though it does most commonly so, as Fronto Ducuas (in Chrysost. hom. 1, ad pop. Antioch. p. 1) and other learned persons have showed."

The following are the arguments in favour of assigning the sense of Ordination to χειροτονήσαντες—not however as necessarily here implying the laying on of hands.

(1) That the nominative case agreeing with that participle is Paul and Barnabas.

(2) That Ordination was performed by Paul (see 2 Tim. i. 6), and was to be performed by Timothy, the Bishop of Ephesus (see 1 Tim. v. 22).

(3) That χειροτονήσαντες was generally understood in this sense by Ancient Authors, cp. S. Jerome in Isa. lviii. Theodoret H. E. i. 9. S. Jerome, l. c. says, "Plerique nostrorum χειροτονίαν, id est ordinationem clericorum, quæ non solum ad imprecationem vocis, sed ad impositionem impletur manûs,—sic intellegendum, ut assumant testimonium Pauli, Manus citò nemini imponeris." 1 Tim. v. 22. And Chrys. says (in Act. vi. 7), "This is χειροτονία—viz. the hand is laid on the head; and thus God works. His hand touches the head τοῦ χειροτονουμένου, if χειροτονία is rightly administered."

(4) The Ancient Versions of this passage authorize this sense. Thus Vulg. has "cùm constituissent presbyteros." And Valck., p. 474, "Seniores in Ecclesiâ constituere, est χειροτονεῖν πρεσβυτέρους." Cf. 2 Cor. viii. 19.

— κατ' ἐκκλησίαν] They ordained several Presbyters to each Church; but we hear of only one chief Spiritual Pastor of Crete or of Ephesus; and only of one Angel of the several Apocalyptic Churches (Rev. ii. 1—18; iii. 1—14).

— πρεσβυτέρους] This is the first mention in the Acts of the Ordination of Presbyters; but there were Presbyters before this. See xi. 30; and cp. xv. 2. 4. 6. 22.

25. Πέργῃ] Perga. See xiii. 13.

— Ἀττάλειαν] Attaleia, on the coast of Pamphylia, at the mouth of the river Catarrhactes; built by Attalus Philadelphus, King of Pergamus, in a convenient position for commanding the trade of Syria or Egypt. Howson, i. p. 242.

26. Ἀντιόχειαν, ὅθεν] Antioch—next after Jerusalem, the centre of Christianity—especially of Gentile Christianity. See above, xiii. 2, 3; xv. 2.

27. ἤνοιξε—θύραν] opened the door by the Keys of the Christian Ministry—a reference to our Lord's promise of the Keys, particularly to St. Peter (Matt. xvi. 19), by whom first Our Lord opened the door of the Church to Jews and Gentiles.

But we see here that this "power of the Keys," and of opening the door of the Church is ascribed to others also. Cp. Col. iv. 3.

CH. XV. 1. καὶ τινες—σωθῆναι] And certain persons came down from Judæa (to Antioch) and were teaching the brethren, that unless ye be circumcised according to the custom of Moses, ye cannot be saved. The assertors of these propositions were Pharisees who had embraced the Gospel, see v. 5. According to Epiphanius and others, the leader of these was Cerinthus, who excited the faithful against Peter (Acts xii. 17) for baptizing Cornelius and the Gentiles, and against Paul for not circumcising Titus (Gal. ii. 3). See Epiphanius. hæc. 28 and 30, pp. 111—114, Philastrius, de hæc. 36. S. Aug. de hæc. in v.; and S. Jerome, Epist. 89. Theodoret, hæc. ii. 3. With Cerinthus was associated Ebion, who held the same tenets with regard to the ceremonial law. See Epiphanius. hæc. 30, and A Lapide here, and Tillemont, Mémoires ii. p. 25.

A great part of this Chapter is quoted by S. Irenæus, iii. 14.

2. τῷ Παύλῳ καὶ τῷ Βαρνάβᾳ] Paul and Barnabas, and Titus also was with them, for there is little doubt that this is the visit of which St. Paul speaks, in his Epistle to the Galatians, ii. 1—10. See Irenæus, iii. 13, and Bede, and Bp. Pearson here, p. 379, "fourteen years after St. Paul's conversion." Cp. Kitto, pp. 299—305, and Meyer, and see the notes below on Gal. ii. 1—3; and above, Chronol. Table, pp. 24. 26.

— πρὸς τοὺς ἀποστόλους καὶ πρεσβυτέρους] to the Apostles and Presbyters. This expression is repeated four times in this chapter (vv. 4. 6. 22, 23. See also xvi. 4). It marks a distinction between the Apostles and Presbyters or Elders, and a superiority of order in the former. Ammonius.

We may also observe the frequent occurrence of ἀδελφοί, brethren, in this chapter—denoting the general body or πλῆθος (v. 12) of the Christian Laity. See vv. 1. 3. 7. 13. 22, 23. 32, 33. 36. 40. And thus we have presented to us a view of the primitive organization of the Church for settling controversies,

1. οἱ Ἀπόστολοι, the Apostles } with a "vox delib.

2. οἱ Πρεσβύτεροι, the Presbyters } rativa."

3. οἱ Ἀδελφοί, the Brethren, or the Laity, assisting at the deliberations (see v. 7. 11), and giving force to the decree of the Council by reception of it.

On this latter point, see further on v. 23.

This Council of Jerusalem is the model of all succeeding ones, except so far as their circumstances may have been modified by the renunciation of heathenism on the part of the Governing Power of a Country, and by its reception into the Christian Church. See Bp. Andrewes on the Authority of Christian Princes in summoning Councils, Sermon vii. vol. v. pp. 156—168; also Hooker, viii. 5; and the Expositors of the XX1st Article.

⁶ Συνήχθησαν δὲ οἱ ἀπόστολοι καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι ἰδεῖν περὶ τοῦ λόγου τούτου.

f ch. 10. 20.
& 11. 1, 2.

⁷ Πολλῆς δὲ συζητήσεως γενομένης, ἀναστὰς Πέτρος εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, "Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοὶ, ὑμεῖς ἐπίστασθε, ὅτι ἀφ' ἡμερῶν ἀρχαίων ἐν ἡμῖν ἐξελέξατο ὁ Θεὸς, διὰ τοῦ στόματός μου ἀκοῦσαι τὰ ἔθνη τὸν λόγον τοῦ εὐαγγελίου, καὶ πιστεῦσαι. ⁸ Καὶ ὁ καρδιογνώστης Θεὸς ἐμαρτύρησεν αὐτοῖς, δοὺς αὐτοῖς τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, καθὼς καὶ ἡμῖν. ⁹ καὶ οὐδὲν διέκρινε μεταξὺ ἡμῶν καὶ αὐτῶν, τῇ πίστει καθάρισας τὰς καρδίας αὐτῶν. ¹⁰ Νῦν οὖν τί πειράζετε τὸν Θεόν, ἐπιθεῖναι ζυγὸν ἐπὶ τὸν τράχηλον τῶν μαθητῶν, ὃν οὔτε οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν οὔτε ἡμεῖς ἰσχύσαμεν βαστάσαι; ¹¹ Ἀλλὰ διὰ τῆς χάριτος τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ πιστεύομεν σωθῆναι, καθ' ὃν τρόπον κἀκεῖνοι.

g 1 Chron. 28. 9.
ch. 1. 24.
& 10. 44.
h ch. 10. 43.
i Cor. 1. 2.
i Pet. 1. 22.

i Eph. 2. 8.
Tit. 3. 7.

¹² Ἐσίγησε δὲ πᾶν τὸ πλῆθος, καὶ ἤκουον Βαρνάβα καὶ Παύλου ἐξηγουμένων ὅσα ἐποίησεν ὁ Θεὸς σημεῖα καὶ τέρατα ἐν τοῖς ἔθνεσι δι' αὐτῶν.

j ch. 12. 17.

¹³ Μετὰ δὲ τὸ σιγῆσαι αὐτοὺς, ἀπεκρίθη Ἰάκωβος λέγων, "Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοὶ,

6. συνήχθησαν οἱ ἀπόστολοι καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι the Apostles and the Presbyters were gathered together.

The first COUNCIL of the CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The Convention of the Disciples (Acts i. 15) for the election of an Apostle, and the assembly for the appointment of Deacons (Acts vi. 11) are reckoned by some as Councils (e. g. by Cabasutius, de Conciliis, cap. i. ed. Lovan. 1776); and some add the Assembly at Miletus, Acts xx. 17: but these differ much from this Synod at Jerusalem.

It was a maxim of the Ancient Church "to do nothing without the Bishop"—μηδὲν ἄνευ τοῦ ἐπισκόπου πράσσειν (Ignat. ad Trall. 2). And (as Grotius observes) at this Council, the Apostles, although they had a sufficiency of right and of divine gifts in themselves, yet have left a lesson to Bishops, to do nothing without their Presbyters.

For a Summary of the purport and acts of this Council of Jerusalem, see Hooker, IV. xi.

—ἰδεῖν to see; "ut cognoscerent;" the Hebr. ya (yada) is often rendered by ἰδεῖν in LXX (see Lev. xxiii. 43. Deut. iii. 19; xxxiv. 6), and from that Hebrew root, the words εἶδω, εἶδμι, and video, seem to be derived.

7. Πέτρος] Peter; he rises first to make his defence, having been the first object of attack. See on v. 1. The summoning of this Council, and the part taken in it by St. Peter, seem to present a strong argument against the doctrine of his supremacy; and much more against that of the supremacy of the Bishops of Rome, who profess to be his successors.

If St. Peter had been Supreme Head of the Church, and if his decrees were absolute and infallible, there was no need of this appeal from Antioch (which Romish Divines affirm to have been St. Peter's see) to Jerusalem. There was no occasion for the assembling of a Council of Apostles and Presbyters there. If St. Peter had been, what every one of his so-called successors professes to be, by virtue of their alleged succession from St. Peter—Supreme and Infallible Head of the Church of Christ upon earth; then the appeal would have been to St. Peter himself; and he would not have attended the Council, to make his defence before it. And the decree of the Council would not have been framed as it is. We should have had a Papal brief, and not a Synodical decree.

The Holy Spirit appears to have taught the Church by this history, that in doubtful and controverted matters the appeal is not to any single Bishop, even though he be an Apostle, but to a Council of the Church; that is to say, to the Holy Ghost Himself, Whose presence and guidance have been promised by Christ to the Church, and may be rightly expected by her, when in imitation of ancient Councils, who placed the Volume of the Gospels on a royal throne in the midst of the Conclave, she prays for His direction, and regulates her deliberations, as St. James here teaches her to do, vv. 16—19, by His Holy Word.

And whatever has been decreed by Councils of the Church, duly constituted, and conducting their deliberations on this principle,—and whatever, having been so decreed by Councils, has been received by the consentient voice of the faithful, Clergy and Laity, in Christendom, which is the Body of Christ, and has taken root in its usage, that may be safely accepted as a true exposition of Christian doctrine.

It has been indeed alleged, that such principles as these impute Infallibility to a given body of men, e. g. to a Council; and that these principles are therefore liable, though not in the same degree, to the objections urged against the doctrine of Papal Supremacy. But this allegation is erroneous. It confounds two things which ought to be kept distinct, viz. à posteriori Inerrancy, and à priori Infallibility. The Romish theory asserts that the Pope is infallible,—i. e. that he cannot err in any thing that he may decree ex cathedra, as Pope; whether or no, what he has decreed, may be subsequently received by the consent of Christendom. But no such authority is rightly claimed for a Council. It cannot be said à priori, that a Council, or any given body of men, however wise or holy, who meet together, may not err. But it may be justly asserted, that when Councils are duly constituted and convened, and ground their deliberations on Holy Scripture; and when what they decree, is à posteriori received by the faithful, and becomes part of the Code of the Church, then what is so determined and received, is not erroneous, but true.

—ἀφ' ἡμερῶν ἀρχαίων from primitive days,—the beginning of the Gospel. See xi. 15, ἐν ἀρχῇ, at the beginning, or the Day of Pentecost. xxi. 16, ἀρχαίω μαθητῇ. Phil. iv. 15, ἐν ἀρχῇ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου. For the fact of St. Peter's selection, see Acts x. 20; xi. 12—15.

St. Peter refers to Christ's promise to him, that he should open the kingdom of heaven with the keys of the Word and Sacraments. Matt. xvi. 19.

—πιστεῦσαι] To be engrafted in His Church on their public profession of faith in Christ. See on xiii. 48.

8. ἐμαρτύρησεν αὐτοῖς] He bore witness to them by the visible descent of the Holy Spirit upon them, "as upon us at the beginning," Acts x. 44, 45; xi. 15.

10. τί πειράζετε τὸν Θεόν] Why do ye tempt God, Who has already declared His pleasure in this matter, by His vision to me and to Cornelius, and by the descent of the Holy Ghost on him, and on other Gentiles evangelized by my ministry? Acts x. 44; xi. 15. Why do ye tempt Him, by controverting what He has decided, and by resisting His will?

—(ζυγόν] The yoke of the Ceremonial Law; instead of the χρυσὸς (ζυγός, 'of Christ.' Matt. xi. 29, 30.

—οὐκ ἰσχύσαμεν] had not strength to bear—not a complaint of divine severity, but a confession of human infirmity. Cp. Phil. iv. 13.

11. Ἰησοῦ] Elz. adds Χριστοῦ, which is not in A, B, E, G, H. The hope of salvation (τοῦ σωθῆναι) is expressed emphatically by the word Ἰησοῦς, or Saviour, standing alone.

13. Ἰάκωβος] James. The Bishop of Jerusalem. (Chrys.) It is probable that as such he was President of the Council; and see St. Paul's words, Gal. ii. 9, concerning this assemblage, where he places James first.

(1) The first argument (for the reception of the Gentiles on equal terms with Jews, and without the imposition of the ceremonial law, now fulfilled in Christ) was the Nature of the Law itself, which even they to whom it was given were too weak to bear (v. 10).

(2) The second was from God's choice, that the Gentiles should be evangelized by Peter (v. 7, 8).

(3) The third is from the visible signs of God's approval, manifested in the miracles wrought by Him, through the instrumentality of Barnabas and Paul, in preaching to the Gentiles.

(4) The fourth argument, stated by James, vv. 16—19, is from ancient prophecy, foretelling the restoration of the house of David in the evangelization of the world: and to this St. James adds,— ἀκούσατέ μου. ¹⁴ ^k Συμεὼν ἐξηγήσατο, καθὼς πρῶτον ὁ Θεὸς ἐπεσκέψατο λαβεῖν ^k 2 Pet. 1. 1. ἐξ ἔθνων λαὸν τῷ ὀνόματι αὐτοῦ. ¹⁵ Καὶ τούτῳ συμφωνοῦσιν οἱ λόγοι τῶν προφητῶν, καθὼς γέγραπται, ¹⁶ ¹ Μετὰ ταῦτα ἀναστρέψω καὶ ἀνοικοδομήσω ¹ Amos 9. 11, 12. τὴν σκηνὴν Δαυὶδ τὴν πεπτωκυῖαν, καὶ τὰ κατεσκαμμένα αὐτῆς ἀνοικοδομήσω, καὶ ἀνορθώσω αὐτήν, ¹⁷ ὅπως ἂν ἐκζητήσωσιν οἱ κατάλοιποι τῶν ἀνθρώπων τὸν Κύριον, καὶ πάντα τὰ ἔθνη, ἐφ' οὓς ἐπικέκληται τὸ ὄνομά μου ἐπ' αὐτούς, λέγει Κύριος ὁ ποιῶν ταῦτα. ¹⁸ Γνωστὸν ἀπ' αἰῶνός ἐστι τῷ Θεῷ τὸ ἔργον αὐτοῦ. ¹⁹ Διὸ ἐγὼ κρίνω μὴ παρ- ^{m ver. 29.} ^{Gen. 9. 4.} ^{Lev. 3. 17.} ^{1 Cor. 8. 1. 9. 10.} ^{& 10. 14, 20, 21.} ^{1 Thess. 4. 3.} ^m ενοχλεῖν τοῖς ἀπὸ τῶν ἔθνων ἐπιστρέφουσιν ἐπὶ τὸν Θεόν ²⁰ ^m ἀλλὰ ἐπιστεῖλαι αὐτοῖς τοῦ ἀπέχεσθαι ἀπὸ τῶν ἀλισγημάτων τῶν εἰδώλων, καὶ τῆς πορνείας,

(5) A fifth, the crowning argument of all, derived from God's own attributes, His universal Knowledge, and Care, and everlasting Love, for what He has made (τὸ ἔργον αὐτοῦ, v. 18). And since He is the Maker and Father of the Gentiles, as well as of the Jews, therefore they are objects of His Love even from the beginning.

14. Συμεὼν] Simeon, ἰσραήλ, i. e. Simon Peter. See 2 Pet. i. 1. James does not say Πέτρος, but uses his original Hebrew name, as supplying an argument à fortiori. Simon, the Apostle of the Circumcision, he who has not changed his name, like Saul the Apostle of the Gentiles, but retains his original Hebrew appellation, although Petros is added to it, he with all his Jewish habits and prepossessions, has shown what God has done by him among the Gentiles. And now hear what your own Hebrew Prophets say to the same effect. He has been a true Simeon, hearing and obeying God; imitate him.

This is the last mention of St. Peter in the Acts of the Apostles. For some notices of his subsequent history, see below, Introduction to his first Epistle, and notes on 1 Pet. v. 13, and 2 Pet. i. 13.

— λαόν] Elz. adds ἐπὶ, which is not in A, C, D, E. The sense is, to take a people for His own Name, from the Gentiles; a saying best illustrated by our Lord's command to His Apostles, to go and baptize all Nations in the One Name of the Triune God.

16. τὴν σκηνὴν] = תִּבְרַת, tugurium, tabernaculum, domum. The word is not palace, but tent, to show the low estate to which the house of David had been reduced, when raised up into the Universal Church by Christ: cf. Isa. liv. 2. The Tabernacle of David is the Church of God, to be raised up in the Seed of David, which is Christ, the Eternal Word, Who pitched His tent in our Nature (John i. 14) in the house of David, and so raised up for ever the tabernacle of our fallen humanity (Œcumen. p. 123, and compare Hengstenberg, Christol. iii. 227), and in Whom all Nations are blessed.

This is a remarkable interpretation of Hebrew Prophecies; an interpretation delivered at Jerusalem itself, by the Apostle St. James, the first Bishop of Jerusalem. And it declares that the true Restoration of the Tabernacle of David is to be found in the reception of the residue of the human family, and in the flowing-in of all Nations, whether Jew or Gentile, into the Church of Christ. Is not this a divine declaration on the true "Restoration of the Jews?"

Amos ix. 12 says, יְהוָה יִרְדֹּם אֶת־כָּל־הַגּוֹיִם וְיִשְׁאֹר אֶת־הַיָּם, ut possideant residuum Edom, et omnes gentes super quas invocatum est nomen Meum in eas, Dominus dirit, which the LXX renders ὅπως ἐκζητήσωσιν οἱ κατάλοιποι τῶν ἀνθρώπων καὶ πάντα τὰ ἔθνη, ἐφ' οὓς ἐπικέκληται τὸ ὄνομά μου ἐπ' αὐτούς, λέγει Κύριος ὁ ποιῶν ταῦτα.

It has been supposed by some that the LXX read תִּבְרַת, and יִשְׁאֹר for יִשְׁאֹר, but this supposition is not necessary (see Pococke, Port. Mos. iv. p. 46). הָאֵל is often the note of the nominative case; and the LXX Version, which is sometimes a Targum or Paraphrase, regards Edom as a general representative of those who were alien from God.

St. James and St. Luke adopt that Version, as not contrary to the mind of the Spirit, and indeed as expressing that mind, declared in numerous other places of Holy Scripture (quoted by Mr. Grinfield), which are almost identical in sense with the words of the LXX. See, for instance, Ps. lxxxvi. 9, πάντα τὰ ἔθνη ὅσα ἐποίησας, ἕξουσιν καὶ προσκυνήσουσιν, καὶ δοξάσουσιν τὸ ὄνομά σου. Ps. xlii. 31; cii. 18. Isa. xliiii. 7.

17. ἐφ' οὓς—ἐπ' αὐτούς] a Hebraism retained by the LXX, from the original of Amos. Cf. αὐτοῦ 1 Pet. ii. 24. Rev. vii. 2; xiii. 12. Vorst. de Hebr. p. 546. The αὐτούς gives an emphasis to the relative,—even upon them. Cp. Winer, p. 134.

VOL. I.—PART II.

— ταῦτα] these things. Elz. adds πάντα, all, which is not in A, B, C, D, nor in Irenæus, l. c. The quotation from Amos ends at ταῦτα. And the comment of St. James begins at γνωστόν.

18. γνωστὸν ἀπ' αἰῶνός ἐστι τῷ Θεῷ τὸ ἔργον αὐτοῦ] known from eternity to God is His own work. This reading, which is adopted by Lachmann (with the omission of ἐστίν) and by Bornemann, is authorized by A (omitting ἐστίν) and by D, and by Irenæus, iii. 14, who has "Cognitum à sæculo Deo est opus Ejus," and by Vulg., Arm., Syr., omitting τῷ Κυρίῳ.

γνωστὰ is the reading of B, C, which omit the rest of the clause. E has γνωστὰ ἀπ' αἰῶνός ἐστι τῷ Θεῷ πάντα τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ, which is the reading of Elz.

The emphatic words are γνωστὸν, known, and ἔργον, work. God is the Maker of all; and He, the common Father of all, knows (i. e. not only foresees, but cares for and loves, γνῶναι, dilexit, Gen. xviii. 19. Exod. i. 8; ii. 25; xxxiii. 12. 17. Hos. v. 4, and passim) from the beginning, not only the Jews, but all men; and not only men, but His works generally, i. e. every thing that He has made. His mercy is over all His works from everlasting. He hateth nothing that He hath made. See above, on v. 13.

The argument of St. James is, therefore, The decree that I propose is nothing new, but is based on the foundation of God's eternal Foreknowledge of, and Universal Love to, all His Creatures.

19. ἐγὼ κρίνω] 'ego censeo;' I give as my sentence. Cp. xvi. 4, δόγματα τὰ κεκριμένα ὑπὸ τῶν ἀποστόλων καὶ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων, and xxi. 25, κρίναντες μηδὲν τοιοῦτον τηρεῖν, words which show that no single voice of any one Apostle (James, or Peter, or Paul) was predominant over the rest.

20. ἀλισγημάτων] A word peculiar to the N. T. and the LXX Version of the Old. See Dan. i. 8. Mal. i. 7. 12, explained by εἰδωλόθυτον Acts xxi. 25. It is derived from ἀλιγέω, which the LXX use for ἄλγξ, "redimo sanguine (a remarkable intimation of redemption by the effusion of blood), sanguinem effundo, et sanguine effuso maculare, ideoque contaminare" (Zeph. iii. 1. Isa. lxiii. 3).

The Greek ἀλιγέω appears to be derived from an unused root, ἀλίω, i. q. κυλίω, volvo, to wallow in the βόρβωρος or mire of uncleanness, especially in blood. See Valck. here, and cp. κύλισμα βορβόρου, 2 Pet. ii. 22.

On the reason and obligation of the Decree with regard to things offered to idols, see note on πικτοῦ καὶ αἵματος, v. 20.

— τῆς πορνείας] fornication. This injunction was rendered necessary by the then condition of the Gentile World. Cp. 1 Thess. iv. 5. Eph. iv. 18, 19. A striking proof of moral depravity in what was called an enlightened age.

See Bp. Sanderson's excellent remarks (Serm. vi. ad Populum, § 9, vol. iii. p. 220), where, after showing by examples, into what a state of moral blindness and degradation the Heathen Nations had sunk in that age of intellectual light (a solemn warning to other Nations), in their connivance at this deadly sin, and it may be added, even in their consecration of it by religious rites, of temple, priest, and sacrifice (e. g. at Corinth, Paphos, Cyprus), he proceeds to say, "Out of this consideration, the Apostles in that first Council holden at Jerusalem, thought it needful by Ecclesiastical Canon, among some other indifferent things for the Church's peace, to lay this restraint upon the converted Gentiles, that they should abstain from fornication.

"Not, as if fornication were in itself an indifferent thing, as those other things were; or as if those other things were, in themselves, and simply, unlawful, as fornication was. But the Apostles did therefore join fornication and those other indifferent things in the same Canon, because the Gentiles accounted fornication a thing as indifferent as what was most indifferent."

n Neh. 8. 1.
ch. 13. 27.

καὶ τοῦ πνικτοῦ, καὶ τοῦ αἵματος. ²¹ ὁ Μωϋσῆς γὰρ ἐκ γενεῶν ἀρχαίων κατὰ πόλιν τοὺς κηρύσσοντας αὐτὸν ἔχει, ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς κατὰ πᾶν σάββατον ἀναγινωσκόμενος.

²² Τότε ἔδοξε τοῖς ἀποστόλοις καὶ τοῖς πρεσβυτέροις, σὺν ὅλῃ τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, ἐκλεξαμένους ἄνδρας ἐξ αὐτῶν πέμψαι εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν σὺν τῷ Παύλῳ καὶ Βαρνάβᾳ, Ἰούδαν τὸν καλούμενον Βαρσαβάν, καὶ Σίλαν, ἄνδρας ἡγουμένους ἐν τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς, ²³ γράψαντες διὰ χειρὸς αὐτῶν τάδε· Οἱ ἀπόστολοι καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ τοῖς κατὰ τὴν Ἀντιόχειαν καὶ Συρίαν καὶ Κιλικίαν — τοῦ πνικτοῦ, καὶ τοῦ αἵματος] i. e. from blood, whether in the animal strangled (i. e. so that the blood is not allowed to issue from it when killed), or blood poured out from it. τὸ πνικτὸν was regarded as a delicacy by the Gentiles. Cp. Casaubon ad Athen. ii. c. 24.

The foundation of this prohibition is in the command given to Noah (Gen. ix. 4), and renewed in the Law. Lev. iii. 17; vii. 26; xvii. 10; xix. 26. Deut. xii. 16. 23. 1 Sam. xiv. 33; and see the passages from the Rabbis in Lightfoot, ii. 697.

Things which are not unlawful in themselves, but indifferent, may become inexpedient and evil, "per accidens, ratione scandali." "Every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused" (1 Tim. iv. 4), and "all things are lawful to me," says St. Paul, "but all things are not expedient" (1 Cor. vi. 12; x. 23); and if they are prohibited by lawful authority they are unlawful to me who am subject to that authority.

This was the case, in primitive times, with meats offered to Idols, and with blood; an abstinence from which had been commanded before the Law, by three of the seven precepts given to Noah, as the Jews affirm. See Seder Olam in Selden de Jure Heb. vii. 3, p. 809. Gieseler, Eccles. Hist. § 17, note 7, and § 26, note 6.

This Apostolic decree to abstain from blood was carefully observed for some time after the Apostolic age.

"It was the custom of the Christian Church, almost till the time of S. Augustine, to abstain from eating of blood, in compliance with the rule given by the Apostles to the Gentile Converts. Therefore by the most ancient laws of the Church all clergymen were obliged to abstain from it, under pain of degradation. This is evident from the Apostolical Canons (Can. 69), and those of the Council of Gangra (Can. 19), and of Trullo (Can. 67). But this was looked upon by some only as a temporary injunction; so it appears from S. Augustine (c. Faust. xxxii. 13) that in his time it was of no force in the African Church. For he says that in his time few men thought themselves under any obligation to observe it. . . . He that would see more about it may consult Curcellaus, de esu sanguinis, cap. 13." Bingham, xvii. 5. 15. And cp. the authorities in Howson, 262, 3, whence it appears that the Greek Church still maintains the obligation of the Apostolic decree concerning abstinence from blood.

The Apostles thought it expedient to require from the Gentile Christians an abstinence from these things; for divers reasons—

(1) Because the eating of things offered to idols (known to be such) was almost unavoidably connected with the worship of idols. See 1 Cor. viii. 10.

(2) Because the eating of things strangled, and blood, would have revolted the Jewish Christians from intercourse with them, and so have been a hindrance to Church-Unity.

(3) Because the Apostles desired to show the Jewish Converts that they had a tender regard for their scruples, especially when grounded on Ante-Levitical Law and Usage; and there was a reasonable hope, that therefore the Jewish Christians, on their side, would be more disposed to comply with the Apostles in not enforcing on the Gentile Christians the Rite of Circumcision and the other ceremonies of the Levitical Law.

On these points, see Augustine (c. Faust. xxxii. 13), and Hooker (Preface, iv. 5 and IV. xi. 5), who says, "The Apostles did not impose upon the Churches of the Gentiles any part of the Jews' ordinances with bond of necessary and perpetual observation (as we all both by doctrine and practice acknowledge), but only in respect of the conveniency and fitness of the present state of the Church, as it then stood."

Again Hooker (Serm. iii. p. 619) says, "A positive law is that which bindeth them that receive it, in such things as might before have been either done or not done without offence, but not after, during the time it standeth in force. Such were those Church Constitutions concerning strangled and blood. But there is no person whom, nor time wherein, a law natural doth not bind."

On this important question, involving a discussion of the fundamental principles of Law, and of the duty and right of Conscience, see also Bp. Sanderson, Serm. v. ad Pop. iii. p. 160, § 16, and p. 169, "The Apostles in the first Council holden at Jerusalem, laid upon the Churches for a time a restraint from the eating of blood, and things sacrificed to idols and strangled."

It may be noticed here, that the Apostles would not have prohibited the Gentile Churches the eating of blood, in this unqualified manner, if they had believed in a carnal presence of flesh and blood in the Holy Eucharist. Therefore this Decree of the First Council of the Christian Church may be rightly appealed to, as containing a primitive protest against the Romish dogma of Transubstantiation.

²¹ Μωϋσῆς γὰρ] For Moses, from primitive ages, hath in every city those who preach him, in that he is read in the synagogues every Sabbath-day. We will send by letter these decrees to the Gentile Christians, but it is not necessary to transmit them to the Jewish Christians, because they have them already in substance in the Pentateuch, which they hear every Sabbath-day (Chrys.); or, as Cassiodor. expresses it, "sufficere Mosi, quod ejus nomen in Synagogâ omni Sabbato cum veneratione nominatur." This interpretation is confirmed by the words in v. 23, τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς τοῖς ἐξ ἐθνῶν. The Decrees do not appear to have been sent to the Jewish Christians.

The Jews in all parts of the world have enjoyed the manifold blessings of Divine Revelation, for many ages. The season is now arrived for a communication of equal spiritual benefits to the Gentile World.

This clause may also intimate—that it was necessary to frame and transmit these Decrees to the Gentile Christians, because the Law of Moses is always sounding every where, from ancient times, in the Synagogues; and because the Mosaic Law has therefore, from its venerable antiquity and wide-spread diffusion, great influence, even in heathen countries; and because it could not be expected that the Jewish Christians would communicate, as brethren, with those who set that Law at defiance even in those things which were anterior to that Law, and belonged either to the Patriarchal dispensation, or even to the Natural Law.

Further, by this honourable reference to Moses and the Law, on the part of the Church at Jerusalem—while she was declaring the non-obligation of the ceremonial Law on the Gentile Christians—the Jews and Jewish Christians would be conciliated, and might reasonably infer that there was good reason for the non-exaction of Circumcision from the Gentiles on their reception into the Church. See Chrys.

— κηρύσσοντας—ἀναγινωσκόμενος] He is preached by being read. An apostolic statement of the important truth vindicated by Hooker (E. P. V. xix.), that public Reading of Holy Scripture is Preaching.

²² Σίλαν] Silas or Silvanus, a προφήτης (see v. 32), and afterwards the companion of St. Paul (xv. 40; xvi. 19. 25; xvii. 4), and associated with him in the preambles of his Epistles. See 1 Thess. i. 1. 2 Thess. i. 1, and on Phil. i. 1, p. 335. See also 1 Pet. v. 12.

This name is always written Σίλας in the History of the Acts, where the word occurs thirteen times; and Σιλουανὸς by St. Paul and St. Peter. On the contractions of proper names, see Winer, Gr. Gr. § 16, p. 93. Examples in the New Test. are Ἀπολλῶς for ἄγιος, Ἀρτεμᾶς for ἰδωρος, Νυμφᾶς for ὀδωρος, Ζηνᾶς for ὀδωρος, Ἐπαφρόδης for ὀδίτος, Λουκᾶς for Lucanus. Cp. note below, on Titus iii. 13.

— ἄνδρας ἡγουμένους] A strong proof (as Alford well observes) that Silas was not (as some have imagined) the Author of the Acts of the Apostles.

²³ καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοί] and the brethren. This is the reading of Elz., supported by E, G, H, and the great body of Cursive MSS., and the Syriac, Coptic, and Æthiopic Versions; and is retained by Tisch. and Bloomf.

ἀδελφοῖς τοῖς ἐξ ἔθνων, χαίρειν. ²⁴ Ὅτι ἐπειδὴ ἠκούσαμεν ὅτι τινὲς ἐξ ἡμῶν ^{o Gal. 2. 4. ver. 1. Tit. 1. 10, 11.} ἐξεληθόντες ἐτάραξαν ὑμᾶς λόγοις, ἀνασκευάζοντες τὰς ψυχὰς ὑμῶν, λέγοντες περιτέμενσθαι καὶ τηρεῖν τὸν νόμον, οἷς οὐ διεστείλαμεθα, ²⁵ ἔδοξεν ἡμῖν γενομένοις ὁμοθυμαδὸν, ἐκλεξαμένοις ἄνδρας πέμψαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς, σὺν τοῖς ἀγαπητοῖς ἡμῶν Βαρνάβᾳ καὶ Παύλῳ, ²⁶ ἰσχυροῖς ἀνθρώποις παραδεδωκόσι τὰς ψυχὰς ^{p ch. 13. 50. & 14. 19.} αὐτῶν ὑπὲρ τοῦ ὀνόματος τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ²⁷ ἀπεστάλκαμεν οὖν Ἰούδαν καὶ Σίλαν, καὶ αὐτοὺς διὰ λόγου ἀπαγγέλλοντας τὰ αὐτά. ²⁸ Ἐδοξε γὰρ τῷ Πνεύματι τῷ ἁγίῳ καὶ ἡμῖν μηδὲν πλέον ἐπιτίθεσθαι ὑμῖν βάρος, πλὴν

This being the case, and this passage being one which has been made the subject of controversial disputation, I have deemed it best to leave the Text as it stands in the commonly received edition; and to accompany it with a statement of the evidence concerning the retention of the καὶ οἱ, so that the reader may form his own judgment on the matter.

The καὶ οἱ is not in D, and the words καὶ οἱ are not found in A, B, C, nor in the Vulgate and Armenian Versions; nor in Irenaeus, iii. 14, nor Origen, c. Cels. p. 396 (see Weststein and Mill, proleg. 1350). They have therefore not been admitted by Lachmann, Bornemann, and Alford. And this reading, which omits καὶ οἱ, seems to be confirmed by internal evidence,—

(1) à priori, Paul and Barnabas are said to go up “to the Apostles and Elders at Jerusalem (xv. 2) concerning this question.”

(2) The “Apostles and Elders” are said “to have met together to consider this matter” (xv. 6).

(3) à posteriori, Paul is said to have gone through the Cities, delivering to them to keep the Decrees determined by “the Apostles and Elders at Jerusalem” (xvi. 4).

This triple mention of Apostles and Elders, without the addition of any other party, is significant;

It seems to indicate that “the Apostles and Elders” constituted the Council, as far as deliberative voice and definitive sentence were concerned; and therefore the Decree was promulgated in their names.

And this interpretation is confirmed by the subsequent usage of the Christian Church in Synods. See Bingham (ii. 19. 11—13), “It is agreed on all hands by unprejudiced persons, that Presbyters had liberty to sit and deliberate with Bishops in Provincial Councils.” See above on v. 6.

And, as Abp. Crammer says (in Bp. Burnet’s History of the Reformation, c. i. 353), “In all the Ancient Councils of the Church in matters of Faith and Interpretation of Scripture, no man made definitive subscription but Bishops and Priests, forasmuch as the declaration of the Word of God appertains unto them.” See also Hooker, VIII. vi. 8, and VIII. vi. 12, “It cannot in any reason seem otherwise than most fit, that unto Ecclesiastical Persons the care of devising Ecclesiastical Laws be committed.”

So Dr. Field writes; “Our adversaries (the Romanists) say that the Protestants affirm that Laymen ought not only to be present in General Councils, but also to have decisive voices as well as they of the Clergy; and thereupon they charge us with great absurdity.”

“It is agreed, that Ministers only have decisive voices in Councils, in sort before expressed.” So also Bp. Beveridge (Codex Canonum vindicatus 1678, p. xx), “Laici ad iudicium de doctrinā aut disciplinā Ecclesiasticā ferendum nunquam admissi sunt.” And so Dr. Field adds (on the Church, v. c. 49, p. 646, ed. 1635), “The persons that may be present are of divers sorts; for some there are with authority to teach, define, prescribe, and to direct. Others are there to hear, set forward, and consent unto that which is there done. In the former sort, none but only Ministers of the Word and Sacraments are present in Councils, and they only have deciding and defining voices; but in the latter sort, Laymen also may be present; whereupon we shall find that Bishops and Presbyters subscribe in this sort; ‘Ego, N. definiens subscripsi;’ but the Emperor, or any other Lay person, ‘Ego, N. consentiens subscripsi.’”

And this has been the practice from time immemorial in England. See Bp. Kennett’s Eccles. Synods, ed. London, 1701, Part i. p. 249, where he says, “By collating the history of all our Saxon Councils, it is easy to discover, that, if the subject of any laws was for the outward peace and temporal government of the Church, such laws were properly ordained by the King and his great Council of Clergy and Laity intermixed, as our Acts of Parliament are still made. But if there was any doctrine to be tried, or any exercise of pure discipline to be reformed, then the Clergy of the great Council departed into a separate Synod; and there being the same men in a different and sole capacity, they acted as proper Judges within the power of the keys. Only when they had thus provided for the state of Religion, they brought their Canons from the Synod back again to the Council, to be ratified by the King with advice of his great men; and so wisely made the Constitutions of the Church to be Laws of the Realm. I cannot imagine that the Saxon National Assemblies were any more mixed Councils than our English Parliaments are. Theirs had authority not only in Civil matters, but in all external Church affairs; so have ours. Yet theirs did not meddle with Doctrines or Spiritual Discipline, nor will ours.

“The Norman’s Revolution made indeed no change in this respect. The Conqueror in his great councils had his spiritual and his temporal Barons; and they jointly advised him upon all the exigencies of preserving the peace, and advancing the interest of Church and State. But when matters arose that were purely spiritual, then the King allowed a Legate or an Arch-Bishop to meet the other Prelates in a distinct Synod, and there to act as the Church Representative.”

These are the principles which regulate the proceedings of the Church of England in her Convocations, where Bishops and Presbyters sit and deliberate as Brethren; but no Canon framed by them has force of law in the Courts of the Realm, unless it is received and ratified by the Crown.

— ἀδελφοῖς] to the brethren. The inculcation of the word brethren in the Preamble of this Decree of the first Council of the Church, and in this Chapter generally (where it occurs no less than eleven times), was probably designed to show, that, in order to settle Church Controversies, Bishops, and Presbyters, and People, should ever remember, that, although there are divers degrees and orders in the Church,—yet all its members are Brethren. Cp. Matt. xxiii. 8. John xx. 17. Acts vii. 26.

— χαίρειν] greeting; ‘salvere.’ Used in the N. T. only by St. James, i. 1; perhaps a sign that he had the principal part in framing the decree.

25, 26. σὺν τοῖς ἀγαπητοῖς ἡμῶν Βαρνάβᾳ καὶ Παύλῳ, ἀνθρώποις—Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ] with our beloved Barnabas and Paul, men who have hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. A remarkable testimony. The first Christians were not wont to praise one another in public. But on the present occasion, such an attestation, especially to St. Paul, was seasonable and appropriate. It was a reply to the charges of the Judaizers against him. It was a public declaration on the part of the other Apostles at Jerusalem, that St. Paul’s claims to divine revelations, and to an apostolic mission, were true; and that there was no difference of opinion, or disparity in dignity, between him and the Twelve who had “seen the Lord” on earth. Such a declaration was called for. See ix. 26.

28. ἔδοξε τῷ Πνεύματι τῷ ἁγίῳ καὶ ἡμῖν] it seems good to the Holy Ghost and to us; to us inspired by the Holy Ghost, to us His ministers and organs for declaring the truth,—a mode of expression not uncommon in the Old Testament, where we read, “The people believed the Lord and His servant Moses,” Exod. xiv. 31. “The sword of the Lord and of Gideon,” Judges vii. 18. 20. “The people feared the Lord and Samuel,” 1 Sam. xii. 18. (Severus.) Compare the language of St. John, 3rd Epistle, v. 12.

This expression “it seemed good to the Holy Ghost and to us” is an Apostolic statement of the true doctrine of Inspiration. The Apostles were inspired by God, but they did not lose their personal identity. The human element was not absorbed into the divine; but it was spiritualized and transfigured by it.

There is also another reason for the addition of the word us here. We,—though Jews by birth and education, and of the Circumcision,—we declare that the Gentiles are not to be circumcised. (Chrys.)

The English Convocation rightly prays, “Concede ut Spiritus Tuus, Qui Concilio olim Apostolico, huic nostro etiam nunc insideat.” But it cannot be held with Bellarmino (de Concil. ii. c. 2) that Councils of the Church now are entitled to adopt the words of the text in the framing of Canons. See Hooker, VIII. vi. 7. Abp. Laud against Fisher, § 33. Hammond, i. p. 558.

q ver. 20.
ch. 16, 4.
& 21, 25.

τῶν ἐπάναγκες τούτων, ²⁹ ἀπέχεσθαι εἰδωλοθυτῶν, καὶ αἵματος, καὶ πνικτοῦ, καὶ πορνείας· ἐξ ὧν διατηροῦντες ἑαυτοὺς εὖ πράττετε. Ἐρρώσθε.

³⁰ Οἱ μὲν οὖν ἀπολυθέντες ἦλθον εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν· καὶ συναγαγόντες τὸ πλῆθος ἐπέδωκαν τὴν ἐπιστολήν. ³¹ Ἀναγνόντες δὲ, ἐχάρησαν ἐπὶ τῇ παρακλήσει.

³² Ἰούδας τε καὶ Σίλας, καὶ αὐτοὶ προφήται ὄντες, διὰ λόγου πολλοῦ παρεκάλεσαν τοὺς ἀδελφούς καὶ ἔπεσθῆριζαν. ³³ Ποιήσαντες δὲ χρόνον, ἀπελύθησαν μετ' εἰρήνης ἀπὸ τῶν ἀδελφῶν πρὸς τοὺς ἀποστείλαντας αὐτούς.

³⁵ Παῦλος δὲ καὶ Βαρνάβας διέτριβον ἐν Ἀντιοχείᾳ, διδάσκοντες καὶ εὐαγγελιζόμενοι, μετὰ καὶ ἐτέρων πολλῶν, τὸν λόγον τοῦ Κυρίου.

³⁶ Μετὰ δέ τινας ἡμέρας εἶπε Παῦλος πρὸς Βαρνάβαν, Ἐπιστρέψαντες δὴ ἐπισκεψώμεθα τοὺς ἀδελφούς· κατὰ πάσαν πόλιν, ἐν αἷς κατηγγείλαμεν τὸν λόγον τοῦ Κυρίου, πῶς ἔχουσι. ³⁷ Βαρνάβας δὲ ἐβούλετο συμπαραλαβεῖν τὸν Ἰωάννην τὸν καλούμενον Μάρκον· ³⁸ Παῦλος δὲ ἤξιον τὸν ἀποστάντα ἀπ' αὐτῶν ἀπὸ Παμφυλίας καὶ μὴ συνελθόντα αὐτοῖς εἰς τὸ ἔργον μὴ συμπαραλαβεῖν τοῦτον. ³⁹ Ἐγένετο οὖν παροξυσμός, ὥστε ἀποχωρισθῆναι αὐτοὺς ἀπ' ἀλλήλων, τὸν τε Βαρνάβαν παραλαβόντα τὸν Μάρκον ἐκπλεῦσαι εἰς

r ch. 14. 22.
s 1 Cor. 16. 11.
2 John 10.

t ch. 13. 4, &c.

u Col. 4. 10.
ch. 12. 12, 25.
& 13. 5.
2 Tim. 4. 11.
Philem. 24.
v ch. 13. 13.

³³ ἀποστείλαντας αὐτούς] who sent them. So A, B, C, D.—Elz. ἀποστόλους. After these words Elz. adds ἐδοξε δὲ τῷ Σίλᾳ ἐπιμεῖναι αὐτοῖς, which are not in A, B, E, G, H.

³⁷ ἐβούλετο] was desirous. So A, B, C, E.—Elz. ἐβουλεύετο.

³⁸ ἤξιον—μὴ] Stronger than οὐκ ἤξιον. He was deeming it right not to take him.

—τοῦτον] this man. Emphatic, and therefore reserved for the end of the sentence.

³⁹ παροξυσμός] a sharp contention. παροξυσμός, οὐκ ἐχθρά (Ecum.),—i. e. it was only a transitory ebullition of a natural infirmity of temper; “exacerbatio, non odium.”

On some circumstances, which had probably led to this contention of Paul and Barnabas, see above on xii. 12, and compare Gal. ii. 1—11, for the preparatory history.

It appears that, as is often the case, one contention led to another;

(1) St. Paul had recently resisted St. Peter at Antioch, and had “rebuked him to the face, because he was to be blamed.” As Bede says (on Acts xv.): “His diebus impletum est, quod Apostolus Paulus ait, ‘Cum venisset Cephas Antiochiam in faciem ei restitit.’” (Gal. ii. 11.)

(2) St. Paul had opposed St. Barnabas, who had then been led away by St. Peter's example. (Gal. ii. 13.)

(3) That contention was soon followed by another (viz.) with reference to St. Mark, who was ἀνεψῖος to Barnabas.

On the narrative of this contention it may be observed,

(1) That in St. Luke we have a faithful annalist, who when writing the history of the Apostles does not disguise their frailties, nor those of a brother Evangelist, St. Mark.

(2) That a religion is true, which is not damaged by a strife of its chief Teachers, but, under God's Providence, is more widely disseminated in consequence of a difference, which, if that religion had been of human origin, would have been very baneful to it.

(3) That the Apostles, and other first Preachers of Christianity, were not exempt from human infirmities; and thus the excellency of the power of the Gospel, in the wonderful change, moral, social, and religious, which it has wrought on the world, is seen more clearly to be of God. (2 Cor. iv. 7.)

(4) That the Inspiration of the Apostles and Evangelists, in what they wrote for the instruction of the Church, and in what was received by the Spirit of Christ in the Church, as Canonical Scripture, is displayed more clearly by the fact, that in what they did, they were not always exempt from human frailty, nor were supposed to be so by the Church, which received their writings as divine.

They had their treasure in earthen vessels. (2 Cor. iv. 7.) “The strength of God was made perfect in their weakness.” (2 Cor. xii. 9.) “Paulus severior,” says Jerome, “Barnabas clementior; uterque in suo sensu abundat; et tamen dissensio habet aliquid humane fragilitatis.” Adv. Pelag. lib. ii. p. 522.

Paul may have erred in his contention with Barnabas, as he did err in his pleading before Ananias (Acts xxiii. 3); and both these incidents are recorded by the Holy Spirit writing by St. Luke. But there is no error in what was delivered by the Holy Ghost, through the agency of St. Paul, to the Church, as Canonical Scripture, and has been received by the Body of Christ, the Church Universal, as such; see below on Gal. ii. at end of the chapter.

(5) That we are not to be scandalized or falter in the faith, if Christian Teachers differ among themselves. There is but One Teacher, whose Charity never failed or was disturbed—Christ. “Soli Dei Filio servabatur sine delicto permanere.” (Tertullian, de Præscr. 3.) Peter was rebuked by Paul (Gal. ii. 11); Paul and Barnabas strove. And if even Apostles sometimes differed, why need we be perplexed by occasional dissensions between other holy men, such as S. Cyprian and S. Cornelius, S. Cyril and Theodoret, S. Jerome and S. Augustine, S. Chrysostom and S. Epiphanius? Rather let the sight of such differences stimulate the faith and hope of Christians. Let it induce them to raise their eyes from the Church militant on earth to the Church glorified in heaven, and from the transitory strifes of Time to the never-ending peace of Eternity.

(6) That the strife of Paul and Barnabas was afterwards healed, and that St. Mark was recovered to the love and esteem of St. Paul. We find Mark with St. Paul, when he addressed the Colossians (iv. 10; cp. Philemon 24), to whom he had written concerning him, and to whom he commends him. And perhaps there is something significant in the terms by which he there describes him, “Mark, kinsman to Barnabas;” as if to intimate that Barnabas had acted a kinsman's part in his tenderness to his relative; and to show his love for Barnabas as well as Mark. And at last St. Paul, who once would not take Mark with him because “he had departed from them, and did not go with them to the work,” afterwards sent for him to Rome, and desired Timothy to take, and bring him, “for he is profitable to me for the ministry” (2 Tim. iv. 11), and eventually St. Mark preached, and probably died as a Martyr, at Alexandria. Tillemont, ii. 238.

(7) We find also at the close of the Apostolic history, Silas (whom St. Paul chose instead of Mark) associated as “the faithful brother” by St. Peter, with St. Mark, who was St. Peter's “son in the faith.” See on 1 Pet. v. 13, and Introduction to that Epistle, p. 43.

(8) As to the parts taken respectively in this παροξυσμός by St. Paul and St. Barnabas, we may adopt the words of Tertullian: “Viderint ii, qui de Apostolis iudicant; mihi non tam benè est, imò non tam malè est, ut Apostolos committam.” (De Præscr. 24.) Or, as Chrys. says, τοὺς ἁγίους ὑβρίζω; μὴ γένοιτο. Ὁ Παῦλος ἐζήτην τὸ δίκαιον, ὁ Βαρνάβας τὸ φιλόανθρωπον; and he well adds, πάντῃ ὠφέλει τὸν Μάρκον ἢ μάχη αὐτῇ, τὸ μὲν Παύλου φοβερὸν ἐπέστρεφεν αὐτὸν, τοῦ δὲ Βαρνάβα χρηστὸν ἐποίησε μικρὴν ἀπολειψθῆναι μάχονται μὲν, πρὸς ἐν δὲ τέλος ἀπαντᾷ τὸ κέρδος. It pleased the God of Justice and Mercy to bless the efforts of both Paul and Barnabas. And now, all the παροξυσμός of human passion has passed away for ever, and all the fruits of justice and of love, of repentance and of zeal, of honesty and of truth, remain, and will never fail. The two brother Apostles, Paul and Barnabas, and the two Evangelists, St. Mark and St. Luke, are united in the joys of Paradise—never to be severed more. So may all differences in the Church cease!

—Βαρνάβαν] Barnabas. The last notice of Barnabas in the Acts. The historian takes leave of him, as he first mentions him (iv. 36), in connexion with his native country, Cyprus.

Κύπρον.⁴⁰ Παῦλος δὲ ἐπιλεξάμενος Σίλαν ἐξήλθε, παραδοθεὶς τῇ χάριτι τοῦ Κυρίου ὑπὸ τῶν ἀδελφῶν.⁴¹ διήρχετο δὲ τὴν Συρίαν καὶ Κιλικίαν, ἐπιστηρίζων τὰς ἐκκλησίας.

XVI.¹ Κατήντησε δὲ εἰς Δέρβην καὶ Λύστραν καὶ ἰδοὺ μαθητὴς τις ἦν ἐκεῖ, ὀνόματι Τιμόθεος, υἱὸς γυναικὸς Ἰουδαίας πιστῆς, πατρὸς δὲ Ἑλλήνος.^{a ch. 14. 6. Rom. 16. 21. Phil. 2. 19. 1 Tim. 1. 2.}
² ὃς ἐμαρτυρεῖτο ὑπὸ τῶν ἐν Λύστροις καὶ Ἰκονίῃ ἀδελφῶν.³ Τοῦτον ἠθέλησεν ὁ Παῦλος σὺν αὐτῷ ἐξελθεῖν, καὶ λαβὼν περιέτεμεν αὐτὸν, διὰ τοὺς Ἰουδαίους τοὺς ὄντας ἐν τοῖς τόποις ἐκείνοις· ᾗδεισαν γὰρ ἅπαντες τὸν πατέρα αὐτοῦ ὅτι Ἑλλήν ὑπῆρχεν.

⁴ Ὡς δὲ διεπορεύοντο τὰς πόλεις, παρεδίδουσιν αὐτοῖς φυλάσσειν τὰ δόγματα τὰ κεκριμένα ὑπὸ τῶν ἀποστόλων καὶ πρεσβυτέρων τῶν ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις.^{b ch. 15. 28, 29.}

⁵ Αἱ μὲν οὖν ἐκκλησίαι ἐσπεροῦντο τῇ πίστει, καὶ ἐπερίσσευον τῷ ἀριθμῷ καθ' ἡμέραν.

⁶ Διήλθον δὲ τὴν Φρυγίαν καὶ τὴν Γαλατικὴν χώραν, κωλυθέντες ὑπὸ τοῦ

40. Σίλαν] Silas; associated with Paul, in room of Barnabas; and soon after, Timothy also in the room of Mark. See xvi. 1.

Thus the great Head of the Church overrules even the strifes of Christians, and makes them conducive to the spread of Christianity, and to the good of His faithful people.

Another source of comfort and of hope in times of division.

CH. XVI. 1. καὶ ἰδοὺ] and lo! introducing the mention of a gift from heaven to Paul, in the place of what he had lost, in his separation from Barnabas and Mark. See on xv. 40.

— ἐκεῖ] there at Lystra. Some have inferred from Acts xx. 4, that Timothy was of Derbe: but the present text appears to state that his domicile was at Lystra. And St. Paul connects Timothy with Lystra and Iconium (not mentioning Derbe) in 2 Tim. iii. 11. And here Timothy is said to have had a good testimony from the brethren of Lystra and Iconium: Lystra in both passages being placed first. See further on 2 Tim. iii. 11.

— γυναικὸς Ἰουδαίας] of a woman who was a Jewess; Eunice. 2 Tim. i. 5.

2. ὃς ἐμαρτυρεῖτο] who was well reported of by the brethren in Lystra and Iconium. Timothy was well reported of by men, and was pointed out to St. Paul by prophecy, 1 Tim. i. 18; and was personally acquainted with St. Paul's doings and sufferings at Iconium and Lystra. See 2 Tim. iii. 11.

3. περιέτεμεν αὐτόν] he circumcised him, not from any supposition of the necessity of Circumcision, at this time, but because nothing profiteth without Charity; and because all things are to be done for edification, and no offence is to be given to any. Therefore he circumcised Timothy. But Titus, being a Greek, was not compelled to be circumcised. See Gal. ii. 3.

By circumcising Timothy St. Paul showed that he did not condemn those who still continued to observe the Levitical Law. (Cp. 1 Cor. ix. 20.) By not circumcising Titus he showed that he would not enforce that Law, and would communicate with those who judged it to be abrogated, and did not observe it. In the former case he proved his charity; in the latter, his courage; by both together he evinced his clear-sighted appreciation of the partial and preparatory character of the Law, which was now dead, but not yet deadly; and of the ever-living permanence and life-giving universality of the Gospel. See below on Gal. ii. 3—15, and the review of that chapter, pp. 53—55, and 1 Cor. ix. 20.

— Ἑλλήν ὑπῆρχεν] he was by birth a Greek. Being a Gentile, by his father's side, and being trained in the truth by his mother, a Jewish believer, Timothy was qualified by his parentage to conciliate Jews and Gentiles, and to bring them to Christ.

6. διήλθον—Γαλατικὴν χώραν] they traversed Phrygia and the region of Galatia, having been forbidden by the Holy Spirit to preach the Word in Asia (i. e. Lydia, Caria, and especially the region near Ephesus), and having come toward Mysia, they were attempting to go into Bithynia, but the Spirit of Jesus permitted them not: and having passed along Mysia, they arrived at Troas.

On the Gaulish origin of the population of Galatia, and on other local circumstances of that region, and on St. Paul's visits to that country, see Gal. i. 2—6, and Introduction to the Epistle to the Galatians, pp. 36—41, and Howson, i. p. 284.

St. Paul's purpose, it appears, was to travel westward from Lystra to Ephesus—the great maritime Capital of Ionian—but he was not permitted by the Holy Spirit to do so; and he traversed Phrygia and Galatia.

At this time it would seem that he planted the Churches of Galatia, which are mentioned as in existence, and as confirmed afterwards by him, in ch. xviii. 23.

But St. Luke says nothing of their foundation. And why? Perhaps because the reader of Scripture could receive ample information concerning them from the Epistle of St. Paul to the Galatians.

And here it may be remarked generally, that, as with regard to the Evangelical History, the Holy Spirit says nothing in one Gospel concerning the existence of any of the other three, and yet each Gospel is adjusted to the others and to the whole Evangelical Canon; so in the Acts of the Apostles, there is no mention of any of St. Paul's Epistles, or even of the fact that he wrote a single epistle; and yet in dictating the Acts by the agency of St. Luke, the Holy Spirit appears to have His Divine Eye on what had been already given, or would be hereafter given by Himself to the World, in those Epistles, by the hand of St. Paul.

Here is the ground of the argument handled by Dr. Paley in his "Horæ Paulinæ." The Acts and the Epistles are from one Spirit. No wonder that there is a harmony among them, more deeply felt, because not the result of effort and art, but of oneness of origin from the Spirit of Truth.

Besides, this silence of the Historian of the Acts concerning a very important part of St. Paul's Missionary labours, may serve to remind the Christian reader, especially the Pastor, Teacher, and Missionary, that a record of their works on earth, even though it were in Scripture itself, is not to be too much desired, and is never to be made the aim and end of their efforts; but in this they are to rejoice, that "their names," though unknown on earth, "are written in heaven." (Luke x. 20.)

This leads to the inquiry—

Why did the Holy Spirit forbid St. Paul to preach the Word in Asia, and to go into Bithynia?

Perhaps He would thus show, that what men consider most illustrious and attractive, is of less account in His sight. He drew Paul away from Ionian and Ephesus, the wealthiest and most brilliant region of Asia Minor, in order that he might preach to the servile and semibarbarous tribes of Phrygia and Galatia.

Our Lord chose Galilee of the Gentiles for the scene of His earlier ministry. St. Philip was sent from the populous Samaria to the desert road "that leadeth to Gaza" (Acts viii. 26). And St. Paul is prevented by the Spirit from preaching in Asia, and under the guidance of the same Spirit, he goes and evangelizes the more barbarous tribes of Galatia.

The Missionaries of the Gospel in all ages need to be reminded, that poor Pagan villages (see Mark i. 38) and savage tribes are to be converted and sanctified by Christianity, as well as polite cities and cultivated regions; and they whose solitary lot is cast in wild and uncivilized countries will find comfort in the reflection, that Galilee was preferred by Christ to Judea, and that St. Paul was sent by the Holy Spirit from Ionian to Phrygia and Galatia.

For another special reason why St. Paul went to Galatia at this time, rather than to Asia, see note below on Gal. iv. 13.

— Φρυγίαν—Ἀσίαν] Similarly Catullus (xli. 5) distinguishes Phrygia and Asia,—"Linguntur Phrygiæ, Cattulæ, campi, Ad claras Asiæ volumus urbes."

ἀγίου Πνεύματος λαλήσαι τὸν λόγον ἐν τῇ Ἀσίᾳ· ἡ ἐλθόντες δὲ κατὰ τὴν Μυσίαν ἐπείραζον εἰς Βιθυνίαν πορεύεσθαι· καὶ οὐκ ἔασεν αὐτοὺς τὸ Πνεῦμα Ἰησοῦ. ⁸ Παρελθόντες δὲ τὴν Μυσίαν κατέβησαν εἰς Τρωάδα.

c ch. 20. 6.
2 Cor. 2. 12.
2 Tim. 4. 13.
d ch. 10. 29.

⁹ Καὶ ὄραμα διὰ νυκτὸς ὤφθη τῷ Παύλῳ· ἄνθρωπος Μακεδὼν τις ἦν ἑστὼς, παρακαλῶν αὐτὸν καὶ λέγων, Διαβὰς εἰς Μακεδονίαν βοήθησον ἡμῖν. ¹⁰ Ὡς δὲ τὸ ὄραμα εἶδεν, εὐθὺς ἐζητήσαμεν ἐξελεῖν εἰς τὴν Μακεδονίαν, συμβιβάζοντες ὅτι προσκέκληται ἡμᾶς ὁ Κύριος εὐαγγελίσασθαι αὐτούς.

e Phil. 1. 1.

¹¹ Ἀναχθέντες οὖν ἀπὸ τῆς Τρωάδος εὐθυδρομήσαμεν εἰς Σαμοθράκην, τῇ τε ἐπιούσῃ εἰς Νεάπολιν, ¹² κακείθεν εἰς Φιλίππους, ἥτις ἐστὶ πρώτη τῆς μερίδος τῆς Μακεδονίας πόλις, κολωνία.

6, 7. κωλυθέντες—οὐκ ἔασεν] having been forbidden by the Holy Ghost to preach the Word in Asia, they were essaying to go into Bithynia; but the Spirit of Jesus suffered them not. These two instances of the restraining power of the Holy Ghost, exerted to deter men from what seems abstractedly most desirable, are also proofs, that if men labour aright for God, like St. Paul, they may thank Him for what they are not allowed to do, as well as for what they are enabled to do. (Cp. 2 Cor. i. 17.) They need His preventive as well as His assisting grace; they require a χαλινὸς, or bridle, for their unruly passions, as well as a κέντρον, or spur, for their sluggish will.

This passage may also suggest a reason, why the Gospel was not published sooner, and why it has not been universally diffused. God sees what use men will make of His gifts, and He acts accordingly. See on x. 5.

The Holy Spirit did not now permit them to preach the Word in Asia; but soon afterwards enabled them to do so with great success, so that “all in Asia heard the Word, both Jews and Greeks” (xix. 10). We know also from Pliny’s celebrated letter to Trajan (x. 97) that the Gospel was soon planted in Bithynia.

Here also is evidence of the Inspiration of the Apostles and Evangelists. They proved that they had the Spirit, by what they did. St. Luke here affirms that they were guided by the Spirit in what they did not do. What good man could venture to say this, except he were authorized by the Spirit to do so?

May we not also say that here is an illustration of what may at first perhaps be perplexing in Holy Scripture? Many things are not mentioned there, which, if Scripture had been a human work, would not have been omitted. For example, in the Acts, many leading incidents in the history of St. Paul and the other Apostles are passed over. Doubtless the Holy Spirit had good reasons for withholding these things. Doubtless the Evangelists were sometimes restrained by the Holy Spirit from writing, as the Apostles were from preaching. There is Inspiration in their Silence.

See the Introduction to this volume for further remarks on this subject, p. 6.

7. κατὰ τὴν Μυσίαν] toward Mysia. This use of κατὰ = versus, is seen in Acts ii. 10, τῆς Λιβύης τῆς κατὰ Κυρήνην; and see on xxvii. 12, λιμένα βλέποντα κατὰ Λίβα. Cp. Winer, § 49, p. 357.

— ἐπείραζον] they were essaying.

— τὸ Πνεῦμα Ἰησοῦ] the Spirit of Jesus.—Eltz. has not Ἰησοῦ, but it is found in the best MSS., A, B, C, D, E, and in numerous Versions, and is received by Griesb., Scholz, Lachmann, Tischendorf, Bornemann, and Alford.

This reading deserves to be noted, as confirmatory of the doctrine of the procession of the Holy Spirit from the Son, as well as from the Father. See above on John xv. 26.

8. Τρωάδα] Alexandria Troas, now a “Colonia Juris Italici,” and an “urbs libera.” See Howson, ch. viii. and xx.

The Troad and Philippi (v. 12) are two names associated with battle, and connect the wars of the heroic age, and of the Homeric Deities, with those of the close of Greek History, and the conflicts of the Roman Empire.

But now they are become the scenes of the victories of the Gospel of Peace,—a prelude to the moral change to be wrought by it in the World.

9. ὄραμα—ἄνθρωπος Μακεδὼν] a vision: a man of Macedonia. See below, v. 12. It would seem (as Chrys. observes, p. 804) that God proportions His revelations to the necessities of the case. When strong persuasion is requisite He sends an Angel; where less will serve, a man.

— Μακεδονίαν] Macedonia. The Roman name for Northern Greece. The Romans, having reduced Greece by their arms, divided it into two Provinces, Macedonia in the north; and Achaia in the south.

Macedonia comprised Macedonia Proper, Illyricum, Epirus, and Thessaly: the rest of Greece, including the Peloponnesus, was contained in Achaia, which was so called because the Romans had reduced Greece by means of the Achaëans then holding the chief place in that country. (Pausan. vii. 17.)

The Roman Province of Achaia corresponded very nearly to that territory which is now called the Kingdom of Greece.

10. ἐζητήσαμεν] we sought means by inquiring for a ship going to Greece,—we endeavoured. Observe St. Luke’s modesty. He does not say that he himself joined St. Paul at Troas. He glides as it were imperceptibly into the Apostle’s company; and we only know that he was a sharer in his perils and labours, by the adoption henceforth of the pronoun we. See below, xx. 5.

As S. Irenæus remarked (iii. 14) in the second century, “That Luke was an attendant on Paul, and his fellow-labourer in the Gospel, he himself makes manifest, not in a spirit of boasting, but constrained by the truth itself;” and then Irenæus quotes this verse of the Acts. St. Luke thus intimates that he was an eyewitness of what he relates. And his testimony is stronger because he relates nothing specially of himself. He also notices when he is not present. See v. 40.

The first person is dropped at ch. xvii. 1, and resumed in xx. 5, and thenceforth it continues till the end of this book. See on xx. 5, and on 2 Cor. viii. 18.

— συμβιβάζοντες—ἡμᾶς—εὐαγγελίσασθαι] St. Luke says here, that we sought forthwith to go out (of Asia Minor) into Macedonia, assuredly gathering (as an inference from the Vision) that the Lord hath called us (observe “us”) to evangelize them. A remarkable expression, stating a fact of great importance, which almost escapes notice.

They who have observed St. Luke’s modesty in speaking of himself, will be convinced by this expression that he himself, as well as St. Paul, was called by God to evangelize the Greeks. And they will be persuaded that the holy Evangelist did what he was called to do.

As to the manner in which he did it, see the notes below on 1 Thess. i. 9, and 2 Cor. viii. 18.

11. Σαμοθράκην] Samothrace; an island near Thrace, and called Samothrace, either from the name of the founder of the colony (Dion. Hal. i. 61), or because it was colonized from Samos (Steph. Byz.), or because in the native language the heights of the island were called σάμωι (Eustath. p. 881). It was celebrated for the mysteries of Demeter and Persephone, and rites of the Cabiri. Cp. Tacit. Ann. ii. 54.

— Νεάπολιν] Neapolis in Thrace; about twelve miles from Philippi, the frontier town of Macedonia.

12. Φιλίππους, ἥτις ἐστὶ πρώτη τῆς μερίδος τῆς Μακεδονίας π., κολωνία] What do the words πρώτη τῆς μερίδος mean, as applied to Philippi?

(1) Some suppose them to signify the first city on St. Paul’s route. See Wieseler, p. 38, and Howson, i. 341.

But this is not probable. The first would be Neapolis; and St. Luke says ἑστῇ, not ἡν.

(2) Nor can πρώτη πόλις τῆς μερίδος mean “the chief city of that region of Macedonia.” See Liv. xlv. 29, who says that Æmilius Paulus, B.C. 167, after the subjugation of Perseus and his kingdom, reduced Macedonia into four parts, and made Amphipolis, Thessalonica, Pella, and Pelagonia, the capitals of their respective districts. Cp. Leake, Northern Greece, iii. 480.

(3) Hence πρώτη is interpreted by some (e.g. Rosenm., Kuin.) to mean a principal city of that region of Macedonia. The term πρώτη (primaria) was assigned as a title to cities of Asia; as may be seen on coins.

(4) It is said by others (e.g. Meyer) that κολωνία is to be joined with πόλις, and that St. Luke intends to say that Philippi was the principal colonial-city of that part or district of Macedonia. It was planted with Roman Colonists by Octavian, after ἤμεν δὲ ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ πόλει διατρίβοντες ἡμέρας τινάς· ¹³ τῇ τε ἡμέρᾳ τῶν σαββάτων ἐξήλθομεν τῆς πύλης παρὰ ποταμὸν, ¹ οὗ ἐνομίζετο προσευχὴ εἶναι, ^{f ch. 21. 5.} καὶ καθίσαντες ἐλαοῦμεν ταῖς συνελθούσαις γυναιξί. ¹⁴ Καὶ τις γυνὴ ὀνόματι Λυδία, πορφυρόπωλις πόλεως Θυατείρων, σεβομένη τὸν Θεὸν, ἤκουεν ἧς ὁ Κύριος διήνουξε τὴν καρδίαν, προσέχειν τοῖς λαλουμένοις ὑπὸ τοῦ Παύλου. ¹⁵ ὧς δὲ ἐβαπτίσθη, καὶ ὁ οἶκος αὐτῆς, παρεκάλεσε λέγουσα, Εἰ κεκρίκατέ με g Gen. 19. 3.

& 33. 11.
Judg. 19. 21.
Luke 24. 29.
Heb. 13. 2.

the victory of Actium, and admitted to the Jus Italicum. See Dio Cass. li. p. 445. Plin. Nat. Hist. iv. 11. A somewhat similar explanation had been proposed by Casaubon. See Valck.

None of these explanations appear satisfactory. They all rest on the supposition, which is at least doubtful (see Baumg. ii. 115), that τῆς μερίδος is equivalent to ἐκείνης τῆς μ., i. e. "of that part of Macedonia."

(5) The true solution is probably to be found in the Hellenistic sense of the word μερίς, viz. a frontier, or strip of border-land, that by which it is divided (μερίζεται) from some other adjacent territory. See Ezek. xlv. 7. Here then μερίς, so explained, would be the border-land, by which Macedonia is divided or parted off from Thrace. And Philippi was the chief City of this μερίς or confinium. It was colonized by the Romans as a border-city, to defend the frontier against Thrace. As Col. Leake says (Northern Greece, iii. 487), "From B.C. 146, to the reign of Augustus, the Romans had the troublesome duty of defending Macedonia against the people of Illyria and Thrace, and during that time they established the colonies at Philippi, Pella, Stobi, and Dium."

In the New Testament the words τὰ μέρη often occur in this sense, as equivalent to μεθόρια or confines. Matt. xv. 21; xvi. 13. Mark viii. 10. And in the Acts (ii. 10) we have τὰ μέρη τῆς Λιβύης, the confines of Libya, towards Cyrene.

So in the LXX the word μερίς is used for ἡ ἀκρότης, an extremity. Ruth iii. 7.

The Vulg. here has "prima partis (not partis istius) Macedoniae;" which seems to lead to the right sense. And this interpretation is confirmed by the Arabic and Ethiopic versions, which render μερίς by confines or neighbourhood of Macedonia.

St. Paul had been called to Greece by the man of Macedonia, and that call had been recognized and obeyed as the command of the Lord (xvi. 9, 10). He is now in Macedonia; and as soon as he has crossed the frontier, he begins his career, as a soldier of Christ, warring against Satan, at Philippi the principal city, on the border land of Macedonia, and a military colony of Rome.

These particulars concerning Philippi seem to be specified by St. Luke for various reasons;

He has brought us now to the first city on Greek ground, in which the Gospel was preached by St. Paul.

The name Philippi, derived from Philip (Strabo, vii. p. 5), the ἀνὴρ Μακεδὼν (Demosth. i. p. 43), who subdued Greece, and the father of Alexander, who overran and conquered a great part of the known world, and founded the Third Great Monarchy (Dan. viii. 21), suggests to the reader the contrast between the subjugation of Nations of this world, of which Philip and Alexander were the Conquerors, and the triumphs now to be achieved by Christ in the peaceful march of St. Paul.

The words Μακεδονίας and κολωνία, a colony, call attention to the triumphs of the Gospel at Philippi, a principal city of Macedonia, or Northern Greece (called by the Romans 'Macedonia'), and also as representing in those parts the main element of the Gentile world, by its connexion as a military Colony with Rome, the Fourth Monarchy (Dan. vii. 7. 19), the Mistress of the world at that time.

Hence St. Paul's acts at Philippi are dwelt on by St. Luke as a specimen and rehearsal of his preaching in Greece and Italy, and of the future achievements of the Gospel in the Roman Empire and in the World.

—κολωνία] a Roman Colony—a miniature of Rome. "Coloniae Populi Romani quasi effigies parvæ simulacraque" (Aul. Gell. xvi. 13). See preceding note.

Coins of Philippi of the date of St. Paul's visit have the inscription "COL: (i. e. Colonia) AVG(usta) JVL(ia) PHILIP(pensis)." See Akermann, p. 45. Kittl, p. 337. Compare Howson, i. 345, on the rights of Roman Colonies.

13. πύλης] gate. So A, B, C, D. Elz. πόλεως.

—ποταμόν] river. Not the Strymon (as has been supposed by some) which was some miles distant, but a smaller stream, the Gangites, or, as Herodotus calls it, Angitas; which flows into the Zygactes, and gives its name to the united streams. See Leake, iii. p. 225. Howson, i. p. 346.

The name Krenides, or fountains,—formerly borne by Philippi,—was derived from this stream.

The battle-field of Philippi, in which Brutus and Cassius were defeated by Mark Antony and Octavius, was between the Gangites and the Strymon.

—ὁ ἐνομίζετο προσευχὴ εἶναι] where a meeting for prayer was wont to be held. See v. 16.

Perhaps there was a Proseucha, or enclosed place for prayer there. See Epiphanius (Hær. lxxx.), who describes the Proseuchæ as places of a semicircular form (θεατροειδεῖς), without roofs, and outside the cities. Cp. Mede's Essay, Book i. Discourse 18, p. 67.

Such proseuchæ were commonly near the sea or rivers, as here, for the sake of the lustrations and ablutions of the Levitical Law (see Joseph. Ant. xiv. 10. 23. Cp. Juvenal, iii. 11—13).

The difficult words, "jura, verpe, per Anchialum," in Martial, xi. 94, have been explained from this practice. See Valck.

Hence also they afforded a convenient preparation for the Gospel, as supplying water for baptizing the converts made by the preaching of the Gospel there.

It seems that at Philippi, a Roman Colony, where the Jews were hated and despised (see v. 13), they had no Synagogue within the walls of the City, and were only authorized to have a Proseucha, and that outside the city gate. Cp. Ammonius, in Caten., who says, μὴ οὐσης ἐκεῖ συναγωγῆς διὰ τὸ σπάνιον, παρὰ τὸν ποταμὸν ἔξω τῆς πόλεως λάθρα συνήγοντο.

Here, at Philippi, St. Paul, in accordance with his uniformly charitable spirit toward the Jews, his bitter enemies, went out of the city to their proseucha on the Sabbath Day, and preached there, though he had only a few women to hear him. Cp. below, note on xvii. 1.

14. Θυατείρων] Thyatira, in Lydia. As Alford observes, "Though they had been forbidden to preach the word in Asia (xvi. 6), and sent by the Spirit to Greece, their first convert in Greece is an Asiatic."

—σεβομένη τὸν Θεόν] a Proselyte. See xiii. 50.

—ἤκουεν] was listening.

15. καὶ ὁ οἶκος αὐτῆς] and her house. An argument for Baptism of Infants. See xvi. 33; xviii. 8. 1 Cor. i. 16.

"Quis credat (says Bengel) in tot familiis nullum fuisse infantem, et Judæos circumcidendis, Gentiles lustrandis illis, assuetos, non etiam obtulisse illos baptismum?"

The Church of England (Art. XXVII.) affirms that "the Baptism of Infants is most agreeable with the Institution of Christ." And in her Baptismal office she grounds this assertion on our Lord's declarations (see on John iii. 3. 5) and on His gracious invitation (Mark x. 14) to Infants, βρέφη. See on Luke xviii. 15.

In this she follows the exposition of the Primitive Church, who, as Origen says (in Epist. ad Rom. lib. v.), "received the Baptism of Infants from the Apostles." See also Justin Martyr (Apol. i. 15) speaking of disciples of Christ from their childhood, and Irenæus (ii. 22), who mentions infants as born again, and the Synodical Epistle of the Third Council of Carthage under Cyprian, A.D. 253. Routh, R. S. iii. p. 74, or in Cyprian's Epistles, lix. or lxiv., where the Sixty-six Bishops there assembled say in answer to Fidus, "As to the case of Infants, who, you allege, ought not to be baptized within the second or third day after their birth, and that the law of circumcision should be regarded, which led you to imagine that none should be baptized before the eighth day after his birth—this Synod was of a very different opinion. Not one of us agreed with you, but we resolved unanimously that the grace of God should be denied to none. For since the Lord says (Luke ix. 56), 'The Son of Man came not to destroy men's lives, but to save them,' we must take care, as far as in us lies, that no soul be lost. All persons, whether adults or infants, are equally objects of divine grace, as Scripture declares."

More has been said by the Editor, on this point, in Letter viii. on the Church of Rome, and in Occasional Sermons (Serm. iii. pp. 51—66), where objections to the above statements are considered; and cp. Professor Blunt on the Early Fathers, p. 548.

On the allegation of some Expositors here, that the Children of Heathens could not have been baptized by the Apostles, because their parents were not holy (cp. 1 Cor. vii. 14), see the answer of S. Augustine to Boniface, Epist. 98, vol. ii. p. 394, and Hooker, III. i. 12; V. lxi. 5; and the present Editor's Letter to a friend on the XXIXth Canon of 1603, Lond. 1860.

πιστὴν τῷ Κυρίῳ εἶναι, εἰσελθόντες εἰς τὸν οἶκόν μου μένετε· καὶ παρεβιάσατο ἡμᾶς.

h 1 Sam. 28. 7.
ch. 19. 24.

i Gen. 14. 18—22.
ch. 18. 26.
Heb. 10. 20.

16^h Ἐγένετο δὲ, πορευομένων ἡμῶν εἰς τὴν προσευχὴν, παιδίσκην τινα ἔχουσαν πνεῦμα Πύθωνος ἀπαντῆσαι ἡμῖν, ἣτις ἐργασίαν πολλὴν παρείχε τοῖς κυρίοις αὐτῆς μαντενομένη. 17 Αὕτη κατακολουθήσασα τῷ Παύλῳ καὶ ἡμῖν ἔκραξε λέγουσα, Ἰουδαῖοι οἱ ἄνθρωποι δούλοι τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ ὑψίστου εἰσιν, — παρεβιάσατο] she gently constrained us. (See Valck.) They did not comply at once, lest they should appear to have come to preach the Gospel for personal convenience or advantage.

16. πνεῦμα Πύθωνος] a spirit of Python. A, B, C*, D have Πύθωνα—which may perhaps be the true reading: a and os (OC) are often confused in MSS. See Porson, ad Hecub. 788.

A remarkable expression. This damsel was possessed with an evil Spirit (see vv. 18, 19). Why then does not the Evangelist St. Luke call it by the names used in the Gospel, viz. δαίμονιον, or πνεῦμα ἀκάθαρτον, but πνεῦμα Πύθωνος, a spirit of Python, or πνεῦμα Πύθωνα, or Python spirit, a word never occurring in the Gospels?

Probably for the following reasons—

St. Paul was now on new ground—in Greece (see above, v. 13). He was in a Greek city, a Roman colony. A new scene now opens before him; a new era in the History of the Church. He has not only to war with Jewish prejudice. He has to encounter Satan in other forms. He has now to confront him in the idolatries and superstitions of the West.

One of the greatest difficulties which the Gospel had to contend with there, arose from the power exercised over the Greek and Roman mind by Oracles, Enchantments, Divination, Soothsaying, and Sorcery. That Power showed itself in the νυμφόληπτοι, εὐρύκλεις, ἐγγαστρίμυθοι, θεοφόρητοι, φοιβόληπτοι, cerrii, larvati, lymphatici, &c. of Heathenism. See Aug. de Civ. Dei, ii. 23, where he refers to this passage “in Actibus Apostolorum ventriloqua femina.” Euseb. Præp. Ev. iv. 5; and other numerous authorities cited in Wetst. p. 555. Biscoe, pp. 283—5.

Here St. Paul meets that Power face to face in the streets of Philippi. How was it to be described? By the word Python. This word would sound a note clear and strong on the Greek and Roman ear. Πύθων, Πύθιος, Πύθια, Πυθώνισσα, Pytho, Pythius, Pythia, Pythonissa. How much was contained in those words!

ΠΥΘΩΝ, Python, was the prophetic Serpent at Delphi—the δαίμων τῆς γῆς, the centre and focus of Gentile Divination. See Callim. H. ad Apoll. 100. Ovid, Met. i. 438. Apollodor. i. p. 44. Heyne. Hygin. fab. 140. Plutarch, de Orac. Defect. ii. p. 417, and others, cited by Kuin., and concerning the Pythia herself, see Virgil, Æn. vi. 46.

The Python or Serpent gave his name and place to the prophetic Deity of the Gentile world; the successor of the Serpent at Delphi was the Pythian Phœbus or Apollo.

And from him all who claimed the powers of divination received their title, and were called Pythons. Hence Hesychius, Πύθων δαίμονιον μαντικόν. Alberti Glossar. Gr. p. 75, Πύθωνος δαίμονιον μαντικόν, οὕτω λεγόμενον. “Translatum est hoc nomen ad homines ipsos, qui dei cuiusdam afflatu futura prædicere posse credebantur, nominatim ita dicti sunt ἐγγαστρίμυθοι, Plutarch. de oraculorum defectu p. 414, τοὺς ἐγγαστρίμυθους Εὐρυκλέας πάλαι, νυνὶ Πύθωνας προσαγορευόμενοι, ventriloquos Eurycleas (ab Eurycle inventore hujus divinationis) olim, nunc Pythonas vocant. Hesychius: Πύθων, ὁ ἐγγαστρίμυθος ἢ ἐγγαστρίμαντις. Id. Εὐρυκλῆς, ὁ ἐγγαστρίμυθος, ἦν δὲ γένος μαντέων, οὗς ὀνομάζουσιν Εὐρυκλείς ἔλεγον. Suidas: ἐγγαστρίμυθος, ἐγγαστρίμαντις, ὃν νῦν τινες Πύθωνα, Σοφοκλῆς δὲ στερνόμαντιν, Πλάτων ὁ φιλόσοφος, Εὐρυκλέα ἀπὸ Εὐρυκλέους, τοιούτου μάντεως.” (Kuin.)

Therefore this damsel at Philippi, with her Pythonistic possession, was, according to her degree, a representative of the Pythia who sat on the tripod at Delphi, and who delivered the responses in the name of the Pythian Apollo, the successor of the Serpent, and brought much gain and renown to her masters at that place, and deceived the World by her sorceries. Hence St. Luke calls this Spirit at Philippi, Python. And thus the Holy Spirit by St. Luke’s mouth taught certain solemn truths to the Gentile world. He warned them, that the Spirit with which they dealt so fondly and familiarly in their Oracles and Witchcrafts was an unclean Spirit. It is denounced and ejected as such by St. Paul. The Python, which they themselves said was a serpent, was indeed a minister of “the old Serpent” (2 Cor. xi. 3. Rev. xii. 9; xx. 2), an agent of Satan; and in dealing with him, in these Oracles, they “worshipped devils instead of God” (1 Cor. x. 20). As Chrys. says here, ὁρᾷς ὁ τι Ἀπόλλων δαίμων ἐστίν. Indeed Apollo, and all his diviners, were ministers of Apollyon himself (Rev. ix. 11).

In these Oracles and Divinations of the Gentile world there were many frauds and cheats. But counterfeits prove the reality; and the phenomena of Witchcraft in the Heathen World are too numerous to be explained away. As Dr. Barrow says (Serm. ix. vol. iv. p. 213), “Concerning power of Enchantments implying the co-operation of Invisible Powers, all sorts of intercourse and confederacy, formal or virtual, with bad Spirits, he that shall affirm them to be mere fiction and delusion, must with exceeding immodesty and rudeness charge the World with vanity,” &c. See also Cicero, de Div. i. 5, and 82—88. Van Dale, de Orac., and others, cited by Biscoe, p. 299.

(1) It is worthy of remark, that the Hebrew word which describes a “familiar spirit” is זִמָּה (Obh). This is used in the Old Testament, in Lev. xx. 6. 27. Deut. xviii. 11. Isa. xix. 3. And it is also employed 1 Sam. xxviii. 7, 8, to describe the Spirit with whom the Witch of Endor had commerce, who is called by the LXX an ἐγγαστρίμυθος. May it not be, that this word Obh has some connexion with the Greek ὄφης, or serpent,—the word used by St. Paul and St. John to describe the Old Serpent, the Devil? (2 Cor. xi. 3. Rev. xii. 9; xx. 2.) This conjecture may be confirmed by the following consideration;

(2) It is allowed that the Greek and Latin words πύθιος, πυθώνισσα, πυθάνομαι, πυστήριος, are traceable to πύθων or Python, the Prophetic Serpent of the Great Gentile Oracle. (Strabo, ix. p. 422. Macrob. Sat. i. 17.) Serpent-worship seems to have extended itself over a great part of the World.

May not that word Python be carried up higher to the Hebrew נָח (phethen), or Serpent? Ps. lviii. 4, and Isa. xi. 8. Ps. xci. 13.

It is remarkable, that this last-named passage contains a prophecy concerning the Victory to be achieved by Christ over the Great Python, or old ὄφης, or Serpent, the Devil. The casting out of the Python-spirit by the Apostle St. Paul at Philippi, acting by the power of Christ, may be regarded as a visible exhibition of the operation of Christ in the Gospel, bruising the serpent’s head (Gen. iii. 15), and treading the Dragon, Satan, the Old Serpent, beneath His feet; healing, by His death, the wounds inflicted on them by the fiery Serpent, and delivering the World from the grasp in which he then held it by means of Oracles and Incarnations, and all the sorceries of Divination. It may be considered as a specimen of the fulfilment of the prophecies, which attribute such powers to Christ; and of Christ’s promise to His disciples that He would enable them to overcome “all the power of the enemy” (Luke x. 19; cp. Rom. xvi. 20); and as a presage of His full and final triumph over Satan, that Old Serpent, which deceiveth the world. (Rev. xii. 9; xx. 10.)

—μαντενομένη] by soothsaying; as distinguished from προφητευσασα. Cp. Dean Trench, Synon. § vi.

17. ἔκραξε] was crying. Observe the imperfect, and again, v. 18, τοῦτο ἐποίει, this she was doing for many days.

—οὗτοι οἱ ἄνδρες δούλοι τοῦ Θεοῦ] these men are servants of the most High God, who are declaring to us the way of salvation. This utterance of the Python-spirit at Philippi gives much probability to the assertion of ancient Christian writers, that the Evil Spirit who deceived the Gentile world by Oracles, gave testimony in them to Christ. See Euseb., Dem. Evang. iii. 6, and ix. 10. August., de Civ. Dei, xix. 23. De Consensu Evang. i. 18; and others quoted by Dr. Jenkin on Christianity, i. p. 354, and Mede’s interesting Essay, Works, p. 194, bk. i. disc. xxxvi.

Satan sometimes speaks the truth, in order that he may propagate lies with greater success. See on Mark i. 25, where it will be seen, that in repudiating the homage of the Father of Lies, even when he spoke the truth, St. Paul imitated the example of Christ.

Praise is not seemly in the mouth of a sinner, for it was not sent him of the Lord (Ecclus. xv. 9. Prov. xxvi. 7). Much less is it seemly in the mouth of the Evil One, say Chrys. and Didymus here (in Caten.). The Apostle shows, that testimony from Satan to the preachers of the truth is not to be received; for it is to be feared, that Evil Spirits, having gained men’s confidence by what they speak truly, may overreach the simple by an admixture of falsehood, and so cause their ruin. It is well said by Arator here (ii. 386),— οἵτινες καταγγέλλουσιν ἡμῖν ὁδὸν σωτηρίας. ¹⁸ ^k Τοῦτο δὲ ἐποίει ἐπὶ πολλὰς ^k Mark 16. 17. ἡμέρας. Διαπονηθεὶς δὲ ὁ Παῦλος, καὶ ἐπιστρέψας τῷ πνεύματι εἶπε, Παραγγέλλω σοι ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐξελθεῖν ἀπ' αὐτῆς. Καὶ ἐξῆλθεν αὐτῇ τῇ ὥρᾳ. ¹⁹ ¹ Ἰδόντες δὲ οἱ κύριοι αὐτῆς ὅτι ἐξῆλθεν ἡ ἐλπὶς τῆς ἐργασίας ¹ 2 Cor. 6. 5. αὐτῶν, ἐπιλαβόμενοι τὸν Παῦλον καὶ τὸν Σίλαν εἵλκυσαν εἰς τὴν ἀγορὰν ἐπὶ τοὺς ἄρχοντας. ²⁰ ^m καὶ προσαγαγόντες αὐτοὺς τοῖς στρατηγοῖς εἶπον, Οὐτοὶ ^m 1 Kings 18. 17. οἱ ἄνθρωποι ἐκταράσσουσιν ἡμῶν τὴν πόλιν, Ἰουδαῖοι ὑπάρχοντες. ²¹ καὶ καταγγέλλουσιν ἔθνη, ἃ οὐκ ἔξεστιν ἡμῖν παραδέχασθαι οὐδὲ ποιεῖν, Ῥωμαῖοι οὖσι. ²² ⁿ Καὶ συνεπέστη ὁ ὄχλος κατ' αὐτῶν, καὶ οἱ στρατηγοὶ περιβόρῃξαντες ⁿ 2 Cor. 11. 25. αὐτῶν τὰ ἱμάτια ἐκέλευον ῥαβδίσειν. ²³ πολλὰς τε ἐπιθέντες αὐτοῖς πληγὰς ¹ Thess. 2. 2. ἔβαλον εἰς φυλακὴν, παραγγείλαντες τῷ δεσμοφύλακι ἀσφαλῶς τηρεῖν αὐτούς. ²⁴ ὃς παραγγελίαν τοιαύτην λαβὼν ἔβαλεν αὐτοὺς εἰς τὴν ἐσωτέραν φυλακὴν, καὶ τοὺς πόδας αὐτῶν ἡσφαλίσατο εἰς τὸ ξύλον.

" ————— Professio vera

Mendaci de teste sonat, vocemque fidelem
Perfidus auctor habet; sed non debetur honor
Quod cogit formido loqui, nec mente coheret
Nudus amore timor."

And it is well observed by Milton (Par. Reg. i. 432) as a characteristic of the Evil One, that it hath ever been his " ————— craft,

By mixing somewhat true, to vent more lies."

Therefore St. Paul rejects the praise of the Evil One, and casts him out. The Evil One had said καταγγέλλουσιν ἡμῖν ὁδὸν σωτηρίας; but the Apostle says παραγγέλλω σοι ἐξελθεῖν.

— ἡμῖν] to us. So A, C, G, H. The Evil Spirit "transforms himself into an Angel of light" (2 Cor. xi. 14), and pretends that the Gospel is for himself, as well as for the world.—Elz. has οὖν.

19. ἐξῆλθεν] Observe the repetition of this word. Paul commanded the Spirit to come out, ἐξελθεῖν (v. 18). And the Spirit ἐξῆλθεν, came out immediately (v. 18). And the masters of the damsel saw that (v. 19) the hope of their gains ἐξῆλθεν, came out also.

The hope of their profits went out with the going out of the Evil Spirit,—a proof of the reality of the possession. Indeed, it seems that the Holy Spirit has taken special care that no reasonable person should call in question the fact, that the damsel was possessed by the Evil Spirit, and that the Evil Spirit was permitted by God to exercise certain powers by her instrumentality.

— ἡ ἐλπὶς τῆς ἐργασίας] The hope of gain from their craft; a clue to a powerful motive of Persecutions against Christianity. Both the Persecutions from Heathenism mentioned in the Acts are from this source. In the account of both, the word ἐργασία occurs. See here, and xix. 24, 25. Cp. Pliny's Letter to Trajan, x. 97, 98; and Lardner's Remarks, iv. 11—30, and the excellent observations in Blunt's Lectures, pp. 149—153: "The Priesthood in all its branches, Flamens, Augurs, Haruspices, contemplated the advance of Christianity with dismay. It emptied their Temples, curtailed their sacrifices, reduced their profits, exposed their frauds."

How great were the difficulties it had to encounter in these respects, and how noble the triumphs it achieved! And how much yet remains for it to perform even in Christendom itself, where the corruptions of Christianity are deeply rooted in Covetousness, and Superstition is propagated by Love of Lucre! Cp. on 2 Cor. ii. 17.

20. στρατηγούς] the Prætors, or Duumviri, of the Roman colony (Cicero, de Leg. Agrar. 34),—a title still surviving (A.D. 1750) in the Italian word Stradigo. (Wetstein.) Hence the appeal in v. 21 to the rights and privileges of the Citizens of Philippi as a colonial city of Rome.

See further on xvii. 6, and Howson, i. 345.

The Roman character of Philippi is brought forward in this narrative, which is a prelude to the History of the struggle of the Gospel with the military and imperial power of the Heathen Mistrust of the World.

— Ἰουδαῖοι] Jews. A specimen of the difficulties and dangers which the Gospel had often to encounter from the heathen, by being confounded with Judaism, and by being exposed to all the obloquy with which the Jews were regarded by the Romans.

Christianity was hated as Judaism by the heathen, and as worse than heathenism by the Jews. It had to contend against Judaism and Heathenism, and it triumphed over both.

This charge against Paul and Silas as Jews, would be more effective at this time at Philippi, a Roman colony, because the Jews had lately caused disturbances at Rome, and had therefore been expelled from it by an imperial edict of Claudius (xviii. 2).

21. ἔθνη, ἃ οὐκ ἔξεστιν κ.τ.λ.] customs which it is not lawful for us to receive, being Romans. By the Roman Laws, Judaism was a "religio licita" for Jews; but they were not allowed to make proselytes among the Romans, who were forbidden by the Laws, under penalties, to receive circumcision; though in this and other religious matters the Laws often lay in abeyance. See Neander, Church Hist. i. 89.

22. ῥαβδίσειν] to beat with the lictors' rods: a Roman punishment. St. Paul himself distinctly asserts that he was beaten with rods no less than three several times (2 Cor. xi. 25), a punishment, which he might have escaped, if he had asserted his Roman citizenship, as he did at Jerusalem (xxii. 25). Here, it is alleged, is a difficulty. If he asserted his citizenship in one place, why not also in others? St. Paul, by asserting his citizenship at Jerusalem, and by obtaining exemption thereby (xxii. 25), showed that his sufferings at Philippi were voluntary, and that he had divine direction advising him how to suffer as well as to do, in full faith that his sufferings would, under God's providence, conduce to the furtherance of the Gospel.

In that case the assertion of his Roman Citizenship led, by a providential series of events, to the manifestation of the divine glory, by his preaching of the Gospel to the people and Sanhedrim at Jerusalem,—to Felix and Festus and Agrippa at Cæsarea, and finally to the imperial court and tribunal at Rome.

But if St. Paul had pleaded at Philippi his Roman citizenship, he would not have been beaten, and cast into prison. And we should not have had the beautiful and instructive history of his Christian faith and joy, uttering itself in psalmody at midnight; the jailor and prisoners, and other inhabitants of Philippi, would not have had the evidence to the truth of the Gospel in the Earthquake which shook the prison, and opened its doors, and made the chains to fall from the hands of the prisoners. The jailor and his household might not have become citizens of the kingdom of heaven.

May we not therefore say, that the same Divine Spirit Who had recently restrained St. Paul from preaching the word in Asia and Bithynia, withheld him from asserting his Roman citizenship at Philippi? And may not the good effects which we see ensuing from the restraint in the latter case, be designed to remind and assure us that no less beneficial results arose, though not known by us, from the preventive operations of the Holy Ghost in the former? Cp. note below on 1 Thess. ii. 2.

Yet—such is the treatment which this divine history has received in modern times—it has been alleged by many (e. g. De Wette) that St. Paul was hindered by the tumult from pleading his citizenship; and others (Baur and Zeller) have advanced a step further, and perverted his forbearance into an argument that he did not really possess the right which he afterwards claimed!

24. τὸ ξύλον] the stocks. "Quod cælum, et ξυλοπέδη, etiam ποδοκἀκὴν et ποδοστράβην, ab Hebræis τὸ (Job xiii. 27. xxxiii. 11) vocatur: cui et cervix, et manus et pedes per quinque foramina inserebantur, πεντεσφύργων propterea quoque vocatum Aristoph. Equit. 1046. Latini nertum vocant Plaut. Captiv. iii. 5. 71. Nam noctu nervo vinctus custodiebatur" (Kuin.). Cp. Wetst. p. 557.

With this statement of St. Paul's sufferings at Philippi, compare his own words to the Philippians in his Epistle, i. 29, 30, and see Paley, H. P. p. 120.

o ch. 4. 31.

p ch. 5. 19.
& 12. 7.q Luke 3. 10.
ch. 2. 37.
& 9. 6.
r John 3. 16, 36.
& 6. 47.
1 John 5. 10.s Luke 5. 29.
& 19. 6.

t ch. 22. 25.

u Matt. 8. 34.

v ver. 14, &c.

25^o Κατὰ δὲ τὸ μεσονύκτιον Παῦλος καὶ Σίλας προσευχόμενοι ὕμνου τὸν Θεόν· ἐπηκραῶντο δὲ αὐτῶν οἱ δέσμοι. 26^r Ἀφνω δὲ σεισμός ἐγένετο μέγας, ὥστε σαλευθῆναι τὰ θεμέλια τοῦ δεσμοτηρίου· ἀνεψήθησάν τε παραχρῆμα αἱ θύραι πᾶσαι, καὶ πάντων τὰ δεσμὰ ἀνέθη. 27^r Ἐξυπνος δὲ γενόμενος ὁ δεσμοφύλαξ, καὶ ἰδὼν ἀνεωγμένας τὰς θύρας τῆς φυλακῆς, σπασάμενος μάχαιραν ἐμελλεν ἑαυτὸν ἀναιρεῖν, νομίζων ἐκπεφευγῆναι τοὺς δεσμίους. 28^r Ἐφώνησε δὲ φωνῇ μεγάλῃ ὁ Παῦλος λέγων, Μηδὲν πράξῃς σεαυτῷ κακόν· ἅπαντες γὰρ ἔσμεν ἐνθάδε. 29 Αἰτήσας δὲ φῶτα εἰσεπήδησε, καὶ ἔντρομος γενόμενος προσέειπε τῷ Παύλῳ καὶ τῷ Σίλᾳ· 30^q καὶ προαγαγὼν αὐτοὺς ἔξω ἔφη, Κύριοι, τί με δεῖ ποιεῖν, ἵνα σωθῶ; 31^r Οἱ δὲ εἶπον, Πίστευσον ἐπὶ τὸν Κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, καὶ σωθήσῃ σὺ, καὶ ὁ οἶκός σου. 32 Καὶ ἐλάλησαν αὐτῷ τὸν λόγον τοῦ Κυρίου, σὺν πᾶσι τοῖς ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ αὐτοῦ. 33 Καὶ παραλαβὼν αὐτοὺς ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ὥρᾳ τῆς νυκτὸς ἔλουσεν ἀπὸ τῶν πληγῶν, καὶ ἐβαπτίσθη αὐτὸς καὶ οἱ αὐτοῦ πάντες παραχρῆμα· 34^s ἀναγαγὼν τε αὐτοὺς εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ παρέθηκε τράπεζαν, καὶ ἡγαλιάσατο πανοικὶ πεπιστευκῶς τῷ Θεῷ.

35^r Ἡμέρας δὲ γενομένης, ἀπέστειλαν οἱ στρατηγοὶ τοὺς ῥαβδούχους λέγοντες, Ἀπόλυσον τοὺς ἀνθρώπους ἐκείνους. 36^r Ἀπήγγειλε δὲ ὁ δεσμοφύλαξ τοὺς λόγους τούτους πρὸς τὸν Παῦλον, Ὅτι ἀπεστάλκασιν οἱ στρατηγοὶ ἵνα ἀπολυθῇτε· νῦν οὖν ἐξελθόντες πορεύεσθε ἐν εἰρήνῃ. 37^r Ὁ δὲ Παῦλος ἔφη πρὸς αὐτοὺς, Δείραντες ἡμᾶς δημοσίᾳ ἀκατακρίτους, ἀνθρώπους Ῥωμαίους ὑπάρχοντας, ἔβαλον εἰς φυλακὴν, καὶ νῦν λάθρα ἡμᾶς ἐκβάλλουσιν; Οὐ γάρ· ἀλλὰ ἐλθόντες αὐτοὶ ἡμᾶς ἐξαγαγέτωσαν. 38^r Ἀπήγγειλαν δὲ τοῖς στρατηγοῖς οἱ ῥαβδούχοι τὰ ῥήματα ταῦτα· καὶ ἐφοβήθησαν ἀκούσαντες ὅτι Ῥωμαῖοί εἰσι, 39^u καὶ ἐλθόντες παρεκάλεσαν αὐτοὺς, καὶ ἐξαγαγόντες ἡρώτων ἐξελεῖν τῆς πόλεως. 40^v Ἐξεληθόντες δὲ ἐκ τῆς φυλακῆς εἰσῆλθον πρὸς τὴν Λυδίαν· καὶ ἰδόντες τοὺς ἀδελφούς, παρεκάλεσαν αὐτοὺς, καὶ ἐξῆλθον.

XVII. 1 Διοδεύσαντες δὲ τὴν Ἀμφίπολιν καὶ Ἀπολλωνίαν, ἦλθον εἰς Θεσσαλονίκην, ὅπου ἦν ἡ συναγωγὴ τῶν Ἰουδαίων.

25. ὕμνου] they were singing. St. Peter sleeps in prison between the two soldiers (Acts xii. 6); St. Paul and Silas sing in the stocks. They cannot raise their hands or bend their knees in prayer, but they can lift up their heart and voice to heaven. Such is the power of joy in the Holy Ghost. "Nihil crus sentit in nervo, quum animus in coelo est. Etsi corpus detinetur, omnia spiritui patent." (Tertullian, ad Mart. 2, cited by Neander.) Such is the joy shed by the Holy Ghost into the heart of the Christian. Observe also προσευχόμενοι ὕμνου; i. e. praying they were singing; their prayer was a hymn: perhaps they were singing one of the Psalms which are entitled 'a Prayer of David,' e. g. the xvii. or lxxxvi.

— ἐπηκραῶντο] more than "heard;" they were listening to their music as an ἡδιστον ἀκρόαμα. The Prison became an Odæum. 26. πάντων τὰ δεσμὰ ἀνέθη] the chains of all were loosed. All the prisoners were witnesses of the Miracle.

27. ἑαυτὸν ἀναιρεῖν] to kill himself, as Brutus and others had done here (Plutarch, Brut. 52), and a great number of the proscribed Romans, after the battle of Philippi, followed his example. Self-murder was approved by the Stoics (Senec. Epist. 12. 17. 24. 58, 59. Plin. Ep. 1. 12. Biscope, p. 349), and was then a common resort in perplexity and trouble. This incident is suggestive of what the Gospel has done to prevent it. The jailor was about to put himself to death; St. Paul tells him to "do himself no harm," and opens to him the way of everlasting life.

On the sin of suicide, see Jerome on Amos v., and Augustine, ii. p. 918, de Civ. Dei. i. 20, and contra Gaudentium, vol. ix. p. 1006, and Bp. Andrewes on the Decalogue, p. 404.

29. φῶτα] lights—neuter plural; cp. James i. 17. So that all were witnesses of the miracle.

31. τὸν Κύριον] the Lord of all. He had addressed them as Κύριοι; they turn his thoughts from themselves to the Lord, Christ. 33. ἔλουσεν—ἐβαπτίσθη] ἔλουσεν, καὶ ἐλούθη (Chrys.). A remarkable instance of divine reward for human love. The jailor washed the blood from their wounds, and was by their ministry freed from a spiritual prison, and was washed from his sins by Baptism, made efficacious by the blood of Christ and by faith in Him.

35. ῥαβδούχους] the lictors (properly rod-bearers), who attended the Magistrates of the Colony.

— λέγοντες] This sudden change was perhaps occasioned by what they had heard of the Earthquake in the preceding night.

37. Ῥωμαῖους] Romans by birth; cp. Acts xxii. 25—29. Some of his ancestors had obtained the "jus civitatis," by purchase, as Maximin. says on Acts xxiii. 29, παρέχοντες δόσεις ἀπεγράφοντο Ῥωμαῖοι, καὶ ἔτρεχεν εἰς τὸ γένος τὸ ὄνομα. "Unde colligas ex opulentâ familiâ fuisse Paulum." (Rosenm.)

"Lex Porcia (passed A. D. c. 506) virgas ab omnium civium Romanorum corpore amovet." Cicero pro Rabirio, c. 3, and In Verrem, v. 66, "Facinus est vinciri civem Romanum, scelus verberari." Hence, as Cicero testifies (Verr. v. 57), "illa vox et imploratio, 'Civis Romanus sum,' multis in ultimis terris opem inter barbaros et salutem tulit."

On St. Paul's waiving his right of citizenship, and submitting to be beaten, see above, v. 22.

— οὐ γάρ] "non, utique." On γάρ (= γε ἔρα) thus used, see Winer, § 53, p. 396, note. Klotz ad Devar. de particulis, ii. p. 242. (Hackett.) The ἔρα serves to sum up the premises on which the assertion is made; the γε strengthens the assertion. Cp. on Luke xviii. 14, ἡ γὰρ ἐκείνος.

40. πρὸς τὴν Λυδίαν] Cp. xxviii. 8, πρὸς ὃν εἰσελθόν. So xxi. 18, εἰσῆμι πρὸς Ἰάκωβον. See also x. 3; xvii. 2.

— ἐξῆλθον] they went forth. It seems that St. Luke himself remained at Philippi. Cp. ἦλθον, xvii. 1.

As to the reason of this arrangement, see note below on 1 Thess. i. 7; iii. 6; and 2 Cor. viii. 18. Phil. iv. 3.

It was St. Paul's habit, when he had preached the Gospel in a City, to leave some behind him there to continue the work he had begun. See below on xx. 5.

CH. XVII. 1. διοδεύσαντες] The road on which they travelled from Philippi to Thessalonica, was the Via Egnatia, the Greek continuation of the Via Appia, on which St. Paul afterwards travelled in his way from Puteoli to Rome. It is said by some to have been called Egnatia, from the town "Gnatic lymphis

² ^a Κατὰ δὲ τὸ εἰωθὸς τῷ Παύλῳ εἰσῆλθε πρὸς αὐτοὺς, καὶ ἐπὶ σάββατα τρία ^a Luke 4. 16. διελέγετο αὐτοῖς ἀπὸ τῶν γραφῶν, ³ ^b διανοίγων καὶ παρατιθέμενος, ὅτι τὸν ^b Ps. 22. 7. Χριστὸν ἔδει παθεῖν, καὶ ἀναστῆναι ἐκ νεκρῶν, καὶ ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Χριστὸς ^c Isa. 53. 3—10. Ἰησοῦς, ὃν ἐγὼ καταγγέλλω ὑμῖν. ⁴ ^c Καὶ τινες ἐξ αὐτῶν ἐπέισθησαν, καὶ ^d Matt. 16. 21. προσεκληρώθησαν τῷ Παύλῳ καὶ τῷ Σίλῳ, τῶν τε σεβομένων Ἑλλήνων πλήθος ^e Luke 24. 26, 40. πολὺν, γυναικῶν τε τῶν πρώτων οὐκ ὀλίγαι. ^f John 1. 42. & 28. 24.

⁵ Ζηλώσαντες δὲ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι καὶ προσλαβόμενοι τῶν ἀγοραίων ἄνδρας τινὰς ^g John 19. 12. πονηροὺς, καὶ ὀχλοποιήσαντες ἐθορύβουν τὴν πόλιν· ἐπιστάντες τε τῇ οἰκίᾳ Ἰάσονος, ἐζήτουν αὐτοὺς ἀγαγεῖν εἰς τὸν δῆμον· ^h ch 16. 20. ⁶ ^d μὴ εὐρόντες δὲ αὐτοὺς ^e Luke 23. 2; John 19. 12. ἔσυρον τὸν Ἰάσονα καὶ τινὰς ἀδελφοὺς ἐπὶ τοὺς πολιτάρχας βοῶντες, Ὅτι οἱ τὴν οἰκουμένην ἀναστατώσαντες οὗτοι καὶ ἐνθάδε πάρεισιν· ⁷ ^e οὗς ὑποδέδεκται Ἰάσων. Καὶ οὗτοι πάντες ἀπέναντι τῶν δογμάτων Καίσαρος πράσσουνσι, βασιλέα λέγοντες ἕτερον εἶναι, Ἰησοῦν. ⁸ Ἐτάραξαν δὲ τὸν ὄχλον, καὶ τοὺς πολιτάρχας ἀκούοντας ταῦτα. ⁹ Καὶ λαβόντες τὸ ἱκανὸν παρὰ τοῦ Ἰάσονος καὶ τῶν λοιπῶν ἀπέλυσαν αὐτούς.

¹⁰ ^f Οἱ δὲ ἀδελφοὶ εὐθέως διὰ τῆς νυκτὸς ἐξέπεμψαν τὸν τε Παῦλον καὶ τὸν ^g ch. 9. 25. Σίλαν εἰς Βέροϊαν· οἵτινες παραγενόμενοι, εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν τῶν Ἰουδαίων iratis exstructa," mentioned in Horace's journey from Rome to Brundisium (Sat. i. 5. 97), and his last stage between Barium, "Bari moenia piscosi" (v. 97), and Brundisium, the "finis charæque viæque" (v. 104). Cp. Howson, i. 372.

It is more likely that both the town and the road derived their names from some person or persons of the Gens Egnatia, who were mainly instrumental in their construction. So the Via Appia—named from Appius Cæcus.

On the providential provision, in the great military Roman Roads, for the Propagation of Christianity, see below, xxviii. 15.

—Ἀμφίπολις κ.τ.λ.] For a description of the position and remains of these places, see Col. Leake's Northern Greece, viz. on Amphipolis, formerly called ἐνέα ὄδοι, where Brasidas was killed, see Thucyd. v. 10. Leake, iii. 181.

Apollonia, Leake, iii. 447.

Beræa, iii. 290.

Philippi, iii. 189.

Thessalonica, iii. 235.

The distances on the Via Egnatia, as laid down in the Itineraries, are,— Philippi to Amphipolis thirty-three miles.

Amphipolis to Apollonia thirty miles.

Apollonia to Thessalonica thirty-seven miles (cp. Howson, i. 373).

—Θεσσαλονίκη] Thessalonica; called the mother-city of all Macedonia in an Ancient Inscription in Valck. p. 541; now Saloniki. Cp. Howson, i. 380, and note below on 1 Thess. i. 1.

—ἡ συναγωγὴ] The Article ἡ is not in A, B, D, and has been omitted by Lachmann, Bornemann, Bloomfield, Alford, and Tischendorf, in his last edition (p. 96), retain the article, which is in G, H, and the majority of cursive MSS.; and, it seems, rightly.

There appears to have been only a proseucha, and this outside the gate (xvi. 13), at Philippi, a Roman Colony, where the Jews were an object of scorn and detestation. See on xvi. 20.

But here at Thessalonica was a Synagogue; and it appears to have been the Synagogue of the district.

Perhaps St. Paul passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, because there was no Synagogue there. In all cases he took care to offer the Gospel in the first instance to the Jews. See v. 2.

2. κατὰ τὸ εἰωθός] as his custom was,—he went into the Synagogue. Thus St. Luke speaks of St. Paul. The Apostle imitated the love of Christ, who,—as the same Evangelist says,—as His custom was, went into the Synagogue on the Sabbath day, Luke iv. 16.

3. παρατιθέμενος] alleging, 'allegans'—in the sense of adducing or citing passages and authorities (here, from Holy Scripture) in proof of an argument. See Valck.

4. σεβομένων Ἑλλήνων] Proselytes. A, D, and some Cursive insert καὶ before Ἑλλήνων, and so Vulg. 'gentilibusque.' And this reading, approved by Paley and received by Lachmann, has much to commend it.

The σεβομένοι are Proselytes (see xiii. 43. 50; xvi. 14; xvii. 17), a distinct class from the Heathens and Jews. And it appears that many Gentile idolaters, Ἑλληνες, were converted at Thessalonica. See 1 Thess. i. 9.

5. ζηλώσαντες—προσλαβόμενοι] So A, B, E, and many Cursive MSS. and Versions.—D, G, H have not ζηλώσαντες. Elz. inserts ἀπειθῶντες before Ἰουδαῖοι, with D, and ἀπειθῶντες is in G, H.

—οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι] the Jews. Cp. 1 Thess. ii. 14—16, for St. Paul's account of the conduct of the Jews at Thessalonica.

—ἀγοραίων] "sub-rostranorum;" loiterers in the agora.

6. πολιτάρχας] Politarchs. See also v. 8, τὸν ὄχλον, καὶ τοὺς πολιτάρχας. Another instance of St. Luke's accuracy. The political condition of the two neighbouring cities, Thessalonica and Philippi, was very different. Philippi was a Roman Colony; Thessalonica a Greek free city, 'urbis libera.' There the Roman element was dominant; here the Greek prevails.

Philippi was like a miniature of Rome in Greece. Its magistrates and laws were Roman; and it was proud of its Roman dignity.

At Philippi, therefore, we hear of στρατηγοὶ, Prætors (xvi. 20. 22. 35, 36. 38), and ῥαβδοῦχοι, lictors (xvi. 35. 38). There Roman privileges are invoked (xvi. 21), and an attempt is made to excite the Roman hatred against Paul and Silas as Jews. See on xvi. 20.

But at Thessalonica the scene is changed. Here we have a specimen of Greek liberty allowed to survive amid the conquered cities of Macedonia, now under the Roman yoke: an image of ancient Greek Independence. Every thing here is Greek.

St. Luke marks the change by his language; αὐτοὺς ἀγαγεῖν εἰς τὸν δῆμον (v. 5), αὐτοὺς ἔσυρον εἰς τοὺς πολιτάρχας, an uncommon word, but happily we may still read it (in substance) on an ancient inscription at Philippi; a proof of the writer's exactness. See Leake, p. 236, who observes, "The Magistrates are styled Politarchæ, as when St. Paul visited Thessalonica ninety-three years after the battle of Philippi."

The Inscription, which seems to be of the age of Vespasian, may be also seen in Boeckh (Sylloge Pars x. p. 53, No. 1967); who cites another from Philippi, ΠΟΛΙΤΑΡΧΟΥ ΜΑΡΚΟΥ, and adds, "Manifestò fuerunt πολιτάρχαι septem, ex quibus hoc loco principes quasi separatim scriptus est." Cp. Howson, i. 394—6.

7. Καίσαρος] of Cæsar; an intimation of what the Church would have to suffer from enemies charging her with disaffection and disloyalty to the ruling powers. See the replies to this accusation in the Christian Apologies; especially Tertullian's eloquent vindication, Apol. § 29—35, and de Idol. § 13—15, and Theophil. ad Autol. i. 11.

On the bearing of this passage on one of the most important Prophecies of Holy Scripture, see note on 2 Thess. ii. 3—13.

9. τὸ ἱκανόν] the surety; 'satisfatio' (Gloss.). Cp. LXX, Lev. xxv. 26, ἔὰν εὐρέθῃ τὸ ἱκανόν, λύτρα αὐτοῦ (Grinfield).

10. Σίλαν] This mention of the connexion of Silas with the Church of Thessalonica is confirmed by his association with St. Paul in the beginning of both the Epistles to the Thessalonians.

From the similar association of Timotheus in those two Epistles, it is probable that he also was with St. Paul at Thessalonica as he was at Beræa (v. 14, 15, and xviii. 5). See also 1 Thess. iii. 1, where Timothy is mentioned as having been sent by St. Paul from Athens to Thessalonica.

g Isa. 34. 16.
Luke 16. 29.
John 5. 39.

ἀπήρσαν. ^{11 g} Οὗτοι δὲ ἦσαν εὐγενέστεροι τῶν ἐν Θεσσαλονίκῃ· οἵτινες ἐδέξαντο τὸν λόγον μετὰ πάσης προθυμίας, τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν ἀνακρίνοντας τὰς γραφὰς, εἰ ἔχοι τὰυτα οὕτως. ¹² Πολλοὶ μὲν οὖν ἐξ αὐτῶν ἐπίστευσαν, καὶ τῶν Ἑλληνίδων γυναικῶν τῶν εὐσχημόνων, καὶ ἀνδρῶν οὐκ ὀλίγοι.

h 1 Thess. 2. 4.

^{13 h} Ὡς δὲ ἔγνωσαν οἱ ἀπὸ τῆς Θεσσαλονίκης Ἰουδαῖοι, ὅτι καὶ ἐν τῇ Βεροίᾳ κατηγγέλη ὑπὸ τοῦ Παύλου ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἦλθον κάκεῖ σαλεύοντες τοὺς ὄχλους. ¹⁴ Εὐθέως δὲ τότε τὸν Παῦλον ἐξαπέστειλαν οἱ ἀδελφοὶ πορεύεσθαι ὡς ἐπὶ τὴν θάλασσαν· ὑπέμενον δὲ ὁ τε Σίλας καὶ ὁ Τιμόθεος ἐκεῖ.

i ch. 18. 5.

^{15 i} Οἱ δὲ καθιστῶντες τὸν Παῦλον ἤγαγον αὐτὸν ἕως Ἀθηνῶν καὶ λαβόντες ἐντολὴν πρὸς τὸν Σίλαν καὶ Τιμόθεον ἵνα ὡς τάχιστα ἔλθωσι πρὸς αὐτὸν, ἐξήρσαν.

j ver. 4.

¹⁶ Ἐν δὲ ταῖς Ἀθήναις ἐκδεχομένου αὐτοὺς τοῦ Παύλου, παρωξύνετο τὸ πνεῦμα αὐτοῦ ἐν αὐτῷ θεωροῦντος κατείδωλον οἶσαν τὴν πόλιν. ^{17 j} Διελέγετο k Col. 2. 8.

μὲν οὖν ἐν τῇ συναγωγῇ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις καὶ τοῖς σεβομένοις, καὶ ἐν τῇ ἀγορᾷ κατὰ πᾶσαν ἡμέραν πρὸς τοὺς παρατυγχάνοντας. ¹⁸ Τινὲς δὲ καὶ τῶν Ἐπικουρείων καὶ τῶν Στωϊκῶν φιλοσόφων συνέβαλλον αὐτῷ· καὶ τινες ἔλεγον,

It seems that Timothy was left behind at Thessalonica for a time, and joined Paul and Silas at Berea.

— Βέροια Berea; spelt thus (Βέροια) with a single ρ in the ancient coins of this period. Like Βερονίκη (Bernice), which is a Macedonian form of the word φερηνίκη (bearing or gaining victory), so Βεροία was called from the name of its founder Φέρης. Steph. Byz. and Etymol. Wetst. p. 561. It was intersected by the river Astræus, and still retains its name.

11. εὐγενέστεροι more noble. The obscure Bereans are declared by the Holy Spirit here to be more noble than the wealthy Thessalonians. True nobility consists in being born of God, and in imitating His example and doing His Will. The Heathen had some sense of this. Juvenal asks (Sat. viii. 1), "Stemmata quid faciunt?" and (viii. 20), "Nobilitas sola est atque unica Virtus." And St. Luke here intimates that genuine Nobility is seen in studying the pedigree of our heavenly lineage, and the records of our spiritual inheritance, in the Word of God. This truth is introduced by the pronoun οἵτινες, which signifies "quippe qui." See on 1 Pet. ii. 11.

It appears that these Berean Christians were mainly of Jewish origin (see v. 10). Hence the contrast with those of Thessalonica is more striking; and this is one of the few instances where St. Paul was well received by his own people.

— τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν] daily. See Luke xix. 47.

14. ὡς ἐπὶ] even to the sea.

There does not seem much reason in the interpretations adopted by some here, either that the Berean brethren sent St. Paul forth—

(1) with a feint only, or pretence, of going to the sea: for he did go by sea to Athens, in all probability; as no place is mentioned by St. Luke between Berea and Athens. Or,

(2) with a design to go to the sea; or in the direction of the sea. (Winer, § 66, p. 544.)

It is not probable that the Berean Christians sent Paul forth alone, and exposed him to the malice of the Jews from Thessalonica (v. 13). What St. Luke intends to say seems to be this: that, in their care for the Apostle, the Berean brethren sent him forth on his journey even as far as to the sea; and so Valck. interprets it; that is, they conveyed him in safety, with an escort, to the coast. Thus they protected him, with some trouble and risk to themselves. And afterwards, some who conducted him from Berea, brought him in safety even as far as (ἕως) Athens.

All this is mentioned as a fruit of the Christian spirit of the Church at Berea; a happy result of their study of the Scriptures.

Either, then, the true reading is that adopted by Lachmann, ἕως (the reading of A, B, E, and several cursives), or, what comes to the same thing, ὡς ἐπὶ is to be rendered usque ad, 'even to;' and so it has been understood by the Syriac, Arabic, Æthiopic, and Latin Versions. So Pausan. ii. 25, καταβάντων δὲ ὡς ἐπὶ θάλασσαν. Xen. Cyr. viii. 3. 11, ἔδειξε τέρμα ὡς ἐπὶ πέντε σταδίων. Zosim. i. 67, ὡς ἐπὶ τὸν Ῥήνον. Laërt. viii. 69, ὠδενέκται ὡς ἐπὶ τὴν Αἴττην. Diod. Sic. p. 423, A, τὸν ναύαρχον μετὰ δέκα πρὶντων ἀπέστειλε, κελύσας κατὰ τάχος λάθρα πλεῖν ὡς ἐπὶ Συρακουσίους. See Welstein, Valck., Kuin. If this is the true interpretation, then ἐξαπέστειλαν is to be joined with ὡς ἐπὶ τὴν θάλασσαν, they sent him forth, or escorted him, even down to the sea.

16. κατείδωλον] full of idols (Syriac), as a place full of trees is called κατὰδέντρος, so as to be overgrown by them. Athens was πόλις θεῶν, a city of gods, as appears from the description of its temples, altars, &c., in the Attica of Pausanias, who visited it in the age of the Antonines. See Leake's Athens, pp. 1—35, and the present Editor's Athens and Attica, ch. xi.

Athens, the most intelligent and literary city of Greece, was "given to idolatry." Idolatry, therefore, may flourish side by side with Literature and Science. They have not delivered the world from creature-worship; that could only be done by Christianity.

17. ἐν τῇ συναγωγῇ] in the Synagogue. St. Paul still continues to offer the Gospel in the first instance to the Jews, although they had endeavoured to kill him at Thessalonica, and had persecuted him to Berea. No evil treatment from them was able to exhaust his patience, or abate his love to them, or to weary him in his efforts for their salvation. See above, xvii. 1. A salutary lesson of charity toward those who dissent from the truth.

— ἐν τῇ ἀγορᾷ] in the Agora. On the South of the Acropolis, and to the South-east of the Areopagus. See "Athens and Attica," ch. xxii. As he was disputing in the Agora, he was led up to the Areopagus (v. 19), a low limestone hill, a little above it.

18. τινὲς δὲ καὶ τῶν Ἐπικουρείων καὶ τῶν Στωϊκῶν] but certain of both the Epicureans and the Stoics. For a summary of the points, physical, ethical, and theological, in which St. Paul's teaching would come in contact with the tenets of these sects, see S. Aug. Serm. 150, and c. Academ. iii. 10, and two Treatises c. Epicureos et Stoicos; and S. Athanas., de Incarn. 2, p. 39; and Bentley's Second Boyle Lecture, Works, iii. pp. 27—34, where St. Paul's speech before the Areopagus (vv. 22—32) is illustrated and explained by reference to their opinions. See also, particularly, Bp. Pearson's recently-discovered Concio on this subject (ed. Churton, ii. pp. 56—63) who observes:

"As to the Epicureans, they allowed that the World was made (i. e. had not existed from eternity); but maintained that it came together by chance, and that the Deity took no part in its administration;" and so, as Tertullian says (Apol. 47), "Deum nobis exhibent otiosum et inexercitum, et, ut ita dixerim, neminem humanis rebus."

Besides, they subverted the foundations on which Christianity rests, by denying the Immortality of the Soul. Thus Epicurus says, "death is nothing to us" (Cicero, de Finibus, ii. 31); and "nihil esse post mortem, Epicuri schola est" (Tertullian, de Resurr. Carnis, in initio).

They undermined the groundwork of the Gospel also, by affirming that man is capable of no felicity but of health of body and tranquillity of mind.

As to the Stoics; their name was from the Στοὰ ποικίλη, the "braccatis illita Medis Porticus" (Persius, iii. 53), the arcade or corridor painted (ποικίλη) with frescoes of the battle of Marathon, in which Zeno taught. They were Pantheists. As Tertullian expresses it (adv. Hermog. 44, ad Nationes, ii. 4), they taught that the Deity pervades the matter of the world, as honey fills the comb of a hive. To them the world was God. Thus they undermined the doctrine of Providence, of personal Responsibility, and of a Judgment to come. In their system of Ethics all sins τί ἂν θέλοι ὁ σπερμολόγος οὗτος λέγειν; οἱ δέ, Ξένων δαιμονίων δοκεῖ καταγ-γελεύς εἶναι· ὅτι τὸν Ἰησοῦν καὶ τὴν ἀνάστασιν αὐτοῖς εὐηγγελίζετο. ¹⁹ Ἐπιλαβόμενοι τε αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τὸν Ἀρειον πάγον ἤγαγον λέγοντες, Δυνάμεθα γινῶναι, τίς ἡ καινὴ αὕτη ἡ ὑπὸ σοῦ λαλουμένη διδαχὴ; ²⁰ ξενίζοντα γάρ τινα εἰσφέρεις εἰς τὰς ἀκοὰς ἡμῶν· βουλόμεθα οὖν γινῶναι τί ἂν θέλοι ταῦτα εἶναι. ²¹ Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ πάντες καὶ οἱ ἐπιδημοῦντες ξένοι εἰς οὐδὲν ἕτερον εὐκαίρουν, ἢ λέγειν τὶ καὶ ἀκούειν καινότερον.

²² Σταθεὶς δὲ ὁ Παῦλος ἐν μέσῳ τοῦ Ἀρείου πάγου ἔφη, Ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖοι, were equal; or, rather, in their doctrine of fatalism, no sins at all. Their "wise man," who was all-sufficient in himself (αὐταρκής), and equal to the Jove of the people, had no passions; which, as S. Jerome observes (Ep. ad Ctesiph. 133), is "hominem ex homine tollere." Cp. Bp. Pearson, l. c.

Tertullian (de Animâ 3) sums up the Ethical system of both in two words, "Zenonis vigor (ought not we to read rigor?) et Epicuri stupor."

S. Aug. says (Serm. 150), "Dic, Epicuree, quæ res faciat beatum? Responde, Voluptas corporis. Dic, Stoice. Virtus Animi. Dic, Christiane. Donum Dei."

"Hæc est doctrina Christianorum, incomparabiliter præferenda immunditiæ Epicureorum, et superbæ Stoicorum." (Bengel.)

It is observable, that no mention is here made of the Peripatetics, Academics, or Platonists, whose doctrines were not so much opposed to Christianity as those of the Stoics and Epicureans. Indeed, they may be said to have in some degree prepared the better part of the world for the reception of the Gospel.

— τί ἂν θέλοι] "What can his meaning be,—if he has any meaning at all?"

— ὁ σπερμολόγος] σπερμολόγος, properly a small bird with a shrill note, that flutters and hops hither and thither, picking up seeds (σπέρματα λέγων), particularly after the plough. (Cyrl.) Vid. Aristot. Avn. 232, and the Scholiast, σπερμολόγον ὄνομα ὀρνέων, ἃ ἐκ τοῦ ὀρνττεῖν τὰ σπέρματα, καὶ ἐσθίειν οὕτως ὀνομάσθησαν. Hence beggars who wandered up and down the Agora, and picked up their food as they could, were called σπερμολόγοι.

Eustath. ad Hom. Odys. ε'. v. 241, σπερμολόγος εἶδος ἐστὶν ὀρνέων λωβόμενον τὰ σπέρματα, ἐξ οὗ οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι σπερμολόγους ἐκάλουν τοὺς περὶ ἐμπόρια καὶ ἀγορὰς διατρίβοντας διὰ τὸ ἀναλέγεσθαι τὰ ἐκ τῶν φορτίων ἀπορρέοντα, καὶ διαζῆν ἐκ τούτων. Hence any mean person was so called. Harpocrat. ὁ εἰτελὴς καὶ εὐκαταφρόνητος ἄνθρωπος. Philo, de Leg. ad Cai. p. 1021, γ, χρησάμενος—Ἐλικῶνι—δοῦλα σπερμολόγῳ περιτρίμματι. And the word was applied to parasites who lived by flattering others. Harpocrat. καὶ ἴσως ἀπὸ τῶν ἀλλοτρίων διαζών. On account of the shrill noise of those birds which pick up seeds here and there, a garrulous person was so called. Suidas, σπερμολόγον, εὐρύλογον, ἀκριτόμυθον. Hezueh., σπερμολόγος, φλόρος. (Kuin.)

S. Augustine, Sermon. 150, gives another interpretation of σπερμολόγος (quasi σπείρων λόγους), 'seminator verborum.' And so Vulg. 'seminivertius.' "Ille (sc. Paulus) reverâ," says Aug., "seminator verborum, sed messor morum; et nos tantuli in agro Dei seminamus, et uberem messem de vestris moribus expectamus."

The inquisitive Athenians (v. 21) restlessly roving about, and picking up news in the agora, and described as such even by their own Orator in a better age (Demosth. Phil. i. p. 43), might well be called σπερμολόγοι; and yet they call the Apostle St. Paul a σπερμολόγος. Such in their eyes was the Apostle who was sowing the Divine Seed of the Word in the furrows of the Field of the World, and who will stand foremost at the Great Day of Harvest, and "bring his sheaves with him." So different are the opinions of men and the judgment of God!

— ξένων δαιμονίων] of strange deities, as Socrates before him. The plural for the singular, as in v. 28. Cp. Bentley here. See on Matt. ii. 20.

— τὴν ἀνάστασιν] the resurrection of the Body. They did not deny the Immortality of the Soul. See on I Cor. xv. 12.

19. ἐπὶ τὸν Ἀρειον πάγον ἤγαγον] they lead him to the Areopagus. A fulfilment of Christ's prophecy, "They will deliver you up to Councils." Matt. x. 17. Mark xiii. 9. Luke xxi. 12. S. Chrysostom and others say, that they brought St. Paul up to the Areopagus, in order that they might terrify him (εἰς Ἀρειον πάγον αὐτὸν εἰλκον ὡς καταπλήξοντες), because there was the Judicial Tribunal of capital offences, φονικὰ δίκαι, especially in suits for bringing in strange deities, ξένων δαιμονίων εἰσαγωγή, and other causes of Religion.

This opinion has been controverted; and it has been said, that St. Paul was not brought before the Areopagus for any such forensic purpose. There seems, however, to be good ground for S. Chrysostom's remark, which is adopted, among others, by Bengel, "Paulum eo tanquam reum duxere."

The Areopagus—a low hill raised above the bustle of the Agora—was a favourable spot for hearing a reply to the questions put to him by the Athenians. But there seems to be something more implied by St. Luke in the words (v. 19), ἐπιλαβόμενοι αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τὸν Ἀρειον πάγον ἤγαγον.

It has, indeed, been said (by Grotius and Meyer), that ἐπιλαβόμενοι means only a gentle act of leading aside; and so it sometimes does, as in ix. 27. But in other places it intimates something more; see xvi. 19; xviii. 17; xxi. 30.

The Athenians are called δεισιδαιμονίστεροι (v. 22); their City was given up to idolatry (v. 16). It is therefore not improbable that St. Paul was brought to the Areopagus, as a settler forth of strange gods, by some of that large number of persons in that city whose livelihood depended on the maintenance of Idolatry. See the operation of this cause at Ephesus, xix. 24—28, and at Philippi, xvi. 19, where the same word is used, ἐπιλαβόμενοι εἰλκυσαν ἐπὶ τοὺς ἄρχοντας. Cp. note there.

It is true that St. Luke does not expressly say that he was put on his trial there. The process may have been only a preparatory inquiry, an ἀνάκρισις. They who laid hands on him, may have intended to frighten the Apostle (as Chrysostom supposes) by the judicial associations of the place, and to drive him out of the city. Something of this kind seems to have been designed by his delation to the Areopagus, whose name was expressive of judicial inquisition in religious matters, as was exemplified in the history of Socrates (Xenophon, Mem. i. 1). And the words σταθεὶς ὁ Παῦλος ἐν μέσῳ τοῦ Ἀρείου πάγου ἔφη, Ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖοι denote a public Apology rather than a private discussion. The mention also of St. Paul's convert Dionysius, in v. 34, by his official title, the Areopagite, seems to corroborate this opinion. And, lastly, the noble peroration concerning a future Universal Judgment (v. 31), would come with special force, if uttered before the highest Judicial Tribunal, in the most philosophical City of the Ancient World. See also v. 32.

It is perfectly true—nor is it inconsistent with the opinion just stated in reference to some of his hearers—that in the treatment St. Paul received at Athens, there is also a tone of sceptical indifference and supercilious irony, rather than of violence. Her Philosophers were not earnest in the search of truth. With them Religion was a matter for disputation in the Schools, rather than for moral practice in daily life.

20. ξενίζοντα] surprising, strange. See I Pet. iv. 4.

21. εὐκαίρουν] 'vacabant;' had leisure for. An Hellenistic word, not Attic. "Moeris p. 145, εὐκαίρειν οὐδὲς εἶρηκε τῶν παλαιῶν. Phrynichus p. 50, εὐκαίρειν οὐ λεκτέον, ἀλλ' εὐ σχολῆς ἔχειν. Thom. Mag. σχολὴν ἔγω, καὶ εὐ σχολῆς ἔχω, οὐ σχολάζω τὸ δὲ εὐκαίρειν πάντῃ ἀδόκιμον. Cp. Etym. M. p. 740. 50. Sylb." (Kuin.)

— καινότερον] more new than the last news. "Nova statim sordebant, noviora quærebantur." (Bengel.) The comparative expresses an appetite never satisfied, but ever craving something more, even when it has just been fed. Cp. Theophrast. Char. viii. μὴ λέγεταί τι καινότερον; The news-loving temper of the Athenians is noted by Demosth. Phil. i. 43, βούλεσθε, εἰπέ μοι, περιιόντες αὐτῶν πυθάνεσθαι κατὰ τὴν ἀγορὰν, λέγεται τι καινόν;

22. σταθεὶς δὲ ὁ Παῦλος] And Paul being stationed in the midst of the Areopagus said. He was standing in the midst of the Areopagus, and in the heart of the city of Athens. Cp. "Athens and Attica," ch. xi.

Sixteen stone steps cut in the rock, at its south-east angle, lead up to the hill of the Areopagus from the valley of the Agora, which lies between it and the Pnyx. Immediately above the steps, on the level of the hill, is a bench of stone excavated in the limestone rock, forming three sides of a quadrangle. There the Areopagites sat as judges, on a rocky hill in the open air. On this hill are now the ruins of a small church dedicated to κατὰ πάντα ὡς δεισιδαιμονεστέρους ὑμᾶς θεωρῶ. ²³ διερχόμενος γὰρ καὶ ἀναθεωρῶν τὰ σεβάσματα ὑμῶν εἶρον καὶ βωμὸν ἐν ᾧ ἐπεγέγραπτο, ἈΓΝΩΣΤΩΙ ΘΕΩΙ. Ὁ οὖν ἀγνοοῦντες εὐσεβεῖτε τοῦτο ἐγὼ καταγγέλλω ὑμῖν.

S. Dionysius the Areopagite, and commemorating his conversion by St. Paul. The Apostle was brought, perhaps, by these steps of rock, which are the natural access to the summit, from the Agora below, in which he had been conversing, to give an account of the doctrines which he preached. Here, placed as he was in the centre of this platform in the very heart of Athens, with its statues and altars, and temples of deities around him, he might well say that the city was crowded with idols.

The Temple of Eumenides was immediately below him : behind him, if he looked eastward, was the Temple of Theseus ; and he beheld the Propylæa of the Acropolis facing him, and the Parthenon upon the Acropolis fronting him from above. The Temple of Victory was on his right, and a countless multitude of temples and altars in the Agora and Ceramicus below him. Above him, towering over the City from its pedestal on the rock of the Acropolis,—as the Borromean Colossus, which at this day with outstretched hand gives its benediction to the low village of Arona, or as the brazen statue of the armed Angel, which from the summit of the Castel S. Angelo spreads its wings over the city of Rome,—was the bronze Colossus of Minerva, armed with spear, shield, and helmet, the Champion of Athens. Standing almost beneath its shade, the courageous Apostle pronounced, that the Deity is not to be likened to that, the work of Phidias, or to other forms in “gold, silver, or stone, graven by art and man’s device,” which peopled the scene before him, and that in temples made with hands the Deity doth not dwell.

The remark which has been made by Dr. Bentley, on the skilful adaptation of St. Paul’s oration to the audience which he was addressing, is equally applicable to the place in which he was addressing them. Nothing could present a grander, and, if we may so speak, a more picturesque illustration of his subject, than the temples, statues, altars, and other objects by which he was surrounded.

This Speech contains a statement of the Unity of the Godhead (v. 23), against Polytheism ; of the creation of all things by Him, against the Epicurean theory of a fortuitous concourse of atoms ; of its Government by Him, against the Stoical doctrine of Fate, and the Epicurean notion of Indifference (vv. 23, 24) ; of the divine Omnipresence, and of the αὐτάρκεια of the One Great First Cause (v. 25), in opposition to the popular theology ; of the origin of all Nations from one blood, against the Athenian conceit of their own dignity as αὐτόχθονες ; of the spirituality of the Godhead, in opposition to Idolatry (v. 29) ; of the witness to God’s existence, and other attributes, in Man’s Conscience and in Human Nature, and in the Visible World (v. 29). It concludes with a reply to the objection that these are new doctrines (v. 30), and with a statement of the doctrine of human accountability and Universal Judgment to come, by One whom God has appointed ; of which He has given a pledge by His Resurrection from the Dead.

He does not once mention Jesus Christ by name. Compare St. Stephen’s conduct in this respect before the Jewish Sanhedrim (see the commencement of note on ch. vii. and on vii. 45). In both cases there is the reverence of silence ; they would not provoke blasphemy against that Holy Name.

St. Paul’s Speech at Athens—both in what he does say, and in what he does not say—is a Model and Pattern to all Christian Missionaries for their Addresses to the Heathen World. Cp. on v. 23.

—ὡς δεισιδαιμονεστέρους] as more fearful of the gods ; not said in censure : οὐδὲν βαρὺ λέγων (Chrys.). Cp. the words of Œdipus in Sophocles (Œd. C. 260), τὰς Ἀθήνας φασὶ θεοσεβέστατας εἶναι.

The sense is,—I for my part regard you as more fearful of the gods than the rest of the world. Cp. Winer, § 35, p. 218, and Baumg. ii. p. 157.

The word θεωρῶ appears to be studiously repeated (see vv. 16, 22). This is the light in which I regard you. This is my theory concerning you. You charge me with introducing new Deities (v. 18). I will show that you yourselves are not satisfied with what you have, and that you are affected with a mysterious craving for something more.

He represents their feeling toward their deities as one of servile fear ; and he will deliver them from its vague alarms, and teach them a religion of filial love.

The sense in which the Athenians, to whom he spoke, used the word δεισιδαίμων, timidus Deorum, is evident from the Chapter of Theophrastus (Charact. Eth. xvi.) on that subject. The character of Nicias, as drawn by Thucydides (vii. 50. 77. 86), presents a striking specimen of Athenian δεισιδαιμονία. And the verses of the great Poet of one of the Sects, the Epicurean, with which St. Paul had to contend at Athens, display a graphic view of his position at Athens in taking up arms against the Heathen Theology, and an appropriate comment on his words :

“Humana ante oculos fedè cùm vita jaceret
In teris, oppressa gravi sub Religione,
Quæ caput à cœli regionibus ostendebat,
Horribilî super aspectu mortalibus instans.”

And again,

—“Sæpius illa
Religio peperit scelerosa atque impia facta.”
Lucrēt. i. 64—102.

The victory over this awful Religio—a victory which Lucretius claims for his “Graius homo,” Epicurus, is indeed specially due to St. Paul. Cp. Aug. de Civ. Dei iv. 30, “Agamus Deo gratias, qui has superstitiones per altissimam Christi humilitatem, per Apostolorum prædicationem, liberâ suorum servitute subvertit.”

23. τὰ σεβάσματα] your objects of worship, temples, altars, &c., used in this sense in the Greek Version in Wisd. xiv. 20 ; xv. 17. Bel and the Dragon 27. (Kuin.) Cp. 2 Thess. ii. 4.

—εἶρον καὶ] I met with an altar also, inscribed to the Unknown God.

—βωμὸν] an altar. An example to Christian Preachers and Missionaries, that they should adapt their addresses to the circumstances of their audience, and commence with things in which they agree with them, and endeavour to persuade their hearers by means of things which they acknowledge ; and so lead them on to accept the truth as it is in Christ.

In the Jewish Synagogues, the Apostle always preached from the Law and the Prophets there read. But in the heathen City, he takes his text from their Altar, and confirms it from their Poets. To those who were under the Levitical Law, “he was as under the Law, that he might gain them that were under the Law ; and to them that were without the Law, he became as without the Law, that he might gain them that were without the Law ;” and, so far as was consistent with his obedience to Christ, he became “all things to all men, that he might by all means save some.” See 1 Cor. ix. 20. 22.

He thus brought every thing into subjection to Christ ; and often, as here, he overcame Satan by his own weapons ; ἀπὸ τῶν ὅπλων τῶν πολεμίων αὐτοῦς ἐχειρώσατο. See Ammonius in Caten. p. 352.

Cp. Chrys. here, and Jerome, Epist. ad Magnus, “Ductor Christiani exercitūs, Paulus, et orator invictus, pro Christo causam agens, ipsam inscriptionem fortuitam arte (aræ ?) torquet in argumentum fidei.”

—ἈΓΝΩΣΤΩΙ ΘΕΩΙ] to the unknown God. In short public formulas, like Inscriptions on altars, &c., the definite article is often omitted. Cp. Ζηνὸς Ὀλυμπίου, — Ἀπόλλωνι Πυθί, — Ἀθηνᾷ Πολιάδι κ.τ.λ. And therefore Ἀγνώστῳ Θεῷ is not to be rendered to an unknown God, but “to the unknown God.”

It would seem that the same Divine Power which had guided Pilate’s hand when he wrote the inscription on the Cross, “Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews,” directed those, unconscious though they were, who traced this title on the Altar. It is not to be supposed, that St. Paul alludes only to the more general inscription Ἀγνώστοις Θεοῖς, engraven on some altars in the harbour and city of Athens (Pausan. Attic. i. 1. Philost. Vit. Apollon. vi. 3. Col. Leake’s Athens, p. 306).

The title Ἀγνώστοις Θεοῖς, to unknown Gods (in the plural), was indeed of some use to his argument, as it implied a confession from Athenians themselves that there were Beings—and therefore a Being—unknown to them, and yet entitled to divine worship.

But to suppose that he argued from such an inscription as that, and from nothing more, would be tantamount to a supposition that in preaching the One God, he argued from a profession of Polytheism.

No one—least of all, St. Paul—would have hazarded an ill-grounded assertion before an assembly of critical Athenians. And the conversion of Dionysius, a Judge of the Court of the Areopagus, by St. Paul’s pleading, is a sufficient proof that the allegations, on which it was grounded, were true.

Hence Clem. Alex. (Strom. i. 9) and S. Aug. (c. Crescon.

24 ¹ Ὁ Θεὸς ὁ ποιήσας τὸν κόσμον καὶ πάντα τὰ ἐν αὐτῷ, οὗτος οὐρανοῦ καὶ γῆς Κύριος ὑπάρχων ^m οὐκ ἐν χειροποιήτοις ναοῖς κατοικεῖ, ²⁵ οὐδὲ ὑπὸ χειρῶν ἀνθρώπων θεραπεύεται προσδεόμενος τινός, ^o αὐτὸς διδοὺς πᾶσι ζωὴν καὶ πνοὴν καὶ τὰ πάντα· ²⁶ ἐποίησέ τε ἐξ ἑνὸς αἵματος πᾶν ἔθνος ἀνθρώπων κατοικεῖν ἐπὶ πᾶν τὸ πρόσωπον τῆς γῆς, ὀρίσας προστεταγμένους καιροὺς, καὶ τὰς ὁροθεσίας τῆς κατοικίας αὐτῶν, ²⁷ ζητεῖν τὸν Κύριον, εἰ ἄρα γε ψηλαφήσειαν αὐτὸν καὶ εὖροιεν· καίτοιγε οὐ μακρὰν ἀπὸ ἑνὸς ἐκάστου ἡμῶν ὑπάρχοντα· ²⁸ ἐν αὐτῷ γὰρ ζῶμεν καὶ κινούμεθα καὶ ἐσμεν· ὡς καὶ τινες τῶν καθ' ὑμᾶς ποιητῶν εἰρήκασιν, Τοῦ γὰρ καὶ γένος ἐσμέν. ²⁹ ^r Γένος οὖν ὑπάρχοντες τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐκ ὀφείλομεν νομίζεин χρυσῷ ἢ ἀργύρῳ ἢ λίθῳ, χαράγματι τέχνης καὶ ἐνθυμήσεως ἀνθρώπου, τὸ Θεῖον εἶναι ὅμοιον. ³⁰ ^s Τοὺς μὲν οὖν χρόνους τῆς ἀγνοίας ὑπεριδὼν ὁ Θεὸς ταυτὺν παραγγέλλει τοῖς ἀνθρώποις πᾶσι πανταχοῦ μετανοεῖν· ³¹ ^t καθότι ἔστησεν ἡμέραν, ἐν ᾗ μέλλει κρίνειν τὴν οἰκουμένην ἐν δικαιοσύνῃ, ἐν ἀνδρὶ ᾧ ὤρισε, πίστιν παρασχὼν πᾶσιν ἀναστήσας αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν.

³² Ἀκούσαντες δὲ ἀνάστασιν νεκρῶν οἱ μὲν ἐχλεύαζον, οἱ δὲ εἶπον, Ἀκούσόμεθά σου πάλιν περὶ τούτου. ³³ Καὶ οὕτως ὁ Παῦλος ἐξῆλθεν ἐκ μέσου αὐτῶν. ³⁴ Τινὲς δὲ ἄνδρες κολληθέντες αὐτῷ ἐπίστευσαν· ἐν οἷς καὶ Διονύσιος ὁ Ἀρεοπαγίτης, καὶ γυνὴ ὀνόματι Δάμαρις, καὶ ἕτεροι σὺν αὐτοῖς.

i. 29) affirm that the Athenians worshipped one God, although unknown.

There was doubtless an altar at Athens declaratory of the Unity of the Godhead. There was an altar inscribed Ἀγνώστῳ Θεῷ, to the unknown God. Such an inscription would have been suggested by the natural cravings of the heart for something more pure and rational than the unholy and unsatisfying vanities of Gentile Polytheism.

This craving had been expressed by heathen Poets, e. g. by Aratus, whom St. Paul quotes (v. 28).

And (as Chrys. and Eucumenius, and others state) the occurrence of public calamities, such as the great Plague at Athens in the 40th Olympiad, suggested to the Athenians that there might be some other god whom they had offended, and who could and would give them that aid which they had sought in vain from their many gods of wood and stone. As Col. Leake has observed (p. 306), "Diogenes Laertius (in Epimenid. lib. i. sect. 10) informs us that Epimenides himself came to Athens to establish this worship, and that he sacrificed upon the Areopagus."

Laertius does not indeed speak of the Ἀγνώστος Θεός, but he says τῷ προσήκοντι Θεῷ, in the singular number; and his name would have been specified, if it had been known. "It is probable, therefore (says Leake), that an altar Ἀγνώστῳ Θεῷ continued to stand upon the Areopagus from that time until it became the occasion of St. Paul's address to the Athenians." If the altar was visible, as perhaps it was, the appeal would have been much more cogent and striking.

The words of the interlocutor in the dialogue of Philopatris, ascribed by some to Lucian (iii. 708, but see Gieseler, § 40), νῆ τὸν ἄγνωστον ἐν Ἀθήναις, and τὸν ἐν Ἀθήναις ἄγνωστον ἐφευρόντες . . . τοῦτ' εὐχαριστήσωμεν, though designed perhaps as a sneer on St. Paul's speech at Athens, and so proving its dissemination in the Gentile world, are far from casting any doubt on the Apostle's assertion; they rather confirm his statement of the fact: though they do not concede his inference from it.

— δ ἀγνοοῦντες εὐσεβεῖτε ["nomen quod ignorantes bene colitis, ego declaro vobis; Deus Qui" &c. The reading δ and τοῦτο restored from the oldest MSS. by recent Editors, is more consistent with the argument than ὃν and τοῦτον. Cp. John iv. 22, ὑμεῖς προσκυνεῖτε δ οὐκ οἴδατε.

There seems a contrast between εὐσεβεῖτε here and δεσινδαμονία v. 22.

— καταγγέλλω] An answer to καταγγελεὺς v. 18.

24. οὐ—κατοικεῖ] doth not dwell; is not locally confined to them as to a dwelling-place (Acts vii. 48), even though it be as magnificent as the Parthenon and the Temple of Theseus.

This assertion, and others like it, of God's Omnipresence, was abused by the adversaries of Christianity into a charge against the Christians that they had no Temples. Celsus, ap. Origen, c. Cels. viii. p. 389. Minuc. Felix, 10, "nullas aras habent, templa nulla." But this was an erroneous allegation. See Tertullian, de Idol. 7, and Mede's Essay on Churches, i. e. "appropriate places for Christian Worship both in, and ever since the Apostles' times," Works, pp. 319—385.

25. αὐτός] He Himself—and no one else. Cp. Matt. i. 21. Since He is the sole source of all life to all, He cannot be in need of any thing from any. His essence is like that described by the Poet,—

"Ipsa suis pollens opibus, nihil indiga nostri."

27. τὸν Κύριον] their Lord. See v. 24.

— εἰ ἄρα γε ψηλαφήσειαν αὐτόν] if haply at least (as might be expected) they would feel for Him—as men purblind, feeling and groping for the light. See on Heb. xii. 18; cp. Aristoph. Pax 691, ἐψηλαφῶμεν ἐν σκοτῷ τὰ πράγματα.

28. τινὲς—ποιητῶν] certain of your poets. Aratus, of Cilicia, St. Paul's own country (Grotius), and perhaps of Tarsus, St. Paul's own city. (Fabric. Bibl. Gr. iv. p. 87.) The same words are also in Cleanthes, of Lycia. Hymn. Jov. 5.

St. Paul connects all Greek poetry with Athens, "the eye of Greece;" and by quoting Aratus he connects his audience with himself. Cp. Jerome in Ep. ad Titum (vol. iv. p. 419).

29. λίθῳ] stone: even though it be of marble from your celebrated quarries of Mount Pentelicus. From the abundance of marble at Athens, it was called λίθος, stone.

— χαράγματι] gravage: even though, like your chryselephantine Minerva of the Acropolis, it be from the hands of a Phidias.

30. ὑπεριδὼν] overlooking: without inflicting punishment. Cp. xiv. 16. Rom. iii. 25. And in this sense it is used by LXX in Deut. xxii. 1. 3, 4.

32. ἀνάστασιν] resurrection, i. e. of the body. See Bentley, Serm. ii. p. 32.

Here St. Paul opposes all schools of Gentile Ethics. "Ut carnis restitutio negatur, de una omnium philosophorum scholā sumitur." (Tertullian, Præsc. 7.)

33. καὶ οὕτως ὁ Παῦλος ἐξῆλθεν] And so Paul went away from them. They deferred the re-hearing of the cause to a more convenient season, and so he departed. He departed from Athens, never, as far as we know, to revisit it. "Nusquam Paulus minore cum fructu quàm Athenis docuit." (Bullinger.)

A solemn warning to all, who, gifted with intellectual advantages, spend their time in speculation, and prefer novelty to truth. Specially a warning to all such persons as seek for novelties in Religion, and in the Exposition of Scripture. The Spirit who dwelt in St. Paul may visit them for a time; but, if He be not reverently entertained, He will depart from them—perhaps for ever.

34. Διονύσιος] Dionysius, afterwards the first Bishop of Athens, according to Dionysius, the Corinthian Bishop of the same name. Euseb. iii. 4; iv. 23. Cp. Bingham, ii. 1. 4.

There is now a Church dedicated to him on the Areopagus. S. Chrys. de Sacerdot. (iv. p. 189, Hughes) says that the Damiris here mentioned was his wife.

XVIII. ¹ Μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα χωρισθεῖς ὁ Παῦλος ἐκ τῶν Ἀθηνῶν ἦλθεν εἰς Κόρινθον· ² ^a καὶ εὗρών τινα Ἰουδαῖον, ὀνόματι Ἀκύλαν, Ποντικὸν τῷ γένει, προσφάτως ἐλληλυθότα ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰταλίας, καὶ Πρίσκιλλαν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ, διὰ τὸ διατεταχέναι Κλαύδιον χωρίζεσθαι πάντας τοὺς Ἰουδαίους ἀπὸ τῆς Ῥώμης, προσῆλθεν αὐτοῖς· ³ ^b καὶ διὰ τὸ ὁμότεχρον εἶναι ἔμενε παρ' αὐτοῖς καὶ εἰργάζετο· ἦσαν γὰρ σκηνοποιοὶ τῇ τέχνῃ.

⁴ Διελέγετο δὲ ἐν τῇ συναγωγῇ κατὰ πᾶν σάββατον, ἔπειθ' ἐτε Ἰουδαίους καὶ Ἑλληνας.

⁵ ^c Ὡς δὲ κατήλθον ἀπὸ τῆς Μακεδονίας ὁ τε Σίλας καὶ ὁ Τιμόθεος, συνείχετο τῷ λόγῳ ὁ Παῦλος, διαμαρτυρόμενος τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις τὸν Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν.

The works attributed to him by some belong probably to another Dionysius of the fourth century. See Bp. Pearson, Vindict. Ign. cap. x. pp. 249—264, ed. Churton.

CH. XVIII. 1. Κόρινθον] Corinth. "Achaiae caput" (Florus, ii. 69); "totius Graeciae lumen" (Cicero, pro lege Manil. 6); "excisam quidem à Mummio, sed cum tempore reforescentem," (Grot.) The following summary is from Kuin.

"Portus habebat duo, ad navium stationes aptissimos, alterum occidentalem, Lechæum. versus Italiam, alterum orientalem, Cenchreensem (v. 18), versus regiones Asiaticas, v. Strabo lib. viii. p. 261, Pausan. Achaic. c. 16. Celebrabantur ibi, conventu totius Graeciae (Curt. iv. 5) ludi Isthmici, ultra Hadriani tempora, v. Pausan. Corinth. c. 1. 2. Bello Archaico à Lucio Mummio dirutum Flor. ii. 16. Plin. H. N. xxxiv. 2; xxxv. 5, centum annos post Julius Cæsar, deductis illuc libertinis quàm plurimis, restituit; et brevi tempore pristinum splendorem recuperavit, ita ut, propter civium opulentissimorum copiam, et artium studium, inter reliquas Graeciae civitates principatum teneret. Quam in rem luculentissima extant scriptorum veterum testimonia, nominatim Strabonis, qui lib. viii. p. 263 scribit: ἡ μὲν οὖν πόλις τῶν Κορινθίων μεγάλη τε καὶ πλουσία διαπαντὸς ὑπῆρξεν, ἀνδρῶν τε ἡ πόρρηκεν ἀγαθῶν εἰς τε τὰ πολιτικά καὶ εἰς τὰς τέχνας τὰς δημιουργικάς."

On its present condition, see Col. Leake's Morea, iii. 228—237 and 322. Houson, chap. xii.

2. Ἀκύλαν] Aquilam: probably a name adopted for commercial intercourse with the Romans; and the same as Onkelos. (Valck.) — Ποντικόν] of Pontus. See ii. 9. 1 Pet. i. 1.

— Κλαύδιον—Ἰουδαίους—Ῥώμης] "Claudius Judæos, impulso Chresto assidue tumultuantes, Romæ expulit" (Sueton. Claud. 25). Cp. Bede, who says that it is uncertain whether the Christians were not confounded with Jews in that edict of Claudius, by which he banished the Jews from Rome. Lardner, Credib. i. 11. 3. Burton, 184. Houson, i. 454. Gieseler, § 28. It is probable that the Jews of Rome, as at Thessalonica and other great cities, had been stirred up against the Christians.

A happy exile for Aquila. Banishment by Cæsar from Rome brought him to Christ and the Church. He is afterwards at Ephesus (v. 19. 1 Cor. xvi. 19), and returns to Rome (Rom. xvi. 3), and at Ephesus again (2 Tim. iv. 19). His wife Prisca, or Priscilla, is always mentioned with him (see on v. 18); and probably they carried with them, wherever they went, the spiritual benefits they derived from their fellowship with St. Paul. Thus evil may be overruled for good; and exile from an earthly city may be the means of bringing many to heaven.

3. σκηνοποιοί] tent-makers. To which St. Paul himself refers, Acts xx. 34. 1 Cor. iv. 12. 2 Cor. xi. 9; xii. 13. 1 Thess. ii. 9. 2 Thess. iii. 8. The word σκηνοποιοί is best rendered "opifices tentorium ex corio, in usum viatorum." As Chrys. explains it, ἐπὶ σκηνοβάφειον ἐστὼς δερμάτα ἐρράπττε, and as Arator says (p. 206),

—"tentoria quippe
Fortia mobilibus fabricabat in aggere tectis;
Longius hæc abiens peregrinus ubique viator
Erigit, atque hiemes solesque his pellibus arcet."

Some have supposed that St. Paul had learnt the art of tent-making in his own country Cilicia, celebrated for its cilicium, or goats'-hair, of which tents were made; and others, that he had practised it among the σκηνῖται in Arabia (Gal. i. 17).

The supposition that these tents were made from the cilicium, or goats'-hair, of St. Paul's native country Cilicia, does not seem to rest on any good foundation (cp. Meyer).

There was nothing discreditable, in the eyes of a Jew, in manual labour. "Mos erat etiam doctissimis Judæorum opifi-cium aliquod discere." See Schoettgen. p. 472, and Rosenm. here, and Biscoe, p. 273.

Hence St. Paul is called "pellium sutor" by Origen (hom. 17 in Num.).

May we not add, in reference to Christ Himself, that Ipse Orbis terrarum Opifex, sacrosanctis Suis manibus fabri artem exercebat (Matt. xiii. 55. Mark vi. 3). Sic et Apostolorum primarius, qui in Ecclesiæ tabernaculo pangendo plus omnibus laborabat (1 Cor. xv. 10), tentorii facitandis victum quæritabat: et a terrenorum tentorium sutor? (cp. Origen, hom. 17 in Num.) ad æterna habitanda vocatus est? Hence Arator says (p. 207),

—"habitacula Paulus
Dum terrena levat, docet ut cœlestia condant, Factaque sæpe manu nunc construit atria verbo."

This was indeed a consecration of human labour. As Chrys. observes here, "St. Paul, after working miracles, stood in his workshop at Corinth, and stitched hides of leather together with his hands; and the Angels regarded him with love, and the Devils with fear."

St. Paul, it would seem, from his free-birth at Tarsus (cp. xvi. 37), and from his education under Gamaliel at Jerusalem (see xxii. 3), was of an opulent family; and it is probable that at his conversion he incurred a loss of estate, as well as of friends, so that he was obliged to provide for his necessities by the work of his own hands. Acts xx. 34.

But he thought all things σκόβαλα that he might win Christ, for whom he suffered the loss of all things (Phil. iii. 8).

It was not honourable to the Corinthians, that the Apostle was obliged to provide a maintenance for himself by manual labour. And their "lack of service" to him is contrasted (see v. 5) with the thoughtful liberality of the Macedonian Churches.

But that lack of service on their part gave him an occasion for showing that he did not preach for an earthly reward; and also for stating the claim of Christ's Ministers to a competent maintenance with greater force, because no one could allege that in so doing he was pleading for himself. See 1 Cor. ix. 7, 11, 12. 18. 2 Cor. xi. 7.

4. Ἑλληνας] A remarkable passage, as showing that the word Ἑλληνας is sometimes used in the Acts for Greek-speaking Jews and proselytes. Here Hellenes are attendants on the synagogue-worship (as in xiv. 1; xvii. 4). When the Jews, whom St. Paul addresses (see v. 5), had rejected the Gospel, then,—but not till then,—did he say that he would go to the Gentiles (v. 6), εἰς τὰ ἔθνη. See above, xi. 20.

5. κατήλθον ἀπὸ τῆς Μακεδονίας ὁ τε Σίλας καὶ ὁ Τιμόθεος] As Dr. Paley observes, St. Paul had sent for them to come to him from Macedonia to Athens (xvii. 15, 16). And St. Paul says (1 Thess. iii. 1), "We thought good to be left at Athens alone, and sent Timotheus our brother to establish you." Thus the Epistle implies what is said in the History, and supplies what is not said; and vice versa.

Timothy, it seems, remained with St. Paul at Corinth as "his fellow-labourer" in preaching the Gospel; ὁ συνεργός μου, as he is called in the Epistle to the Romans (Rom. xvi. 21), written from that place.

— τῷ λόγῳ] by the word. So A, B, D, E, G, and some Cursives and Versions; and this reading is adopted by Griesb., Scholz, Lach., Tisch., Born., Alf.—Elz. συνέχετο τῷ πνεύματι. The sense is,—after the arrival of Silas and Timotheus, he was constrained by the Word within him urging him to speak, and striving vehemently for utterance. (See on 1 Cor. ix. 16.) So the Syriac Version. Cp. Luke xii. 50, πῶς συνέχομαι, ἕως οὗ τελεσθῇ; and 2 Cor. v. 14, ἡ ἀγάπη συνέχει ἡμᾶς. And see LXX in Jerem. xx. 9; xxiii. 9. Ps. xxxix. 3. Job xxvii. 18, 19.

But why was he thus constrained, after their arrival?

Probably, because they brought to him pecuniary supplies

⁶ ^a Ἀντιτασσομένων δὲ αὐτῶν καὶ βλασφημούντων, ἐκτιναξάμενος τὰ ἱμάτια ^d εἶπε πρὸς αὐτοὺς, Τὸ αἷμα ὑμῶν ἐπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν ὑμῶν· καθαρὸς ἐγὼ ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν εἰς τὰ ἔθνη πορεύσομαι. ⁷ Καὶ μεταβὰς ἐκείθεν ἦλθεν εἰς οἰκίαν τινὸς ὀνόματι Ἰούστου, σεβομένου τὸν Θεόν, οὗ ἡ οἰκία ἦν συνομοροῦσα τῇ συναγωγῇ. ⁸ ^e Κρίσπος δὲ ὁ ἀρχισυνάγωγος ἐπίστευσε τῷ Κυρίῳ σὺν ὅλῳ τῷ οἴκῳ αὐτοῦ· καὶ πολλοὶ τῶν Κορινθίων ἀκούοντες ἐπίστευον, καὶ ἐβαπτίζοντο. ⁹ ^f Εἶπε δὲ ὁ Κύριος δι' ὀράματος ἐν νυκτὶ τῷ Παύλῳ, Μὴ φοβοῦ, ἀλλὰ λάλει καὶ μὴ σιωπήσῃς· ¹⁰ ^g διότι ἐγὼ εἰμι μετὰ σοῦ, καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐπιθήσεται σοι τοῦ κακῶσαί σε· διότι λαὸς ἐστὶ μοι πολὺς ἐν τῇ πόλει ταύτῃ. ¹¹ Ἐκάθισέ τε ἐνιαυτὸν καὶ μῆνας ἕξ, διδάσκων ἐν αὐτοῖς τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ. ¹² Γαλλίωνος δὲ ἀνθυπατεύοντος τῆς Ἀχαΐας, κατεπέστησαν ὁμοθυμαδὸν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι τῷ Παύλῳ, καὶ ἤγαγον αὐτὸν ἐπὶ τὸ βῆμα ¹³ λέγοντες, Ὅτι παρὰ τὸν νόμον ἀναπαίθει οὗτος τοὺς ἀνθρώπους σέβεσθαι τὸν Θεόν. ¹⁴ ^h Μέλ- ^{h-ch.} ^{25.} ^{11.} λοντος δὲ τοῦ Παύλου ἀνοίγειν τὸ στόμα, εἶπεν ὁ Γαλλίων πρὸς τοὺς Ἰουδαίους, Εἰ μὲν ἦν ἀδίκημά τι ἢ ῥαδιούργημα πονηρὸν, ὧ Ἰουδαῖοι, ⁱ κατὰ λόγον ἂν ἦνεσχόμην ὑμῶν· ¹⁵ εἰ δὲ ζήτημά ἐστι περὶ λόγου καὶ ὀνομάτων, καὶ νόμου τοῦ καθ' ὑμᾶς, ^j ὤψεσθε αὐτοῦ· κριτὴς ἐγὼ τούτων οὐ βούλομαι εἶναι. ¹⁶ Καὶ ^j ἀπήλασεν αὐτοὺς ἀπὸ τοῦ βήματος. ¹⁷ ^k Ἐπιλαβόμενοι δὲ πάντες Σωσθένην

^d Lev. 20. 9, 12.
² Sam. 1. 16.
Ezek. 3. 18, 19.
Matt. 10. 14.
& 27. 25.
ch. 13. 45, 51.

^e 1 Cor. 1. 14.

^f Jer. 1. 19.
ch. 23. 14.
^g John 10. 16.
Matt. 28. 20.

ⁱ Rom. 13. 3.

^j ch. 23. 29.
& 25. 11, 19.
John 18. 31.
^k 1 Cor. 1. 1.

from Macedonia. See 2 Cor. xi. 9, "When I was present with you and wanted, I was chargeable to no man; for that which was lacking to me (at Corinth), the brethren which came from Macedonia (i. e. Silas and Timotheus) supplied." See also what he says to the Philippians of Macedonia (Phil. iv. 14—18).

Therefore, after the arrival of his friends from Macedonia he gave himself up to preaching; he left off making earthly tents, to build up the heavenly Tabernacle of the Church of God.

"It is more blessed to give than to receive" (Acts xx. 35). A double blessing was, therefore, on the Macedonian Churches. The Corinthians lacked in service to the Apostle in their own city; the Christians of Macedonia sent supplies to St. Paul at Corinth, and so edified the Church in Achaia.

7. ἐκείθεν] thence, i. e. from the Synagogue. Cp. xix. 9, where St. Paul separates himself from the Synagogue at Ephesus, and transfers his disciples to the "school of Tyrannus."

— Ἰούστου] Justus. Some Versions and a few MSS., E, B, D, insert Τίτου before Ἰούστου; which is defended by Bornemann. It is remarkable, that Titus is never mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles. Cp. Bp. Pearson, O. P. ii. 328; and see note below on 2 Cor. viii. 18.

8. Κρίσπος] Crispus, who was baptized by St. Paul himself, 1 Cor. i. 14. Cp. Paley, H. P. p. 39.

— ὁ ἀρχισυνάγωγος] chief of the Synagogue. Mark v. 22.

There were several ἀρχισυνάγωγοι to one Synagogue, see Acts xiii. 15. And therefore the article is used here to distinguish Crispus from others who had not the same function, as the words in xvii. 34, Διονύσιος ὁ Ἀρεοπαγίτης, distinguish him from others who were not Areopagites. See on John xviii. 10.

Hence, it cannot be concluded with some, that Sosthenes (v. 17) succeeded Crispus.

10. λαὸς μοι πολὺς ἐν τῇ πόλει ταύτῃ] I have much people in this city. Not so at Athens, xvii. 33, 34. The commercial Corinth was more favourable to the Gospel than Athens, with its love of novelty and empirical Intelligence.

12. Γαλλίωνος ἀνθυπατεύοντος τῆς Ἀχαΐας] When Gallio was proconsul of Achaia. These words, placed at the beginning of the sentence, with something of the style of an official document, are designed to call the reader's attention to the influence of the Imperial Authority of Rome in relation to Christianity. The incident now to be recorded is significant; it is φανὴρ συνετοίσι; an epitome of history. Almighty God interferes here to protect St. Paul against the malice of the Jews; and the instrument which He uses for this purpose on this and other occasions is the imperial power of Rome (cp. Baumg. ii. 213). Thus He foreshadows what He will do hereafter, in a more signal manner, by making all the Powers of this world, indifferent or hostile though they be, subservient to the Triumph of Christ.

— Γαλλίωνος] Gallio. M. Annæus Novatus, the younger brother of the celebrated Stoic, L. Annæus Seneca, uncle of the Poet Lucan; called "dulcis Gallio" by Statius (Sylv. ii. 7. 32), and "dulcis omnibus," and lauded for his unruffled serenity of temper, and disinterested generosity and contempt of money, by his brother Seneca (Præf. lib. iv. Nat. Quæst.), who dedicates to him his books "De Irâ" and "De Vita Beata." He had been adopted by Gallio the Rhetorician, from whom he derived his name. He is called dominus by Seneca (Ep. 104)—his elder brother—on account of his official dignity.

— ἀνθυπατεύοντος] proconsul. Another proof of St. Luke's accuracy. Achaia had been an Imperial Province under Tiberius (Tacit. i. 76), but was restored to the Senate by Claudius (Sueton. Claud. 25). How much more St. Luke knew of the history of Rome, than the Roman Historians did of Christ! Cp. Lardner, Cred. i. 1. 12.

— Ἀχαΐας] of Achaia. See xvi. 9.

13. ἀναπέθει] Primum persuasionem novis rationibus labefactatam evellit. Wetst.

15. ὀνομάτων] of names; i. e. whether Jesus was rightly called Christ. This question is dismissed by the Gallios of this world as of no moment; but it is considered as all in all by God. See Matt. xvi. 13—18.

— νόμου τοῦ καθ' ὑμᾶς] the law, that is received by you—you Jews; you who pretend to have a better law than we have who are Romans!

17. πάντες] all, i. e. the Jews. The words οἱ Ἕλληνες are added by Elz. with D, E, and probably G, H, and the great majority of cursives. But A, B omit these words, and they are not in Vulg. and some other Versions, nor in Chrys., who says οὕτως ἱταμοὶ ἦσαν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι; and they have been rejected by Lachm., Tisch., and Alford.

Why did St. Luke mention the circumstance, whatever it was?

The answer seems to be supplied by the close of the verse, οὐδὲν τοῦτων τῷ Γαλλίῳ ἔμελεν. He intends to mark the indifference of the Roman Power, as represented by the Proconsul of Achaia. It was not so bitter in its hostility to Christianity as the Jews were, who called themselves the people of God. It did not persecute, but it would not befriend the Gospel.

It would not interfere to protect the cause of truth; and in its philosophic professions of toleration and non-interference, it allowed the laws of morality to be infringed and outraged in its presence. It seems therefore probable, that πάντες refers to the Jews. Gallio professed to be unwilling to adjudicate between the Jews and St. Paul, on the plea that the matter was not within his cognizance, and he drove the Jews from the judgment-seat; and it seems, that they, disappointed of their expectation, were so reckless as to seize on Sosthenes, the chief of the Synagogue, and to beat him in the presence of Gallio. Cp. Paley, Horæ Paulinæ, p. 40, who takes this view.

But why did the Jews beat the chief of their own Synagogue?

The answer seems to be supplied by the passage where Sosthenes is associated with St. Paul, as "Sosthenes our brother," in the beginning of the First Epistle to the Corinthians.

It may be, that the Sosthenes here is not the same as there.

τὸν ἀρχισυνάγωγον ἔτυπον ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ βήματος· καὶ οὐδὲν τούτων τῷ Γαλλίῳ ἔμελεν.

1 Num. 6. 18.
ch. 21. 24.

m Rom. 16. 1.

18 ¹ Ὁ δὲ Παῦλος ἐτι προσμείνας ἡμέρας ἱκανὰς, τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς ἀποταξάμενος, ἐξέπλει εἰς τὴν Συρίαν, καὶ σὺν αὐτῷ Πρίσκιλλα καὶ Ἀκύλας, κειράμενος τὴν κεφαλὴν ἐν Κεγχρεαῖς, ^m εἶχε γὰρ εὐχήν.

But Holy Scripture loves clearness, and not confusion, and seems to suggest their identity. See also next note.

— Σωσθένην] Sosthenes. The Jews, being disappointed in their expectations of injuring Paul, turned their rage against Sosthenes. Probably Sosthenes was favourable to St. Paul, and restrained them from destroying him, and was therefore obnoxious to the Jews. (Chrys., Ammon., Ecum.) Perhaps the injury inflicted on him by them attached him more closely to St. Paul, and hastened his conversion to Christianity, after the example of his brother ἀρχισυνάγωγος, Crispus (v. 8).

— καὶ οὐδὲν—ἔμελεν] and Gallio cared nothing for these things. Οὐδὲν is to be construed with ἔμελεν, not with τούτων. See the examples in Weist.

Gallio was perfectly indifferent to these things, although this outrage in his presence was an insult to himself and to his office (Chrys.), and as if this was no ἄδικημα! And yet Gallio was called "dulcis" (see above on v. 12),—and had professed, that if there had been any act of personal wrong (v. 14), he would do justice to the injured party. But the favourite of this world does not always make a good Judge. See further above, xiii. 7. And professions of toleration and non-interference are often only specious disguises for love of ease, or thin veils for cowardice and desire of popular applause. It is not surprising, that Gallio is afterwards heard of as ministering to Nero at Rome in his frivolity and sensuality, and as stage-manager in the scenes described by Dio, lxi. 20, which caused so much grief to the honest Burrhus (Tac. Ann. xiv. 15), and to Gallio's brother Seneca. At length Gallio, the favourite, as well as his brother Seneca, the instructor of Nero, were killed by him.

18. Πρίσκιλλα] Priscilla. Why is she named before her husband Aquila?

"The head of the woman is the man" (1 Cor. xi. 3); and she is commanded to be in subjection to her husband as the Church to Christ (Eph. v. 22—24).

Yet here the wife is placed before her husband. And this order is adopted in some places by St. Paul also, Rom. xvi. 3. 2 Tim. iv. 19. There must be some reason for this. It is observable also, that both St. Luke and St. Paul in other places put Aquila the husband before Priscilla the wife. See Acts xviii. 2. 1 Cor. xvi. 19.

But why is Priscilla ever put first?

Bengel says, "Viro præponitur uxor spectatrix;" but he does not say in what she was 'spectatrix' or more honourable.

Aquila was a Jew when he came to Corinth; and he was known as such in the first instance to the Church. (See xviii. 2.) But perhaps his wife Priscilla was a Christian, and was instrumental in his conversion (for he was converted) to Christianity.

She is associated with him in xviii. 26, where some MSS. and Editors place her name first, in bringing the celebrated Jew Apollos to a more perfect knowledge of the Gospel.

It seems not improbable, that Priscilla was distinguished by her zeal and ability in disseminating the truth, and that she had an authorized position and official function in the Church.

This conjecture is confirmed by what we read in 1 Cor. xvi. 19, where St. Paul, writing from Ephesus, says, "Aquila and Priscilla salute you; with the Church that is in their house."

And, what is more remarkable, St. Paul, in writing from Corinth to Rome, after his mention of Phæbe, the deaconess of Cenchreæ (the port of Corinth), proceeds immediately to send his salutation to the Roman Christians; and after the name of Phæbe, and at the head of that long list of names, he places first in order the name of Priscilla.

The position she here occupies, and the terms in which she is mentioned there (Rom. xvi. 3, where her name stands before her husband's), show that she had been of signal use to St. Paul and to the Church.

"Salute Priscilla and Aquila, my helpers in Christ Jesus, who for my life laid down their own necks (probably at Ephesus), unto whom not only I give thanks, but all the Churches of the Gentiles; and salute the Church that is in their house."

From the position of her name immediately after Phæbe the Deaconess, and before her husband and all the other Roman Christians, it may be inferred, that Priscilla also was appointed by St. Paul to do some special work, like that of a Deaconess, in the Church.

It is indeed sometimes supposed, that either unmarried women of mature age, or widows, were alone admitted to that office. (See Bingham, ii. 22.) But not enough is known of its constitution, to authorize a confident assertion on this point.

Indeed, it may rather be inferred from St. Paul's own directions concerning Deaconesses, that married women sometimes held that office. See on 1 Tim. iii. 11, and v. 12; and there are many very good reasons, why some deaconesses, having especial charge of women, should have been married.

Priscilla, by her marriage with Aquila, who was connected with the Jews by origin, and appears to have been led by his mercantile pursuits to travel from one populous city to another (for we hear of him at Rome, at Corinth, at Ephesus, and again at Rome), would have had many favourable opportunities for serving the cause of Christianity; and from the terms in which she is mentioned in Scripture, she appears to have availed herself of them.

It is therefore submitted for the reader's consideration, whether she was not appointed by St. Paul to such an office in the Church as a holy and pious matron could hold in primitive times; and whether it may not be on account of the official dignity annexed to that office, that her name, which, if she were regarded solely as a woman and a wife, would follow after that of her husband, is sometimes placed before it both by St. Luke and St. Paul.

This incident—trivial as at first it may seem—is also of value as showing the truth of the history, and the connexion of St. Luke with St. Paul.

The coincidence between the narrative of St. Luke, in the Acts of the Apostles, and the Epistles of St. Paul, does not consist merely in this, that they both mention the names of Aquila and Priscilla, or that they both mention that of Aquila first or that of Priscilla first, but that each sometimes places Priscilla first, and sometimes Aquila; i. e. they both seem to have regarded Priscilla as holding a peculiar position in the Church,—a position nowhere fully explained, but only implied,—and as having precedence before Aquila in that official respect, though bound to submit to him, and therefore sometimes named after him, as her husband.

— κειράμενος τὴν κεφαλὴν ἐν Κεγχρεαῖς, εἶχε γὰρ εὐχήν] having polled his head at Cenchreæ; for he had a Vow. The context shows that this is not said of Aquila, but of St. Paul.

So it was understood by Didymus, the Master of S. Jerome. See Caten. p. 307, where he says, "Paul the Apostle of the Gentiles became a Jew to the Jews, in order that they might not be estranged from him as one who revolted from the Lord; and therefore, according to the custom of his country, he polled his head at Cenchreæ, being under a vow; and further, when he arrived at Jerusalem, he joined himself to the four men who had such a vow as this upon them." See xxi. 23.

As Bede observes here (p. 73), and in Retract. (p. 148), both Jerome and Augustine apply the words to St. Paul. Jerome says (Ep. ii.), "Fratribus valedicens navigabat Syriam, et cum eo Priscilla et Aquila; et totondit sibi in Cenchreis caput;" and Augustine (Ep. 80), "Timotheum circumcidit, et Cenchreis votum absolvit."

This would seem to intimate that the present reading of the Vulgate, "qui sibi totonderat caput," is not so ancient as the fifth century.

Some have asserted that Chrysostom applies it to Aquila; but this is an error.

It is also said by some (e. g. Meyer, p. 333) that Theophylact understands it of Aquila, and not of St. Paul. But Theophylact says (iii. p. 140), "because he seemed to some to teach men to abandon the Law (of Moses), and they were offended with him on that account, and would not receive his preaching, therefore he does this here, and in the Temple at Jerusalem (xxi. 24. 26), in compliance with their scruples. And this is what he says of himself, 'I became as under the Law to them who were under the Law'" (1 Cor. ix. 20). Therefore Theophylact applies it to St. Paul, and Bede observes, "hæc fecit Paulus ut Judæos lucrificeret."

It is true that in the Editions of this author (Theophylact), there is also a scholium connecting it with Aquila; but this seems to be a more recent interpolation.

Modern Expositors are divided. Erasm., Luther, Beza, ¹⁹ Κατήντησε δὲ εἰς Ἐφεσον, καλέκινους κατέλειπεν αὐτοῦ· αὐτὸς δὲ εἰσελθὼν εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν διελέχθη ⁿ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις.

n ch. 17 2.

Calvin, Bengel, Whitby, Rosenm., Olsh., Neander, De Wette, Baumg. (ii. p. 224), Hackett (p. 261), Alford, and others, refer it to St. Paul.

Hammond, Grotius, Valck., Kuin., Wieseler, Meyer, to Aquila.

The argument used by some, that if St. Luke had not intended that Ἀκύλας should be construed with κεράμενος, he would not have put Priscilla first, is refuted by the passages cited in the preceding note. The verbs and participles of this verse and the next refer to St. Paul; and Aquila is only introduced parenthetically.

The words εἶχεν εὐχὴν are best illustrated by Acts xxi. 23, εἰσὶν ἡμῖν ἄνδρες τέσσαρες εὐχὴν ἔχοντες ἐφ' ἑαυτῶν. The εὐχὴ is the Hebrew נדח (nedher), a vow, and when thus placed by itself, can hardly be understood to mean any thing else but what was called εὐχὴ by the Jewish Hellenists (i. e. Philo, i. p. 357, εὐχὴ μεγάλη), i. e. the vow of a Nazarite, concerning which see Numb. vi., and the Talmudic traditions in the Mishna, Tract. Nazir, iii. pp. 146—178, ed. Surenhus. Amst. 1700.

This then appears certain, that when St. Paul ἐκέριστο at Cenchreæ, the eastern port of Corinth, he had the vow of a Nazarite upon him. As Bede says, "Navim ascensurus caput ex voto totodit," and he explains the 'votum' as that of a Nazarite.

But what is the meaning of the word κεράμενος?

The action here is supposed by some Expositors to be similar to that in Acts xxi. 24, where we read of the "four men having a vow," and "shaving their heads."

But it ought to be noticed, that St. Luke does not use the same word in the two places. Here he says κεράμενος, there (xxi. 24) ξυρῶσονται.

The word used by St. Luke in the present passage (κεράμενος) is never applied by the LXX to describe the final Nazaritic shaving of the head on the expiration of the vow.

The word κείρεσθαι is used to describe the more ordinary act, that of cutting the hair short, or cropping it,—as, for instance, the polling of his head by Absalom, who, as the Rabbis say, was a perpetual Nazarite. Lightfoot, i. p. 1092; ii. p. 774. See 2 Sam. xiv. 26, ἐν τῷ κείρεσθαι αὐτὸν τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐγένετο ἅπ' ἀρχῆς ἡμερῶν εἰς ἡμέρας ὡς ἂν ἐκέιρετο, ὅτι κατεβαρύνετο ἐπ' αὐτὸν, καὶ κειρόμενος ἔστησε τὴν τρίχα τῆς κεφαλῆς αὐτοῦ κ.τ.λ.

Absalom let his hair grow by reason of a vow of Nazaritism, perhaps taken in a spirit of personal vanity. We do not hear that he ever ξυρῆσατο κεφαλὴν, shaved his head. But he periodically ἐκέριστο κεφαλὴν, polled his head on account of the weight of his hair. A temporary Nazarite might poll his head (κείρασθαι) in foreign lands. See Mishna, l. c. vol. iii. p. 167. And some of the Rabbis say, that in this case his hair was to be taken to Jerusalem and burnt at the door of the Sanctuary (Lightfoot, i. p. 1092), who says, "If he polled his head in the country (i. e. out of Palestine), as Paul did at Cenchreæ, he was to bring his hair and burn it," in the room for the Nazarites at the Temple.

The word used by the LXX to describe the shaving of the head by the temporary Nazarite is ξυρῆσασθαι. This word is used to signify both the process of shaving the head after a Levitical pollution (when the days already past were counted as nothing, see Numb. vi. 12, and the term of the vow began again), and also to describe the final process of shaving the head when the term of the vow had expired. See Numb. vi. 9, ἐάν τις ἀποθάνῃ ἐπ' αὐτῷ (and so he incur a pollution by nearness to a dead body) παραρῆμα μαιηθήσεται ἡ κεφαλὴ εὐχῆς αὐτοῦ, καὶ ξυρῆσεται.

And again, as to the final shaving, on the expiration of the term of the εὐχῆ, or vow, it is said, Numb. vi. 18, ξυρῆσεται ὁ πύγματος παρὰ τὰς θύρας τῆς σκηνῆς τοῦ μαρτυρίου τὴν κεφαλὴν τῆς εὐχῆς αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐπιθήσει τὰς τρίχας ἐπὶ τὸ πῦρ, ὃ ἐστὶν ὑπὸ τὴν θυσίαν τοῦ σωτηρίου.

The head of the Nazarite could not be shaved finally except at a particular place, i. e. at the door of the Sanctuary, which in St. Paul's time was at Jerusalem (Numb. vi. 18). Cp. Joseph. B. J. ii. 15. 1, ἐπεδήμει δὲ Βερνίκη ἐν τοῖς Ἱεροσολύμοις, εὐχὴν ἐκτελοῦσα τῷ Θεῷ. Josephus adds, that it was a custom for persons in sickness or other distress, to make a vow for thirty days before that on which they were about to offer sacrifices, and to vow to abstain from wine and to shave their heads. And in doing this at Jerusalem they went barefoot.

Therefore St. Paul's act at Cenchreæ was not such a shaving of the head.

St. Paul himself marks the distinction between κείρεσθαι and ξυρῆσασθαι. 1 Cor. xi. 6, αἰσχρὸν γυναικὶ τὸ κείρασθαι, ἢ ξυρᾶσθαι, where see Valck. The Vulgate well distinguishes between the two words here and in xxi. 21 and 1 Cor. xi. 6, rendering κείρεσθαι by tondere, and ξυρᾶσθαι by radi and decalvari. Cp. the Mishna as cited above.

The word κείρεσθαι signifies to poll the hair, or crop it by scissors or shears. But ξυρῆσασθαι is to shave the hair off, at least in part, with a ξυρὸν or razor, so that the skull appears.

Hence it may be inferred,—

That the word here used, κεράμενος, does not describe the shaving of the head on the expiration of the term of a Nazarite's vow;

That it is here used to describe the act of cutting the hair short by a temporary Nazarite;

That the addition of the words "for he had a vow," intimates that St. Paul would not have cut his hair short, if he had not made a vow of Nazaritism.

Having taken such a vow, he would be allowed κείρεσθαι, to poll his head, because according to the Law he could not shave his head before he came to Jerusalem (Jahn, Archæol. § 394. Winer, R. W. B. p. 141, Art. 'Nasiräer'), and his hair might therefore otherwise become too long for comfort or for decency.

It seems that St. Paul did not choose to cut his hair short (κείρεσθαι) at Corinth, where he remained more than a year and a half (vv. 11. 18), but deferred it till he came to Cenchreæ, the sea-port of Corinth, when he was just about to set sail for the East; where he would come into contact with many Jews and Jewish Christians. Indeed, in the next verse it is said that he entered into the Synagogue at Ephesus and disputed with the Jews (v. 19). And soon after he came to Jerusalem for the Feast.

And perhaps the reason why he said (xviii. 21) that he must by all means (πάντως) be at Jerusalem at the next approaching feast (for he did not attend all the feasts, nor nearly so), was that he had this vow upon him; and that he must take the hair he had cut short at Cenchreæ, to be burnt at the temple at Jerusalem, and accomplish his vow by a final shaving, and by votive offerings at the Temple. As is said in the Mishna (de Naziræis, fol. iii. p. 156), "Si quis novisset Naziræatum extra Terram (i. e. out of the Holy Land), proficisci debuit in Terram, et illic votum implere." Cp. Lardner, i. p. 115.

The knowledge that he was under such a vow would have been of much use to him in his dealings with the Jewish Christians at Ephesus and elsewhere. It would be a visible and practical refutation of the charge that he despised the Levitical Law, and condemned those who continued to observe it.

Another reason, probably, why he did not choose to poll his hair or cut it short at Corinth, but waited till he came to Cenchreæ (when he left Greece for a time), was because with the Greeks it was usual only for slaves to wear the hair cropped short, ἐπειτα δὴτα δοῦλος ὧν κόμην ἔχεις; (Aristoph.)

To have appeared with his hair cut short in the Churches at Corinth among the Greek Christians, would have exposed him to ridicule and his preaching to contempt. He acted with prudence in reference to the Gentile Christians in not cutting his hair off at Corinth, nor till he was on the point of quitting Greece. And if the Greek Christians heard, as they probably would from some one at Cenchreæ, that the Apostle had cut his hair short there, they would learn also that he did it "because he had a vow," and would thus be taught a lesson of forbearance towards the Jewish Christians from the example of the Apostle, who they knew did not enforce the Levitical Law, and yet, as they heard, did not despise it, but in his charity to the Jewish Christians, and to the Jews, sometimes complied with it in his own person.

The grounds of St. Paul's compliance, in this and other respects, with the Levitical Law, are well stated by S. Augustine in one of his Letters to S. Jerome (Epist. 82).

After a considerable interval, St. Paul arrived a second time at Jerusalem (xxi. 17). He had been charged with contempt of the Levitical Law, as St. James tells him (xxi. 21); and he is advised by the Bishop of Jerusalem to associate with himself four other persons under a vow of temporary Nazaritism, and to be at charges with them (that is, to pay the expenses of the sacrifices to be offered in the Temple at the expiration of their vow), that they might shave their heads. And so St. Paul on the next day entered the Temple with them, announcing the fulfilment of the days of their purification, until the sacrifice was offered for each o 1 Cor. 4. 19.

James 4. 15.
Heb. 6. 3.
p ch. 19. 21.
& 20. 16.

²⁰ Ἐρωτῶντων δὲ αὐτῶν ἐπὶ πλείονα χρόνον μέναι παρ' αὐτοῖς οὐκ ἐπένευσεν, ²¹ ἄλλ' ἀπετάξατο αὐτοῖς εἰπών, Δεῖ με πάντως τὴν ἑορτὴν τὴν ἐρχομένην ποιῆσαι εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα. Ἦ πάλιν δὲ ἀνακάμψω πρὸς ὑμᾶς, τοῦ Θεοῦ θέλοντος.

²² Καὶ ἀνῆχθη ἀπὸ τῆς Ἐφέσου καὶ κατελθὼν εἰς Καισάρειαν ἀναβὰς καὶ ἀσπασάμενος τὴν ἐκκλησίαν, κατέβη εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν.

²³ Καὶ ποιήσας χρόνον τινὰ ἐξῆλθε, διερχόμενος καθεξῆς τὴν Γαλατικὴν χώραν καὶ Φρυγίαν, ἐπιστηρίζων πάντας τοὺς μαθητάς.

q 1 Cor. 1. 12.
& 3. 5, 6.
Tit. 3. 13.
r ch. 19. 3.

²⁴ Ἰουδαῖος δέ τις, Ἀπολλῶς ὀνόματι, Ἀλεξανδρεὺς τῷ γένει, ἀνὴρ λόγιος, κατήντησεν εἰς Ἐφεσον, δυνατὸς ὢν ἐν ταῖς γραφαῖς. ²⁵ Οὗτος ἦν κατηχημένος τὴν ὁδὸν τοῦ Κυρίου καὶ ζέων τῷ πνεύματι ἐλάλει καὶ ἐδίδασκεν ἀκριβῶς τὰ περὶ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, ἐπιστάμενος μόνον τὸ βάπτισμα Ἰωάννου. ²⁶ οὗτος τε ἤρξατο παρρησιάζεσθαι ἐν τῇ συναγωγῇ. Ἀκούσαντες δὲ αὐτοῦ Ἀκύλας καὶ Πρίσκιλλα προσελάβοντο αὐτὸν, καὶ ἀκριβέστερον αὐτῷ ἐξέθεντο τὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ ὁδόν. ²⁷ Βουλομένου δὲ αὐτοῦ διελθεῖν εἰς τὴν Ἀχαΐαν, προτρεψάμενοι οἱ ἀδελφοὶ ἔγραψαν τοῖς μαθηταῖς ἀποδέξασθαι αὐτόν ὃς παραγενόμενος συνεβάλετο πολὺ τοῖς πεπιστευκόσι διὰ τῆς χάριτος. ²⁸ εὐτόνως γὰρ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις διακατηλέγχето δημοσίᾳ, ἐπιδεικνὺς διὰ τῶν γραφῶν εἶναι τὸν Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν.

s 1 Cor. 3. 6.

a ch. 18. 24.
1 Cor. 1. 12.
b John 7. 39.
ch. 8. 16.
& 10. 44.

XIX. ¹ Ἐγένετο δὲ ἐν τῷ τὸν Ἀπολλῶ εἶναι ἐν Κορίνθῳ, Παῦλον διελθόντα τὰ ἀνωτερικὰ μέρη, ἐλθεῖν εἰς Ἐφεσον καὶ εὐρών τινας μαθητὰς ² εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, Εἰ Πνεῦμα ἅγιον ἐλάβετε πιστεύσαντες; οἱ δὲ πρὸς αὐτόν, Ἀλλ' οὐδὲ εἰ Πνεῦμα ἅγιον ἔστιν ἠκούσαμεν. ³ Εἰπέ τε, Εἰς τί οὖν ἐβαπτίσθητε; οἱ δὲ of them. (Acts xxi. 26.) The suggestion of St. James, and St. Paul's ready compliance, are explained by what he had done before at Cenchreæ.

On the whole, then, by not polling his hair till he came to Cenchreæ, and by polling it there "because he had a vow," he exemplified the great principle of his Apostolic life—Charity.

19. κατήντησε] A, B, E have κατήντησαν, which has been received by Lachm., Tisch., and Alford.

21. δεῖ με πάντως—Ἱεροσόλυμα] I must by all means keep the next feast at Jerusalem. For the reason see on v. 18. The next feast was the feast of Pentecost. See Anger, p. 61; Wieseler, p. 48; Alford, p. 190; and the Chronological Synopsis prefixed to this Volume.

22. ἀναβὰς] having gone up to Jerusalem.

23. τὴν Γαλατικὴν] the region of Galatia. See xvi. 6; and the Introduction to the Epistle to the Galatians, p. 40, as to the importance of this passage in settling the date of that Epistle.

24. Ἀπολλῶς] Apollōs. A name contracted from Ἀπολλώνιος. (See above on xv. 22.) He is spoken of in connexion with the Church of Corinth, Acts xix. 1. 1 Cor. i. 12; iii. 4—6. 22; iv. 6; and Ephesus, xvi. 12; and Crete, Tit. iii. 13.

—Ἀλεξανδρεὺς] of Alexandria in Egypt; founded by Alexander the Great B.C. 332, and the royal seat of the dynasty of the Ptolemies, who, as well as Alexander, were instruments in God's hands for the preparation of the way for the Gospel, especially by the diffusion of the Greek Tongue, and by the formation of the Septuagint Version of the Old Testament, and by its commerce. See the Introduction to this Volume, pp. 4—10.

—λόγιος] Distinguished for erudition in history and law, especially that of his own country, and eloquence. The sense of the word is well expressed by the phrase of Horace, "qui sapere et fari possit quæ sentiat" (1 Ep. iv. 9); it signifies a learned and eloquent man. Hesychius: λόγιος, ὁ τῆς ἱστορίας ἐμπειρος, παιδευμένος. Mæris: λογίους τοὺς πολιύτορας, Ἀττικῶς καὶ Ἠρῶδοτος' λογίους τοὺς διαλεκτικούς, Ἕλληνας. Phrynichus, p. 84: λόγιος, ὡς οἱ πολλοὶ λέγουσιν ἐπὶ τοῦ δεινοῦ εἰπεῖν καὶ ἰληθῆναι, οὐ τιθέασιν οἱ ἀρχαῖοι, ἀλλ' ἐπὶ τοῦ τὰ ἐκάστω ἔθνει ἐπιχώρια ἐξηγουμένου ἐμπειρος. So Josephus, Ant. xix. 5. 2, Ἰουδαίων λογιστάται, καὶ τῶν πατρίων ἐξηγηταὶ νόμων. Thom. Mag.: λογίους τοὺς πολυτίτορας οἱ ἀρχαῖοι Ἀττικίζοντες, ὡς καὶ Ἠρῶδοτος' λογίους δὲ τοὺς διαλεκτικούς οἱ ὕστερον. Cp. Wetst. p. 578.

25. κατηχημένους] having been catechized. See Luke i. 4. Rom. ii. 18.

—Ἰησοῦ] Elz. Κυρίου, but A, B, D, E have Ἰησοῦ, which has been received by Lachm., Tisch., Alf.

To a certain extent he taught rightly; i. e. that Christ was come, and that Jesus is the Christ, the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world (John i. 29. 36). It is probable also, that he was acquainted with the facts of the Crucifixion, Resurrection, and Ascension; but the only Baptism that he knew was that of John; i. e. he had not been baptized into Christ. Not (as some suppose) that the baptism of John was all that he knew; for he was a Christian Catechumen, κατηχημένος τὴν ὁδὸν τοῦ Κυρίου, v. 25, and Aquila and Priscilla took him and expounded to him more exactly than he had known it hitherto, the way of God; i. e. the divine plan of salvation by Baptism into Christ; and he was baptized with the Baptism of Christ, as may be concluded from the case of the twelve men in the next chapter, xix. 3—5.

26. παρρησιάζεσθαι] to speak boldly. This example affords no sanction (as has been supposed) for preaching the Gospel without a due call or mission. Any one might expound in the Synagogue, if invited to do so; and no one could do so without invitation. And as to his teaching in the first instance out of the synagogue, there is no evidence to show that it was approved, but rather the contrary; nor is it said that afterwards he had no call or mission. The contrary is implied in 1 Cor. iii. 5. 22.

—Ἀκύλας καὶ Πρίσκιλλα] Aquila and Priscilla. So Elz.; but A, B, E put Priscilla first. So Lachm., Tisch., Alf. Cp. v. 18.

27. συνεβάλετο—διὰ τῆς χάριτος] he contributed much to the spiritual edification of the faithful by the grace which he received in the Church through faith, by baptism and laying on of hands.

CH. XIX. 1. ἐν τῷ τ. Ἀπολλῶ ε. ἐν Κορίνθῳ] while Apollōs was at Corinth. Compare St. Paul's references to Apollōs in his first Epistle to the Corinthians (i. 12; iii. 6); and see Paley, H. P. p. 36.

—τὰ ἀνωτερικὰ μέρη] the upper or inland parts. See xviii. 22, 23.

2. πιστεύσαντες] on your reception into the Church by a public profession of faith. See on xiii. 48.

—εἰ Πνεῦμα ἅγιον ἔστι] St. Paul had asked them, Whether they received the Holy Ghost, when they made a profession of Faith? They reply, that when they made their profession they did not even hear whether the Holy Ghost is—i. e. is to be had.

The phrase is similar to John vii. 39, οὐπω γὰρ ἦν Πνεῦμα ἅγιον, i. e. the Holy Ghost was not as yet manifested in the Church, for Jesus was not yet glorified.

The verb ἔστιν is emphatic here, and therefore so accented; it signifies in-dwelling and energetic operation as the vital principle of the Church.

When these persons were received into the Church, they did εἶπον, Εἰς τὸ Ἰωάννου βάπτισμα. ⁴ ^c Εἶπε δὲ Παῦλος, Ἰωάννης μὲν ἐβάπτισε βάπτισμα μετανοίας, τῷ λαῷ λέγων εἰς τὸν ἐρχόμενον μετ' αὐτὸν ἵνα πιστεύσωσι, τουτέστιν εἰς τὸν Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν. ⁵ Ἀκούσαντες δὲ ἐβαπτίσθησαν εἰς τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ. ⁶ ^d καὶ ἐπιθέντος αὐτοῖς τοῦ Παύλου τὰς χεῖρας, ἦλθε τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον ἐπ' αὐτοὺς, ἐλάλουν τε γλώσσαις καὶ προεφήτεον. ⁷ Ἦσαν δὲ οἱ πάντες ἄνδρες ὥσεί δώδεκα.

⁸ Εἰσελθὼν δὲ εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν ἐπαρρήσιαζέτο, ἐπὶ μῆνας τρεῖς ^e διαλεγόμενος καὶ ^f πείθων τὰ περὶ τῆς βασιλείας τοῦ Θεοῦ. ⁹ ^g Ὡς δέ τινες ἐσκλη-
^h ρύνοντο καὶ ἠπείθουν, κακολογούντες τὴν ὁδὸν ἐνώπιον τοῦ πλήθους, ἀποστάς ἀπ' αὐτῶν ἀφόρισε τοὺς μαθητὰς, καθ' ἡμέραν διαλεγόμενος ἐν τῇ σχολῇ Τυράννου τινός.

¹⁰ ^h Τοῦτο δὲ ἐγένετο ἐπὶ ἔτη δύο· ὥστε πάντας τοὺς κατοικοῦντας τὴν Ἀσίαν ἀκοῦσαι τὸν λόγον τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰουδαίους τε καὶ Ἑλλήνας.

¹¹ ⁱ Δυνάμεις τε οὐ τὰς τυχούσας ὁ Θεὸς ἐποίει διὰ τῶν χειρῶν Παύλου·
¹² ^j ὥστε καὶ ἐπὶ τοὺς ἀσθενοῦντας ἐπιφέρεσθαι ἀπὸ τοῦ χρωτὸς αὐτοῦ σουδάρια ἢ σιμικίνθια, καὶ ἀπαλλάσσεσθαι ἀπ' αὐτῶν τὰς νόσους, τὰ τε πνεύματα τὰ πονηρὰ ἐκπορεύεσθαι.

not hear whether the prophecy which John the Baptist himself had delivered, that Jesus would baptize with the Holy Ghost and fire (Matt. iii. 11. Luke iii. 16), had yet been fulfilled by the outpouring of the Holy Ghost on those who had been baptized.

If these disciples were Jews, as they seem to have been, because they were baptized with the baptism of John, these words do not mean, that they never heard of the Spirit of God, but that they had not heard of the giving of it which the Apostle mentioned, as we read elsewhere that the Holy Ghost was not yet (John vii. 39); not denying the existence, but the plentiful effusion, of it. Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. viii. p. 574.

4. Ἰωάννης μὲν] John indeed. On the difference between John's baptism and Christ's—in that the latter was in the Name of the Blessed Trinity, and conferred grace—the former not—see on Matt. iii. 1—11, and John iv. 1.—Χριστὸν is omitted here by A, B, E.

6. καὶ ἐπιθέντος κ.τ.λ.] On this act of laying on of hands, see above on viii. 14—18, and on x. 47.

St. Paul is seen here, at Ephesus, exercising the same Apostolic functions which the “very chiefest Apostles,” Peter and John, are described in this book as exercising at Samaria (see viii. 17).

Thus, he who was not one of the original Twelve, and who had not seen Christ upon earth, and had been a persecutor of the Church—and was therefore disparaged by some in comparison with them—is placed by divine authority on a par with them in the eye of the Church. Thus also it is proved, that the collation of the gift of the Holy Ghost, by the laying of hands on baptized persons, was not restricted to those who were appointed to the Apostolic office by Christ Himself when upon earth. And the gift of the Holy Ghost by the hands of St. Paul, is, as it were, a link of connexion between the first administration of Confirmation by the original members of the Apostolic College, Peter and John, at Samaria, and the subsequent exercise of the same authority by persons afterward appointed, such as Timothy and Titus, to be successors of the Apostles, and to discharge the ordinary functions of the Apostolic office,—particularly in the laying on of hands and prayer,—for the perpetual edification of the Christian Church. See Heb. vi. 2.

—ἐλάλουν γλώσσαις] they were speaking with tongues, i. e. with the different languages, which the Spirit spake by their mouths. (Theophyl.)

9. τὴν ὁδὸν] the way. See ix. 2; xix. 23. See here also a fulfilment of Christ's saying (Matt. xi. 10).

—καθ' ἡμέραν—τινός] he could not dispute daily in the Synagogues, for they were open only thrice a week, and the Jews blasphemed “that Way.” Therefore, as he had done at Corinth (xviii. 7), he collected the disciples in another place; either a private rabbinical seminary (Hammond) or a school of grammar and rhetoric—where they could meet daily. So the Church grew by persecution, and the word was preached to both Jews and Greeks.

10. τὴν Ἀσίαν] Asia. See ii. 9. 1 Cor. xvi. 8, 9, 11, 12.

11. οὐ τὰς τυχούσας] extraordinary. See Acts xxviii. 2.

On the phrase οὐχ ὁ τυχών = not obvious, but singular, see Kain, and others, who quote Philo de Opif. M. p. 31, C, οὐκ ἐκ τοῦ τυχόντος μέρους γῆς, non ex quavis terra glebā. Athen. lib. 9, p. 402, C, οὐ τὴν τυχοῦσαν ἡδονήν, voluptatem exquisitam. Longin. cap. 9, § 9, Moses, Judæorum legislator dicitur οὐχ ὁ τυχών ἀνὴρ, non vulgaris intelligentie homo.

Here is another proof of the divine sanction, given to St. Paul's office and mission, and putting him on a level with St. Peter and the other Apostles. Cp. Acts v. 15.

12. ἐπιφέρεσθαι] A, B, E, and some cursives have ἀποφέρεσθαι, which has been received by some Editors.

—σουδάρια] napkins. See Luke xix. 20.

—σιμικίνθια] ‘semi-cinctia.’ Some translate this word by handkerchiefs; so Ammonius and Theophylact. See Wetsl. Others render it by aprons. Aprons used by workmen, perhaps by St. Paul in his σκηνοπηγία. See Martial xiv. 153, who distinguishes them from tunics thus: “Det tunicam dives (locuples?); ego te præcingere possum.” Rendered ζωνάρια by Suidas.

Some have censured the acts of these persons resorting to St. Paul, as well as to St. Peter (Acts v. 15), as superstitious. But it is to be remembered that in both cases the application was in behalf of sick people, who could not come in person to the Apostles. The fact is related without censure by the Holy Ghost; and the Apostles do not seem to have blamed them. It is also here added that “they were healed,” and that “evil spirits were thus ejected.” This testimony for these miraculous cures is more remarkable as coming from Luke the physician.

The healing power was not in the shadow of St. Peter, or in the handkerchiefs of St. Paul; but in Christ responding to the touch of faith, and operating by the shadow or vestments of His Apostles on earth, as He had done when present in His human person by the fringes of His garment, touched by the hand of faith. See Matt. ix. 20, 21; xiv. 36. Mark v. 27. Luke viii. 44.

Was there any superstition in this? Was there any credulity in supposing, that at a time when, for wise reasons, Christ wrought extraordinary miracles by His Apostles (and these miracles are called here expressly extraordinary, οὐχ αἱ τυχοῦσαι, that we may not look for them now), He could and would work by their shadow or their handkerchiefs on those poor helpless folk, who could not come to their hands, and who had faith in His Divine Power acting by them?

If so, then there would also be credulity in supposing that the Divine Physician of body and soul can give health by medicines to the one, and grace by Sacraments to the other.

Perhaps the working of Christ by means of the shadow of Peter and of the handkerchiefs of St. Paul, was designed to rebuke the scepticism of those who will not believe that Grace is given by means of Water, and of Bread and Wine, dispensed by Christ's Ministers; and in order to comfort and strengthen the hearts of those who believe that it may there be apprehended by the touch of Faith.

Thus Christ's power is magnified in the working of His grace; and the devout soul is assured of the reality of His operation on itself, by means of such instruments, as, in human calculation, seem inadequate for the merciful purposes, which they are designed by Him to perform.

k Mark 9. 38.
Luke 9. 49.

13 ^k Ἐπεχείρησαν δὲ τινες ἀπὸ τῶν περιερχομένων Ἰουδαίων ἑξορκιστῶν ὀνομάζειν ἐπὶ τοὺς ἔχοντας τὰ πνεύματα τὰ πονηρὰ τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ, λέγοντες, Ὁρκίζω ὑμᾶς τὸν Ἰησοῦν ὃν ὁ Παῦλος κηρύσσει. 14 ^h Ἦσαν δὲ τινες υἱοὶ Σκευᾶ Ἰουδαίου ἀρχιερέως ἐπτα οἱ τοῦτο ποιοῦντες. 15 Ἀποκριθὲν δὲ τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ πονηρὸν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Τὸν Ἰησοῦν γινώσκω, καὶ τὸν Παῦλον ἐπίσταμαι ὑμεῖς δὲ τίνες ἐστέ; 16 Καὶ ¹ ἐφαλλόμενος ἐπ' αὐτοὺς ὁ ἄνθρωπος, ἐν ᾧ ἦν τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ πονηρὸν, κατακυριεύσας αὐτῶν ἴσχυσε κατ' αὐτῶν, ὥστε γυμνοὺς καὶ τετραυματισμένους ἐκφυγεῖν ἐκ τοῦ οἴκου ἐκείνου.

l Luke 8. 29.

m Luke 1. 65.
ch. 7. 16.
& 2. 43.
n ch. 2. 43.
& 5. 5, 11.
Luke 1. 65.
o Matt. 8. 6.
Rom. 10. 10.

17 ^m Τοῦτο δὲ ἐγένετο γνωστὸν πᾶσιν Ἰουδαίοις τε καὶ Ἕλλησι, τοῖς κατοικοῦσι τὴν Ἐφεσον· καὶ ⁿ ἐπέπεσε φόβος ἐπὶ πάντας αὐτοὺς, καὶ ἐμεγαλύνετο τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ. 18 ^o Πολλοὶ τε τῶν πεπιστευκότων ἤρχοντο ἑξομολογούμενοι καὶ ἀναγγέλλοντες τὰς πράξεις αὐτῶν. 19 Ἰκανοὶ δὲ τῶν τὰ περίεργα πραξάντων, συνενέγκαντες τὰς βίβλους, κατέκαιον ἐνώπιον πάντων· καὶ συνειψήφισαν τὰς τιμὰς αὐτῶν, καὶ εὑρον ἀργυρίου μυριάδας πέντε. 20 ^p Οὕτω κατὰ κράτος ὁ λόγος τοῦ Κυρίου ἡῤῥαξε καὶ ἴσχυεν.

p Isa. 55. 11.
ch. 6. 7.
& 12. 24.
q ch. 18. 21.
Rom. 15. 23—28.
Gal. 2. 1.

21 ^q Ὡς δὲ ἐπληρώθη ταῦτα, ἔθετο ὁ Παῦλος ἐν τῷ πνεύματι, διελθὼν τὴν

In order to prepare us for this blessed assurance, our Lord had said, that after His Ascension greater works would be done by those who believed in Him than He Himself had wrought (John xiv. 12). That is, when He was glorified in heaven, and had received the gift of the Holy Ghost to bestow upon men, He would work by their instrumentality greater miracles than He had wrought in person on earth; and thus prove that He was glorified, and that by virtue of the Holy Ghost, given after His Ascension to the Church, He, though not corporeally present, works greater things in His Church than He had wrought when visible among men. See note on John xiv. 12.

Here, then, we see a fulfilment of Christ's prophecy and promise, a proof of His Ascension, and an assurance of His perpetual presence and operation in the Church.

It may also be remarked, that by the shadow of Peter passing by, Christ Himself works, and by handkerchiefs taken from the body of Paul. Is it not, therefore, suggested, that the bodies of the saints of God, which are Temples of the Holy Ghost (1 Cor. iii. 16; vi. 19), are regarded by Christ as chosen vessels for the indwelling of His Grace; and that thus a lesson of reverence for the body is inculcated (1 Thess. iv. 4)? and motives to holiness and purity are supplied, and a hope of greater glory and blessedness reserved for it, when it shall be made "like unto Christ's glorious body, according to the mighty working whereby He is able to subdue all things unto Himself;" (Phil. iii. 21.)

We may remark, also, that there was a special reason for the operation of these miracles at Ephesus;

The population of that city was then subject to the influence of Satan, exercised upon them by means of magical arts (Ἐφέσια γράμματα), witchcraft and sorcery, practised both by Gentiles and Jews. Almighty God showed in Egypt, by the rod of Moses, that His power is greater than that of Satan working by Magicians; He proved by the words of Daniel at Babylon, that He is more excellent in might and wisdom than the Evil Spirit who operated by the Chaldean Astrologers; so now at Ephesus, He shows by the handkerchiefs of Paul that the Gospel is opposed to all the practices of magic and sorcery by which Satan deceived the Gentile World; and is able, even by the feeblest instruments, and beggarly elements, to destroy the works of the Devil.

Hence in v. 15 we read the confession of the Evil Spirit, that he owned the power of Jesus; and in vv. 18, 19 we see the surrender and conflagration of the Books of Magic as a consequence of the manifestation of the power "of the Lord Jesus" (v. 17) by these miracles of Paul.

Since also Christ, glorified in heaven, could and did work these miracles of healing, and of casting out Evil Spirits, by means of the shadow of the body of St. Peter, and of handkerchiefs and aprons from the body of St. Paul, the faithful Christian may defy the power of the Evil one acting upon his body by physical disease, or on his mind by spiritual agency.

13. ὀρκίζω] So A, B, D, E.—Elz. ὀρκίζομεν.

14. ἀρχιερέως] chief-priest, head of one of the twenty-four courses of Priests. See Matt. ii. 4; xvi. 21; xx. 18.

15. τὸν Ἰησοῦν γινώσκω] See Mark i. 24, 25. Acts xvi. 17. — γινώσκω—ἐπίσταμαι] The Vulg. has here "Jesum novi et Paulum scio." A distinction is made between γινώσκω and ἐπίσταμαι. The former signifies knowledge producing some affection and emotion of mind. I recognize and own His power. Cp. James ii. 19.

But ἐπίσταμαι—which is of rarer occurrence, being only once used in the Gospels (Mark xiv. 68)—expresses a knowledge of a lower degree, such as acquaintance with a fact, without any consequent reflection upon it; and sometimes only an instinct. Cp. Jude 10, ὅσα οὐκ οἶδασι βλασφημοῦσιν, ὅσα δὲ φυσικῶς ὡς τὰ ἄλογα ζῶα ἐπίστανται, ἐν τοιούτοις φθεῖρονται.

— ὑμεῖς δὲ τίνες] but ye—who are ye? A remarkable instance of the power of Christ's Name. Even when uttered by an unbelieving Jew, it extorted a confession of the truth from the Evil Spirit; and it recoiled with terrible force against those who dared to use it without faith in Christ, and without a due mission from Him—Who are ye? A solemn warning to those who venture to minister the Word and Sacraments of Christ without inward faith and external mission from Him. Cp. xiii. 1, 2.

16. κατακυριεύσας αὐτῶν] having mastered them. A, B, D, and several cursive MSS. have ἀμφοτέρων, both, here for αὐτῶν, and so Vulg.

— γυμνοὺς] bare, i. e. as far as their ἱμάτια or outer garments were concerned, which were torn off from them by the fury of those who were possessed. On this use of γυμνός, see Mark xiv. 52. John xxi. 7.

18. ἑξομολογούμενοι] As in Matt. iii. 6. Mark i. 5, they were baptized in the river Jordan confessing their sins; οἱ πεπιστευκότες are they who had been convinced by Paul's preaching, especially of the doctrine of the remission of sins through faith in Christ.

19. τῶν τὰ περίεργα πραξάντων] of those that practised curious arts. Ephesus was famous for its curious arts, such as Magic and Astrology, and, like other Heathen cities, especially Rome, was at that time the resort of diviners, genethliaci, Mathematici, Chaldaei (S. Jerome, præf. Epist. ad Ephes.), whence magical figures, letters, symbols, and charms, were called Ἐφέσια γράμματα.

See the authorities in Wetstein and Grotius here.

The famous γόης, Apollonius of Tyana, had a school at Ephesus in the reign of Nero, and was there honoured with a statue (Philostr. v. Apollon. libb. iv. & v. See A Lapidæ and Biscoe, pp. 290—293. Cp. Howson, ii. p. 16). Probably St. Paul refers to the γόητες of Ephesus in 2 Tim. iii. 13.

This incident is more important, because there have not been wanting some who have ascribed the Miracles of the Apostles, and even of Christ Himself, to "curious arts," such as Animal Magnetism, Natural Magic, &c. But Satan does not cast out Satan; and (as Didymus observes) wherever the Gospel grew, πᾶσα γοητεία κατελύετο.

— τὰς βίβλους] the books. "Vana religio tollit malos libros," says Bengel, who observes, that as if in recompense for this sacrifice of bad Books, Ephesus became afterwards rich in good Books. It received an Epistle from St. Paul, and the Gospel and Apocalypse from St. John. They had τὰ ἱερὰ γράμματα instead of τὰ Ἐφέσια γράμματα. It received also an Epistle from S. Ignatius. There were ample amends for its lost books on "Curious Arts."

— ἀργυρίου] silver; drachmas, about 8½*d.* each in value.

Μακεδονίαν καὶ Ἀχαΐαν, πορεύεσθαι εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, εἰπών, Ὅτι μετὰ τὸ γενέσθαι με ἐκεῖ, δεῖ με καὶ Ῥώμην ἰδεῖν.

²² ῥ Αποστείλας δὲ εἰς τὴν Μακεδονίαν δύο τῶν διακονούντων αὐτῷ, Τιμόθεον ^{r ch. 13. 5.} καὶ Ἐραστον, αὐτὸς ἐπέσχε χρόνον εἰς τὴν Ἀσίαν. ^{Rom. 16. 23.} ^{2 Tim. 4. 20.}

²³ ῥ Εγένετο δὲ κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν ἐκείνον τάραχος οὐκ ὀλίγος περὶ τῆς ὁδοῦ. ^{s 2 Cor. 1. 8.} ^{ch. 9. 2.}

²⁴ ῥ Δημήτριος γάρ τις ὀνόματι, ἀργυροκόπος, ποιῶν ναοὺς ἀργυροῦς Ἀρτέμιδος, παρείχετο τοῖς τεχνίταις ἐργασίαν οὐκ ὀλίγην. ²⁵ οὓς συναθροίσας, καὶ τοὺς περὶ τὰ τοιαῦτα ἐργάτας, εἶπεν, Ἄνδρες, ἐπίστασθε ὅτι ἐκ ταύτης τῆς ἐργασίας ἡ εὐπορία ἡμῶν ἐστὶν. ²⁶ καὶ θεωρεῖτε καὶ ἀκούετε ὅτι οὐ μόνον Ἐφέσου, ἀλλὰ σχεδὸν πάσης τῆς Ἀσίας ὁ Παῦλος οὗτος πείσας μετέστησεν ἱκανὸν ὄχλον, λέγων ὅτι οὐκ εἰσὶ θεοὶ οἱ διὰ χειρῶν γινόμενοι. ²⁷ Οὐ μόνον δὲ τοῦτο κινδυνεύει ἡμῶν τὸ μέρος εἰς ἀπελεγμὸν ἔλθειν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ τῆς μεγάλης θεᾶς Ἀρτέμιδος ἱερὸν εἰς οὐδὲν λογισθῆναι, μέλλειν δὲ καὶ καθαιρεῖσθαι τὴν μεγαλειότητα αὐτῆς, ἣν ὅλη ἡ Ἀσία καὶ ἡ οἰκουμένη σέβεται.

²⁸ Ἀκούσαντες δὲ, καὶ γενόμενοι πλήρεις θυμοῦ, ἔκραζον λέγοντες, Μεγάλη ἡ Ἀρτεμις Ἐφεσίων. ²⁹ καὶ ἐπλήσθη ἡ πόλις ὅλη τῆς συγχύσεως ὥρμησάν τε ὁμοθυμαδὸν εἰς τὸ θέατρον, συναρπάσαντες Γαῖον καὶ Ἀρίσταρχον Μακεδόνας, συνεκδήμους Παύλου. ³⁰ Παύλου δὲ βουλομένου εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὸν δῆμον, οὐκ εἶων αὐτὸν οἱ μαθηταί. ³¹ Τινὲς δὲ καὶ τῶν Ἀσιαρχῶν, ὄντες αὐτῷ φίλοι, ^{21.} διελθὼν τ. Μακεδονίαν] having passed through Macedonia and Achaia. See xx. 1, 2.

— δεῖ με καὶ Ῥώμην ἰδεῖν] I must also see Rome. Cp. Paul's declarations in the Epistle to the Romans (i. 13; xv. 23), of his desire and intention to visit them. See also on Acts xxiii. 11; xxv. 21, and Paley, Hor. Paul. p. 19.

^{22.} Τιμόθεον] Timothy, sent by St. Paul from Ephesus to Corinth by way of Macedonia a little before the writing of his first Epistle to the Corinthians. See 1 Cor. iv. 7; xvi. 10.

He had returned to St. Paul when in Macedonia (2 Cor. i. 1), and is associated with him in writing the second Epistle to the Corinthians, and was with him at Corinth in his visit to that city soon after the second Epistle was written (see below, xx. 5, and also Rom. xvi. 21), and probably was with him at Jerusalem, and also in his first imprisonment at Rome. Heb. xiii. 23.

— Ἐραστον] Erastus, being a financier (οἰκονόμος τ. πόλεως, of Corinth, Rom. xvi. 23; xv. 25, and notes), was a fit person to be employed by St. Paul in the collection of alms to be gathered in Achaia and Macedonia, for the poor saints of Jerusalem. He had rejoined St. Paul at Corinth when the Apostle wrote his Epistle to the Romans, xvi. 23.

— ἐπέσχε εἰς] implying an adhesion to his work in Asia.

^{24.} Δημήτριος—ἀργυροκόπος—ναοὺς ἀργυροῦς] Demetrius, a silversmith, making silver shrines of Artemis—Diana. The Gospel of Christ, in its various conflicts with the Evil Spirit in the various forms he had assumed in the heathen world, had often to contend with worldly traffic and the love of gain. See the case of the Pythoness at Philippi (Acts xvi. 16—19), that of the Magicians, &c. here (vv. 19, 20), and now Demetrius and the members of his guild, or fellow-craftsmen (vv. 24, 25).

The feelings expressed by Demetrius in his speech (vv. 25—28), still obstruct the progress of the Gospel in the World. Cp. Bentley's Sermon on the power of the Spirit of καπηλεία (on 2 Cor. ii. 17) in the corruption of truth. Works, iii. pp. 241—262, and above on xvi. 16—19.

These ναοὶ or shrines of silver were small portable models of the statue and vaos (ediculae portabiles, argenteae) of the Ephesian Artemis, or Diana, like Παλλάδια περιαντύφορα (Athens and Attica, ch. xvi., note), and were carried on journeys and voyages, and placed in private houses for protection. See Mede's Works, i. p. 299. Howson, ii. 89.

Medallions of Ephesus still survive, representing the πρόναος and statue of the Ephesian Artemis. One of the former may be seen in Kitto, p. 398, and of the latter in Akermann, p. 49.

A learned commentator of the Church of Rome (Corn. A. Lapide) says here,—and the traveller who visits Loretto at this day can testify to the truth of what he says,—“eas imagines gestabant, sicut nostri peregrini gestant imagines B. Virginis Lauretanæ, our lady of Loretto, aut domi in larariis et oratoriis eas reponebant.”

— Ἀρτέμιδος] The Artemis of Ephesus was not like the Diana of Greece and Rome, figured as a fair archer and huntress, but resembled rather an Indian Deity. See Jerome, præf. Epist. ad Ephes., “Scribebat Paulus ad Ephesios Dianam colentes non hanc venatricem, quæ arcum tenet atque succincta est, sed illam multimammiam, quam Græci πολύμαστον vocant.” Cp. Mr. Long's article in Dr. Smith's Dict. of Ancient Geography, v. ‘Ephesus,’ p. 837.

— ἐργασίαν] gain. See xvi. 16.

^{27.} τοῦτο τὸ μέρος] this branch or department. A polite euphemism for ‘idol-manufactory.’ Cp. Isa. v. 20.

— ἀπελεγμὸν] contempt; from ἀπελέγχεσθαι, exploidi. Cp. Symmach. Ps. cxviii. 118, ἀπῆλεγξας πάντας, where LXX have ἐξουδένωσας.

— οἰκουμένη] the world. “Diana Ephesia, cujus notum unicum multiformi specie ritu vario nomine multijugo totus veneratur orbis.” Apuleius (lib. ii.). “Templum Dianæ Ephesiæ” is called “Orbis terrarum miraculum” by Plin. N. H. xxxvi. 14, and it is described as “factum à totâ Asiâ;” and therefore in contending against idolatry at Ephesus, the Apostle was contending against the religious superstitions of the Gentile World. Its history is given by Howson, ii. 85.

^{29.} τὸ θέατρον] the theatre; a place often used by the Greeks and Asiatics not only for dramatic exhibitions, but also for popular assemblies. See Diod. Sic. xvi. 84. Val. Max. ii. 2, “Legati in theatrum, ut est consuetudo Græciæ, introducti.” Justin, xxii. 2.

Even at Athens the Pnyx was deserted for it; probably because the Theatre could be protected from rain and sun, which the Pnyx could not. Cp. above, xii. 21, Herod's Oration, which was delivered in a Theatre. “Joseph. B. J. vii. 3. 3, τοῦ δήμου τῶν Ἀντιοχείων ἐκκλησιάζοντος εἰς τὸ θέατρον, τὸν τε πατέρα τὸν αὐτοῦ καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους ἐνεδείκνυτο κατηγορῶν.” Corn. Nep. Vit. Timol. 4, “veniebat autem in theatrum (Syacusis) cum ibi concilium populi haberetur.” Tacit. Hist. ii. 80, 6, de Vespasiano: “tum Antiochensium theatrum ingressus, ubi illis consultare mos est.” Juvenal (x. 128) describes Demosthenes as “pleni moderantem fræna theatri.” Weist. p. 585.

The remains of the Theatre at Ephesus, which was one of the largest in the world, were seen by Dr. Chandler, and the site is still distinguishable. Cp. Fellowes, Asia Minor, p. 274.

— Γαῖον] Caius. It would appear that four different persons, bearing this common name, are mentioned in the New Testament.

Caius of Macedonia, here; Caius of Derbe (xx. 4); Caius of Corinth, whom Paul baptized, and who is called his ξένος (1 Cor. i. 14. Rom. xvi. 23); Caius, the beloved, to whom St. John addresses his third Epistle.

— Ἀρίσταρχον] Aristarchus. See Acts xx. 4; xxvii. 2, afterwards imprisoned with St. Paul, Col. iv. 10. Cp. Philem. 24.

— συνεκδήμους] companions in travel. συνοδοιπόρους, Hesych. ^{31.} Ἀσιαρχῶν] Asiarchs; the Presidents of the heathen games chosen from the principal citizens of Asia, the “Commune Asiæ,” i. e. of the region of which Ephesus was the head. The following is from Kuin,—“Horum munus erat, in honorem deorum et im-

v ch. 12. 17.
 & 13. 16.
 & 21. 40.

πέμψαντες πρὸς αὐτὸν παρεκάλουν μὴ δοῦναι ἑαυτὸν εἰς τὸ θέατρον. ³² *Ἄλλοι μὲν οὖν ἄλλο τι ἔκραζον, ἣν γὰρ ἡ ἐκκλησία συγκεχυμένη, καὶ οἱ πλείους οὐκ ᾔδεισαν τίνος ἕνεκεν συνελθούθεισαν. ³³ *Ἐκ δὲ τοῦ ὄχλου προεβίβασαν Ἀλέξανδρον, προβαλόντων αὐτὸν τῶν Ἰουδαίων· ὁ δὲ Ἀλέξανδρος κατασείσας τὴν χεῖρα ἤθελεν ἀπολογεῖσθαι τῷ δήμῳ. ³⁴ *Ἐπιγινόντες δὲ ὅτι Ἰουδαῖός ἐστι, φωνὴ ἐγένετο μία ἐκ πάντων ὡς ἐπὶ ὥρας δύο κrazόντων, Μεγάλη ἡ *Ἀρτεμις Ἐφεσίων.

x Prov. 14. 29.
 y ch. 25. 8.

³⁵ Καταστείλας δὲ ὁ γραμματεὺς τὸν ὄχλον φησίν, *Ἄνδρες Ἐφεσίοι, τίς γάρ ἐστιν ἄνθρωπος ὃς οὐ γινώσκει τὴν Ἐφεσίων πόλιν νεωκόρον οὔσαν τῆς μεγάλης Ἀρτέμιδος καὶ τοῦ Διοπετοῦς; ³⁶ *Ἀναντιρρήτων οὖν ὄντων τούτων, δέον ἐστὶν ὑμᾶς κατεσταλμένους ὑπάρχειν, καὶ *μηδὲν προπετὲς πράττειν. ³⁷ *Ἠγάγετε γὰρ τοὺς ἄνδρας τούτους, οὔτε ἱεροσύλους οὔτε βλασφημοῦντας τὴν θεὸν ὑμῶν.

peratoris Romani, quotannis ludos theatrales, suis sumptibus (ut Romæ ædiliū) edere, unde nonnisi opulentiores hanc provinciam subire poterant. Munus Asiarchæ annum erat. Eligebantur hoc modo; initio cuiusque anni, i. e. sub æquinoctium autumnale, singulæ urbes Asiæ concionem habebant, in quâ uni ex suis civibus Ἀσιάρχας honorem deferebant. Tum unaquæque civitas legatum in certam urbem mittebat Asiæ proconsularis primariam, quales erant Ephesus, Smyrna, Sardes, ad τὸ κοινὸν, commune gentis concilium, qui nomen ejus, qui domi electus erat, publicè renuntiaret. Ex his quos singulæ urbes Asiæ Asiarchas nominaverant, synedri nonnisi decem Asiarchas designabant, et ex horum numero Proconsul Romanus summum sacrorum præfectum eligebat. Asiarchæ porro, ut ex monumentis liquet, non semper Ephesi, ut existimantur nonnulli, sed in aliis etiam civitatibus, sedem suam habebant, ubi communia Asiæ sacra habebantur, veluti Smyrna, Cyzici. Eo autem tempore, quo Paulus Ephesi commorabatur, Asiarcha cum collegis ibi sedem habebat, ab eoque ludi editi sunt."

Compare the account of S. Polycarp's martyrdom at Smyrna, c. 12 (in Patres Apostol. ed. Jacobson, and the notes, vol. ii. pp. 614, 615, ed. 2). There an Asiarch Philip, as President of the games, is requested to let loose the lion against Polycarp, but declines to do so. And now the Asiarchs are desirous to save Paul from the violence of the people. Perhaps he alludes to this circumstance, when he says, κατ' ἀνθρώπων ἐν Ἐφέσῳ ἐθρησιόμην (1 Cor. xv. 32), i. e. as far as I myself was concerned, I fought with beasts at Ephesus, but God delivered me. See Chrys. in Caten. here, p. 323.

The mention of the Asiarchs as present here, may perhaps intimate that this uproar took place at the time of the public religious games; when Demetrius could reckon on a more than ordinary manifestation of religious zeal in behalf of the patron goddess of Ephesus.

— ὄντες αὐτῷ φίλοι] being friends to him. A remarkable circumstance. The Apostle of the Gentiles has friends among the Presidents of the religious games in honour of Artemis. He converts an Areopagite at Athens (xvii. 34), baptizes an Ἀρχισυνάγωγος at Corinth (xviii. 8. 17. 1 Cor. i. 14), and has made a favourable impression on some of the Asiarchs at Ephesus; and has friends in Cæsar's household at Rome (Phil. iv. 22),—a proof of his courage and charity, and of the truth of his cause; and of the power with which it penetrated into, and leavened, all classes of society.

An evidence this (as Paley has remarked) of St. Luke's veracity. He says that some of the Asiarchs were friendly to St. Paul. He does not spend any time in accounting for this singular fact. He is at no pains to make it seem probable, but he states it simply and boldly, because it is true.

This incident is also to be noticed as a proof of Providential dispensation, and pre-arrangement for the diffusion of the Gospel by the spread of the Roman arms. Ephesus was under Roman sway. The ancient gods of the nations were now vassals of Rome. Diana had been conquered by Cæsar. Thus the influence of the Pagan Mythology on the minds of the upper classes was impaired, and they were more ready to receive a purer faith. See Bp. Pearson, O. P. ii. 35; and above, Introduction, p. 9.

³³. Ἀλέξανδρον] Alexander, of whom as yet nothing had been said; but perhaps he is the same as the Alexander mentioned by St. Paul in his Epistle to the Bishop of Ephesus (1 Tim. i. 19, 20, where see note, and 2 Tim. iv. 14).

If so, he had apostatized from Christianity. Perhaps from the mention of his trade, χαλκεύς, it may be inferred that he was connected by ἐργασία with the ἀργυροκόποι of v. 24; and thus we have a view suggested to us of the combination of the artificers and workers in metal, and all the large family of Tubal Cain (Gen. iv. 22), who supplied idols to Heathenism, against the pure faith of the Gospel.

³⁵. ὁ γραμματεὺς] the Recorder, the Custos Rotulorum, keeper of the archives of the city.

See the Ephesian Coin in Akermann, p. 55, and below on v. 38.

— νεωκόρον] The word νεωκός = (1) ὁ τὸν νεὸν κορῶν, ἡ σαρῶν. (2) ὁ τὸν νεὸν κοσµῶν, ἡ καλλωπίζων, (3) a marquillier, or warden of a temple. (4) a votary and worshipper of a particular deity, as the patron of the city, &c. This is the meaning of the word here.

St. Luke's report of this speech is happily illustrated by the coins of Ephesus, in which we see representations of Artemis, circumscribed with the words Ἐφεσίων Νεωκόρων. See Akermann, p. 54, and note v. 38.

This practice of Gentile superstition has also found its imitators in Christian times, where particular countries, cities, and individuals, derive a title from a local or personal object of Devotion;

Thus Hungary is described as follows by a Roman-catholic divine: "Regnum hoc Hungariæ, propter vetustissimam constantemque Deiparæ venerationem, Mariani regni epitheton promeruit" (Abbé Jordanszky de Hæresi abjurandâ, 1822, p. 122). Cp. Bishop Bull, Serm. iv., "Such is the worship given to the Blessed Virgin by many, that they deserve to be called Mariani rather than Christiani."

It is remarkable that one of the spring months, corresponding to our May, was sacred to Artemis, at Ephesus, and called Artemision. See the ancient Ephesian inscription (in Boeckh, Corpus, 2454), ἵλον τὸν μῆνα ἀνακείσθαι τῇ θεῇ, ἄγεσθαι δὲ τὰς ἑορτὰς, καὶ τὴν τῶν Ἀρτεμισίων πανήγυριν. And the month of May is now called, in a large part of Christendom, the "Mois de Marie."

— τῆς μεγάλης] the great. Elz. adds θεᾶς, which is not in A, B, D, E. This popular ellipsis is found in the romance of an Ephesian writer of the fifth century, Xenophon Ephesius, 1 (not Xenophon's Ephesiaca, as cited by some), ὁμνύω τὴν πατρίον ἡμῶν θεὸν (see v. 37) τὴν μεγάλην Ἐφεσίων Ἀρτεμιν. This passage (quoted by Rosenm. p. 263) is also of interest as showing the continuance of the worship of Artemis for some centuries after St. Paul's visit.

— τοῦ Διοπετοῦς] that fell from Jupiter. ἀγάλματος, ὅπερ ἔκλυεν ἐκ τοῦ Διὸς διαθήλασθαι (read καθάλασθαι, desiluisse) φόντο. (Ammon.) So the παλαῖον βρέτας of Minerva Polias at Athens, called ἀρχαῖον καὶ διοπετὲς. See Pausan. i. 26, φήμη ἐστὶ πεσεῖν ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ. Cp. Eurip. Iph. Taur. 977, οὐρανοῦ πέσημα.

How great was the triumph achieved and the change afterward wrought by Apostolic preaching in this great heathen and idolatrous City! They who boasted themselves votaries of the Goddess whom Asia and the World worshippeth; they who cried out for two hours "Great is Diana of the Ephesians," and who adored the Image that fell down from Jupiter, the Father of the gods of heathenism, became worshippers of the Father of Lights, and of Jesus Christ, the express Image of His Person, Who came down from heaven for our salvation. And the City of Ephesus, which was the votary of the heathen goddess, was the residence of St. Paul for two years and a half, and the Episcopal See of his son in the faith, Timothy, and changed its name for that of the Christian Apostle, St. John, who wrote his Gospel there, and died and was buried there, and it bears that name to this day, Aio-solúk, so called from him, the ἅγιος θεόλογος, who wrote of the Everlasting Word becoming Flesh and dwelling among us.

³⁷. ἱεροσύλους] (1) spoilers or profaners of temples, (2) sacreligious persons, as here.

³⁸ Εἰ μὲν οὖν Δημήτριος καὶ οἱ σὺν αὐτῷ τεχνῖται ἔχουσι πρὸς τινα λόγον, ἀγόραιοι ἄγονται, καὶ ἀνθύπατοι εἰσὶν ἐγκαλείωσαν ἀλλήλους. ³⁹ Εἰ δέ τι περὶ ἐτέρων ἐπιζητεῖτε, ἐν τῇ ἐννόμῳ ἐκκλησίᾳ ἐπιλυθήσεται. ⁴⁰ Καὶ γὰρ κινδυνεύομεν ἐγκαλεῖσθαι στάσεως περὶ τῆς σήμερον, μηδενὸς αἰτίου ὑπάρχοντος περὶ οὗ δινησόμεθα ἀποδοῦναι λόγον τῆς συστροφῆς ταύτης.

⁴¹ Καὶ ταῦτα εἰπὼν ἀπέλυσε τὴν ἐκκλησίαν.

XX. ¹ Μετὰ δὲ τὸ παύσασθαι τὸν θόρυβον, προσκαλεσάμενος ὁ Παῦλος τοὺς μαθητὰς, καὶ ἀσπασάμενος, ἐξῆλθε ^b πορευθῆναι εἰς τὴν Μακεδονίαν.

² Διελθὼν δὲ τὰ μέρη ἐκεῖνα, καὶ ^c παρακαλέσας αὐτοὺς λόγῳ πολλῷ, ἦλθεν εἰς τὴν Ἑλλάδα. ³ ^d ποιήσας τε μῆνας τρεῖς, γενομένης αὐτῷ ἐπιβουλῆς ὑπὸ τῶν Ἰουδαίων μέλλοντι ἀνάγεσθαι εἰς τὴν Συρίαν, ἐγένετο γνώμη τοῦ ὑποστρέφειν διὰ Μακεδονίας.

⁴ ^e Συνείπετο δὲ αὐτῷ ἄχρι τῆς Ἀσίας Σώπατρος Πύρρου Βεροιαῖος, Θεσσαλονικέων δὲ Ἀρίσταρχος καὶ Σεκοῦνδος, καὶ Γάϊος Δερβαῖος, καὶ Τιμόθεος, Ἀσιανοὶ δὲ Τύχικος καὶ Τρόφιμος. ⁵ οὗτοι προελθόντες ἔμενον ἡμᾶς ἐν Τρωάδι.

⁶ ^f ἡμεῖς δὲ ἐξεπλεύσαμεν μετὰ τὰς ἡμέρας τῶν ἀζύμων ἀπὸ Φιλίππων, καὶ

a ch. 19, 29—40.

1 Tim. 1. 3.

b 1 Cor. 16. 5.

c 1 Thess. 2. 3, 11.

d ch. 9. 23.

& 23. 12.

e ch. 16. 1.

& 19. 29.

& 21. 29

& 27. 2.

Col. 4. 7, 10.

1 Cor. 1. 14.

Eph. 6. 21.

2 Tim. 4. 12, 20.

Tit. 3. 12.

f ch. 16. 8.

2 Cor. 2. 12.

— θεόν] So A, B, D, E*, and others; and this is confirmed by Xenophon, Ephes. i. See v. 35.—Elz. θεάν.

³⁸ ἀγόραιοι ἄγονται] sc. ἡμέραι, court-days. Bos Ellips. v. ἡμέρα: ἀγόραιοι μὲν ἐστὶν ἡ ἡμέρα, ἀγοραῖος δὲ ὁ Ἑρμῆς ὁ ἐπὶ τῆς ἀγορᾶς. (Ammon. p. 4. Winer, § 6, p. 51.)

Cp. Luke xxiv. 21, τρίτην ταύτην ἡμέραν ἔγει σήμερον. Assize-days, or court-days, come round, and Proconsuls attend, before whom the cause may be tried. It does not follow from these words that it was then the time of the sessions or assizes.

The expression is a general one, and therefore the plural ἀνθύπατοι (Proconsuls) is used: “Uno tempore, unus erat Proconsul, sed Scriba dicit in plurali, de eo quod nunquam non esse soleat.” (Bengel.) — ἀνθύπατοι] The following ancient Inscription, of the age of Trajan, from an aqueduct at Ephesus (in Boeckh's Corpus, No. 2966, vol. ii. p. 606, and quoted by Houson, ii. 91), happily illustrates the accuracy of St. Luke's language in speaking of Ephesus, ἡ φιλοσέβαστος Ἐφεσίαν βουλῇ, καὶ ὁ ΝΕΩΚΟΡΟΣ ΔΗΜΟΣ (see here, vv. 30. 33. 35), καθιέρωσαν, ἐπὶ ΑΝΘΥΠΑΤΟΥ (v. 38) Πεδουκαίου Πρεσβείνου, ψηφισαμένου Τιβ. ΚΑ. Ἰταλικού, τοῦ ΓΡΑΜΜΑΤΕΩΣ (v. 35) τοῦ ΔΗΜΟΥ.

There is an Ephesian coin extant of the age of Nero with the inscription, Ἐφεσίαν Αἰμύκλη Ἀουίδια ΑΝΘΥΠΑΤΩ ΝΕΩΚΟΡΩΝ. (Akermann, p. 55.)

CH. XX. 2. διελθὼν τὰ μέρη ἐκεῖνα] having gone through those parts. Probably as before as Illyricum. See the Epistle to the Romans, xv. 19, written from Hellas after the journey to Macedonia, to which he had come from Ephesus by Troas (see 2 Cor. ii. 13), and to which Titus came to him from Corinth. Cp. Paley, Hor. Paul. Ep. Rom. iv. p. 21. Houson, ii. 154.

— Ἑλλάδα] Hellas. Southern Greece distinguished from the Northern, or Macedonia, which contained Macedonia Proper, Illyricum, Epirus, and Thessaly. See xvi. 9, 10. 12.

This is the only place where the word Ἑλλάς occurs in the New Testament;—a memorial of its grandeur before it was merged in the Roman province of Achaia. Perhaps in this wider circuit St. Paul visited the countries on the west of the mountain-chain of Pindus in his descent southward from Illyricum.

3. ἐπιβουλῆς] lying-in-wait; from malice, and perhaps, also, on account of the collection of money which he carried with him.

4. Σώπατρος] Sopater; probably the same as Sospiter, Rom. xvi. 21.

— Πύρρου] Not in Elz., but in A, B, D, E, and in many Cursives, and received by Lachm., Tisch., Born., Alford.

— Τιμόθεος] Timotheus of Lystra, xvi. 1.

— Τύχικος] Tychicus, mentioned therefore by St. Paul in writing to the Ἀσιανοί. See Eph. vi. 21. Col. iv. 7. 2 Tim. iv. 12.

Elz. and most editions have Τυχικός. But in proper names the accent is thrown back, which would have been otherwise on the last syllable. Thus in the New Testament we have Ἐπαύματος, not -τός, Φίλιππος, not -τός, Ἐραστός, not -τός. Cf. Winer, § 6, p. 49.

The word ΧΡΙΣΤΟΣ forms a signal and almost unique exception to this rule; as if it was the desire of those who used it, to remind themselves and others of its etymology.

— Τρόφιμος] Trophimus, oi Ephesus,—with St. Paul at Jerusalem. I.—PART II.

salem, xxi. 29; and left by him at Miletus on his last visit to Rome. 2 Tim. iv. 20.

5. οὗτοι] Therefore none of these persons, here specified, can have been the author of the Acts.

— ἡμᾶς] us. St. Luke alone therefore, it seems, was in the company of St. Paul, between Corinth and Troas.

For an important deduction from this circumstance see 2 Cor. viii. 18.

Almost imperceptibly does the blessed Evangelist glide into St. Paul's company, and how unobtrusively does he intimate his own fellowship in labour and suffering with him! See above, xvi. 10.

Contrast with this modest silence the eulogistic declaration of St. Paul concerning his faithful companion St. Luke, Λουκᾶς ὁ ἱατρός, ὁ ἀγαπητός (Col. iv. 14); and Λουκᾶς ἐστὶ μόνος μετ' ἐμοῦ (2 Tim. iv. 11), “Let another praise thee, and not thine own lips” (Prov. xxvii. 2.)

If there be a code of gentle demeanour, good breeding, courteous manners, and refined delicacy in the world, surely it is the New Testament.

— ἐν Τρωάδι] at Troas. It is observable, that they waited for St. Paul and St. Luke at Troas, the place where he seems to have joined St. Paul in the first instance. See xvi. 8. 11.

Henceforth St. Luke seems to have remained with St. Paul till the end of the time comprehended in the Acts of the Apostles.

St. Luke appears to have been left by St. Paul at Philippi (see xvi. 16. 40; xvii. 1), and to have rejoined the Apostle in that neighbourhood.

It was St. Paul's practice, after he had planted the Gospel, to leave some persons behind him to water it. Thus he left Silas and Timotheus at Berea, xvii. 14, and Aquila and Priscilla at Ephesus, xviii. 19, and Titus in Crete, Titus i. 5; cp. 1 Tim. i. 3. And perhaps this is what is implied of Erastus, 2 Tim. iv. 20, Ἐραστός ἐμείνεν ἐν Κορίνθῳ, he abode there to watch over the Church, and to endure patiently what he might be required to suffer for it.

Probably St. Luke was entrusted with similar duties at Philippi, and in its neighbourhood. From Macedonia, it seems, St. Luke was sent together with Titus by St. Paul, with the Second Epistle to the Corinthians; and he waited at Corinth for St. Paul; and thence accompanied him with the collection of alms for the poor Christians at Jerusalem, and from Jerusalem went with him to Cæsarea, and thence eventually to Rome. See note on 2 Cor. viii. 18.

6. μετὰ τὰς ἡμέρας τῶν ἀζύμων] after the days of unleavened bread. Observe the minute specification of days in this journey from Philippi to Jerusalem. There are two limits marked,—the days of Unleavened Bread at Philippi (xx. 6), and the Feast of Pentecost at Jerusalem (xx. 16; xxi. 15), with an interval of about seven weeks between them. It seems that it is intended to be inferred from the mention of his stay at Philippi at the Passover, that St. Paul did not feel himself obliged to attend the great festivals of the Levitical Ritual at Jerusalem. And yet he was desirous of doing so on certain occasions, to show that he did not, under existing circumstances, disparage the observance of the Ceremonial Law. Cp. xviii. 21.

The days of Unleavened Bread had now been changed into the Christian Easter; and perhaps he stayed at Philippi in order ἤλθομεν πρὸς αὐτοὺς εἰς τὴν Τρωάδα ἄχρις ἡμερῶν πέντε, οὗ διετρίψαμεν ἡμέρας ἑπτά.

g ch. 2. 42, 46.
1 Cor. 10. 16.
8 & 11. 20.

⁷ ⁸ ⁹ ¹⁰ ¹¹ ¹² ¹³ ¹⁴ ¹⁵ ¹⁶ ¹⁷ ¹⁸ ¹⁹ ²⁰ ²¹ ²² ²³ ²⁴ ²⁵ ²⁶ ²⁷ ²⁸ ²⁹ ³⁰ ³¹ ³² ³³ ³⁴ ³⁵ ³⁶ ³⁷ ³⁸ ³⁹ ⁴⁰ ⁴¹ ⁴² ⁴³ ⁴⁴ ⁴⁵ ⁴⁶ ⁴⁷ ⁴⁸ ⁴⁹ ⁵⁰ ⁵¹ ⁵² ⁵³ ⁵⁴ ⁵⁵ ⁵⁶ ⁵⁷ ⁵⁸ ⁵⁹ ⁶⁰ ⁶¹ ⁶² ⁶³ ⁶⁴ ⁶⁵ ⁶⁶ ⁶⁷ ⁶⁸ ⁶⁹ ⁷⁰ ⁷¹ ⁷² ⁷³ ⁷⁴ ⁷⁵ ⁷⁶ ⁷⁷ ⁷⁸ ⁷⁹ ⁸⁰ ⁸¹ ⁸² ⁸³ ⁸⁴ ⁸⁵ ⁸⁶ ⁸⁷ ⁸⁸ ⁸⁹ ⁹⁰ ⁹¹ ⁹² ⁹³ ⁹⁴ ⁹⁵ ⁹⁶ ⁹⁷ ⁹⁸ ⁹⁹ ¹⁰⁰ ¹⁰¹ ¹⁰² ¹⁰³ ¹⁰⁴ ¹⁰⁵ ¹⁰⁶ ¹⁰⁷ ¹⁰⁸ ¹⁰⁹ ¹¹⁰ ¹¹¹ ¹¹² ¹¹³ ¹¹⁴ ¹¹⁵ ¹¹⁶ ¹¹⁷ ¹¹⁸ ¹¹⁹ ¹²⁰ ¹²¹ ¹²² ¹²³ ¹²⁴ ¹²⁵ ¹²⁶ ¹²⁷ ¹²⁸ ¹²⁹ ¹³⁰ ¹³¹ ¹³² ¹³³ ¹³⁴ ¹³⁵ ¹³⁶ ¹³⁷ ¹³⁸ ¹³⁹ ¹⁴⁰ ¹⁴¹ ¹⁴² ¹⁴³ ¹⁴⁴ ¹⁴⁵ ¹⁴⁶ ¹⁴⁷ ¹⁴⁸ ¹⁴⁹ ¹⁵⁰ ¹⁵¹ ¹⁵² ¹⁵³ ¹⁵⁴ ¹⁵⁵ ¹⁵⁶ ¹⁵⁷ ¹⁵⁸ ¹⁵⁹ ¹⁶⁰ ¹⁶¹ ¹⁶² ¹⁶³ ¹⁶⁴ ¹⁶⁵ ¹⁶⁶ ¹⁶⁷ ¹⁶⁸ ¹⁶⁹ ¹⁷⁰ ¹⁷¹ ¹⁷² ¹⁷³ ¹⁷⁴ ¹⁷⁵ ¹⁷⁶ ¹⁷⁷ ¹⁷⁸ ¹⁷⁹ ¹⁸⁰ ¹⁸¹ ¹⁸² ¹⁸³ ¹⁸⁴ ¹⁸⁵ ¹⁸⁶ ¹⁸⁷ ¹⁸⁸ ¹⁸⁹ ¹⁹⁰ ¹⁹¹ ¹⁹² ¹⁹³ ¹⁹⁴ ¹⁹⁵ ¹⁹⁶ ¹⁹⁷ ¹⁹⁸ ¹⁹⁹ ²⁰⁰ ²⁰¹ ²⁰² ²⁰³ ²⁰⁴ ²⁰⁵ ²⁰⁶ ²⁰⁷ ²⁰⁸ ²⁰⁹ ²¹⁰ ²¹¹ ²¹² ²¹³ ²¹⁴ ²¹⁵ ²¹⁶ ²¹⁷ ²¹⁸ ²¹⁹ ²²⁰ ²²¹ ²²² ²²³ ²²⁴ ²²⁵ ²²⁶ ²²⁷ ²²⁸ ²²⁹ ²³⁰ ²³¹ ²³² ²³³ ²³⁴ ²³⁵ ²³⁶ ²³⁷ ²³⁸ ²³⁹ ²⁴⁰ ²⁴¹ ²⁴² ²⁴³ ²⁴⁴ ²⁴⁵ ²⁴⁶ ²⁴⁷ ²⁴⁸ ²⁴⁹ ²⁵⁰ ²⁵¹ ²⁵² ²⁵³ ²⁵⁴ ²⁵⁵ ²⁵⁶ ²⁵⁷ ²⁵⁸ ²⁵⁹ ²⁶⁰ ²⁶¹ ²⁶² ²⁶³ ²⁶⁴ ²⁶⁵ ²⁶⁶ ²⁶⁷ ²⁶⁸ ²⁶⁹ ²⁷⁰ ²⁷¹ ²⁷² ²⁷³ ²⁷⁴ ²⁷⁵ ²⁷⁶ ²⁷⁷ ²⁷⁸ ²⁷⁹ ²⁸⁰ ²⁸¹ ²⁸² ²⁸³ ²⁸⁴ ²⁸⁵ ²⁸⁶ ²⁸⁷ ²⁸⁸ ²⁸⁹ ²⁹⁰ ²⁹¹ ²⁹² ²⁹³ ²⁹⁴ ²⁹⁵ ²⁹⁶ ²⁹⁷ ²⁹⁸ ²⁹⁹ ³⁰⁰ ³⁰¹ ³⁰² ³⁰³ ³⁰⁴ ³⁰⁵ ³⁰⁶ ³⁰⁷ ³⁰⁸ ³⁰⁹ ³¹⁰ ³¹¹ ³¹² ³¹³ ³¹⁴ ³¹⁵ ³¹⁶ ³¹⁷ ³¹⁸ ³¹⁹ ³²⁰ ³²¹ ³²² ³²³ ³²⁴ ³²⁵ ³²⁶ ³²⁷ ³²⁸ ³²⁹ ³³⁰ ³³¹ ³³² ³³³ ³³⁴ ³³⁵ ³³⁶ ³³⁷ ³³⁸ ³³⁹ ³⁴⁰ ³⁴¹ ³⁴² ³⁴³ ³⁴⁴ ³⁴⁵ ³⁴⁶ ³⁴⁷ ³⁴⁸ ³⁴⁹ ³⁵⁰ ³⁵¹ ³⁵² ³⁵³ ³⁵⁴ ³⁵⁵ ³⁵⁶ ³⁵⁷ ³⁵⁸ ³⁵⁹ ³⁶⁰ ³⁶¹ ³⁶² ³⁶³ ³⁶⁴ ³⁶⁵ ³⁶⁶ ³⁶⁷ ³⁶⁸ ³⁶⁹ ³⁷⁰ ³⁷¹ ³⁷² ³⁷³ ³⁷⁴ ³⁷⁵ ³⁷⁶ ³⁷⁷ ³⁷⁸ ³⁷⁹ ³⁸⁰ ³⁸¹ ³⁸² ³⁸³ ³⁸⁴ ³⁸⁵ ³⁸⁶ ³⁸⁷ ³⁸⁸ ³⁸⁹ ³⁹⁰ ³⁹¹ ³⁹² ³⁹³ ³⁹⁴ ³⁹⁵ ³⁹⁶ ³⁹⁷ ³⁹⁸ ³⁹⁹ ⁴⁰⁰ ⁴⁰¹ ⁴⁰² ⁴⁰³ ⁴⁰⁴ ⁴⁰⁵ ⁴⁰⁶ ⁴⁰⁷ ⁴⁰⁸ ⁴⁰⁹ ⁴¹⁰ ⁴¹¹ ⁴¹² ⁴¹³ ⁴¹⁴ ⁴¹⁵ ⁴¹⁶ ⁴¹⁷ ⁴¹⁸ ⁴¹⁹ ⁴²⁰ ⁴²¹ ⁴²² ⁴²³ ⁴²⁴ ⁴²⁵ ⁴²⁶ ⁴²⁷ ⁴²⁸ ⁴²⁹ ⁴³⁰ ⁴³¹ ⁴³² ⁴³³ ⁴³⁴ ⁴³⁵ ⁴³⁶ ⁴³⁷ ⁴³⁸ ⁴³⁹ ⁴⁴⁰ ⁴⁴¹ ⁴⁴² ⁴⁴³ ⁴⁴⁴ ⁴⁴⁵ ⁴⁴⁶ ⁴⁴⁷ ⁴⁴⁸ ⁴⁴⁹ ⁴⁵⁰ ⁴⁵¹ ⁴⁵² ⁴⁵³ ⁴⁵⁴ ⁴⁵⁵ ⁴⁵⁶ ⁴⁵⁷ ⁴⁵⁸ ⁴⁵⁹ ⁴⁶⁰ ⁴⁶¹ ⁴⁶² ⁴⁶³ ⁴⁶⁴ ⁴⁶⁵ ⁴⁶⁶ ⁴⁶⁷ ⁴⁶⁸ ⁴⁶⁹ ⁴⁷⁰ ⁴⁷¹ ⁴⁷² ⁴⁷³ ⁴⁷⁴ ⁴⁷⁵ ⁴⁷⁶ ⁴⁷⁷ ⁴⁷⁸ ⁴⁷⁹ ⁴⁸⁰ ⁴⁸¹ ⁴⁸² ⁴⁸³ ⁴⁸⁴ ⁴⁸⁵ ⁴⁸⁶ ⁴⁸⁷ ⁴⁸⁸ ⁴⁸⁹ ⁴⁹⁰ ⁴⁹¹ ⁴⁹² ⁴⁹³ ⁴⁹⁴ ⁴⁹⁵ ⁴⁹⁶ ⁴⁹⁷ ⁴⁹⁸ ⁴⁹⁹ ⁵⁰⁰ ⁵⁰¹ ⁵⁰² ⁵⁰³ ⁵⁰⁴ ⁵⁰⁵ ⁵⁰⁶ ⁵⁰⁷ ⁵⁰⁸ ⁵⁰⁹ ⁵¹⁰ ⁵¹¹ ⁵¹² ⁵¹³ ⁵¹⁴ ⁵¹⁵ ⁵¹⁶ ⁵¹⁷ ⁵¹⁸ ⁵¹⁹ ⁵²⁰ ⁵²¹ ⁵²² ⁵²³ ⁵²⁴ ⁵²⁵ ⁵²⁶ ⁵²⁷ ⁵²⁸ ⁵²⁹ ⁵³⁰ ⁵³¹ ⁵³² ⁵³³ ⁵³⁴ ⁵³⁵ ⁵³⁶ ⁵³⁷ ⁵³⁸ ⁵³⁹ ⁵⁴⁰ ⁵⁴¹ ⁵⁴² ⁵⁴³ ⁵⁴⁴ ⁵⁴⁵ ⁵⁴⁶ ⁵⁴⁷ ⁵⁴⁸ ⁵⁴⁹ ⁵⁵⁰ ⁵⁵¹ ⁵⁵² ⁵⁵³ ⁵⁵⁴ ⁵⁵⁵ ⁵⁵⁶ ⁵⁵⁷ ⁵⁵⁸ ⁵⁵⁹ ⁵⁶⁰ ⁵⁶¹ ⁵⁶² ⁵⁶³ ⁵⁶⁴ ⁵⁶⁵ ⁵⁶⁶ ⁵⁶⁷ ⁵⁶⁸ ⁵⁶⁹ ⁵⁷⁰ ⁵⁷¹ ⁵⁷² ⁵⁷³ ⁵⁷⁴ ⁵⁷⁵ ⁵⁷⁶ ⁵⁷⁷ ⁵⁷⁸ ⁵⁷⁹ ⁵⁸⁰ ⁵⁸¹ ⁵⁸² ⁵⁸³ ⁵⁸⁴ ⁵⁸⁵ ⁵⁸⁶ ⁵⁸⁷ ⁵⁸⁸ ⁵⁸⁹ ⁵⁹⁰ ⁵⁹¹ ⁵⁹² ⁵⁹³ ⁵⁹⁴ ⁵⁹⁵ ⁵⁹⁶ ⁵⁹⁷ ⁵⁹⁸ ⁵⁹⁹ ⁶⁰⁰ ⁶⁰¹ ⁶⁰² ⁶⁰³ ⁶⁰⁴ ⁶⁰⁵ ⁶⁰⁶ ⁶⁰⁷ ⁶⁰⁸ ⁶⁰⁹ ⁶¹⁰ ⁶¹¹ ⁶¹² ⁶¹³ ⁶¹⁴ ⁶¹⁵ ⁶¹⁶ ⁶¹⁷ ⁶¹⁸ ⁶¹⁹ ⁶²⁰ ⁶²¹ ⁶²² ⁶²³ ⁶²⁴ ⁶²⁵ ⁶²⁶ ⁶²⁷ ⁶²⁸ ⁶²⁹ ⁶³⁰ ⁶³¹ ⁶³² ⁶³³ ⁶³⁴ ⁶³⁵ ⁶³⁶ ⁶³⁷ ⁶³⁸ ⁶³⁹ ⁶⁴⁰ ⁶⁴¹ ⁶⁴² ⁶⁴³ ⁶⁴⁴ ⁶⁴⁵ ⁶⁴⁶ ⁶⁴⁷ ⁶⁴⁸ ⁶⁴⁹ ⁶⁵⁰ ⁶⁵¹ ⁶⁵² ⁶⁵³ ⁶⁵⁴ ⁶⁵⁵ ⁶⁵⁶ ⁶⁵⁷ ⁶⁵⁸ ⁶⁵⁹ ⁶⁶⁰ ⁶⁶¹ ⁶⁶² ⁶⁶³ ⁶⁶⁴ ⁶⁶⁵ ⁶⁶⁶ ⁶⁶⁷ ⁶⁶⁸ ⁶⁶⁹ ⁶⁷⁰ ⁶⁷¹ ⁶⁷² ⁶⁷³ ⁶⁷⁴ ⁶⁷⁵ ⁶⁷⁶ ⁶⁷⁷ ⁶⁷⁸ ⁶⁷⁹ ⁶⁸⁰ ⁶⁸¹ ⁶⁸² ⁶⁸³ ⁶⁸⁴ ⁶⁸⁵ ⁶⁸⁶ ⁶⁸⁷ ⁶⁸⁸ ⁶⁸⁹ ⁶⁹⁰ ⁶⁹¹ ⁶⁹² ⁶⁹³ ⁶⁹⁴ ⁶⁹⁵ ⁶⁹⁶ ⁶⁹⁷ ⁶⁹⁸ ⁶⁹⁹ ⁷⁰⁰ ⁷⁰¹ ⁷⁰² ⁷⁰³ ⁷⁰⁴ ⁷⁰⁵ ⁷⁰⁶ ⁷⁰⁷ ⁷⁰⁸ ⁷⁰⁹ ⁷¹⁰ ⁷¹¹ ⁷¹² ⁷¹³ ⁷¹⁴ ⁷¹⁵ ⁷¹⁶ ⁷¹⁷ ⁷¹⁸ ⁷¹⁹ ⁷²⁰ ⁷²¹ ⁷²² ⁷²³ ⁷²⁴ ⁷²⁵ ⁷²⁶ ⁷²⁷ ⁷²⁸ ⁷²⁹ ⁷³⁰ ⁷³¹ ⁷³² ⁷³³ ⁷³⁴ ⁷³⁵ ⁷³⁶ ⁷³⁷ ⁷³⁸ ⁷³⁹ ⁷⁴⁰ ⁷⁴¹ ⁷⁴² ⁷⁴³ ⁷⁴⁴ ⁷⁴⁵ ⁷⁴⁶ ⁷⁴⁷ ⁷⁴⁸ ⁷⁴⁹ ⁷⁵⁰ ⁷⁵¹ ⁷⁵² ⁷⁵³ ⁷⁵⁴ ⁷⁵⁵ ⁷⁵⁶ ⁷⁵⁷ ⁷⁵⁸ ⁷⁵⁹ ⁷⁶⁰ ⁷⁶¹ ⁷⁶² ⁷⁶³ ⁷⁶⁴ ⁷⁶⁵ ⁷⁶⁶ ⁷⁶⁷ ⁷⁶⁸ ⁷⁶⁹ ⁷⁷⁰ ⁷⁷¹ ⁷⁷² ⁷⁷³ ⁷⁷⁴ ⁷⁷⁵ ⁷⁷⁶ ⁷⁷⁷ ⁷⁷⁸ ⁷⁷⁹ ⁷⁸⁰ ⁷⁸¹ ⁷⁸² ⁷⁸³ ⁷⁸⁴ ⁷⁸⁵ ⁷⁸⁶ ⁷⁸⁷ ⁷⁸⁸ ⁷⁸⁹ ⁷⁹⁰ ⁷⁹¹ ⁷⁹² ⁷⁹³ ⁷⁹⁴ ⁷⁹⁵ ⁷⁹⁶ ⁷⁹⁷ ⁷⁹⁸ ⁷⁹⁹ ⁸⁰⁰ ⁸⁰¹ ⁸⁰² ⁸⁰³ ⁸⁰⁴ ⁸⁰⁵ ⁸⁰⁶ ⁸⁰⁷ ⁸⁰⁸ ⁸⁰⁹ ⁸¹⁰ ⁸¹¹ ⁸¹² ⁸¹³ ⁸¹⁴ ⁸¹⁵ ⁸¹⁶ ⁸¹⁷ ⁸¹⁸ ⁸¹⁹ ⁸²⁰ ⁸²¹ ⁸²² ⁸²³ ⁸²⁴ ⁸²⁵ ⁸²⁶ ⁸²⁷ ⁸²⁸ ⁸²⁹ ⁸³⁰ ⁸³¹ ⁸³² ⁸³³ ⁸³⁴ ⁸³⁵ ⁸³⁶ ⁸³⁷ ⁸³⁸ ⁸³⁹ ⁸⁴⁰ ⁸⁴¹ ⁸⁴² ⁸⁴³ ⁸⁴⁴ ⁸⁴⁵ ⁸⁴⁶ ⁸⁴⁷ ⁸⁴⁸ ⁸⁴⁹ ⁸⁵⁰ ⁸⁵¹ ⁸⁵² ⁸⁵³ ⁸⁵⁴ ⁸⁵⁵ ⁸⁵⁶ ⁸⁵⁷ ⁸⁵⁸ ⁸⁵⁹ ⁸⁶⁰ ⁸⁶¹ ⁸⁶² ⁸⁶³ ⁸⁶⁴ ⁸⁶⁵ ⁸⁶⁶ ⁸⁶⁷ ⁸⁶⁸ ⁸⁶⁹ ⁸⁷⁰ ⁸⁷¹ ⁸⁷² ⁸⁷³ ⁸⁷⁴ ⁸⁷⁵ ⁸⁷⁶ ⁸⁷⁷ ⁸⁷⁸ ⁸⁷⁹ ⁸⁸⁰ ⁸⁸¹ ⁸⁸² ⁸⁸³ ⁸⁸⁴ ⁸⁸⁵ ⁸⁸⁶ ⁸⁸⁷ ⁸⁸⁸ ⁸⁸⁹ ⁸⁹⁰ ⁸⁹¹ ⁸⁹² ⁸⁹³ ⁸⁹⁴ ⁸⁹⁵ ⁸⁹⁶ ⁸⁹⁷ ⁸⁹⁸ ⁸⁹⁹ ⁹⁰⁰ ⁹⁰¹ ⁹⁰² ⁹⁰³ ⁹⁰⁴ ⁹⁰⁵ ⁹⁰⁶ ⁹⁰⁷ ⁹⁰⁸ ⁹⁰⁹ ⁹¹⁰ ⁹¹¹ ⁹¹² ⁹¹³ ⁹¹⁴ ⁹¹⁵ ⁹¹⁶ ⁹¹⁷ ⁹¹⁸ ⁹¹⁹ ⁹²⁰ ⁹²¹ ⁹²² ⁹²³ ⁹²⁴ ⁹²⁵ ⁹²⁶ ⁹²⁷ ⁹²⁸ ⁹²⁹ ⁹³⁰ ⁹³¹ ⁹³² ⁹³³ ⁹³⁴ ⁹³⁵ ⁹³⁶ ⁹³⁷ ⁹³⁸ ⁹³⁹ ⁹⁴⁰ ⁹⁴¹ ⁹⁴² ⁹⁴³ ⁹⁴⁴ ⁹⁴⁵ ⁹⁴⁶ ⁹⁴⁷ ⁹⁴⁸ ⁹⁴⁹ ⁹⁵⁰ ⁹⁵¹ ⁹⁵² ⁹⁵³ ⁹⁵⁴ ⁹⁵⁵ ⁹⁵⁶ ⁹⁵⁷ ⁹⁵⁸ ⁹⁵⁹ ⁹⁶⁰ ⁹⁶¹ ⁹⁶² ⁹⁶³ ⁹⁶⁴ ⁹⁶⁵ ⁹⁶⁶ ⁹⁶⁷ ⁹⁶⁸ ⁹⁶⁹ ⁹⁷⁰ ⁹⁷¹ ⁹⁷² ⁹⁷³ ⁹⁷⁴ ⁹⁷⁵ ⁹⁷⁶ ⁹⁷⁷ ⁹⁷⁸ ⁹⁷⁹ ⁹⁸⁰ ⁹⁸¹ ⁹⁸² ⁹⁸³ ⁹⁸⁴ ⁹⁸⁵ ⁹⁸⁶ ⁹⁸⁷ ⁹⁸⁸ ⁹⁸⁹ ⁹⁹⁰ ⁹⁹¹ ⁹⁹² ⁹⁹³ ⁹⁹⁴ ⁹⁹⁵ ⁹⁹⁶ ⁹⁹⁷ ⁹⁹⁸ ⁹⁹⁹ ¹⁰⁰⁰

h 1 Kings 17. 21.
2 Kings 4. 34.

⁹ Καθεζόμενος δέ τις νεανίας, ὀνόματι Εὐτυχος, ἐπὶ τῆς θυρίδος, καταφερόμενος ὕπνω βαθεῖ, διαλεγομένου τοῦ Παύλου ἐπὶ πλείον κατενεχθεὶς ἀπὸ τοῦ ὕπνου ἔπεσεν ἀπὸ τοῦ τριστέγου κάτω, καὶ ἤρθη νεκρός. ¹⁰ ¹¹ ¹² ¹³ ¹⁴ ¹⁵ ¹⁶ ¹⁷ ¹⁸ ¹⁹ ²⁰ ²¹ ²² ²³ ²⁴ ²⁵ ²⁶ ²⁷ ²⁸ ²⁹ ³⁰ ³¹ ³² ³³ ³⁴ ³⁵ ³⁶ ³⁷ ³⁸ ³⁹ ⁴⁰ ⁴¹ ⁴² ⁴³ ⁴⁴ ⁴⁵ ⁴⁶ ⁴⁷ ⁴⁸ ⁴⁹ ⁵⁰ ⁵¹ ⁵² ⁵³ ⁵⁴ ⁵⁵ ⁵⁶ ⁵⁷ ⁵⁸ ⁵⁹ ⁶⁰ ⁶¹ ⁶² ⁶³ ⁶⁴ ⁶⁵ ⁶⁶ ⁶⁷ ⁶⁸ ⁶⁹ ⁷⁰ ⁷¹ ⁷² ⁷³ ⁷⁴ ⁷⁵ ⁷⁶ ⁷⁷ ⁷⁸ ⁷⁹ ⁸⁰ ⁸¹ ⁸² ⁸³ ⁸⁴ ⁸⁵ ⁸⁶ ⁸⁷ ⁸⁸ ⁸⁹ ⁹⁰ ⁹¹ ⁹² ⁹³ ⁹⁴ ⁹⁵ ⁹⁶ ⁹⁷ ⁹⁸ ⁹⁹ ¹⁰⁰ ¹⁰¹ ¹⁰² ¹⁰³ ¹⁰⁴ ¹⁰⁵ ¹⁰⁶ ¹⁰⁷ ¹⁰⁸ ¹⁰⁹ ¹¹⁰ ¹¹¹ ¹¹² ¹¹³ ¹¹⁴ ¹¹⁵ ¹¹⁶ ¹¹⁷ ¹¹⁸ ¹¹⁹ ¹²⁰ ¹²¹ ¹²² ¹²³ ¹²⁴ ¹²⁵ ¹²⁶ ¹²⁷ ¹²⁸ ¹²⁹ ¹³⁰ ¹³¹ ¹³² ¹³³ ¹³⁴ ¹³⁵ ¹³⁶ ¹³⁷ ¹³⁸ ¹³⁹ ¹⁴⁰ ¹⁴¹ ¹⁴² ¹⁴³ ¹⁴⁴ ¹⁴⁵ ¹⁴⁶ ¹⁴⁷ ¹⁴⁸ ¹⁴⁹ ¹⁵⁰ ¹⁵¹ ¹⁵² ¹⁵³ ¹⁵⁴ ¹⁵⁵ ¹⁵⁶ ¹⁵⁷ ¹⁵⁸ ¹⁵⁹ ¹⁶⁰ ¹⁶¹ ¹⁶² ¹⁶³ ¹⁶⁴ ¹⁶⁵ ¹⁶⁶ ¹⁶⁷ ¹⁶⁸ ¹⁶⁹ ¹⁷⁰ ¹⁷¹ ¹⁷² ¹⁷³ ¹⁷⁴ ¹⁷⁵ ¹⁷⁶ ¹⁷⁷ ¹⁷⁸ ¹⁷⁹ ¹⁸⁰ ¹⁸¹ ¹⁸² ¹⁸³ ¹⁸⁴ ¹⁸⁵ ¹⁸⁶ ¹⁸⁷ ¹⁸⁸ ¹⁸⁹ ¹⁹⁰ ¹⁹¹ ¹⁹² ¹⁹³ ¹⁹⁴ ¹⁹⁵ ¹⁹⁶ ¹⁹⁷ ¹⁹⁸ ¹⁹⁹ ²⁰⁰ ²⁰¹ ²⁰² ²⁰³ ²⁰⁴ ²⁰⁵ ²⁰⁶ ²⁰⁷ ²⁰⁸ ²⁰⁹ ²¹⁰ ²¹¹ ²¹² ²¹³ ²¹⁴ ²¹⁵ ²¹⁶ ²¹⁷ ²¹⁸ ²¹⁹ ²²⁰ ²²¹ ²²² ²²³ ²²⁴ ²²⁵ ²²⁶ ²²⁷ ²²⁸ ²²⁹ ²³⁰ ²³¹ ²³² ²³³ ²³⁴ ²³⁵ ²³⁶ ²³⁷ ²³⁸ ²³⁹ ²⁴⁰ ²⁴¹ ²⁴² ²⁴³ ²⁴⁴ ²⁴⁵ ²⁴⁶ ²⁴⁷ ²⁴⁸ ²⁴⁹ ²⁵⁰ ²⁵¹ ²⁵² ²⁵³ ²⁵⁴ ²⁵⁵ ²⁵⁶ ²⁵⁷ ²⁵⁸ ²⁵⁹ ²⁶⁰ ²⁶¹ ²⁶² ²⁶³ ²⁶⁴ ²⁶⁵ ²⁶⁶ ²⁶⁷ ²⁶⁸ ²⁶⁹ ²⁷⁰ ²⁷¹ ²⁷² ²⁷³ ²⁷⁴ ²⁷⁵ ²⁷⁶ ²⁷⁷ ²⁷⁸ ²⁷⁹ ²⁸⁰ ²⁸¹ ²⁸² ²⁸³ ²⁸⁴ ²⁸⁵ ²⁸⁶ ²⁸⁷ ²⁸⁸ ²⁸⁹ ²⁹⁰ ²⁹¹ ²⁹² ²⁹³ ²⁹⁴ ²⁹⁵ ²⁹⁶ ²⁹⁷ ²⁹⁸ ²⁹⁹ ³⁰⁰ ³⁰¹ ³⁰² ³⁰³ ³⁰⁴ ³⁰⁵ ³⁰⁶ ³⁰⁷ ³⁰⁸ ³⁰⁹ ³¹⁰ ³¹¹ ³¹² ³¹³ ³¹⁴ ³¹⁵ ³¹⁶ ³¹⁷ ³¹⁸ ³¹⁹ ³²⁰ ³²¹ ³²² ³²³ ³²⁴ ³²⁵ ³²⁶ ³²⁷ ³²⁸ ³²⁹ ³³⁰ ³³¹ ³³² ³³³ ³³⁴ ³³⁵ ³³⁶ ³³⁷ ³³⁸ ³³⁹ ³⁴⁰ ³⁴¹ ³⁴² ³⁴³ ³⁴⁴ ³⁴⁵ ³⁴⁶ ³⁴⁷ ³⁴⁸ ³⁴⁹ ³⁵⁰ ³⁵¹ ³⁵² ³⁵³ ³⁵⁴ ³⁵⁵

αὐτὸς πεζεύνει. ¹⁴ Ὡς δὲ συνέβαλεν ἡμῖν εἰς τὴν Ἀσσον, ἀναλαβόντες αὐτὸν ἦλθομεν εἰς Μιτυλήνην. ¹⁵ ἀκαίειθεν ἀποπλεύσαντες τῇ ἐπιούσῃ κατηντήσαμεν ἀντικρὺ Χίου. τῇ δὲ ἐτέρᾳ παρεβάλομεν εἰς Σάμον καὶ μέιναντες ἐν Τρωγυλλίῳ τῇ ἐχομένῃ ἦλθομεν εἰς Μίλητον. ¹⁶ ἡ κεκρίκει γὰρ ὁ Παῦλος παρα- ^{i ch. 21. 12. & 24. 17.} πλεύσαι τὴν Ἐφεσον, ὅπως μὴ γένηται αὐτῷ χρονοτριβῆσαι ἐν τῇ Ἀσίᾳ· ἔσπευδε γὰρ, εἰ δυνατὸν ἦν αὐτῷ, τὴν ἡμέραν τῆς Πεντηκοστῆς γενέσθαι εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα.

¹⁷ Ἀπὸ δὲ τῆς Μιλήτου πέμψας εἰς Ἐφεσον, μετεκαλέσατο τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους τῆς ἐκκλησίας. ¹⁸ Ὡς δὲ παρεγένοντο πρὸς αὐτὸν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Ὑμεῖς ^{k ch. 19. 10.} ἐπίστασθε, ἀπὸ πρώτης ἡμέρας ἀφ' ἧς ἐπέβην εἰς τὴν Ἀσίαν πῶς μεθ' ὑμῶν τὸν πάντα χρόνον ἐγενόμην, ¹⁹ δουλεύων τῷ Κυρίῳ μετὰ πάσης ταπεινοφροσύνης καὶ δακρύων καὶ πειρασμῶν, τῶν συμβάντων μοι ἐν ταῖς ἐπιβουλαῖς τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ²⁰ ὥς οὐδὲν ὑπεστειλάμην τῶν συμφερόντων, τοῦ μὴ ἀν- ^{l ver. 27.} αγγεῖλαι ὑμῖν καὶ διδάξαι ὑμᾶς δημοσίᾳ καὶ κατ' οἴκους, ²¹ διαμαρτυρόμενος ^{m Mark 1, 15 Luke 24. 47.} Ἰουδαίοις τε καὶ Ἑλλήσι τὴν εἰς τὸν Θεὸν μετάνοιαν, καὶ πίστιν τὴν εἰς τὸν Κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν. ²² Καὶ νῦν ἰδοὺ, δεδεμένος ἐγὼ τῷ πνεύματι ^{n ch. 19. 21.} πορεύομαι εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ, τὰ ἐν αὐτῇ συναντήσοντά μοι μὴ εἰδὼς, ²³ ὅτι πλὴν ^{o ch. 21. 4, 11. & 9. 16.} ὅτι τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον κατὰ πόλιν διαμαρτύρεται μοι λέγον, ὅτι δεσμά με καὶ θλίψεις μένουσιν. ²⁴ Ἀλλ' οὐδενὸς λόγον ποιοῦμαι, οὐδὲ ἔχω τὴν ψυχὴν ^{p ch. 21. 13. 2 Tim. 4. 7. Gal. 1. 1. Tit. 1. 3.} μου τιμίαν ἐμαυτῷ, ὥς τελειῶσαι τὸν δρόμον μου μετὰ χαρᾶς, καὶ τὴν διακονίαν ἣν ἔλαβον παρὰ τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ, διαμαρτύρασθαι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τῆς χάριτος τοῦ Θεοῦ. ²⁵ Καὶ νῦν ἰδοὺ, ἐγὼ οἶδα ὅτι οὐκέτι ὄψεσθε τὸ πρόσωπόν μου

16. κεκρίκει] So A, B, C, D, E.—Elz. ἔκρινε.
17—36.] This Book,—the Acts of the Apostles,—is like a Divine Pandect of sacred specimens of Ecclesiastical Offices.

We have had an Apostolic specimen of Confirmation (above, viii. 14—17; xix. 6), and of the Administration of the Holy Communion, and of Preaching on the Lord's Day in a stated place of religious assembly (xx. 7), and we have evidence of many Presbyters settled in a City to feed the Church of God, and we see in this Address of St. Paul at Miletus an Apostolic pattern of an Episcopal Charge to the Clergy, at Visitations, or Diocesan Synods.

17. τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους] the Presbyters, from Ephesus, which, as a large City, had many Presbyters (see xiv. 23); but they were subject, if not now, yet soon after, to one head, Timothy (1 Tim. i. 3), who had oversight of their doctrine (i. 3, 4. 1 Tim. v. 17—19), and performed the office of ordaining Presbyters and Deacons (1 Tim. iii. 1—10. 15; v. 22). Cp. Rev. ii. 1. Ignat. ad Ephes. § 1, where Ephesus has an ἐπίσκοπος, and also, § 5, a πρεσβυτέριον, ὃ συνήρμωστοι τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ, ὡς χορδαὶ κίθαρᾳ, and διάκονοι, § 2.

18. ἐπίστασθε] ye know. A modest word—underrating the effect of his own labours. See on xix. 15.

19. δουλεύων τῷ Κυρίῳ] serving the Lord. Cp. Rom. xii. 11. — μετὰ πάσης ταπ.] He uses the same words in his Epistle to the Ephesians, iv. 2.

— δακρύων] Elz. has πολλῶν before δακρύων; but it is not in A, D, E, and many Cursives and Versions.

20. οὐδὲν ὑπεστειλάμην] The metaphor, reintroduced v. 27, is taken from Navigation; and was therefore appropriate at a seaport, Miletus, and in the mouth of one now on a voyage, and addressing persons who had come from the great commercial city Ephesus. An internal evidence of truth. The Apostle St. Paul, by this metaphor, compares the Church to a Ship, and himself to a Mariner or Captain of it, and the doctrines of the Gospel to its sails; and he says that he οὐδὲν ὑπεστείλατο, lowered or reefed none of its canvas, but spread it all out boldly to the sun and wind, so as to conceal nothing, but to display the whole, and to give his hearers a perfect πληροφορία of faith (see on Luke i. 1. Col. ii. 2; iv. 12), in their course over the sea of this world to the haven of life everlasting.

For this nautical use of ὑποστέλλομαι,—ὑποστέλλεσθαι τὰ ἱστία, see Pindar, in Passow, Lexic.; and compare the Apostle's use of the nautical word στελλόμενοι in his Epistle to the maritime cities Thessalonica (2 Thess. iii. 6) and Corinth (2 Cor. viii. 20). See also 2 Thess. ii. 2.

22. δεδεμένος τῷ πνεύματι] Some (e.g. Meyer) interpret this 'constrained by my own spirit.' Others (Howson, ii. 269),

'a prisoner in spirit, not in body.' The more ancient interpreters (see Chrys., Theophyl., Clem.) explain it, bound by the Holy Spirit. As Diadymus says (in Caten. p. 333), "He that is united to the Holy Ghost is bound in Him; he is the prisoner of Christ; in these chains he rejoices, he wears them as ornaments" (πνευματικούς μαργαρίτας. Ignatius, Eph. § 11). They are bands of love. He bears in his body the marks of the Lord Jesus (Gal. vi. 17), and dies daily (1 Cor. xv. 31). Paul was now going up to Jerusalem to the Anniversary of the Descent of the Holy Ghost (v. 16). And as if his mind was dwelling on that event, he refers to the operations of the Holy Spirit in his speech, vv. 23. 28.

The Vulgate well renders it, alligatus Spiritu, constrained and carried by the Holy Ghost. Perhaps it is a metaphor derived from the practice of chaining prisoners to their keepers (see xii. 6; xxi. 33), who carried them to a particular place. Thus Ignat. ad Rom. 5, ἀπὸ Συρίας μέχρι Ῥώμης θρηνομαχῶ δεδεμένος δέκα λεοπαρδοῖς. So St. Paul was now carried as a prisoner to Jerusalem,—but it was by the Holy Ghost. This explains his conduct in reference to the revelations described in xxi. 4.

It also shows that St. Paul did not run into hazards without Divine guidance. As Chrys. says, οὐκ ἐπὶ τοὺς κινδύνους ῥίπτων ἑαυτὸν, ἀλλ' ἡγούμενος τοῦ πνεύματος εἶναι τὸ πρόσταγμα. See further on this verse, the note on xxi. 4.

23. μοι] to me. So A, B, C, D, E, and many Cursives and Versions. Elz. omits μοι. The pronoun is important, as showing that this prophecy met St. Paul on his arrival at different Cities in succession.

— λέγων] D, E, G, and many Cursives, have λέγων, masculine,—a reading which deserves consideration.

— δεσμά με—μένουσιν] bonds await me. It has been said by some, that this is a mere figure of speech, expressing what might have been expected by the Apostle on probable grounds; and that it is not an utterance of a divinely-inspired prophecy. But, on the contrary, it was not likely that St. Paul, being a Roman Citizen, should have been bound. See Acts xxiii. 29.

— θλίψεις] afflictions. Compare the Epistle to the Romans, xv. 30, where he asks their prayers that he may be delivered from them that do not believe in Judea, and that he may come to Rome. See Paley, Hor. Paul. pp. 22—24.

24. μετὰ χαρᾶς] with joy. Omitted by A, B, D, and some Cursives and Versions; perhaps rightly.

25. ἐγὼ οἶδα ὅτι οὐκέτι ὄψεσθε κ.τ.λ.] I know that ye all will see my face no more. See v. 38. It has been argued from 2 Tim. iv. 13—20, where St. Paul speaks of being at Miletus after this, that he was not here divinely inspired, but was mistaken in this anticipation; and this, it is said, is accounted for from vv. 22, 23, T 2

q ch. 18. 6.
r Luke 7. 30.
Eph. 1. 11.
s 1 Pet. 5. 2.
t Tim. 3. 1, 2.
& 4. 16.
Phil. 1. 1.
Eph. 1. 7.
Col. 1. 14.
1 Pet. 1. 19.
Rev. 5. 9.

ὕμῃς πάντες, ἐν οἷς διήλθον κηρύσσων τὴν βασιλείαν. ²⁶ Ἰδιὸν μαρτύρομαι ὑμῖν ἐν τῇ σήμερον ἡμέρᾳ, ὅτι καθαρὸς ἐγὼ ἀπὸ τοῦ αἵματος πάντων. ²⁷ οὐ γὰρ ὑπεστείλαμην τοῦ μὴ ἀναγγεῖλαι ὑμῖν πᾶσαν τὴν βουλὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ. ²⁸ Προσέχετε οὖν ἑαυτοῖς καὶ παντὶ τῷ ποιμνίῳ, ἐν ᾧ ὑμᾶς τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον ἔθετο ἐπισκόπους, ποιμαίνειν τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἣν περιποιήσατο where he confesses that he did not know what would happen to him at Jerusalem;

But it was one thing to say that he did not know what would happen to him at a particular place, and it would have been another thing to say that something would not happen which did happen;

His words are, οὐκέτι ὤψεσθε τὸ πρόσωπόν μου ὑμεῖς πάντες,—and he might easily have touched again at Miletus without ever seeing all or any of the Presbyters of Ephesus. Besides, as Bengel observes, “Rediit Romā in Asiā compluribus post annis Apostolus, sed interea defuncti alidve delati sunt ferē omnes isti.” It may indeed be inferred, that he never revisited Ephesus after this time, or only after a long interval. Cp. on 1 Tim. iii. 14.

— τὴν βασιλείαν] the kingdom. So A, B, C. Elz. adds τοῦ Θεοῦ, D τοῦ Ἰησοῦ: ἡ βασιλεία, the Kingdom, is emphatic, as in Matt. viii. 12; xxiv. 14; and τὸ ὄνομα, the name, Acts v. 41. So ἡ ὁδὸς, xix. 23, the way. All these are significant of the truth,—that there is no other Kingdom which will remain, but that of God; no other Name, by which men are to be saved, than that of Christ; no other Way which can lead us to heaven, but that of the Gospel. Cp. note below, 1 John ii. 6.

26. καθαρὸς ἐγὼ] pure am I. So A, G, H, and most Cursives, and Tisch., reading ἐγὼ, and not εἰμι, which is in B, C, D, E.

27. ὑπεστείλαμην] On the nautical metaphor here, see v. 20.

— πᾶσαν τὴν βουλὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ] all the counsel of God; re-asserted from v. 20. A strong passage against the “Doctrine of Development.” St. Paul says that he would not have been pure from their blood, i. e. he would have been guilty of destroying their souls, if in the time he had been at Ephesus, less than three years (v. 31), he had not declared to them “the whole counsel of God.” Cp. Eph. i. 11.

What would he say, if he heard, that now, after the Church has been in the world 1800 years, a new article of faith has been declared, and an addition been made by men to the “whole counsel of God?” Cp. Gal. i. 8.

28. προσέχετε οὖν—αἵματος] An exposition of this text, and an interesting application of it to the circumstances of the Church of England, may be seen in the Latin Concio of Bp. Andrewes, then a Presbyter, to the Convocation of the Province of Canterbury, in 1593. Latin Works, p. 29.

— τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον ἔθετο] the Holy Ghost made you overseers. Another assertion of the Divinity and Personality of the Holy Ghost (see v. 3; viii. 29; xiii. 2, 4), and of His Divine office in Ordinations. See above on xiii. 2—4.

— ἐπισκόπους] overseers. Every πρεσβύτερος is an ἐπίσκοπος τοῦ ποιμνίου, an overseer of the flock committed to his charge; but the ἐπίσκοπος is also an overseer of other Pastors; which a Presbyter is not. See below, the note before 1 Tim. iii.

S. Irenæus (iii. 14), indeed, supposes that some Bishops as well as Presbyters were present, and that St. Paul addresses them; “Paulus in Mileto convocatis Episcopis et Presbyteris qui erant ab Epheso et à reliquis proximis civitatibus,” &c. So Ammenius here, who gives also the other exposition; and cp. Professor Blunt, who says, p. 51, “Paul sent for the Elders of the Church of Ephesus, or its Bishops, or rather both, to attend him at Miletus,” and who observes that the authority of Irenæus is of more value here, from his connexion with Polycarp and the neighbourhood.

However, it is certain, that some of these ἐπίσκοποι, if not all, were presbyters.

On the subsequent restriction of the word Ἐπίσκοπος to the highest of the Three Orders of the Christian Ministry, see Dr. Bentley (upon Freethinking, Camb. 1743, pp. 136, 137), “They (the Bishops), with all Christian antiquity, never thought themselves and their order to succeed the Scripture Ἐπίσκοποι, but the Scripture Ἀπόστολοι: they were διάδοχοι τῶν Ἀποστόλων, the successors of the Apostles.”

“The sum of the matter is this:—Though new institutions are formed, new words are not coined for them, but old ones borrowed and applied. Ἐπίσκοπος, whose general idea is overseer, was a word in use long before Christianity; a word of universal relation to œconomical, civil, military, naval, judicial, and religious matters.

“This word was assumed to denote the governing and presiding persons of the Church, as Διάκονος (another word of vulgar and diffused use) to denote the ministerial.

“The Presbyters, therefore, while the Apostles lived, were Ἐπίσκοποι, overseers. But the Apostles, in foresight of their approaching martyrdom, having selected and appointed their successors in the several cities and communities (as St. Paul did Timothy at Ephesus, and Titus at Crete, A.D. 64, four years before his death), what name were these successors to be called by? not Ἀπόστολοι, Apostles; their modesty, as it seems, made them refuse it: they would keep that name proper and sacred to the first extraordinary messengers of Christ, though they really succeeded them in their office, in due part and measure, as the ordinary governors of the Churches.

“It was agreed, therefore, over all Christendom at once, in the very next generation after the Apostles, to assign and appropriate to them the word Ἐπίσκοπος, or Bishop. From that time to this, that appellation, which before included a Presbyter, has been restrained to a superior order. And here’s nothing in all this but what has happened in all languages and communities in the world. See the Notitia of the Roman and Greek Empires, and you’ll scarce find one name of any state employment that in course of time did not vary from its primitive signification.”

— τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ] the Church of God, which He purchased with His own blood. On the purchase of the Church by the price of Christ’s blood, see 1 Cor. vi. 20. 1 Pet. i. 18, 19. Rev. v. 9.

As to the reading of this passage, it is to be observed, that B and many cursives, and Vulg., and the Syriac, and Chrys., and Basil, and Epiphanius, and Ambrose have Θεοῦ; and this reading is received by Elz., Mill, Whitby, Bengel, Knapp, Rinck, Scholz, Alford, Bloomf. And so Bp. Pearson, Art. ii. p. 241.

Other MSS. have Κυρίου (not Θεοῦ), particularly A, C*, D, E, and the Coptic, Sahidic, Armenian Versions, and Irenæus (iii. 14), Didymus (de Spir. § 2), Euseb. (in Esa. xxxv. 9), Cyril Alex. (Mai viii. pt. 2, pp. 125, 6), Jerome and Augustine; and this reading is preferred by Lachm., Tisch., Bornemann, Olshausen, Davidson, Meyer, Hackett, and Tregelles, p. 233.

Others, C, G, H, and more than 100 Cursive MSS. have Κυρίῳ καὶ Θεοῦ, and this reading is preferred by Venema and Valckenaer.

The choice seems to be between Κυρίῳ and Θεοῦ. The evidence for each is strong.

It may be remarked that St. Luke uses the word Κύριος in application to Christ, as appointing and ordaining the Ministers of His Church, as here. See on Luke x. 1.

And in support of Κυρίῳ, it may also be urged that the word Κύριος would mark His Lordship and Dominion over her, as His Household and Kingdom; and would be a happy preparation for the term by which the ἐκκλησία was to be described, i. e. Κυριακή, Church, the spouse and body of the Κύριος, and purchased and purified by His blood. See above, ii. 25. 36.

There would also be a memento here to Bishops and Pastors—that they are not to consider the ἐκκλησία as their own, but as Christ’s, and that they are not κατακυριεύειν, dominari, over what is τοῦ Κυρίου, Domini. 1 Pet. v. 3.

On the other hand—in behalf of the other reading, τοῦ Θεοῦ,—it appears (as Whitby observes, p. 489), that St. Paul never uses the phrase ἡ ἐκκλησία τοῦ Κυρίου, whereas he often employs the words ἡ ἐκκλησία τοῦ Θεοῦ. See 1 Cor. i. 2; x. 32; xi. 16, 22; xv. 9. 2 Cor. i. 1. Gal. i. 13. 1 Thess. ii. 14. 2 Thess. i. 4. 1 Tim. iii. 5. 15.

The matter reduces itself to this question,

Is it more likely that Θεοῦ should have been altered by Copyists into Κυρίῳ, or Κυρίῳ be altered into Θεοῦ?

Perhaps the former may seem the more probable alternative.

(1) No one would have been staggered by Κυρίῳ, or have been inclined to change that reading.

(2) But many might have been perplexed by Θεοῦ, with αἵματος following it.

(3) Some orthodox persons might think that it seemed to give some countenance to the Noetian or Sabellian heresy, which confounded the two Persons of the Father and the Son; or to the Eutychian Heresy, which confounded the two Natures of Christ in One; or to the Apollinarian, Theopaschite, and Patripassian, which imputed suffering to God,—and to God the Father.

(4) It cannot, therefore, be concluded with some, that a change was made here from a theological bias.

(5) It is also observable that the word Κύριος has been interδιὰ τοῦ αἵματος τοῦ ἰδίου. ²⁹ Ἐγὼ οἶδα ὅτι εἰσελεύσονται μετὰ τὴν ἀφίξιν μου λύκοι βαρεῖς εἰς ὑμᾶς, μὴ φειδόμενοι τοῦ ποιμνίου. ³⁰ καὶ ἐξ ὑμῶν αὐτῶν ἀναστήσονται ἄνδρες λαλοῦντες διεστραμμένα, τοῦ ἀποσπᾶν τοὺς μαθητὰς ὀπίσω αὐτῶν. ³¹ Διὸ γρηγορεῖτε, μνημονεύοντες ὅτι τριετία νύκτα καὶ ἡμέραν οὐκ ἐπαυσάμην μετὰ δακρύων νουθετῶν ἕνα ἕκαστον. ³² Καὶ ταὐν παρατίθεμαι ὑμᾶς, ἀδελφοί, τῷ Θεῷ, καὶ τῷ λόγῳ τῆς χάριτος αὐτοῦ, τῷ δυναμένῳ οἰκοδομῆσαι, καὶ δύναι ὑμῖν κληρονομίαν ἐν τοῖς ἡγιασμένοις πᾶσιν. ³³ Ἀργυρίου ἢ χρυσίου ἢ ἱματισμοῦ οὐδενὸς ἐπεθύμησα. ³⁴ αὐτοὶ γινώσκετε ὅτι ταῖς χρεῖαις μου, καὶ τοῖς οὖσι μετ' ἐμοῦ, ὑπηρέτησαν αἱ χεῖρες αὐταί. ³⁵ Πάντα ὑπέδειξα ὑμῖν, ὅτι οὕτω κοπιῶντας δεῖ ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι τῶν ἀσθενούντων, μνημονεύειν τε τῶν λόγων τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ, ὅτι αὐτὸς εἶπε, Μακάριόν ἐστι μᾶλλον διδόναι ἢ λαμβάνειν.

polated, in connexion with Ἐκκλησία, in Eph. v. 29, where A, B, D*, F, G have Χριστός.

(6) It has been said that the testimony of Athanasius is opposed to the reading of Θεοῦ. But this allegation is groundless. His words are (contr. Apollinarium, ii. § 14, vol. i. p. 758), οὐδαμοῦ αἷμα Θεοῦ δίχα σαρκὸς παραδεδώκασιν αἱ γραφαί, ἢ Θεὸν διὰ σαρκὸς παθόντα καὶ ἀναστάντα. Ἀρειανῶν τὰ τοιαῦτα τοιμήματα, ἐπειδὴ μῆτε Θεὸν ἀληθινὸν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ ὁμολογοῦσιν, αἱ δὲ ἄγιοι γραφαὶ ἐν σαρκὶ Θεοῦ καὶ σαρκὸς Θεοῦ ἀνθρώπου γενομένου αἷμα καὶ πάθος ἀνάστασιν κηρύττουσι.

Athanasius is controverting the Apollinarian error that the Godhead itself suffered, and he asserts that the Scriptures have no where predicated to us the blood of God without the flesh; or that God suffered in the flesh (some read δίχα σαρκὸς here, and it may be the true reading): the older editions have διὰ σαρκὸς for δίχα σαρκὸς in the preceding clause.

Athanasius might have written these words, and yet have read here ἐκκλησίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ; for there is no representation, in the passage so read, of the αἷμα Θεοῦ δίχα σαρκὸς. St. Paul would thus say, "the Church of God, which He (Who is Man as well as God) purchased with His own Blood."

(7) The argument from St. Paul's use of Ἐκκλησία Θεοῦ, and his non-use of Ἐκκλησία Κυρίου, confirms the same conclusion.

(8) It is probable that this passage gave occasion to the subsequent use of the still bolder expression αἷμα Θεοῦ in other writers, particularly Ignatius, writing to the same Church,—the Ephesian,—as that those presbyters were now addressed by St. Paul, Eph. i. So Tertullian, ad Uxor. ii. 3, "Sanguine Dei." Clem. Alex. "Quis dives," &c., c. 34, αἷματι Θεοῦ παιδός. Cp. Ignat. ad Rom. 6, ἔφετε με μνητὴν εἶναι τοῦ πάθους τοῦ Θεοῦ μου, where some copyists have inserted Χριστοῦ, to give ease to the phrase, as here. And cp. Jacobson in Clem. Rom. 2, p. 13. See also Weststein here, p. 596, and the note in Catenà, p. 338, where it is said, "Many of weak minds, or of perverse opinions, speak evil of those who use the terms σῶμα καὶ αἷμα Θεοῦ τὸ σωτήριον, but they may hear what our Lord says; and then reference is made to John vi. 35, 48, 53, and the conclusion is, Do not scruple at the words αἷμα καὶ σῶμα Θεοῦ τὸ σωτήριον, as the Jews do; for by it thou hast been redeemed and art become a son of God, and an heir of life everlasting." And as to the doctrine thus taught Bede says, "Non dubitat sanguinem Dei dicere propter unum personam in duobus naturis Ejusdem Jesu Christi, propter quam etiam dictum, Filius Hominis Qui est in celo." (John iii. 13.) "Christ our Saviour is 'Agnus Dei,'" says Bp. Sanderson, i. 195. "He is also 'Agnus Dei;' He is God, the Son of God, Very God of Very God; and it is this dignity of His Nature especially, and not His Innocency only, that setteth such a value upon His Blood that it is of an infinite price, of infinite merit, able to satisfy an infinite justice, and to appease an infinite wrath." See also Waterland on the Trinity, c. 2, p. 39, who approves Θεοῦ; and likewise Blunt on the Early Fathers, p. 466. Cp. Titius ii. 13, 14.

On the word περιποιήσατο, purchased for Himself, see Eph. i. 14.

—τοῦ αἵματος τοῦ ἰδίου] So A, B, C, D, E, and many Cursives. Elz. has διὰ τοῦ ἰδίου αἵματος.

29. ἐγὼ] Elz. adds γάρ; and inserts τοῦτο after οἶδα, which are not in A, B, C, D.

—ἐφίξιν] sometimes 'arrival,' sometimes departure, as here. See examples in Quin. ἀποδηλῶν, Chrys.

—λύκοι βαρεῖς] See on 1 Tim. v. 20.

30. ἐξ ὑμῶν] of yourselves. Hymenæus, Alexander, and the Nicolaitans, 1 Tim. i. 20. Rev. ii. 6. Phygellus and Hermogenes,

2 Tim. i. 15. See especially St. John's Epistle, written probably at Ephesus, 1 John ii. 19, "they went out from us" (ἐξ ἡμῶν), &c., which announces the fulfilment of St. Paul's prophecy. See the note there; and the Introduction to that Epistle, p. 99, and the note before the second chapter of St. Peter's Second Epistle addressed to Christians of Asia.

—τοὺς μαθητὰς] the disciples—mine and yours, and Christ's.

31. τριετία] three years. Three months in the Synagogue, xix. 8; two years in the School of Tyrannus, xix. 10; and he passed through Macedonia and Achaia, where he remained three months, xx. 3.

32. τῷ λόγῳ τῆς χάριτος] To His Word, of which the essential quality and characteristic is Grace. On this use of the Genitive, see note on Matt. xxii. 11 and James i. 25.

It is to be remarked, that "the Word" here is understood by some ancient Expositors to be Christ, who is "full of Grace," and from Whom all Grace has come to man. John i. 14. 16. Cp. 1 John i. 1, τοῦ Λόγου τῆς ζωῆς.

And there is much that is personal here ascribed to the Λόγος. How can what is not personal be said to give an Inheritance? So Ammonius, who, from the addition of the participle δυναμένῳ in the singular, deduces an argument for the Unity of the Two Persons in one Godhead, as follows;

Δέκνυσιν, ὅτι ὁ Πατὴρ καὶ Θεὸς καὶ ὁ τοῦτον υἱὸς Ἰησοῦς, ὁ Θεοῦ Λόγος ἐνεῖσι (read ἐν εἶσιν, unum sunt)· οὐ γὰρ εἶπε, τοῖς δυναμένοις πληθυντικῶς, ἀλλ' ἐνικῶ ὀνόματι τὴν μοναδικὴν οὐσίαν ἐσήμανεν, εἰπὼν τῷ δυναμένῳ.

It is indeed taken for granted by many modern writers, that the title ὁ Λόγος is only applied by St. John to Christ. But this assertion may be questioned. See on Luke i. 2. Heb. iv. 12. James i. 18. 1 Pet. i. 23.

If St. John had been already at Ephesus, this mode of speech would have been very appropriate there, as a testimony to the unity of the doctrine of the two Apostles St. Paul and St. John. And even if St. John had not been there, yet, as St. Paul spoke under the guidance of the same Spirit as inspired St. John, he might and would very fitly bequeath this parting benediction to the Ephesian Presbyters, testifying his own adhesion to the great doctrines concerning the Logos, which were afterwards to be preached more fully at Ephesus by St. John.

—οἰκοδομῆσαι] to build. So A, B, C, D, E,—a better reading than that of Elz., ἐποικοδομῆσαι.

33. ἀργυρίου] silver. How natural was this disclaimer, now that St. Paul was carrying pecuniary funds to Jerusalem, collected at his instance in Galatia, Greece, and Italy for distribution to the poor Christians at Jerusalem! See 1 Cor. xvi. 1—3. 2 Cor. viii. 1—21; below, xxiv. 17, and on 2 Cor. viii. 18.

—ἱματισμοῦ] raiment. Oriental wealth consisted partly in "changes of raiment," Gen. xlv. 22. 2 Kings v. 5. 22. Hence the reference to the moth in warnings to the rich and worldly, Matt. vi. 19. James v. 2. Cp. Hackett.

34. ὑπηρέτησαν αἱ χεῖρες αὐταί] these hands ministered—. Compare his declaration, made at Ephesus, in 1 Cor. iv. 12, κοπιῶντες ἐργαζόμενοι ταῖς ἰδίαις χερσὶ; and see Paley, H. P. p. 37.

35. ὅτι αὐτὸς εἶπε] that He Himself said. A saying alluded to by S. Clemens Rom. i. 2, and in Const. Apostol. iv. 3; and one of the few sayings of our Lord preserved elsewhere than in the Gospels. Cp. Grabe, Spicileg. i. pp. 14. 327. Fabrice Cod. Apocryph. N. T. i. pp. 321—334, "De dictis Christi quæ in Evangeliiis non extant." Körner, de Sermonibus Christi ἀργάφοις, Lips. 1776; and Routh, R. S. i. 9, 10. 12. 29. 31. 471. 484.

—μακάριόν ἐστι μᾶλλον] it is blessed rather to give than to receive. So A, B, C, D, E, G.—Elz. places διδόναι before μᾶλλον. Another natural allusion to what was now uppermost in zz ch. 21. 5.

³⁶ ^{zz} Καὶ ταῦτα εἰπὼν, θείς τὰ γόνατα αὐτοῦ, σὺν πᾶσιν αὐτοῖς προσηύξατο. ³⁷ Ἰκανὸς δὲ κλαυθμὸς ἐγένετο πάντων· καὶ ἐπιπεσόντες ἐπὶ τὸν τράχηλον τοῦ Παύλου κατεφίλουν αὐτόν· ³⁸ ὁδυνώμενοι μάλιστα ἐπὶ τῷ λόγῳ ᾧ εἰρήκει, ὅτι οὐκέτι μέλλουσι τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ θεωρεῖν. Προέπεμπον δὲ αὐτὸν εἰς τὸ πλοῖον.

XXI. ¹ Ὡς δὲ ἐγένετο ἀναχθῆναι ἡμᾶς ἀποσπασθέντας ἀπ' αὐτῶν, εὐθυδρομήσαντες ἤλθομεν εἰς τὴν Κῶ, τῇ δὲ ἐξῆς εἰς τὴν Ῥόδον, κακέιθεν εἰς Πάταρα. ² Καὶ εὐρόντες πλοῖον διαπερῶν εἰς Φοινίκην, ἐπιβάντες ἀνήχθημεν. ³ Ἀναφανέντες δὲ τὴν Κύπρον, καὶ καταλιπόντες αὐτὴν εὐώνυμον, ἐπλέομεν εἰς Συρίαν, καὶ κατήχθημεν εἰς Τύρον· ἐκέισε γὰρ τὸ πλοῖον ἦν ἀποφορτιζόμενον τὸν γόμον.

⁴ ^a Ἀνευρόντες δὲ τοὺς μαθητὰς ἐπεμείναμεν αὐτοῦ ἡμέρας ἑπτὰ· οἵτινες τῷ Παύλῳ ἔλεγον διὰ τοῦ Πνεύματος, μὴ ἀναβαίνειν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα. ⁵ ^b Ὅτε δὲ ἐγένετο ἐξαρτίσαι ἡμᾶς τὰς ἡμέρας, ἐξελθόντες ἐπορευόμεθα, προπεμπόντων ἡμᾶς πάντων, σὺν γυναιξὶ καὶ τέκνοις ἕως ἔξω τῆς πόλεως· καὶ θέντες τὰ γόνατα ἐπὶ τὸν αἰγιαλὸν προσευξάμενοι ⁶ ἀψησπασάμεθα ἀλλήλους, καὶ ἀνέβημεν εἰς τὸ πλοῖον, ἐκεῖνοι δὲ ὑπέστρεψαν εἰς τὰ ἴδια. ⁷ Ἡμεῖς δὲ τὸν πλοῖον διανύσαντες ἀπὸ Τύρου κατηντήσαμεν εἰς Πτολεμαῖδα· καὶ ἀσπασάμενοι τοὺς ἀδελφούς, ἐμείναμεν ἡμέραν μίαν παρ' αὐτοῖς.

⁸ ^c Τῇ δὲ ἐπαύριον ἐξελθόντες ἤλθομεν εἰς Καισάρειαν· καὶ εἰσελθόντες εἰς τὸν οἶκον Φιλίππου τοῦ εὐαγγελιστοῦ, ὄντος ἐκ τῶν ἑπτὰ, ἐμείναμεν παρ' αὐτῷ· ⁹ ^d τοῦτ' ὡς δὲ ἦσαν θυγατέρες παρθέναι τέσσαρες προφητεύουσαι. ¹⁰ ^e Ἐπιμενόντων δὲ ἡμέρας πλείους κατῆλθέ τις ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰουδαίας προφήτης ὀνόματι Ἀγαβός· ¹¹ ^f καὶ ἔλθων πρὸς ἡμᾶς, καὶ ἄρας τὴν ζώνην τοῦ Παύλου, δήσας ἑαυτοῦ τοὺς πόδας καὶ τὰς χεῖρας εἶπε, Τάδε λέγει τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, Τὸν

a ch. 20. 23.

& ver. 12.

b ch. 20. 36.

c ch. 6. 5.

& 8. 26, 40.

Eph. 4. 11.

2 Tim. 4. 5.

d Joel 2. 28.

ch. 2. 17.

e ch. 11. 28.

f ch. 20. 23.

& ver. 33.

& 24. 27.

St. Paul's mind,—the purpose of his present journey to Jerusalem, viz. to succour the poor Christians there, with the bounty which he had collected, and was carrying with him. See v. 33.

³⁶ θεῖς τὰ γόνατα] having kneeled down. See Dan. vi. 10. Luke xxii. 41. Acts ix. 40; xxi. 5. Cp. Eph. iii. 14.

³⁷ κατεφίλουν] they were earnestly kissing him. Κατεφίλουν is a stronger expression than φίλουν, and marks also continuance by the imperfect tense, "deosculabantur eum."

The outward act was similar to that described by the same word Matt. xxvi. 49; but how different was the inward affection!

A transposition has been adopted here, ικανὸς δὲ κλαυθμὸς, from A, B, D, E, for the reading of Elz., ικανὸς δὲ ἐγένετο κλ.

³⁸ θεωρεῖν] St. Paul himself uses ὁπτοιμαί, v. 25, a more modest word. He would not say that his own πρόσωπον was ἔξιν θεωρίας. Cp. on John xvi. 16, and the nice shade of distinction between βλέπω and θεωρῶ in John xx. 5, 6.

CH. XXI. 3. ἀναφανέντες τὴν Κύπρον] having discovered Cyprus. A nautical expression, ἀναφανείσαν ἔχοντες; as sailors say, having raised the land. The opposite is ἀποκρύπτειν γῆν. See note on xxvii. 27. Cp. Gal. ii. 7, πεπλίστενται τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, and Rom. iii. 2. 1 Cor. ix. 17. Winer, § 39, p. 233.

— Τύρον] The mention of a Christian Church at Tyre, and of St. Paul's visit to it, suggests a reference to the prophecy, "Behold ye the Philistines also, and they of Tyre, with the Moabites, lo, there was He born." (Ps. lxxxvii. 4.) Cp. Ps. xlv. 12, and see above on viii. 26.

Perhaps the seeds scattered by the Divine Sower Himself on the border-land of Tyre and Sidon (Matt. xv. 21. Mark vii. 24), were now bearing fruit.

— ἀποφορτιζόμενον] Thither the ship was on its course, to unload its freight. Cp. Winer, § 45, p. 312.

⁴ ἀνευρόντες τοὺς μαθητὰς] having found out the disciples,—an intimation that they were either not very numerous, or were not publicly known.

— διὰ τοῦ Πνεύματος] through the Spirit. Cp. δεδεμένους τῷ Πνεύματι (xx. 22). This is explained by v. 11. The Holy Spirit revealed to them that he would be bound there (see xx. 23); and they, acting on this intimation, dissuaded him from going to Jerusalem. But the Spirit had done more than this for St. Paul. The Holy Spirit had not only foreshown to him the future, but had also revealed to him how to act under the circumstances foreshown. The Holy Spirit had bound him to go to Jerusalem

(xx. 22, where see note), even though he was to be bound there; and therefore he went (see xx. 24, and below, xxi. 11—13). And at length those persons who had foretold his bonds, acquiesced in his resolution to go, as divinely inspired, and said, "the Lord's will (not ours) be done!" (v. 14.) The prophecy concerning his bonds was fulfilled. And the Lord assured St. Paul, in a vision at Jerusalem, that he had rightly understood and obeyed His will in going up to Jerusalem, xxiii. 11.

⁵ αἰγιαλόν] the sandy shore. Acts xxvii. 39. Cp. xx. 36. The place of this holy and affecting farewell was shown many centuries afterwards; "Hodie monstratur in arenis locus, ubi pariter orabant." (Bede.)

⁶ ἀψησπασάμεθα] we gave a parting embrace to. Cp. the use of the preposition ἀπο in ἀποταξάμενος, Acts xviii. 18. 21. Elz. has προσηυξάμεθα καὶ ἀσπασάμενοι. But the reading in the text is authorized by some of the best MSS.

⁷ Πτολεμαῖδα] Ptolemais. Accho (Judges i. 31); still so called by Arabs, and Acre, or St. Jean d'Acre, by Europeans.

⁸ ἐξελθόντες] Elz. adds ὁ περὶ τὸν Παῦλον, which is not in A, B, C, E, and is probably a gloss.

— Φιλίππου τοῦ εὐαγγελιστοῦ] Philip the Evangelist, called here "one of the seven;" i. e. Philip the Deacon; see on Acts viii. 5, and the statements of Isidorus and S. Jerome, quoted by Tillemont, Mém. ii. 30. Hence Ammonius says here, "it was lawful for a Deacon to live as a married man." On Philip's connexion with Cæsarea, see viii. 40.

This was the third time Paul was at Cæsarea. See ix. 30; xviii. 22.

It is now prophesied at Cæsarea, that St. Paul would be bound; and with a special providence, for he was to be brought to Cæsarea a prisoner, and to remain there in custody for two years, xxiii. 33; xxiv. 27.

— ὄντος] Elz. prefixes τοῦ, which is not in A, B, C, E, H, and numerous Cursives. Cp. Winer, p. 122.

¹⁰ ἡμέρας πλείους] several days; but he was hastening to Jerusalem (see xx. 16), not, therefore, 'many days.'

— Ἀγαβός] Agabus. See xi. 28.

¹¹ δήσας ἑαυτοῦ] Elz. has δήσας τε αὐτοῦ. But δήσας ἑαυτοῦ is the reading of A, B, C, D, E, and many Cursives and Versions. Agabus bound his own hands (not St. Paul's) with St. Paul's girdle.

— τοὺς πόδας καὶ τὰς χεῖρας] his feet and hands. So B, C, D, E, and many Cursives and Versions. Elz. has τὰς χεῖρας καὶ ἄνδρα, οὗ ἐστιν ἡ ζώνη αὐτή, οὕτω δήσουσιν ἐν Ἱερουσαλὴμ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, καὶ παραδώσουσιν εἰς χεῖρας ἐθνῶν. ¹² ^g Ὡς δὲ ἠκούσαμεν ταῦτα, παρεκα- ^g Matt. 16. 22. λούμεν ἡμεῖς τε καὶ οἱ ἐντόπιοι, τοῦ μὴ ἀναβαίνειν αὐτὸν εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ. ¹³ ^h Τότε ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Παῦλος, τί ποιεῖτε κλαίοντες καὶ συνθρύπτοντες μοῦ τὴν ^h ch. 20. 24. καρδίαν; ἐγὼ γὰρ οὐ μόνον δεθῆναι, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀποθανεῖν εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ ἐτοίμως ἔχω ὑπὲρ τοῦ ὀνόματος τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ. ¹⁴ ⁱ Μὴ πειθομένου δὲ ⁱ Matt. 6. 10. Luke 11. 2. & 22. 42. αὐτοῦ, ἡσυχάσαμεν εἰπόντες, Τοῦ Κυρίου τὸ θέλημα γενέσθω. ¹⁵ Μετὰ δὲ τὰς ἡμέρας ταύτας ἐπισκευασάμενοι ἀνεβαίνομεν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα. ¹⁶ Συνῆλθον δὲ καὶ τῶν μαθητῶν ἀπὸ Καισαρείας σὺν ἡμῖν, ἄγοντες παρ' ᾧ ^ξ ξενισθῶμεν Μνάσωνί τινι Κυπρίῳ, ἀρχαίῳ μαθητῇ. ¹⁷ Γενομένων δὲ ἡμῶν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, ἀσμένως ἀπεδέξαντο ἡμᾶς οἱ ἀδελφοί. ¹⁸ ^k Τῇ δὲ ἐπιούσῃ εἰσῆει ὁ Παῦλος σὺν ἡμῖν πρὸς Ἰάκωβον· πάντες τε παρ- ^k ch. 15. 13. Gal. 1. 19. εγένοντο οἱ πρεσβύτεροι. ¹⁹ Καὶ ἀσπασάμενος αὐτοὺς ἐξηγεῖτο καθ' ἐν ἑκα- στον ὧν ἐποίησεν ὁ Θεὸς ἐν τοῖς ἔθνεσι διὰ τῆς διακονίας αὐτοῦ. ²⁰ ^l Οἱ δὲ ^l Rom. 10. 2. Gal. 1. 14. ἀκούσαντες ἐδόξαζον τὸν Θεόν, εἰπόν τε αὐτῷ, Θεωρεῖς, ἀδελφε, πόσαι μυριάδες εἰσὶν ἐν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις τῶν πεπιστευκότων· καὶ πάντες ζηλωταὶ τοῦ νόμου ὑπάρχουσι. ²¹ Κατηχήθησαν δὲ περὶ σοῦ, ὅτι ἀποστασίαν διδάσκεις ἀπὸ Μωϋσέως τοὺς κατὰ τὰ ἔθνη πάντας Ἰουδαίους, λέγων μὴ περιτέμνειν αὐτοὺς τοὺς πόδας: but it is hardly probable that this would have been altered into the other reading. Such symbolical actions had been connected with the delivery of prophecies in the Old Testament. Isa. xx. 2. Jer. xiii. 1. 11. Ezek. iv. 1. (Grotius.) Cp. Jerem. xxvii. 2; xxviii. 10. 12. Ezek. xii. 3; xxiv. 3.

¹² ἡμεῖς] we: even St. Luke himself. A modest confession, and a proof of truth. We would have dissuaded Paul from going, but he would not yield to us, and went; and we acknowledged that what he did was the Lord's will, v. 14.

— τοῦ μὴ ἀναβαίνειν] As to the construction compare xv. 20.

^{13, 14} τότε—γενέσθω] See on v. 14.

¹³ μοῦ] of me, emphatic.

¹⁴ τὸ θέλημα γενέσθω] the Will of the Lord be done! From the Lord's Prayer; perhaps an intimation of its general use. Cp. 2 Tim. iv. 18, and see Blunt, Lectures, p. 38, and above on Matt. vi. 9, and below on 1 Pet. i. 17, and Mr. Humphry here.

Also comp. our Lord's words in His Agony, as recorded by St. Luke himself, Luke xxii. 42.

¹⁵ ἐπισκευασάμενοι] So A, B, E, G, and numerous Cursives. — Elz. ἀποσκευασάμενοι. D has ἀποταξάμενοι. The sense is, 'having packed up,' 'having taken what was necessary for the journey.' (Chrys., Æcumen.) Vulg. renders it 'preparati,' and other Versions give a like meaning, and Hesych. interprets it by εὐτρεπισθέντες.

The word seems to be introduced, in order to show that, though St. Paul had full intimation of sufferings and imprisonment at Jerusalem, yet he proceeded thither with calmness, and in a sober and orderly manner, without neglecting any common duties, such as prudence might suggest. Compare his request for his "cloke and parchments" just before his martyrdom (2 Tim. iv. 13). There are no symptoms of a heated imagination, or of a fanatical enthusiasm, or a reckless excitement, in his character and demeanour, in the most trying circumstances.

¹⁶ ἄγοντες παρ' ᾧ ξενισθῶμεν] bringing with them a certain Mnason a Cyprian—with whom we should lodge, i. e. at Jerusalem. Objections have been made by several recent Expositors to this translation of the Vulgate, "adducetes [secum] apud quem hospitaremur Mnasonem," which is the sense adopted by the English Authorized Version;

It has been said, that the true meaning is,—"conducting us to the house of Mnason (at Jerusalem), with whom we should lodge." In this case the construction would either be ἄγοντες (ἡμᾶς) Μνάσων, which is Winer's opinion, § 31, p. 192, or by attraction, ἄγοντες ἡμᾶς παρὰ Μνάσωνα παρ' ᾧ ξενισθῶμεν. See Meyer here, and Winer, § 24, p. 149, and others;

But perhaps in this case, as in many others, the older interpretation (which, as Winer allows, p. 192, is unexceptionable, grammatically) is the true one. St. Luke's design in mentioning this incident seems to be this. At first the Christians of Cæsarea attempted to dissuade St. Paul from going to Jerusalem (v. 12); but on his earnest expostulation with them, they desisted from their entreaties, and said, "the Lord's will be done" (v. 14). And not only so, but some of these disciples of Cæsarea sped him on his journey to Jerusalem, and accompanied him, bringing with them a person with whom he and his companions would lodge at Jerusalem, Mnason of Cyprus. Thus they, who at first would have deterred him from going to Jerusalem, were prevailed upon by St. Paul (such was his courage and constancy, and such his influence over them) to provide facilities for his journey thither, and for his reception there;

It was also an honourable circumstance to Mnason of Cyprus, that though he had heard, no doubt, from the men of Cæsarea that the Spirit had revealed that St. Paul would be made a prisoner in Jerusalem, yet he was willing to accompany him thither (a distance of about eighty miles), and to afford him and his companions a lodging there.

These considerations seem to be lost sight of in the modern interpretation, which is also liable to the objection, that, according to it, St. Paul is said to be brought to Mnason to lodge, before his arrival at Jerusalem, which is not related till the following verse.

— ἀρχαίῳ μαθητῇ] an original disciple, i. e. from the first preaching of the Gospel. See on xv. 7, and xi. 15. Such a person was likely to have a house at Jerusalem.

¹⁸ πρὸς Ἰάκωβον] to James. For the use of πρὸς see on xvi. 40. On the position held by St. James the Lord's brother at Jerusalem, see xii. 17. A distinction here is made between James, the Bishop of Jerusalem, and "all the Elders, or Presbyters." (Chrys.) "Videtur Jacobus convocasse collegium Presbyterorum." (Rosenmüller.)

The Bishop of Jerusalem is here presented to the view, surrounded by all his Presbyters, who are the "Concilium Episcopi," (see Hieron. in Esa. iii. Bingham, ii. 19. 7.) for the reception of St. Paul and his friends, and for joint counsel and advice. An Apostolic precedent for the practice of the Church in all ages. See above, xv. 2. 4. 6. 22, and particularly xv. 23.

¹⁹ ὁ Θεός] God. He does not say what he had done, but what God had done by his ministry; and (v. 20) they glorified not him, but God. (Ammon.)

²⁰ ἐν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις] So A, B, C, E.—Elz. Ἰουδαίων. This variation is noticeable. It is not said that many myriads of the Jews believe, &c.; but that there are many myriads of believers among the Jews, and they are all zealous for the Law.

— πεπιστευκότων] of those who have made public profession of faith in the Gospel, and hold that faith. See viii. 13.

²¹ κατηχήθησαν] They have been studiously indoctrinated to believe, ἐδιδάχθησαν καὶ ἐπίστευσαν (Chrys.), cp. v. 24; such a misrepresentation was not unlikely to be made by Jews, concerning what St. Paul had taught not long since in his Epistles to the Galatians and Romans. Cp. Paley, H. P. pp. 24—26.

— διδάσκεις—Ἰουδαίους] thou teachest Jews. It was not true that St. Paul taught Jews not to circumcise their children (see vii. 8); but it was true that he taught that circumcision was not to be enforced by Jews on Gentiles.

What he did now, at the suggestion of the Bishop and Presbyters of Jerusalem, was to refute the former assertion, not to disavow the latter. See vv. 24. 26.

τὰ τέκνα, μηδὲ τοῖς ἔθεσι περιπατεῖν. ²² Τί οὖν ἐστι; πάντως δεῖ πλήθος
 m ch. 18. 18. συναλθεῖν· ἀκούσονται γὰρ ὅτι ἐλήλυθας. ²³ ^m Τοῦτο οὖν ποιήσον, ὃ σοι
 Num. 6. 2, 13, 18, λέγομεν. Εἰσὶν ἡμῖν ἄνδρες τέσσαρες εὐχὴν ἔχοντες ἐφ' ἑαυτῶν ²⁴ τούτους παραλαβὼν ἀγνίσθητι σὺν αὐτοῖς, καὶ δαπάνησον ἐπ' αὐτοῖς, ἵνα ξυρήσωνται

22. πλήθος] a multitude must needs come together.

23. εἰσὶν ἡμῖν] This was often the case on the approach of great Festivals, e. g. that of Pentecost, which was now at hand. Nazarite Vows were made terminable then, in order that they who had taken them might join with others in the joyful celebration of that Festival. Cp. Lightfoot on Acts ii. 13, and on 1 Cor. xi. 14, where he observes, that even Jews who were not Nazarites were accustomed to cut their hair in honour of the feasts.

— εὐχὴν ἔχοντες ἐφ' ἑαυτῶν] having upon them a vow of Nazariteship, that is, of separation from the world to God. See above, on xviii. 18.

24. ἀγνίσθητι σὺν αὐτοῖς] be thou a Nazarite with them; join thyself to them in their vow of abstinence or separation, and of dedication to God.

It has, indeed, been said by some, that St. Paul only paid the charges of the four Nazarites (v. 23), but was not himself under the Vow of a Nazarite;

But the word ἀγνίσθητι here, and the other kindred words used in this narrative, prove that he associated himself with them in the vow itself.

The word ἀγνίζω is the word used by the LXX for נָזַר (Nazar), in Numb. vi. 3, and ἀγνισμός for נֶזֶר (Nezer), Nazireatus. The best explanation, therefore, of the word ἀγνίσθητι and ἀγνισθεῖς (v. 26), and ἀγνισμός (v. 26), is to be derived from the use of those words by the LXX in the chapter concerning the Nazarite Vow, Numb. vi. 3, 4, ἀπὸ οἴνου ἀγνισθήσεται, he shall keep himself separate as a Nazarite from wine πάσας τῆς ἡμέρας τῆς εὐχῆς αὐτοῦ, which is expressed in v. 5 by πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας τοῦ ἀγνισμοῦ, and v. 8, πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας τῆς εὐχῆς ἅγιος ἔσται Κυρίῳ.

It is probable that St. Paul was already under a vow of Nazariteship; and was advised to join himself as such with these four Nazarites. See xviii. 18, and below, v. 27.

The knowledge that he had not long since voluntarily taken on himself a Nazarite's vow (xviii. 18), was enough to suggest the recommendation here made to him by St. James, and the Presbyters of the Church of Jerusalem.

Origen (in Ep. ad Rom. lib. ii. 13) speaks of St. Paul as having offered 'sacrificia purificationis,' and S. Jerome (Epist. ad Augustin. Ep. 74) supposes St. Paul to have assumed the condition of a Nazarite, "obtulisse sacrificia, et exercuisse nudipedalia;" and so Augustine, Ep. 82.

The reason of St. Paul's compliance is well stated by Augustine (Epist. ad Hieron. 82), who observes, that by his practice with regard to the ceremonies of the Levitical Law, St. Paul taught "nec Judæos tunc ab eis tanquam a nefariis prohibendos, nec Gentiles ad ea tanquam necessaria compellendos."

"Paul became (says Isidore in Caten. p. 352) a Jew to the Jews, when he made himself a Nazarite in the Temple, and offered oblations; and, on the same principle, he circumcised Timothy, and sent him to preach to the Jews, thus cancelling circumcision by means of circumcision itself." So also Œcumenius, who says that "Paul underwent the tonsure, and complied with the Law." See also below, note on v. 26.

That he engaged in the vow of a Nazarite, has therefore, it seems, been rightly concluded by most later Expositors, e. g. Grotius, Rosenmüller, Olshausen, Meyer, Baumgarten, Hackett, Alford, and others.

There was a special reason, why St. Paul, a Christian Apostle, should engage in a vow of a Nazarite. That Vow pledged the person who took it to abstain from all strong drink. And he who was known to be under the vow of a Nazarite, was known to be living a life of abstinence. The sight of the Nazarite's locks would proclaim this.

St. Paul had been converted by a heavenly Vision. He had Revelations in Arabia, and a Trance in the temple at Jerusalem (Acts ix. 4; xxii. 6. 17; xxvi. 12. 1 Cor. xv. 8. 2 Cor. xii. 2);

He relied much on the arguments thence drawn, in his public addresses to the People of Jerusalem (xxii. 6. 17), and to Agrippa (xxvi. 12);

Let it be recollected, that the Jews attempted to refute the evidence of the miracle of Pentecost, by a scornful insinuation, "These men are full of new wine" (Acts ii. 13). It was very expedient that St. Paul, whose conversion was miraculous, and who was favoured with an "abundance of Revelations" (2 Cor. xii. 7), should be able to meet the objection, which would in all probability be raised against him, that he was under a strong mental excitement, and that he was inflamed by enthusiasm and deluded by fanaticism.

One of the best refutations of such an insinuation, and one which would have most weight with the Jews, would be found in the voluntary assumption of the Vow of a Nazarite. This would show, that like the Baptist, whom the Jews contrasted with Christ, whom they dared to call a wine-bibber (Matt. xi. 18, 19), he was living an abstemious and austere life, that his judgment was cool, his mind calm, and, as he himself says, that the words which he spake when describing his own Conversion, were words of truth and soberness (xxvi. 25).

Consequently, though we hear it alleged by Festus against him, that "much learning made him mad" (xxvi. 24), we never hear it surmised, that he was labouring under physical or intellectual excitement.

Thus, in his Christian prudence, St. Paul made the ceremonial Vows of the Levitical Law subsidiary to the diffusion of the saving Doctrines of Evangelical Truth.

Such advice as that which is here proffered by St. James, came very appropriately from him, who is described by Hegesippus (cp. Euseb. ii. 23) as conforming in his own person to the usages of a Nazarite; οὗτος ἐκ κοιλίας μητρὸς αὐτοῦ ἅγιος ἦν· οἶνον καὶ σίκερα οὐκ ἔπιεν, ξυρὸν ἐπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ οὐκ ἀνέβη, — a passage which affords an interesting illustration and confirmation of the narrative of St. Luke.

Perhaps, also, these characteristics of St. James may have pointed him out as specially fit to occupy the Episcopal seat at Jerusalem, as a person most conciliatory to the Jews.

The following particulars concerning a Nazarite's Vow, are from Lightfoot (i. p. 1092. On the Temple, chap. xviii.). Referring to the Talmud (tract. Nazir, per. 1), he says, "Nazarism was most ordinarily for thirty days, though sometimes it was for years, and sometimes for term of life. He whose vow was expired was to bring three beasts, one for a burnt-offering, another for a sin-offering, and a third for a peace-offering (Nazir 6). If he polled his head in the country, as Paul did at Cenchreæ, he was to bring his hair and burn it under the caldron, where his peace-offering was boiling, which was in this place of the Temple that we are speaking of (i. e. at the s.e. angle of the Temple).

"The Jews in the Treatise (of the Talmud) alleged in the Margin (i. e. the Treatise Nazir), speak of 'a Samson Nazarite' and 'an everlasting Nazarite,' not but that Samson was a Nazarite always, but they use this distinction in reference to the manner of the Vow-making. He that took on him to be a Nazarite like Samson was, saying, 'Behold, I will be a Nazarite like Samson,' or 'like the son of Manoah,' or 'like the husband of Delilah,' or 'like him that carried away the gates of Azzah,' or 'like him whose eyes the Philistines put out,' such an one might never cut his hair, but it must ever grow upon him; and such a Nazarite did Absalom take upon him to be, but he was forced to cut his hair once every year, it was so heavy. But he that was a Nazarite everlasting (that is, that took upon him Nazarism upon other terms, as he that said, 'I will be a Nazarite according to the number of the hairs of my head,' or 'the dust of the Earth,' or 'sand of the sea-shore'), he might poll his head once in thirty days.

"But he whose vow was expired, wheresoever he polled his hair, was to come to this place, and here to boil his Peace-offering, and to burn his hair; and the Priest took the shoulder as it boiled, and a cake, and a wafer of unleavened bread, and put all upon the hands of the Nazarite and waved them; and then was the Nazarite at liberty to drink wine, and to be defiled by the dead."

— δαπάνησον ἐπ' αὐτοῖς] expend money upon them,—do an act of charity in helping them to perform their vow, and to shave their heads, by contributing to the necessary expenses of the sacrifices to be offered; on which see Numb. vi. 13.

Thus refute the calumnies against thee, not by word, but by deed; and do this here, not in a Gentile city, but at Jerusalem, where no scandal will be given to thy Gentile converts by this compliance with the Law. (Chrys., Theophyl.)

It was usual for wealthier Jews to assist their poorer brethren in this way. Thus Agrippa showed his liberality at Jerusalem, in his regard for the Levitical Law, Joseph. xix. 6. 1, eis τὴν κεφαλὴν καὶ γνώσονται πάντες, ὅτι ὦν κατήχηνται περὶ σοῦ οὐδὲν ἔστιν, ἀλλὰ στοιχεῖς καὶ αὐτὸς φυλάσσω τὸν νόμον. ²⁵ Ἐπεὶ δὲ τῶν πεπιστευ- ^{n ch. 15. 20, 29.} κῶτων ἔθνων ἡμεῖς ἐπεστείλαμεν, κρίναντες μηδὲν τοιοῦτον τηρεῖν αὐτοὺς, εἰ μὴ φυλάσσεσθαι αὐτοὺς τό τε εἰδωλόθυτον καὶ αἷμα, καὶ πνικτὸν καὶ πορνείαν.

²⁶ Ὅτε ὁ Παῦλος παραλαβὼν τοὺς ἄνδρας τῇ ἐχομένῃ ἡμέρᾳ σὺν αὐτοῖς ^{o Num. 6. 13. ch. 24. 18.} ἀγνισθεὶς εἰσῆει εἰς τὸ ἱερόν, διαγγέλλων τὴν ἐκπλήρωσιν τῶν ἡμερῶν τοῦ ἀγνισμοῦ, ἕως οὗ προσηρέχθη ὑπὲρ ἐνὸς ἐκάστου αὐτῶν ἢ προσφορά.

²⁷ Ὡς δὲ ἔμελλον αἱ ἑπτὰ ἡμέραι συντελεῖσθαι, οἱ ἀπὸ τῆς Ἀσίας Ἰουδαῖοι θεασάμενοι αὐτὸν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ συνέχεον πάντα τὸν ὄχλον, καὶ ἐπέβαλον ἐπ' αὐτὸν τὰς χεῖρας ²⁸ κράζοντες, ^{p ch. 24. 6.} Ἄνδρες Ἰσραηλῖται, βοηθεῖτε· οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ ἄνθρωπος ὁ κατὰ τοῦ λαοῦ καὶ τοῦ νόμου καὶ τοῦ τόπου τούτου πάντας

Ἱεροσόλυμα ἔλθων χαριστηρίους ἐξεπλήρωσε θυσίας, οὐδὲν τῶν κατὰ νόμον ἀπολιπὼν διὰ καὶ Ναζιραίων ξυρᾶσθαι διέταξε μάλα συχνούς. Cp. B. J. ii. 15. 1.

The reason of this may appear from the specification of the sacrificial offerings required of a Nazarite, which were numerous and expensive. (See Numb. vi.)

— φυλάσσω] keeping. The accuracy of St. Luke's style is seen in the distinction he makes between φυλάσσω here and φυλάσσομαι in the following verse.

²⁶ σὺν αὐτοῖς ἀγνισθεὶς] having been separated and sanctified as a Nazarite with them. See above on v. 24; and cp. xxiv. 18, εὐρὸν με ἡγνισμένον ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ. — Ἐξυρᾶτο ὁ Παῦλος, οὐ τῆς γνώμης καταβαλλομένης, ἀλλὰ τῆς ἀγάπης συγκαταβαινούσης. 1 Cor. ix. 20. (Chrys., Theophyl.)

— διαγγέλλων τὴν ἐκπλήρωσιν τῶν ἡμερῶν τοῦ ἀγνισμοῦ, ἕως οὗ προσηρέχθη ὑπὲρ ἐνὸς ἐκάστου αὐτῶν ἢ προσφορά] announcing the fulfilment of the days of their Nazarite vow, until the (legal) offering was offered for each one of them.

That the ἐκπλήρωσις τῶν ἡμερῶν means the fulfilment of the days of the Nazarite vow, is evident from the passages in the Book of Numbers, according to the LXX, which describe the vow. See Numb. vi. 5, concerning the Nazarite's vow, ξυρὸν οὐκ ἐπελεύσεται ἐπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ, ἕως ἂν πληρωθῶσιν αἱ ἡμέραι, ὅσας ᾔθετο τῷ Κυρίῳ; and vi. 13, ἢ ἂν ἡμέρα πληρώσῃ ἡμέρας εὐχῆς αὐτοῦ, προσοίσει αὐτὸς. . . then the προσφοράι are specified; and then, v. 18, ξυρῆσεται ὁ νηγμένος παρὰ τὰς θύρας τῆς σκηνῆς τοῦ μαρτυρίου τὴν κεφαλὴν τῆς εὐχῆς αὐτοῦ. And then he shall burn his hair in the fire; and after he has shaven his head, the Priest shall take a part of the offering and place it in his hands, and offer it before the Lord. And so the ceremony was ended, and the vow was paid.

ἕως οὗ προσηρέχθη is rendered by Vulg. 'donec offerretur,' and by Engl. Vers. 'until an offering should be offered;' and this seems to be the correct rendering. See the examples of this structure in De Wette, Alford, and Kühner, § 846.

The sense appears to be this: St. Paul undertook to be the spokesman and paymaster of the four Nazarites. As such he took them with him to the Temple, and presented them to the Priests, and gave to the Priests the official notification that the term of their vow was expired; and made himself responsible for the payment of the fees for sacrifices to be offered, and services to be performed in the behalf of his presentees, before their heads could be shaved and they be released from their vow.

It is probable that this release could not be consummated immediately, nor indeed till a term of seven days (see v. 27) had expired after this announcement and presentation were made. This was reasonable. It was necessary, that inquiries should be made by the Priests as to the identity of the persons presented for release, and as to the fact of their having complied with the terms of their vow (by abstinence from wine, by non-pollution, and the other conditions) before the sacrifice could be rightly offered for them, and they be emancipated from their vow.

Hence the phrase ἕως οὗ. St. Paul was their representative, and solicitor of their cause; and he must continue to act in this capacity till the seven days were completed, and the Priests were satisfied that all the requisites of the vow had been duly fulfilled.

This is confirmed by what he himself states (xxiv. 18), that they who arrested him, nearly seven days after (xxi. 27), "found him purified (as a Nazarite) in the Temple;" i. e. he was in attendance there, promoting the cause of the four poor Nazarites, as well as his own, with a view to their release from the vow.

²⁷ αἱ ἑπτὰ ἡμέραι] the seven days. Some Expositors interpret these seven days as "the feast week of Pentecost" (Wieseler, 109. Baumgarten, ii. 448).

VOL. I.—PART II.

But the Feast of Pentecost lasted only one day (Acts ii. 1), though later Jews extended it to two (Jahn, § 352. Winer, ii. 243).

The true interpretation seems to be, "the seven days," which were required to intervene between the notice given to the Priests of the expiration of the Vow, and the consummation of the Release from it.

This opinion is confirmed by Anthonius in Catenâ, p. 351, and Theophylact, p. 156, who says, ἔθος ἦν τοὺς ἔχοντας εὐχὴν κείρεσθαι τὴν κεφαλὴν μετὰ τὸ ἀγνισθῆναι, καὶ οὕτως ἐπὶ ἑπτὰ ἡμέρας ποιεῖν προσφορὰν ὑπὲρ ἐαυτῶν.

Some reasons for this interval have been suggested in the preceding note.

Why was it for seven days? Probably, because this was a stated period for purifications (Exod. xix. 37. Levit. xii. 2; xiii. 5; xiv. 8; xv. 19. Numb. xii. 14; xix. 14. Ezek. xliii. 26).

And in the Law concerning Nazarites (Numb. vi. 9), if a person under a Nazarite Vow had incurred a ceremonial pollution, he could not shave his head immediately, and begin his term afresh, but he must wait seven days, till the offerings could be offered for him, and his head be shaved, and then he was restored to the Nazaritic state, and he began his vow anew. So at the close of the Vow, it appears to have been required by the Priests that he should wait seven days, till he could be released from this Nazaritic state, and be declared by them to have kept himself pure, ἀγνός, in it, and be allowed to have the requisite offerings made in his behalf.

St. Paul himself, as already observed, seems to have been under a Nazarite's vow when he came to Jerusalem.

"The seven days" here mentioned could not have been the term of his vow, as some have supposed. This was too short a time for such a Vow. In the whole Treatise in the Mishna, concerning Nazarites (tom. iii. 146—178, ed. Surenhusii), there is no mention of so short a term, nor of any period less than thirty days.

"Potuit videri Paulus antè dudum votum Nazareni nuncupasse," says Lorinus, p. 782. Cp. Lewin, 661—665.

On a former occasion, when he was under a Nazarite vow, he had said that "he must by all means keep the next feast (which was Pentecost) at Jerusalem" (xviii. 21).

The reason probably then was, because he was under that Vow. And now it is said, in like manner, that he hastened to be at Jerusalem, if possible, on the day of Pentecost (xx. 16). Perhaps the reason in both cases was the same.

It was usual for persons ἀγνίζεν ἐαυτοὺς, to purify themselves, before the great Festivals. See John xi. 55.

St. Paul was still under a Nazarite vow when he was arrested in the Temple, as he himself asserts, xxiv. 18, εὐρὸν με ἡγνισμένον ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ. This is also confirmed by what he states, xxiv. 17, that he had come to Jerusalem, bringing not only alms but offerings, προσφορὰς, the same word as used above concerning the Nazarites, v. 26.

The "seven days" between the διαγγελία, or announcement to the Priests, and the προσφορά, were nearly completed, when he was arrested in the Temple; and they who charged him with breaking the Law, and dishonouring the Temple, were in fact guilty of preventing him from keeping the Law, and enabling others to do so; and thus they themselves did what they charged him with doing,—they violated the Temple and the Law.

— οἱ ἀπὸ τῆς Ἀσίας Ἰουδαῖοι] the Jews from Asia. St. Paul's compliance with the Law appears to have satisfied the Jews of Jerusalem, but not those of Asia, who had come up for the Feast, and who had been disappointed by his escape from their hands at Ephesus. They assailed him while showing his charity and his respect for the Law, which they charged him with violating.

πανταχῇ διδάσκων· ἔτι τε καὶ Ἑλληνας εἰσήγαγεν εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν, καὶ κεκοίνωκε τὸν ἅγιον τόπον τούτον. ²⁹ Ἦσαν γὰρ προεωρακότες Τρόφιμον τὸν Ἐφέσιον ἐν τῇ πόλει σὺν αὐτῷ, ὃν ἐνόμιζον ὅτι εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν εἰσήγαγεν ὁ Παῦλος. ³⁰ Ἐκινήθη τε ἡ πόλις ὅλη, καὶ ἐγένετο συνδρομὴ τοῦ λαοῦ· καὶ ἐπιλαβόμενοι τοῦ Παύλου εἵλκον αὐτὸν ἔξω τοῦ ἱεροῦ· καὶ εὐθέως ἐκλείσθησαν αἱ θύραι.

³¹ Ζητούντων δὲ αὐτὸν ἀποκτείνειν, ἀνέβη φάσις τῷ χιλιάρχῳ τῆς σπείρης, ὅτι ὅλη συγχύνεται Ἱερουσαλὴμ· ³² ὃς ἐξαυτῆς παραλαβὼν στρατιώτας καὶ ἑκατοντάρχας κατέδραμεν ἐπ' αὐτούς. Οἱ δὲ ἰδόντες χιλιάρχον καὶ τοὺς στρατιώτας ἐπαύσαντο τύπτοντες τὸν Παῦλον. ³³ Τότε ἐγγίσας ὁ χιλιάρχος ἐπελάβετο αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐκέλευσε δεθῆναι ἀλύσει δις καὶ ἐπυνθάνετο τίς εἴη, καὶ τί ἐστὶ πεποιηκώς. ³⁴ Ἄλλοι δὲ ἄλλο τι ἐπεφώνουν ἐν τῷ ὄχλῳ· μὴ δυναμένου δὲ αὐτοῦ γινῶναι τὸ ἀσφαλές διὰ τὸν θόρυβον, ἐκέλευσεν ἄγεσθαι αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν παρεμβολήν. ³⁵ Ὅτε δὲ ἐγένετο ἐπὶ τοὺς ἀναβαθμοὺς, συνέβη βασιάζεσθαι αὐτὸν ὑπὸ τῶν στρατιωτῶν διὰ τὴν βίαν τοῦ ὄχλου· ³⁶ ἡκολούθει γὰρ τὸ πλῆθος τοῦ λαοῦ κρίζοντες, Αἶρε αὐτόν.

³⁷ Μέλλων τε εἰσάγεσθαι εἰς τὴν παρεμβολήν ὁ Παῦλος λέγει τῷ χιλιάρχῳ, Εἰ ἔξεστί μοι εἰπεῖν τι πρὸς σε; Ὁ δὲ ἔφη, Ἑλληνιστὶ γινώσκεις; ³⁸ οὐκ ἄρα σὺ εἶ ὁ Αἰγύπτιος ὁ πρὸ τούτων τῶν ἡμερῶν ἀναστατώσας καὶ ἐξαγαγὼν εἰς τὴν ἔρημον τοὺς τετρακισχιλίους ἄνδρας τῶν σικαρίων; ³⁹ Εἶπε δὲ ὁ Παῦλος, Ἐγὼ ἄνθρωπος μὲν εἰμι Ἰουδαῖος, Ταρσεὺς, τῆς Κιλικίας οὐκ ἀσήμου πόλεως πολίτης· δέομαι δέ σου, ἐπίτρεψόν μοι λαλήσαι πρὸς τὸν λαόν.

⁴⁰ Ἐπιτρέψαντος δὲ αὐτοῦ, ὁ Παῦλος ἐστὼς ἐπὶ τῶν ἀναβαθμῶν κατέσεισε τῇ χειρὶ τῷ λαῷ· πολλῆς δὲ σιγῆς γενομένης, προσεφώνησε τῇ Ἑβραϊδί

31. τῷ χιλιάρχῳ τῆς σπείρης] to the captain of the Roman Garrison,—Claudius Lysias,—in the castle or fortress of Antonia, built by Herod the Great, and called Antonia in honour of Mark Antony (Joseph. Ant. xv. 11. 4.)

See below, on v. 34.

Τὴν σπείρα, cohors, was properly 1000 men, or one-sixth of the Legio.

—συγχύνεται] is in confusion. So A, B, D.—Elz. συγέχυνται.

33. δεθῆναι] to be bound. See xii. 6. A fulfilment of the prophecy (xx. 23), and therefore an assurance to St. Paul that the Spirit which had spoken to him was true.

34. ἐπεφώνουν] were shouting out different answers. So A, B, D, E. See xii. 22.—Elz. ἐβδων.

—παρεμβολήν] the military garrison, or barracks, in the Castle of Antonia. See xxii. 24; xxiii. 16. 32. 35.

For a full history and description of the fortress of Antonia, see Robinson, i. pp. 431—435. Williams, Holy City, i. 99; ii. 403—411. Hewson, ii. 311. It was on the North-West side of the Temple-Area (Joseph. Ant. xv. 11. 4. B. J. i. 5. 4; v. 5. 8; vi. 2. 9), on a rocky hill; at each of its four corners was a lofty tower; it communicated by two flights of stairs with the northern and western arcades of the Temple-Area.

On one of these two flights St. Paul stood, when he addressed the people, who were in the Temple-Area below him.

36. αἶρε αὐτόν] Away with him! So they had cried against Christ, ἄρον, ἄρον, αὐτόν, σταύρωσον (John xix. 15), where St. Luke uses, as here, the present tense αἶρε (xxiii. 18). So the populace cried at Smyrna against Polycarp and the Christians (Mart. Polyc. 3. 9), αἶρε τοὺς ἁθέτους.

37. Ἑλληνιστὶ γινώσκεις;] dost thou know Greek? A question of surprise, suggested by hearing St. Paul address him in Greek, εἰ ἔξεστί μοι εἰπεῖν; Probably the Chief Captain could not speak Hebrew, and St. Paul had spoken to him, a Gentile, in Greek; but he spoke in Hebrew to the Jews, which they did not expect, any more than the chiliarch expected him to speak Greek (v. 40).

38. οὐκ ἄρα σὺ εἶ;] Rendered by some learned Expositors, 'Thou art not therefore, as I imagined, art thou?' (Winer, § 57, p. 453.) But Chrys., and other ancient Greek interpreters, render it, 'Art not thou then that Egyptian?' Hence Vulg., 'Nonne tu es?' and Engl. Vers., 'Art not thou?' Their authority is of great weight; and though the meaning they assign to the words would be rightly represented by ἄρ' οὐ in classical Greek, yet the Hellenistic usage may well have admitted such a natural combination as οὐκ ἄρα σὺ εἶ; 'Art not thou, therefore?' Cp. Hackett, p. 305.

—ὁ Αἰγύπτιος] the Egyptian. The false prophet who had led a vast multitude (Josephus says 30,000) to the Mount of Olives to see Jerusalem fall, and who was routed by Felix. See Joseph. B. J. ii. 13. 5. Ant. xx. 8. 6.

The Egyptian had escaped; hence the supposition of the chief captain, which seems to have been confirmed by hearing the Apostle speak Greek. The Greek language had become common in Egypt, in consequence of the conquests of Alexander and the Ptolemies, as the LXX Version, there made, shows.

The chief captain had perhaps heard the charges of some of the Jews against St. Paul, that he had spoken against their Holy Place and the Law; and this reminded him of the language of the Egyptian, who had prophesied that the City would fall; and who had been opposed by the citizens of Jerusalem, as St. Paul now was; and he had at first imagined that the Egyptian was now captured by them.

Perhaps also the Jews themselves, in order to exasperate the Romans, had identified him with the Egyptian. (Burton.)

—πρὸ τούτων τῶν ἡμερῶν] before these days. On this use of τούτων with ἡμερῶν see i. 5.

It appears from Josephus, that this Egyptian was routed in the reign of Nero, probably in the first year of his reign, A.D. 55. (Wieseler, p. 76.) The word τούτων indicates that this event was still recent in the memory of the chief captain, and therefore St. Paul's imprisonment was not long after that year.

—τῶν σικαρίων] the bandits, or assassins, from sica, seco (cut-throats). See Chrys., and Joseph. B. J. ii. 13. 3, ἕτερον εἶδος ληστῶν, οἱ καλούμενοι σικάριοι, and Ant. xx. 6. The fanaticism and ferocity of these zealots came to a height, and vented itself in the most barbarous outrages afterwards, in the siege of Jerusalem. See on Matt. xxiv. 15.

39. οὐκ ἀσήμου πόλεως] no mean city. Many of the coins of Tarsus bear the epigraphs ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΛΙΣ and ΑΥΤΟΝΟΜΟΣ. See Akermann, p. 56.

40. τῶν ἀναβαθμῶν] the steps which led down from the barracks and fortress of Antonia (v. 31. 35),—where he would have found refuge,—to the Temple-Area.

What spectacle could be more striking than this! Paul standing on the stairs of the Temple, bound with two chains, and speaking to the people of Jerusalem at the Feast of Pentecost. Chrys.

—κατέσεισε τῇ χειρὶ] made a motion of the hand, to keep διαλέκτῳ λέγων, XXII. ¹ Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί, καὶ πατέρες, ἀκούσατέ μου τῆς πρὸς ὑμᾶς νυνὶ ἀπολογίας.

² Ἀκούσαντες δὲ ὅτι τῇ Ἑβραϊδὶ διαλέκτῳ προσεφώνει αὐτοῖς, μᾶλλον παρεσχον ἡσυχίαν.

Καὶ φησιν, ³ Ἐγὼ εἰμι ἀνὴρ Ἰουδαῖος, γεγεννημένος ἐν Ταρσῷ τῆς Κιλικίας, ἀνατεθραμμένος δὲ ἐν τῇ πόλει ταύτῃ παρὰ τοὺς πόδας Γαμαλιήλ, πεπαιδευμένος κατὰ ἀκρίβειαν τοῦ πατρῷου νόμου, ζηλωτῆς ὑπάρχων τοῦ Θεοῦ, καθὼς πάντες ὑμεῖς ἐστε σήμερον· ⁴ ὃς ταύτην τὴν ὁδὸν ἐδίωξα ἄχρι θανάτου, δεσμεύων καὶ παραδιδούς εἰς φυλακὰς ἄνδρας τε καὶ γυναῖκας· ⁵ ὥς καὶ ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς μαρτυρεῖ μοι, καὶ πᾶν τὸ πρεσβυτέριον, παρ' ὧν καὶ ἐπιστολὰς δεξάμενος πρὸς τοὺς ἀδελφούς εἰς Δαμασκὸν ἐπορευόμην, ἄξων καὶ τοὺς ἐκέισε ὄντας δεδεμένους εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ, ἵνα τιμωρηθῶσιν. ⁶ Ἐγένετο δέ μοι πορευομένῳ καὶ ἐγγίζοντι τῇ Δαμασκῷ περὶ μεσημβρίαν, ἐξαίφνης ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ περιστράψαι φῶς ἱκανὸν περὶ ἐμέ. ⁷ Ἐπεσόν τε εἰς τὸ ἔδαφος, καὶ ἤκουσα φωνῆς λεγούσης μοι, Σαουλ, Σαουλ, τί με διώκεις; ⁸ Ἐγὼ δὲ ἀπεκρίθην, Τίς εἶ, κύριε; εἶπέ τε πρὸς με, Ἐγὼ εἰμι Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος, ὃν σὺ διώκεις. ⁹ Οἱ δὲ σὺν ἐμοὶ ὄντες τὸ μὲν φῶς ἐθέασαντο, καὶ ἔμβοβοι ἐγένοντο· τὴν δὲ φωνὴν οὐκ ἤκουσαν τοῦ λαλοῦντός μοι. ¹⁰ Εἶπον δέ, Τί ποιήσω, Κύριε; ὁ δὲ Κύριος εἶπε πρὸς με, Ἀναστὰς πορεύου εἰς Δαμασκόν· κακεῖ σοὶ λαληθήσεται περὶ πάντων ὧν τέτακταί σοι ποιῆσαι. ¹¹ Ὡς δὲ οὐκ ἐνέβλεπον ἀπὸ τῆς δόξης τοῦ φωτὸς ἐκείνου, χειραγωγούμενοι ὑπὸ τῶν συνόντων μοι ἦλθον εἰς Δαμασκόν. ¹² Ἀνανίας δέ τις, ἀνὴρ εὐσεβὴς κατὰ τὸν νόμον, μαρτυρούμενος ὑπὸ πάντων τῶν κατοικούντων Ἰουδαίων, ¹³ ἔλθων πρὸς με καὶ ἐπιστὰς εἶπέ μοι, Σαουλ ἀδελφέ, ἀνάβλεψον· κἀγὼ αὐτῇ τῇ ὥρᾳ ἀνέβλεψα εἰς αὐτόν. ¹⁴ Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν, Ὁ Θεὸς τῶν πατέρων ἡμῶν προεχειρίσατό σε γνῶναι τὸ θέλημα αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἰδεῖν τὸν Δίκαιον, καὶ ἀκοῦσαι φωνῆν ἐκ τοῦ στόματος αὐτοῦ· ¹⁵ ὅτι ἔση μάρτυς αὐτῷ πρὸς πάντας ἀνθρώπους, ὧν ἐώρακας καὶ ἤκουσας· ¹⁶ καὶ νῦν τί μέλλεις; ἀναστὰς βάπτισαι καὶ ἀπόλousαι τὰς ἁμαρτίας σου, ἐπικαλεσάμενος τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ.

a ch. 9. 11. & 21. 39.
2 Cor. 11. 22.
ch. 5. 34.
Gal. 1. 14.
b ch. 8. 3. & 9. 1. & 26. 9.
1 Cor. 15. 9.
Gal. 1. 13.
1 Tim. 1. 13.
c ch. 9. 2. & 26. 12.
d ch. 9. 3. & 26. 12.
1 Cor. 15. 8.
2 Cor. 12. 2.
e ch. 26. 14, 15.
f ch. 9. 7. Dan. 10. 7.
g ch. 9. 17.
h ch. 3. 14. & 7. 52.
ch. 26. 16.
1 John 2. 1.
i Matt. 3. 11. Mark 1. 4. Luke 3. 3.

down (κατὰ) the noise and passion of the crowd, and to produce silence;

“——— calidæ fecisse silentia turbæ
Majestate manūs.” (Pers. iv. 5.)

See above, xii. 17; xiii. 16; xix. 33. A very different movement from ἐκτείνas τὴν χεῖρα, xxvi. 1.

— Ἑβραϊδὶ διαλέκτῳ] See xxii. 2. Not γλώσσῃ, but διαλέκτῳ. See ii. 6. 8. The Syro-Chaldaic, in which St. Paul addressed the people, was a dialect rather than a language. He conciliates his audience by the dialect which he uses, τῇ συγγενεῖᾳ τῆς φωνῆς αὐτοῦς ἐπισπᾶται. (Chrys.)

CH. XXII. 1. ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί, καὶ πατέρες, ἀκούσατε] Men, brethren, and fathers hearken. A proœmium designed, it would seem, to show his hearers that he had St. Stephen in his thoughts, and to remind them of him who had begun his speech in their presence with the same words, vii. 2. Cp. below, vv. 20. 23.

2. ὅτι τ. Ἑ. δ. προσεφώνει αὐτοῖς] that he was speaking to them in the Hebrew tongue—which they did not expect him to do: he had been speaking to the chief Captain in Greek; see xxi. 37.

3. παρὰ τοὺς πόδας Γαμαλιήλ] at the feet of Gamaliel. The Hebrew Rabbis sat on an elevated seat, and their scholars at their feet. See above, iv. 35. Schoettgen, Hor. Hebr. p. 477. On Gamaliel see v. 34.

4. ταύτην τὴν ὁδόν] this way (see ix. 2), on which I myself am now going, and to which I would bring you,—a courageous profession of his Christianity. At the same time he addresses them as brethren, in order that they may not suppose that the Gospel is at variance with the Law. On this use of the word ὁδός see ix. 2.

— ἐδίωξα] I persecuted. St. Paul was then eager to bring them of “that way” bound to Jerusalem, to be put to death; he himself is now bound at Jerusalem for “that way.” So God adapts sufferings to sins, and yet he greatly blesses the Apostle in suffering those evils as a Confessor and Martyr, which he had before inflicted on others as a Persecutor.

5. ὥς καὶ ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς μαρτυρεῖ μοι] as also the High Priest beareth me witness. Ananias (see xxiii. 2), probably then one of the Sanhedrim, which had sent Saul. If St. Paul was converted in or before A.D. 35, it was Caiaphas who gave him the commission, and who was removed by Vitellius A.D. 36.

He was succeeded by Jonathan son of Annas; and after one year he was removed to make way for his brother Theophilus. (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 4. 3; 5. 3.) In A.D. 42, Simon son of Boëthrus was High Priest. (Joseph. xix. 6. 2.) In A.D. 43, Matthias son of Annas; and soon after him, Elionæus son of Cantheras. (Joseph. xix. 8. 1.) In A.D. 45, Joseph son of Kami (Joseph. xx. 1. 3); and soon after him, Ananias son of Nebedæus. (Joseph. xx. 5. 2.) See Chronological Table prefixed to this Volume, and below, xxiii. 2.

— πρὸς τοὺς ἀδελφούς] to the brethren, the Jewish authorities. The words are equivalent to πρὸς τὰς συναγωγὰς, to the synagogues, in ix. 2. See also xxviii. 21, which shows that οἱ ἀδελφοί was used by the Jews when speaking of their own people. St. Paul reminds the Jews that he, the Christian Apostle, regards them as his brethren; and therefore he had begun his address with the words ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί (xxii. 1; cp. xxviii. 17).

No evil treatment from them could ever provoke the Apostle to lay aside the feelings and language of affection to his brethren, his kinsmen according to the flesh. (Rom. ix. 3.) He would also thus teach them that all men are brethren in Christ.

8. Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος] Jesus the Nazarene. See on ix. 5; xxiv. 5; xxvi. 9.

9. καὶ ἔμβοβοι ἐγένοντο] Not found in A, B, H. Cp. ix. 7.

— φωνὴν οὐκ ἤκουσαν] See on ix. 7; and cp. ἀκοῦσαι φωνῆν, v. 14. Ammon. p. 361, οἱ συνόντες τὸν ἥχον ἤκουον τῆς φωνῆς οὐ μὴν συνῆκαν τὰ λαλούμενα. Cp. Birks, Hor. Apost. p. 326, where are some excellent remarks on this speech to the Jews at Jerusalem as compared with St. Paul's address to Festus and Agrippa at Casarea, xxvi. 4—14.

14. τὸν Δίκαιον] the Just One. The name applied to Christ by the First Martyr, vii. 52, and by St. James, see James v. 6; see also 1 John ii. 1.

16. αὐτοῦ] So A, B, E, and many Versions.—Elz. τοῦ Κυρίου.
U 2

k ch. 9. 26.

l ver. 4.

m ch. 7, 58.
& 8. 1.n ch. 9. 15.
& 13. 2.
Gal. 1. 15.
& 2. 8.
Eph. 3. 8.
1 Tim. 2. 7.
2 Tim. 1. 11.
o ch. 21. 36.

p ch. 16. 37.

17 ^k Ἐγένετο δέ μοι ὑποστρέψαντι εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ, καὶ προσευχομένου μου ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, γενέσθαι με ἐν ἐκστάσει, ¹⁸ καὶ ἰδεῖν αὐτὸν λέγοντά μοι, Σπεῦσον καὶ ἔξελθε ἐν τάχει ἐξ Ἱερουσαλὴμ· διότι οὐ παραδέχονται σοῦ τὴν μαρτυρίαν περὶ ἐμοῦ. ¹⁹ ^l Καγὼ εἶπον, Κύριε, αὐτοὶ ἐπίστανται, ὅτι ἐγὼ ἡμὴν φυλακίζων καὶ δέρων κατὰ τὰς συναγωγὰς τοὺς πιστεύοντας ἐπὶ σέ· ²⁰ ^m καὶ ὅτε ἐξεχείτο τὸ αἷμα Στεφάνου τοῦ μάρτυρός σου, καὶ αὐτὸς ἡμὴν ἐφεστῶς καὶ συνευδοκῶν, καὶ φυλάσσων τὰ ἱμάτια τῶν ἀναιρούντων αὐτόν. ²¹ ⁿ Καὶ εἶπε πρὸς με, Πορεύου, ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰς ἔθνη μακρὰν ἐξαποστελῶ σε.

²² ^o Ἦκουον δὲ αὐτοῦ ἄχρι τούτου τοῦ λόγου, καὶ ἐπήραν τὴν φωνὴν αὐτῶν, λέγοντες, Αἶρε ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς τὸν τοιοῦτον· οὐ γὰρ καθήκεν αὐτὸν ζῆν.

²³ Κραυγαζόντων τε αὐτῶν, καὶ ῥιπτούντων τὰ ἱμάτια, καὶ κονιορτὸν βαλλόντων εἰς τὸν ἀέρα, ²⁴ ἐκέλευσεν ὁ χιλιάρχος εἰσάγεσθαι αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν παρεμβολήν, εἰπας μάλιστα ἀνετάξεσθαι αὐτόν, ἵνα ἐπιγνῶ δι' ἣν αἰτίαν οὕτως ἐπεφώνουν αὐτῷ. ²⁵ ^p Ὡς δὲ προέτειναν αὐτὸν τοῖς ἱμάσιν, εἶπε πρὸς τὸν ἐστῶτα ἑκατόνταρχον ὁ Παῦλος, Εἰ ἄνθρωπον Ῥωμαῖον καὶ ἀκατάκριτον ἔξεστιν ὑμῖν μαστίζειν; ²⁶ Ἀκούσας δὲ ὁ ἑκατόνταρχος, προσελθὼν ἀπήγγειλε τῷ χιλιάρχῳ λέγων, Τί μέλλεις ποιεῖν; ὁ γὰρ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος Ῥωμαῖός ἐστι. ²⁷ Προσελθὼν

17. ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ] in the Temple. Thus (in reply to the charges against him, xxi. 28) he shows that he does not despise the Temple, and is approved by the God of the Temple, and that he received his Apostolic mission to the Gentiles in the Temple, from Christ, Whom he here proclaims as Lord of the Temple.

How fitly and forcibly does the Vision here described display the God of both Covenants as One; and the Christian Church as the true substance and consummation of the Levitical Law.

The Jewish Temple is here seen to be the Vestibule, or πρόναος, of the Christian Church; and the Waters of Life, which are to irrigate, fertilize, and purify the world, flow from the fountain-head in Jerusalem. (Isa. ii. 3. Micah iv. 2.)

— ἐκστάσει] ecstasy. Perhaps on the occasion mentioned xi. 30; xii. 25, and to prepare him for his first mission to the Gentiles, whence the words, v. 21, πορεύου, ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰς ἔθνη μακρὰν ἐξαποστελῶ σε.

The Vision is supposed by some to have been on the occasion of the visit in ix. 26. But to this the words πορεύου κ.τ.λ. seem to present an objection. St. Paul came again to Jerusalem after that visit, before he went to the Gentiles. See xi. 30; xii. 25; xiii. 4.

19. καγὼ εἶπον, Κύριε, κ.τ.λ.] and I said, Lord—They ought to receive my testimony, for they cannot but know it to be true, as the result of conviction, from such evidence as has converted one, whom they saw once a most zealous Persecutor of the Church, into a witness of the truth of the Gospel. Nothing but such evidence could prevail on me to preach a religion, which shows me to myself and to others as having murdered the saints of God.

— δέρων κατὰ τ. συναγωγὰς] See below on xxvi. 11.

20. ὅτε ἐξεχείτο τὸ αἷμα Στεφάνου τοῦ μάρτυρός σου] when the blood of Thy martyr Stephen was being shed. A noble endeavour to make public reparation for a public sin, by public confession in the same public place where the sin was committed.

As St. Paul did not speak Greek on this occasion (v. 2), he did not use the word martyr. The LXX often employ the word μάρτυρ for the Hebrew עֵד (edh), or witness. The application of this word to the first person who shed his blood for Christ, was enough to designate it as the fittest to be assigned to those who followed St. Stephen in his testimony to the truth, even unto death.

The same word seems to have been used by St. Paul in relating the divine message to himself in v. 15. St. Stephen was Thy witness, and He whose witness Stephen was, has commanded me to be His witness, not to the Jews only, but to all men.

— συνευδοκῶν] Elz. adds τῇ ἀναιρέσει αὐτοῦ, which is not found in A, B, D, E, and appears to be a scholium. As to the fact, cp. xxvi. 10.

22. οὐ καθήκεν] it was not fit: he ought to have been slain already, instead of being rescued as he was by the Chief Captain. So A, B, C, D, E, G.—Elz. has καθήκον.

23. ῥιπτούντων τὰ ἱμάτια, καὶ κονιορτὸν βαλλόντων] shaking their clothes, and casting dust, and crying, Away with him. Perhaps, a preparation for, or a menace of, throwing off their clothes, in order to cast stones, and kill him for blasphemy (Grotius, Whitby, Meyer),—as they had done to Stephen, when Saul himself “held the clothes of them that stoned him” (vii. 58; xxii. 20). Or it may have been only an impetuous movement of rage and execration. See Harmer, Obs. iv. p. 203, on the similar movement of the populace of Persia, when in a state of excitement.

The speech and scene are full of points of resemblance to what was said and done at St. Stephen's martyrdom; and St. Paul must have had St. Stephen often before him at this time.

They probably would have stoned him, if he had not had a retreat by the stairs into the παρεμβολή.

24. εἰς τὴν παρεμβολήν] See xxi. 31. 34, to be brought up by the stairs into the barracks.

— ἵνα ἐπιγνῶ] that he might know clearly; for he had not understood the ‘Hebrew dialect’ of the Apostle's speech.

25. προέτειναν τοῖς ἱμάσιν] The best MSS. are divided between προέτειναν A, E, προσέτειναν C, D, προέτειναν B, G. The last seems preferable. It appears that St. Paul was actually bound by the thongs. See v. 30, ὅτι αὐτὸν ἦν δεδεκῶς. St. Paul put the question in the text to the soldiers, ὡς προέτειναν, i. e. when they stretched him forward with the ἱμάτιες, or thongs, to the ‘palus’ or post, in order that when he had been so bound he might be scourged with μαστίγες.

The Authorized Version has, “as they bound him with thongs,” a rendering which has been censured by some modern expositors; but which seems more accurate than that which has been substituted for it, viz. when they stretched him out for the thongs, i. e. to receive the lashes. The word ἱμάς is used in three other places of New Test. (Mark i. 7. Luke iii. 16. John i. 27), and always as something used for binding or tying, as here.

The rendering is also confirmed by v. 29, where it is said that the Captain was afraid when he heard that Paul was a Roman citizen, and because he had bound him. This, as Böttger and Hackett observe, could not refer to the command in xxi. 33; for he kept Paul bound with two chains, after he had heard that he was a Roman citizen (see v. 30, ἔλυσεν), and Felix left him so bound (xxiv. 27). Such a detention of a Roman citizen in safe custody, was not against the Law. But the fear of the Captain appears to have been caused by some other action of binding, which seems to be no other than that mentioned in this verse, i. e. a binding with thongs, in order that the person so bound might be scourged.

— εἰ ἄνθρωπον Ῥωμαῖον] Is it lawful for you to scourge a man who is a Roman and uncondemned? Why did St. Paul now plead his Roman citizenship at Jerusalem, and so avoid scourging? and why should he not have pleaded it at Philippi, a Roman Colony, but have incurred beating with rods?

What he did in the one case, and did not do in the other, was for the glory of God. See note on Acts xvi. 22; and consider the providential results of this appeal to his Roman citizenship here, as detailed in the sequel of this History. See note, xxv. 23.

26. τί μέλ. π.;] Elz. prefixes ὅρα, which is not in A, B, C, E. — Ῥωμαῖός] a Roman. See on Acts xvi. 37.

δὲ ὁ χιλιάρχος εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Λέγε μοι, Σὺ Ῥωμαῖός εἰ; ὁ δὲ ἔφη· Ναί. ²⁸ Ἀπεκρίθη τε ὁ χιλιάρχος, Ἐγὼ πολλοῦ κεφαλαίου τὴν πολιτείαν ταύτην ἐκτησάμην· ὁ δὲ Παῦλος ἔφη, Ἐγὼ δὲ καὶ γεγέννημαι. ²⁹ Εὐθὺς ὅν ἀπέστησαν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ οἱ μέλλοντες αὐτὸν ἀνετάζειν· καὶ ὁ χιλιάρχος δὲ ἐφοβήθη, ἐπιγινούς ὅτι Ῥωμαῖός ἐστι, καὶ ὅτι αὐτὸν ἦν δεδεκώς.

³⁰ Τῇ δὲ ἐπαύριον ^a βουλόμενος γνῶναι τὸ ἀσφαλές, τὸ τί κατηγορεῖται ^{q ch. 23. 28.} ὑπὸ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἔλυσεν αὐτὸν, καὶ ἐκέλευσεν συνελθεῖν τοὺς ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ πᾶν τὸ συνέδριον· καὶ καταγαγὼν τὸν Παῦλον ἔστησεν εἰς αὐτούς.

XXIII. ¹ Ἀτεινίσας δὲ ὁ Παῦλος τῷ συνεδρίῳ εἶπεν, Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί, ἐγὼ ^{a ch. 24. 16.} ² ^{Tim. 1. 3.} πάσῃ συνειδήσει ἀγαθῇ πεπολίτευμαι τῷ Θεῷ ἄχρι ταύτης τῆς ἡμέρας.

² ^{b 1 Kings 22. 24.} ^{Jer. 20. 2.} ^{John 18. 22.} ^{c Lev. 19. 35.} ^{Deut. 17. 4, 9.} ^{& 25. 12.} Ὁ δὲ ἀρχιερεὺς Ἀνανίας ἐπέταξε τοῖς παρεστῶσιν αὐτῷ τύπτειν αὐτοῦ τὸ στόμα. ³ ^c Τότε ὁ Παῦλος πρὸς αὐτὸν εἶπε, Τύπτειν σὲ μέλλει ὁ Θεός, τοῖς κεκοινιαμένῃ καὶ σὺ κάθῃ κρίνων με κατὰ τὸν νόμον, καὶ παρανομῶν κελεύεις με τύπτεσθαι; ⁴ Οἱ δὲ παρεστῶτες εἶπον, Τὸν ἀρχιερέα τοῦ Θεοῦ λοιδορεῖς;

⁵ ^d Ἐφη τε ὁ Παῦλος, Οὐκ ᾔδειν, ἀδελφοί, ὅτι ἐστὶν ἀρχιερεὺς· γέγραπται γάρ, ^{d Exod. 22. 28.} Ἀρχοντα τοῦ λαοῦ σου οὐκ ἐρεῖς κακῶς.

27. λέγε μοι] Elz. adds εἰ, which is not in A, B, C, D, E, and weakens the sense, "Art thou a Roman?"

28. κεφαλαίου] properly, a capital sum put out for usury, but used by LXX for any sum of money. Levit. vi. 5. Numb. v. 7. (Grot.)

— ἐγὼ δὲ καὶ γεγέννημαι] I have not only, like you, the 'just civitatis,' but I was also born with it.

29. ἀνετάζειν] to examine by torture; "examinare, per questionem probare," i. e. "tormento flagrorum adhibito."

30. ἔλυσεν αὐτόν] Elz. adds ἀπὸ τῶν δεσμῶν, which is not in A, B, C, E, H, and seems to be a gloss.

— καταγαγὼν] having brought him down from the Castle of Antonia overhanging the Temple, to the Temple-Area below it; and to the place in which the Sanhedrim were assembled—perhaps the same place in which he himself had taken part in their proceedings against St. Stephen, pleading before them (vi. 12. 15). They usually met in the hall Gazith. Concerning the conclave Gazith, "the seat of the great Sanhedrim," see Lightfoot (i. p. 1105. Temple, chap. xxii.). It was on the south side of the Temple.

CH. XXIII. 1. πάσῃ συνειδήσει ἀγαθῇ] in all good conscience. The Apostle says that he had served God from his forefathers with a pure conscience (2 Tim. i. 3); that is, he had no private ends, but had been zealous towards God (Acts xxii. 3; xxvi. 4), and exceedingly zealous for the traditions of his fathers (Gal. i. 14); and he thought it his duty to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus Christ (xxvi. 9).

But yet he calls himself a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and injurious (1 Tim. i. 13), and chief of sinners (1 Tim. i. 15).

Almighty God had given him a Conscience, and he was bound to obey its dictates. But first, it was his duty to take care that his Conscience was rightly informed. It was not enough that his Conscience was pure and good, i. e. without any admixture of sinister designs, of worldly aims and personal interests, and desirous only of God's glory; but it was also necessary, that his Conscience should be conformed to God's Will, and be regulated by His Law.

As St. Augustine says (de Mendacio, 7), "It is indeed of great importance, with what intention, and for what end a thing is done; but that which is sinful, is never to be done, with any intention, or for any end, however good." It is not enough to run toward the goal of God's glory; it is also necessary to run in the way of God's commandments. See below on Rom. iii. 8, and on 1 Tim. i. 13.

Cp. Bp. Sanderson's Lectures, "De Conscientiâ," especially Lecture ii. "On good Intention," Works iv. p. 23, in which it is shown that there is "no sufficient security in the consciousness of good intention," and Lecture iv. § 13, p. 72, where he considers this example of St. Paul, and says, "Hæc verba ad anteriorem vitæ ejus partem, quum non dum factus est Christianus, extendenda esse mihi quidem videtur valdè probabile."

— πεπολίτευμαι τῷ Θεῷ] a Hebraism; in God's sight I have lived in all good conscience, and not only in the eyes of men. The fuller expression is ἐνώπιον Θεοῦ, or ἐναντίον Θεοῦ, Luke i. 6. Acts iv. 19; viii. 21, and παρὰ Θεῷ, Luke ii. 52.

2. ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς Ἀνανίας] the high priest Ananias, the son of Nebed æus; he succeeded Joseph son of Cami in the high priesthood, in the procuratorship of Tiberius Alexander, A.D. 48 (Joseph. Ant. xx. 5. 2), and held it under Cumanus; his cruelty and avarice are recorded by Josephus, Ant. xx. 5. 3; xx. 8. He was sent to Rome for trial, before the Emperor Claudius, A.D. 52, on the accusation of Quadratus, and (it is most probable) was acquitted, and held the office of the high Priesthood at this time, and continued in it till he was superseded by Ismael, son of Phabi, a little before the departure of Felix from Judæa (Joseph. xx. 8. 2. Cp. Biscoe, pp. 70—76. Winer, p. 57. Meyer, p. 397). He had himself been a prisoner, and yet he has no pity for St. Paul in his sufferings.

On the succession of High Priests at this period, see above on xxii. 5.

3. σέ] thee; emphatic, and to be accented as such.

— τοῖς κεκοινιαμένῃ] O thou whitened wall; whitewashed outwardly, and of a fair aspect, but inwardly unsound. Cp. on τάφοι κεκοινιαμένοι, Matt. xxiii. 27.

St. Paul here spake "unadvisedly with his lips," yet this was a true prophecy; Ananias was guilty of many crimes, and his house was burnt in a sedition raised by his own son, and he himself was drawn out from a place of concealment by the sicarii, and slain. (Joseph. B. J. ii. 17. 2—9.) A remarkable retribution; he who connived at the conspiracy of assassins against St. Paul (xxiii. 14), died by the hands of an assassin.

— καὶ σὺ κάθῃ] 'And art thou sitting there, &c.?' The καὶ connects the question with the command of Ananias, and brings out the inconsistency of his personal conduct with his judicial office. On this sense of καὶ, expressive of indignation, see James i. 4.

5. οὐκ ᾔδειν] I wist not, brethren, that he is High Priest; for it is written, "Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy people" (Exod. xxii. 28). St. Paul's apology shows, that he retracted what he had said, as language unfit to be addressed to any superior in the discharge of his duty;

Some have supposed that the words οὐκ ᾔδειν, I wist not, merely intimated defect of eye-sight; but this notion is inconsistent with these words. If St. Paul could not discern that Ananias was High Priest, how could he see that he sat there as his judge?

Or, if it be supposed that he could not distinguish him as the High Priest, then his apology amounts to no more than that he would not, indeed, call the High Priest by an opprobrious name, but that he saw no harm in addressing such language to any one else sitting there, as his Judge. Indeed, what is an apology, would in that sense be only a repetition of the reproach.

The same objection seems to lie against the interpretation (suggested by Lorinus, Witsius, Schoettgen, Baumg., and others), which supposes that St. Paul means by οὐκ ᾔδειν to say, that he did not own him to be a High Priest, for he had purchased the office by bribery, and had shown himself to be a Tyrant.

But St. Paul's self-correction is recorded here as a warning, not to "speak evil of dignities" (2 Pet. ii. 10. Jude 8), even though the office they hold is disgraced by them—even though a Tiberius or a Nero sits on the throne, still the throne on which he sits, and the officer sitting upon it, are not to be treated with disrespect. See Matt. xxiii. 2.

"Knowledge," says Bp. Sanderson (Prælect. i. § 11, on e ch. 24. 15, 21.

& 26. 5, 6.
Phil. 3. 5.

f Matt. 22. 23.
Mark 12. 18.
Luke 20. 27.
g ch. 5. 39.
& 22. 7, 17, 19.
& 25. 25.
& 26. 31.

h ch. 18. 9.
& 27. 23, 24.

i ver. 20, 30.
Matt. 26. 74.

⁶ Ἐν οὖν τῷ ὅτι Παῦλος, ὅτι τὸ ἐν μέρος ἐστὶ Σαδδουκαίων τὸ δὲ ἕτερον Φαρισαίων, ἔκραζεν ἐν τῷ συνεδρίῳ, Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί, ἐγὼ Φαρισαῖός εἰμι, υἱὸς Φαρισαίων· περὶ ἐλπίδος καὶ ἀναστάσεως νεκρῶν ἐγὼ κρίνομαι. ⁷ Τοῦτο δὲ αὐτοῦ εἰπόντος, ἐγένετο στάσις τῶν Φαρισαίων καὶ Σαδδουκαίων, καὶ ἐσχίσθη τὸ πλῆθος. ⁸ Σαδδουκαῖοι μὲν γὰρ λέγουσι μὴ εἶναι ἀνάστασιν, μήτε ἄγγελον, μήτε πνεῦμα, Φαρισαῖοι δὲ ὁμολογοῦσι τὰ ἀμφότερα. ⁹ Ἐγένετο δὲ κραυγὴ μεγάλη· καὶ ἀναστάντες οἱ γραμματεῖς τοῦ μέρους τῶν Φαρισαίων διεμάχοντο λέγοντες, Οὐδὲν κακὸν εὐρίσκομεν ἐν τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ τούτῳ· εἰ δὲ πνεῦμα ἐλάλησεν αὐτῷ ἢ ἄγγελος,—¹⁰ Πολλῆς δὲ γενομένης στάσεως, εἰλαβηθεὶς ὁ χιλιάρχος μὴ διασπασθῇ ὁ Παῦλος ὑπ' αὐτῶν, ἐκέλευσε τὸ στράτευμα καταβὰν ἀρπάσαι αὐτὸν ἐκ μέσου αὐτῶν, ἄγειν τε εἰς τὴν παρεμβολήν.

¹¹ Τῇ δὲ ἐπιούσῃ νυκτὶ ἐπιστὰς αὐτῷ ὁ Κύριος εἶπε, Θάρσει, ὡς γὰρ διεμαρτύρω τὰ περὶ ἐμοῦ εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ, οὕτω σε δεῖ καὶ εἰς Ῥώμην μαρτυρῆσαι.

¹² Γενομένης δὲ ἡμέρας, ποιήσαντες συστροφὴν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι ἀνεθεμάτισαν ἑαυτοὺς, λέγοντες μήτε φαγεῖν μήτε πιεῖν, ἕως οὗ ἀποκτείνωσι τὸν Παῦλον.

Conscience), "may be taken for the actual consideration of a thing that was known before; in which sense alone the words of St. Paul (in this passage of his speech, Acts xxiii. 5), that have so racked the Commentators, are to be understood; I wist not, Brethren (says he), that he was the High Priest; that is, I thought not, or I did not sufficiently consider it. As if he had said, 'Pardon, I pray, my Brethren, this just Resentment of mine; if my Heat and Passion have carried me into Expressions too free, I did not remember the Person I was speaking to, and forgot my own Duty. I confess my mistake; I ought not to re- velle the High Priest, though he has forfeited the Dignity of his Character, but my Passion blinded me so, that I did not sufficiently consider it.' A sense perfectly easy and agreeable." See also Bp. Sanderson's Sermon. xiii. ad Aulam, § 11, i. p. 331.

On this sense of ἤδεν, see Acts vii. 18. Rom. vii. 7. Eph. vi. 8. Col. iii. 24. It is also involved in the right and enlarged use of the word συν-εἰδήσις, or Con-science.

S. Jerome, referring to this passage, and arguing from it against the Pelagians, says well, "A man who is always on his guard may haply escape sin; as a lyre, of which the cords are always stretched, may avoid uttering a harsh sound. But if he ever relaxes his vigilance, he lapses whither he would not; and thus our human nature learns its own weakness. The Apostle was smitten by a minister of the High Priest, and he retorted on the High Priest thus, 'The Lord shall smite thee, thou whited wall!' Where then was the patience of the SAVIOUR, Who, when He was led as a lamb to the slaughter, opened not His mouth? We do not disparage the Apostle; but we celebrate the praise of CHRIST." S. Jerome (c. Pelag. iii. 1). Welst.

On the bearing of this avowal on the question of Inspiration, see above, xv. 38; below, James iii. 2.

⁶ γνοὺς δὲ ὁ Παῦλος] But when Paul perceived that the one part (of the Council) consisted of Sadducees, and the other of Pharisees. An example which has been much perverted in modern times. Thus a celebrated Roman-catholic expositor (Corn. A. Lapid.) builds on it the famous maxim, "bellum hæreticorum pax est Ecclesiæ;" and he adds, "id sapienter vidit et edixit Cardinalis Hosius," the great persecutor of the Protestants in Poland in the sixteenth century;

He calls this the only method of maintaining the Unity of the Church; seeking to give a colour to this Machiavellian principle, from God's act in dispersing the builders of Babel, and from the practice of heretics themselves, in burning the corn of the field of the Church, like Samson's foxes, with firebrands to their tails (Judges xv. 4, 5).

But St. Paul gives no sanction to this unhappy maxim "divide, et impera." His end is not division, but unity; and he does not seek to attain that end by any questionable means, but by a statement of the truth: "concerning the resurrection of the dead, I am this day called in question." Cp. xxvi. 23.

The confession so freely made by Romish Divines of the use they themselves make of this example, may serve to put others on their guard against their perversions of it; especially when it is remembered how they have applied their principles in practice, by personating Puritans, Anabaptists, and other sectaries, in order to sow dissensions among us, and so to weaken and subvert the English Church. See Ware's Foxes and Firebrands, pp. 31—47. Abp. Bramhall's Works, i. p. xcvi. Wall on Infant Baptism, ii. p. 372, and the late Dr. Wordsworth's Eccles. Biog. iv. 64.

The proofs there given of the evils of Schism, and of the occasions thence afforded to Romish adversaries, and eagerly caught at by them, of supplanting the principles of Christian doctrine, which we hold, and of propagating their own errors, may serve to remind all true friends of the English Reformation, that if they desire to promote, and not to damage, the holy cause vindicated by it, it is their primary duty to discountenance Schism, and to maintain Unity.

—Φαρισαίων] So A, B, C, and many Cursives and Vulg. St. Paul means that his family, for more than one generation, had been Pharisees.—Elz. Φαρισαίου.

⁸ Σαδδουκαῖοι—Φαρισαῖοι] for the Sadducees say that there is no Resurrection (of the body), nor Angel, nor Spirit, but the Pharisees confess both.

The Sadducees explained away the Angelic appearances in the Pentateuch, by supposing that what are there called angels were mere creations for the time, and of only a transitory and evanescent existence—like clouds. Cp. Lightfoot, ii. p. 702.

See the passages from Josephus and the Talmud in Biscoe, pp. 92—102, and cp. Dan. xii. 2, 3. 2 Macc. vii. 9—36. Matt. xxii. 28, and see note above on Acts xii. 15.

⁹ ἄγγελος] Elz. adds μὴ θεομαχῶμεν, which are not in the best MSS., A, B, C*, E, H, and many Versions; and were probably added, to fill up the Aposiopesis, by the copyists from v. 39. For examples of Aposiopesis in New Test., see Matt. xv. 5. Mark vii. 11; xi. 32. Winer, § 64, p. 529.

The Aposiopesis is very appropriate here; it seems to intimate that the conclusion of the sentence was drowned in the clamour of the Sadducees.

¹¹ θάρσει] Elz. adds Παῦλε, which is not in A, B, C, E, H, and many Cursives and Versions.

—σε δεῖ καὶ εἰς Ῥώμην μαρτυρῆσαι] it is necessary for thee to bear witness also at Rome,—εἰς Ῥώμην, at and to Rome. On this use of εἰς see Mark i. 37; xiii. 9. St. Paul was Christ's μάρτυς in the two great Capitals of the world; first at Jerusalem, the spiritual Capital; then at Rome, the civil Metropolis. See on Acts xxv. 11. This prophecy was interpreted in a special manner by St. Paul's martyrdom at Rome. εἰς here repeated with the accusatives Ἱερουσαλὴμ and Ῥώμην, expresses more than at. 'Thou barest witness to Jerusalem; thou shalt bear witness to Rome.'

¹² ποιήσαντες συστ. οἱ Ἰου.] the Jews having made a combination. So A, B, C, E, and many Cursives.—Elz. has ποι. τινες τῶν Ἰουδαίων συστ. But it is usual with the sacred writers to attribute to the Jews generally whatever is done by some of them, with the concurrence or connivance of others, especially of those in authority, as now.

—ἀνεθεμάτισαν ἑαυτοὺς] they subjected themselves to an anathema or kherem (kherem), imprecation. Gal. i. 8, 9. 1 Cor. xvi. 22. They were probably of the number of λῃσταί or Sicarii or factious insurgents and assassins, who, under pretence of zeal for the Law, perpetrated the worst crimes. Joseph. B. J. ii. 13. 3. Biscoe, pp. 278, 279, who observes, that "from their perverted oral traditions and the ill-adviced example of Phineas" (on which see Bp. Sanderson's admirable remarks, vol. ii. pp. 65. 67. 251; iv. 50), "it was made a rule among them that a private person might kill one who had forsaken the law of Moses. Of this there is the clearest proof in the Talmud (Sanhedr. c. 9), Philo (de Sacrific. p. 855, de Monarchiâ, i. p. 819), and Josephus

¹³ Ἦσαν δὲ πλείους τεσσαράκοντα οἱ ταύτην τὴν συνωμοσίαν ποιησάμενοι·
¹⁴ οἷτινες προσελθόντες τοῖς ἀρχιερεῦσι καὶ τοῖς πρεσβυτέροις εἶπον, Ἀναθέματι ἀνεθεματίσαμεν ἑαυτοὺς μηδενὸς γεύσασθαι, ἕως οὗ ἀποκτείνωμεν τὸν Παῦλον. ¹⁵ Νῦν οὖν ὑμεῖς ἐμφανίσατε τῷ χιλιάρχῳ σὺν τῷ συνεδρίῳ, ὅπως καταγάγῃ αὐτὸν εἰς ὑμᾶς, ὡς μέλλοντας διαγινώσκειν ἀκριβέστερον τὰ περὶ αὐτοῦ· ἡμεῖς δὲ, πρὸ τοῦ ἐγγίσει αὐτὸν, ἑτοιμοὶ ἐσμεν τοῦ ἀνελεῖν αὐτόν.

¹⁶ Ἀκούσας δὲ ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀδελφῆς Παύλου τὸ ἔνεδρον, παραγενόμενος καὶ εἰσελθὼν εἰς τὴν παρεμβολὴν ἀπήγγειλε τῷ Παύλῳ. ¹⁷ Προσκαλεσάμενος δὲ ὁ Παῦλος ἕνα τῶν ἑκατοντάρχων ἔφη, Τὸν νεανίαν τοῦτον ἀπάγαγε πρὸς τὸν χιλιάρχον· ἔχει γὰρ ἀπαγγεῖλαί τι αὐτῷ. ¹⁸ Ὁ μὲν οὖν παραλαβὼν αὐτὸν ἦγαγε πρὸς τὸν χιλιάρχον, καὶ φησιν, Ὁ δέσμιος Παῦλος προσκαλεσάμενός με ἠρώτησε τοῦτον τὸν νεανίαν ἀγαγεῖν πρὸς σε, ἔχοντά τι λαλήσαι σοι.
¹⁹ Ἐπιλαβόμενος δὲ τῆς χειρὸς αὐτοῦ ὁ χιλιάρχος, καὶ ἀναχωρήσας κατ' ἰδίαν, ἐπυνθάνετο, Τί ἐστὶν ὃ ἔχεις ἀπαγγεῖλαί μοι; ²⁰ ^k Εἶπε δέ, Ὅτι οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι ^{k ver. 12.}
 συνέθεντο τοῦ ἐρωτῆσαί σε, ὅπως αὐρίον τὸν Παῦλον καταγάγῃς εἰς τὸ συνἔδριον, ὡς μέλλων τι ἀκριβέστερον πυνθάνεσθαι περὶ αὐτοῦ. ²¹ Σὺ οὖν μὴ πεισθῆς αὐτοῖς, ἐνεδρεύουσι γὰρ αὐτὸν ἐξ αὐτῶν ἄνδρες πλείους τεσσαράκοντα, οἷτινες ἀνεθεμάτισαν ἑαυτοὺς μήτε φαγεῖν μήτε πιεῖν, ἕως οὗ ἀνέλωσιν αὐτόν· καὶ νῦν εἰσι ἑτοιμοὶ προσδεχόμενοι τὴν ἀπὸ σοῦ ἐπαγγελίαν. ²² Ὁ μὲν οὖν χιλιάρχος ἀπέλυσε τὸν νεανίαν, παραγγείλας μηδενὶ ἐκλαλήσαι, ὅτι ταῦτα ἐνεφάνισας πρὸς με.

²³ Καὶ προσκαλεσάμενος δύο τινὰς τῶν ἑκατοντάρχων εἶπεν, Ἐτοιμάσατε στρατιώτας διακοσίους, ὅπως πορευθῶσιν ἕως Καισαρείας, καὶ ἱππεῖς ἑβδομήκοντα, καὶ δεξιολάβους διακοσίους, ἀπὸ τρίτης ὥρας τῆς νυκτός, ²⁴ κτήνη τε παραστήσαι, ἵνα ἐπιβιβάσαντες τὸν Παῦλον διασώσωσι πρὸς Φήλिका τὸν ἡγεμόνα, ²⁵ γράψας ἐπιστολὴν περιέχουσαν τὸν τύπον τοῦτον, ²⁶ Κλαύδιος

(Ant. xii. 6. 2; xv. 8. 1). And it was of the crime of apostasy that St. Paul was accused." See also Lardner's Credibility, i. ch. ix.

To such monstrous abuses may large bodies of men be led by the two false propositions, viz. :

(1) That the "exempla piorum,"—examples of holy men (e. g. Phineas),—may be safely followed, without reference to the special circumstances under which they acted ;

(2) That a good end justifies bad means.

It has been asked, What became of these conspirators ?

The answer to this question is, that it was as easy to loose as to bind. The same person who laid on the excommunication could also take it off, and particularly with regard to vows of not eating ; any of their Rabbis could absolve them. (Lightfoot, ii. p. 703.)

Assassination was now legalized and consecrated among the Jews ; and this diabolical spirit had full vent during the Siege of Jerusalem, in a few years after this time. And it may be regarded as an act of mercy, that the Jewish Nation was delivered by its Roman conquerors from the sanguinary atrocity of its own citizens.

St. Paul found in his own person, that the zeal "not according to knowledge," by which he himself had been actuated, recoils against those who have been hurried on by it to do evil that good may come.

¹³ πλείους τεσσαράκοντα] more than forty. On this use of the comparative without ἤ, see iv. 22 ; xxiii. 21. Winer, § 35, p. 214. — ποιησάμενοι] So A, B, C, E.—Elz. πεποιηκότες.

¹⁴ τοῖς ἀρχιερεῦσι] to the Chief Priests. It would seem that the conspirators presumed on the secrecy and the assistance of the Chief Priests conniving at, and abetting them, in an act of murder under pretence of religion ; a proof of the power of the Evil Spirit to tempt men, and even Ministers of Religion, to be guilty of heinous sins, on a pretence of piety and zeal.

This conspiracy proves that the Jewish Sanhedrim had not (as some have supposed) unlimited power of life and death in causes of Religion. If they had, there would have been no need for this plot against St. Paul. See above, ix. 2.

¹⁵ ὅπως] Elz. adds αὐρίον, which is not in the best MSS., and is probably a gloss from v. 20.

— ἑτοιμοὶ—τοῦ ἀνελεῖν] ready to kill him : on the genitive with the infinitive, see Luke xxiv. 25. Acts xiv. 9. Winer, § 44 ; below, xxvii. 1.

¹⁶ ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀδελφῆς] his sister's son. The only mention in the Acts of the Apostles, of any of St. Paul's relatives. See above, Introduction, p. 6.

The Holy Spirit does not gratify the curiosity of the reader of Holy Scripture by graphic sketches of the persons of the holy men who are employed by Him to preach the Gospel. He does not recite particulars of their private and domestic history. He seems studiously to practise reserve and to keep silence in these respects. Perhaps He thus designed to bring out in clearer outline and bolder relief the importance, dignity, and sanctity of their public mission. He would have us regard them as abstracted from what is merely personal, local, and temporary, and as holding a position of their own, which neither time nor place can affect,—that of Ambassadors of Christ, Preachers of the Everlasting Gospel, Foundation-stones set in the wall of the heavenly Jerusalem. (Rev. xxi. 14.)

— τὸ ἐνεδρον] their lying in wait. The Hellenistic form. See LXX, Jud. ix. 35, ἀπὸ τοῦ ἐνέδρου. Eustath. Odyss. θ, v. 124. (Bornemann, who specifies ζυγόν, κέλευθον, οὖρον, as similar forms.) It is here found in B, G, H, and several Cursives.—Elz. has τὴν ἐνέδραν.

²⁰ μέλλων] So A, B, E, and some Cursives.—Elz. μέλλοντες.

²³ δεξιολάβους] παραφύλακας (Suid.), lancearios (Vulg.). The word is used by the Emperor Constantin. Porphy. (early in the 10th century), Them. i. 1 (i. e. in his treatise on the quartering of troops), where he says that the τουρμαρχης has under him στρατιώτας τοξοφόρους πεντακοσίους, καὶ πελταστὰς τριακοσίους, καὶ δεξιολάβους ἑκατόν. The rendering of the Authorized Version, "spearmen," is probably correct. And so Meyer, p. 405. Cp. Weist., p. 616.

²⁴ ἵνα—διασώσωσι] That they might conduct him in safety through the whole journey to Cæsarea, where he would be under Roman protection.

²⁵ τὸν τύπον τ.] this form ; as follows. Cp. 3 Macc. iii. 30, ὁ μὲν τῆς ἐπιστολῆς τύπος οὕτως ἐγγράπτο. St. Luke does not merely give the substance, but the words. If he had com-

1 ch. 21. 33.

Αυσίας τῷ κρατίστῳ ἡγεμόνι Φήλικι χαίρειν. ²⁷ ¹ Τὸν ἄνδρα τοῦτον συλληφθέντα ὑπὸ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, καὶ μέλλοντα ἀναιρεῖσθαι ὑπ' αὐτῶν, ἐπιστὰς σὺν τῷ στρατεύματι ἐξεilaμην, μαθὼν ὅτι Ῥωμαῖός ἐστι. ²⁸ Βουλόμενος δὲ ἐπιγνῶναι τὴν αἰτίαν δι' ἣν ἐνεκάλουν αὐτῷ, κατήγαγον αὐτὸν εἰς τὸ συνέδριον αὐτῶν. ²⁹ ὃν εἶρον ἐγκαλούμενον περὶ ζητημάτων τοῦ νόμου αὐτῶν, μηδὲν δὲ ἄξιον θανάτου ἢ δεσμῶν ἔχοντα ἔγκλημα. ³⁰ Μηνυθείσης δέ μοι ἐπιβουλῆς εἰς τὸν ἄνδρα μέλλειν ἔσεσθαι ὑπὸ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἐξαυτῆς ἔπεμψα πρὸς σε, παραγγείλας καὶ τοῖς κατηγόροις λέγειν τὰ πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐπὶ σοῦ. Ἐρρώσω.

m ch. 24. 1—6.
& 25. 16.
n Matt. 27. 27.

³¹ Οἱ μὲν οὖν στρατιῶται, κατὰ τὸ διατεταγμένον αὐτοῖς, ἀναλαβόντες τὸν Παῦλον, ἤγαγον διὰ νυκτὸς εἰς τὴν Ἀντιπατρίδα. ³² τῇ δὲ ἐπαύριον ἐάσαντες τοὺς ἱππεῖς πορεύεσθαι σὺν αὐτῷ ὑπέστρεψαν εἰς τὴν παρεμβολήν. ³³ οἷτινες εἰσελθόντες εἰς τὴν Καισάρειαν, καὶ ἀναδόντες τὴν ἐπιστολὴν τῷ ἡγεμόνι παρέστησαν καὶ τὸν Παῦλον αὐτῷ. ³⁴ Ἀναγνοὺς δὲ, καὶ ἐπερωτήσας ἐκ ποίας ἐπαρχίας ἐστὶ, καὶ πυθόμενος ὅτι ἀπὸ Κιλικίας, ³⁵ ^m Διακούσομαί σου, ἔφη, ὅταν καὶ οἱ κατήγοροί σου παραγένωνται. ἐκέλευσέ τε αὐτὸν ἐν τῷ πραιτωρίῳ τοῦ Ἡρώδου φυλάσσεσθαι.

a ch. 23. 2.
& 25. 2.

XXIV. ¹ ^a Μετὰ δὲ πέντε ἡμέρας κατέβη ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς Ἀνανίας μετὰ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων καὶ ῥήτορος Τερτύλλου τινὸς, οἷτινες ἐνεφάνισαν τῷ ἡγεμόνι κατὰ posed a letter, or given an outline of one (as has been supposed by some), he would not have imputed to the writer such a distortion of the true circumstances of the case as is found in it.

²⁶ Φήλικι] to Felix, the Roman Procurator, appointed by Claudius late in A.D. 52 or early in 53; originally a slave, brother of Pallas the favourite of the Emperor Claudius; and freedman of Antonia, the mother of Claudius, described as follows by Roman writers,—"Antonius Felix erat libertus Antoniae matris Claudii imperatoris, frater Pallantis, ejusdem Antoniae liberti, Plin. H. N. xxxiii. 10, qui maximā auctoritate apud Claudium valebat. Tacit. Annal. xi. 29. 1, 'flagrantissimāque eo in tempore gratiā Pallas.' De Felice Tacit. Hist. v. 9. 6, 'Claudius defunctis regibus, aut ad modicum redactis, Judæam provinciam equitibus Romanis aut libertis permisit; è quibus Antonius Felix, per omnem ævum ac libidinem, jus regium servili ingenio exercuit.' Id. Annal. xii. 54. 1, 'At non frater ejus (Pallantis) cognomento Felix pari moderatione agebat, jampridem Judææ impositus, et cuncta malefacta sibi impunè ratus, tantā potentia subnixo' etc. vid. et not. ad Act. xxi. 37, extr. Suetonius in V. Claud. c. 28, § 2, 'eum trium reginarum maritum' vocat. Reginas dicit Suetonius regum filias et neptes. Duas habuit Drusillas, alteram Cleopatram Ægyptiacæ et Antonii, triumviri, neptem, filiam Jubæ Mauritanie regis, è Cleopatrá Selene, Antonii filiā, sororem Ptolomæi, v. Tacit. Hist. v. 9. 7, alteram Agrippæ majoris regis, Herodis magni, nepotis filiam, vid. not. infra ad xxiv. 24, tertia ignoratur, nec constat quoniam tempore singulas sibi adjunxerit, v. intpp. ad Sueton. l. 1, et Walchii Commentatio, de Felice, Judææ procuratore, Jan. 1747. 4." Kuin.

²⁷ σὺν τῷ στρατεύματι] with my soldiery. It was true that Claudius Lysias had rescued Paul after he had ascertained that he was a Roman. See xxii. 29; xxiii. 10. It was also true that he had rescued him before he knew that he was a Roman (xxii. 25);

But it was not true, that he had rescued him because he knew that he was a Roman, and that he then brought him to the Council.—The incidents mentioned are true, but not in the order in which they are recorded; and they so stated as to obviate the charge that he had bound and put him to examination; and they afford strong evidence of the genuineness of the document.

²⁹ μηδὲν ἄξιον θανάτου] nothing worthy of death. St. Paul is pronounced innocent by Lysias, as Christ was by Pilate. St. Paul is again pronounced innocent by Festus, xxv. 25, and again by Agrippa, xxvi. 31.

³⁰ ἔπεμψα] I send; as ἔγραψα, scripsi, I write,—the reference being to the time at which the letter would arrive. See Phil. ii. 28. Philemon 11, and 2 Cor. viii. 18.

³¹ οἱ μὲν] With regard to their route, see Robinson, iii. 46. Howson, ii. 330.

— Ἀντιπατρίδα] Built by Herod on the site of Caphar-Saba, and named Antipatris from his father Antipater. (Joseph. Ant. xvi. 5. 2. Robinson, iii. 45. Raumer. Palæstin. p. 132.) It was about thirty-five miles from Jerusalem, and twenty-six miles from Cæsarea.

³² πορεύεσθαι] A, B, E, and some Cursives, have ἀπέρχεσθαι, which is received by Lachm., Tisch., and Alf.

³³ εἰς τ. Καισάρειαν] to Cæsarea. Thus by God's Providence overruling the designs of the Jews, the Apostle is sent, in consequence of their conspiracy against him, to preach the Gospel, as Chrys. expresses it, "in a nobler Theatre, and before a more splendid audience, at Cæsarea;" and thence, eventually, to the Capital of the World,—Rome. On Cæsarea, see above, x. 1.

³⁴ ἀναγνοὺς δέ] Elz. adds ὁ ἡγεμὼν, which is not in the best MSS., and is probably a gloss.

— ἀπὸ Κιλικίας] from Cilicia. Felix, the Procurator of Judæa, hearing that Paul was of the Province of Cilicia, says that he will hear his cause.

There was therefore a connexion between Cilicia and Judæa, and this is explained by what has been stated above, Luke ii. 2. Both were in the same Presidency, that of Syria.

³⁵ διακούσομαι] I will hear thee thoroughly. See Weist.

— τ. πραιτωρίῳ τ. Ἡρώδου] the prætorium of Herod; the palace which had been built by King Herod, and was now probably occupied as an official residence by the Roman Procurator. On the remarkable coincidences between the testimony of the sufferings of Christ, in the Roman prætorium at Jerusalem, and of those of His Apostle, first in the prætorium of Cæsarea, and afterwards in the prætorium at Rome, see below on Phil. i. 13.

CH. XXIV. 1. μετὰ πέντε ἡμέρας] on the fifth day (Matt. xvi. 21 and xxvii. 63) after St. Paul's departure from Jerusalem. See on v. 11.

— μετὰ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων] with the elders. The reading of A, B, E, μετὰ πρεσβ. τινων, seems to be due to a desire to obviate an objection, that all the Elders were not likely to have gone down to Cæsarea. But see xxiii. 12. 20, where οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι is used in a similar way. The elders are rightly said to do, and to be responsible for doing that which is done with their concurrence by those who are their representatives. If St. Luke had written μ. πρεσβυτέρων τινων, it is not probable that the other reading would be found, as it is, in the majority of the MSS.

— ῥήτορος] a 'rhetor' (Horat. Sat. i. v. 2), or 'causidicus,' acquainted with Roman Law and Language. In legal phraseology such a man was sometimes called δικαιικός and dicentarius; he was a very different character from that of the ῥήτωρ, orator, of the age of Demosthenes.

The Gospel, in the person of St. Paul, had now to contend with Jewish prejudices allied with Roman Rhetoric, at the bar of the Imperial Power, represented by Felix. New combinations of hostile forces arose in succession against it; but it overcame them all.

It appears that the Speech of Tertullus was in Latin. He was employed, because he was (what his employers, the Chief Priests, were not) familiar with that tongue, his native language, as well as with Roman law. And his harangue, as reported by St. Luke, has a Roman character and tone.

τοῦ Παύλου. ² Κληθέντος δὲ αὐτοῦ, ἤρξατο κατηγορεῖν ὁ Τέρτυλλος λέγων, ³ Πολλῆς εἰρήνης τυγχάνοντες διὰ σοῦ, καὶ κατορθωμάτων γινομένων τῷ ἔθνει τούτῳ διὰ τῆς σῆς προνοίας, πάντῃ τε καὶ πανταχοῦ ἀποδεχόμεθα, κράτιστε Φῆλιξ, μετὰ πάσης εὐχαριστίας. ⁴ Ἴνα δὲ μὴ ἐπὶ πλείον σὲ ἐγκόπτω, παρακαλῶ ἀκοῦσαί σε ἡμῶν συντόμως τῇ σῇ ἐπιεικείᾳ. ⁵ ^b Εὐρόντες γὰρ τὸν ἄνδρα ^b ch. 6. 13. & 16. 20. & 21. 28. τούτου λοιμὸν, καὶ κινοῦντα στάσεις πᾶσι τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις τοῖς κατὰ τὴν οἰκουμένην, πρωτοστάτην τε τῆς τῶν Ναζωραίων αἰρέσεως, ⁶ ^c ὃς καὶ τὸ ἱερὸν ἐπέει- ^c ch. 21. 28. John 18. 31. ρασε βεβηλῶσαι ὃν καὶ ἐκρατήσαμεν, καὶ κατὰ τὸν ἡμέτερον νόμον ἠθελήσαμεν κρίνειν. ⁷ παρελθὼν δὲ Λυσίας ὁ χιλιάρχος μετὰ πολλῆς βίας ἐκ τῶν χειρῶν ἡμῶν ἀπήγαγε, ⁸ κελεύσας τοὺς κατηγοροὺς αὐτοῦ ἔρχεσθαι ἐπὶ σέ· παρ' οὗ δυνήσῃ αὐτὸς ἀνακρίνας περὶ πάντων τούτων ἐπιγνῶναι, ὃν ἡμεῖς κατηγοροῦμεν αὐτοῦ. ⁹ Συνεπέθεντο δὲ καὶ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι φάσκοντες ταῦτα οὕτως ἔχειν. ¹⁰ Ἀπεκρίθη δὲ ὁ Παῦλος, νεύσαντος αὐτῷ τοῦ ἡγεμόνος λέγειν, Ἐκ πολλῶν ἑτῶν ὄντα σε κριτὴν τῷ ἔθνει τούτῳ ἐπιστάμενος, εὐθυμότερον ^d τὰ περὶ ἑμαυτοῦ ^d 1 Pet. 3. 15.

Did St. Paul also speak before Felix in Latin? It would seem that he had private interviews with him, without an interpreter (v. 26).

The practice thus indicated, of the most learned men of a country, such as the Chief Priests here, hiring Roman Rhetoricians, such as Tertullus, to plead for them, affords an indirect and incidental confirmation of the supernatural power of the Apostles to speak with divine eloquence, and in languages they had never learnt. It is an evidence of the Gift of Tongues. St. Peter and St. John, illiterate Galilæans, and St. Paul, of Cilicia, a country whose barbarous dialect gave a name to solecisms—from Soli, in Cilicia,—never have a Tertullus to speak for them; and yet they are more than a match for the Sanhedrim; and never have any difficulty in addressing popular assemblies, and pour forth their thoughts with irresistible eloquence. How was this done? By the gift of the Holy Ghost.

2. Τερτύλλου] Tertullus; a Roman diminutive from Tertius, as Lucullus from Lucius.

3. κατορθωμάτων] good deeds. So Elz. But A, B, E, and some Cursives have διορθωμάτων, which is confirmed by Vulg., “cum multa corrigantur.” If διορθωμάτων, reforms, is the true reading, it affords remarkable evidence of the servile sycophancy of the orator and the Jews in their zeal against St. Paul. It might be said that Felix had conferred benefits on the nation, but it could hardly be said that he had done any thing to correct it. The orator pleading for the Spiritual Power of the Jewish Nation, and for the Nation itself, confesses that his clients needed correction at the hands of a heathen Magistrate.

See Joseph. Ant. xx. 8. 5. B. J. ii. 13. 3, for an account of the attempts of Felix to quell the Sicarii. On the other hand, Felix had perpetrated many acts of misgovernment. See Joseph. xx. 8. 9. Tacit. Hist. v. 9. Annal. xii. 54. Sueton. Claud. 28 (cp. above on xxiii. 26). Although he, as Governor, had quelled some insurgents, yet he was more guilty than any of them. And in two years after this panegyric from the mouth of Tertullus, the advocate of the Jews, he was recalled, and was accused by them at Rome, and would have been punished, but for the intercession of his brother Pallas, then in favour with Nero. Joseph. xx. 8. 10.

4. ἐπὶ πλείον] more than is fit; too long. On the ellipse after the comparative, see v. 22.

5. λοιμὸν] pestem; a pest or plague. The Apostle who preached the Gospel of life and health is called a pestilence! So Christ had foretold. Matt. x. 25.

—Ναζωραίων] of Nazarenes. A term of contempt. He would not call them Christians; and they are still called by this name by Jews and Mahometans. But St. Paul had declared boldly (xxii. 8), that He who had appeared to him on the way to Damascus had said to him, ἐγώ εἰμι Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος, ὃν σὺ δίδασκες.

It was ordered by the Providence of God that the Name Ναζωραῖος, used in despite by the enemies of Christianity, contained, though unknown to them, a fulfilment of the ancient prophecy concerning the Messiah as the Nelzer or Branch (see on Matt. ii. 23. John xix. 19), and so was an assertion of the truth,—that Jesus of Nazareth is the Christ. Hence the term Ναζωραῖος is readily applied by the Apostles to Him. Acts ii. 22; iii. 6; iv. 10; xxvi. 9.

6—8. καὶ κατὰ τ. ἡ. ν.—ἔρχεσθαι ἐπὶ σέ] Not in A VOL. I.—PART II.

(“multas hic lituras lacunasque habens.” Bornemann), nor in B, G, H, and many cursives; and omitted by Griesb., Lachm., and Tisch., not by Matthæi, Bornemann, or De Wette. But perhaps these words may have been cancelled by some Copyists, who supposed that the Jews had no power of judicature. Cp. John xviii. 31.

Besides, an interpolator would not have charged Lysias with ‘great violence’—of which no evidence had been given in St. Luke’s narrative; but he would have taken care to conform himself to the history.

The words are found in E, and in a great number of Cursive MSS. and Fathers. And the probability seems greater that they should have been omitted, either by chance (and omissions may take place accidentally, whereas additions cannot) or purposely, than that they should have been interpolated by the Copyists. They are therefore left in the text. See further, on v. 8.

—κατὰ τὸν ἡμέτερον νόμον] according to our law. Why then the conspiracy, at which the Chief Priests connived (xxiii. 14)? See note there. In cases of βεβήλωσις τοῦ ἱεροῦ, the Romans permitted the Jewish Judicature to inflict capital punishment. Joseph. B. J. vi. 2. 4, where Titus says, οὐχ ἡμεῖς τοὺς ὑπερβάντας (i. e. profaning the Temple by intruding beyond the sacred limits) ὅμην ἀναρεῖν ἐπετρέψαμεν, καὶ ἐὰν Ῥωμαῖός τις ᾖ. Therefore Tertullus laboured to establish this charge against Paul. See also St. Paul’s reply, xxiv. 18.

8. παρ’ οὗ] from whom. Perhaps, as some Expositors say, from Paul. Cp. xxv. 26, ὅπως τῆς ἀνακρίσεως γενομένης κ.τ.λ. If so,—this was a suggestion, on the part of Tertullus, that he might be examined by questio, such as Lysias had employed (xxii. 24), where a similar reason is given, ἵνα ἐπιγνῶ (so Corn. A. Lapide, Grotius, Rosenm.).

It may be said that Paul, as a Roman citizen, could not be so examined. But though it was contrary to law to begin with torture (as Lysias had done) and Roman citizens were legally exempt from it, yet since the age of Tiberius, it was commonly resorted to even in their case. Cp. the authorities in Houson, ii. p. 322, note.

If the words in vv. 6—8, καὶ κατὰ—ἔρχεσθαι ἐπὶ σέ, are not genuine, then οὗ in this verse must refer to Paul.

But it deserves consideration whether,—if those words are genuine, as is probable,—the relative οὗ here does not rather refer to Lysias.

This interpretation is confirmed by what Felix says, v. 22, ὅταν Λυσίας ὁ χιλιάρχος καταβῇ, διαγνώσομαι,—a speech which corroborates the opinion, that the words in vv. 6—8 are genuine. Let the learned reader judge.

Besides, to refer to Lysias, was a proof of confidence, which Tertullus might well be disposed to show, in the goodness of his cause. And it was not very likely that he should refer to the defendant himself.

9. συνεπέθεντο] So A, B, E, and many Cursives.—Elz. συνέθεντο.

10. ἐκ πολλῶν ἑτῶν] from many years. About six years. See Joseph. xx. 6. 3. and 7. 1, and cp. Chronological Synopsis prefixed to this Volume, p. 28. Six years were many, compared with the length of the tenure of office of most provincial magistrates. Felix succeeded Cumanus as Procurator in A. D. 52 or 53.

e ch. 21. 15.
f ch. 25. 8.
& 28. 17.

g 1 Pet. 3. 16.

h ch. 26. 22.
& 28. 23.

i 2 Tim. 1. 3.

k Dan. 12. 2.
John 5. 28, 29.
ch. 23. 6.
& 28. 20.

l ch. 23. 1.
2 Cor. 1. 12.
m ch. 11. 29, 36.
& 20. 16.
Gal. 2. 10.
Rom. 15. 25.
n ch. 21. 26, 27.

o ch. 25. 16.

p ch. 23. 6.
& 28. 20.

q ch. 27. 3
& 28. 16.

ἀπολογούμαι.¹¹ δυνάμενον σου γνῶναι, ὅτι οὐ πλείους εἰσὶ μοι ἡμέραι δεκαδύο, ἀφ' ἧς^e ἀνέβην προσκυνήσων εἰς Ἱερουσαλήμ.^{12 f} καὶ οὔτε ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ εὐρόν με πρὸς τινα διαλεγόμενον, ἢ ἐπισύστασιν ποιοῦντα ὄχλον, οὔτε ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς, οὔτε κατὰ τὴν πόλιν.^{13 g} οὔτε παραστήσαι δύνανταί σοι περὶ ὧν νῦν κατηγοροῦσί μου.^{14 h} Ὁμολογῶ δὲ τοῦτό σοι, ὅτι κατὰ τὴν ὁδὸν ἦν λέγουσιν αἵρεσιν,ⁱ οὕτω λατρεύω τῷ πατρίῳ Θεῷ, πιστεύων πᾶσι τοῖς κατὰ τὸν νόμον καὶ ἐν τοῖς προφήταις γεγραμμένοις.^{15 k} ἐλπίδα ἔχων εἰς τὸν Θεόν, ἦν καὶ αὐτοὶ οὗτοι προσδέχονται, ἀνάστασιν μέλλειν ἔσσεσθαι νεκρῶν, δικαίων τε καὶ ἀδίκων.^{16 l} Ἐν τούτῳ καὶ αὐτὸς ἀσκῶ ἀπρόσκοπον συνείδησιν ἔχειν πρὸς τὸν Θεόν καὶ τοὺς ἀνθρώπους διαπαντός.^{17 m} Δι' ἐτῶν δὲ πλείονων παρεγενόμην ἐλεημοσύνας ποιήσων εἰς τὸ ἔθνος μου καὶ προσφοράς.^{18 n} ἐν οἷς εὐρόν με ἡγνισμένον ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, οὐ μετὰ ὄχλου οὐδὲ μετὰ θορύβου, τινὲς δὲ ἀπὸ τῆς Ἀσίας Ἰουδαῖοι,^{19 o} οὓς ἔδει ἐπὶ σοῦ παρῆναι καὶ κατηγορεῖν, εἴ τι ἔχοιεν πρὸς με.²⁰ ἡ αὐτοὶ οὗτοι εἰπάτωσαν, τί εὐρον ἐν ἐμοὶ ἀδίκημα, στάντος μου ἐπὶ τοῦ συνεδρίου,^{21 p} ἢ περὶ μιᾶς ταύτης φωνῆς, ἧς ἔκραξα ἐν αὐτοῖς ἐστώς, ὅτι περὶ ἀναστάσεως νεκρῶν ἐγὼ κρίνομαι σήμερον ἐφ' ὑμῶν.

²² Ἀνεβάλετο δὲ αὐτοὺς ὁ Φῆλιξ, ἀκριβέστερον εἰδὼς τὰ περὶ τῆς ὁδοῦ, εἴπας, Ὅταν Λυσίας ὁ χιλιάρχος καταβῇ, διαγνώσομαι τὰ καθ' ὑμᾶς.^{23 q} διαταξά-

11. εἰσὶ μοι ἡμέραι] there are days to me not more than twelve. On this use of the dative μοι after ἡμέραι, see Matt. xv. 32. Mark viii. 2.

— ἡμέραι δεκαδύο] Elz. has ἡμ. ἢ δεκ. The ἢ is not in A, B, E, G; and see above, on xxiii. 13.

The twelve days may be reckoned as follows:—

1st Day, arrival at Jerusalem, xxi. 15—17.

2nd, interview with James and the Presbyters of the Church at Jerusalem, xxi. 18.

3rd, Ἀγνισμὸς, Nazariteship declared, xxi. 26.

7th, The seven days nearly completed, xxi. 27. Paul arrested in the Temple, xxi. 30; his speech to the people, xxii. 1.

8th, On the morrow (xxii. 30) he is brought before the Sanhedrim. Vision in the night, xxiii. 11.

9th, In the morning (xxiii. 12) overture of the Conspirators to the Chief Priests, with a view that Paul should be brought forth by the Chiliarh on the following day (xxiii. 15. 20).

Paul sent by night to Antipatris.

10th, On the morrow arrives at Cæsarea.

13th, After five days (xxiv. 1), i. e. on the fifth day after his departure from Jerusalem, he is accused by Ananias and Tertullus before Felix, not more than twelve days after his arrival at Jerusalem, xxiv. 11.

— προσκυνήσων] to worship. Not to profane the temple, as they say. See also vv. 17, 18.

13. δύνανταί σοι] The pronoun σοι (not in Elz.) is found in A, B, E, and many Cursives, and is confirmed by the Syriac, Vulgate, and many Versions.

15. ἦν καὶ οὗτοι προσδέχονται] which they also entertain. A remarkable testimony to the general belief of the Jewish Nation (notwithstanding the influence of the Sadducees) in a Resurrection to come,—a belief, therefore, to be derived from the Old Testament. See xxvi. 7.

17. δι' ἐτῶν πλείονων] after several years; four years after his last visit, xviii. 22.

— ἐλεημοσύνας] alms. For an illustration of the coincidence of this statement, thus incidentally introduced in the Acts, with passages in St. Paul's Epistles concerning the collections made by him for the poor Saints at Jerusalem (Rom. xv. 25. 1 Cor. xvi. 1—4. 2 Cor. viii. 1—4), see Paley, Horæ Paulinæ, No. i. p. 10.

— προσφοράς] offerings. Some Expositors say, for the Feast of Pentecost, xx. 16. (Meyer.) But this word suggests a supposition that St. Paul came to Jerusalem under a vow, in order to present the offerings due at its expiration. See the use of this word προσφορά, in connexion with this visit, for the offering made by a Nazarite, xxi. 26, εὖς οὐ προσηνήχθη ὑπὲρ ἐνὸς ἐκάστου αὐτῶν ἢ προσφορά. And so Bede (Retr. p. 153), “Oblationes pertinent ad ea quæ ad suasionem Jacobi et seniorum in templo obtulerat.”

18. ἐν οἷς] in which things. See xxvi. 12, ἐν οἷς, πορευόμενος εἰς τὴν Δαμασκόν. Rom. vi. 21, ἐφ' οἷς νῦν ἐπαισχύνεσθε. Phil. ii.

15, ἐν οἷς φαίνεσθε. 1 Tim. iv. 15, ἐν τοῖς ἰσθί. The reading ἐν οἷς, found in A, B, C, E, and received by Lachm. and Tisch., not by Alf. and Bloomf., seems to be a correction of the copyists to make an agreement with προσφοράς,—and it is not probable that if oîs had been written by St. Luke it would have been altered into oîs.

— εὐρόν με ἡγνισμένον ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ] they found me separated or sanctified as a Nazarite in the Temple. See above, on xxi. 24. 26.

His argument is, “They have charged me with profaning the Temple (v. 6). But the fact is, I came from a distance to Jerusalem to worship (προσκυνήσων, v. 11) in the Temple; and to bring alms of charity, and also offerings of piety (προσφοράς), as a Nazarite (see xxi. 26); and they themselves found me in the Temple engaged in a holy service, proving my respect for the Temple; and they who accuse me of profaning it, were guilty of profanation, in abetting those who seized me when there employed in a religious act, of which they prevented the completion.” Thus their outrage on St. Paul resembled that of Pilate on the Galileans, whose blood he mingled with their sacrifices. Luke xiii. 1.

19. εἴ τι ἔχοιεν] si quid haberent—

20. εἰπάτωσαν, τί] For τι Elz. has εἴ τι, but εἴ is not in the best MSS., and the sentence gains force by its removal. τί—ἢ = what but?

21. φωνῆς, ἧς ἔκραξα] this voice, or cry, which I uttered. Cp. Winer, p. 148.

22. ἀνεβάλετο] Elz. prefixes ἀκούσας δὲ ταῦτα ὁ Φῆλιξ, which words are not found in the best MSS., A, B, C, E, H, or in Vulg., Syriac, and several other Versions.

— ἀκριβέστερον εἰδὼς] Although he had more accurate knowledge of Christianity, than that he needed to be taught the truth concerning it, or than would have been supposed in one whose practice was such as his with regard to its Apostle.

The comparative is used in similar manner in v. 4 and in xxv. 10, κάλλιον ἐπγινώσκεις, i. e. “thou knowest better than that I need instruct thee, and that thou shouldst make such a proposal.” This use of the comparative is very convenient, as suggestive of something understood, which it might be uncourteous to express.

Felix had been Procurator of Judæa for six years; as such he had, doubtless, been at Jerusalem on the great festivals, and on other occasions when he could not have failed to hear of Christ. And his ordinary residence was Cæsarea, where Philip the Evangelist lived (viii. 49; xxi. 8), and where was a Christian Church (xxi. 8—16),—and where, many years before, St. Peter had preached, and baptized the Roman Centurion Cornelius (x. 1—48). How striking the contrast between the Roman soldier sending for Peter to Cæsarea, and the Roman Procurator leaving Paul bound a prisoner at the same place! The one condemns the other.

μενος τῷ ἑκατοντάρχῃ τηρεῖσθαι αὐτὸν, ἔχειν τε ἄνεσιν, καὶ μηδένα κωλύειν τῶν ιδίων αὐτοῦ ὑπηρετεῖν αὐτῷ.

²⁴ Μετὰ δὲ ἡμέρας τινὰς παραγενόμενος ὁ Φῆλιξ σὺν Δρουσίλλῃ τῇ γυναικὶ αὐτοῦ, οὖσῃ Ἰουδαία, μετεπέμψατο τὸν Παῦλον, καὶ ἤκουσεν αὐτοῦ περὶ τῆς εἰς Χριστὸν πίστεως. ²⁵ Διαλεγόμενον δὲ αὐτοῦ περὶ δικαιοσύνης, καὶ ἐγκρατείας, καὶ τοῦ κρίματος τοῦ μέλλοντος, ἔμβοσος γενόμενος ὁ Φῆλιξ ἀπεκρίθη, Τὸ νῦν ἔχον πορεύου· καιρὸν δὲ μεταλαβὼν μετακαλέσομαί σε· ²⁶ ἅμα καὶ ἐλπίζων ὅτι χρήματα δοθήσεται αὐτῷ ὑπὸ τοῦ Παύλου, διὸ καὶ πυκνότερον αὐτὸν μεταπεμπόμενος ὠμίλει αὐτῷ.

²⁷ Διετίας δὲ πληρωθείσης ἔλαβε διάδοχον ὁ Φῆλιξ Πόρκιον Φῆστον· ²⁸ θέλων τε χάριτα καταθέσθαι τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις ὁ Φῆλιξ κατέλιπε τὸν Παῦλον δεδεμένον.

XXV. ¹ Φῆστος οὖν ἐπιβὰς τῇ ἐπαρχίᾳ, μετὰ τρεῖς ἡμέρας ἀνέβη εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα ἀπὸ Καισαρείας. ² Ἐνεφάνισαν δὲ αὐτῷ ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς καὶ οἱ πρῶτοι τῶν Ἰουδαίων κατὰ τοῦ Παύλου, καὶ παρεκάλουν αὐτὸν, ³ αἰτούμενοι χάριν κατ' αὐτοῦ, ὅπως μεταπέμψῃται αὐτὸν εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ, ⁴ ἐνέδραν ποιοῦντες ἀνελεῖν αὐτὸν κατὰ τὴν ὁδόν.

²³ ἔχειν—ἄνεσιν—μηδένα κωλύειν] Cp. the similar expressions concerning his detention at Rome, xxviii. 16, 30, 31.

—ὑπηρετεῖν] Elz. adds ἡ προσέρχεσθαι, which is not in A, B, C, E, or in Vulgate, Syriac, and some other Versions.

²⁴ Δρουσίλλῃ] Drusilla, daughter of Herod Agrippa I., whose miserable end is described Acts xii. 19—23, and sister of Herod Agrippa II., or Junior, mentioned in the two next chapters. She had deserted her husband Azizus, king of Emesa, and married Felix (Joseph. Ant. xx. 7. 1. See above on xxiii. 24) against the Jewish Law. Agrippa, the son of this unhappy woman, by Felix, lost his life by an eruption of Vesuvius, A.D. 79 (Joseph. Ant. xx. 7. 2).

The words οὖσῃ Ἰουδαία, being a Jewess, are emphatic. St. Paul was tried on a charge of breaking the Law at the instance of the Jews, before a Ruler who had set those laws at defiance, and who yet is flattered by them! (vv. 3—9.)

—περὶ τῆς εἰς Χριστὸν πίστεως] concerning the faith in Christ. St. Paul is brought before Felix, the Roman Procurator, by his enemies, as a Criminal; but in the second hearing, he pleads before Felix and Drusilla as a Preacher of the Gospel.

The same process takes place in the two following Chapters. Felix, having rejected the overture made to him, is withdrawn from his office. His opportunity is lost; his day of grace is past, and he makes room for Festus, his successor. St. Paul is arraigned before him; he invites Agrippa to hear the Apostle. St. Paul is brought to answer for himself, before Agrippa and Bernice, and he preaches Christ.

These incidents are doubtless recorded, with a divine design of teaching the Church and the World, by two remarkable specimens, that all Persecutions, excited by the Enemy of God and man against the Truth, are, have been, and ever will be overruled by God for the Propagation of the Gospel of Christ.

²⁵ Διαλεγόμενον αὐτοῦ—ἐμβοσος γενόμενος] as he was discoursing of righteousness, and temperance, and of the Judgment to come, Felix trembled. For the reason of which, see above on xxiii. 26 and xxiv. v. 3 and v. 27.

Here is a lesson to Preachers;

(1) To lay the foundation in Faith in Christ (v. 24).

(2) To build upon it, in practical exhortations to Righteousness and Temperance, and in warnings of the Judgment to come.

(3) To apply their preaching to the particular cases of their hearers.

(4) Especially to the particular cases of the great and powerful, whose example is of much influence with others.

(5) Not to think their labour lost, if the Felix, before whom they preach, does not repent. His history has been a warning to many: his impotence has led others to repent.

—μέλλοντος] Elz. adds ἔσεσθαι, which is not in the best MSS., and appears to be a gloss; like many other words similarly inserted in the Textus receptus in this Chapter. See vv. 22, 23, 26.

St. Paul preaches, before this unjust Judge, concerning the just judgment to come, when all Judges will be judged. “Merito coram adulteris Paulus diserebat de Castitate; merito coram injusto Præside diserebat de Justitiâ; merito iniquum judicem admovebat Judicem suum fore Christum.” (A Lapide.)

²⁶ χρήματα] money. Having heard that Paul had brought a pecuniary collection to Jerusalem (v. 17), and supposing that he could command funds from his friends for his release.

Such a hope of a bribe was opposed to the Roman Law, which Felix was appointed to administer, e. g. the Lex Julia de Repetundis. Weist., p. 624.

—Παύλου] Elz. adds ὅπως λύσῃ αὐτὸν, which is not in A, C, E, or in Vulg., Syriac, and several other Versions. See above on v. 25.

—ὠμίλει αὐτῷ] he used to converse with him. On this sense of ὠμιλῶ see Luke xxiv. 14.

²⁷ διετίας] two years. Even Felix had two full years of God's long-suffering. “Lord, let it alone this year also, till I shall dig about it and dung it, and if it bear fruit, well; if not, then after that thou shalt cut it down.” (Luke xiii. 8, 9.)

Festus came to displace him, and Felix left Paul bound, who would have released him from the thralldom of his sins.

Two years of imprisonment.—God did not need the labour even of St. Paul: and though he was bound, “the Word of God is not bound.” (2 Tim. ii. 9.) God shows his own Omnipotence, and teaches men humility, by dispensing sometimes with the use of His best instruments when, to human eyes, they seem to be most needed.

Perhaps, also, we should not have had some books of Scripture,—perhaps not the Gospel of St. Luke and the Acts of the Apostles, and some of St. Paul's Epistles,—if St. Paul had not been imprisoned at Cæsarea and at Rome. Cp. note on Col. iv. 18.

—ἔλαβε διάδοχον] he received for his successor. Cp. the words of Josephus, Ant. xx. 8. 9, Πορκίον Φῆστου διαδόχου Φήλικι πεμφθέντος. Observe the lenity of St. Luke. He says nothing of the subsequent arraignment of Felix at Rome, for maladministration of his province, on the prosecution of the Jews themselves.

He states that St. Paul preached before Felix, and “his wife Drusilla, a Jewess,” concerning “Righteousness, Temperance, and the Judgment to come,” but he leaves us to gather the evidence of their unrighteousness, intemperance, and iniquity—and by consequence, to ascertain the special pertinency of St. Paul's Sermon before them—from other sources, particularly from the Jewish annalist Josephus, and from the Roman Historian and Biographer, Tacitus and Suetonius. See xxiii. 26.

A signal proof of Charity and Truth, and, may we not add, an evidence also of Divine Inspiration? Such History as this, with reverence be it said, could only be written with a pen dropped from the wing of the Divine Dove.

—χάριτα] So A, B, C.—Elz. χάριτας.—E, G χάριν.

—χάριτα καταθέσθαι] to deposit a favour which might be of use to himself.

Gratia in hâc formulâ loquendi tanquam depositum considerantur. Demosth. de falsâ legat. extr. ἀφανῇ χάριτα καταθέσθαι. Plato Cratyl. 11, χρήματα τελούντα καὶ χάριτας κατατίθεμενον. Diod. Sic. p. 505, B, χάριν βουλόμενος καταθέσθαι (τῷ βασιλεῖ) ἀπήλανε πρὸς τοῖς πολέμοις. Exempla alia plura, vid. ap. Kypkion, Elsnerum, Westenium. (Kuin.)

CH. XXV. 1. τῇ ἐπαρχίᾳ] the ‘provincia’ of Festus, as Procurator. On the time of his arrival see above, pp. 24, 25.

2. ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς] the chief priest. A, E, G, and some Cursives and Versions have οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς, which may be the true reading. Cp. v. 15.

⁴ Ὁ μὲν οὖν Φῆστος ἀπεκρίθη, τηρεῖσθαι τὸν Παῦλον εἰς Καισάρειαν, ἑαυτὸν δὲ μέλλειν ἐν τάχει ἐκπορεύεσθαι. ⁵ Οἱ οὖν ἐν ὑμῖν, φησὶ, δυνατοὶ συγκαταβάντες, εἴ τι ἐστὶν ἐν τῷ ἀνδρὶ τούτῳ, κατηγορεῖτωσαν αὐτοῦ. ⁶ Διατρίψας δὲ ἐν αὐτοῖς ἡμέρας οὐ πλείους ὀκτῶ ἢ δέκα, καταβάς εἰς Καισάρειαν, τῇ ἐπαύριον καθίσας ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος ἐκέλευσε τὸν Παῦλον ἀχθῆναι. ⁷ Παραγενομένου δὲ αὐτοῦ, περιέστησαν αὐτὸν οἱ ἀπὸ Ἱεροσολύμων καταβεβηκότες Ἰουδαῖοι, πολλὰ καὶ βαρέα αἰτιώματα φέροντες κατὰ τοῦ Παύλου, ἃ οὐκ ἴσχυον ἀποδείξαι. ⁸ ἀπολογουμένου αὐτοῦ, Ὅτι οὔτε εἰς τὸν νόμον τῶν Ἰουδαίων, οὔτε εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν, οὔτε εἰς Καίσαρα τὶ ἤμαρτον. ⁹ Ὁ Φῆστος δὲ θέλων τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις χάριν καταθέσθαι, ἀποκριθεὶς τῷ Παύλῳ εἶπε, Θέλεις εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα ἀναβάς ἐκεῖ περὶ τούτων κριθῆναι ἐπ' ἐμοῦ; ¹⁰ Εἶπε δὲ ὁ Παῦλος, Ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος Καίσαρος ἐστὼς εἰμι, οὐ μὲ δεῖ κρίνεσθαι Ἰουδαίους οὐδὲν ἡδίκησα, ὥς καὶ σὺ κάλλιον ἐπιγινώσκεις. ¹¹ εἰ μὲν οὖν ἀδικῶ καὶ ἄξιον θανάτου πέπραχά τι, οὐ παραιτοῦμαι τὸ ἀποθανεῖν· εἰ δὲ οὐδὲν ἐστὶν ὧν οὔτοι κατηγοροῦσί μου, οὐδεὶς μὲ δύναται αὐτοῖς χαρίσασθαι· Καίσαρα ἐπικαλοῦμαι. ¹² Τότε ὁ Φῆστος συλλαλήσας μετὰ τοῦ συμβουλίου ἀπεκρίθη, Καίσαρα ἐπικέκλησαι; ἐπὶ Καίσαρα πορεύσῃ.

b ch. 24. 12.
& 28. 17.

c ch. 18. 14.
ver. 25.
& ch. 26. 31.

4. εἰς Καισάρειαν] at Cæsarea. The reading of A, B, E, G, — more expressive than that of Elz., ἐν Καισαρείᾳ.

5. οἱ δυνατοὶ] those in power; the chief among you, the same as οἱ πρῶτοι, v. 2. Cp. 1 Cor. i. 26, οὐ πολλοὶ δυνατοί. Rev. vi. 15, οἱ πλοῦσιοι καὶ οἱ δυνατοί. So Thucyd. i. 89, and frequently Josephus, see B. J. i. 12. 4, Ἰουδαίων—οἱ δυνατοί: cp. ii. 14. 8; ii. 15. 2; and ii. 16. 2. (Wetst., p. 625; Biscoe, p. 107.) Festus did not wish to have τὸ πλῆθος at Cæsarea (xxv. 24), for fear of an uproar; and he desires to conciliate the δυνατοὶ among them. He knew why Paul had been left bound by Felix, and would have been glad to dismiss the cause; and he supposes that after two years' imprisonment of St. Paul, for no proved offence, the anger of the Jews had been cooled. But it was not so; and the new Governor, with little moral courage, is ready to ingratiate himself with the Jews, even by a surrender of St. Paul (vv. 9. 11).

6. οὐ πλείους ὀκτῶ ἢ δέκα] So A, C, and several Cursives and Versions, and B, except that it has πλείονας.—Elz. πλείους ἢ δέκα. Cp. on John vi. 19.

7. αὐτόν] omitted by Elz., but in A, B, C, E, and many Cursives and Versions; it intimates that they had access to Festus, and beset him, in order to prejudice him against Paul.

— αἰτιώματα] So A, B, C, G, H. "Notabilis in vitiis consensus," says Bornemann.—Elz. αἰτιάματα. If, indeed, the word here used is from αἰτιάω, then the reading of A, B, C, E, G, H is erroneous; but it is to be derived from αἰτιώω, 'reum (αἰτιον) facere,' 'criminari.'

9. χάριν καταθέσθαι] to deposit a favour. An imitation of the policy of Felix (xxiv. 27).

— κριθῆναι] So A, B, C, E, and several Cursives.—Elz. κρίνεσθαι.

— ἐπ' ἐμοῦ] before me. Not before the Sanhedrim, who are thine enemies, but before me, an impartial Judge. And yet Festus "wished to do the Jews a favour." And why would he take Paul to Jerusalem, where there was a conspiracy against him? Why not judge him at Cæsarea? St. Paul saw the snare and avoided it. Cp. xxviii. 19.

10. ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος Καίσαρος ἐστὼς εἰμι] I already stand in my own resolve, founded on the divine will, at Cæsar's judgment-seat. I desire to be sent to Rome, and to be judged there. (Ammonius, Chrys.) As Chrys. observes, he remembered the divine Vision at Jerusalem (xxiii. 11), and made the appeal more confidently. This is a reply to the proposal of Felix, art thou willing to be judged before me?

He replies also to the secret designs of Festus, who wished to gain the favour of the Jews by the sacrifice of Paul; and he says, οὐδεὶς μὲ δύναται αὐτοῖς χαρίσασθαι· Καίσαρα ἐπικαλοῦμαι. See v. 11.

That this is the true interpretation, and not, that, in standing before Festus, Cæsar's representative, he then stood before Cæsar, appears from the answer of Festus (v. 12), to Cæsar thou hast appealed, to Cæsar thou shalt go. Compare also xxviii. 18, 19, where St. Paul explains the reasons of his conduct in this respect, and says, that the Jews delivered him a prisoner into the hands of the Romans, who were ready to release him as innocent, but that the Jews resisted this design, and that therefore he was compelled to appeal to Cæsar.

St. Paul's privilege of Roman Citizenship was here made serviceable as before (xxii. 27; xxiii. 27) for the furtherance of the Gospel. See note on xxii. 25, and below on v. 23.

In the resistance of the Jews to his liberation, St. Paul recognized a fulfilment of what had been already revealed to him by God, concerning the witness he was to bear to Christ at Rome (see xix. 21; xxiii. 11). Therefore he adds, οὐ μὲ δεῖ κρίνεσθαι, where it is God's will that I should be judged. On this use of δεῖ, see xix. 21, δεῖ με καὶ Ῥώμην ἰδεῖν: xxiii. 11, δεῖ καὶ εἰς Ῥώμην μαρτυρῆσαι: xxvii. 24, Καίσαρι σὲ δεῖ παραστήναι.

Observe,—the words are not οὐ δεῖ με κρίνεσθαι, but οὐ μὲ δεῖ κρίνεσθαι, with an emphasis on me, me; so xxvii. 24, Καίσαρι σὲ δεῖ παραστήναι. I have received a special direction from heaven in this matter. I, the Apostle of Christ, have a special duty to perform. My arrest by the Jews, and their charges against me, have already been made ministerial by God to the preaching of the Gospel by my mouth, from the stairs of the castle at Jerusalem to the People, and to the Sanhedrim, and before Felix at Cæsarea (see on xxi. 40; xxv. 23); and they are yet, under divine counsel, to be made subservient to a wider and higher design—that of carrying me to preach the Gospel at Rome. Therefore I will not return to Jerusalem to be judged there, as thou proposest that I should do. I have delivered my message there; and it has been rejected. I have also delivered it at Cæsarea. I must now declare it at Rome.

These considerations may suggest a reply to the question,—Why St. Paul appealed to Cæsar?

— κάλλιον] thou knowest better than to need information from me. See ἀκριβέστερον, xxiv. 22, and 2 Tim. i. 18, βέλτιον σὺ γινώσκεις. Cp. 2 Cor. viii. 17. Winer, p. 217.

11. οὐ παραιτοῦμαι] "non deprecor."

For examples of its use, see Wetst., p. 626.

— μὲ χαρίσασθαι] to compliment me away to them. μὲ is emphatic—me, an innocent man.

— Καίσαρα ἐπικαλοῦμαι] "Cæsarem appello." I appeal to Cæsar: a process which was allowed to Roman Citizens, and often saved them from the unjust usage of inferior Magistrates; by the Lex Julia, L. xlvii. 6. 7, 'de vi publicâ tenetur,' &c. and L. xlix. de Appellat. (Wetst. p. 626.) The same right of appeal followed from the Valerian, Porcian, and Sempronian Laws, which had given a right of appeal to the People; afterwards transferred to the Emperor. Cp. Plin. x. 97, in his letter to Trajan concerning the Christians whom he sent to Rome, "quia cives Romani erant."

12. μετὰ τοῦ συμβουλίου] with his Council, or Assessors. "Habebant provinciarum presides suos assessores (ut vocantur à Lamprid. Vit. Alex. Severi c. 46) consiliarios (Sueton. Tib. 33) quî à Josepho B. J. ii. 16 dicuntur φίλοι ἡγεμόνος, à Dio. Cass. p. 505, E.—πατέρες, quibuscum, antequam sententiam dicerent, deliberarent, v. Perizonius de Prætorio p. 718. Casaubonus Exercit. Antibar. p. 137." (Kuin.)

— πορεύσῃ] "hæc videtur dixisse terrendi Pauli causâ." (Bengel.)

¹³ Ἡμερῶν δὲ διαγενομένων τινῶν, Ἀγρίππας ὁ βασιλεὺς καὶ Βερνίκη κατήντησαν εἰς Καισάρειαν, ἀσπασόμενοι τὸν Φῆστον. ¹⁴ Ὡς δὲ πλείους ἡμέρας ^{d ch. 24. 27.}
διέτριβον ἐκεῖ, ὁ Φῆστος τῷ βασιλεῖ ἀνέθετο τὰ κατὰ τὸν Παῦλον λέγων, Ἀνὴρ τις ἐστὶ καταλειμμένος ὑπὸ Φήλικος δέσμιος, ¹⁵ περὶ οὗ, γενομένου μου εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, ἐνεφάνισαν οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι τῶν Ἰουδαίων, αἰτούμενοι κατ' αὐτοῦ καταδικῆναι. ¹⁶ πρὸς οὓς ἀπεκρίθη, ὅτι οὐκ ἔστιν ἔθος ^{e Deut. 17. 4.}
Ῥωμαίοις χαρίζεσθαι τινα ἄνθρωπον, πρὶν ἢ ὁ κατηγορούμενος κατὰ πρόσωπον ἔχῃ τοὺς κατηγοροῦντας, τόπον τε ἀπολογίας λάβοι περὶ τοῦ ἐγκλήματος.
¹⁷ ^{f ver. 6.} Συνελθόντων οὖν αὐτῶν ἐνθάδε, ἀναβολὴν μηδεμίαν ποιησάμενος, τῇ ἐξῆς καθίσας ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος ἐκέλευσα ἀχθῆναι τὸν ἄνδρα. ¹⁸ περὶ οὗ σταθέντες οἱ κατήγοροι οὐδεμίαν αἰτίαν ἔφερον ὧν ἐγὼ ὑπενόουν πονηρὰν, ¹⁹ ^{g ch. 18. 15.} ζητήματα δέ τινα περὶ τῆς ἰδίας δεισιδαιμονίας εἶχον πρὸς αὐτὸν, καὶ περὶ τινος Ἰησοῦ τεθνηκότος, ὃν ἔφασκεν ὁ Παῦλος ζῆν. ²⁰ Ἀπορούμενος δὲ ἐγὼ εἰς τὴν περὶ τούτων ζήτησιν ἔλεγον, εἰ βούλοιο πορεύεσθαι εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, κάκεῖ κρί-νεσθαι περὶ τούτων. ²¹ Τοῦ δὲ Παύλου ἐπικαλεσαμένου τηρηθῆναι αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν τοῦ Σεβαστοῦ διάγνωσιν, ἐκέλευσα τηρεῖσθαι αὐτὸν, ἕως οὗ ἀναπέμψω αὐτὸν πρὸς Καίσαρα. ²² Ἀγρίππας δὲ πρὸς τὸν Φῆστον ἔφη, Ἐβουλόμεν καὶ αὐτὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἀκοῦσαι· ὁ δὲ, Αὔριον, φησὶν, ἀκούσῃ αὐτοῦ.
²³ Τῇ οὖν ἐπαύριον ἐλθόντος τοῦ Ἀγρίππα καὶ τῆς Βερνίκης μετὰ πολλῆς φαντασίας, καὶ εἰσελθόντων εἰς τὸ ἀκροατήριον, σὺν τε τοῖς χιλιάρχοις καὶ ἀνδράσι τοῖς κατ' ἐξοχὴν τῆς πόλεως, καὶ κελεύσαντος τοῦ Φῆστου, ^{h ch. 9. 15.} ἤχθη

13. Ἀγρίππας ὁ βασιλεὺς] Agrippa the king. Agrippa II., or Junior, son of Agrippa I., who was struck by a mortal disease at Caesarea, A.D. 44 (see Acts xii. 19—23); and brother of Bernice and Drusilla (Acts xxiv. 24). It would seem as if the curse of Edom hung over this unhappy family.

Agrippa was only seventeen years old when his father died (Joseph. Ant. xix. 9 1), and was not allowed to succeed him at once; but received from Claudius (A.D. 48) the principality of Chalcis (Joseph. xx. 1. 1; 5. 2), and the superintendence of the Temple at Jerusalem, and the nomination of the High Priests (Joseph. xx. 1. 3). Four years afterwards he received the tetrarchies that had belonged to Philip and Lysanias (Luke iii. 1), with the title of King. And in A.D. 55 his dominions were further increased by Nero, with some cities in Galilee (Joseph. Ant. xx. 8. 5). He was the last of the Herods, and lived to see the fall of Jerusalem, and died at the age of seventy-three, in the third year of Trajan, A.D. 100 (Phot. Bibl. Cod. 33. Winer, i. p. 485).

The assertion of Photius extending the life of Agrippa to the third year of Trajan is doubted by Pearson and Wetstein (p. 628), who state grounds for believing that Agrippa died before that time. The difference of the language of Josephus, who flatters Agrippa in his Jewish History, published in Agrippa's lifetime, but sometimes censures him in his Antiquities (xx. 8. 11), published afterwards, has thus been accounted for.

It is observable, that although St. Luke calls Agrippa a King, he does not call him by the title which he gives to his father (xii. 1), "Herod the King (of Judæa);"—another instance of his accuracy.

—Βερνίκη] Bernice, the Macedonian name for Φερηνίκη (see above on xvii. 10), eldest daughter of Herod Agrippa I. She had been married to her uncle Herod, king of Chalcis, and after his death to Polemon, king of Cilicia (St. Paul's country), whom she had deserted δι' ἀκολασίαν, ὡς ἔφασαν (Joseph. Ant. xx. 7. 3); her infamous character was well known at Rome (Juvenal, vi. 155), where she had an illicit connexion with the destroyer of her country. (Sueton. Tit. 7.)

The following are the statements of Josephus and other ancient writers concerning her. Joseph. Ant. xx. 7. 3, Βερνίκη δὲ μετὰ τὴν Ἡρώδου τελευτὴν, ὃς αὐτῆς ἀνὴρ καὶ θεῖος ἐγγόνει, πολλὸν χρόνον ἐπιχρυσάσα, φήμης ἐπισχούσης, ὅτι τῷ ἀδελφῷ συγγεί, πείθει Πολέμωνα, Κιλικίας δὲ ἦν οὗτος βασιλεὺς, περιτεμνόμενον ἄγεσθαι πρὸς γάμον αὐτὴν, οὕτως γὰρ ἐλέγξειν φέτο ψευδεῖς τὰς διαβολὰς. Καὶ ὁ Πολέμων ἐπέστη μάστιγα διὰ τὸν πλοῦτον αὐτῆς· οὐ μὲν ἐπὶ πολλὸν συνέμεινεν ὁ γάμος, ἀλλὰ Βερνίκη δι' ἀκολασίαν, ὡς ἔφασαν, καταλείπει τὸν Πολέμωνα· ὁ δὲ ἄμα τοῦ γάμου καὶ τοῦ τοῖς θεοῖσι τῶν Ἰουδαίων ἐμμένειν ἀπῆλλακτο. Juvenal, Sat. vi. 156 sqq. "Adamas notissimus, et Bernices In digito factus pretiosior, hunc dedit olim Barbarus incestæ, dedit hunc Agrippa sorori, Observant ubi festa mero pede sabbata reges, Et vetus indulget senibus clementia porcis." Suetonius, in the life of Titus (7), says, "Suspecta in eo (Titō) etiam luxuria erat—nec minus libido propter exoletorum et spadonum greges, propterque insigne reginæ Berenices amorem, cui etiam nuptias pollicitus ferebatur—Berenicen statim ab urbe dimisit, invitum invitam." Tacit. Hist. ii. 81, "Regina Berenice—florens etate formæque, et seni quoque Vespasiano magnificentia munerum grata."

—ἀσπασόμενοι τὸν Φῆστον] to salute Festus on his promotion to the office of Procurator—a significant sentence: they came thither to pay their court to the Representative of Cæsar, and there they rejected the Gospel preached to them by the Ambassador of Christ.

15. καταδικῆναι] So A, B, C.—Elz. δίκην.

16. Ῥωμαίοις] not the Romans, but Romans, as such.

—ἄνθρωπον] Elz. adds εἰς ἀπάλειαν, which is not in A, B, C, E, and is probably a gloss.

18. ἔφερον] So A, B, C, E, G.—Elz. ἐπέφερον, which would rather mean 'brought in addition;' which is not the sense here.

—ἐγὼ ὑπενόουν] So A, B, C.—Elz. ὑπενόουν ἐγὼ: but ἐγὼ is emphatic here; 'their charges differed from what I was anticipating.'

—πονηρὰν] evil. So A, B, C, and many Cursives and Versions; the word is omitted by Elz. The word does not appear to be a gloss, but is well opposed to ζητήματα, which follows.

19. τῆς ἰδίας δεισιδαιμονίας] his own (i. e. Paul's) private superstition. Festus would not have spoken thus to Agrippa, the King of Judæa, concerning his religion.

21. Σεβαστοῦ] Augustus, at that time Nero. Cp. v. 10.

22. ἐβουλόμεν] I myself was wishing to hear the man,—of whom doubtless Agrippa already knew much. See xxvi. 26.

23, 24. Ἀγρίππα — Βερνίκης — Φῆστου] Agrippa—Bernice—Festus. St. Paul's arrest in the Temple at Jerusalem, and his appeal to his Roman citizenship, were made by Divine Providence the occasions for the public preaching of Christ on numerous great occasions, and to many illustrious auditories in different places; and thus the fury of Satan against him was overruled to the glory of God, and to the extension of the kingdom of Christ by the preaching of His Word, as follows—

(1) To the people at Jerusalem from the stairs of the Castle (xxi. 40; xxii. 1—21).

(2) To the High Priest and Sanhedrim there (xxiii. 1—6).

(3) To Felix and the Roman Garrison, the Chiliarchs or Captains of the Roman Cohorts at Caesarea (Joseph. B. J. iii. 4. 2), and other Chief Persons of that City (xxiv. 10—21).

(4) To Felix and Drusilla privately at Caesarea (xxiv. 24, 25).

ὁ Παῦλος. ²⁴ Καί φησιν ὁ Φῆστος, Ἀγρίππα βασιλεῦ, καὶ πάντες οἱ συμπαραὄντες ἡμῖν ἄνδρες, θεωρεῖτε τοῦτον, ἵπερὶ οὗ ἅπαν τὸ πλῆθος τῶν Ἰουδαίων ἐνέτυχόν μοι ἔν τε Ἱεροσολύμοις καὶ ἐνθάδε, ἐπιβοῶντες ^k μὴ δεῖν αὐτὸν ζῆν μηκέτι. ²⁵ Ἐγὼ δὲ κατελαβόμεν μὴδὲν ἄξιον αὐτὸν θανάτου πεπραχέναι αὐτοῦ δὲ τούτου ἐπικαλεσαμένου τὸν Σεβαστὸν, ἔκρινα πέμπειν αὐτόν. ²⁶ Περὶ οὗ ἀσφαλές τι γράφαι τῷ Κυρίῳ οὐκ ἔχω διὸ προήγαγον αὐτὸν ἐφ' ὑμῶν, καὶ μάλιστα ἐπὶ σοῦ, βασιλεῦ Ἀγρίππα, ὅπως, τῆς ἀνακρίσεως γενομένης, σχῶ τι γράψω. ²⁷ Ἀλογον γάρ μοι δοκεῖ, πέμποντα δέσμιον, μὴ καὶ τὰς κατ' αὐτοῦ αἰτίας σημᾶναι.

XXVI. ¹ Ἀγρίππας δὲ πρὸς τὸν Παῦλον ἔφη, Ἐπιτρέπεται σοι ὑπὲρ σεαυτοῦ λέγειν. Τότε ὁ Παῦλος ἐκτείνας τὴν χεῖρα ἀπελογεῖτο, ² Περὶ πάντων ὧν ἐγκαλοῦμαι ὑπὸ Ἰουδαίων, βασιλεῦ Ἀγρίππα, ἡγῆμαι ἐμαυτὸν μακάριον μέλλων ἀπολογεῖσθαι ἐπὶ σοῦ σήμερον. ³ μάλιστα γνώστην ὄντα σε πάντων τῶν κατὰ Ἰουδαίους ἐθῶν τε καὶ ζητημάτων διὸ δέομαί σου μακροθύμως ἀκοῦσαί μου.

⁴ Τὴν μὲν οὖν βίωσίν μου τὴν ἐκ νεότητος, τὴν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς γενομένην ἐν τῷ ἔθνει μου ἔν τε Ἱεροσολύμοις, ἰσάσι πάντες οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, ⁵ ^a προγινώσκοντές με ἄνωθεν, εἰάν θέλωσι μαρτυρεῖν, ὅτι κατὰ τὴν ἀκριβεστάτην αἵρεσιν τῆς ἡμετέρας θρησκείας ἔζησα Φαρισαῖος. ⁶ ^b Καὶ νῦν ἐπ' ἐλπίδι τῆς εἰς τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν ἐπαγγελίας γενομένης ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἔστηκα κρινόμενος. ⁷ εἰς ἣν τὸ δωδεκάφυλον ἡμῶν ἐν ἐκτενείᾳ νύκτα καὶ ἡμέραν λατρεῦον ἐλπίζει κατανῆσαι περὶ ἧς ἐλπίδος ἐγκαλοῦμαι, βασιλεῦ, ὑπὸ Ἰουδαίων. ⁸ Τί;

a ch. 23. 6.
 Phil. 3. 5.
 b Gen. 3. 15.
 & 22. 18.
 & 26. 4. & 49. 10.
 Deut. 18. 15.
 2 Sam. 7. 12.
 Ps. 132. 11.
 Isa. 4. 2.
 & 7. 14. & 9. 6.
 & 40. 10.
 Jer. 23. 5.
 & 33. 14.
 Ezek. 34. 23.
 & 37. 24.
 Dan. 9. 24.
 Micah 7. 20.
 ch. 24. 15, 21.

(5) To many others at Caesarea, to whom Paul had free access (xxiv. 23), during his two years, custody there.

(6) To Festus at Caesarea (xxv. 10).

(7) To Festus and King Agrippa, and Bernice, and the officers and Court there (xxv. 23—27, xxvi. 1—29).

(8) To the sailors and others in the voyage from Caesarea (xxvii.).

(9) To the chief and people of Malta (xxviii. 7—10).

(10) And lastly, the climax of all—at Rome, the Capital of the world (xxviii. 16—31). Well might St. Paul say what he did at Rome; “the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the Gospel.” See Phil. ii. 12.

It is a striking coincidence, that Herod Agrippa II., the son and successor, and Bernice and Drusilla, the daughters of Herod Agrippa I., were brought by Divine Providence to hear the preaching of the Apostle Paul, at Caesarea, the scene of the vain-glorious display and miserable end of their father, Herod Agrippa I., who had killed St. James, and imprisoned St. Peter (xii. 1. 3. 19—23).

Almighty God showed His long-suffering to the Princes, as well as to the People, of Judæa. He had sent the Baptist to Herod Antipas; he wrought a miracle to deliver St. Peter, and to awaken the conscience of Herod Agrippa the First; and his Children are now permitted to hear the word of God from St. Paul; a message made more solemn by the circumstances of their father's death. But as it was with the People, so also with the Princes of Judæa. They let the day of grace pass by. They neglected God's invitations and warnings; and in them the royal house of the Herods became extinct. Their kingdom was destroyed by those whose favour they courted, and to whom they looked for protection. They relied on the Roman power at Caesarea, rather than on the favour of the God of Jerusalem; and they were enslaved by the Cæsars, because they rejected Christ.

²⁵ μὴδὲν ἔξιν αὐτ. θανάτου] A confession of St. Paul's innocence from the mouth of his Judge. See also the avowal of Lysias above, xxiii. 29, and of Agrippa, xxvi. 31.

²⁶ τῷ Κυρίῳ] ‘Domino meo,’ my Lord; a title declined by Augustus (Tertull. Apol. 34. Sueton. Octav. 53) and by Tiberius (Tacit. Ann. ii. 87. Sueton. Tiber. 27), because in their judgment it was due only to the gods; but now accepted and borne by Nero, who murdered his mother Agrippina, and his wife Octavia, and his master Seneca, and set fire to his own capital, and persecuted and martyred the Christians for his own sin, and killed the Apostles, St. Peter and St. Paul.

In this world, he who calls Nero “his Lord,” has the disposal of him who calls Christ his Lord,—a proof of a future Resurrection and of a Judgment to come.

In the Acts of the Apostles, Christ is displayed as Κύριος, “Lord of Lords.” “Hæc ideò observo (says Weiststein here) ut intelligamus Lucam qui Christum vocat κατ' ἐξοχὴν Κύριον, divinam ejus naturam indicare voluisse.” See Introduction, p. 4.

—τῆς ἀνακρίσεως] the ‘divination,’ or preliminary inquiry.
 —γράφω] So A, B, C.—Elz. γράψαι, but γράψω is preferable. He was not simply desirous of having something to write, for writing's sake, but to have something that he might write with the prisoner whom he was obliged to send.

CH. XXVI. 1. τὴν χεῖρα] the right hand,—the hand which was at liberty;—the other was chained, v. 29.

St. Paul's courage and presence of mind in public assemblies is noted by St. Luke on several occasions by reference to the action of his hands (see xiii. 16; xxi. 40); and this reference is characteristic of the narrative of an eye-witness.

2. ἡγῆμαι] I have thought. St. Paul distinguishes between ἡγοῦμαι and ἡγῆμαι Phil. iii. 7, 8.

3. μάλιστα γνώστην ὄντα σε] because thou art eminently skilful. Winer, Gr. Gr. § 32, p. 206. So Eph. i. 18.

On Agrippa's zeal for the ἐθὺς of the Jews, see Joseph. Ant. xviii. 9; xix. 5. 6. Biscoe, p. 53, and the mention in the Talmud concerning his knowledge of the law; Schoettgen, p. 480.

5. ἀκριβεστάτην] strictest. A word frequently used also by Josephus to describe the sect of the Pharisees, to which he belonged. B. J. i. 5; ii. 18. Ant. xvii. 2.

6. πατέρας ἡμῶν] our fathers: ἡμῶν is not in Elz., but it is in A, B, C, E, and adds force to the argument. St. Paul, as a Christian Apostle, is studious to present himself in Agrippa's sight as a true Israelite, a legitimate heir of the promises to Abraham and the Fathers. Agrippa himself was a Proselyte.

7. τὸ δωδεκάφυλον ἡμῶν] our twelve tribes. See James i. 1. St. Paul appeals from the Jews at Jerusalem to the Jewish nation throughout the world. He calls them δωδεκάφυλον, making one body spiritually, though scattered every where locally.

—ἐγκαλοῦμαι, βασιλεῦ, ὑπὸ Ἰουδαίων] Elz. has ὑπὸ τῶν Ἰ., but τῶν is not in A, B, C, E, G, H; and the sense is stronger without it. “I, who am a Jew indeed (see v. 6), and am contending for the hope of Israel, am now accused by Jews.” Some MSS. place βασιλεῦ after Ἰουδαίων. But Ἰουδαίων stands with peculiar force at the end of the sentence. And so it is placed in A, G, H, and other MSS. Cp. the position of Ἰουδαῖοι in v. 4, Φαρισαῖος, v. 5; κρινόμενος, v. 6; Ἱεροσολύμοις, v. 10; ψῆφον, v. 10; and βλασφημεῖν, v. 11. In all these the κέντρον or aculeus of the sentence is at the end,—to leave a deeper impression in the mind. Cp. in St. Stephen's speech, Βαβυλῶνος, Acts vii. 43.

ἀπιστον κρίνεται παρ' ὑμῖν εἰ ὁ Θεὸς νεκροὺς ἐγείρει ; ^{9 c} Ἐγὼ μὲν οὖν ἔδοξα ^{c ch. 8. 3. & 9. 1. & 22. 4.} ἔμανθ' πρὸς τὸ ὄνομα Ἰησοῦ τοῦ Ναζωραίου δεῖν πολλὰ ἐναντία πράξαν. ^{1 Cor. 15. 9. Gal. 1. 13. 1 Tim. 1. 13. d ch. 8. 3.} ^{10 d} ὁ καὶ ἐποίησα ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις καὶ πολλοὺς τῶν ἁγίων ἐγὼ ἐν φυλακαῖς κατέκλεισα, τὴν παρὰ τῶν ἀρχιερέων ἐξουσίαν λαβών· ἀναιρουμένων τε αὐτῶν κατήνεγκα ψῆφον. ¹¹ Καὶ κατὰ πάσας τὰς συναγωγὰς πολλάκις τιμωρῶν αὐτοὺς ἠνάγκαζον βλασφημεῖν, περισσῶς τε ἐμμαινόμενος αὐτοῖς ἐδίδωκον ἕως καὶ εἰς τὰς ἔξω πόλεις. ^{12 e} Ἐν οἷς καὶ πορευόμενος εἰς τὴν Δαμασκὸν μετ' ^{e ch. 9. 2. & 22. 6. f ch. 9. 3.} ἐξουσίας καὶ ἐπιτροπῆς παρὰ τῶν ἀρχιερέων, ^{13 f} ἡμέρας μέσης κατὰ τὴν ὁδὸν εἶδον, βασιλεὺ, οὐρανόθεν ὑπὲρ τὴν λαμπρότητα τοῦ ἡλίου, περιλάμψαν με φῶς καὶ τοὺς σὺν ἐμοὶ πορευομένους. ¹⁴ Πάντων τε καταπεσόντων ἡμῶν εἰς τὴν γῆν, ἤκουσα φωνὴν λαλοῦσαν πρὸς με καὶ λέγουσαν τῇ Ἑβραϊδί διαλέκτῳ, Σαουλ, Σαουλ, τί με διώκεις ; σκληρόν σοι πρὸς κέντρα λακτίζειν. ¹⁵ Ἐγὼ δὲ εἶπον, Τίς εἰ, Κύριε ; ὁ δὲ Κύριος εἶπεν, Ἐγὼ εἰμι Ἰησοῦς, ὃν σὺ διώκεις. ^{16 g} Ἀλλὰ ἀνάστηθι, καὶ στῆθι ἐπὶ τοὺς πόδας σου· εἰς τοῦτο γὰρ ὤφθην σοι, ^{g ch. 9. 15, 17.} προχειρίσασθαί σε ὑπηρέτην καὶ μάρτυρα, ὧν τε εἶδες, ὧν τε ὀφθῆσομαί σοι, ¹⁷ ἐξαιρούμενός σε ἐκ τοῦ λαοῦ καὶ τῶν ἐθνῶν, εἰς οὓς ἐγὼ σὲ ἀποστέλλω,

8. εἰ] if: not for ἄν, nor for 'whether;' but 'if.' If God, Who is Omnipotent, raises the dead, will you be incredulous? No; rather, we ought to receive such evidence of His power and love to us with thankfulness and joy.

Cp. the similar use of εἰ in Clem. Rom. 26, θαναστὸν νομίζομεν εἶναι εἰ ὁ δημιουργὸς πάντων ἀνάστασιν ποιήσεται (Grinfield).

— ἐγείρει] raiseth. The present tense indicates a permanent attribute, and repeated act, of God.

10. πολλοὺς τῶν ἁγίων] many of the saints. Cp. Acts ix. 1, Σαῦλος ἐμπνέων φόνου. The death of St. Stephen is the only martyrdom described in the Acts, but doubtless there were many others, of which it is a specimen. See Heb. x. 32–34. The words, Heb. xii. 4, "Ye have not yet resisted unto blood," addressed to the private Christians of Palestine, do not preclude the supposition, that many of their teachers, and many of the faithful at an earlier time, had suffered martyrdom for Christ. See Stuart on Hebrews, i. p. 72, § 10.

— τὴν—ἐξουσίαν] the requisite authority and commission, which made them responsible for my conduct, which is also thus proved to be of public notoriety, and cannot be questioned.

— κατήνεγκα ψῆφον] I gave a vote against them. It would seem that Saul himself had been a member of the Sanhedrim, and took part in its Judicial proceedings, by hearing causes and voting upon them. "Presbyteratūs dignitatem (of a Jewish Elder) à Gamaliele accepisse Paulum, antequam Christo nomen dederat, non videtur dubitandum." Selden, de Synedr. ii. 7. 7. Vitringa, de Synag. iii. 7, p. 707. Biscoe, p. 269. Though called a young man, νεανίας (vii. 58), he was probably at least thirty years of age. Wieseler, p. 155. On the phrase ἐνέγκαι ψῆφον, see Welsl. p. 633.

11. κατὰ πάσας τὰς συναγωγὰς] through all the synagogues. A fulfilment of Christ's prophecy, Mark xiii. 9. St. Paul himself was often afterwards scourged in the Synagogue, 2 Cor. xi. 24. On the practice of scourging in the synagogues, see Selden, de Synedr. ii. 10. Biscoe, p. 270, who examines the question why Paul was scourged in the Synagogue, but not 'put out of the Synagogue,' John ix. 22; xii. 42.

12. ἐν οἷς] A phrase used by St. Paul, xxiv. 18.

— ἐπιτροπῆς] commission,—a proof of his former dignity, and of what he sacrificed for Christ. On the history, see Acts ix. 3; xxii. 6.

13. φῶς] light. If such was the splendour of His appearance then, and such its effects,—what will they be, when He comes hereafter in His glorious Majesty to judge the quick and dead?

14. τ. Ἑβραϊδί διαλέκτῳ] in the Hebrew tongue. St. Paul, therefore, was not now speaking in Hebrew, but probably in Greek. This appears also from a comparison of this passage with xxii. 7, where he was speaking in Hebrew, xxi. 40.

— τί με διώκεις;] Not τί διώκεις μέ; but τί με δ.; με is emphatic. Me,—the Lord of all; Me, thy Saviour and King; Me, the Head of the Church, Who am persecuted by those who persecute her. See above, ix. 4.

— σκληρόν σοι πρὸς κέντρα λακτίζειν] A proverb taken from the act of an ox kicking against the goad which wounds him whenever he kicks. (Vorst. de Adag. N. T. p. 821.) "Durum est tibi adversus stimulum calces mittere," says Aug. Serm. 169, "possem enim te dimittere; tu vexareris punctionibus Meis, non Ego frangerer calcibus tuis, sed non te dimitto. Sævius, et misereor; Quid Me persequeris? Non enim timeo te, ne iterum Me crucifigas; sed volo agnoscas Me, ne occidas non Me sed te."

It is not (as some have supposed) divine grace, but the resistless power and punitive justice of Christ, which are here compared to the κέντρον, or goad. By persecuting others, Saul was resisting Him Who is irresistible, and provoking Him Who is the Judge of all,—ἄλλους δῶκον αὐτὸς ἐκδιώκεται. He is impinging on the "stone of stumbling," which will grind him to powder. Luke xx. 18.

Even when in Heaven, our Blessed Lord did not disdain to use a proverb familiar to the Heathen world. Cp. Pindar, Pyth. ii. 173, φέρειν δ' ἐλαφρῶς Ἐπαυχένιον λαβόντα Ξυγὸν γ' ἀρήγει. Ποτὶ κέντρον δέ τοι λακτίζεμεν τελέθει δόλισθρος οἶμος. Æschyl. Prom. 323, οὐκ οἶμιγε χρώμενος διδασκάλῳ Πρὸς κέντρα κῶλον ἐκτενεῖς, where the Scholiast says, πρὸς κέντρα κῶλον ἐκτείνει ὁ βοῦς, λακτίζει δὲ κεντούμενος ὑπὸ κέντρον, ὥστε λακτίζει πρὸς κέντρον καὶ τὸ κῶλον αἰμάσσει. Ὅ γὰρ πρὸς κέντρα λακτίζων τοὺς ἰδίους πόδας αἰμάσσει. Φησὶν οὖν ἐν μοι μὴ πεισθῆς, βλάψεις σεαυτὸν—ἔστι δὲ παροιμία. Agamemn. 1633, πρὸς κέντρα μὴ λακτίζει, μὴ πῆσας μογῆς. Eurip. Bacch. 791, θυμούμενος πρὸς κέντρα λακτίζοιμι, θνητὸς ὃν θεῶ. Terent. Phorm. i. 2. 27, "Venere in mentem mihi isthæc: nam quæ inscitia est, Advorsum stimulum calces!"

On our Lord's use of Proverbs, see Matt. vii. 3; xiii. 52. Luke v. 39.

The adage is fitly introduced by St. Paul in this speech before a heathen Procurator and a mixed audience at Cæsarea, but was not recited in his address at Jerusalem, xxii. 7. It was very suitable to be addressed to him who was to be the Apostle of the Gentiles. The ox is a Scriptural emblem for the Christian Minister (Isa. xxxii. 20) drawing the plough over the field which is to receive the seed of the Word; or as treading out the corn when grown, in order that it may be ground into bread. It is used as such by St. Paul himself, 1 Cor. ix. 9. 1 Tim. v. 18.

16. ὀφθῆσομαι] I will reveal myself. A prophetic intimation that Saul was to expect further revelations from Jesus; this promise was afterwards fulfilled in Arabia (Gal. i. 11. 17), at Jerusalem (xxiii. 11), and elsewhere (2 Cor. xii. 1–7).

17. ἐξαιρούμενος] 'eripiens,' Vulg. ῥυόμενος, Hesych.; 'delivering thee from,' Authorized English Version,—a rendering censured by some learned Expositors, e.g. Heinrichs, Kuin., and others, who translate it, 'choosing thee.' But how could St. Paul be said to be chosen from the Gentiles? And the word ἐξαίρεισθαι is used for 'deliver' four times in the Acts, vii. 10. 34; xii. 11; xxiii. 27, which, with the present passage, are the only places where it is found in this book. Indeed, ἐξαίρεισθαι is never used for 'choose' in the New Testament.

It may be observed here, in justice to the Authorized Version, that it has not unfrequently been condemned for renderings preferable to those which some persons, who censure it, have proposed to substitute for them. See xxi. 16; xxvi. 22; xxvii. 12.

— σὲ ἀποστέλλω] σὲ is emphatic; i.e. thou, now a Persecutor, art to be My Apostle to them. I am sending thee to them. See on Rom. i. 1. Christ gave an Apostolic commission to St. Paul at his Conversion; but St. Paul was not ordained and enabled h Isa. 35. 5.

& 42. 7.
& 60. 1.
Eph. 1. 18.
Col. 1. 13.
1 Pet. 2. 25.
ch. 20. 32.
i Isa. 50. 5.
k ch. 9. 20, 28.
& 13. 14.
κ 22. 17, 21.
Matt. 3. 8.

l ch. 21. 30.

m 1 Pet. 1. 11
ver. 18.
1 Cor. 15. 20.
Col. 1. 18.
Rev. 1. 5.
Luke 2. 32.

n 1 Cor. 1. 23.
& 2. 14.
John 10. 20.

o John 18. 20.

18^h ἀνοίξαι ὀφθαλμοὺς αὐτῶν, τοῦ ἐπιστρέψαι ἀπὸ σκοτόους εἰς φῶς καὶ τῆς ἐξουσίας τοῦ Σατανᾶ ἐπὶ τὸν Θεόν, τοῦ λαβεῖν αὐτοὺς ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν καὶ κλῆρον ἐν τοῖς ἡγιασμένοις, πίστει τῇ εἰς ἐμέ. 19ⁱ Ὁθεν, βασιλεῦ Ἀγρίππα, οὐκ ἐγενόμην ἀπειθῆς τῇ οὐρανίῳ ὀπτασίᾳ. 20^k ἀλλὰ τοῖς ἐν Δαμασκῷ πρῶτον καὶ Ἱεροσολύμοις, εἰς πᾶσάν τε τὴν χώραν τῆς Ἰουδαίας καὶ τοῖς ἔθνεσιν, ἀπήγγελλον μετανοεῖν, καὶ ἐπιστρέφειν ἐπὶ τὸν Θεόν, ἅξια τῆς μετανοίας ἔργα πράσσοντας. 21^l Ἐνεκα τούτων με οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι συλλαβόμενοι ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ ἐπειρῶντο διαχειρίσασθαι. 22 Ἐπικουρίας οὖν τυχὼν τῆς ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἄχρι τῆς ἡμέρας ταύτης ἔστηκα, μαρτυρόμενος μικρῷ τε καὶ μεγάλῳ, οὐδὲν ἐκτὸς λέγων ὧν τε οἱ προφῆται ἐλάλησαν μελλόντων γίνεσθαι καὶ Μωϋσῆς, 23^m εἰ παθητὸς ὁ Χριστὸς, εἰ πρῶτος ἐξ ἀναστάσεως νεκρῶν φῶς μέλλει καταγγέλλειν τῷ λαῷ καὶ τοῖς ἔθνεσι;

24ⁿ Ταῦτα δὲ αὐτοῦ ἀπολογουμένου, ὁ Φῆστος μεγάλῃ τῇ φωνῇ ἔφη, Μαίνῃ, Παῦλε· τὰ πολλὰ σε γράμματα εἰς μαίναν περιτρέπει.

25 Ὁ δὲ Παῦλος, Οὐ μαίνομαι, φησὶ, κράτιστε Φῆστε, ἀλλ' ἀληθείας καὶ σωφροσύνης ῥήματα ἀποφθέγγομαι. 26^o Ἐπίσταται γὰρ περὶ τούτων ὁ βασιλεὺς, πρὸς ὃν καὶ παρῤῥησιαζόμενος λαλῶ· λανθάνειν γὰρ αὐτόν τι τούτων οὐ πείθομαι οὐδέν· οὐ γάρ ἐστιν ἐν γωνίᾳ πεπραγμένον τοῦτο. 27 Πιστεύεις, βασιλεῦ Ἀγρίππα, τοῖς προφήταις; οἶδα ὅτι πιστεύεις.

28 Ὁ δὲ Ἀγρίππας πρὸς τὸν Παῦλον, Ἐν ὀλίγῳ μὲ πείθεις Χριστιανὸν γενέσθαι.

by the Holy Ghost to execute the Apostolic office till some years afterwards. See above on xiii. 1, 2. In like manner also, the other Apostles received an Apostolic mission from Christ, to go into all the world, after His Resurrection; but they were commanded by Him to tarry in Jerusalem after His Ascension, till they should be endued with power from on high (Luke xxiv. 49. Acts i. 4. 9); and they were not ordained and empowered by the Holy Ghost to execute their Apostolic functions until the Day of Pentecost.

This is very necessary to be observed, because some persons have dated St. Paul's Apostleship from his Conversion; thus excluding the Holy Spirit from His proper work in the Ordination of St. Paul. See note above on xiii. 2.

19. οὐκ ἐγενόμην ἀπειθῆς] I did not become disobedient. Therefore, even in this extraordinary case of St. Paul, divine Grace was not irresistible. (Bengel.) He might have been disobedient, if he had not taken care to live with a pure conscience. Acts xxiii. 1.

22. ἀπό] So A, B, E.—Elz. παρά. ἀπὸ is more expressive; the ἐπικουρία proceeding from, as well as given by, God.

—μαρτυρούμενος] So A, B, G, H; 'testificans' (Vulg.); 'witnessing' (Auth. Vers.),—a rendering censured by Meyer and De Wette, who read μαρτυρούμενος, and translate it, 'witnessed to by small and great.' Cp. above, v. 16 and xx. 26, and note on 1 Thess. ii. 11.

23. εἰ] for ὅτι, says Theophyl. p. 308, and so Chrys. But it may retain its proper sense, whether, and so it marks the modesty of St. Paul. It does not depend on ἐλάλησαν, but on λέγων,—and the sense is, 'I debated the question whether (as I affirm) the Christ was to be capable of suffering, and whether He was to be first,' &c. See xvii. 11, ἀνακρίνοντες εἰ ἔχοι ταῦτα οὕτως. xxv. 20, ἔλεγον εἰ βούλοιο. 'I did not shrink from these inquiries, but argued them with the Jews.'

—παθητός] passibilis. So Ignat. Eph. 7, πρῶτον παθητὸς, καὶ τότε ἀπαθής. Cp. Phil. 9, παθητὸν χριστὸν αἱ γραφαὶ κηρύσσουσιν. Polycarp. 3, τὸν ἀπαθῆ, τὸν δὲ ἡμᾶς παθητόν. Justin M. c. Tryph. 36, παθητὸς Χριστὸς προεφητεύθη μέλλειν εἶναι. That the one and the same Messiah should not only reign but suffer, be made perfect through suffering, and so enter into His glory, was a doctrine which even the disciples had yet to learn at the close of Christ's ministry. (Luke xxiv. 26. 46.) But they did learn it under the influence of the Holy Ghost (Acts iii. 18; xvii. 3) afterwards, when τὰ παθήματα τοῦ Χριστοῦ were often in their mouths. 2 Cor. i. 5—7. Phil. iii. 10. Heb. ii. 9, 10. 1 Pet. i. 11; iv. 13; v. 1. See Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. iv. pp. 344—360; see also Art. ii. p. 164.

24. μεγάλη τῇ φωνῇ] with his voice raised. See xiv. 10. 1 Cor. xi. 5. Winer, § 18, p. 98.

—μαίνῃ, Παῦλε] Thou art mad, Paul; 'we fools accounted his life madness;' see Wisd. v. 4,—a lesson happily chosen by the Church for St. Paul's day. Cp. 2 Cor. v. 13, εἰ γὰρ ἐξ-έστημεν, Θεῷ.

—τὰ πολλὰ γράμματα] thy much learning. John vii. 15.

25. οὐ μαίνομαι] 'I am not mad now; I am now sober.' He had charged himself with exceeding madness in his former career as a Persecutor, v. 11.

26. τοῦτο] this. The last word in the sentence, and emphatic. See above, v. 17. In a corner was not done this; i. e. this my Conversion; it was in the public road at mid-day; not so, the two conspiracies of the Jews to take away my life (xxiii. 16; xxv. 3). They were done in a corner.

28. ἐν ὀλίγῳ μὲ πείθεις Χριστιανὸν γενέσθαι] in a trice thou art persuading me to become a Christian. The meaning of these words, and of St. Paul's reply, which must be considered with them, has been the subject of much controversy. It appears to be as follows:

St. Paul had been relating to Agrippa the history of his own sudden conversion from a strict Pharisee (v. 5) and bitter Persecutor of the Church (v. 9), to a Christian Confessor and Apostle (vv. 16—20).

Festus had interrupted him by the exclamation, "thou art mad, Paul." Paul, having denied that assertion, and having asserted his own sanity, next turns himself to Agrippa, and appeals to his knowledge of what had been said. He then makes a personal application to him as a Jew, and appeals to his faith in the Hebrew Scriptures of Moses and the Prophets. And on the ground of that faith he urges him to take the next step as a logical consequence of that faith, and to confess Christ, and declare himself a Christian (see vv. 22—27).

Agrippa feels the force of the appeal; he does not deny the truth of St. Paul's premises, nor does he say that the duty of confessing Christ is not their reasonable conclusion; but he endeavours to parry the blow, and evade its force. He tries to repel St. Paul's appeal by a personal reference to his case. Thou hast described thine own conversion to Christianity. It was very rapid and sudden; it was effected ἐν ὀλίγῳ, in a short time,—in a moment,—as it were with a word and a blow. This might have been very well for thee, who hast had, as thou sayest, a call from heaven to become a Christian. It may be right that I also should embrace Christianity; but such a great and important change requires much time and thought, for one like myself in high estate and royal dignity,—one who is a Jewish king and has the charge of the Temple. What a change would that be to me! —to me, the head of the royal house of the Herods, to become a Christian! You are hurrying me on too fast. You are attempting to do in a short time, and with little effort, what requires a long time and great consideration. You are endeavouring to do with me what you say was done with you. Hence the words are not πείθεις με, but μὲ πείθεις. Ἐν ὀλίγῳ μὲ πείθεις Χριστιανὸν γενέσθαι, 'You are attempting in a short time and with a few words, and with a slight effort, to persuade me to imitate thee, and to become a Christian at once.

²⁹ Ὁ δὲ Παῦλος εἶπεν, ^p Εὐξαίμην ἂν τῷ Θεῷ καὶ ἐν ὀλίγῳ καὶ ἐν πολλῷ οὐ ^{p 1 Cor. 7. 7.} μόνον σὲ ἀλλὰ καὶ πάντας τοὺς ἀκούοντάς μου σήμερον γενέσθαι τοιούτους ὁποῖος καὶ γὰρ εἰμι, παρεκτὸς τῶν δεσμῶν τούτων.

³⁰ Ἀνέστη τε ὁ βασιλεὺς, καὶ ὁ ἡγεμὼν, ἣ τε Βερνίκη, καὶ οἱ συγκαθήμενοι αὐτοῖς, ³¹ ^q καὶ ἀναχωρήσαντες ἐλάλουν πρὸς ἀλλήλους λέγοντες, Ὅτι οὐδὲν ^{q ch. 23. 9. & 25. 25.} θανάτου ἄξιον ἢ δεσμῶν πράσσει ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος. ³² Ἀγρίππας δὲ τῷ Φῆστῳ ἔφη, Ἀπολελῦσθαι ἡδύνατο ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος, εἰ μὴ ἐπεκέκλητο Καίσαρα.

XXVII. ¹ ^a Ὡς δὲ ἐκρίθη τοῦ ἀποπλεῖν ἡμᾶς εἰς τὴν Ἰταλίαν, παρεδίδουν ^{a ch. 25. 12, 25.} τὸν τε Παῦλον καὶ τινὰς ἐτέρους δεσμώτας ἑκατοντάρχη, ὀνόματι Ἰουλίῳ, σπείρης Σεβαστῆς.

As Æcumenius (p. 177) well explains it, δι' ὀλίγων ῥημάτων, ἐν βραχείᾳ λόγους, ἐν ὀλίγῃ διδασκαλίᾳ, χωρὶς πολλοῦ πόνου καὶ συνεχοῦς διαλέξεως. And so Cassiodor, "sub celeritate vis me facere Christianum."

This interpretation is also confirmed by the reading of A, πείθω—ποιῆσαι, i. e. you persuade yourself that you can make me a Christian ἐν ὀλίγῳ,—as you were made. The latter reading, ποιῆσαι, is also in B, and has been received by Lachm. and Tisch., not by Born. and Alf.

Further, it is illustrated by the other passage, where ἐν ὀλίγῳ occurs in the New Testament, viz. Eph. iii. 3, προέγραψα ἐν ὀλίγῳ, in a short compass; which is similar to St. Peter's δι' ὀλίγων ἔγραψα, 1 Pet. v. 12; and there is a similar ellipsis of χρόνον after ὀλίγων in Rev. xvii. 10, ὀλίγων αὐτὸν δεῖ μέναι.

This exposition is also corroborated by St. Paul's reply, which may be thus paraphrased:

"You speak of my reliance on my powers of persuasion to bring you to become what I myself am. You think that I am hoping and endeavouring to hurry you on into a profession of Christianity by my oratory. No; I rely not on human eloquence, but on divine grace. That it was which converted me. And in your case also, I do not rely on persuasion, but on prayer,—not on the arguments of Paul, but on supplications to God." Perhaps St. Paul thought of St. Stephen's prayer for himself (vii. 60). Perhaps Stephen's words were so ordered by the Holy Spirit as to give to that prayer a part in the work of his own conversion. Persuade I may not, in a short time and with little effort, but pray I may and will to God, not only now, in a brief address, and with little labour, but in a long time, and with great earnestness and intensity, that not only thou (σὺ is emphatic, as the preceding μέ); but that all who hear me this day may become such as I am,—except these bonds."

Thus St. Paul calmly disposes of Agrippa's disparaging allusion to the case of his Conversion, as if that had been unduly hasty, sudden, and precipitate. He disclaims the notion which Agrippa had ascribed to him, of attempting to carry him away by the force of his powers of persuasion; he vindicates for divine grace its proper place in all works of genuine Conversion, and therefore in his own; and he extends the range of his appeal from Agrippa to all who heard him; and he instructs all Christian advocates to endeavour to win souls to Christ by fervent and unwearied prayer.

—Χριστιανόν] a Christian. A more courteous term than the Ναζωραῖος of Tertullus, xxiv. 5: but probably here used ironically. The first time that we hear the word 'Christian' actually employed in a speech, is here in the mouth of an Idumean Prince; a proof that it was commonly known as a name of the believers, although it only occurs three times in the New Testament. Acts xi. 26, here, and 1 Pet. iv. 16.

Herod Agrippa II., who had received from Rome the privilege of superintending the Temple at Jerusalem, and of nominating the High Priests (Joseph. xx. 1. 3), is here presented as an example of knowledge, without moral courage to act upon it. This is also the clue which unravels the mysterious inconsistencies in the character and writings of Agrippa's friend (Joseph. Ant. xx. ad finem. Euseb. iii. 10), the Jewish historian Josephus; on which subject the Editor may, perhaps, be permitted to refer to what has been said by him more fully in another place, as illustrating the case of Agrippa also. (Sermon "On the Life and Character of Josephus.")

Agrippa lived to see the destruction of that Temple and Ritual of which he had the charge; he saw them dissolved and ruined by that secular Power, to which, from motives of policy and worldly expediency, he had attached himself.

What might have been the destiny of Herod and of Jerusalem, if he had possessed the moral courage of St. Paul!

²⁹ εὐξαίμην ἂν τῷ Θεῷ] See the note on v. 28. The words καὶ ἐν ὀλίγῳ are not to be joined to what follows (a forced connexion), but to what precedes: "Persuade I may not be able now, but pray I well might now and ever."

Πολλῷ is found in the majority of MSS. and in Chrys. and other Fathers; but A, B, and four Cursives have μεγάλῳ, which has been received by Lach., Tisch., Born., and Alf. It may perhaps be the true reading; but A, B are not always trustworthy guides (see Bornemann on xxiii. 16; xxv. 1); and here, v. 28, they have ποιῆσαι, and A has πείθω, which readings seem to proceed from a criticism that did not scruple to modify the text. Besides, St. Luke uses μεγάλῳ as opposed to μικρῷ, v. 22, and viii. 10. μεγάλη has been substituted for πολλή by some MSS. in viii. 8.

The words are well explained by Æcumenius, ἐν ὀλίγῳ καὶ ἐν πολλῷ, ἀντὶ τοῦ ἐν ὀλίγῳ λόγων ἀγωνί, εἰ δέοι καὶ ἐν πλείονι, εὐξαίμην σε Χριστιανὸν ἂν γενέσθαι διὰ πάντων πρῶτον εἰμι πάντα ποιεῖν ἐπὶ τῇ σῇ σωτηρίᾳ, οὐ τῇ σῇ μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν συνόντων.

For a similar charitable speech from St. Paul, see 2 Cor. ix. 14.

³⁰ ἀνέστη] he rose up. And so the opportunity was lost. The suddenness of the loss seems to be marked by the rapid transition in the words of the Historian.

—ἣ τε Βερνίκη] and Bernice: Bernice and Drusilla, daughters of King Agrippa I., and sisters of Agrippa II. (see above on xxv. 13), jealous of one another, and of profligate lives (Joseph. xx. 6. 1), are associated with two Roman Procurators in succession; Drusilla with Felix, her reputed husband; Bernice with Festus, through Agrippa her brother, in the public hearing of St. Paul at Cæsarea, where he was imprisoned through the envy of the Rulers of Jerusalem.

Thus the Gospel of Christ was brought into contact with the vices of both sexes, and of the Roman and Jewish world. How difficult was the work of moral purification it had to perform!

By hallowing Marriage as a "great Mystery" (Eph. v. 32), as a "representation of the mystical Union and Marriage betwixt Himself and His Church," Christ regenerated the World.

But, if Marriage is to be desecrated and degraded, from a Holy Mystery to a secular bargain; if Divorce is to be made easy by Law; then all the evils of the age of Nero will again flow in upon society; and we may see Bernices and Drusillas sitting with great pomp in high places of this world, and taking cognizance of the doctrines of St. Paul.

³¹ οὐδὲν θανάτου ἄξιον—πράσσει] St. Paul's innocence was declared by all who took cognizance of his cause. And consequently the Jews were condemned by them. As Chrys. says, Lysias condemned them, Felix condemned them, Festus condemned them, Agrippa condemned them, and ultimately God condemned them, and destroyed their Temple and their City for their hostility to the Gospel.

CH. XXVII. 1. ὡς ἐκρίθη τοῦ ἀποπλεῖν ἡμᾶς] when it was determined that we should sail away (from Cæsarea) into Italy. On the genitive of the article and the infinitive, see above on Luke ii. 21. Acts xx. 3; xxiii. 15. Winer, § 44, p. 290.

—ἐτέρους] prisoners of a different class, not ἄλλους. See xii. 17, ἕτερον τόπον: xxiii. 6.

—Ἰουλίῳ—Σεβαστῆς] Julius, of the Augustan cohort. Every incident, however minute, which is recorded by the Holy Spirit in b 2 Cor. 11. 25.

ch. 19, 29.
& 20. 4.
Col. 4. 10.
c ch. 24. 23.
& 28. 16.

^{2 b} Ἐπιβάντες δὲ πλοῖω Ἀδραμυττηνῶ, μέλλοντι πλεῖν τοὺς κατὰ τὴν Ἀσίαν τόπους, ἀνήχθημεν, ὄντος σὺν ἡμῖν Ἀριστάρχου Μακεδόνης Θεσσαλονικέως. ^{3 c} Τῇ τε ἐτέρᾳ κατήχθημεν εἰς Σιδῶνα· φιλανθρώπως τε ὁ Ἰούλιος τῷ Παύλῳ χρησάμενος ἐπέτρεψε πρὸς τοὺς φίλους πορευθέντα ἐπιμελείας τυχεῖν. ⁴ Κἀκεῖθεν ἀναχθέντες ὑπεπλεύσαμεν τὴν Κύπρον, διὰ τὸ τοὺς ἀνέμους εἶναι ἐναντίους· ⁵ τό τε πέλαγος τὸ κατὰ τὴν Κιλικίαν καὶ Παμφυλίαν διαπλεύσαντες κατήλθομεν εἰς Μύρα τῆς Λυκίας. ⁶ Κἀκεῖ εὐρὼν ὁ ἐκατόνταρχος πλοῖον Ἀλεξανδρίνον πλέον εἰς τὴν Ἰταλίαν ἐνεβίβασεν ἡμᾶς εἰς αὐτό. ⁷ Ἐν ἱκαναῖς δὲ ἡμέραις βραδυπλοοῦντες, καὶ μόλις γενόμενοι κατὰ τὴν Κνίδον, μὴ προσεῶντος ἡμᾶς τοῦ ἀνέμου, ὑπεπλεύσαμεν τὴν Κρήτην κατὰ Σαλμώνην· ⁸ μόλις τε παραλεγόμενοι αὐτὴν ἤλθομεν εἰς τόπον τινα καλούμενον Καλοὺς Λιμένας, ὃ ἐγγὺς ἦν πόλις Λασαία. ⁹ Ἰκανοῦ δὲ χρόνου διαγενομένου, this narrative of that great event, the conveyance of the Gospel to Rome, the capital of the world, by the ministry of the Apostle of the Gentiles, is noticeable, and seems to have been ordered by Divine Providence, so as to show that all things will be made subservient to the progress and triumph of Christianity.

St. Paul goes from Cæsarea; and it is mentioned by St. Luke that he was conducted by a Roman Centurion, recalling to the mind by his name, and that of his cohort, those of the first two Emperors, Julius and Augustus.

It is also probable that the cohort here mentioned belonged to the body-guard of the Emperor. See Tacit. Ann. xiv. 15, "cohors Augustanorum." Sueton. Ner. 25. Dion Cass. lxxiii. 8. Wieseler, p. 391. It is not said that the Cohort itself was at Cæsarea; but Julius, the Centurion of that Cohort, was.

If this is so, it is observable, that an Officer, whose duty it was to protect the person of the Master of the Roman World, is here employed by God to save the life of St. Paul (v. 43).

And surely it is not without some prophetic and spiritual meaning, that St. Paul was empowered, through his influence with Julius, the Centurion of the Augustan cohort, to save the lives of his fellow-prisoners in the ship (v. 43). See further below, on xxviii. 15, 16, on the subserviency of human powers to the Gospel under the overruling control of God.

2. Ἀδραμυττηνῶ] of Adramyttium, on the coast of Mysia. Steph. Byz. de Urb. p. 22. Wetst. p. 636.

— μέλλοντι] So A, B, and many Cursives and Versions.—Elz. μέλλοντες.

— πλεῖν] A, B add eis, which has been received by Lachm. and Tisch., not by Bornemann, Bloomf., or Alf. And it is not probable that if eis had been in the original text, it would have been here rejected; whereas, it was not unlikely to have been introduced by Copyists, not familiar with the more recondite phrase, πλεῖν τόπους, on which compare Hanno, Periplus ap. Wetstein, πλεῖν τοὺς παραθαλασσίους τόπους, and Pausan. i. 35, τὴν Ἀττικὴν ἐν ἀριστερᾷ πλέουσιν (Bornemann), and the remarks of Winer, Gr. Gr. § 32, p. 200, who refers to Poppeo, Thuc. vi. 36. The sense is, The ship was about to sail by the places along the coast of Asia.—πλεῖν εἰς would signify that it was sailing to them with an intention of touching at them, which does not appear to have been the case.

It would seem that the original intention was, that St. Paul and the other prisoners should take their passage to Adramyttium, and proceed by the overland route across Greece toward Italy; as St. Paul probably afterwards did, in his last journey to Rome; and as S. Ignatius also did; each of them going thither to Martyrdom. See below on 2 Tim. iv. 13.

— Ἀριστάρχου] Aristarchus. See xix. 29; xx. 4. Col. iv. 10. Philem. 24. St. Luke mentions the name of Aristarchus—but not his own.

3. φιλανθρώπως] kindly. An evidence of the truth of this History. The Writer of the Acts has no desire to magnify unduly the sufferings of St. Paul. Cp. xxviii. 31.

4. ὑπεπλεύσαμεν] we sailed under the lee of. Their course must have been along the north coast of Cyprus (not the South), because they sailed not through narrow straits, but deep, through the πέλαγος (not θάλασσα: cp. Matt. xviii. 6), or broad expanse of water (πλάτος θαλάσσης, Hesych.), off the shore of Cilicia and Pamphylia. See Smith, pp. 63—67.

The mention of Mr. Smith's work ("On the Voyage and Shipwreck of St. Paul," with Dissertations, by James Smith, Esq., of Jordanhill, F.R.S., 2nd ed. Lond. 1856) suggests an expression of thankfulness for the happy combination of Geographical, Archæological, and Naval knowledge, in that illustration of this narrative, and for the example there displayed of the application of science and experience to the exposition of the divine Word.

We may also refer here to Mr. Howson's Chapter on the Voyage and Shipwreck of St. Paul, one of the most interesting portions of that attractive work; ch. xxiii. of the two Volumes by Messrs. Conybeare and Howson, on St. Paul's Life and Epistles.

The narrative of this Chapter is also well illustrated in Mr. Lewin's Life and Epistles of St. Paul, pp. 713—742.

5. Μύρα] Myra, neuter plural. Μύρα, πόλις Λυκίας, λέγεται καὶ θηλυκὸν καὶ οὐδέτερον. (Steph. Byz.) Its remains are described by Howson, ii. p. 387.

6. πλοῖον Ἀλεξανδρίνον] A merchantman, probably a "navis frumentaria," or corn-ship, from Alexandria, the capital of Egypt, the granary of Italy. Cp. Sueton. Galb. 10. Tacit. Hist. iv. 52. Varro, R. R. ii. proem. Lucan vi. 105. See v. 38.

How came the Alexandrine ship, sailing to Italy, to be at Myra in Lycia?

The wind was westerly (v. 4), and the ships of the ancients were not fitted for working to windward; and under the circumstances of the case, the Alexandrine ship would stand to north till it came to the land of Asia Minor, which is very favourable for navigation by such vessels, the coast being bold and safe, and abounding in harbours. The Alexandrine ship was carried to Myra by the same westerly winds that forced the Adramyttian vessel to the east of Cyprus. (Smith, p. 71.) Cp. Wetst., p. 638, who shows from the history of the voyage of S. Athanasius in A.D. 349, from Alexandria to Rome, that Alexandrine ships sometimes took that course, especially in unfavourable weather. Cp. Socrates, H. E. ii. 24. Sozomen, vi. 25.

Some of these Alexandrine corn-ships were large and noble vessels, as was this in which St. Paul sailed. See v. 37. For examples of their bulk see Lucian, Navig. 5, and for other particulars with respect to them, Seneca, Ep. 77. Sueton., Aug. 98.

7. βραδυπλοοῦντες] slowly sailing; the opposite term to εὐθυδρομοῦντες (xvi. 11; xxi. 1).

— μόλις] with difficulty (see vv. 8. 16. 1 Pet. iv. 18) having arrived over against Cnidus.

— μὴ προσεῶντος] The words μὴ προσεῶντος are not to be joined to what precedes, but to what follows. Since the wind did not allow us to advance, we sailed under the lee of Crete (i. e. along the east coast of it), towards Salmone, which is s.w. by s. from Cnidus. The wind was therefore North-west; a wind which prevails in the Eastern part of the Archipelago in the summer months. (Purdy's Sailing Directions for the Mediterranean, p. 197. Smith, p. 74.) It is the same wind as the Etesiae of the ancients. (Plin. ii. 4.) — Σαλμώνην] Salmone. "Creta longissima est, ad orientem habens Sammonium promontorium adversum Rhodo." Plin. N. H. iv. 20.

8. παραλεγόμενοι] coasting it along the southern shore: they were not able to coast along the north shore of Crete, on account of the adverse wind.

— Καλοὺς Λιμένας] still preserving its ancient name (Pococke's Travels, ii. 250), as does Lasea, which is about five miles to the East of it. (Smith, pp. 80. 245. 262.)

About two leagues to the west of Fair Havens is Cape Matala, where the coast of Crete begins to run northward, at nearly the central point of the south side of Crete.

The plural number (Καλοὶ Λιμένες) seems to be due to the circumstances of its having two open roadsteads; one a little to the east of the other.

καὶ ὄντος ἤδη ἐπισφαλοῦς τοῦ πλοῦς, διὰ τὸ καὶ τὴν νηστείαν ἤδη παρεληλυθέναι, παρήνει ὁ Παῦλος ¹⁰ λέγων αὐτοῖς, "Ἄνδρες, θεωρῶ ὅτι μετὰ ὕβρεως καὶ πολλῆς ζημίας, οὐ μόνον τοῦ φορτίου καὶ τοῦ πλοίου, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν ψυχῶν ἡμῶν, μέλλειν ἔσσεσθαι τὸν πλοῦν. ¹¹ Ὁ δὲ ἐκατόνταρχος τῷ κυβερνήτῃ καὶ τῷ ναυκλήρῳ ἐπέειθετο μᾶλλον, ἢ τοῖς ὑπὸ Παύλου λεγομένοις. ¹² Ἀνευθέτου δὲ τοῦ λιμένος ὑπάρχοντος πρὸς παραχειμασίαν, οἱ πλείους ἔθεντο βουλὴν ἀναχθῆναι κἀκεῖθεν, εἰπῶς δύναιντο καταντήσαντες εἰς Φοῖνικα παραχειμάσαι, λιμένα τῆς Κρήτης ^d βλέποντα κατὰ Λίβα καὶ κατὰ Χῶρον. ¹³ Ὑποπνεύσαντος ^{d ver. 7.}

9. τοῦ πλοῦς] the voyage to Italy (see v. 10) was then dangerous, on account of the violent northerly winds which blow in the Ægean at that season.

On the form πλοῦς, πλοῦς, for the Attic πλοῦς, πλοῦ, see Lobeck, Phryn. p. 453. It is used in Martyr. Ignat. 3. Cr. vods 1 Cor. xiv. 19; and see Winer, p. 59.

— τὴν νηστείαν] the fast; the day of Atonement, 10th of Tisri (October). Lev. xvi. 1—34; xxiii. 26—30. Numb. xxix. 1—11. Jahn, Archæol. § 357.

There is a remarkable Rabbinical gloss on Isa. xliii. 16. "Who maketh a way in the sea," i. e. from the Feast of Pentecost to the Feast of Tabernacles (five days after the Fast). See Schoettgen, p. 482. And the Rabbis say (Sabbat. v. 3), "No one ought to sail between the feast of Tabernacles and Dedication."

By a like figure of speech the Athenians spoke of the weather for sailing, as beginning after the Dionysia. (Theophrast. Char. 3.)

10. θεωρῶ ὅτι—μέλλειν] On this combination of two constructions, see Winer, Gr. Gr. § 44, p. 303, who quotes Xenophon, Hellen. ii. 2. 2, εἰδὼς ὅτι ἔσσεσθαι, and other examples. See also ibid. § 63, p. 506.

— ὕβρεως] buffeting, hard usage; cp. v. 21, κερδῆσαι τὴν ὕβριν ταύτην, and 2 Cor. xii. 10, ἐν ὕβρεσιν, ἐν ἀνάγκαις, and ὕβρις is used absolutely Rom. i. 30. 1 Tim. i. 13. Horace, 1 Od. xiv. 15, says of a ship, "ventus debet ludibrium."

— φορτίου] So A, B, G, and many Cursives.—Elz. φόρτου. φόρτος is the Attic, φορτίον the Hellenic form. Moeris, p. 52. (Bornem.)

11. κυβερνήτῃ] 'gubernatori,'—the pilot.
— ναυκλήρῳ] the 'magister navis'—'navicularius' (Gloss. Labb.) δὲ δεσπότης τοῦ πλοίου (Hesych.). "Qui hominibus vel mercibus trajicendis lucrum querit" (Kuin.).

12. ἀνευθέτου] not well placed; not commodiously situated. Its name shows that it was a good harbour in some seasons, and so it is described in modern works on navigation (see Smith, pp. 81, 82), but it was not commodious to winter in. It is, in fact, an open roadstead; or rather two open roadsteads, with good anchorage, and looking to the south.

— Φοῖνικα] Phœnix. See next note.

— βλέποντα κατὰ Λίβα καὶ κατὰ Χῶρον] Libs (from Libya), the Greek name for the Roman Africus, and opposite to Aquilo. Plin. N. H. xviii. 77, who adds that Corus is opposite to Vulturnus. CP. Virgil, Georg. iii. 356, "Spirantes frigora Cauri," and v. 278, "In Borean Caurumque," and Seneca (Qu. Nat. v. 16. 4), "solstitiali occidente Corus venit; ab occidente hiberno Africus furibundus et ruens apud Græcos Ἀφρὶ dicitur."

The words in the text are rendered by Vulg. "respicentem ad Africum et ad Corum;" and by the Authorized English Version, "which lieth toward the South-west and North-west." This rendering has been rejected by recent able Interpreters, particularly by Alford, Smith, and Howson, who understand the phrase to mean, looking towards the points to which (and not from which) the South-west and North-west winds blow; i. e. not turning the face towards, but the back on, those winds; and looking to the South-east and North-east. And on this supposition they identify Phœnix with the harbour now called Lutro, about forty miles west of Fair Havens, and which is described as being the best, and indeed the only safe winter harbour in that part of Crete, and looks to the South-east and North-east. See Smith, pp. 84—93. Howson, ii. pp. 398—400, and Alford's note here. Besides, Phœnix is described by Strabo (x. 4) as on the south of the isthmus, or narrowest part of Crete, and this corresponds to Lutro; it is called Ἀράδεια by Hierocles, Synecdem., and Aradena is called Anapolis by Steph. Byzant.; and Mr. Pashley (Crete, ii. 257) found two villages, called Aradena and Anapolis, at a little distance above Lutro, and he says (ii. 257) "Port Phoenix is at Lutro."

The question is one of grammatical interpretation; and it does not seem consistent with its principles, to render the words in question in any other way than that in which they have been translated in the Vulgate and other Versions.

The expressions by which the learned writers mentioned above have endeavoured to confirm their interpretation, do not appear to be relevant to the case before us. No doubt πλεῖν κατὰ ρεῦμα is to sail down the stream; and αἱ κατὰ λίβα προσβολαί, quoted from Josephus, are gusts from the South-west. And so κατ' ἄνεμον φέρεσθαι, and ἐκραγῆναι κατ' εὐρον, might be used, as in Latin secundum flumina, along the side and in the direction of the rivers. So Herod. iii. 10, ἐφέροντο κατὰ κύμα καὶ κατ' ἄνεμον.

But in those cases the verb connected with κατὰ is one of motion with; and not of rest, or of direction toward, like βλέπω, the verb used here.

To describe a harbour as looking with or down the wind, is not a natural mode of expression. The best illustration of St. Luke's phraseology is to be derived from St. Luke himself, viz.,

In Acts ii. 10 we have Λιβύης τῆς κατὰ Κυρήνην, toward Cyrene. iii. 13, κατὰ πρόσωπον Πιλάτου, face to face before Pilate. CP. xxv. 16; viii. 26, πορεύου κατὰ μεσημβρίαν, go toward the South. So xvi. 7, κατὰ τὴν Μυσίαν, and κατὰ τὴν Βιθυνίαν. So in the present chapter, v. 2, τοὺς κατὰ τὴν Ἀσίαν τόπους. v. 5, πέλαιος τὸ κατὰ τὴν Κιλικίαν. v. 7, γενόμενοι κατὰ τὴν Κνίδον, ὑπεπλεύσαμεν κατὰ τὴν Σαλμώνην,—in all which cases there is an idea of direction towards, or juxtaposition at. CP. St. Paul's expression, Phil. iii. 14, κατὰ σκοπὸν διώκω. Gal. ii. 11, κατὰ πρόσωπον αὐτῶ ἀντίστην. Gal. iii. 1, κατ' ὄφθαλμούς.

It has been said, indeed, that λῖψ and χῶρος here do not signify fixed points of the compass; but only winds, which sometimes blow, and sometimes do not. But this does not seem a tenable opinion. St. Luke is describing the habitual aspect of the harbour, its geographical bearings, independently of variable circumstances, especially of so fortuitous and fickle a condition, as whether a given wind happened to blow or not. And βλέπω, like the Latin specto, describes a continual relation. CP. Herodian, vi. 5. 2, πρὸς τὰ ἄρκτῳ μέρη βλέπουσαν, looking to the north. Cæsar, B. G. vii. 69, "pars collis ad orientem spectabat," i. e. had an easterly aspect.

If, therefore, Lutro is Phœnix, the true interpretation of the passage is this,—“If by any means they might reach Phœnix and winter in it, being a Cretan harbour, which, as approached from the sea, looks toward the south-west and north-west; and is therefore sheltered from those winds by the land.”

In favour of this interpretation, it may be said, that it is more natural, in describing the good properties of a harbour, as here, to speak of the winds from which it is sheltered, than of those to which it is exposed;

Also, that St. Luke suggests this nautical mode of regarding land objects from the sea, and of interpreting his words accordingly, by the expression in v. 27, ὑπενόνον οἱ ναῦται προσάγειν τινὰ αὐτοῖς χῶραν, the sailors deemed that some land was drawing near them. See note there; and see also a similar nautical expression above, xxi. 3.

But, if the expression of St. Luke here, βλέποντα κατὰ λίβα, is to be rendered, facing the s.w. from the land, then we must look for Phœnix in some other place than Lutro. The identification of Phœnix with Lutro is of recent date. The harbour of Lutro has only been lately discovered by British Navigators. Perhaps, when the southern coast of Crete has been more accurately surveyed, another harbour may be found, which may correspond with the words of St. Luke, understood in this latter sense.

And, in the Charts of Crete (Smith, p. 94. Howson, p. 399), is a bay a little to the west of Lutro. This bay is marked Phinika. This is the modern Greek pronunciation of Φοῖνικα. And this bay looks from the land to the s.w., i. e. κατὰ λίβα and κατὰ χῶρον.

May not it be the Phœnix of St. Luke?

The coast has probably been changed by time; and if, as represented in the Charts, two streams flow into it, what is now δὲ νότου δόξαντες τῆς προθέσεως κεκρατηκέναι ἄραντες ἄσσον παρελέγοντο τὴν Κρήτην. ¹⁴ Μετ' οὐ πολὺ δὲ ἔβαλε κατ' αὐτῆς ἄνεμος τυφωνικός, ὁ καλούμενος Εὐρακύλων. ¹⁵ Συναρπασθέντος δὲ τοῦ πλοίου, καὶ μὴ δυναμένου αὐτοφθαλμῶν τῷ ἀνέμῳ, ἐπιδόντες ἐφερόμεθα. ¹⁶ Νησίον δέ τι ὑποδραμόντες καλούμενον Κλαύδην ἰσχύσαμεν μόλις περικρατεῖς γενέσθαι τῆς σκάφης. ¹⁷ ἦν ἄραντες βοηθείαις ἐχρῶντο ὑποζωννύτες τὸ πλοῖον φοβούμενοί τε μὴ εἰς τὴν Σύρτιν ἐκπέσωσι, χαλάσαντες τὸ σκεῦος, οὕτως ἐφέροντο. ¹⁸ Σφοδρῶς δὲ a bay may have been formerly a safe harbour. (See Smith, p. 89.)

Facing, as Phineka does, the s.w. and n.w., it would have protected the vessel from the e.n.e. wind, which soon after arose, and blew continuously for many days. In this respect it would have been εὖτετος πρὸς παραχειμασίαν. Perhaps, also, its nearness to the harbour of Lutro, where a ship would be sheltered from North-westerly and South-westerly winds, was a circumstance which, combined with others, made it more "commodious to winter in" than Fair Havens.

¹³. ὑποπνεύαντος νότου] the south wind having sprung up. This was a change; for from Cnidus to Fair Havens they had had n.w. winds. They hoped that the south wind would carry them round Cape Matala to Phoenix, which lay to n.n.w. of Fair Havens.

— ἄραντες] sc. ἀγκύρας—they weighed anchor (on this use of ἄραντες, see Thucyd. i. 29; iii. 91); and they were coasting along Crete more closely (ἄσσον) than before (so Winer, § 35, p. 217, and R. W. B. i. p. 102, and Meyer). ἄσσον = πλησίον, ἐγγὺς, Hesych.; it is used by Josephus, Ant. i. 20. 1, τοὺς μὲν προῖπνευε τοὺς δὲ λειπομένους ἄσσον ἐκέλευσε ἀκολουθεῖν. Antonin. Lib. fab. 41, βῆναι εἰς ἄσσον τῷ κυνί. Joseph. Ant. xix. 2. 4. Herod. iv. 3, ἰέναι ἄσσον αὐτῶν, add. vii. 233. Coniungendum autem est ἄσσον cum παρελέγοντο Lucian. H. V. 1, p. 657, τῇ ἐπιούσῃ δὲ, ἄραντες ἐπλέομεν πλησίον τῶν νεφῶν.

The Vulgate has 'cum sustulissent de Asson,' as if the reference was to Assos (see above, xx. 13), and so the Aethiopic Version: the Syriac and Arabic have Thasos. Our English Authorized Version renders it 'they sailed close by Crete;' and so Beza and Wetstein, who gives numerous examples of this use of ἄσσον, p. 640.

¹⁴. ἔβαλε] See on Mark xiv. 72, and below, v. 41, ἐρείσασα, and v. 43, ἀπορρίψαντας.

— κατ' αὐτῆς] i. e. against Crete, from the heights of Mount Ida. Cp. Matt. viii. 32, κατὰ τοῦ κρημνοῦ.—αὐτῆς cannot refer (as some have thought) to the ship, which is called πλοῖον. Cp. on v. 41.

— ἄνεμος τυφωνικός] a violent wind; a hurricane or whirlwind, sometimes called τυφὼν, Hesych. Plin. N. H. ii. 49, "Typhona, locum ex loco mutans rapidā vertiginē, præcipua navigantium pestis, non antennas modò, verùm ipsa navigia contorta frangens."

— Εὐρακύλων] So A and *B, and Vulg. and Cassiodor., which have "Euro-aquilo." This reading seems also to be confirmed by the Sahidic Version, which has Εὐρακῆλων, and to have given rise to Εὐτρακῆλων in the Coptic, and Εὐρακῆκλων in the Armenian, and Aquilo in the Aethiopic Version.

Εὐρακύλων has been approved by Grotius, and ably defended by Bentley (on Freethinking, p. 98—100, ed. Camb. 1743), and by Mr. Smith, p. 98, and in his Dissertation, pp. 154—159, and it has been received by Lachm. and Bornemann.

Elz. has Εὐροκλύδων. G. H. have Εὐροκλύδων. *B has Εὐρυκλύδων.

St. Luke says that the word in question was the name of a wind (ἄνεμος, see also v. 15, τῷ ἀνέμῳ). But Euro-cliydon is rather the name of a wave (κλύδων) than of a wind.

Besides, the writer says, that the ἄνεμος was that which is called (ὁ καλούμενος) by the name in question. It was known by that name. If, then, Eurocliydon were the true reading, it would probably be found somewhere as a name of a wind; but it nowhere occurs as such.

None of these objections apply to the reading Εὐρακύλων. The word, Εὐρακύλων, in Latin, Euro-aquilo, was the name given by Mariners, especially Italians, to what the ancient Greeks called Kaukas, which was the wind between Eurus and Aquilo, i. e. is the e.n.e. wind in the Roman compass; and therefore called Euro-aquilo by the Roman seamen, as Euro-notus and Euro-auster, similar compounds, were used to designate the s.e.

It may be said that the proper etymological form of the word in the text would be Εὐροακύλων. And it is not improbable that that is the true reading. The confusion of ΕΥΡΟΑΚΥΛΩΝ and ΕΥΡΟΚΑΥΛΩΝ is a very easy one, and likely to be made by the Copyists, who would be more familiar with the word κλύδων than with ἀκύλων.

As has been well shown by Mr. Smith, p. 98, the effect of an e.n.e. wind, would have been precisely such as is described by St. Luke to have been produced on the ship.

¹⁵. ἐπιδόντες ἐφερόμεθα] we gave the ship to the gale, and scudded before it. Eurip. Troad. 683, ἐνδόντες τύχη, said of sailors committing their ship to fortune. Heliod. Ethiop. i. 3, τοῦ κυβερνήτου ἐνδόντος (scil. τὸ πλοῖον) τῷ ἀνέμῳ. Plutarch. de fortuna Rom. p. 319. Cæsar ad navis gubernatorem fluctus vehementiores timentem, τόλμα, καὶ δέδιθι μηδὲν, ἀλλὰ ἐπιδίδου τῇ τύχῃ τὰ ἰστία, καὶ δέχου τὸ πνεῦμα, τῷ πνέοντι πιστεύων, ὅτι Καίσαρα φέρεῖς καὶ τὴν Καίσαρος τύχην. (Kuin.) Cp. Wetst. p. 641.

¹⁶. ὑποδραμόντες] having run under the lee of a little island called Claudé, in order to have stiller water, and to be sheltered from the wind, so as to be enabled to hoist up the boat (which was towed after the ship), and to lash it on board; and to undergird the ship, to keep its timbers together, and to equip it better for the storm. Their next care was to lower the sail and bring down her spars and rigging. Cp. Kitt. p. 439.

— Κλαύδην] So A (probably) and G. H.; but B has Καύδα, and S. Jerome has Cauden, and this, it seems, is the true reading. The modern name of the island is Gozzo,—a corruption of Klaúdos and Gaudus, the name given it by Ptolemy, iii. 7, and Mela, ii. 7, and Plin. iv. 20, "dextrâ Cretam habenti contra Hierapyntam Gaudos." It lies about twenty miles to the South of Crete.

— μόλις] with difficulty (vv. 7 and 8), because of the high sea, and because the boat was probably full of water, and also "because the ship must have been rounded with her head to the wind and her sails trimmed, so that she had no head-way." (Smith.)

— περικρατεῖς γ. τ. σκάφης] to get possession of the boat by hoisting it with cables thrown round (περὶ) it. And yet all this was labour lost, because afterwards the boat, which had been hoisted on board with difficulty, was allowed to fall off (v. 32).

¹⁷. βοηθείαις] stays and braces to keep the ship together. (Arist. Rhet. ii. 5.)

— ὑποζωννύτες] undergirding by "cables passed round the hull or frame of the ship,"—commonly called "frapping it,"—lest, by the straining of her planks and timbers, the vessel should leak and founder. (Smith, p. 106. Howson, pp. 373. 405.)

— τὴν Σύρτιν] the Lesser Syrtis, or African quick-sand, to the s.w. of Crete. Strabo, ii. p. 185. Plin. N. H. v. 4. Solinus, xxvii.

— χαλάσαντες τὸ σκεῦος] The neuter singular σκεῦος, which occurs frequently in N. T. (Luke viii. 16. John xix. 29. Acts ix. 15; x. 11. 1 Thess. iv. 4. 1 Pet. iii. 7. Cp. Vorst. de Hebr. pp. 29—33), denotes some single object, and as such is distinguished from the feminine σκευή, supellex. And σκεῦος, with the definite Article, as here, signifies some special object of importance,—that which might κατ' ἐξοχὴν be called τὸ σκεῦος.

It is most probably the main-yard and sail. Some sail would doubtless be necessary to work the vessel on the starboard tack, i. e. with the right side to windward, so as to keep her off the quick-sand; but a press of canvas such as would not do any harm while they were under the lee of Claudé or Gozzo, would be attended with danger in such a tempestuous gale as that which had overtaken them; and therefore they might be constrained χαλᾶν, i. e. to lower with ropes (see the use of χαλᾶν Mark ii. 4. Luke v. 4. Acts ix. 25; xxvii. 30. 2 Cor. xi. 33), τὸ σκεῦος, the main-yard and its sail. It had doubtless been already furled. This is nearly the interpretation of the ancient Expositors (Chrys. interprets it τὰ ἰστία, αὐ. τὸ ἰστίον. The Syriac renders it velum, and Bede 'laxantes antennas.' Vulg. has 'submisso vase'); and it is confirmed by a passage of Seneca (Ep. 77): "Quoties ventus increbuit, majorque est quam expedit, antenna submititur (i. e. χαλᾶται); minus habet virium flatus ex humili."

χειμαζομένων ἡμῶν, τῇ ἐξῆς ἐκβολὴν ἐποιοῦντο· ¹⁹ καὶ τῇ τρίτῃ ^e αὐτόχειρες ^e Job 2. 4. τὴν σκευὴν τοῦ πλοίου ἔρριψαν· ²⁰ μήτε δὲ ἡλίου μήτε ἄστρων ἐπιφαινόντων ἐπὶ πλείονας ἡμέρας, χειμῶνός τε οὐκ ὀλίγου ἐπικειμένου, λοιπὸν περιηρεῖτο πᾶσα ἐλπίς τοῦ σώζεσθαι ἡμᾶς. ²¹ Πολλῆς τε ἀσιτίας ὑπαρχούσης, τότε σταθεὶς ὁ Παῦλος ἐν μέσῳ αὐτῶν εἶπεν, ^f ὦ ἄνδρες, πειθαρχήσαντάς μοι μὴ ^f ver. 10, 13. ἀνάγεσθαι ἀπὸ τῆς Κρήτης, κερδησαί τε τὴν ὕβριν ταύτην καὶ τὴν ζημίαν. ²² Καὶ ταῦν ^g παραινῶ ὑμᾶς εὐθυμεῖν· ἀποβολὴ γὰρ ψυχῆς οὐδεμία ἔσται ^g Job 22. 29. ἐξ ὑμῶν, πλὴν τοῦ πλοίου. ²³ Παρέστη γάρ μοι ταύτῃ τῇ νυκτὶ ^h τοῦ Θεοῦ, ^h Ps. 112. 7. οὐ εἰμὶ, ⁱ ὃ καὶ λατρεύω, ἄγγελος, ²⁴ λέγων, Μὴ φοβοῦ, Παῦλε, Καίσαρί σε ² Cor. 4. 8, 9. δεῖ παραστῆναι· καὶ ἰδοὺ, κεχάρισται σοι ὁ Θεὸς πάντας τοὺς πλέοντας μετὰ ^h ch. 23. 11. σοῦ. ²⁵ Διὸ εὐθυμεῖτε, ἄνδρες· πιστεύω γὰρ τῷ Θεῷ, ὅτι οὕτως ἔσται καθ' ⁱ Heb. 1. 14. ὃν τρόπον λελάληταί μοι· ²⁶ ^k εἰς νῆσον δέ τινα δεῖ ἡμᾶς ἐκπεσεῖν. ²⁷ Ὡς δὲ ⁱ Deut. 32. 9. τεσσαρεσκαίδεκάτῃ νύξ ἐγένετο, διαφερομένων ἡμῶν ἐν τῷ Ἀδρίᾳ, κατὰ μέσον ^{Ps. 135. 4.} τῆς νυκτὸς ὑπενόουν οἱ ναῦται προσάγειν τινὰ αὐτοῖς χώραν. ²⁸ Καὶ βολί- ^{Isa. 44. 5.} σαντες εὗρον ὀργυιὰς εἴκοσι· βραχὺ δὲ διαστήσαντες, καὶ πάλιν βολίσαντες, ^{Mal. 3. 17.} εὗρον ὀργυιὰς δεκαπέντε· ²⁹ φοβούμενοί τε μήπως κατὰ τραχεῖς τόπους ἐκ- ^{John 17. 9, 10.} πέσωμεν, ἐκ πρύμνης ῥίψαντες ἀγκύρας τέσσαρας, ἤχοντο ἡμέραν γενέσθαι. ¹ Cor. 6. 20. ^k ch. 28. 1.

18. ἐκβολὴν] they were casting out the freight, to lighten the ship while it was tossed by the storm. See LXX, Jonah i. 5, ἐφοβήθησαν οἱ ναυτικοὶ, καὶ ἐκβολὴν ἐποίησαντο τῶν σκευῶν τῶν ἐν τῷ πλοίῳ εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν, τοῦ κουφισθῆναι ἀπ' αὐτῶν. They lost their freight, as St. Paul had prophesied v. 10; but, as S. Aug. says (in Ps. 132), "Paulus in corde ferebat patrimonium fidei suæ, quod nullis fluctibus, nullis tempestatibus potuit auferri." He had learnt "opus esse mercibus quæ cum naufrago enantet."

On the ἐκβολὴ resorted to in a storm, see Blomf. Æschyl. S. c. T. 755, πρόπρυμα δ' ἐκβολὰν φέρειν ἀνδρῶν ἀλφιστὰν ὄλβος ἄγαν παχυυβέλς.

19. τὴν σκευὴν] the furniture of the ship,—beds, tables; perhaps also the tackle, rigging, yards, and spars.

— ἔρριψαν] So A, B, C.—Elz. ἔρριψαμεν.

20. ἐπιφαινόντων] appearing, shining upon. Horat. Epod. x. 9, "Nec sidus atrâ nocte amicum apparent."

— περιηρεῖτο] every hope was being taken away, as it were, cut away all around: a happy expression describing the taking away of one hope after another; "omnis spes circumcidebatur, amputabatur." See West.

21. ἀσιτίας] Anxiety and fear had taken away all appetite for food, and had produced nausea and disgust for it. Perhaps the 'cabuse' for cooking victuals had been washed overboard; and it would not be easy to light a fire for the purpose in the storm.

— σταθεὶς ὁ Παῦλος ἐν μέσῳ] Paul standing up in the midst. The storm, by God's permission, was raised by the Prince of the Power of the Air (Eph. ii. 2) against the ship that was carrying the Gospel to Rome; and, humanly speaking, it would have overwhelmed it (v. 20). But it was made subservient by God's Providence to display the courage of the Apostle, and the power of divine grace, which enabled him to remain firm and intrepid in the tempest, and to stand up in the midst, and inspire others with hope.

The Ship may be compared to the Church, tossed by storms, in her course over the waters of this world. These tempests try the faith, and patience, and courage, of all who, like St. Paul, are strong in grace, and suffer for Christ. They serve to exercise and to prove them, and to manifest the work of the Holy Spirit in their hearts. Perhaps the most effective Sermon that St. Paul ever preached was in this storm. Its power will never cease to be felt by those who read the record of it here. And it may serve to fill the heart of every devout reader with comfort and trust, that every tempest of Persecution which is excited by Satan against the Ship of the Church, will be made eventually conducive to the furtherance of the Gospel, and to the eternal welfare and happiness of God's faithful servants, and to the greater manifestation of His Love, Power, and Glory.

— κερδησαί] to gain this violence and loss. θησαυρίζεις ὀργὴν, Rom. ii. 5. So κερδαίνειν κακὰ, εὐρεῖν ὄλεθρον. Bentley on Phalaris, pp. 255, 256. Plin. N. H. vii. 40, "lucrifecit injuriam." There is a gentle irony in the expression. Ye exposed yourselves to danger,—against good advice,—for the sake of gaining wealth by your merchandise; and you have gained nothing but loss. Here again the Authorized Version has been censured without reason by some.

23. τοῦ Θεοῦ] Elz. places ἄγγελος before τοῦ Θεοῦ, but A, B, C place ἄγγελος after λατρεύω. And this appears to be the better reading. In speaking to Gentiles who had no notion of the ministry of Angels, it is not probable that St. Paul would have used the word Angel otherwise than subsequently and sub-ordinately to God.

27. διαφερομένων ἡμῶν] It cannot, therefore, be assumed (as has been done), that the Wind continued all the same.—δια-φάρεσθαι means 'to be carried in different directions.' See xiii. 49, and West.

— Ἀδρία] Ἰόνιον πέλαγος, ὃ νῦν Ἀδρίας, Hesych. So Strabo, ii. p. 185, and other passages quoted by West. p. 644, showing that writers contemporary with St. Luke apply the term Adria and Adriatic to that part of the Mediterranean which lies between Greece and Sicily, i. e. the Ionian Sea; and distinguish between Adria and the Adriatic Gulf, or Gulf of Venice. (Ignat. Mart. 5.)

Compare the account given by Josephus (Vit. 3), of his own dangerous voyage to Rome, βαπτισθέντος τοῦ πλοίου κατὰ μέσον τὸν Ἀδρίαν, and of his safe arrival at Puteoli, after the ship in which he was, containing 600 souls, had been lost, and eighty of them were taken on board by a vessel from Cyrene, in Africa, going to Italy.

— προσάγειν αὐτοῖς χώραν] that some land was drawing near us. St. Luke speaks here and elsewhere in the language of sailors. See xxi. 3, and West. and Kein. here. Cp. Val. Flacc. ii. 8, "jam longa recessit Sepias." Virg. Æn. iii. 72, "Provehimur portu, terræque urbesque recedunt." Ovid. Met. vi. 513, "Admotumque fretum remis, tellusque repulsa est." Cic. Quæst. Acad. iv. 25, "videsne navem illam? stare nobis videtur: at iis, qui in navi sunt, moveri hæc villa." Achill. Tat. ii. 32, γῆν γὰρ ἐωράμεν ἀπὸ τῆς νηὸς κατὰ μικρὸν ἀναχωροῦσαν, ὥς αὐτὴν πλέουσιν.

28. βολίσαντες] having sounded, with the βολίς, or plumb-line, let down from the foreship.

— ὀργυιάς] fathoms; properly the measure from the end of one arm outstretched (ὠρεγνία) to the extremity of the other, together with the breast (Etymol., Hesych.), and reckoned as equal to three πηχεῖς or cubits. Eustath.

29. ἐκ πρύμνης ῥίψαντες ἀγκύρας τέσσαρας] They cast four anchors from the stern; a circumstance which has perplexed modern critics and sailors; but has been successfully explained by reference to the structure of Ancient Ships. They were alike at both ends, and had only paddle-rudders (πηδάλια, v. 40), one on either quarter, which could be triced up, and had hawseholes at the stern.

Besides, the ship in which St. Paul was, was not running, but hove to, when she anchored; and the design was to cut the cables (v. 40), and run the ship on the beach at daylight. (Smith, pp. 200, 201.)

In anchoring by the stern the paddle-rudders were lifted out of the water, and lashed together tightly by their ζευκτηρία (v. 40), and the rudder-ports or rudder-cases served for hawseholes to the anchors. In the battle of Copenhagen the English ships of war were anchored by the stern; and Lord Nelson stated after the battle, that he had been led to adopt this measure in

³⁰ Τῶν δὲ ναυτῶν ζητούντων φυγεῖν ἐκ τοῦ πλοίου, καὶ χαλασάντων τὴν σκάφην εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν, προφάσει ὡς ἐκ πρώρας μελλόντων ἀγκύρας ἐκτείνειν, ³¹ εἶπεν ὁ Παῦλος τῷ ἑκατοντάρχῃ καὶ τοῖς στρατιώταις, Ἐὰν μὴ οὗτοι μείνωσιν ἐν τῷ πλοίῳ, ὑμεῖς σωθῆναι οὐ δύνασθε. ³² Τότε οἱ στρατιῶται ἀπέκοψαν τὰ σχοινία τῆς σκάφης, καὶ εἶασαν αὐτὴν ἐκπεσεῖν. ³³ Ἀχρι δὲ οὐ ἔμελλεν ἡμέρα γίνεσθαι, παρεκάλει ὁ Παῦλος ἅπαντας μεταλαβεῖν τροφῆς, λέγων, Τεσσαρεσκαδεκάτην σήμερον ἡμέραν προσδοκῶντες ἄσιτοι διατελεῖτε μηδὲν προσλαβόμενοι. ³⁴ Διὸ παρακαλῶ ὑμᾶς μεταλαβεῖν τροφῆς· τοῦτο γὰρ πρὸς τῆς ὑμετέρας σωτηρίας ὑπάρχει· οὐδενὸς γὰρ ὑμῶν θρῖξ ἐκ τῆς κεφαλῆς ἀπολείται. ³⁵ Εἰπὼν δὲ ταῦτα, καὶ λαβὼν ἄρτον, εὐχαρίστησε τῷ Θεῷ ἐνώπιον πάντων, καὶ κλάσας ἥρξατο ἐσθίειν. ³⁶ Εὐθυμοὶ δὲ γενόμενοι πάντες, καὶ αὐτοὶ προσελάβοντο τροφῆς· ³⁷ ἡμεθα δὲ αἱ πᾶσαι ψυχαὶ ἐν τῷ πλοίῳ διακόσiai ἐβδομήκοντα ἕξ. ³⁸ Κορεσθέντες δὲ τροφῆς ἐκούφιζον τὸ πλοῖον, ἐκβαλλόμενοι τὸν σῖτον εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν. ³⁹ Ὅτε δὲ ἡμέρα ἐγένετο, τὴν γῆν οὐκ ἐπεγίνωσκον· κόλπον δὲ τινα κατενόουν ἔχοντα αἰγιαλὸν, εἰς ὃν ἐβουλεύοντο, εἰ δύναιντο, ἐξῶσαι τὸ πλοῖον. ⁴⁰ Καὶ τὰς ἀγκύρας περιελόντες εἶων εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν, ἅμα ἀνέντες τὰς ζευκτηρίας τῶν πηδαλίων, καὶ ἐπ-

1 Kings 1. 52.
Matt. 10. 30.
Luke 12. 7.
x 21. 18.
m 1 Sam. 9. 13.
John 6. 11.
1 Tim. 4. 3.

n ch. 2. 41.
& 7. 14.
Rom. 13. 1.
1 Pet. 3. 20.

consequence of having just been reading this chapter of the Acts of the Apostles; see Howson.

³⁰. ἀγκύρας ἐκτείνειν] under pretence that, being in the boat, into which they would take anchors and their cables, they would stretch them forth (ἐκτείνειν) or "lay them out" from the fore-ship, so as to steady the ship pitching in the sea.

This pretext, which seems to have deceived the centurion, a landsman, was seen through by St. Paul, who warned the centurion, that unless the sailors remained on board to work the ship, and thrust her in shore, the passengers would be lost. A remarkable proof of the Apostle's superiority, even as regards human wisdom and forethought.

³². εἶασαν αὐτὴν ἐκπεσεῖν] A striking proof of St. Paul's power over the minds of the Roman soldiers. The first portion of the Voyage had been characterized by opposition to his advice (v. 11); the latter is distinguished by compliance with it.

Such, in brief, is the History, past and future, of the Gospel of Christ.

³³. μεταλαβεῖν] So A, B, C.—Elz. προσλαβεῖν.

³⁴. ἀπολείται] So A, B, C, and many Cursives and Versions.—Elz. πεσῖται.

³⁵. εὐχαρίστησε] he gave thanks, as if what God had promised (v. 24) had been already fulfilled. Observe his faith in the storm—and see its effects on others (vv. 36, 37).

The words λαβὼν ἄρτον, εὐχαρίστησε, καὶ κλάσας, compared with Luke xxii. 19, 20, and 1 Cor. xi. 23, are remarkable, and suggest that this act may have been connected with a celebration of the Holy Eucharist.

³⁷. ἡμεθα—ἕξ] we were all the souls in the ship, to the number of two hundred and seventy-six. See above, v. 6.

³⁸. τὸν σῖτον] the corn—with which it was laden; for it was a corn-ship; part of its freight had been cast out before (v. 18). On the form of the word see Winer, p. 60.

The wheat was cast into the sea, in order to lighten the ship, that she might be worked more easily and thrust in to the beach.

³⁹. αἰγιαλόν] a beach,—without rocks.

⁴⁰. τὰς ἀγκύρας περιελόντες] having cut the cables of the four anchors, by which the ship had been held during the night; and thus abandoned them to the sea, in which they were left. The sense of περιελόντες is clear from περιρῆϊτο (v. 20).

St. Luke's design in this narrative appears to be to show, that all human aids or appliances were of no use in the storm, and were discarded as such even by the crew. The reader will observe the climax in the enumeration of their successive acts of abandonment,—

(1) They cast overboard some of the freight (v. 18).

(2) They cast overboard with their own hands the furniture (σκευὴν) of the ship (v. 19).

(3) They cut off the boat, in which many of them had intended to escape (vv. 30, 32).

(4) They cast the corn out of the ship into the sea (v. 38).

(5) They abandoned their anchors to the sea.

We hear nothing more of the κυβερνήτης and ναύκληρος, who had opposed St. Paul (v. 11). He alone stands forth unmoved in the storm (v. 21). The crew discarded as useless their ordinary helps; and "all hope that they should be saved had been taken away" (v. 20).

But they had St. Paul and his Mission on board; and they all came safe to land. "Noli timere, Cæsaris fortunas vehis," was the saying of Julius Cæsar to the panic-struck mariner in the Adriatic; "Nolite timere, CHRISTI Evangelium vehitis," was that of St. Paul.

—ἡμα ἀνέντες τὰς ζευκτηρίας τῶν πηδαλίων] at the same time loosening the bands of the rudders.

The ship was not steered, as modern vessels are, by one rudder moving on hinges at the stern, but by two πηδάλια (from πῆδα, oars; see the Editor's note on Theocritus xxi. 10), whence the English paddle, one on either quarter of the stern. This pair of πηδάλια, so arranged, may be seen represented in ancient coins, pictures, and other monuments, in Smith, pp. 183. 193, 194. 198, 199. Cp. Heliodor. 5, p. 241, τῶν δὲ πηδαλίων θάτερον ἀποβαλόντες. Lucian, Toxari, p. 51, τοῦ σκάφους ἥδη πλέοντες ἐκκρεμαννύμενοι τῶν πηδαλίων, and Navig. 5, tom. iii. p. 252, ἀνθρωπίσκος λεπτῇ κάμακι τὰ πηδάλια περιστρέφον. Ælian, H. V. ix. 40, ὅτι Καρχηδόνιοι δύο κυβερνήτας εἰσάγον εἰς τὴν ναῦν, ἀποπον λέγοντες εἶναι, δύο μὲν πηδάλια ἔχειν κ.τ.λ., and Weist. here.

When the vessel was anchored by the stern, as this had been (v. 29), these two πηδάλια were lifted out of the water, and were lashed together by the ἐγύλαι, which seem to have bound them together habitually, thence called here αἱ ζευκτηρίαι, the rudder-bands; and were capable of being tightened or loosened, as need required. Cp. Eurip. Helen. 1536, πηδάλια τε ἐγύλαισι πορακάβητο, i. e. the rudder-paddles were let down at the sides of the ship (πορακάβητο) by bands (ἐγύλαι).

These ζευκτηρίαι, by which the πηδάλια had been lifted up out of the water and braced tightly together, were now loosened (ἀνέθησαν), so that the πηδάλια descended into the water, and were ready for use to steer the ship on to the beach.

All these expedients were resorted to, in order to thrust the ship as far on shore as possible.

The ancient Christian Fathers seem to have found special delight in comparing the Church to a ship; and the reader may not be displeased with the insertion in this place of the following eloquent passage from S. Hippolytus, Bishop of Portus, near Rome (de Antichristo, § 9), which illustrates what has been said concerning the two rudders, and also throws some light on other portions of St. Luke's narrative; where, in many respects, the Alexandrine Vessel carrying St. Paul, and tossed by violent storms, presents a lively picture of the Christian Church.

Θάλασσά ἐστιν ὁ Κόσμος, ἐν ᾧ ἡ Ἐκκλησία, ὡς ναὺς ἐν πελάγει, χειμάζεται μὲν, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀπόλλυται· ἔχει μὲν γὰρ μεθ' ἐαυτῆς τὸν ἔμπειρον Κυβερνήτην ΧΡΙΣΤΟΝ, φέρει δὲ ἐν μέσῳ καὶ τὸ τροπαῖον κατὰ τοῦ θανάτου ὡς τὸν (read ὡς ἰστὸν, i. e. like a mast) σταυρὸν τοῦ Κυρίου βαστάζουσα· ἐστὶ γὰρ αὐτῆς πῶρα μὲν ἡ ἀνατολή, πρῶμα δὲ ἡ δύσις, τὸ δὲ κοῖλον μεσημβρία· οἱ αἰεὶ δὲ αἱ δύο Διαθήκαι (the two Testaments are her two πηδάλια, by which she steers her course). Σχοινία δὲ περιτεταμένα ἡ ἀγάπη τοῦ Χριστοῦ σφίγγουσα τὴν Ἐκκλησίαν (here is a reference to the use of cables for girding the ship and bracing its timbers together; cp. above, v. 17) πλοῖον δὲ ὁ φέρει (the ἀραντες τὸν ἀρτέμωνα τῇ πνεύσει κατεῖχον εἰς τὸν αἰγιαλόν. ⁴¹ ° Περιπεσόντες ^o 2 Cor. 11. 25.

 δὲ εἰς τόπον διθάλασσον ἐπώκειλαν τὴν ναῦν καὶ ἡ μὲν πρῶρα ἐρείσασα ἔμεινεν ἀσάλευτος, ἡ δὲ πρύμνα ἐλύετο ὑπὸ τῆς βίας τῶν κυμάτων. ⁴² Τῶν δὲ στρατιωτῶν βουλὴ ἐγένετο, ἵνα τοὺς δεσμώτας ἀποκτείνωσι, μὴ τις ἐκκολυβήσας διαφύγῃ. ⁴³ ° Ο δὲ ἐκατόνταρχος ^p βουλόμενος διασῶσαι τὸν Παῦλον ^p 2 Cor. 11. 25.
 ἐκώλυσεν αὐτοὺς τοῦ βουλήματος, ἐκέλευσέ τε τοὺς δυναμένους κολυμβᾶν, ἀπορρίψαντας πρώτους ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν ἐξίεναι. ⁴⁴ καὶ τοὺς λοιποὺς, οὓς μὲν ἐπὶ σανίσιν, οὓς δὲ ἐπὶ τινων τῶν ἀπὸ τοῦ πλοίου. ^q καὶ οὕτως ἐγένετο πάντας ^q ver. 22.
 διασωθῆναι ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν. ^{Ps. 107. 28—30.}

σκάφη, or boat; cp. above, vv. 16. 30. 32) μεθ' ἐαυτῆς τὸ λουτρὸν τῆς παλιγγενεσίας, ἀνανεούσης τοὺς πιστεύοντας (probably the font of baptism is compared to the boat, as conveying and admitting the crew and passengers into the ship). "Ὅθεν δὲ ταῦτα λαμπρὰ, πάρεστιν ὡς πνεῦμα, τὸ ἀπ' οὐρανῶν, δι' οὗ σφραγίζονται οἱ πιστεύοντες τῷ Θεῷ· παρέπονται δὲ αὐτῇ ἡγκυραι σιδηραῖ, αὐτὰ τοῦ Χριστοῦ ἀγαίαι ἐντολαί, δυναταί (i. e. powerful and steadfast) ὡς σίδηρος· ἔχει δὲ καὶ ναύτας δεξιούς καὶ εὐωνύμους ἀγίους ἀγγέλους παρεδρους, δι' ὧν αἱ κρατεῖται καὶ φρουρεῖται ἡ Ἐκκλησία. Κλίμαξ ἐν αὐτῇ, εἰς ὕψος ἀνάγουσα ἐπὶ τὸ κέρας, εἰκὼν σημείου πάθους Χριστοῦ, ἔλκουσα τοὺς πιστοὺς εἰς ἀνάβασιν οὐρανῶν, i. e. the ship's ladder which conveys aloft to the summit of (the mast), is an image or resemblance of the sign of the Passion of Christ (i. e. of the Holy Eucharist), which draws the faithful up to the ascent of heaven.

S. Hippolytus goes on to say, Ψηφαροὶ δὲ ἐπὶ τὸ κέρας ἐφ' ὕψηλῳ αἰνοῦμενοι τὰς προφητῶν, μαρτύρων τε, καὶ ἀποστόλων εἰς βασιλείαν Χριστοῦ ἀναπαυομένων. Here, instead of ψηφαροὶ αἰνοῦμενοι, we may read ψήφαρα αἰωροῦμενα. Ψήφαρα are the Latin suppara, Senec. Ep. 77, in Medea, 325. Lucan, v. 429, "Summa suppara velorum;" or, as Tertullian calls them (Apol. 16, ad Nation. 12), siphara (ψήφαρα), i. e. top-sails (cp. Smith, pp. 152. 195). And S. Hippolytus means that the topsails, which are raised aloft to the summit of the mast, and are set there, remind him of the order of Prophets, and Martyrs, and Apostles glorified, and resting in bliss, in the kingdom of Christ.

A similar comparison of the Church to a Ship may be seen in a treatise in Montfaucon's S. Chrysostom, vi. tom. vi. p. cv: "Quamvis infestatione Inimici Ecclesia ab sæculi tempestatibus laboret, quibusvis tentationibus pulsetur, naufragium facere non potest, quia Filium Dei habet Gubernatorem: navigat enim fidei gubernaculo, felici cursu per hujus sæculi mare, habens Deum Gubernatorem, Angelos remiges, portans choros omnium sanctorum, erecta in medio ipsa salutari arbore crucis, in qua evangelicæ fidei vela suspendens, flante Spiritu Sancto, vehitur ad portum Paradisi, et securitatem quietis æternæ."

The symbol of a Ship, emblematic of the Church, is often seen represented on the Christian monuments in the Catacombs of Rome; see Bp. Kip on the Catacombs, p. 114, ed. 1859.

— τὸν ἀρτέμωνα] So A, B, C, and Caten., p. 405, and so Winer.—Elz. has ἀρτέμωνα: it was the 'small sail' (Syriac), the foresail fixed at the prow on a bowsprit. See Juvenal, xii. 67, describing a ship in a storm:

"—— inopi miserabilis arte currit
 Vestibus extensis, et quod superaverat unum Velo prora suo," which the old Scholiast explains, "Artemone solo velificaverunt." Cp. Isidor. Orig. xix. 3, as emended by Mr. Smith, p. 192, "Dolon est minimum velum, et ad proram defixum Artemo dirigendæ potius navis causâ commendatum (commendatur?) quàm celeritate," or, as Bede says here, "Artemon est modicum velum, dirigendæ," &c., as in Isidore. Hence the Roman Lawyers said (Labeo, Digest. 50, tit. 16, leg. 242), "Malum navis esse partem, Artemonem autem non esse," and cp. Boeckh (Urkunden des Attischen Seewesens, p. 140), who calls it the smallest sail.

They let the vessel drive before the breeze, by a single small sail. All these incidents are mentioned with so much minuteness by St. Luke, in order to show that "vain was the help of man," and that their preservation (and they were all preserved) was due, not to any human means, but to God's goodness alone, especially towards His faithful servant and prisoner, St. Paul (see v. 24).

Doubtless also the Holy Spirit in dictating this beautiful narrative, designed to suggest the reflection, that whenever and wheresoever it is God's will that the Gospel shall be preached, no storms raised by the Evil One against Christ's Church can obstruct her course; and that though all human aids fail her, though the material vessel is split in fragments, and scattered over the waves,—though the earth itself is wrecked and dissolved,—He can bring her and hers by a single Artemon to shore.

41. περιπεσόντες] This word does not indicate human contrivance, but a περίεργεια of Divine Providence. They had selected a creek having a beach, into which they desired, if possible, to thrust in the ship (v. 39). But this would not have been effected unless they had fallen into a τόπος διθάλασσος. This may be explained from reference to the Chart of St. Paul's Bay, Malta (Smith, 124. Howson, 422), where is the small island Salmonea, which produces a current that would carry a ship into a small cove in the τόπος διθάλασσος, which, by its approximation to the shore, the island makes between itself and the beach ¹.

"The sea rushing into the Bay from the N.E. strikes against the outer point of this small island, which causes it to divide and meet again at the inner point, in a small Cove, where any Ship-Master would run his ship, if in distress." (Cole.)

— τὴν ναῦν] they thrust in the ναῦν. Observe the word ναῦν, not πλοῖον, which had hitherto been the word used throughout the narrative; πλοῖον occurs thirteen times in this chapter, and the word ναῦς had never been used as yet.

Indeed, the present is the only place in the New Testament where the word ναῦς is found;

There is a great force in it here. The vessel had formerly been a noble πλοῖον for sailing (εἰς τὸ πλεῖν); but now that it has lost its freight, its tackle, its boat, its provisions, its anchors, its all—it is reduced to a ναῦς, a hulk, not fit to sail, πλεῖν, but only εἶναι, to swim.

— ἡ πρύμνα ἐλύετο] the stern was going to pieces, while the foreship stuck fast. The word ἐλύετο, was being dissolved, is a happy one; the strong solid ship was becoming as loose as the liquid element in which it had sailed. So Virg. Æn. x. 303, "puppis tua, Tarchon, solvitur;" and Cicero, Attic. xv. 11, "dissolutum navigium." (Wetst.)

St. Paul had been already in three shipwrecks before this (2 Cor. xi. 25). How little, after all, do we know of what the great Apostle suffered for Christ! But it is all registered in His Book; which will be opened at the Last Day.

44. πάντας διασωθῆναι] all escaped in safety to land. Perhaps Island is a patch of foul ground, over which the least depths are six and a half and seven fathoms. The harbour is open to easterly and north-easterly winds; but it is a safe place for small vessels, with good holding-ground; and so long as your cables will hold, your anchors will never drag. The best anchorage is abreast of the small cove on your starboard side going in, where you will find from six to ten fathoms, mud and clay. Small vessels may haul into the cove, and lash themselves together in a tier, having an anchor out to the SS. Eastward, and no winds can injure them.

Within Kauro Point you will see a small tower and battery, called the University; another battery, Elbena, stands three-quarters of a mile further in, and beyond that is St. Paul's tower. There are also three other batteries defending the Points of the Bay, two of which are situated near the beach at the bottom of the Bay. From Kauro Point the land runs S.E. by E. (S.E. ½ S.) for five miles, towards the Lighthouse of Valetta.

¹ The following is from the Sailing Directory, 1834:—

ST. PAUL'S BAY.—This is divided from Melheha Bay by the Peninsula of Salmonea, on the hilly part of which stands a square building, commonly called the Salmonea Palace; and at the extremity of this peninsula is a low and irregularly-formed island, named Salmonea Island, already noticed; this constitutes the northern part of St. Paul's Bay. There are a few rocks at its eastern point, extending outward nearly half a cable's length; and at the distance of a cable's length you will have clear ground, with from ten to fourteen fathoms.

The east end of Salmonea Island, and the Point of Kauro, are distant from each other above one mile, and bear N.W. by W. and S.E. by E. (N.W. ½ N. and S.E. ½ S.), the bay running in W.S.W. (W. ½ S.). The depth of water between the island and the point is eighteen fathoms, from whence it lessens to fourteen, ten, eight, and at the further end three fathoms, where there are a sandy beach and a rivulet. About a quarter of a mile to the southward of Salmonea

a ch. 27. 26.

b Rom. 1. 14.
1 Cor. 14. 11.
Col. 3. 11.
c Matt. 10. 42.
Heb. 13. 2.

d John 7. 24.

e Mark 16. 18.
Luke 10. 19.
f ch. 14. 11.

g James 5. 14, 15.

XXVIII. ¹ α Καὶ διασωθέντες τότε ἐπέγνωμεν ὅτι Μελίτη ἡ νῆσος καλεῖται. ² β Οἱ τε βάρβαροι παρέιχον οὐ τὴν τυχοῦσαν φιланθρωπίαν ἡμῖν ἄφαντες γὰρ πυρὰν ^γ προσελάβοντο πάντας ἡμᾶς διὰ τὸν ὑέτον τὸν ἐφεστῶτα καὶ διὰ τὸ ψῦχος.

³ Συστρέφαντος δὲ τοῦ Παύλου φρυγάνων τι πλήθος, καὶ ἐπιθέντος ἐπὶ τὴν πυρὰν, ἔχιδνα ἀπὸ τῆς θερμῆς διεξεληθούσα καθήψε τῆς χειρὸς αὐτοῦ. ⁴ Ως δὲ εἶδον οἱ βάρβαροι κρεμάμενον τὸ θηρίον ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς αὐτοῦ, ἔλεγον πρὸς ἀλλήλους, ^δ Πάντως φονεύς ἐστιν ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος, ὃν διασωθέντα ἐκ τῆς θαλάσσης ἡ δίκη ζῆν οὐκ εἶασεν. ^ε ε Ὁ μὲν οὖν ἀποτιναξάμενος τὸ θηρίον εἰς τὸ πῦρ ἔπαθεν οὐδὲν κακόν. ⁶ ς Οἱ δὲ προσεδόκων αὐτὸν μέλλειν ἰμπρασθαι, ἡ καταπίπτειν ἄφνω νεκρόν ἐπὶ πολὺ δὲ αὐτῶν προσδοκῶντων, καὶ θεωρούντων μηδὲν ἄτοπον εἰς αὐτὸν γινόμενον, μεταβαλλόμενοι ἔλεγον αὐτὸν εἶναι θεόν.

⁷ Ἐν δὲ τοῖς περὶ τὸν τόπον ἐκείνον ὑπῆρχε χωρία τῷ πρώτῳ τῆς νήσου, ὀνόματι Ποπλίῳ, ὃς ἀναδεξάμενος ἡμᾶς τρεῖς ἡμέρας φιλοφρόνως ἐξένισεν. ⁸ γ Ἐγένετο δὲ τὸν πατέρα τοῦ Ποπλίου πυρετοῖς καὶ δυσεντερίῳ συνεχόμενον κατακεῖσθαι πρὸς ὃν ὁ Παῦλος εἰσελθὼν καὶ προσευξάμενος, ἐπιθεὶς τὰς χεῖρας αὐτῷ ἰάσατο αὐτόν. ⁹ Τούτου οὖν γενομένου, καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ οἱ ἔχοντες ἀσθενείας ἐν τῇ νήσῳ προσήρχοντο, καὶ ἐθεραπεύοντο. ¹⁰ οἱ καὶ πολλαῖς τιμαῖς ἐτίμησαν ἡμᾶς, καὶ ἀναγομένοις ἐπέθεντο τὰ πρὸς τὰς χρείας.

¹¹ Μετὰ δὲ τρεῖς μῆνας ἀνήχθημεν ἐν πλοίῳ παρακεχειμακότη ἐν τῇ νήσῳ, Ἀλεξανδρίνῳ, παρασήμῳ Διοσκούροις. ¹² καὶ καταχθέντες εἰς Συρακούσας, some were saved spiritually by the evidence they had seen of St. Paul's prophetic power (see vv. 10. 22. 26), and by being led thereby, and by his miracles (xxviii. 9, 10), to listen to the Gospel; and thus the Storm in Adria brought them to the heavenly haven of eternal Peace.

CH. XXVIII. 1. ἐπέγνωμεν] we discerned. So A, B, C.—Elz. ἐπέγνωσαν.

— Μελίτη] Malta. The theories which suppose this to be any other than Malta, and particularly to be Melida in the Adriatic Gulf, seem to proceed from a misunderstanding of the word Adria in xxvii. 27, and from other similar misconceptions. See Biscoe, p. 67. Smith, Dissertation ii. p. 130. Howson, p. 426. It is by no means probable that an Alexandrine ship on its way toward Rome (v. 11), would be found wintering at an island in the Gulf of Venice; but it would be very likely to winter at Malta.

2. οἱ βάρβαροι] the barbarians. Rom. i. 14. 1 Cor. xiv. 11. People who spoke a strange language, i. e. neither Greek nor Latin. Ovid, Trist. v. 10 37, "Barbarus hic ego sum, quia non intelligor ulli." The dialect here spoken was probably African or Phœnician. (Rosenm., Kuin., Biscoe. Prof. Blunt on Duties of Parish Priest, p. 48.) The Greeks called all others, even the Romans, βαρβάρους. "Barbari antiquitus omnes dicebantur exceptis Græcis." (Festus.)

As the Jews called all Gentiles Greeks, so the Romans and Greeks called all others barbarous.

By calling the Maltese βάρβαροι, St. Luke shows that he is writing as a Hellenist to Hellenists.

But here, and v. 10, St. Luke draws silently a contrast between the kindness of these so-called barbarians, and the conduct of those who despised the rest of the world as barbarous, and yet had treated St. Paul in a barbarous manner—the Jews and Romans at Cæsarea. We hear of no miracle wrought before Felix by St. Paul, in his two years' imprisonment at Cæsarea, or before Festus and Agrippa; but he worked many miracles among these civilized barbarians, v. 9.

— οὐ τὴν τυχοῦσαν] extraordinary. See above, xix. 11.

— ἄφαντες πυρὰν] having kindled a fire; into which the viper was afterwards cast; see on v. 4.

3. ἀπό] So A, B, C, G, H, and Caten. p. 407.—Elz. ἐκ. The sense is, the viper, which was probably then in a torpid state, from the cold and damp (v. 2), had been taken up by St. Paul in the sticks, which were laid by him on the fire, and was driven forth from them (ἀπὸ τῆς θερμῆς, by the force of the heat), and recovered its vitality and passed through them and darted forth from them, and seized on his hand.

4. οἱ βάρβαροι—ἔλεγον πρὸς ἀλλήλους] the barbarians were speaking to one another, in their own tongue, neither Greek nor Latin (v. 2). This mention of what the barbarians said (viz. that St. Paul was a murderer, &c.), and which evidently they imagined would not be understood, is another silent evidence of power, in the Apostles and Evangelists, to understand and speak languages which they had not learnt, and were not supposed to know; just as they understood what was said in the Lycaonian dialect, and spoke it to the people at Lystra. See above, Acts xiv. 11, and on ii. 4.

— ἡ δίκη] whom Justice suffered not to live: so Soph. Antig. 544, οὐκ ἐάσει τοῦτό γ' ἡ Δίκη. 'H Δίκη is the Latin "Justitia," an abstraction personified, as Virg. Georg. iii. 474, "extrema per illos Justitia excedens terris vestigia fecit."

Rather it was the malice of the Evil One, who had hoped that St. Paul would perish in the storm, which he, as Prince of the power of the air (Eph. ii. 2), had been permitted by God to raise (cp. Job i. 12. 19), that he might defeat his mission to Rome. "Viperā fixit, Dæmonis arma gerens," says Arator (ii. 1157), and "Prædo venit,—sed præda jacet." The same God who delivered Paul from the sea, saved him from the serpent (see Christ's prophecy, Mark xvi. 18), and enabled him to cast it into the fire—a figurative and prophetic emblem of what awaits him who is the Old Serpent, the ὄφις ἀρχαῖος (Rev. xii. 9; xx. 2), the Enemy of the Church, which he endeavours to destroy by the storms of Persecution (Rev. xii. 14, 15), and by the venom of Heresy; and whose doom it will be to be cast εἰς λίμνην πυρὸς, into the lake of fire, Rev. xx. 10.

— οὐκ εἶασεν] suffered not—to live. Observe the aorist, they think of him as already dead, and speak of him as such.

5. ἀποτιναξάμενος] having shaken off from himself. So A, G, H.—Elz. has ἀποτινάξας.

6. θεόν] a god: placed thus emphatically at the end of the sentence by A and B.—Elz. has θεὸν αὐτὸν εἶναι.

7. τῷ πρώτῳ] 'the primus,' his official title, the πρῶτος Μελιταίων, or Primus Melitensium. See the Inscription in Biscoe, p. 67. Cp. Blunt, p. 48. Smith, 148. Howson, 425.

8. δυσεντερίῳ] So A, B, G, H. Cp. Lobeck, Phryn. p. 518. — ἰάσατο] he healed. A reward for hospitality.

10. τιμαῖς] with presents, gifts, and offerings (Chrys.). See 1 Tim. v. 17.

11. Διοσκούροις] The two sons of Jove, Castor and Pollux, the supposed patrons of sailors in the heathen world (Horat. Carm. i. 3. 2; iv. 8. 31. Catull. iv. 27. Ovid, Fast. v. 720. Theocrit.

ἐπεμειναμεν ἡμέρας τρεῖς¹³ ὅθεν περιελθόντες κατηντήσαμεν εἰς Ῥήγιον, καὶ μετὰ μίαν ἡμέραν, ἐπιγενομένου νότου, δευτεραῖοι ἦλθομεν εἰς Ποτιόλους¹⁴ οὗ εὐρόντες ἀδελφούς παρεκλήθημεν ἐπ' αὐτοῖς ἐπιμεῖναι ἡμέρας ἐπτά· καὶ οὕτως εἰς τὴν Ῥώμην ἦλθομεν.¹⁵ Κακεῖθεν οἱ ἀδελφοὶ ἀκούσαντες τὰ περὶ ἡμῶν ἡ ἐξῆλθον εἰς ἀπάντησιν ἡμῖν ἄχρις Ἀππίου φόρου καὶ Τριῶν ταβερνῶν^h οὓς ἰδὼν ὁ Παῦλος εὐχαριστήσας τῷ Θεῷⁱ ἔλαβε θάρσος.

^h ch. 21. 5.
ⁱ John 6, 8.
ⁱ Ps. 27. 14.

¹⁶ Ὅτε δὲ ἦλθομεν εἰς Ῥώμην, ὁ ἐκατόνταρχος παρέδωκε τοὺς δεσμίους^k τῷ στρατοπεδάρχη· τῷ δὲ Παύλῳ ἐπετράπη μένειν καθ' ἑαυτὸν, σὺν τῷ φυλάσσοντι αὐτὸν στρατιώτῃ.

^k ch. 24. 23.
^k 27. 3.

xxii. 1), which were at the prow's head, and were the insigne, by which the ship was known. On the insignia of ships, as distinct from their tutela, see Welst., p. 652. Ruhnken's Dissertation, ed. 1771. Blomfield, Æschyl. S. c. Theb. 196.

It is the custom, says the Bishop of Alexandria (S. Cyril, in Caten. here), for Alexandrine vessels to have such figures as these on the right and left of the prow.

St. Paul did not scruple to sail in a vessel with heathen deities for its insigne; and the Holy Spirit has vouchsafed to mention their name, Dioscuri, sons of Zeus, or Jupiter.

For what reasons?

(1) Perhaps to remove such scruples as troubled the mind of Tertullian (see his "De coronâ militis" and "De Idololatriâ") in ancient times, and of Quakers and some others in modern, and to teach the nature of Christian Liberty (viz.), that Christians may freely and without sin communicate with idolaters in the common concerns of life, such as navigation, commerce, and language, &c. (1 Cor. v. 9, 10), although they must at the same time take care not to communicate with them in any act of idolatry (1 Cor. x. 21. 2 Cor. vi. 14—16. Eph. v. 11).

(2) To correct the spirit of self-righteousness which has made distinctions and differences in the Church, on the plea of conscientious objections to the use of certain words and names derived from heathen uses, such as the days of the week.

(3) To suggest the reflection, that the Gospel of Christ would appropriate and consecrate all things to itself;

The Gospel is presented to us in this divine history as sailing towards Rome in an Egyptian ship, with a heathen sign. S. Cyril quotes happily the LXX of Isa. xi. 14, speaking of Christian Missions, πετασθήσονται ἐν πλοίοις ἀλλοφύλων, they will fly as with wings in the ships of strangers and unbelievers.

It is worthy of remark, that the ancient enemy of the Church of God, Egypt, was made to furnish two of the Ships (Acts xxvii. 6; xxviii. 11) which conveyed the Apostle of the Gentiles, in his way to preach the Gospel to the great Metropolis of the Heathen world. The Gospel of the Son of God was carried in a ship with a Heathen sign, called from the sons of Jove. It was about to subdue heathen Rome, and to make the Mistress of the world pass under the mild yoke of the Cross. It was about to plant the Cross of Christ in the centre of the blood-stained Colosseum, to erect the statues of Peter and Paul on the summits of its Egyptian obelisks, and to convert the Pantheon of Agrippa into a Christian Church.

Here is a striking prophecy and pledge of the future subjection of all earthly powers and opposing forces beneath the feet of Christ; and of the future manifestation of His Omnipotence in making them all subsidiary and subservient to the triumph of His Gospel.

¹³. περιελθόντες] not by a straight course, but tacking; the wind not being favourable, for it is added, that after one day, the south wind (which was favourable) sprung up abaft (ἐπεγένετο), and so on the second day they arrived at Puteoli—a distance of 182 miles from Rhegium. On the rate of sailing of ancient ships, see Smith, p. 209, who understands δευτεραῖοι as equivalent to τῇ ἐξῆς ἡμέρᾳ.

— Ποτιόλους] Puteoli, 150 miles from Rome, now Pozzuoli, on the Bay of Naples, an ἐμπόριον μέγιστον, Strabo, v. p. 376; especially for Alexandrine Corn-ships. (Seneca, Epist. 77.) Sometimes called a 'Second Delos' on account of its commerce. Its earliest name was Dicæarchia.

There is an interesting fact, recorded in connexion with Puteoli, in the Martyrdom of S. Ignatius, the disciple of St. John (p. 568). When he was going to his martyrdom at Rome, he was brought to Puteoli, and he wished to land there, in order that he might follow the steps of St. Paul (κατ' ἔχρος βαλίζειν θέλων τοῦ ἀποστόλου Παύλου); an incident confirming the genuineness and authenticity of the Acts, and perhaps, also, showing its influence in primitive times.

VOL. I.—PART II.

¹⁴. ἡμέρας ἐπτά] seven days. In order, probably, to spend a Lord's-Day with them. See above, on xxi. 27.

— οὕτως εἰς τὴν Ῥώμην ἤ.] and thus to Rome we came. An interesting and picturesque description of the route from Puteoli to Rome, may be seen in Howson, ii. 437—447. See also Sir W. Gell's Work on Rome and its Vicinity, 2 vols., Lond. 1834, and Nibby's Contorni di Roma, 2 vols., Roma, 1819.

¹⁵. οἱ ἀδελφοί—ἐξῆλθον] the brethren came out to meet us— especially to meet Paul, from whom they had received an Epistle (that to the Romans) more than three years before.

— Ἀππίου φόρου καὶ Τριῶν ταβερνῶν] "Appii Forum," a station marked in the Roman Itineraries as about thirty-three miles from Rome; the "Tres Tabernæ" twenty-three miles from Rome. See Sir W. Gell, art. "Via Appia," i. p. 153.

The former, Appii Forum, reminds the reader that they were on the "Appian Way." Another suggestion, therefore, is here offered of the same truth as that stated above (v. 11).

These were two itinerary stations on the great Via Appia, the "Regina Viarum," the Queen of Roads (Cic. ad Att. ii. 10. Hor. Serm. i. 5. 3), on which Rome sent her armies through the Southern and Eastern regions of the world;

The conquests of the third monarchy (that of Alexander the Great, see Dan. ii. 39; vii. 6; viii. 8. 21) had provided a common language for the Gospel—Greek;

Alexandria, the great commercial capital of Egypt, and named from the great Conqueror himself, had provided two Ships to convey the Apostle of the Gentiles toward Rome, the Capital of the world;

The fourth great monarchy, the Roman, had made great military Roads in Europe and in part of Asia for her own conquests, as she thought; but in God's good purposes they became Highways for the Gospel of Christ. She had stratified Europe. He evangelized it.

It is interesting to trace the progress of the Apostle on those great Roads of the Roman Empire, e. g. on the Via Egnatia, by which he had been brought into Greece, and now on the Via Appia, by which he enters Rome.

The journeys of the Apostles and Apostolic Missionaries could not have been effected, had it not been for the engineering energy of heathen Rome, whom God employed as a κελευθοποιός for Christ. The Military Roads of her Legions were paths for the Prince of Peace.

The World may see similar results, in future conquests of the Gospel under God's Allwise and Almighty Providence, by means of Railroads and of Steam. India is opening her arms. The great lines of her Railways are doing the Missionary work of the Baptist, the forerunner and herald of Christ (Isa. xl. 4). And as the Ship bearing a heathen sign ("Castor and Pollux") carried the Apostle of Christ to Italy, and the Basilicas and Temples at Rome have become Christian Churches, so the time may come when some of the magnificent Temples of India may be changed into Christian Cathedrals. Cp. Introduction, above, pp. 8—10.

¹⁶. στρατοπεδάρχη] to the captain of the prætorian guard, the body-guard of the Emperor: probably Burrhus, if St. Paul arrived at Rome (as is most probable) in the spring of A.D. 61. In the spring of A.D. 62, Burrhus died. Tacit. Ann. xiv. 51, 52. Dio, 62, 13. Sueton. Ner. 35. Wieseler (p. 86), following Bp. Pearson (p. 389), infers that the words ὁ στρατοπεδάρχης intimate that there was only one Commander of the Prætorian Guard, or Imperial Household Troops, and that therefore St. Paul must have arrived before the Death of Burrhus, i. e. before the spring of A.D. 62, after which there were two στρατοπεδάρχαι (Tacit. Ann. xiv. 51). The conclusion is probably true; but ὁ στρατοπεδάρχης might (as Meyer observes, pp. 18. 465) be used to indicate the Officer then on duty at the Palace.

It was a providential circumstance that prisoners, who were sent on appeals to Rome, were consigned to the custody of the Chief of the Imperial Guard. See Joseph. Ant. xviii. 6. 6. Plin.

Z

1 ch. 21. 33.
& 24. 12—14.
& 25. 8.

m ch. 22. 24.
& 24. 10.
& 25. 8.
& 26. 31.

n ch. 25. 11.

o ch. 23. 6.
& 24. 21.
& 26. 6, 7, 29.
Eph. 6. 20.
2 Tim. 1. 16.

p ch. 24. 5, 14.

q Luke 2. 34.
1 Pet. 2. 12.
& 4. 14.
r ch. 26. 6.

s ch. 17. 4.

t Ps. 81. 11, 12.
Jer. 5. 21.
Ezek. 3. 6, 7.
& 12. 2.
u Isa. 6. 9, 10.
Ezek. 12. 2.
Matt. 13. 14.
Mark 4. 12.
Luke 8. 10.
John 12. 40.
Rom. 11. 8.

17 ¹ Ἐγένετο δὲ μετὰ ἡμέρας τρεῖς συγκαλέσασθαι αὐτὸν τοὺς ὄντας τῶν Ἰουδαίων πρώτους· συνελθόντων δὲ αὐτῶν ἔλεγε πρὸς αὐτούς, Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί, ἐγὼ οὐδὲν ἐναντίον ποιήσας τῷ λαῷ ἢ τοῖς ἔθεσι τοῖς πατρώοις, δέσμιος ἐξ Ἱεροσολύμων παρεδόθην εἰς τὰς χεῖρας τῶν Ῥωμαίων· ¹⁸ ^m οἵτινες ἀνακρίναντές με ἐβούλοντο ἀπολῦσαι, διὰ τὸ μηδεμίαν αἰτίαν θανάτου ὑπάρχειν ἐν ἐμοί. ¹⁹ ⁿ Ἀντιλεγόντων δὲ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἠναγκάσθη ἐπικαλέσασθαι Καίσαρα, οὐχ ὥς τοῦ ἔθνους μου ἔχων τι κατηγορήσαι. ²⁰ ^o Διὰ ταύτην οὖν τὴν αἰτίαν παρεκάλεσα ὑμᾶς ἰδεῖν καὶ προσλαλήσαι· ἔνεκεν γὰρ τῆς ἐλπίδος τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ τὴν αἰτίαν ταύτην περικείμεαι.

²¹ Οἱ δὲ πρὸς αὐτὸν εἶπον, Ἡμεῖς οὔτε γράμματα περὶ σοῦ ἐδεξάμεθα ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰουδαίας, οὔτε παραγενόμενός τις τῶν ἀδελφῶν ἀπηγγέλειεν ἢ ἐλάλησέ τι περὶ σοῦ πονηρόν. ²² ^p Ἀξιούμεν δὲ παρὰ σοῦ ἀκοῦσαι ἃ φρονεῖς· περὶ μὲν γὰρ τῆς αἰρέσεως ταύτης γνωστόν ἐστιν ἡμῖν ὅτι ^q πανταχοῦ ἀντιλέγεται.

²³ ^r Ταξάμενοι δὲ αὐτῷ ἡμέραν, ἦκον πρὸς αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν ξενίαν πλείονες· οἷς ἐξετίθετο διαμαρτυρούμενος τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, πείθων τε αὐτοὺς τὰ περὶ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἀπὸ τε τοῦ νόμου Μωϋσέως καὶ τῶν προφητῶν, ἀπὸ πρώτῃ ἕως ἐσπέρας. ²⁴ ^s Καὶ οἱ μὲν ἐπείθοντο τοῖς λεγομένοις, οἱ δὲ ἠπίστουν. ²⁵ Ἀσύμφωνοι δὲ ὄντες πρὸς ἀλλήλους ἀπελύνοντο, εἰπόντος τοῦ Παύλου ῥῆμα ἔν, Ὅτι ^t καλῶς τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον ἐλάλησε διὰ Ἡσαίου τοῦ προφήτου πρὸς τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν ²⁶ ^u λέγον, Πορεύθητι πρὸς τὸν λαὸν τοῦτον καὶ εἰπὼν, Ἀκοῇ ἀκούσετε, καὶ οὐ μὴ συνήτε· καὶ βλέποντες βλέψετε, καὶ οὐ μὴ ἰδητε. ²⁷ Ἐπαχύνθη γὰρ ἡ καρδιά τοῦ λαοῦ τούτου, καὶ τοῖς ὥσιν βαρέως ἤκουσαν, καὶ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς αὐτῶν ἐκάμμυσαν· μὴ-

Ep. x. 65. Thus St. Paul's bonds were made manifest in Christ in the whole Prætorium, or Palace of Nero (Phil. i. 13), and the Gospel was brought home to the hearts of those of Cæsar's household (Phil. iv. 22).

It is probable, that the πραιτώριον, of which the στρατοπεδάρχης had the command, was the Palace of the Emperor himself on the Palatine Hill, on the south of the Roman Forum, in the heart of Rome. See note below on Phil. i. 13.

On the probability of St. Paul's communication through Burrhus with Seneca and others, see Hieron. Scrip. Eccl. 12. Dr. Burton, Lectures, pp. 261—267. Fabric. Cod. Apocr. p. 880. Bibl. Lat. ii. 121. Gieseler, § 26.

St. Luke's account of the treatment which St. Paul received at Rome, is illustrated by the narrative of Josephus (Antiq. xviii. 6. 7), concerning the detention of Agrippa I. in the same city, under Tiberius, εὐρίσκειτο αὐτῷ παρὰ τοῦ Μάρκωνος (the successor of Sejanus) στρατιωτῶν τε μετρίων ἀνδρῶν, οἱ παραφυλάττειαν αὐτὸν ἐν φροντίσιν, καὶ ἐκατοντάρχου ἐφεστησμένου τε ἐκείνοις καὶ συνδέτον ἐσομένου, λοντρά τε καθ' ἡμέραν συγχαρείσθαι, καὶ ἀπελευθερῶν καὶ φίλων εἰσόδους, τὴν τε ἄλλην ῥαστώνην ἡ τῷ σωματί γένοιτ' ἂν· εἰσῆσαν τε πρὸς αὐτὸν φίλος τε Σίλας κ.τ.λ.

— στρατιώτῃ] the soldier, to whom he was chained.

19. ἠναγκάσθη] I was constrained to appeal to Cæsar,—an answer to the objections of the Jews, that, in a question of Religion, he had appealed from the Spiritual Court, that of the Sanhedrim at Jerusalem, to a temporal and heathen Power, and had so been guilty of profane and sacrilegious outrage against their national Faith, and against Jehovah Himself. St. Paul says that he did not act thus voluntarily, but was compelled to take this step by the Jews themselves.

We may observe here again the wonderful operation of Divine Providence in overruling the machinations of the enemies of the Gospel into means for its furtherance;

The Jews arrested and would have killed Paul. By their iniquitous and treacherous manœuvres against him, they showed even to the Chief Captain that he could have no hope of justice from them. He was therefore sent by night to Cæsarea (xxiii. 23). Festus proposed that after two years' imprisonment he should go up again to be judged at Jerusalem (xxv. 9). But the Jews had shown their inveterate malice by another conspiracy to slay him by the way (xxv. 3). In a word, St. Paul was compelled by the Jews themselves to appeal for justice from the Spiritual Court at Jerusalem to the tribunal of Nero at Rome.

A striking proof of the corrupt state of the spirituality. No wonder that its Candlestick was removed. The Candlestick of the Temple is now seen engraved among the spoils of Jerusalem on the triumphal Arch of Titus, which stands near the site of the Imperial Palace at Rome, where St. Paul was confined.

That conduct of the Jews was foreseen by God, and was made instrumental by Him for the propagation of Christianity, and for the transfer of its Mission from the centre of Judaism to the Metropolis of the Heathen World. Thus the malice of the Jews recoiled against themselves, and was used as an instrument for the glory of Christ.

21. ἡμεῖς οὔτε γράμματα] we neither received letters concerning thee from Jerusalem. This statement of non-communication between the Jews of Jerusalem and Rome is remarkable, and has been used by some in modern times as an argument against the veracity of this History. But it must be remembered that St. Paul did not appeal to Cæsar till near the end of his confinement at Cæsarea. Festus, the successor of Felix, had wished to decide the Cause at Jerusalem (xxv. 9); and it was doubtless a surprise both to him and to the Jews to hear St. Paul say, "I appeal unto Cæsar" (xxv. 11).

Before St. Paul had made this appeal, the Jews of Jerusalem had no reason for writing to those at Rome concerning him; for they had no ground for supposing that he would go there. And after appeal had been made, it does not seem that they had any opportunities of sending communications to Rome, on account of the expiration of the season for navigation to Italy. Nor indeed would they have been very anxious to write concerning him after the declaration of the Jewish king Agrippa acknowledging his innocence, and that he might have been set at liberty if he had not appealed to Cæsar (xxvi. 32).

22. πανταχοῦ ἀντιλέγεται] is every where spoken against. A fulfilment of Simeon's words, Luke ii. 34, σημεῖον ἀντιλεγόμενον. The Jews are specially described as λαὸς ἀντιλέγων. See Rom. x. 21. Isa. lxx. 2, in LXX. Acts xiii. 45; xxviii. 19.

25. ῥῆμα ἓν] one word, after so many disputations; one, and that from their own Scriptures; showing that their incredulity was foreseen and foretold by God, and that the rejection of the Gospel by the Jews is therefore no argument against it, but rather an evidence of its truth.

— τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν] our fathers. He claims their fathers as his own.

26, 27.] See Matt. xiii. 14, 15.

ποτε ἴδωσι τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς, καὶ τοῖς ᾠσὶν ἀκούσωσι, καὶ τῇ καρδία συνῶσι καὶ ἐπιστρέψωσι, καὶ ἰάσωμαι αὐτούς. ²⁸ ὧ Γνωστὸν οὖν ^{v ch. 13. 46.}
 ἔστω ὑμῖν, ὅτι τοῖς ἔθνεσιν ἀπεστάλη τὸ σωτήριον τοῦ Θεοῦ. ^{x ch. 18. 6.} αὐτοὶ καὶ ^{Luke 24. 47.}
 ἀκούσονται. ^{x ch. 22. 21.} ^{& 26. 17, 18.} Καὶ ταῦτα αὐτοῦ εἰπόντος, ἀπῆλθον οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, πολλὴν ἔχοντες ^{Matt. 21. 41.}
 ἐν ἑαυτοῖς συζήτησιν. ^{Rom. 11. 11.}

³⁰ Ἐμεινε δὲ διετίαν ὅλην ἐν ἰδίῳ μισθώματι, καὶ ἀπεδέχετο πάντας τοὺς εἰσπορευομένους πρὸς αὐτὸν, ³¹ ὧ κηρύσσων τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ ^{y ch. 4. 31.}
 διδάσκων τὰ περὶ τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ μετὰ πάσης παρρησίας ^{Eph. 6. 19.}
 ἀκωλύτως.

28. γνωστὸν οὖν ἔστω ὑμῖν, ὅτι τοῖς ἔθνεσιν ἀπεστάλη τὸ σωτήριον τοῦ Θεοῦ] Be it therefore known to you, that to the Gentiles was sent the salvation of God. St. Paul never disguised from the Jews his design of going to the Gentiles. As Bengel observes,—On the rejection of the Gospel by the Jews, he declared that intention to them at Antioch, xiii. 46; at Corinth, xviii. 6; and now, for the third time, he declares it at Rome.
 Thus he gave them a triple warning; in Asia, in Greece, in Italy;
 see Tit. iii. 10.

29. καὶ—συζήτησιν] Not in A, B, E, and some Cursives and Versions.

30. διετίαν ὅλην] two whole years in St. Paul's life without any incident mentioned by St. Luke;

This silence is an impressive proof that the arrival of the great Apostle at Rome, the great capital of the world, is the culminating point of the history. “Paulus Romæ, apex Evan- gelii.” Bengel.

As Chrys. observes, St. Paul had suffered shipwreck, but by that shipwreck he was made more illustrious. And now, like some noble Conqueror who has gained a great naval victory, he enters the royal City of Rome, the Capital of the world.

The rest may be inferred from what had been already said and done by the Divine Head of the Church, in guiding and preserving him till he set foot in safety in that City; and from the words of comfort and joy with which the book concludes.

It is to be regretted, that through want of attention to such considerations as these, this divine Book has been disparaged by some as a fragmentary narrative. Like all other works of the Holy Ghost, it is a well-ordered and harmonious whole. It designs what was best to be done for a history of the Apostolic Church, and it performs fully what it designs. On this topic, see above, Introduction prefixed to this Book, pp. 6. 19, 20.

On the remainder of the Apostle's History, see Euseb. H. E.
 ii. 22—25; and below, the Introduction to St. Paul's Epistles to Timothy in Part III. pp. 416—424.

—ἐν ἰδίῳ μισθώματι] in his own hired lodging. The μισθωμα was the meritorium or conductum of the Romans. A lodging-house at Rome was divided into cænacula, each of which was let out for hire. See Wetst. p. 656.

31. ἀκωλύτως] without hindrance. The Acts of the Apostles is a record of trouble and suffering, like all other Books of the New Testament, and is also like them in this, that it ends happily.
 See particularly the end of St. Luke's Gospel (xxiv. 50—53).

There is something musical in the cadence of the word ἀκω- λύτως, reserved for the end of this Book. The word commences with a short syllable, followed by three long ones, a first Epitrite, the termination of a Scazon, happily adapted to express repose after labour; as may be seen in the beautiful lines of Catullus, describing his return home, “Peninsularum,” &c. Carm. xxix., especially vv. 6—10. This cadence is expressive of steadiness, firmness, and stability; of motion succeeded by rest; of action consummated and settled in repose. Compare the word ἐκοιμήθη, a word of like quantity, closing the history of St. Stephen's martyrdom (Acts vii. 60).

An emblem of the History of the Church of Christ, and of the life of every true believer in Him.

END OF PART II.

Bible/The new testament of our Lord and 3 2965 00007 9786